A Washington telegram of the 14th says: "Recent letters from Minister Motley express dissatisfaction at the policy which he is instructed to pursue in regard to the Alabama claims. He writes that the temper of the British Ministry is decidedly favorable toward reopening negotiations for a settlement of the question, and that if he was permitted to open up the subject again, the chances are that a treaty could be agreed upon alike satisfactory to both sides."

A Washington telegram of the 15th states that the Administration at Washington has not, contrary to report, restricted Minister Motley in the reopening of negotiations for the settlement of the Alabama claims. A telegram of the same day also says: "It is ascertained from a reliable source that General Sibley was not authorized to make any demand upon the Spanish Government. He was instructed merely to act discreetly, but with earnestness, as mediator between that power and the Cubans, on the basis already published for the independence of the island."

The Spanish troops everywhere were demoralized. The writer honestly believed the revolution would succeed, and the independence of Cuba be attained.

The writer states that all along the Eastern coast of the island, the people were on the very verge of starvation, and were dying by hundreds from disease superinduced by want. The once beautiful and luxuriant island is now a barren waste, and, should the war be prolonged six months, it will be almost uninhabitable.

Lady Palmerston, widow of the late Lord Palmerston, died on the 11th.

Peris' advice of the 13th state that Gen. Sickles' late note to the Spanish Government declares that though the United States had not yet recognized the insurgents in Cuba as belligerents, yet if the situation in the island is not modified soon they will take steps to that end. There are rumors from Paris that Emperor Napoleon intends to abdicate, probably in favor of his son. The Emperor has recovered from his illness, but it is liable to return—hence his reported determination to resign.

Ex-Minister Washburne writes to London papers reciting the barbarities of Lopez, and says there are but few foreigners now in Paraguay, and they only permanent.

We were presently in our place, singing out "All right" when the bell began to make preparations.

The diving bell was on the deck ready to be hoisted and swayed over the side. The instrument was a little damp, but neither Randolph nor I noticed danger.

We were presently in our place, singing out "All right" when the bell began to make preparations.

Down, down, lower and lower, we glided round us on all sides, but saw nothing of the strange fish. Curious looking, we intersected the tiny tribe. However, greeted us in many directions. We could see the sword-fish dart past, with its long, protruding bone weapon, the whale-fish, the sun-fish, the mackerel, the billfish, the fish, and the spotted boar shark sweeping through the green waters, all at once, in through our bell with tails and fins.

The air was becoming somewhat purer, so we opened the stopcock, and let it out, feeling in our nostrils a fresh supply of air down through the India pipe.

"Pipe" of course secured to the top of the bell.

Randolph was about touching the edge of the India pipe to its desire to go down still further, when we felt a jolt, so I let the bell go down rapidly, and to our horror, realized that the pipe, by the sun-fish, had been cut.

The Avondale Horror.

It is utterly impossible adequately to describe the terrible scenes of bitter anguish among the women and children outside the lines during the time of the hoisting and bringing out the dead. Such terrible and heartrending cries of agony and distress, such weeping and wailing, it fills to the brim but few to witness. All night long the cries of women and children were heard upon the extensive walls of the cemetery, and up and down the road that skirts the hillsides. It is impossible to convey any correct idea of the greatness of this night scene, broken by the sobbing and moanings of these distressed widows and orphans, the whole sufficient to appal the senses and chill the blood. Many of the distressed women, acknowledging and realizing to its full extent the awful situation of their husbands and sons, were sitting and walking in front of their houses all night long, uttering low, plaintive and pitiful sounds. It was almost impossible to get their attention even for a moment in order to express a hope for better things to come out of the uncertainty. They realized the worst. "Hope" was gone—the last ray extinguished. "Pity my poor little ones" was a constant expression, which will be appreciated with double and triple force when we consider the deplorable condition occasioned by the strike which has but just ended. All these homes are in a most miserable condition.

These people need immediate help. During the day, while the bodies were being taken out, the expressions of countenance of these poor creatures in waiting along the line were awful. As one body after another was taken out and uncovered, so that the agonies of death would seem to burst forth anew in the most distressing manner. When it was announced that the body of Mr. Evans was found, with a son embraced in each arm, the anguish of the wife and mother was most affecting.

As she ran up the road distracted with grief. Other anxious faces everywhere there are wives looking for husbands and sons, mothers looking for their dead boys and sisters looking for their fathers and brothers. In passing one of these scenes was a crowd of men, women and children, all under the burden of a lost life.
