

SAMUEL H. LITTLE, Editor.

SATURDAY, JUNE 29, 1878.

The glorious fourth is to be properly looked after next Thursday. All over the land the best exertions are being put forth that a proper recognition of the natal day may be observed.

The people of Wisconsin are said to have had a big scare recently from a report that the Chippewas (very numerous in that state) were armed and on the war path. The red-skins are up to jokes occasionally.

The present trouble with the Bannocks and other Indians in the west is said to have occurred from the not-fulfilment of government pledges—in other words because they did not receive the support promised them annually. The Bannocks were the sworn enemies of the Sioux and firm friends of the United States, but after peace had been declared, were left to starve while the Sioux were well cared for. It is just such mismanagement that keeps up this continual Indian trouble.

Congress adjourned. Eight months of continuous legislation and scarcely anything to show for it. Where the most wisdom and prudence is naturally and reasonably expected, we see comparatively little but personal spite, political connivings and party intrigues. It is hard to believe in the loyalty and true nobility of our law-makers of today. When such men as Conkling and Butler give themselves to "getting even" with their personal enemies or to the "paying off of old scores" at the expense of the country's interests, there is reason for anxiety.

It would seem to us that the vast amount of money voted by municipalities and towns towards a fourth of July fund, might be more homogeneously disbursed in succoring the needy and suffering poor within their borders. Even in Detroit, one of the loveliest cities of this land, there are those literally destitute of the necessities of life, without work and without courage. But it would be useless to present claims of this nature to the patriotic for as one citizen of Detroit remarked to us while on this subject:

"The hard times and startling multitudes must not deprive the public from doing justice to the Nation's anniversary of Independence."

Our Washington Letter.

WASHINGTON, June 18, 1878
Correspondence Northville Record.

The Potter Investigating Committee is, of course, the object of all-absorbing interest here just at present, and their surroundings may not come amiss to our readers. The Committee meetings are held in the room of the House Committee on Revision of the Laws. There is but one window and against it sits Clarkson N. Potter, Chief Investigator, more noticeable now than ever in his life before. Broad full forehead, heavy brows, wide nostrils, thin lips, double chin, spreading whiskers and flaring necktie, there you have Clarkson Potter of Investigation fame. Beside Potter at the head of the table, sits "Ben Butler" chief man on the Republican side of the Committee. He dresses punctiliously and invariably wears a dainty button-hole bouquet, while on his third finger gleams a handsome ruby ring. Mr. Butler is a sleek, well preserved man of perhaps 45, with scowling forehead, heavy hair and full but cropped beard. Genl. Hunter has a bullet head covered with grizzly hair, a stiff gray mustache and a deep bass voice. Hancock is the beauty (in personal appearance) of the Committee, we might almost say of Congress. Springer is smooth-faced, sharp eyed, and shows an excellent estimate of himself. Blackburn is a wiry, slender, lithe, with closely cropped hair and yellow brown mustache lengthened to his breast by means of a narrow whisker strip down the cheek. Reed looks the young Catholic Priest to perfection. Cox is 50, black-haired and whiskered, comely, candid and large framed. Anderson, the central flower in this rare bouquet, is one of love's own color, being of florid complexion bright red hair and mustache, straight and slight figure.

Because Miss Platt, Mr. Hayes' niece who spent the winter as a guest at the White House, was pretty and attractive, and because she always appeared in public richly and tastefully attired, Madam Rump spread it far and wide that Mrs. Hayes was maneuvering for a good match for a young lady. And now it is publicly announced that she is indeed to be married, but to no Washingtonian.

Senator or Diplomat. The wedding is to take place this month in the White House, and the happy groom prospective is Genl. Russell Hastings of Illinois. Mrs. Hayes' friends making the most of her position while she holds in, be it four years or two. Already she has celebrated her silver wedding in the Executive Mansion and given a christening party. We hope there will be no funeral or other sad event occur while she is there.

A new association has recently been formed here for the erection of a Lee Monument, and some one has ironically suggested that the unfinished Washington Monument be turned into one for Genl. Lee.

Mount Vernon.

Your correspondent visited Mount Vernon last week but as so much has been said of the beautiful place and its grand old occupant I need say but little here. It is the Mecca of American liberty and it is well that so pure and so honest a man should be remembered. I read an old letter written by Washington in 1788 to a gentleman offering to sell him seed barley, but finding oats in it he was too honest to make the sale without "mentioning the fact as a matter of fact dealing," as he stated in his letter. Where is the farmer that will do it now? Where is the politician that will separate his political barley from his oats? It looks as if the Washington class of farmers and politicians had passed away. Our congressman would even build a monument to the man, who would not sell barley with oats in it without naming it. His deeds and sayings ought to be kept before the people. No tyrant could rule such a spirit.

Kaiser Abroad.

Prince Bismark entered the imperial presence a few days ago with a cloud on his brow. "The new American Minister, Mr. Taylor, is expected in a day or two," he said. Kaiser William looked darkly at the prince and rang for the butler and the steward, who promptly appeared. "Give me the keys of the wine cellar," demanded his Majesty. They were given him. "And of the pantry," he continued. They were given up, and his Majesty handed them to the Chancellor. Put them in your pocket said the Emperor gloomily. "If this man thinks he can come over here and eat the German Empire onto his rations with a war right at our doors he is rightly fooled." And the Chancellor laid his finger on the side of his nose, and glancing at a letter from Secretary Evans, said "You think a Dutchman was a goose, hey?"

A Reminiscence of Bryant.

One of the editors of the New York Evening Post gives a remarkably pleasant picture of Mr. Bryant's relations with his staff, and enlarges on his exceeding kindliness of heart toward other persons. "Very soon," he says, "after I began to do the duties of literary editor, Mr. Bryant, who was reading a review of a little book of wretchedly halting verse, said to me: 'I wish you would deal very gently with poets, especially with the weaker ones.' Later I had a very bad case of poetic idleness to deal with, and as Mr. Bryant happened to come into my room while I was debating the matter in my mind, I said to him that I was embarrassed by his injunction to deal gently with poets, and pointed out to him the utter impossibility of finding anything to praise or even lightly to condemn in the book before me. He answered: 'No, you can't praise it, of course; it won't do to lie about it, but—turning the volume over and inspecting it—you might say that the binding is securely put on, and that well, the binder has planned the edges pretty smooth.'

Detroit is to celebrate the 4th. This course was probably determined upon after learning that Northville had concluded not to do so.

Our cornet band are engaged to go to East Saginaw on the 4th. They are to furnish fourteen pieces and will be paid $100 and expenses.

Miss Anna Smith, daughter of Chas. Smith, teacher in Plymouth school, is home for the summer vacation. She is to return there for the fall term.

We have before us 24 stalks of wheat each nicely headed out, from the farm of Robt. Yerkes, and what is remarkable they all grew from one kernel of wheat.

Mr. A. L. Nelson and mother, of Twinsburg, Ohio, are in town for the purpose of visiting friends and attending the Northville school examinations. Mr. Nelson's son Jay has been attending school here the past year.

The dand boys are determined to make a good appearance on their trip to Saginaw the 4th. Besides giving more than ordinary attention to music drill nightly, they are having new uniforms made which will give them a decided military appearance.

The greater number of our citizens will probably betake themselves to other pastures green, next Thursday and the few remaining, will find an atmosphere remarkable for its extreme quietness. The only fear is that some patriotic boy may start an effect by an occasional fire cracker.

A good picture is always pleasing and particularly so if the likeness is that of a relative or friend. Mr. E. H. Barrows has reached Northville with his traveling car for a few days, and those in want of pictures at prices so low as to be absolutely astonishing, will do well to call there immediately.

L. D. Corville, formerly of this place and late of Detroit has bought a half interest in the Argo Mills and intends with his partner, to make some desirable improvements in the building. His family moved here last week and will occupy Mrs. H. Hungerford's house (Mr. Corville's sister) until that lady's recovery and return from Kalamazoo.

Work on the opera house as can be seen is progressing slowly. As aid from private subscriptions were not due at this time (when we need it most) a few generous hearted ones, have come to the rescue and advanced a portion of their subscription. Among these public spirited men are D. B. Northrop, Winfield Scott, Dr. James Hueston and G. S. Van Zile. Thanks to you gentlemen. These favors will not be forgotten.

Notes From Nankin.

Died, at his home in South Livonia on the evening of the 14th, Clark Dean, aged 18 years. He was a young man highly respected and a large circle of friends mourn his loss.

A grove meeting of Spiritualists and Liberals, is to be held at Warner's grove Saturday and Sunday, July 6th and 7th. To commence at noon on Saturday and 10 A. M. Sunday. In case of a storm the meetings will be held at the church. Basket dinner on Sunday to which all are expected to bring food.

O. D. C.

Result of a Sunday's Frolic.

Several young lads of this place (we omit names to avoid publicity) effected an entrance to the premises of J. W. Elliott, Sunday before last and laying siege to some liquors stored there got off by themselves for a good time. Although getting wind of the affair Mr. Elliott would have compromised the matter, thinking it one of many boyish frolics, but the authorities thought otherwise and brought them before Justice Ambler. The result was that a fine was imposed upon two of them of $40 or 60 days in the house of correction. The parents of one boy paid the fine, but the other boy's mother, a hard working widow, could not raise the money and he was sent up. The sympathy of the community is with the grief stricken parents of these unfortunate boys and it is to be hoped that a like occurrence may never again take place.

Death of Milo Goodell.

Milo Goodell, of whose condition we have referred to before, died on the 18. The deceased had been a sufferer for years from a dropsical ailment, confining him the greater portion of the time to the house and preventing him from laboring to any extent. His wife and daughter, this thrown upon their own resources have had to make strenuous and commendable efforts towards their own and his support and were deserving of the little aid given them by our sympathetic citizens.

The Closing Exercises of the Union School.

The spring term of the Union School closed Friday. The examinations closed Wednesday. Friday evening the commencement exercises took place, consisting of essays, declamations, etc. There were five graduates, Misses Narcie Smith, Nettie G. Randolph, Ida Shosmith, Flora B. Spencer, also Fred Coldren.

The hall is said to have been well filled and the exercises flattering to the participants.

To the Public.

My wife LORETTA, having left my bed and board without just cause or provocation, I forbid anyone harboring or trusting her on my account, as I will pay no debts contracted by her after this date.

CHAS. D. BATES.

June 1, 1878.

A Fatal Accident at Lansing.

George Betts, 14 years of age, a son of Rev. G. L. Betts, of Lansing, started up the Grand River, a few days ago, with a companion, to shoot at a mark, both having loaded revolvers. On the way home young Betts snatched his revolver several times at his companion, who remonstrated. Betts, however, supposing all the shots fired, held the revolver to his own head, pulled the trigger and fell dead, shot through the temple. The Betts family at one time resided here the father, Rev. G. L. Betts, being pastor of the M. E. church.

The Devil's Fruit.

Potatoes were first introduced at Moscow by a Mr. Rowland, between eighty and ninety years ago. At first people would neither plant nor touch them, saying they were the devil's fruit, given to him on his complaining to God that he had no fruit, when he was told to search in the earth for some, which he did, and found some potatoes.

A curious Berkshire legend, which, however, is palpably anachronical, attributes the introduction of potatoes into Scotland to that famous wizard of the north, Sir Michael Scott. The wizard and the devil being, in partnership, took a lease of a farm on the Merton estate called Whitehouse. The wizard was to manage the farm; the devil the capital. The produce was to be divided as follows: The first year Sir Michael was to have all that grew above the ground, and his partner all that grew below; the second year their shares were to be just the opposite way. His estate majesty, as it is usual in such cases, was fairly overreached in his bargain; for the wizard cunningly sowed all of the land the first year with wheat, and planted it with potatoes the second, so the devil got nothing for his share but wheat stubble and potato-tops; and this scourging rotation Sir Michael continued until he had not only beggared his partner, but exhausted the soil. In spite of this legend, however, we must continue to give the credit to Sir Walter Raleigh for having been the introducer of potatoes into this country. [Agricultural Magazine.]

JUDGE CHRISTIANCY'S VIEWS.

The Northville Editor interviews Judge Christianity. He thinks Hayes fairly elected. Greenback party a short lived institution. Life at Washington.

While Eastward bound for Elkhart Ind., Thursday, on the Lake Shore & Mich. Southern train, (conductor A. W. W.) we were pleased to make the acquaintance of Judge Christianity then on his way home from Washington.

Without any particular desire of interviewing him on political topics, we ventured a few questions for our personal information and found him communicative and gentlemanly in answering. In reply to our question as to whether the Potter investigation would affect President Hayes' position, he said it would not. That although there undoubtedly had been unfair means used in both parties during the election, if any man was justly entitled to the Presidential seat it was Hayes. He thinks Hayes a good man at heart and one who desired the good of the people and would make every endeavor to that end. Like any one else he was liable to make a blunder and if he did it was not to be wondered at taking into consideration the fact that he has to deal with all parties and listen to this or that, ones counsel.

He considered the greenback enthusiasm only temporary, but for the present, rather a hazardous morrel for candidates of either party.

In company with a few other gentlemen the Judge had passed a few days at Gettysburg, viewing the famous battle ground and found many evidences of that terrible fray.

Washington, he considered the handsomest city in the Union and but for the multitude of beggars, would be a perfect paradise to live in. But beggars were to be seen on every hand and are of all nations and color. Besides these objects of charity there are others needing aid—office seekers. The city was over-run with them. Having come without a reasonable inquiry as to vacancies, but relying upon something turning up through the influence of their senators or congressmen, they had failed in their object and were in many cases without even the means to return home.

Judge Christianity is a very affable, plain spoken man, and the short chat we had with him convinced us that a more men of just his stamp would result well for the public good.

The American.

Mechanical ingenuity culminated in the invention of the sewing machine, and millions of toiling women were elevated from drudgery and poverty to intelligence, industry and competence. If this be true in the abstract, as regards the sewing machine, with what force must it apply to that marvelous embodiment of all that is useful and beautiful in sewing machine mechanism, the American Sewing Machine, which has fairly eclipsed all others, not only in its adaptability to do all kinds of work, but in the ease with which it is done. It may be said to have carried its admirers by storm as soon as its capability for work became known. The aim of the inventor has been to discard every useless complication peculiar to ordinary machines, and only familiarity with the machine will enable our readers fully to appreciate how far he has succeeded. It is not too much to say the machine will last a lifetime. Salerooms, No. 244 Wabash avenue Chicago.

LAND IN THE "SUNNY" SOUTH.

Attention is called to the unequalled opportunities of the present time for the purchase of homes and farms in the southern Atlantic states.

Southern lands are preferable for these reasons: They are located in the older settled States, therefore all the advantages of civilized society can be had; the prices of lands are lower than in any other section, having equally good buildings and other improvements; fertilizers can be procured at reasonable rates, and near at hand; farmers realize large profits from crops of vegetables and fruit for the home markets and markets North; the climate is mild and salubrious, and it is seldom necessary to house cattle or stock, to shield them from the cold, and during the winter they have to be fed but a short time.

The Northern Central railway is the shortest and most direct. With all modern improvements—Westinghouse air-brakes, stone ballast, steel rails, etc. Three through trains daily and cheap fares.

For further information in regard to land rates of fare etc., apply to Samuel L. Seymour, (Western Passenger Agent,) Exchange St., Buffalo, N. Y.
