MOLLY, WAYNE & MONROE
RAIL ROAD.

The proposal made by the Flint, & P. Marquette Company to complete and run the Holly, Wayne & Monroe Rail Road, on condition that the sum of one hundred thousand dollars be paid them, in addition to what has been expended on the road, and the acceptance of that proposition by the Holly, Wayne & Monroe, is already well known to the public, and now that we can secure the long wanted for road, by raising that amount, it stands in hand for every man interested in this work, to come up and pay promptly whatever may be back on his old subscription, and if consistent with his means, subscribe liberally to the above required amount. It will not do to hesitate now, and say to one's self "Well, the road is to be built now, and the means will be raised in some way or other, and I guess that I'll not pay any more money towards it." This will never do. If you want a road, remember that the money must be raised; the hundred thousand has got to come, or no railroad; and that sum can easily be obtained by the united efforts of every body on the line of the road. Let each individual put his hand to the wheel; give his undivided attention, for once at least, to this project, and we will soon hear the whistle of the Iron horse, and realize that our towns have awakened from their Rip Van Winkle sleep into a state of activity and life.

EUROPEAN WAR NEWS.

A Reliable Summary.

Since our last issue, there have been almost daily announcements of fiercely contested battles between the French and Prussian armies. The vigor with which the Prussians have pressed home the war upon the nation, which so eagerly and unjustifiably sought a conflict unparalleled.

Marshal Bazaine found his command thus broken with Châlons, where he and McMahon expected to unite their forces, and on the 16th attempted to move his army from Metz to Verdun, at which point he would be in contact with the Prussian Army who were crossing the river Moselle, the Prussians made an attack, and after a severe struggle forced the rear-guard back again into the fort works of Metz. The Prussian loss was very heavy. Bazaine with the main body of his army, which had crossed the Moselle, moved on towards Verdun on the 16th. The Prussian right, under Gen. Selsmeier having crossed the Moselle above Metz, and the center under the Prince Royal, crossing below came upon the retreating French with their left at Deneourt and right at Gravelot. Both were desperately fought battles, and another portion of the French army returned to Metz. Bazaine continued his retreat to Metz la Tour, where he was on the 17th attacked by the Prince Royal's army. By splendid generalship and fierce and unswerving effort, Bazaine was forced back to Gravelot, the scene of Tuesday's conflict, and choosing a strong position prepared for a decisive battle. The next day (18th) the Prussians again made an assault on his front, flank and rear. This was the most severe struggle the week it being ended by the forcing back of the French to Metz, where they are still enveloped by the Prussians. It is believed that this whole corps must soon capitulate or starve, or those of who may be left from the ravages of fever. From the foregoing it will be understood that the events of the week, which, so far as slaughter could make it, was disastrous to the Prussians, were yet of great consequence, preventing as it did the junction of the French forces, and so far, crippling and destroying them as to leave the Crown Prince free to move on towards Paris. The Prussians seem to be about Verdun, Châlons, Reims, is sufficient force to crowd the French to the North, and McMahon finding himself flanked, gave up the idea of marching to Paris direct and moved off toward Bazaine by way of Mezieres, Moulins, and Bourges. Much is expected in Paris of McMahon's movement. The latest advises, however, give no promise of success for him either by retarding Bazaine, or interrupting the designs of the Crown Prince. It now appears probable that the Crown Prince has turned aside from his unopposed march toward the French Capital and is moving northward, and that the decisive battle must soon be fought between the McMahon and the Prussian forces, at some point North of Metz, and as three new armies are soon to reinforce the Prussians, we may suppose a worse fate, if not ultimate victory await him.

Notwithstanding this reported northward movement it does not appear that the march on Paris is to be delayed, as dispatches from that city say, that the Prussians are expected to arrive before the walls, within a few days. The reported strength of the army under the Crown Prince, makes it evident its following to go forward, while the right wing co-operates with the forces of Prince Charles and St. Georges against McMahon.

The intense excitement in Paris, and the great preparation for a siege, both in provisions and defences are the best evidence that France is, at least, paying at a very dear cost for the loss of power and dictation which is needlessly and wickedly brought on the war. God pity the thousands of sufferers, made such by the conflict. Since the above was put in print, dispatches have announced that the expected engagement between McMahon, Prince Charles and the Crown Prince, took place on the 30th. McMahon while marching for Modemey, was attacked near Beaufort and his forces driven back. The Prussians capturing large amounts of stores. The French left their position after another ill night closed, and though largely reinforced during the night, resulted disastrously to the French. Scrimmehan was the slayer that it is impossible to estimate the loss. McMahon returned with the remnant of his forces to Sedan.

Those subscribers who have their names with a lead-pencil marked on the right of their name, will know that their term of subscription has expired.

Communications will not be handled unless accompanied by the writer's name. We have omitted publishing several communications from subscribers in this review.

A. M. Clark.—Vis. E. Swift, recently from Akron, Ohio, will begin a class in Music, at the residence of Mr. H. D. Clark, on Monday Sept. 5th. Pupils can have the use of her Piano, or practice at home.

Rev. J. W. Little, and Lady, have returned from their trip east and probably feel refreshed, and ready for the work of the School-room. The School opens again next week. Read the advertisement on second page.

Asst. Acad.—Mr. William Sessions, while at Hotel a few weeks since, was prostrated with typhoid fever and for a time at the point of death, but through the untiring attention of his Physician, Dr. C. C. Kephart, he has recovered sufficiently to do what he grieves again.

Rev. J. W. Little, D. D. the newly appointed Pastor of the M. E. Church, in the place, will begin his labors by preaching next Sunday [tomorrow] morning at eleven.

R. J. W. Crippen, who for two years has been a worthy, and highly esteemed citizen here, as well as a faithful Pastor and exemplary Christian, is about to take a departure for his newly appointed charge in Texas.

A. CONSIDERABLE ENTERPRISE.—Frequently strangers arriving here by stage, or otherwise, and wishing to continue their journey still farther into the country to see friends, or transact business, have found difficulty, God or a resource for that purpose. This leaves many who have been advised by calling on Mr. Daniel Penney, who resides near the Baptist church. Read his advertisement in another column.

A Picnic in West N.Y.—There will be a Picnic to-day [Saturday] in a grove near the residence of Mr. A. S. Brooks, in West N.Y., gotten up by the young ladies and gentlemen in that vicinity. To judge from the visitors attending former gatherings of this kind in the same locality, it will be an interesting occasion. A Corn-Ball is expected to be present.

An Inv. Assoc. from one of the Committee, Miss Helen Brooks, we kindly acknowledge, but regret that presence of business prevents us from complying.

Caged in the Indiana.—Mr. Amasa Mathews, son of our subscriber D. E. Mathews, at Frankfort, living in Kansas, writes, "A short time since while hunting and trapping were taking a ride into the country, they were suddenly surprised for over thirteen miles by a band of Indians and narrowly escaped capture. When they first discovered the savages after them they cut the horses loose from the wagon and made their best endeavor to get back.

He says, the Indian who has always had for a brush with the Indians, has entirely lost his nerve at date events.

Note of Explanation from the Methodist Minister.

Edit & Rec'd.—Allow me to correct an erroneous impression by disclaiming all connection with arrangements for the supply of my pulpit, on the 2nd ult. Where the responsibility belongs, if not with the occupant, I have no idea.

Picnic.—Suburb School picnics were held in Mr. Clegg's grove, in this place, Wednesday, Aug. 21st. The several orations were well represented, and singing together with speeches from Dr. Swift, and Rev. J. W. Little, added to the interest of the occasion.

Local Brevities.

—Something very desirable—rain.—Little Miss Harriet Yerkes, gave a party to her young playmates on the 27th ult.

—Rev. James Dotter, married Mr. H. C. Whipple, of Plymouth, to Miss Emily A. Knapp of Lincoln Sept. 1st.

—A little daughter of Mr. Wm. Wick, in the Yerkes' neighborhood, died Aug. 30th.

—Some miserable sneak, or scrooks, made so free, a few evenings ago, as to steal what few Peaches Mrs. Mary Quimby had growing in the garden, near the house. To steal from any body is low-lived and mean; and to steal from the widow and orphan, is doubly so. If we knew the perpetrators of this act we would certainly punish their rascals.

ONE YEAR IN EUROPE.

New Larvik and its History—Cotton Mills—Number and kind of Persons engaged in spinning—Visit to the Schools—Falls of Clyde, and description of surrounding scenery—Incident concerning the visit of two Frenchmen.

[Written for the Wayne County Record]
BY MR. A. E. ADAMS
CHAPTER X.

New Larvik is situated in a deep glen one mile from the old town of Larvik. It lies on the road to Drøv Dale. The most celebrated was the celebrated Robert Owen. Perhaps a more arduous undertaking is not upon record than this, but it was the intention that Mr. Dale selected, and nothing could have hindered him. The foundation stone of the first mill was laid in April 1784, and so rapid was the erection of that vast building that spinning commenced in 1786. It was a matter of no small difficulty to lay the foundation on account of the marshiness of the situation. Immediately after the building was commenced, Mr. Dale procured a number of boys whom he equipped in complete dresses of brown cloth and red colors to their coats, and sent them to Cramond to receive instruction in the cotton spinning. The second mill was built in the summer 1785, and was consumed by fire before it was finished six months afterwards. Nine hundred and eighty one persons were employed in cotton spinning in the little village. A great proportion of the original inhabitants of the village was Highlanders, chiefly from Caithness, Inveray and Argyleshire. The first street was called Cathness Row, which name it still bears. The manners of the Highlander accustomed to wander at ease on his native mountain, fitted him for the confinement of a room, and his ignorance of the Lowland dialect, operated as a barrier to his improvement, for often when desired to bring a stone, he would shrug up his shoulders and exclaim with mirth, "Chances are hard."
