

SAMUEL H. LITTLE, Editor.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 23, 1876.

The Republican County Convention at Plymouth Thursday was the largest it is said, that has ever congregated in the county, outside of Detroit, a thousand persons being present and necessitating the holding of the meeting in the grove, instead of the hall. Much enthusiasm prevailed and a good deal of false maneuvering.

Considerable dissatisfaction was manifested, and very justly too, by some of the Detroit would-be nominees, at the manner in which they were used at the last hour. Now without wishing to say one word against the successful candidates all of whom are good men and amply qualified for their respective positions, we would say, that the idea of delegates deserting an expectant candidate after having promised him their hearty support is to say the least, a mean, contemptible act. Such underhanded work certainly demonstrates anything but a gentlemanly standard on the part of its perpetrators. To forfeit one's word in a political matter, is fully as dishonorable as it would be in a business or social transaction. A man should be careful what promises he makes and when making such should have the manhood to comply strictly with its demands. Where fifty or sixty votes are pledged, and but half a dozen given, it betokens unfair play and could not do other than disgust the victim with his party and delegates in particular. We know not what such disappointments would incur in others, but for our self we would stand aloof from the association of men who lack "the first principles of honor."

As far as we can learn the reason of our townsman Dr. Hueston, not getting the nomination for representative to the Legislature, at the late democratic convention, was his refusal to pledge his aid in the repeal of the liquor license law. From what we know of Dr. Hueston, we should say that his vote and voice would be heartily given on every occasion where the good of the public demanded it. Because a man does not pledge himself to any particular scheme it does not imply that his support would be lacking when a good cause was presented. The public need not be apprehensive of men from this section failing in performing their duty. Both parties have been represented from among our own citizens and not a word can be said against their individual capacity or official bearing.

"THE CENTENNIAL" AT ROCK FERRY.—The small boat in which Alfred Johnson left America on the 15th of June, and arrived in Mersey on Monday after a passage of sixty-six days, was exhibited yesterday afternoon in the grounds of the Rock Ferry Hotel, kept by Mr. Page. Johnson was in attendance, and gave from the log he had kept an intelligible account of his journey. The recital was listened to with great interest by a large number of persons, who curiosity and the fame of the Danish sailor had attracted to the grounds. At the close of the story, told in a curious mixture of Scandinavian and American English, the "captain" of the Centennial was overwhelmed with queries and suggested difficulties by several visitors, who evidently believed they had a right to be critical. One gentleman at last constituted himself spokesman for the whole party, and subjected the brooding Dane to a rigid cross examination, in the course of which the ready wit of the latter frequently placed his questioner at a disadvantage. Johnson adhered almost literally to his early accounts of the voyage, adding all local details as they were required from him. In explanation of the most fearful episode of his passage, he said that after being upset, the boat did not right itself for about twenty minutes, owing to the loosening of two bags of the ballast from their fastenings in the bottom. The whole of the canvas was not out at the time of the accident, and the righting of the boat was facilitated by a sea. He gave a humorous denial to the statement that he had given his name as Andrews to a passing vessel, alleging that the mistake must have occurred through the difficulty of getting within proper speaking distance; and when his interrogator—probably wishing to turn unpleasant scenes—addressed him with "Spechen Sie Deutsch, mein Herr?" the seaman smartly replied the Danish was another language altogether. Considerable scepticism was expressed by subsequent visitors, but the truth of Johnson's statement seems amply attested by whitened cordage, thickly encrusted ironwork, and other indications on the exterior of the boat. The Centennial displayed the American flag, and was exhibited in full sailing order.

A couple recently got married because it was too expensive having two separate rooms at a boarding house. How's that for economy?

"I suppose," said a quack, while feeling a patient's pulse, "that you 'der me a humbug." "How odd," responded the patient, "that accurately tell a man's feeling his pulse."

PHILADELPHIA NEWS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 4, 1876.

From Our Correspondent.

The steam frigate of Victor Emanuel is now in port with a number of cadets from the Naval Academy of the Italian Government, here for the purpose of gaining useful knowledge and thorough ideas of American seamanship. The Victor Emanuel carries twenty-two guns, and is a fine looking vessel.

The live stock show commenced last Friday morning. It promises to be a very interesting and attractive feature of the International Exposition. The fair grounds are situated about four hundred yards south of the "Main Building," comprising twenty acres enclosed by a high wooden fence with three groups of entrances, like the main exhibition grounds. The accommodations cost $25,000. There are 826 stalls for cattle and 540 for hogs. All these are contained in 29 frame buildings, each 170 by 14 feet in size. The admission fee to the live stock show is twenty-five cents, and visitors will have every opportunity to inspect them each day.

The Victor in the inter-collegiate races of Saturday received the most valuable and elegant of all the prizes. It is cup shaped, 34 inches high, on which is a figure of victory, offering the laurel wreath. The body of the vase is 19 inches in diameter, with an eagle on each side. It rests upon a globe which is supported by a facsimile of the Liberty Bell. Four golden cars stand around the globe and bell, while on the base rest two lions. This cup is the gift of one of our philanthropic citizens, and is valued at $1,900.

Sept. 11th.—Judges of horses say that the display here is the finest ever seen in America, although not many of the noted racers were on exhibition, the specimens shown were in the highest degree satisfactory.

A thoroughbred is an animal whose genealogy can be traced six generations on both sides. One of the most prominent thoroughbreds at the live stock show is "Leamington," owned by Mr. Welsh of Chestnut Hill. As a sire of winning running horses, Leamington stands only second to Lexington in the number of get. He has only been in the stud in this country since 1867, and the only four of his first get that were ever trained are Longfellow, Littleton Esquire and Lynchburg.

The Centennial Commissioners have at last agreed on the form of medal to be awarded exhibitors, and a wax impression of the design has been accepted. It is round in form and made of bronze. It is four inches in diameter, the largest of the kind ever struck in the United States.

Sept. 18.—The horse show closed on the 14th instant. It has proved a very instructive and entertaining feature of the exhibition, and all express themselves as gratified with the exceptionally fine display of animals. As soon as satisfactory arrangements are completed the horned cattle will be exhibited, after which will follow the poultry show which will terminate the live stock display. The Grangers who have their encampment at Elm Station, about three miles west of the grounds, contributed largely to the success of the horse display.

Strakoski decided to inaugurate the fall and winter season of Italian Opera at Philadelphia, instead of New York. The season commenced last Monday at the Academy of music. The audience consisted mostly of strangers, the Philadelphians being still in the mountains, at the springs or at the sea shore. Madam Palmieri whose voice is exquisite, Mlle Bellocchi, Brignoli, and George A. Craly, who made his debut in English Opera last winter, and whose voice made such an agreeable impression on the public, promise to sustain their reputation the present season. "Norma," "The Barber of Seville," and "Trovatore" have already been sung, and "Semi Amide," one of Palmieri's most effective roles, is to be included in the repertoire.

Some of the most attractive features to visitors at the exposition, is the glass blowers. They are kept constantly employed, blowing and cutting glass. They have a profusion of designs. Some of the most complicated made are the steam engines with hollow tubes, made in imitation of the mammoth Corliss engine in Machinery Hall.

The Virginia tobacco and cigar manufacturer is always surrounded by a crowd. He has employed a quintette of colored men, who while they work, sing plantation melodies and camp-meeting hymns. Their voices harmonize beautifully, and their anthems and chants are listened to with great interest. Professor Widdows too, is located in Machinery Hall. Here he daily performs on the octave of bells while the fog horns and calliope outside join in the chorus with "Hold the fort," or "Sweet Bye and Bye." By the way we are assured that Widdows looks upon the calliope as a formidable rival. It has the tremolo attachment and gives all the variations which the Professor is unable to accomplish on his "octave."

STATE NEWS.

Business Enterprise.

The salt produce of this state for the month of August was 183,897 bbls., which is 31,674 bbls. more than August, last year, and more than has ever been produced in that month in Michigan. The product of the season of 1876 to Sept. 1 was 943,093 bbls., for the corresponding period of 1875, 712,419 bbls.—an increase this year of 230,674 bbls.

Detroit has a leather company which manufactures carriages. It was organized by a process invented by Charles Richter of that city. They employ 20 men. Geo. W. Gilbert is president, and the office is at 55 Woodward Avenue.

The Wiley Bros. at East Saginaw are about to erect a new salt block, 80 by 180 feet, with a capacity of 150 bbls. per day. It is claimed that the Wyandotte rolling mills have the best exhibit of iron at the Centennial.

New telegraph poles are being substituted for the old ones along the Michigan Central. The shipping interest is reviving—all around the peninsula.

PERSONAL.
The Detroit Free Press says that James F. Joy, the ex-president of the Michigan Central railroad company, still retains possession of his old office in the company's buildings at the foot of Third street Detroit, and directs the affairs of the company, for all practical purposes, precisely as he did when president; but the Evening News says he is only counsel for the company.

J. W. Hall, former clerk at the prison, sentenced to five years and a half for embezzling, was discharged Sept. 1. He served all his good time amounting to 13 months.

Rev. Geo. R. Merrill left his flock at Arrian Sept. 5, to begin his ministry at Biddleford, Me. His church gave him a $122 good-bye.

A. H. Herron resigned, Sept. 7, his position as AND APOSTOLICAL and chief of police.

Ann Arbor has a lady lawyer, Mrs. Mary E. Foster.

DEATHS.
A son of Wm. Newberry in North Newberg, in convalescence from typhoid fever stabbed himself in the abdomen and breast and so died. He probably had a fit of insanity.

At Monroe, Sept. 6, Judge George Young, love died at the age of 83. He was one of the oldest residents of the place, and was a pioneer in Kalamazoo township.

At Grand Rapids, Sept. 5, Mary Reynolds died from asphyxia during the night, she having blown out the gas-light instead of turning it off.

At Kalamazoo, Sept. 5, Thomas L. Acker died. He used to keep the Bardick house, and was a noted hotel man.

At Moore Park, St. Joseph county, Aug. 31, the wife of E. S. Moore, apoplexied, died, aged 71.

Finimor Williams, a pioneer of Butler township, Branch, died Sept. 3, aged 78 years.

At Grand Rapids, Sept. 6, a stranger, Charles H. H. was killed in a slaughter mill.

At Grand Rapids, Sept. 5, C. H. Patton, an old resident, died, aged 50 years.

At Kalamazoo, Sept. 6, Benjamin Chabour, a pioneer, died aged 61.

At Niles, Sept. 4, John G. Talbot died, aged 50 years.

CALAMITIES.
At Bronson, Aug. 31, a man getting ready to unload a wagon of wheat on an elevated platform 40 feet high, backed the team a little, when the railing gave way and all came to the ground, killing one horse and injuring the man so that he will probably die, but the other horse escaping entirely unhurt.

At Allegan, Sept. 8, work in 12 manufacturing establishments was suspended, and 500 men thrown out of employment, owing to a break in the canal of the Allegan water power company.

Between Dover Township and Clayton Station, Lehigh county, Sept. 2, a train broke in two on the L. & N. E. R., smashing eight cars, but killing no one.

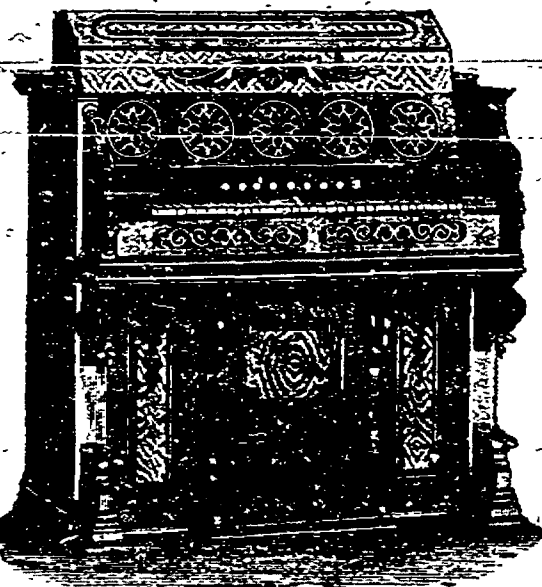

Near Battle Creek, Sept. 4, Volney Brown's barn was burned, probably by lightning. Loss not stated; insurance $800.

At Tawas City, Sept. 5, a $22,000 fire occurred, caused probably by a lighted cigar. Three hotels were burned.

At East Saginaw, Sept. 6, the dwelling house of A. C. E. P. was burned; loss $1,400; insurance $1,000.

THE WHEAT EXHIBIT.

What a Northville Granger saw at the Centennial, and how it impressed his mind.

To the Editor of the Northville Record:
The magnificence of the exhibition never strikes one so forcibly as when he undertakes to follow up one particular line of study, and he will not fail to notice the great importance of agriculture to the very existence of modern society. This is strongly impressed upon the mind as we go through the various departments and examine the wheat on exhibition. Here are hundreds of exhibitors, from every part of the earth, who plainly go to show that the glory of the progressive man is wheat, and that bread is truly the staff of life.

As to making any critical decision of the best wheat on exhibition, it is certainly impossible; and the wisdom of the American system for the judgment of the old system of awards is nowhere more manifest than in the consideration of these wheat exhibits. Any set of judges who would undertake to award a premium for the best wheat exhibited, would be fit subjects for an insane asylum.

A jury can say that such and such are meritorious, and point out in what its merit consists, but to select the best is simply impossible.

Here we find some handsome wheat, large and fine berry, but experience goes to show that the largest grain does not yield the most, or make the best flour.

Kansas and Colorado do not claim near the yield per acre that Oregon does, but Colorado flour is held in very high esteem in the markets. A bushel of mammoth wheat from Oregon is said to have yielded 48 bushels to the acre; and another, of the Dawson variety, 75 bushels. There is a bushel of Mediterranean from a lot that it said to have yielded 190 bushels to the acre; from Minnesota we have the modest figure attached to her samples, 25, 27, 30, and 35 bushels to the acre; but who has not heard of the good qualities of Minnesota flour. Here we have quality against quantity. Again it is a question of how the quality of these respective exhibits are arrived at. In some cases a few square feet of the heads are rubbed out, and the weight multiplied by the number of square feet to the acre. This is a very doubtful way at least of getting at the quality.

Kansas and Colorado make a grand exhibition of all kinds of grain in the wheat; this is the most interesting and instructive of any on the ground. On the whole, the United States wheat exhibited compares favorably with the exhibits from all other countries.

Chas. Wedding.

Those that were present say that a very sociable time was had at the residence of Mr. F. H. Neal, Tuesday evening, on which occasion himself and lady were the recipients of a beautiful and costly china set in commemoration of their 20th marriage anniversary. All of a hundred guests were present. This gift, which was a very befitting testimonial of regard, was gotten up by numerous friends here, the employees of the Mich. School Furniture Company nobly subscribing to the fund. The presentation speech was made by Rev. S. Clements, and was responded to very appropriately by Mr. Neal.

New York, Hudson, Albany, Troy, Utica,

Rochester, Binghamton, and Niagara

Falls. Parties who return by the way of

New York City have the privilege of boat of the HUDSON RIVER to Albany, or

can return by the HUDSON RIVER

AND NEW YORK CENTRAL RAIL

WAYS. Our recent excursion proved one of the most pleasant that has yet left the trip to Philadelphia will be by the same route. This route runs through

Buffalo, Rochester, Canandaigua, Elmira,

Schenectady, Watkins, Oneida, and the valley of the Susquehanna.

It also runs through Williamsport and Harrisburg, Pa., and is undoubtedly the best route for tourists in the country.

Parties can lay over at any point on the return trip, and also on down trip after reaching Suspension Bridge.

TWO TRAINS

Will start from Detroit on the 27th, the first one at 11 A. M., to accommodate those who come to Detroit the night before or on the morning train, and the second one at 12:30, for those who arrive on the noon

train of that day. The second train will wait the arrival of all trains due in Detroit up to the hour advertised. This will insure plenty of room for all excursionists,

and we hope to see a large number on the 27th. It is positively our last excursion.

We send an attaché of the Farmer with the Excursion to make all the necessary arrangements at Philadelphia. Mr. R. J.

Gibbons will accompany the 11 A. M. train, and

Mr. H. Gibbons, of the FARMER, the second one, to see that the proper connections are made, and everything satisfactory. Our agents have made arrangements with numerous hotels and boarding houses, where parties can be accommodated at any desired

price. Meals on the route will be 50 cents each.

Sleeping Cars from Buffalo will be

$2 for a Double Berth.
