

Doctrin.

There, and if you are at liberty to dispose of any that will suit him, perhaps we can come to terms.

"I'll consider it," said I, "but I should be only too happy, and very glad to oblige any one."

"Ah," he said, stepping back and scrutinizing each as I passed it in the most favorable position with his eyes partly closed and his head on one side, and speaking slowly. "That's about his lordship's mark. I fancy. A little too cold perhaps, but very nice. All that a better one to my view. Do you think now, you could manage—say four or five—and send them at once to this address? I expect the market is a little better here than it is elsewhere."

"I'll be glad to do it," said I, "but it may be late before I can get the specimens that I have made and make his own selections. Write me and give me a list of each, and suppose you favor me with a call—well—(referring to his pocket diary and making a note therein). "This day week the ship will then be convenient."

MY FINEST PATRON.

Casually, now it is not many years since in accordance to what I felt to be a strong impulse, I determined to select as a professional study, the decided bias of my inclination, an honorable means of livelihood.

Gratified in my studio, engaged in painting the finished pictures to a small landscape of which a Summer trip into Switzerland had furnished me with a preliminary sketch, I was surprised when the following afternoon I heard of the death of a friend, and later learned that it would be necessary to bring down some substantial returns in the form of pictures and some of my own when I would return from my travels by a late train at night, and as my trunk was at my disposal, and a very heavy one, I was not without a certain amount of anxiety as to how I should manage to get it down.

"What shall I do?" I asked myself. "Oh, all right!"

It was a fellow artist and particular friend of mine, who, exhibiting very uncharacteristic and somewhat of an oddity, had just been to the only vacant seat at that time occupied with me.

A SIMONS FROM SPIRIT LAND.

San Francisco, Cal., via Spirit Land, and its vicinity, is the scene of a most extraordinary and wonderful occurrence. A man, who has been identified as the spirit of a man who died in the city of San Francisco, in the year 1840, has been seen by a large number of persons, and has been seen in the most extraordinary manner.

The police of the city received information that the house occupied by a French family, of the name of Pavia, had not been open for some time, and that an insupportable stench was issuing from the premises. Officers were sent to the doors, and they found inside the bodies of three persons in a highly advanced stage of decomposition. A medical doctor, who had been called in to examine the bodies, had been so much shocked by the sight, that he had fled to his own home, and had not been seen since.

The Ladies' Society.

The Ladies' Society, which was organized in the city of Northville, Mich., on the 1st of March, 1869, has since that time been engaged in various benevolent and moral reforms.

The society has held several public meetings, and has been successful in raising a large amount of money for the relief of the poor and the destitute.

The society has also been successful in securing the establishment of a public library, and in the erection of a public school house.

THE BIBLE AND OUR SCHOOLS. Centuries ago, when nations were in the darkness...

Among all appeals for reformation, this seems to us as the most sacrilegious, and revolting...

The Bible has been the powerful instrument in the hands of our Maker in giving us a sound government...

Our schools need the Bible just as much as they require teachers, and in fact, the Bible is an educator in itself...

WESTERN RURAL.

We wish to inform our subscribers, and all others, that we have made such arrangements with Mr. H. N. Lewis, the proprietor of that very popular weekly, the "WESTERN RURAL," as to enable us to offer that paper, together with the Record, one year for $3.00, cash. Send along your subscription!

We publish in this week what is an important special number of the Record, containing the history of Mrs. S. A. Sisson's travels in Europe. The first chapter, which has already come from the pen of the author, is far more interesting and instructive, and thus we conclude it will be with each succeeding chapter.

NEW JEWELRY STORE.

We take pleasure in announcing that Mr. A. E. Kockwell, formerly of Detroit, and who has returned from a successful trip to Europe, has established a jewelry store on Main St. He designs and carries a well selected stock of jewelry, watches, clocks, etc., and has already made a beginning in that line. Since Mr. K. has made his home here, it has become evident that he will be successful, and will be a credit to the public patronage. Success to our friend "Bert."

We have been informed that Mr. L. G. N. Ranford's Detroit, will receive his stock of Dry Goods, from the store he now occupies under the Goodland Hotel, to No. 13, Grand River St., in front of Block on May 1st, 1897, which place is two doors from the Larchmont Hotel of Mrs. B. & B.

This change will be a very desirable one, as it is not only in a business block, but also in a convenient location for the business. It is a better location, and in every other respect is a better one, and is better suited for business.

AN EVENING PARTY.

It was our pleasure to have a social gathering at the residence of our citizens, Mr. Boyl, Gardner, on the evening of Friday, 18th inst.

The guests comprised quite a number of our town folks, and also several from abroad, including the well known steamboat owner, Capt. S. J. Gardner, of Detroit, brother of Mrs. Gardner, who was occasionally making a visit to our town, during a brief trip from business in the city. His lady was accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Gardner, who was also present on the occasion. Among the company, also, from the city were Mr. L. A. Terrell, and wife, daughter of Capt. Gardner.

Every one present seemed to realize that the evening was a most enjoyable one, and that the party was a most successful one.

A FRAGMENT.

[The following came into our possession by accident and we take the liberty of publishing it for its merits. It is a romance which is here administered to many a parent in the lap of a little girl in our village, whose father, and a singular part of life commended it as no more sentimental, but a truth coming under her own acquaintance. We believe with her, that great responsibility lies at the door of Christian parents.—Ed.]

"Ecce genitor comes from home, and his children. To be sure children know that their parents love them, and will generally do anything which their power is able to do for them. They play, and are their mothers' and fathers' joy, and their mothers' and fathers' pride. But their mothers and fathers do not know what it is to be a mother and father until they have been a mother and father themselves.

My husband was a native of Scotland. He emigrated to this country when quite young, applied himself closely to business for ten or twelve years; accumulated what he then thought quite a large property, and feeling weary of the heat and cold of North America, concluded to visit his native land, and feel himself among his kindred for a few months, and knowing that it was always my day-dream to cross the ocean, he invited me to accompany him. It was very sudden and unexpected to me. I mentioned it to my friends regarding their encouragement, but on the contrary, they discouraged me by telling a great many bad stories of the sea, and thought I was perfectly insane to think of making so perilous a journey with such feeble health as I then possessed. Immediately following this discouragement, my husband came to me with an enthusiastic and earnest entreaty, and when I told him what my friends had said, he replied, "never mind what they say, grasp up your wardrobe, get ready, and we will sail on the 20th of June in 'the steamer New York, as that steamer is expected to be in about ten days." I concluded to comply with his wishes, and put my trust in the Providence which guides the mariner over the stormy deep, that calms the fury of the tempest, and bids the turbulent waves be still, and says, "fret not thou come and go."

MARRIED.

Our friend, W. P. (Michigan), with his usual interest in "Michigan," has "adopted" as usual, a small gentleman of several periods ago, who mysteriously made his appearance at "Father Finn's" residence, on the evening of... Having had an introduction to the little chap, we don't wonder that he receives the warmest of every one as he comes, and that he is in town.

OUR RAILROADS.

We have before us the latest issue of the Ypsilanti Commercial. It glories in the fact that the great Ypsilanti, which is the nerve of our railroads, is now in good health. It has a different fire going in it, and is now in good health. It has a different fire going in it, and is now in good health.

ONE YEAR IN EUROPE.

My husband was a native of Scotland. He emigrated to this country when quite young, applied himself closely to business for ten or twelve years; accumulated what he then thought quite a large property, and feeling weary of the heat and cold of North America, concluded to visit his native land, and feel himself among his kindred for a few months, and knowing that it was always my day-dream to cross the ocean, he invited me to accompany him. I concluded to comply with his wishes, and put my trust in the Providence which guides the mariner over the stormy deep, that calms the fury of the tempest, and bids the turbulent waves be still, and says, "fret not thou come and go."

It happened that the steamer New York was wrecked on the coast of Scotland, (captain McMillan master) and we were obliged to wait two weeks longer for another steamer, which gave me plenty of time to complete my wardrobe, which by the way was quite larger than I should ever take on a similar expedition. We had everything we needed, and a little more than we needed. We had three large trunks filled to repletion, and keptakes without number, as some of our friends thought we were going to the ends of the earth.
