TOWN TALK.

Election of officers of the W. C. T. U. next Wednesday.

There will be no services at the Presbyterian church next Sunday.

Charles Sessions has sold his house and lot on Wing street to C. Stewart of Redford.

Charles Tiffin has already received the insurance money he had on his house and contents.

The drill company are sending their drills away every day now and they are meeting with a good reception.

Frank Clements sold through the Record real estate agency his cottage and lot on Porter street to James Savare.

The new liquor law takes effect in three weeks. In those counties that require the licensing of saloons a tax of $200 has to be paid.

Dentists E. N. Root and J. B. Hour have consolidated their offices and will in the future occupy the office of the latter in the Richardson block.

W. M. Kellogg, of Linden, will talk prohibition in the Young Men's Hall this evening. He comes highly recommended and the public are invited to hear him. Admission free.

We need not go to Washington for a deadlock. We have one in our own village council. Ten ballots last Monday evening for marshal and no choice. "If you don't succeed try, try again."

Judson Grinnell, editor of The Advance of Detroit, was a caller at the office last Friday. In the evening he spoke in young men's hall under the auspices of the K. of L. to a fair sized audience.

Last Monday night some sneak thief broke open the Northville mills and carried off some flour. Mr. Simonds says he would rather they would do so than to come, get trusted for it and never pay.

These are the days to patronize an auction and then get your regular dealer to try you. Your home dealer don't care any thing for money he only wants to sell you good goods and take a profit to pay.

A. D. Kendrick purchased a half interest in the East that M. D. Gorton has recently platted and five of them have been sold to J. Platt, who purchased one of the lots already broken up for a lot this spring.

The 1887 census is in the foreground. A census book for 1888 has been printed and will be furnished to all towns and others who desire to keep posted on the only thing that will nullify the brilliant progress at Washington.

The governor has designated Friday, April 20, as a sabbath day and recommends the planting of trees "in memory of our nation." We hope that next week Friday the day will be appropriately observed at this place.

Gen. Alger in his effort to secure the nomination for the presidency has counted on the support of California delegation but now Senator Leland Stanford, of that state, announces his desire for the nomination and Alger will not have the support there he hoped for.

The record of mortgages which has just been taken reveal the enormous amount so far reported of $6,000,000. It is reported that Wayne county in other counties of the state. There are yet other counties to hear from that will swell that amount larger. This much has escaped taxation heretofore.

Albert Cobb has taken an interest with C. M. Joslin in his store. The firm name is C. M. Joslin & Co. Mr. Cobb is a young man with a high estimation of the citizens of Northville and Mr. Joslin does well to put him into partnership and secure his permanent location at this place. Success to the new firm.

Tuesday evening was so windy and stormy that only a small audience gathered to listen to Miss Sarah Rounds at the Baptist church. But those who did attend were well repaid for braving the inclement weather. The rendering of "Why he would not sell the farm" well repaid any one for a good waiting from the rain without.

Mush and milk social at Baptist parsonage next Wednesday evening. All invited.

Wilbur H. and Bert C. Stark, of Hartland, Livingston county, have purchased E. W. Smith's stock of groceries, boots and shoes. They took possession last Monday. They are young men who come highly recommended and we believe in them our citizens will find worthy gentlemen. Mr. Smith does not intend leaving Northville as the many friends he has made here will gladly learn.

The outlook for wheat in Belleville and vicinity is quite bright. Reports from the surrounding country say that what is looking fair and that if the season is good an excellent crop can be expected from that part of Wayne county. Some of the farmers have all their out ground plowed. Another dry season, like the two just past, will almost entirely ruin the farmers of that section of the country.

The school will celebrate Arbor Day next Friday, p. m., April 20th, with appropriate exercises. After an opening address by Grace Lapham, each grade throughout the school will proceed to plant a tree somewhere on the school grounds, some member of the grade making a speech as the planting proceeds. The pupils will furnish the music. They hope to make this program interesting and invite all interested to come.

Gen. Alger announces frankly that he is a candidate for the presidency, that he will do what he can honorably to be nominated and if nominated elected. Gen. Alger is noted for his frankness and at this time this candid expression from him will gain him more friends than though he kept saying he was not a candidate while secretly working for it all the time. With him as a candidate at the head of the ticket the republicans stand a chance of carrying the election, without his name there their chances are doubtful.

A good story is told of Gen. Grant which is very applicable in the new movement of social purity and how very freely on the habit frequently indulged in of love, visit and question the language in stores, shops and corners. At army headquarters an officer before commencing to tell an obscene story looked around and remarking "I hope there are no ladies within hearing." Gen. Grant responded "there are no ladies present but there are gentlemen here." The story was not told. These were commendable words of the General's and would be to any gentleman anywhere.

The annual Campfire of Allen M. Harmon Post G. A. R. last Wednesday evening was a decided success. A large gathering, an attentive audience, a banquets banquet, an entertaining address, a profusion of bouquets, good music and a good amount added to the banner fund of the Post. The Post never do anything by halves and this was no exception to their general rule. They always have a good attendance at their campfires and treat their company well. Their receipts at the door were over $50 which amount goes to swell their banner fund. The G. A. R. boys have a warm place in the hearts of Northville people.

Of course such a thing as the following related by an exchange could have happened somewhere else but never, no never, here in Northville. "A smooth-tongued medicine man recently played his slick little game in South Lyon and caught about forty citizens for a cool hundred dollars in hard cash. He commenced in the usual way by selling a few samples of his nostrum at 25 cents and returned the money with a little cash added, then jumped his 'medicine' to $2 and paid two or three parts $4 each. By this time the preacher, editor and citizens of South Lyon generally were ready to invest, and the sharp stood forty suckers up in a row. Sold 'em each a box of truck for $2 that would be dear at 5 cents—and drove off leaving the dupes standing and staring at each other. People who attempt to get something for nothing and bite at such bait as the above, deserve not only to lose their money but ought to spend as much more in hiring some athlete to kick 'em all as long as the man of rascals could raise a cow-hide."

In the two years he has been here he has received forty-six into the church, added a baptistry to the church, built a parsonage, spent months on a sick bed and is in better condition for work to-day than before. No telling what his report will be at the end of another two year's labor.

Mr. E. S. Moffat, assistant superintendent department "soldiers and sailors" National W. C. T. U., spoke Wednesday afternoon in the Methodist church on "Social Purity." A large and appreciative audience gathered to listen to her and were well entertained by her discussion of this new reform movement. The objects of this reform are purity of action, thought and speech, requiring the same standard of morality for men as well as women. This movement is growing and should receive support from every moral man and woman in the country.

A short since an order was issued from the Faint & Pere Marquette Railroad Company's office to the effect that in the future the frequenting of saloons by any of the company's employees would be considered sufficient ground for their dismissal. This proved rather disagreeable to the employees but it has been enforced to some extent, the dissatisfaction on the part of the hands increasing rather than diminishing, and its effects appear to have become noticeable by the liquor dealers, who strongly desire to have the order rescinded. The matter was taken up by the Past Saginaw Liberal League, and the President appointed a committee to wait upon the railroad officials and request the withdrawal of the obnoxious order. This committee visited the railroad offices Friday afternoon and laid before them the request of the association, with the information that in case of a refusal the liquor dealers of the city would withdraw their patronage from the road. They also stated that if the railroad company would give them the names of any of their employees to whom it was desirable no liquor should be sold because of the social peculiarities such men would not be given liquor by any member of the league. The railroad officials have given notice that they would comply with the request of the committee and rescind their order. —Detroit Free Press.

MINOR CROPS.

Some of the small crops that are generally neglected on large western farms.

The larger the farm the less likely is the owner or manager to give attention to the production of things for which there is not a commercial demand. Still there is generally profit in producing them. If they ordinarily can not be sold for cash they can be consumed on the place. They will contribute to good living and will effect a saving in groceries' bills. Every farmer should plant a few rods of popcorn. As the stalks are small the hills can be near together, and the product per acre will be nearly as great as for common field corn. Popped corn is an inexpensive luxury that no farmer's family should be deprived of. There is a growing demand for popcorn in cities, and there is sometimes considerable difficulty in obtaining a supply of it. Sweet corn is as easily raised as common field corn, and is much superior to it for table use, while the fodder is more valuable for feeding to stock. Both sweet and pop corn should be planted at some distance from a field of common corn and from each other, so that they will not interfere. To produce large and well-filled ears, high manuring and good cultivation are necessary.

Squashes are useful in various ways and are easily raised. By planting some of the early, late, and long-keeping varieties a supply for the entire year can be secured. They make excellent pies. Boiled or baked any of the dry squashes, like the Hubbard, furnish an excellent substitute for the sweet potato. All the "hard-shell" squashes with proper care can be kept over the winter. Marrow squashes may be dried like pumpkins, or cooked and preserved in cans. Prepared in either way they make good pies during the winter and spring. Farmers can generally sell fine squashes to good advantage in towns not supplied by market gardeners. Bakers in large towns now buy squashes by the ton and keep them to use in making "pumpkin pies" during winter and spring. Occasionally there is quite a demand for western squashes to send to eastern cities. Squashes are very desirable for feeding to fowls during the winter when green food can not be obtained. They are also valuable for sheep, pigs, and other stock. In many localities squashes can be produced to much better advantage than any of the roots that are raised for stock, and their feeding value is considerably greater.

Melons culture has received great attention during the past few years. Varieties have multiplied till some have been produced suited to the soil and climate of almost every part of the country. Melons now constitute an important article of commerce. Many of the cotton plantations in the south have been divided into small farms and planted to melons. Entire trains of cars loaded with melons now come from various southern cities. Melons have become common articles of food with all classes in cities. Few northern farmers can make much money in raising watermelons for the market as the highest prices are always paid for those that ripen early in the season. There is however, a good market for northern grown melons that are used for breakfast. On every northern farm enough melons should be raised to supply the wants of the family. We have to wait several years for fruit to be produced on the trees we plant, but a crop of delicious melons can be secured in a few weeks from the time the seed is planted. No trees or bush fruit compares with a melon in size and few compare with it in excellence.

Genuine buckwheat flour has become almost unknown in all large towns, and its place has been supplied by a mixture of inferior grains, screenings and shorts. The luxury which city people can no longer obtain can still be enjoyed by farmers, who can raise the grain and have it ground in a custom mill. Seasons that are poor for the other grains are often very favorable for buckwheat, and it not infrequently happens that it commands a higher price than any of them. Ground can be prepared for sowing buckwheat after all the other field crops are planted or sown. It is not necessary to have the soil finely pulverized or highly manured for this crop. It will grow on an inverted sod or on ground that is quite rough. It is an easy crop to raise. It can be harvested without a machine and can be threshed with a hand flail. If not salable and more is raised than can be consumed by the family, the surplus can be fed to fowls to good advantage. On nearly every farm there is some land that may be utilized by raising buckwheat that is nearly useless for other purposes.—Chicago Times.

Spring Management of Bees.

Cells wintering will not admit of early handling so as to enable us to bring colonies up to the highest state of perfection, and to reap the richest reward in honey crops during the early honey flows. Therefore, I prefer to have them on their summer stands in chaff hives. There are many fine days from the first of March until spring fairly opens when we can handle bees in perfect safety. I have found to my satisfaction that there is no time during the year that my attention is more demanded than during March and April. Those two months are the key to large honey crops, and I must have my bees in such shape at this time that I can attend to their wants. I endeavor to put my bees in the best possible condition for safe wintering during the fall months, but at my regular time of making examination during the following March, I have never failed to find that attention was needed, and often many colonies are saved just at the nick of time. I may have been very particular to give each colony in the fall the necessary amount of provisions, but from some cause I am not able to explain, many will consume almost entire stores by the following March, while others have abundance in reserve. Hence such colonies must be provided with provisions or they will starve long before the spring sets in.

While it is a fact that food cannot be provided in winter weather in some forms, it can be in perfect safety in others, and not only in perfect safety, but it is very beneficial to healthy colonies, and very healing to those affected with dysentery. The most dreaded disease generally shows itself in March, and fine days together with careful manipulation will bring such colonies through. All colonies badly affected thus should be placed upon clean combs and provided with candy made from pure granulated sugar. This candy is the only safe winter food we can give bees. Liquid food of any kind fed to bees during winter is very damaging to them. It tends to produce dysentery, while the candy referred to will tend to heal it. After the weather has become broken and the bees can get a good flight once or twice per week, we can safely feed a good food, and we should commence as soon as possible by feeding a little to every colony just as they come in a time with all kinds of pests entirely upon our management as to the force of bees we have on hand ready for the work when the harvest comes. By judicious feeding to stimulate food rearing, we can result otherwise have been allowed to take their chance. Large crops of honey will depend upon the strength of colonies, not upon the numbers in the hive.—H. H. Hays, in Practical Farmer.

A Philadelphia minister tells a good story of the first marriage ceremony he performed. "I forgot to make out the marriage certificate, and a year or so afterward I found the woman who had become the wife on that occasion waiting for me at my home in company with a man. 'How do you do, Mrs. Blank?' I said. 'I am not Mrs. Blank any longer,' she said, 'but Mrs. So and So, and this is my husband.' 'Ah! and to what am I indebted for the pleasure of this visit?' 'I have come for the certificate of my first marriage,' I was a little taken back. 'What on earth do you wish with the certificate of your first marriage again?' 'You see,' she said, 'I have the certificate of my second marriage and I want the other so that I can frame them together.'"

AMENDING THE TARIFF.

Mills' Bill Before the House—A Sarcastic Minority Report.

Provisions of the New Canada Treaty—Washington News in Brief.
The Mills' tariff bill is now fully before the house. Several changes have been made in the bill, designed to strengthen it particularly with the southern members. Mr. Mills gave notice that he would try to call up the bill in about two weeks. The chief changes have been made in the sugar clause. They leave the standard and classification as they are by the present law, which is equal to a 20 per cent horizontal reduction. The drawback provision of the bill, as originally reported, is stricken out, thus making a difference of about $5,000,000 in revenues. These changes, the committee claim, are not made as concessions to the Louisiana delegation, but that they make the bill satisfactory to them. Several changes in the classification under the woolen schedules are also made.

The last change is in the nature of a new section to the effect that nothing in the act shall interfere with any treaty, stipulation or law in pursuance thereof. The minority report was prepared by McKinley and Reed, and it is a candid document, covering about 15 printed pages. It attacks in forcible language the weakness of the Mills' bill and refers to the "dark lantern" methods by which that document was arranged. Fronting is given to the wool, salt and lumber clauses. This part of the report was prepared by "Tom" Reed, and meets the approval of Burrows, Michigan member of the ways and means committee. Burrows says the report is positive, pronounced and aggressive.

The reduction in the public debt during March amounted to $11,555,596, and since June 20 of the first nine months of the current fiscal year, $28,560,558. The net cash in the treasury April 1 was $101,575,250, or $11,500,000 more than on March 1. The gold balance increased $1,000,000 during March, and is now $27,516,553, while the silver fund balance shows a decrease of $10,000,000 since March 1, and now stands at $12,516,553. A total of government notes, or about one-quarter of a million less than a month ago, shows government receipts during March aggregated $14,000,000, a falling off of about $1,000,000 from the corresponding month of the previous year. This falling off is due to the fact that in the month of March, 1897, the government received $14,000,000 in internal receipts, while in the month of March, 1898, it received only $13,000,000. The corresponding figures for the month of March, 1897, were $14,000,000 and $13,000,000, respectively.

means committee on the Mills' tariff bill charges that more than one-third of the free list is made up of the products of the farm, the forest and the mine, and points to the fact that while Canada has closed her gates to American products and manufactures, American ports are thrown open to Canadian wares. The majority's treatment of wool is charged as an attempt to break down one of the most important industries in the United States. The minority declare that with free wool American growers will be crowded out as they cannot compete with foreign producers in the markets of the world. The Mills bill will increase importations, thus diminishing home production. One reason American wool-growers cannot compete with foreign producers is that the latter raise their sheep in countries where winter feeding is not necessary. The report avers that had the majority heard the representative laboring men of the country they would not have inaugurated their free trade scheme.

Coming to the surplus the minority states, with much emphasis, that the diminution of the tariff duties merely serves to stimulate foreign importations, thus actually increasing the revenue. The surplus could have been reduced by the purchase of outlandish goods for which there was ample provision. The tobacco tax could have been abolished; the tax on alcohol could have been taken off. The great inequity which the president stands in such mortal fear of would then have been powerless to injure the interests of the country.

The report antagonizes the majority report at every point, but while conceding that the republican party favors a just revision of the tariff, does not formulate such a revision.

As if in answer to the arrangement of a minority wage and means committee, Secretary Fairchild has sent a communication to the house, saying that his department is doing everything possible to reduce the surplus and avert a crash, referring to it as a "bill of law," but that the surplus continues to grow.

A New Danger to Hotel Guests.

The Deloit Tribune reveals a new danger to hotel guests if a sleepy clerk happens to be in charge at the desk.

"Key to 278" said the bell-boy to the clerk of a city hotel, as he rushed up to the counter.

The clerk took the key out of the box and extended it to the boy, when a thought struck him, and he stopped and looked in the box at the address on the envelope lying there.

"Who wants it?" he inquired.

"Lady in parlor—in a hurry," replied Front, dancing a jig of impatience.

"That ain't her room. Go back and ask for her name." Front disappeared and returned presently, slowly.

"She says it don't make no difference—it's a mistake—and she's gone."

"Thought so," ejaculated the clerk to a reporter standing by. "She was working the new racket. It's a pretty good one and sometimes takes, operated by women generally. They go up into the ladies' parlor, ring for the bell-boy, and send him in a matter-of-fact way for the key of some room. He asks the clerk for it, and if he is busy and thinking of something else he hands it out without question. Then the female desperado goes through the room in a hurry, trusting to their lack that the occupant will not return before she gets away. Then the hotel is responsible for the loss."

Chew Tobacco?

Two congressmen, the one from Texas, the other from Massachusetts, fell to discussing the tobacco habit. The Texas man is a chewer. His friend from Massachusetts is on the other hand fond of using strong language, whenever the subject of tobacco is broached.

"Brother," said he, "it is possible that you chew tobacco?"

"I must confess I do," the other quietly replied.

"Then I would quit it, sir," sternly cautioned the Massachusetts man. "It is an ungentlemanly habit. Tobacco? Why even a hog wouldn't chew it."

"Now, greater from the land of hick beans, cod and culture," returned the Texas in his drawing manner, "do you chew tobacco?"

"No, sir," emphatically declared the other, almost with indignation. "No, sir, I do not."

"Then pray," asked the Texas, as he slowly changed the subject in his right jaw to the left. "Which is worse, the hog, you or I?"

The Massachusetts man stood fast for the crowd—New York Tribune.

How Alligators Eat.

It is a Southern water who compares an alligator's throat to an inverted bucket. Everything, says the correspondent, which lodges in the open mouth goes down. He is a large, and instead of hunting for something to eat, he lets his victims hunt for him. That is, he waits with his great mouth open, apparently, but, as the "posture" is such a low, crawl into it, then a croak and a giant and a colour of orange. The alligator doesn't close his mouth yet. He is waiting for a whole crowd of things. He does it eating by wholesale. A little later a lizard will cool himself under the shade of the upper jaw. Then a few frogs will hop up to catch the mosquito. Then in succession, and gnats will alight on a tree-frog. Finally a whole's mass of insects and reptiles settle down for an afternoon picnic. Then all at once there is an earthquake. The big jaw falls; the alligator links on, and gulps down the entire menagerie, and opens his great front door again for more visitors.—American Explorer.

Where They Hail From.

Of the 111 members of the federal Senate and House of Representatives no less than forty-nine were born in the State of New York. In the second place comes Pennsylvania, in the third of whose sons are members of Congress. Then comes Ohio with thirty-six Virginia with twenty-three, Kentucky with twenty-two, Indiana and North Carolina with nineteen each, Georgia with seventeen, Massachusetts with sixteen, Tennessee with fifteen, South Carolina and Maryland with thirteen each. No Congressman was born in either California, Colorado, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska or Oregon, and only one in Florida, one in Iowa and one in Texas. Two Congressmen were born in Arkansas and two in Wisconsin. The other states have from three to nine of their sons in Congress. Eight Congressmen were born in Ireland, seven in Scotland, four in England, three in Canada, three in Germany, one in Sweden, two in Norway and one in France, and no other foreign countries were represented.

A MICHIGAN CENTRAL

Michigan Central Railroad, Winter Rates After a Short Season's Run. Dec. 20, 1907.

While employed as agent for the Michigan Central Railroad Company at Augusta, Mich., about seven years ago, my wife became diseased, and I have been a great sufferer ever since. Have consulted the leading physicians of this city and Ann Arbor, and all pronounced my case Bright's disease. After taking every highly recommended remedy that had knowledge of to no purpose, and while suffering under a very bad attack in October, 1907, began taking Hubbard's Rheumatic Syrup and am today a well man. It affords me pleasure to remember humanity any good that I can, and in speaking of the remedy, allow me to say that I think it the greatest medicine in the world.

THE SUPPLY OF THIS COUNTY AND ITS FUTURE.

COMPILED BY J. M. SWIFT, M. D.

It can hardly be doubted that, in five years from now, there will be a small proportion of the people in the large cities who will be able to keep twice a week as there is now in the manufacturing towns in the "Long food" for the first time of the ruminating animals. The grass or hay is essential to the existence. The "chewing of the cud" must furnish a flow of saliva which contains ptyalin which breaks down the grains and other foods. So, it is plain that the extent of the grazing area is the limit of the producing capacity of the corn-belt and the supplement of the grazing area, and a milder product of the pasture lands. The occupation of the range by settlement caused the herds to be upon it to become too numerous. The "sparing-knife" has been used in disposition as an alternative to the usual increase of without native grasses upon the herds, has long found a market for her prolific breeding of upon the range of the North. These are now overstocked, and are further use for southern cattle, Texas as a source of bovine food some, and must still further be a lessening factor in the supply. It is evident that this important staple food supply and the principal of our export trade; is rapidly diminishing, and from three chief causes: the enormous increase of population and its consumption; the constantly diminishing grazing area; and the increased cost of production. There are other causes which are factors in lessening the supply; with varying types, and with more or less power of communicability of destruction, has wrought sad results in later years upon cattle. In the list stands pleuro-pneumonia. It is estimated that, within the last five years, it has inflicted a direct loss upon this country of between $1,000,000 and $30,000,000 and has cost $10 per head, from the price of a steer shipped abroad at his port of destination. The great cattle industry of this nation, as represented in the National Association, have urged upon the passage of the so called "Cattle Bill," providing for a commission with the Commissioner of Agriculture as its chairman, to the end that the warfare may be brought to a successful termination, or at least to deal with the disease every year at once. The eradication and extermination of this scourge must rest upon a scientific basis. Every facility for raising meat should be successfully should be fostered by the general government. The Commissioner of Agriculture has said: "It is only the new method, recently developed, in the Mississippi, that has enabled us to increase our cattle to the extent that it has. In the older section the agricultural class has been given in its relation to the increase of our population, farms have been divided and subdivided and the land particularly beef production has given way to grain raising and truck farming." The Commission is being made to secure wise legislation looking to the fostering of the cattle industry should receive the support of all, especially the farmers of this country.

THE FATE OF THE BLIZZARD.

From the land of the Dakotas, Lands of wheat and of plumage,
And of the about the wheat yield, Told by the wind, the agents,
To the eastward, the farmer, Coax him to the plow, Lead of the plow, the many,
And of the wheat's proud ambition,
From the land of the Dakotas,
Came the blizzard from the northwest, Came the wind, the wind of blizzard, Came the blizzard in its coldness, Sweep the blizzard to the eastward, Street the city of Chicago, Noted for its lands and bacon,
And its hatred for St. Louis, Famous for its bomb-assassins,
And the great foot of its maidens, Sweep the blizzard further eastward, Up Ohio's fertile valley, Tried to freeze the town of Pittsburg, But the gas burned there dismayed it—Fuel hot and so-terrace, Passed the blizzard over the mountains, Child the old Dutch farmer's marrow, Captive took the Quaker City,
From the middle of the streets of Gotham, Proceed about the Nation's congress, In the District of Columbia, Watched the senate chamber's portals, Till it found New York's cold door, Thinking it would freeze him rigid, Came the blizzard from the north-east, Eager to contest with Edman,
For the icy championship, Gazed the man upon the blizzard, Gazed upon the cold wave,
And the blizzard was pushed, slaughtered, Died there upon the pavement, Died the blizzard from Dakota, Died the blizzard from the north-west,

THE GOVERNESS.

BY J. E.

CHAPTER IV. (Continued.)

That afternoon Meg sat late on, before the pretty Dresden tea equipage in the luxuriant drawing-room, trifling with the cups and waiting maids, who sat on the leather rug, playing with a "toilette" book, and her eyes and sharp teeth, when suddenly the door was flung open, and in swept the "Boston" followed by the "London."

girl: "Some men never give up so long their wild oats."
"Jack must if he wants to be my hen," said he grimly. "He'd have been all right if they'd brought him up in England; only my brother is an artist, and spends a lot of his time in Rome and other outlandish places."
"Keells!" was all the companion said.
"Then wouldn't leave him with me, though I offered to bring him up, and then they put him in the army, and expected me to provide for him and pay his debts, which are rather numerous."
"Can you pay those if he marries a rich wife," suggested Margaret in a low voice.
"No; I wouldn't have him do that," said the old man sharply, "though I once wished him to marry a woman whose estates join mine; but after all, a marriage should be an affair of affection, not a matter of convenience."
"Certainly it should," exclaimed Miss-Crewe vehemently, while an angry red spot glowed on either fair cheek. "Is there anything more horrible than for a man or woman to marry for money—from a selfish motive alone and to trample on the best affections and feelings of those they entrap for the gain of filthy lucre?"
"Have you ever been in love my dear?" asked Mr. Norbury, favoring her with one of his keen searching glances.
"No—yes—that is—you have no right to ask such a question," she stammered.
"No; perhaps not. Only I take an almost fatherly interest in you, child," laying one of his yellow claws on her soft white hand.
"Thanks," she said gently; "I will own to you that I did love one, absorbingly, devotedly. But my affection was misplaced, for the man I cared for so truly jilted me for money."
"Is it possible that any man could prefer another woman to you?" ejaculated the old man.
"He did not marry another woman," she answered slyly, "only he gave me up when he knew that I had been true to him, and would be his inheritance."
"Ugh!" exclaimed Mr. Norbury, "let us change the subject," and he dropped the subject.
"Will you wait? But you are teag-ing me, aren't you?"
"Indeed I haven't time to spare you,
you do you, I'm sorry, or you'd your father not expect your visit in the city?"
"Is it quite ready to night, Mr.
Morton?" she repeated with a little warily, "if he will, please?"
"Indeed I haven't time to spare you,
you do you, I'm sorry, or you'd your father not expect your visit in
the city?"
"Is it quite ready to night, Mr.
Morton?" she repeated with a little
warily, "if he will, please?"

Malden stopped dead in the midst of a spirited account of his last run with the hounds; and Captain Drew and most of the young men in the room clustered near the piano.
"Only Jack Norbury kept his place, and remarked in a whisper,
"Who is that with the voice? Not Mrs. Mirror or Miss Smith, surely?"
"No; it is Dorothy's new governess."
"Ah! So my respected aunt means to have the little savage trained and civilized at last."
"Partly; but I am inclined to believe this new importation is more companion, secretary, and that sort of thing to your uncle, than governess to your cousin."
"Indeed! Does she occupy the dual position of governess and secretary?"
"Yes."
"Has she a pretty hot time of it then, I should think especially when Uncle Ben has a touch of the gout?"
"I dare say," returned Miss Langdon carelessly. "Those sort of people are used to hard knocks and roughing it," with fine scorn.
"Then how to sing,"
"Agreed," said Ada, feeling that the "companion had the advantage of her."
"I pity her no end," said the young man with real pity in his tones.
"Who?" asked the beauty with a supercilious arching of her black pencilled brows.
"Just think of her life. She's evidently young," with a fleeting glance over his shoulder at the golden-haired beauty and graceful figure, "and to be boxed up in Uncle Ben's hot-house room at a hundred degrees, singing by the hour to amuse him, or reading parliamentary speeches and the money air of a minister to a hovel."
"Perhaps still it must be hard to have no fun, hardly any society, and lead a kind of deaf and-dumb sort of life."
"Oh, she wouldn't have taken to it if she didn't like it," remarked his companion gently, and then she saw Margaret rise from the piano, and several of the young men press forward to thank her for the diplomatically suggested a stroll in the terra-cotta, which she at once agreed, as it would give her the chance of having a cigar, and together they went out and continued the conversation under the moonbeams.
So when Meg managed to escape from the circle of her admirers, she saw with relief that Jack Norbury was not in the room, and soon managed to get away and went up to her room, feeling melancholy and depressed.

Two Kinds of Pneumonia.
There are two distinct forms of pneumonia: One of these always follows an attack of bronchitis (a cold in the lungs); in this the lung is inflamed in patches or lobules scattered over both lungs alike. This is the form that is so fatal in children and old people. It is termed, catarrhal pneumonia. The other, that which attacks adults suddenly, often in the midst of apparent health, is called "croupous or lobar pneumonia," because one lobe only of one lung is usually attacked. The last named form is not caused by cold, although the first symptom is a severe chill with shivering, which would seem to show that a chilling of the body had really caused the whole trouble. The catarrhal form always follows a catarrh of the bronchial tubes; it is never the first event in a chain of disease, but always secondary. This form is probably sometimes caused by exposure to cold—it certainly is if any catarrh is thus caused. Although there are many plausible reasons for thinking that cold never causes "a cold," there are some facts that seem to prove that a catarrh of the air-passages may thus be caused.
If one of the lower animals, a frog, for example, has a portion of its surface thoroughly chilled by the application of ice or a freezing mixture, it often happens that both lungs become intensely congested or overfilled with blood as a consequence. If this congestion be repeated two or three times, a genuine catarrhal pneumonia results.
This sequence of events is too constant in occurrence to be considered a mere coincidence.—Globe-Democrat.

H. G. COFFEY, Chemist:
I am glad to speak a good word for your Pectoral Elixir. I have had catarrh for twenty years. It had become so bad that I could no longer speak in public and at times I feared that I would destroy my voice entirely. I used many catarrh cures with no benefit. One of your Elix-irs gave me great relief, and a few bottles has made me feel like a new man.

gotten some people here with it. I can is. I am cured and do not need it for myself.

Darwin's Home Life.

It is a very interesting thing about Darwin's home life. He was born in the year 1809. In his wife's narrative she found his happiness and comfort for his life, which might have been followed by gloom, to have been of comfort and gladness. His love for the expression of the functions shows how he watched his little children. It was characteristic of him that although he was so anxious to observe and collect the eggs of a crying bird, he sympathized with the grief of the mother. He was the great fatherly man, an easy, warm, and kind to his children in his life. He loved his grown-up children to laugh with and at him and was generally speaking of them in terms of perfect equality. When I thought I had set myself a value on anything I had done he used to be in a hurry and inclined to explode in mock anger. He kept up towards his children his delightful habit of expressing his thanks. A mark of his unbounded patience was the way in which we were suffered to make raids into the study when we had an absolute need of sticking-plaster, string, etc. I remember his patient look when he said once, "Don't you think you could not come in again? I have been interrupted very often." Our agility of mind, his patience and sympathy were boundless, and sometimes, when most miserable, I felt his sympathy to be almost too keen. On his return from an absence I can recall how I could hardly bear to leave him in the room. The expression of tender sympathy and emotion in his face was too agonizing coming fresh upon me after his little absence. He lived our lives with us in a way few fathers do.
Whatever he said was truth and law to us. He always put his whole mind into answering any of our questions. He respected the liberty of his children and their personality. Our father and mother did not even wish to know what we were doing or thinking unless we wished to tell. He made us feel that we were creatures whose opinions and thoughts were valuable to him so that whatever there was best in us came out in the sunshine of his presence. The influence of his sincerity and greatness of nature had a deeper and more lasting effect than any small exaltation which his praises or admiration may have caused our vanity.—Julian Hawthorne.

Writes Out Her Swear Words.

I heard a curious story the other day about the way in which a lady, who is not unknown in St. Pauls, relieves her mind when anything exasperates her.
A swear word this lady would not use for the world, but she frequently felt that she would like to. Accordingly she kept a "swear book." Perhaps, fair reader, you may gain a suggestion from it, so I will explain. Whenever anything particularly exasperating occurs she scribbles her "swear book," sits down and scribbles all the "swears" and other implications she can remember to the extent of several pages. After that she feels better. Her mind is vastly relieved, and then she tears the scribbled pages out and burns them.—St. Paul Globe.

Hard and Soft Water in Cooking.

All cooks do not understand the different effects produced by hard and soft water in cooking meat and vegetables. Peas and beans cooked in hard water, containing lime or gypsum, will not boil tender, because these substances harden vegetable casines. Many vegetables, as onions, boil nearly tasteless in soft water, because all the flavor is boiled out. The addition of salt often checks this, as in the case of onions, causing the vegetables to retain the peculiar flavoring principle, besides such nutritious water as meat, be lost in soft water. For extracting the juices of meat to make a broth or soup, soft water, unsalted and cold at first, is the best for it much more readily penetrates the tissues; but for boiling when the juices should be retained hard water or soft water salted is preferable, and the meat should be put in while the water is boiling, so as to seal up the pores at once.—Journal of Chemistry.

Alum Purifies Water.

Alum is said to have power to purify water, and even to deprive it of most of the bacteria that it sometimes contains. That muddy water can be cleared by alum has long been known; but it is a comparatively recent discovery that a very small quantity of alum, so small that it is not injurious to drink the water that contains it, will rid water of nearly all its bacteria. A Pennsylvania physician found that the water that was drawn by the people of a village where typhoid fever was epidemic was swarming with bacteria.
Fifteen drops of it, when spread upon a suitable surface, were capable of forming $1,000 colonies of these microscopic vegetable germs. He added alum in the proportion of half a grain to a gallon, and found that not only were the earthy and vegetable matters precipitated, but that the colonies of bacteria were reduced from $100 to eighty, and that these were of large size.—Good Housekeeping.

The Lightning Courtesy.

A recent reception at the White House on Thursday night was almost at an end when a unique little extension was furnished those who stood behind the receiving line. A fair young girl was presented to the President. As he took her hand she ducked down six inches; the movement might be termed a lightning courtesy. The same action precisely was repeated a moment later, as Mrs.
Cleveland shook hands with her. She remained chatting with the wife of the president. "How awfully country. What part of Idaho do you suppose she came from?" was the comment at my elbow on the "lightning courtesy." "That is the latest Bostonese professional beauty, and that duck bow is the latest English custom on being presented to people of note." The movement is a difficult one, and there will be much humor in town if the other amateur beauties determine to adopt it.—Washington Critic.
