Down along the little lane,
Where all the birds dropped with rain,
And robins sang and sang again.
As I with sadness,愁, delirious,
For such a long time, from birth to death,
To sing and die in day and night.

But, coming down the little lane,
She did not hear the birds' song,
Nor feel the raindrops after rain.

A poor face with two blue eyes,
A blue face, and a blue hair,
A little head, but very wise.

A little heart to touch the head,
A foolish little heart that died,
At every foolish word was older.

So, passing down the little lane,
Her foolish heart with foolish pain
Was aching, aching to her breast,
And all her pretty girdles crept
Was drooping, drooping to her feet.

And something too of angel's grace
Was on the forehead, and flowing face.

And in the footstep, quickened pace.

So, went she first, so low the breast,
Her pretty head on thoughtful breast,

The weary, woe, the way she went.

Now, the little, low, slow walk
Is over, now she's up and all—

Up and up, and come to her birth,
A month, with something in her air,
That at a glance revealed his care.

In all the foolish, foolish pain,
This great and sorrowful idea,
The heart of the heart of little love.

With her steps that hers he came,
And a moment called her name,
And a moment, as it died,

Was numbered and marked, and in her eyes
Bleeding out and out again.

With her steps that hers he came,
And a moment, as it died,

Then, as if they had apart,
In the lower tone of voice, said,

"There won't be caught her at all."

THE NEW YEAR, RETROSPECTIVE.

Another year has been added to the past; another twelve months gone to retiring no more. What a world of trouble and misery is embodied with the past. Many a home circle, twelve months since complete in the presence of loved ones and happiness, is to-day enshrouded in sadness and gloom—a familiar voice is silent, a dearly-cherished form is hid from view forever. In the sick man's palace or the poor man's bower, the Destroyer's hand has been busy; Death shows no preference in the selection of his victims.

How has it been in our own midst? Ah, that story has been often told in those columns. We can look about us and see that which reminds us of the lamented dead, and poignant the feeling as we realize these sad facts.

We have had changes the results of which are felt on every hand; the old year had scarcely bid us adieu before death's cold grasp drew from our midst a citizen of long standing and warm hearted desires; one who, as the writer knows, would never have stooped to a low act, or yet looked so high as to forget his duty in a charitable cause. Closed forever the eyes that have looked upon these pages time after time; quiet the ready hand that would gladly have aided in the interest of the needy; silent the heart that beat in response to the calls of the unfortunate. In his loss we have had a change—a lamentation.

Other homes about us are less fortunate, in the absence of loved ones dying, may be, in other climes, yet remembered only with with mingled feelings of joy and sadness.

What will another year bring forth? What happy hours of to-day will be crowded in bereavement and sorrow twelve months hence? Time alone will tell. It only behooves us to take heed by the visitations of darkness, to prepare for the light of another day; ever to keep our house in readiness for that terrible visitor—death.

The people of Detroit, are lamenting the loss of Eber B. Ward, who dropped dead in the street there this morning from a fit of apoplexy.

In Chequamegon Mich., Dec. 15th, 1874, of quick consumption, Flora J. Manning, wife of J. D. Manning, and oldest daughter of David and Sarah A. Clarkson of Northville, aged 23 years, 7 months, and 21 days.

Thus has departed one of the most amiable and devoted of Christian wives and mothers before life's morning had even ripened into noon, and while earth held so much that was dear to her and a long vista of happy useful years seemed to stretch out before her. The funeral took place at the Methodist Church in Chequamegon. Rev. D. W. Sharts, of Ossipee, officiating. He was assisted by Rev. F. W. May, in whose church the services were held, and who paid a fitting tribute to her memory.

Mr. Sharts from a personal acquaintance with the deceased, was pre-eminently qualified to perform the last sad rites over the casket, whose precious jewel had been resest in the crown of eternal life. He truly denominated patience as her crowning virtue. She had been in ill-health for several months, and since the 1st of September confined to her bed, and died just one hundred days from that date. Though her sufferings were intense through this weary century of days, her patience triumphed over them, and scarcely a murmur escaped her. "I am so tired was her only plaint, and for long weeks, she had been ready almost anxious, for the summons to come to call her hence, longing for the dawning of that glorious day which rises on the night of the grave." It came at last, and like a tired child, she sank almost imperceptibly into that sleep which knows no earthly waking.

Throughout this long period the people of Chequamegon have been unceasingly in their attention to her, watching with her, sending delicacies and doing everything possible to minister to her comfort and alleviate her sufferings, all with a most unselfish devotion.

Mrs. Manning was educated in Northville, Mich., where she was born, and where her life was mostly spent until the time of her marriage, Sept. 29th, 1871. She commenced teaching when quite young, and taught successively in the schoolroom for several consecutive years, meeting always with the best of success. She won without apparent effort the love and confidence of the pupils, and the esteem and hearty co-operation of the parents. By the influence of her temperance, she was always surrounded with true friends. Though never very rugged, she was enabled through her unbounded ambition to accomplish good in the few short years that were hers, which will live through all time. Her organization was very fine, and her finished education and polished address combined to make her presence felt wherever she moved. Society learned to cherish her, and welcome her to its festivities, and with her gentle dignity and attributes, she was unconsciously a leader. But it was in the privacy of the home circle that Christian, womanly qualities shone brightest. Little children called her mother, and clung with trustful love to hands that were never weary in well-doing; and young though they are, listened to and treasured up never-to-be forgotten precepts which fell from her lips. Mysterious is the Providence which calls home so early, one so good and true, and useful, so willing and anxious to do her whole duty; so loving, and so beloved; yet we must bow submissively to the will of Him who doeth all things well.

WHEELER & WILSON'S NEW NO. 6 SEWING-MACHINE.

American Institute, New York—
Judge's Report, Nov. 14, 1874.

To the Board of Managers:
Gentlemen—After a full and impartial examination of the articles described, the under-signed judges make the following:

REPORT (ABSTRACT).

That Sewing-machine No. 436 (Wheeler & Wilson's New No. 6) was claimed to be so great an improvement, both upon the well-known family machine made by the same company, and upon all other sewing-machines, as entitled it to recognition as a new and valuable invention. Under these circumstances an extremely thorough and minute examination became both desirable and necessary, not only of its novelty but of the skill and workmanship manifested in the fitting and adjustment of all its parts. We have risen from such examination with an ample conviction that the claim, in all its essential features, is well founded.

At the commencement of our examination we were provided with several complete sets of all the working parts as they came from the manufacturer, and were at liberty to make our own selection for the construction of a complete machine in our presence. We thus had a large degree of demonstration of the nicely of the manufacture. Every part was formed to fit every other part with exact precision. So accurately, for instance, did the several rotating hooks fit in the same bearing that, while entering it, each one of them, without such contact as required force, manifestly compressed the air within in reaching its proper seat.

The Judges enumerate and describe some of the points of novelty and excellence of the machine. Among others:

The simple and efficient device for producing variable motion for the rotating hook;

The independent take up lever, which secures the lightening of the stitch under the best possible circumstances;

The peculiar form of the hook and the use of a bobbin holding a great quantity of the under thread;

The simple device for producing and varying the tension of the lower thread.

The hollow steel needle-hat;

The facility of applying and using many useful attachments—the hummer, Nidder, corder, ruffer, &c.]

Having completed the construction of our trial machine, in the way indicated, it was mounted upon a convenient stand, and submitted to every variety of test as to the range of work that could be executed upon it, properly and well, and without other adaptation than simple changes of needle and thread. The mere life of operations performed in our presence without the slightest hesitation or failure, and without the discoverable loss of so much as a single stitch, would convey an inadequate idea of the complete success achieved.

Beginning with a needle measuring but 17,000 inch in diameter, and operating with the finest thread upon lace goods, the same machine passed through all the stages of muslin and broadcloth of all conceivable thicknesses and foldings and ridings, and then with ward-thread stitching through portions of heavy hair-leather.

After this demonstration of its range of work we entered upon the finer tests required for a family and light manufacturing machine. In this department we witnessed all the varieties of work on hemming, felling and braiding, and also a degree of success in single and double rolling, which we believe unparalleled. The varied kinds of work on a lady's book were then performed, and each of these with the same marked success. Indeed, whatever the test, and whatever the work presented, the same unfailing perfection was exhibited, not only in the work as a piece, but in the execution of each individual stitch. With much pleasure examination we were unable to discover a single defect.

The minuteness of this report is a simple reflection of the care with which we have endeavored to examine these claims. We find the chief advantage of this machine to be in the use of a modified form of the rotating hook as a substitute for the shuttle, the hook carrying the upper thread around the bobbin containing the lower thread, and thus producing identically the same effect as the shuttle. The superiority of this rotary motion over the reciprocating motion of the shuttle machine, cannot be disputed. The "lock-stitch" which is thus secured has always ranked highest on account of the permanence, beauty and general desirability of the stitching when done, and the wide range of its application.

To these conceded advantages there have been added, in our presence, the severest and most searching tests of its capacity and usefulness upon every ordinary possible kind of work, and we can do no less than bear witness to the entire and remarkable success which has attended its action in every part of our examination. It is a success which, by the poor standard we are satisfied must necessarily supersede all others not known with which it comes in competition.

As the only conclusion to which we can arrive after an investigation of the several merits of each of the sewing machines submitted, an investigation which we have endeavored to make practically and completely in every respect, and associating these with our best judgment upon the merits of the several machines which are in use, but not on exhibition:

We recommend for the Wheeler & Wilson New No. 6 Sewing-Machine the highest award which it is in the power of the Institute to confer.

On Sick Leave.

The leading tragedian at our little theater in New Castle is named H. W. Steele, and he has gone away now on sick leave. They produced a week or two ago a play entitled "The Demon of the Harts," and Mr. Hammer assumed the character of the Demon. The young man upon whom devolved the duty of opening and shutting the traps was instructed to flash crimson flames through the hole at intervals for the purpose of creating the impression that the infernal regions were located beneath the stage and were in a condition of terrific and perpetual combustion. He was somewhat inexperienced, but he seemed to plunge along well enough for a while. In the third act Mr. Hammer, the Demon aforesaid, had to go down the trap, and his purpose was to descend to eternal August with a sardonic laugh and a fiendish smile upon his forbidding countenance. The young man below concluded that if there ever was a time when display of diabolical fire-works would be appropriate it was when the head-demon was coming home after a hard day's work; so when Mr. Hammer was about half-way down and was laughing his very sardonickest, the pyrotechnical person let off half a barrelful of red fire, in which the homeward-bound spirit of evil was entirely enveloped. The rest of the way he went down suddenly, and then they laid him under the fire-pit, while the water played upon him. As soon as he was extinguished he rose up and sought the fire-fied and at the conclusion of the encounter the latter was carried around to Dr. Jones' office on a stretcher by the carpenter and the low comedian. Mr. Hammer then went home to see what his wife would think of him without eyebrows or hair, and then he returned to the country for a few weeks until they grew in again: "The Demon of the Harts" has been permanently withdrawn.

Managing Hired Help.

Farmers probably have greater cause to complain of the insufficiency of hired help than men in any other business. There is no denying the fact that persons dependent upon their daily labor for a living avoid the farm as much as possible.

We do not believe that it is because the work is so much more severe than in other occupations, where great physical strength and endurance are required, for we very much doubt if the best farm laborers work as hard or as steadily as the carpenters, masons, or other mechanics.

It is true that they usually labor more hours out of the twenty-four; but laborers in other occupations, who make shorter days, get no "resting spells" during winter. On many a farm rainy days are really leisure days to the man who works by the mouth, and his pay goes on rain or shine. Not so with the mechanic, for when he stops work, if only for an hour, it is his loss and not the employer's. As for wages, the farmer of the present day pays fully as high rates for the quality of labor as in any other field of employment; consequently it can not be hard work or poor pay which makes it so difficult to obtain men or women to go into the country and work on a farm. There are, however, other good reasons for the too general avoidance of this kind of work, and we believe one of the principal ones is the slow payment of wages.

No matter how sure and good the wages may be, prompt payment is one of the greatest incentives that can be offered to laborers in any branch of industry. Farming throughout the country as a general rule is conducted upon the diary-money payment principle instead of the cash system. Laborers are hired in the spring, or at the commencement of the year, to begin after the harvesting of the corn, wheat, oats, cotton, or whatever may be the principal crop of the region. Perhaps a few dollars are paid from time to time, or an order is given on the store or grocery, and the result is, five times out of six, that the laborer believes at the end of the season he has been grossly swindled. The more ignorant he is the more certain he is of this, whether there be the least cause for it or not.

Now, in most other occupations laborers are paid in a far more systematic manner. As a rule pay-day comes once a week. Hope so, for I like to see business moving and money coming in. I'm looking every day for a case of murder-throat cut from ear to ear—blood stains on the wall—blood stained knife on the door—marks of a fearful struggle—desperate villain, and so forth. If you don't happen to be around I'll hang a tough one on a beam over the corpse and uttered this mournful hoo-hoo!

And then he ruts his hands, his smile grows broader, and he continues.

"Business has begun to pick up, and there may be an inquest every day for a week. Hope so, for I like to see business moving and money coming in. I'm looking every day for a case of murder-throat cut from ear to ear—blood stains on the wall—blood stained knife on the door—marks of a fearful struggle—desperate villain, and so forth. If you don't happen to be around I'll hang a tough one on a beam over the corpse and uttered this mournful hoo-hoo!"

But there are other days when he is sad, and he says to the reporter.

"Nothing to-day. I'm sorry, but you know we can't push business as grocers do. Advertising wouldn't help as a cent's worth, and the holiday season is no better than any other season. I wish we had a case for you, and if anything turns up I'll come down myself and give you the pointe. There's lots of folks who might as well commit suicide as not, but they don't seem to care whether the Cononer has one case a month or none at all. Be patient, and we'll try and turn up something to-morrow."

A woman who aspires to be the presiding genius of her own household must never be in doubt. When her husband is going on lively at the other end of the breakfast table it won't do for her to hesitate between the coffee-urn and the slop-bowl.

The extensive nurseries throughout the country employ many thousands of laborers, and digging, planting and packing trees is far from being light work; still there is seldom a scarcity of men in our nurseries, and we believe the cause is traceable to prompt payment of wages. If the farmers and planters will adopt the cash system and frequent pay-days we believe they may find in it a remedy for many of the evils which now beset them.—New York Sun.

Holloway, of Holloway's Pills, notes that his money is being spent, both he and his wife being now well stricken in years and having no children. He has built an asylum for the insane at Virginia Water, near Windsor, at a cost of £100,000, and he is now about to erect at Egham a university for ladies, on an estate which he has just bought for £25,000. The best professors will be engaged to give the highest education possible to women, and the scheme will cost £150,000.

In cold weather the best collar you can wear is the Elmwood. It makes the neck warm, while it fits so nicely you do not feel it around your neck. Another advantage is, it keeps you longer than any other collar.

FARM AND HOUSEHOLD.

Hair Dressing.—A nice dressing for the hair is said by a correspondent of the Christian Monitor, to be cold tea. She uses it twice a day, and insures a fine growth of beautiful, luxuriant, and healthy hair, with less trouble, no danger of injury to scalp or hair, no expense, and in less time than any or all of the quack mixtures which are so loudly and persistently recommended.

To remove fly-spots from paintings

without injuring dip a soft rag in finely

powdered and well-sifted Spanish white and rub the surface with large loops and loops on my body, limbs and face. I procured your Golden Medical Discovery and Purgative Pellets, and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural healthy condition.

I thought at one time I could not be cured.

Although I can but partly express my thanks to you, yet I drop a drop of joyous oil to you, and God's blessing rest on you and your wonderful medicines in the humble prayer of yours truly,

JAMES O. BELLIS.

When a medicine will prevent such terrible eating ulcers and free the blood of the violent poisons causing them, who can longer doubt its wonderful virtues? Dr. Horace, however, does not wish to place his Golden Medical Discovery in the catalogue of quack patent nostrums by recommending it to cure every disease, nor does he recommend it; but what he does claim is this: that there is but one form of blood disease that it will not cure, and that disease is cancer. He does not recommend his Discovery for that disease, yet he knows it to be the most searching blood-cleaner yet discovered, and that it will free the blood and system of all other known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable or mineral. The Golden Discovery is recommended by him to cure the worst forms of Skin Disease, as all forms of Blotches, Pimples and Eruptions, and also all Glandular Swellings, the worst form of Scrofula, and Ulcerated Forms of Ulcers, Lymph, other Ulcers, and all Swellings Diseases of the Bowels as White Swellings, Fever Sores, Hip Joint and Spinal Diseases, all of which belong to Scrofulous Diseases.

WILKINSON'S ANTI-PERICONDIC OR FEVER AND AGUE TONIC.—This invaluable and standard family medicine is now a household word and maintains its reputation unimpaired. It is increased by the medical profession, and prescribed daily in the Charity Hospital and other Hospitals in New Orleans. Wilkinson's Tonic is thus highly recommended by the leading medical men of the country, and is worthy of such endorsement.
