Conner; Treasurer, James Sessions; Justice of the Peace, Martin A. Upton; School Inspector, W. W. Wendell; Highway Commissioner, A. J. Houk; Drain Commissioner, Edwin Cook; Constables, Nathaniel O'Dell, Lester H. Sutton, George Vandecar and Fred Dunn.

EASTER SUNDAY.

IT WILL BE OBSERVED IN THE CHURCHES OF THIS PLACE.

Easter Sunday is kept by all christians in commemoration of the resurrection day of Christ. In older times it used to be kept on a fixed day each year but in the year 325 at the council of Nice it was fixed on the Sunday following the full moon which happens upon or next after March 21, and if the full moon happens on Sunday Easter day is the Sunday after. By this arrangement Easter may come as early as March 22 or as late as April 25. This year the moon falls on the 27th and Sunday April 1 will be Easter day.

It is a great many years since it came as early and it will be a great many years before it will occur at such an early date again.

This sacred festival is celebrated in every part of the christian world with great solemnity and devotion and often with popular sports and observances.

It was but a few years ago that colored eggs were considered almost an essential part of Easter day. The grown people of this day remember these eggs of their childhood days but the children of to-day know but little of them.

The customs of observing the day undergo frequent changes but that it will continue to be observed in some manner for all ages is an assured fact.

Nearly every Sunday school in the country will have some exercises appropriate to the day. Our Methodist and Presbyterian schools will have their concerto in the evening in place of the regular services.

THE TELEPHONE CASE.

The Supreme Court Declared in Favor of Bell.

General Epitome of Washington News.—The decision in the telephone case was read by Associate Justice Blatchford in the United States supreme court on the 19th inst. It comprised a very elaborate review of all the inventions of the telephone which have come up to claim priority to the discoveries of Bell, and the suits which have been conducted in the courts to set aside the Bell patent. Justice Blatchford holds that the law does not require that the time application be made for a patent that there shall have been obtained a high degree of perfection; that the results may not have been entirely satisfactory at first; in order that the patent may issue, and stand against the assaults of others; that the electrical insulation effects set forth by Bell in his application have been fully attained, and that the vibration is identical to his description. It is first necessary to describe the process, then the apparatus. Justice Blatchford announced, after reading over and over half, that the Drawbaugh defense had not been made out. The supreme court room was crowded to suffocation and the greatest interest prevailed.

There is nothing requiring the operation of instruments before the patent issued. It is the practicability of the process that is to be shown. It is true that when Bell got the patent he thought the magnetic process best, but that does not prevent him from using the electrical process and attaining the same results. Bell discovered the way to attain the results we have now in transmitting articulate sound by electricity.

A lengthy review followed respecting the investigation by various electricians about the time of the issuance of Bell's patents and the conclusion was that there was nothing to show that any one had invented an apparatus prior to that invented by Bell, although vibrations by electricity had been transmitted prior to 1855.

It was left for Bell to discover the principle, and then he adopted and subsequently perfected. No others have shown that ever thought of it. It is the difference between failure and success. Bell took up the work and carried it on to success where others had left off. The telephone is now conducted on the principle of the electrical telegraph—that is, by making and breaking circuit.

In the review of the litigation various efforts to test the validity of the Bell patents, the claims of Drawbaugh were handled very fully.

The supreme court telephone decision ruled on the claims of the Gray telephone company that their caveat had been duly examined by the Bell representatives while in the patent office. In conclusion, the decision arrived at the findings of the lower courts in favor of the Bell telephone company, and reversed the decision in its original against them in the lower court, in the male of the court. The decision is therefore in favor of the Bell telephone company by making permanent the rights of the Bell representatives while in the patent office.

The stockbridge bill providing for the establishment and maintenance of an Indian industrial school in Michigan, which has been favorably reported in the senate, has been so amended as to provide for the purchase of not less than 20 acres, which are suitable located for that purpose, which may be donated to the United States for the purpose of establishing an Indian industrial or training school. The sum of $10,000, as authorized in the original bill for the purchase of a site, has been struck out. The bill, therefore, now contemplates location of the site.

The Friends of Washington, N. J., last year during the mid-day scene west in Paris on the funds that were raised and was treated by Pasteur, inoculated with rabbit virus. Pasteur's mother now claims that the virus turned the young man's head and made him a cigarette-smoking dud. So many boys and young men have fallen into this disgraceful habit, that this fond mother's charge cannot be laid on the rabbits as the scape-goat.

The friends of Gen. Hancock, who have been active in their efforts to raise sufficient money to purchase a home in Washington for Mrs. Hancock, have met with complete success. The house is a large three-story brown and white stone structure, and is located at the southeast corner of Twenty-first and K streets northwest. The house will be formally presented to Mrs. Hancock sometime in April.

The committee also authorized Senator Sherman to report favorably a bill to wipe out the charges against the states for the loan of $150,000. It amounts to between $60,000 and $65,000,000.

The bill to pay an export duty of seven cents a bushel on wheat and corn, and 50 cents a barrel on flour and an additional of 2½ cents per ton for every 100 miles carried by water on wheat, corn and flour to the owners of the vessel transporting them will be referred to it at least adversely.

Hunting Bengal Tigers.

The most intensely fascinating and by far the most dangerous way of hunting the Bengal tigers is the way most of the natives do it, says a writer in the San Francisco Examiner. They collect in throngs of hundreds and go to the woods with half-bred bull and terror dogs, rifles of 40 caliber, and innumerable spears and drive the tigers out of their jungles. The vicious dogs go in and round them and snarl and howl threateningly. The tigers are gradually driven from point to point by the howling dogs and shrieking natives, and are finally herded into a gigantic and strong netting, nine or ten feet high and with interlaces seven or eight inches square. Then the natives, as these queer natives are called, range themselves along the sides, and when the tigers get large at them they are hit at every point by gleaming spears. Such howling and snarling combined with the shouts of the natives sounds like the wailing of the damned. The native women are on hand, too, and lend their aid, and when the government officers join in the European ladies are conveniently in trees to lend a bit of life to the scene. A Mexican bull-fight is nowhere alongside of a tiger-hunt.

On one of these hunts last June I was perchched in a tree by the side of the netting in which the howling tigers were. I got out on a limb, and didn't notice for a minute that one of my legs was inconveniently near the tigers. A blow from a big tiger as he sprang toward it reminded me of its厉害, and I made haste not only to remove my leg, but to remove myself from the limb. I did it in a marvellously short space of time, too.

The royal Bengal tiger is about nine feet long from tip to tip, and I don't know how high he is. They are of all heights. They are invariably striped, and very prettily, too, in light and dark stripes. A hundred tigers is now offered by the government for every old or young tiger-kid. There are no tigers in California, but the tiger is a tiger.

The exports of apples during the past week from New York city were 3,112 barrels valued at $1,400, and including several barrels sent to the West Indies, and 2,690 barrels valued at $2,750 to Europe. The exports of dried apples for the same time were 4,300 packages, valued at $1,600, which were mostly for European ports.

It is related from California that that State has had such an ample supply of water this season as to provide all danger from short crops as far as threat is concerned. The very mountain tops are clothed with a mantle of green, and every tree in the vegetable world is looking healthy and giving evidence of the longest and fatest California has ever yet experienced.

It is estimated that 50,000 head of cattle have been lost this winter in the Navajo country, which lies partly in central New Mexico and Arizona. The snowstorms have been of unprecedented severity.

The Cleveland Price Committee gives the wheat surplus of the United States at the beginning of the year named, after making deductions for seed and requirements as follows:

1888, 257,000,000 bushels; 1887, 250,000,000;

1886, 271,600,000; 1885, 341,000,000 bushels.

If the domestic consumption of meat continues for the winter equal to that of the last year, the agricultural stocks of meat for the year March 1, last, barrel price included will be $4,000,000 or $5,000,000 per barrel greater than the average of the two preceding years.

The exports of apples during the past week from New York city were 3,112 barrels valued at $1,400, and including several barrels sent to the West Indies, and 2,690 barrels valued at $2,750 to Europe. The exports of dried apples for the same time were 4,300 packages, valued at $1,600, which were mostly for European ports.

It is related from California that that State has had such an ample supply of water this season as to provide all danger from short crops as far as threat is concerned. The very mountain tops are clothed with a mantle of green, and every tree in the vegetable world is looking healthy and giving evidence of the longest and fatest California has ever yet experienced.

The receipts of New Zealand cheese in London average about twenty thousand pounds a day, and the cheese is very good, and well worth the money. Australia has been doing the same for the past year, and after making a favorable impression on the market, the New Zealanders feel it more creditable to export. Fig

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1888.

We have an 80 acre farm in Northern Michigan and a 100 acre timber lot in Wisconsin which we can trade toward farm property in southern Michigan.

Saturday evening, March 17, quite a serious fracas occurred in Chas. Miller's saloon. A couple of fellows from Northville, who had been celebrating Ireland's "National" by imbibing too much whisky, got into a dispute over some woman, and from words soon came to blows. One of them struck the other on the head with a billiard ball, and in return he had his ear badly chewed, enough, at least, to make matters square. There was considerable excitement for a time and a small crowd gathered. As our marshall was absent from town the Northville boys failed to have their heads cooled in the Plymouth coop.—Plymouth Mail. We are sorry you did not jug them and let them cool off before coming back. Northville takes no pride in such actions of her citizens.

SCHOOL ITEMS.

Of the High school pupils Charlie Dolph and Willie Hart have been neither tardy nor absent during the winter term. Grace Lapham, Bert Bradley, Lida Starkweather, Jennie Blair, Eddie Lapham and Eva Bryant have been neither tardy nor absent during the past month.

Of the pupils in Miss Emery's room, Anna Blair, Carl Yerkes, Willie Hartley, Fred Woodman, Cass Murdock and Blanche Murdock have neither been tardy nor absent during the winter term.

School opens April 21. Be on hand the first day and don't lose any time.

Miss Axtell was called home by a telegram last week and the seniors took lessons in pedagogics by hearing her classes.

FARMINGTON NEWS.

The Misses Eisenlord, who are attending school at Ypsilanti are home for a vacation of one week.

The winter term of the village school closes Friday, March 30.

The sick in our town are all convalescent.

WALLED LAKE.

Another pioneer gone. After a short illness Ezekiel Dye, aged 82, departed this life on the 19th inst. Mr. Dye was one of the first settlers in this section. At the time he located his farm, on the Pontiac road about three miles from this village, in 1832; there were but two houses in the village. Only one man remains among us, of all that settled at that date, Mrs. Daniel Sly, of Walled Lake, who is still hale and hearty though 70 years old. Mr. Dye amassed considerable property by toil and economy. His widow is entirely blind yet they managed between them to keep house by themselves until his death. He was for many years a member of the Baptist church. Funeral services were conducted at the Baptist church on Wednesday morning, by the Rev. Charles Sherwood, after which his body was laid to rest in Walled Lake cemetery.

Memorial service for Minnie Brown last Sunday morning by Elder Hazard. The church was beautifully draped and decorated. Minnie was a member of the Sunday school. A lovely girl of 10 years and will be greatly missed.

Minnie Brown expects to move this week.

River South has engaged to work in the grocery at McFord and will remain with his family next week. Success to you forever.

Jonathan Wilson died Monday, March 25, of heart disease. Services at his home three miles east of the lake, on Wednesday noon, conducted by Elder Hazard. Buried at North Farmington.

Last Wednesday evening a beautiful baby girl appeared in the home of Joseph Huntington to the infinite delight of the father. Baby is well but the mother is very low.

E. W. Beach has sold his shop near the F. & P. M. R. R. depot to Pinckney & Hamilton and they are getting them into shape ready to manufacture the Plymouth Air Rule patented by C. J. Hamilton.

Rev. G. W. Gifford occupied the Baptist pulpit Sunday.

Geo. Heater & E. W. Chaffee will open a drug and grocery store in the Fraser block, in the store vacated by John Gale. They expect to be opened by the 15th of April.

The tea sugar social at the M. E. church has been postponed until sugar comes.

Mrs. C. G. Curtis, Jr., has been ill for the past week with a cold.

Mrs. Alfred Lapham returned home sick from her visit at Detroit, Thursday of last week but is better at this writing.

There was a good attendance at the Plymouth debating society, Tuesday evening. L. Ericson occupied the chair and Rev. G. H. Wallace led the affirmative and John Fuller the negative of the question, resolved: "That the Bible should be read and taught in the schools." The question was decided in favor of the negative. The question for next week is resolved: "That the higher educational institutions should not be supported by public tax." G. A. Starkweather is the leader for the affirmative and T. C. Sherwood for the negative.

Mrs. Allen, of Northville, was the guest of Mrs. Curtis, Jr. on Friday.

The cheese factory will be delayed a week by the Chicago house who furnish the tuck etc., being unable to fill the order promptly owing to the strike.

A very fine business directory has been placed in the Post office. It speaks well of the enterprise of our leading business men, reflects much credit on Wm. Stevens who executed it with a steel pen.

IN THE DAKOTA BLIZZARD.

BY JOHN PAUL COOKE.

The sun shone fair and clear, crisp air
Dances at her best.
In winter array is cold, they say, if tried
By an Eastern test—

But Chambers was a Western man, on the frontier used to roam.

And his boys went along, with a laugh
And song, to help drive the cattle home.

The old man's eye caught the gleam of light of a setting yellow cloud.

And in the light faded out from the sky,
Came far on the prairie a load.

Fierce roar was heard, and with never a word, said "Home while the storm allows."

He sped on boy back, while he kept the track of the other, laird the cow.

The air filled up like a frozen cap, each drop had the point of a thorn.

Each gasp for breath seemed death.

It grew so cold, though the fire was born,

They staggered on with faces wan and countenance grown stone cold.

"Lie down my son, my darling son, and this is what you told—"

But the man, snatched walked up and down and stumbled again to his knees—

For the first time, the boy so warm

Left the father bare to freeze—

And he felt the cold hand at his heart.

"Spare my boy, I say:

Kneel for a moment by my side and let me hear you pray."

Their steps went straight to Heaven's gate, and at dawn the faithful bairn Stayed for the rest of the day, by tender hands was found.

His father lay in the drifted snow, his soul, and yet still will be saved.

As though in death he seemed to know he had died to save his child!

—New York World.

THE GOVERNESS.

BY J. E.

CHAPTER II.

The next few days passed rapidly and after a tender farewell with Little Jim, a cordial one with Mr. Lockley and his sister, and a cold one with Gertrude, Margaret entered the pony carriage and was whisked away to the station, et route for Devonshire.

The journey was long, and I somewhat tired, and the sun was beginning to roll setting. Not least her brother and father, and she was tired and looking at the darkening through which she was passing.

"Norry," Norbury, rang in her ear at last, and was certain to call himself for a day or two, and gathering up her courage, called from the train and said, "I am here to help you along."

"Any luggage, Maria?" asked a giver.

"None, but a trunk which I brought with me, and I expect near her."

"You know, the last time,
I only brought her from Harlowe Hall for me."

"Who, you mean? The bairn has been water here a number of times, and there is water."

Margaret turned out of the station
carrying it, followed by the porter holding the bairn, and entering the carriage very slowly through the dark like ground.

"There's a tall, thin, "explained
the coachman, turning his head round and pointing with his hand towards a tall, thin, grey horse, with square battlemented front, and tall, wide windows, and queer ears, like mares, and broad nostrils, being one above the other, and a background of thick hair and pointed tail, the whole silvery by the soft beams of the newly risen moon.

Margaret looked curiously at her new home, wondering what the great grey walls held for her, and whether she would be happy or melancholy
there.

She was fascinated by its appearance,
despite that sort of loneliness, almost breathless, hung over it in the moonlight, and forgot her weariness as she gazed at the battlements, the great windows with their long, shaped panes, and the family crest of arms blazoned midway in gold and rich colors on the massive oak door studded with huge nails, and the lions rampant that guarded each side of the entrance.

"Nevertheless she was glad when the heavy door swung back, and she was welcomed, in the dark, shoulder-high panelling hall by a plump, pleasant looking woman in rustling silk gown.

"Miss Crewe?" she said interrogatively.

"Yes," assented Margaret.

"Let me show you your apartment.
You must be fatigued. We expected you an hour ago."

"The train was late," explained the governess, as the housekeeper opened a door, rattling, yet not so heavily as the hall door, and went up the broad stone staircase to a room above, where she opened a door disclosing two small and one feet sized room, in which a cheery fire was burning,
for the spring days were still chilly.

"This is your bedroom, Mrs. Crewe;
there is a small dressing room beyond,
and this side a cosy sitting room,
thing you will like there; the view
across the river is considered very fine."

"It is lovely," she agreed readily, lifting a glance across the water, that looked like ripples of molten silver neath the moonbeams, ere the woman rewound the blind.

"I there any company here now?"

"There's no one here now but mistress, Miss Dorothy, and Mr. Norbury."

"Mr. Norbury" echoed Margaret,
while a bewildered look crossed her face.

"Yes, the master—Mrs. Morton's brother," explained the housekeeper glibly.

"Yes, of course," murmured Margaret, not willing to let the woman know that she had never even heard her actual employer's name. For she had learnt from Henry Lockley that Mrs. Morton possessed only a patty hundred a year, and in reality was dependent on her wealthy brother for almost everything.

"Mrs. Morton would like you to come down to dinner at eight if you are not too tired. Master dines early, and never leaves his room at an evening."

"I see, I will be ready at eight."

"I will send one of the maids to show you the way. You might lose it yourself."

"Yes, easily in a great place like this."

"If there is anything you require,
will you please to ring the bell."

"Thank you, yes," and then the woman withdrew, and Margaret was left alone.

For a few moments she sat there gazing around the cosy, well lighted,
well warmed room in silence, admiring the old fashioned carved furniture, the great four-post bed, the oval swing mirror, the high mantelpiece, the quaint china; and then she rose with a half sigh, and, throwing off her tweed traveling dress, proceeded to don dark blue silk, a present from Miss Lockley,
and, fastening the lace around her firm
white throat with a tiny diamond arrow,
a remnant of happiness and more prosperous days, stood for a moment scanning
the reflection in the old mirror.

"I wonder will she be jealous," taunted
Miss Crewe of "she" meaning Mrs. Morton. "It is a pity, as I have to earn my bread, that I am not right down ugly—woman—a fright; then would not want to turn me aside then."

Poor Margaret, once more beauty had brought her little but sorrow up to the present, and she turned away from the brilliant reflection in the mirror with sigh heavier and deeper than the first.

Just then a knock came at the door,
and opening it she found a maid servant
ready to conduct her to Mrs. Morton's presence.

They traversed stony passages all panelled with oak of a medieval appearance, through the entrance hall

with its gaudy chandelier and spears and other deadly weapons, and then through a door on the right.

"Oh, but you! Sir," a maid servant said,

with just a shade more courtesy in her
manner. "You must be patient and forbearing with him. He really suffers

a good deal, and having been a very active man, feels the almost entire confinement in one room greatly."

"Naturally he would, I shall do my best to be patient with him. And with regard to your daughter, will you please tell me what you wish with regard to her?"

"I hope not," she answered aloud,

with just a shade more courtesy in her
manner. "You must be patient and forbearing with him. He really suffers

a good deal, and having been a very
active man, feels the almost entire confinement in one room greatly."

The latest swindle is the following: A person visits a town and calls from house to house asking to see sewing machines, and if the machine is a Singer they take out the shuttle and put it into their pocket, refusing to give it up unless the owner pays them for an alleged infringement on their patent.

Some years ago Queen Victoria brought from a London pearl merchant three very beautiful pearls, the United cost of which was not far from $2,500. A little while after the purchase had been made the merchant was surprised to receive a letter from a lady at court saying: "The queen wants to know very much whether pearls will burn." The reply to this somewhat startling scientific inquiry was an assurance that they would. This rejoinder produced the secret. The queen had placed the pearls on her writing-desk in a piece of the tissue paper which jewelers use. As she was writing one morning she used the tissue-paper to wipe the pen and threw it into the fire. The pearls, all unbroken, went with it. They had been destroyed so utterly as to leave no trace. The queen with her own hand had cast three splendid jewels, worth more than the average income of her middle-class subjects, into the blaze.—Evening Journal.

CARE AND MANAGEMENT OF CHILDREN.

Only those who watch infants with intelligent discrimination know how often they suffer from fever. With this fever comes thirst. What does the mother put into that little dry mouth? Often nothing but milk! When we adults have fever do we find that milk relieves the thirst? Does it not rather increase it? Be assured, it is the same with the baby. With the slightest symptoms of fever, cold water administered with a teaspoon is the prescription of wisdom and mercy.

Mothers, do you know that when your babies are feverish, restless and sleepless you have at hand the means to give them relieve and refreshing sleep? I do not mean opiates, for in the end they add to the fever. I refer to the warm bath. For babies it is a blessed institution. Better than all medicines, it will impart relief and restoration to the feverish and restless little folks. The warm bath is not appreciated. In addition to its charming effect upon the general conditions to which I have alluded, it is well to add there is scarcely a local trouble of a temporary nature, as, for example, pain in the stomach or bowels, which will not give way upon immersing the body in the warm bath. The degree of temperature may be determined by the urgency of the symptoms. The greater the suffering the warmer should be the water, especially if the patient be one of strong constitution. When the little sufferer becomes quiet or the skin moist, it should be taken out, rubbed with soft, warm towels, and wrapped in a fresh, warm blanket. During the last five years of my professional management of the sick, I was in the habit of constantly resorting to the warm bath as above advised and always with the most satisfactory results. No other simple means in the treatment of sick children can be compared with it. In teething, the brain irritation and bowel affections are more relieved by a judicious use of the warm bath than by all other means.—Babyhood
