VOL. X. NORTHVILLE, WAYNE CO. MICH., APRIL 19, 1879. NO. 21. Our Aim—The People's Welfare. [Always in Advance.]

A PERFECTLY AWFULLY LOVE- LY STORY.

There was once a perfectly modern girl, with perfectly modern ways, who saw a perfectly modern man, who happened to meet her gaze. Such perfectly lovely things she saw, and perfectly awful, too. That some would have thought to look her word so perfectly perfectly true.

THE WOUNDED HAND.

From a German Detective's Note-Book. On the 23d of May, 1875, I went in my office behind my desk, when our Chief entered the room with a letter in his hand and addressed me with an invitation to undertake the unraveling of a mystery which had baffled the local police at V. I consented, and departed for the scene of the crime which had been committed, near some of the houses, as to the time I was allowed for spending on the case.

der made use of had been dragged out of a nook in which it had long lain concealed. A pane of glass had been smashed, in the window of the bedroom to enable one of the assailants to slip back the bolt. A few footprints had been traced, but there was nothing remarkable about their appearance, and they had been lost at once upon the high road or street upon which the little courtyard opened.

"This was how it was. One man came to me in the early dawning. I put him across. An hour or so later there came a second, and asked anxiously about the first. When I told him there was beyond he seemed content enough, and followed. The third, your friend with the blue, and he was the first who asked me particularly about the two I had already rowed over, and then seemed right gay and jumped into the boat himself.

to-morrow at furthest? I decided for the last alternative. Twelve gentlemen sat in the town club room. My friend made one of them. To his great surprise I sat down close to him, and began to talk a little. Presently our nearest neighbor stood up and departed; to my great joy, I bent over to Boucher now, and whispered that I had a weighty matter to talk over with him.

"What do the farmers raise?" I asked. "They have stopped raising wheat. They can't raise wheat and compete with American wheat, which is put down in Liverpool as one dollar and ten cents per bushel. They can't raise bacon and compete with American bacon, and they can't raise cheese."

The Battle of Belle Isle.

The chieftainship was first held by Keys, but when he went outside he appointed Sir A. R. Hill, of the One Hundredth O. V. L.—now a resident of Wauson, O.—his successor. Hill was one of the nobles of that immense throng. A great broad-shouldered giant, in the prime of his manhood, the beginning of his thirtieth year—he was as good-natured as big, and as mild-mannered as brave. He spoke slowly, softly, and with a slightly rustic twang, that was very tempting to a class of sharps to take him up for a "habberly greasy." The man who did so usually repented his error in sackcloth and ashes.

Senate taking their ease—The exodus of the colored people causes much alarm, and a stay on their movements wanted—The expropriation of Fitz John Porter quite acceptable to Washingtonians.

Washington Cor. Northville Record.

Washington, D. C., Apr. 17.—The Senate is taking its ease over the Army bill, which has passed the House, and the latter body is rather lazily discussing the Legislative bill.

There is unquestionably cause for alarm in connection with the colored emigration to the north-west. With money and due preparation such a course might be advantageous to them. But the haphazard and hurried manner of the whole scheme from the beginning give many promises of evil and very few assurances of good.

One of the most fruitful topics of discussion of late was on the army board report of ex-officers into the case of Fitz John Porter, exclaiming that "officer" and recommending his restoration to the honors and emoluments he would have been entitled to, but for the verdict of the court martial against him 15 years since. This is a remarkable result and a singular feature of it is, that, like most other events now, it takes a political turn. It seems to bring out again Gen. McClellan, now governor of New Jersey, for President, and it would not be surprising if he was the dark horse who is to head off Mr. Tilden and the other democratic candidates in the democratic Convention.

The Tammany democrats of New York city are willing to take a wide latitude here, and they have a wide influence here.

Remedy for hard times.

They need a stomach, a healthy food, cheaper and better of all things, more real and substantial than any other, and especially for the family, that of raising the expense and quality of a good medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich, but put your trust in the agents of all simple, pure, and safe, and you will be better than ever.
