TOWN TALK.

Some of our citizens drove to Pontiac Tuesday to see the circus.

The Baptist Sunday school picniced at Yerkes' grove Wednesday.

There is talk of reviving the contest of the May Queen in the near future. Hope they will.

"Make me a child again" was evidently the thoughts of some of the older boys Wednesday.

Edward Whitaker commenced his harvesting yesterday. It is the first wheat cut here that we have learned of.

Holly has visions of a popular summer resort developing at that place. If they can work one up no one here will object.

Harry Meriam passed a successful examination at Detroit last week and received his certificate as a first-class pharmacist.

It is the Variety works, of Cleveland who have secured the contract for building the iron bridge to be placed near the depot.

A marriage license was issued Thursday for Willis Taft and Miss Maggie Dailey, of Plymouth.

Would you believe it? Just one-half of the year of '88 has passed into the eternal past. Are you proud of the record you have made?

The ladies of the Baptist Society will sell ice cream in the Kellogg block Saturday eve. Go and cool off.

The stores all closed on the Fourth and if it had not been for the noise of an occasional fire-cracker one would have thought it was Sunday.

H. W. Holcomb has begun the construction of a large two-story dwelling on Merrick avenue between Second and Third avenues in Detroit.

Nine men, three women and seven boys were left in town Wednesday. The balance went to Novi, Plymouth, Detroit and elsewhere to celebrate.

The Rev. Jas. H. Clark, of Iowa, who preached in the Presbyterian church last Sunday is expected to occupy the same pulpit next Sunday.

Mrs. Ira Daines' Sunday school class called on her Monday evening for a surprise party and left on her hand a beautiful gold ring as a mark of esteem and respect.

Prof. Brower has been re-engaged as principal of the Plymouth schools. He has already been there four years and from the satisfaction he is giving will stay there indefinitely.

The village board are anxious to know when DeMoy intends to fulfill his contract in publishing the proceedings of the board. They begin to think his contracts with them are not very reliable.

Another printer has gone and married: Frank D. Clark, the typo of the Plymouth Mail, captured Miss Frankie Woodcott, of Novi township, and will take her to live on subscription fuel and fodder. Long life, and lots of happiness.

The school board have engaged Prof. Loomis, of Northville, to superintend our schools the coming year at a salary of $900. Mr. Loomis comes well recommended. He is a graduate of Albion college and appears to understand his business.—Maclester Enterprise.

They are Methodist ministers and subject to the appointment of the Bishop of the church yet it is reported that an arrangement has been made by Rev. Dr. W. H. Ramsey, of Ann Arbor and Rev. Dr. W. S. Studley, of Detroit, to exchange at the next conference.

The Wayne ball club play here tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 with our home club. Knapp & Palmer offer a pocket luffe for the best record made. Lapham & Perkins offer a star hat to the first one making a home run. McKean offers a racket for the one scaling the most bases. Go and see the fun.

The Graeville Wood & Son organ company have secured the contract to build a beautiful $3,500 organ for the Methodist church at Bay City. The company have several other large contracts on hand and it looks as though this company would be rushed with work this fall and winter. Mrs. J. J. Wood & Son.

The Globe Furniture company have secured the contract for furnishing all the school furniture that Detroit will want the coming year. The contract was got after a sharp contest.

Wednesday afternoon when postmaster Woodman made up his mail for the north train he only had one postal card to send off. The post office had to be kept open with the postmaster in charge, the mail carrier had to call for the mail bag and deliver it to the route agent just the same as though there was more than a postal card.

The Methodists are contemplating moving their camp meeting from Belleville to some other place near to Detroit. There is no better place for it than the Benton grove a mile and a half south of the village and the minds of some of that persuasion have been turned to that place already. If they locate there it would be with a view of permanency.

At the preliminary meeting called for Monday evening to organize a republican club the attendance was small. Prof. O. L. Palmer was chosen chairman and J. K. Lowden secretary. A committee consisting of Dr. J. M. Swift, O. L. Palmer and J. K. Lowden was appointed to report a plan for permanent organization. The club then adjourned for one week. All republicans are requested to be present next Monday evening.

So far we have learned of the following named gentlemen in this place who voted for W. H. Harrison in 1840, grandfather of the present nominee of the republican party for president: S. Williams, A. L. Cady, John S. Jackson, C. H. Johnson, Michael Hughton, V. Gou'd, Charles Thornton, Fr., J. J. Thompson, John Sans, A. D. Ken-drick, C. A. Griswold, C. Noble, J. Gardner, D. Pomeroy, H. S. Bailey, G. Knapp, A. Knapp, Luther Lapham, F. H. Banks.

The event of the week has been the musical entertainment given by Miss Hattie L. Yerkes' class in music and gymnastics at the Young Men's hall Tuesday evening. The class consists of Carrie Rabbitt, Phoebe Beal, Ethelwyn Dubuar, Margie Thompson, Winifred Walline, May McKean and Inez Rockwell and Mabel Clark. They were assisted by little Miss Edah Carr, Charles Blodgett and Gard. Yerkes, of Detroit, and Will Wood and John Blackwood of this place. The hall was filled with a select company of invited friends who were very agreeably surprised at the proficiency exhibited by the class. Miss Yerkes has been very successful with her class as the entertainment by them proved. At the close a vote of thanks was tendered her by the guests and a request that at no distant date she repeat the entertainment. The fan and dumb-bell drill by the class and the singing by little Miss Edah Carr were the especial features that pleased. The piano used on the occasion was furnished by the Wood Organ company and was made in Northville.

PERSONALS.

J. H. Woodman Sundayed at Ypsilanti.

J. H. Bailey and A. E. Whitehead are working in Detroit.

J. H. Taylor and family are spending the summer at Milan.

Thomas Chappell and wife had a family reunion Wednesday. Their children were present from New Hudson, Milford and Mt. Pleasant.

HOLLY, WAYNE AND MONROE RAILROAD.

From Record of May 27, 1871.
FIRST TRAIN TO NORTHVILLE—A GALA DAY FOR THE HAMLET OF THE HILLS—A GENERAL REJOICING OVER THE AFFAIR—EXCURSION TO WAYNE—MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS.

Our citizens will remember the event of the past week for many years to come, as within those few days, an event of the most vital importance took place, one that had long been looked forward to. Great exertions were put forth in anticipations of the day that should open communication by rail with the outside world, and preparations appropriate were noticeable on every hand for the ceremony which was to take place on

TUESDAY

The day opened rather unpropitiously for a celebration, rain commencing to fall in the morning and continuing at intervals in showers during the day. Notwithstanding this disadvantage, the people from the entire country about, and representatives from Pontiac, Clarkston, Milford, Lyons, Walled Lake, Detroit, Ypsilanti, Novi, Salem and other places were making their appearance till our crowded streets assumed an aspect seldom if ever witnessed in the history of our town. Main and Center streets abounded in numerous banners and devices principal of which was a streamer stretched over Main street with the inscription in red and blue:

"Welcome to Holly, Wayne & Monroe. It was dearest just before day. Light came with 'em promise to pay. Hall to our heroes who braved the 'stamp.' Hall to those who came down with the 'stamp.' Also from Lapham and Swift's store a banner containing:

"Northville 'a point. A gala day for the Hamlet of the Hills." Conspicuously displayed in front of Mrs. Wheeler's store was:

"A welcome to our friends of the F. & P. M. R. W." The store of L. G. N. Randolph presented:

"How happy are our eyes That hear the joyful sound, Which Ypsilanti waited for, And sought, but never found."

while the national colors floated from Kingsbury's, Beals & Co's, Record office and private dwellings.

It was expected that the road would be so far completed that the cars could get into the corporation early in the afternoon with an excursion from Wayne and Plymouth. In anticipation of this all were anxiously waiting reports from the "scene of action." Owing to a bad place through the Benton woods, where quick sand abounds, the work was necessarily slow, notwithstanding the extraordinary exertions of the workmen. The fact became evident that the iron could not be laid within the corporate limits before evening, which fact discouraged a greater part of the people who had been in waiting all day, many having baskets of eatables with them for a general picnic, when the cars should come, and the result was their departure for home. About half past six p. m. the road was completed as far as the toll gate, and amid the firing of cannon, the railroad employees, headed by the Northville Cornet Band marched into town, and to the Elliot House where a supper had been prepared for them. Contrary to expectations the evening passed away without any serious disturbance, the railroad hands as a general thing conducting themselves quite properly, the musically inclined portion entertaining their company, others desirous of listening with a few railroad songs. Reports now came that the following day, Wednesday, an excursion train would arrive about noon with citizens from Wayne and Plymouth, escorted by the cornet band from each place, and that as the train would return at 2 p. m. with stockholders from here to Wayne, to attend their annual meeting there, an opportunity would be presented for all that desired, to have a free ride over the road and back. The news, as might be supposed, was well received, and in the words of a lady observer "the faces of everybody beamed with smiles and sunshine."

WEDNESDAY.

About 12 a. m. the train arrived consisting of one passenger coach, several box cars and a number of flat cars with flags flying. The Northville Band which was in waiting united with the Wayne and Plymouth Bands, and while playing in unison some national airs, escorted the visitors up Main street. Here all separated, many proceeding to the Elliot House, or whatever place afforded nourishment for the inner man, while others took a ramble about town.

From one till half past one p. m. the excursionists and our own people were making for the cars with all possible speed, a continuous train being perceptible from the village to the toll-gate, each seeming afraid lest by some hesitation they might be "too late for the train." Amid the music from the Bands, and "good-byes" from a portion who preferred to stay at home for fear of some accident, the train started for Wayne. Stops were made at Waterford and Plymouth, at which points a number got "aboard." In a little over an hour's time the cars landed at their destination, when nearly 1500 people left the cars, having made the journey without the least accident.

The annual meeting of the stockholders took place here and the following Directors were appointed: H. C. Potter and W. L. Weber, East Saginaw; F. B. Ward, Detroit; Samuel Farwell, Oswego; J. S. Lapham, Northville; W. H. Boyd, Monroe; C. H. Bennett, Plymouth; J. L. Andrews, Milford. Bidding farewell to the wayne friends, the balance of the excursionists took the train and in due season returned home without any mishap having occurred to mar the pleasure of the "first railroad ride from Northville."

Considerable headway has already been made on the road between wayne and Monroe. The work on this portion will be completed as soon as possible and a daily train put on the road from here to Monroe.

The band brought back honors with them from Novi, but the ball club brought back nothing but a score of 7 to 8 in favor of the Plymouth club. We understand that club will come over here next week Saturday to play a return game. If they get away with any scores at all they will do well.

Charles Booth resigned his position with the Globe Furniture company which he has held for a good many years to go in business with James McLogan in Chicago. Saturday evening about one hundred and fifty of the men from the factory headed by the band marched to his house and presented him with an elegant Knights Templar watch chain. Mr. Booth was taken completely by surprise and could find few words to respond to the presentation speech by H. P. Adams. He expects to leave to-day for Chicago. His family will not go until fall. J. R. Rauch, who lately moved here from Plymouth, will take part of Mr. Booth's work at the company's office.

NOTICE!

Two weeks ago a party who is well known took a pair of Veterinary Shears from the side walk in front of Dr. Bell's office. If they are not returned the magistrate will have something to say in the matter.

A PARTING.

BY ARNOLD ANDERSON.

"Do you regret, O Love!" he said,
In solemn thought she bowed her head,
And when she raised it, in her eyes
The tears for which man lives so dead,
"I have forgot to tell you," she said,
"With love like this it cannot be."
"Do you regret, my King?" she said,
More proudly rose the royal head,
"My answer does not need a space,
I thought, 'Retreat has had no place,
Since you may know how I feel you set,
Sorrow must come, but not defeat."
They walk with duty separate ways,
But through the weary years and days,
Alike their faith in love once known,
Although for bread fate gives a stone,
Through space and time shall love be true,
And Heaven may hold a glad surprise.

A FAMILY AFFAIR.

BY HUGH CONWAY.

CHAPTER IX (CONTINUED).

Old Talbot's half-sister, who was some years younger than himself, married, just before the successful coup came off, a man named Carruthers. It was no great match, and if Mr. Carruthers found domestic bliss it was well that he made his matrimonial arrangements before the 'boom' in oil, tobacco, corn, or whatever it was, sent Mr. Talbot to Hazelwood House and county society. Had he deferred it till then the chances are that Mr. Talbot would have insisted on his sister doing better; for Carruthers had only a moderate fixed income, as manager of some works in the north.

Somehow, after her marriage his half-sister slipped away from Mr. Talbot's life. As whole sisters and brothers so often do the same, this fact is not astonishing. Mrs. Carruthers had several children—but one after another they died off. She wrote to her half-brother announcing the birth of the sixth of each. He answered her letters in a congratulatory or congratulatory way as the occasion required. The whole of the correspondence which passed between them when Talbot and Herbert were lanky boys in Hazlewood and round abouts, Frank Carruthers was born, and actually lived long enough to give promise of growing up. Indeed, his father before he died saw the only surviving child strapped upon the back of a servant.

Mr. Carruthers left his widow an annuity for life and a few hundred in ready money. She lived well within her means, and expended her capital in finishing her son's education. She may have had some of old Talbot's views of a large part of it, but she never thought of carrying them out. Her boy, she said, was to go to Oxford, and she intended to see that he had a good education. She may have had some of old Talbot's views of a large part of it, but she never thought of carrying them out.

He got into scrapes, debts, and other bad things, so that the last that she heard of him was that he had run away from his father's house. He had got into scrapes, debts, and other bad things, so that the last that she heard of him was that he had run away from his father's house. He had got into scrapes, debts, and other bad things, so that the last that she heard of him was that he had run away from his father's house.

Then, suddenly, Mrs. Carruthers died. It was a great blow to her. She had never seen her son since he had run away. She had never seen her son since he had run away. She had never seen her son since he had run away.

He was pasty and thin, and had a look of a man who has been through a great deal of trouble. He was pasty and thin, and had a look of a man who has been through a great deal of trouble. He was pasty and thin, and had a look of a man who has been through a great deal of trouble.

"Is he a clergyman?" asked Beatrice.
"He must be, I suppose."
"No," said Herbert. "He never took orders. The fellowship he holds did not make that indispensable."
"They ought all to be like that," said Beatrice. "Men ought not to be forced to enter the church. Besides," continued she, "they ought not to make a man give up his fellowship when he marries. Just as he wants more money they take it from him. He must either give up his wife or his income."
Miss Clanson was becoming quite a philosopher on the subject of marriage. She spoke about it as if it were an impossibility that she herself would ever be interested in the matter.

CHAPTER X.

THE FRACTIONAL COUSIN.

Miss Clanson showed very little interest in the approaching visit. To this curious and, at times, almost apathetic young woman, it seemed as if all young men were alike, although we have seen that she was capable of showing strong feeling and emotion as when she rejected Mr. Morde's love; the only sentiment Miss Clanson felt about Frank Carruthers was these: She was rather glad he was not a clergyman, and rather sorry he was a sort of cousin. She was not very partial to clergymen and she thought male cousins were apt to presume on their relationship. Perhaps they do.

So with something akin to indifference Beatrice saw the lodge gate opened and Horace tring the horses and large wagonette up to the door. She noticed that the young man who sat beside him looked rather pale and wretched. She saw several portmanteaux handed out, so came to the conclusion he intended making a long stay. Then she resumed the book she was reading; it was far more interesting than any young man.

Nor was she disturbed for some time. It was close upon the dinner, indeed Beatrice was already dressed, so that the Talbotts took their guests to the dining-room and left him to make his evening toilet. Just before the going sounded the three men entered the drawing room and Frank was duly presented to Miss Clanson.

"She was very civil and kind to him and welcomed him to Oakbury."
"It's very good of you to take charge of an invalid like me," he said across the table to Beatrice.
"You must thank my uncle. I am only a visitor like yours—Mr. Carruthers."
"And both very welcome," said Horace courteously.

"Exactly so," said Herbert.
"By the bye," said Frank, turning to Horace, "tell me what I shall call you and your brother. Mr. Talbot seems too stiff—Horace and Herbert too familiar. I could, like Miss Clanson, call you uncle, if you liked, but you are not old enough."
"I think as we are cousins we had better use the christened name simply."
"Thank you," said Frank. "Now enlighten me as to my relationship to Miss Clanson."

Herbert explained the matter.
"Half brother once removed. An unknown quantity. If I were a mathematician I should try to express it in figures. It doesn't seem much, but it's a bit of a puzzle."
Then the subject, who had the knack of always interesting them, turned to the guests' affairs, and who were more or less interested, asked Frank questions about his life at Oxford.

"Life is not so bad as you can see," said Frank. "I am sure I have enjoyed it in the morning. I am sure I have enjoyed it in the morning. I am sure I have enjoyed it in the morning."
Herbert said, "I should suspect that the wife died perhaps recently, perhaps shortly after the birth of the child."
"The latter I should think Frank might have heard of, and you'd expect to find up two hundred a year."
"Yes," said Herbert. "The wife died before the birth of the boy. The older the child, the more trouble he found it to conceive is probably the reason he could not be kept."
"And now, after dealing former matters out, he comes to us himself. The further we pursue the matter the clearer it becomes."

They were quite in a middle state of excitement. That they could draw logical inferences as we have seen by the case of the Jenkins' stockings. The brothers had both been impressed that all their speculations as to little Harry's origin had fallen to the ground for want of proper support. Now, at last, was a theory which, if it reflected dishonor on a connection of theirs, was at least tenable. It was improbable, but the whole air was so consonant that it needed an improbability to account for it. They absolutely argued themselves into believing they had found the truth.

"I do not see the junction for Oxford," continued Herbert, after a pause.
"Besides," said Horace, "we cannot forget that his conduct once was not what it should have been."
"That's the worst of going wrong. No amount of straight running will make people cease to look at times instance. The work of reformation is child's play to that of making your friends believe you have reformed."

Therefore Horace's remark was a clincher. Herbert toyed with the open letter.
"Shall we send this?" he asked.
They fell to stroking their beards once more, and continued the operation until the natural kindness of their hearts reasserted itself.

"After all," said Herbert, "it is all purely conjectural."
"Completely so."
"He had better come then."
"I think so. Besides, it will give us an opportunity of seeing him with the child—surely the instincts of paternity must show themselves."
"They are supposed to be very strong."

The polite letter was sent, and a week after the reading of the Trinity term the young Oxford tutor packed up his things and started for Oakbury. As there is no occasion to make superfluous mysteries, it may at once be said that Frank Carruthers knew no more of the existence of the child whom his amiable uncle had argued themselves into believing to be in some way his property, than he knew of—for the sake of a simile—say the presence at Hazelwood House of a gray-eyed girl, whose beauty would satisfy every demand of his rather fastidious taste.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON.

Third Quarter: Lesson II, July 8, 1888.

THEME: THE GOLDEN CALF.—Exodus XXXII:1-36. (Parallel Deut. 9:11-21.)

1. And Moses turned, and went down from the mount; and the two tables of the testimony were in his hands; the tables were written on both sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. 16. And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables. 17. And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, "There is a noise of war in the camp. 18. And he said, It is not the voice of them that cry for being overcome; nor the noise of them that sing do battle; but the noise of them that cry for being reconciled." 19. And he came to pass, as soon as he was come into the camp, that he saw the calf and the golden image, and the people were worshipping them. And he cast the tables out of his hand and brake them to pieces at the foot of the mount. 20. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire and ground it to powder, and strowed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. 21. And Moses said unto Aaron, "What did the people do unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?" 22. And Aaron said, "Let me not be angry with you, because I know that the people are set on mischief." 23. For they said unto me, "Make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what has become of him." 24. And I said unto them, "Whosoever hath any gold, let him break it off." So they gave it me; then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf. 25. And when Moses saw that the people were wakened, for Aaron had made them naked unto their shame among their enemies; 26. then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, "Who is on the Lord's side? Let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

As mentioned in the last lesson, Moses was called to ascend alone the mountain Sinai, where he remained for forty days. Here he was divinely enlightened concerning future duties, the erection of the tabernacle, the appointment of the priesthood, and the services of the sanctuary. At the conclusion of this course of instruction, he received a divinely written book of the Law, its pages so short to Moses, its hours fully occupied with new attainments of knowledge, was long to the burning multitude in the plain below. He remembered that within a short time, Moses remained hidden in the mountain as many days as had been with Israel. Only fifty days after their departure from Egypt was the Law promulgated from Sinai and seven years it all was Moses' abode with the Lord. It was very natural Israel should have murmured.

The people had been dazzled by the swiftly the coming miracles; but to the harem eye, it looked as if they had been led out of Egypt into the wilderness to perish, far from the promised land. Examples held in the view of the mountains, and in the weary days of suspense, even the more solemn words of the law, as an appearance of common sense. Possibly some who were contented the affirmation that this God was the natural product of the country, with which they had no need to do, and it was likely to fail.

The absence of religious experience it was also needed by Aaron to feel his weakness and how much he was for the responsibility of those of high ground. He, who was to be a center of strength for others, was a center of weakness for himself. It was also a need of testing for the people. They had just taken the oath of allegiance to God in the presence of weak displays of divine power. They were not aware of their weakness, and a self-deception. In their unshaken confidence they were confident of Aaron's power, but he was unequal to it. When the people claim to do a visible miracle of Jehovah he induced them to profess a measure his own confidence. Doubtless he proclaimed it a feat to glorify in. This he reasoned to himself, to be but an objective point of vision. The eye may rest on this, while the aspirations ascend higher. Such is the sophistry of the 19th century when it is claimed that pictures and images are aids to worship. Such as is observed, far not in worshipping another god, but in disobeying the second commandment which strictly forbids the making of a visible symbol to represent the great deity, whom no symbol can represent. So far short does human art fall below the requirements of divine representation.

13. And Moses turned and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hands: and the tables were written on both sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. 16. And the tables were the work of God, and the writing was the writing of God, graven upon the tables. 17. And when Joshua heard the noise of the people as they shouted, he said unto Moses, "There is a noise of war in the camp. 18. And he said, It is not the voice of them that cry for being overcome; nor the noise of them that sing do battle; but the noise of them that cry for being reconciled. 19. And he came to pass, as soon as he was come into the camp, that he saw the calf and the golden image, and the people were worshipping them. And he cast the tables out of his hand and brake them to pieces at the foot of the mount. 20. And he took the calf which they had made, and burnt it in the fire and ground it to powder, and strowed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it. 21. And Moses said unto Aaron, "What did the people do unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them?" 22. And Aaron said, "Let me not be angry with you, because I know that the people are set on mischief." 23. For they said unto me, "Make us gods, which shall go before us; for as for this Moses, the man that brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we know not what has become of him." 24. And I said unto them, "Whosoever hath any gold, let him break it off." So they gave it me; then I cast it into the fire, and there came out this calf. 25. And when Moses saw that the people were wakened, for Aaron had made them naked unto their shame among their enemies; 26. then Moses stood in the gate of the camp, and said, "Who is on the Lord's side? Let him come unto me. And all the sons of Levi gathered themselves together unto him.

15. And Moses turned and went down from the mount, and the two tables of the testimony were in his hands: and the tables were written on both sides; on the one side and on the other were they written. 16. Illustrate the impotency of their golden emblem of strength; he cast the powdered metal and refuse into the wick to emphasize the fact that idolatry was "curse," and he embittered the springs of water, so in their spiritual lives it would embitter and poison the springs of religious refreshment. 21. And Moses said unto Aaron what did this people do unto thee, that thou hast brought so great a sin upon them? Aaron had been left in charge he occupied the position of leader and teacher. To whom much is given of him a much is required. The gospel of excuse is very old. Adam replied to the inquiry, "The woman thou gavest me," Aaron said, "Thou knowest the people that they are set on mischief." A refusal statement so far as it went, but no excuse for his participation or leadership in the "idolatry." Notice the equivocation, "I cast the gold into the fire and there came out this calf." As if Providence were responsible for a kind of miraculous transmutation of the golden trinkets into this scintillating form. Aaron was a weak leader, at this date, cowardly and untrustworthy. By his spurious Israel had made a spectacle of itself before the heathen round about. They would laugh at their short-lived piety, their lapse from virtue and their moral nakedness. For where the ear is there the eye is also, and no doubt the publicity and obscenity of their organs had drawn as witness many a scoffing Amalekite (Gen. 16:34).

22. Who is on the Lord's side? Moses was the head of the demonstration took position in the center of the mountain, and sounded with a horn, "Who is on the Lord's side? Let him come unto me." In response Moses' own tribe came forward in penitence and determination to be true to their vows of allegiance to God. This open avowal was the initiatory preparation for the work of the priesthood. It cost something to come forth from among the people, the majority of whom were fully set to do evil. The masses did not respond but retired to their tents. They did not want to take a decided stand for God and righteousness. It costs now. There are two parties; the masses do not identify themselves with the right; but there is no opportunity for neutrality, those who do not side for truth, holiness and God are enrolled as his enemies.

SUGGESTED THOUGHTS.—
The lesson emphasizes the goodness of God, in that atonement was provided for sin, even before the law was made known. Sin was not an unexpected emergency, but grace preceded it.
Those weak enough to sin are always weak enough to lay the blame upon others. Impenitent sin is never pardoned. Guilt cannot be bought.
When Moses came down from the mount, he came as an errand bearer, so we are to speak not our own thoughts but God's. The opposing motive must result from divine inspiration and constraint. The two tables represent two rival claims—a revelation of man and a revelation of God. The statute book of a people is a record of the history of that people.
The tables were written on both sides. There is to be of God's works on which His lessons are not inscribed.

The matter today, true to his profession, goes on into the mountain (as it were) for his message, to be proclaimed in the valley below. When he returns he should touch life with a steel rod, and do his duty with a complete obedience and more radiant in his robes.
The people asked for Moses. So now the masses depend upon some leader. Circumstances create a man and we learn to look for a Moses, labeled by our Arians. Who Moses was only in name, he was really a prophet and Aaron and a god could not fill his place.

Moses' anger was not that Moses heard a space for himself, he heeded the checks of the stinging asperities and they led to their tents. A man prepared for a holy visitation! How many a voice have we worshipped: pride, fashion, self-indulgence, wealth, appearance. Our money has its place and use. Devotion to business honours—bearable, getting, wisely spent. "I'd bless you in a bucket and in a store," if the more you have the more the poorer you are. We too have the option of making out ourselves gods. The father is away, let us watch and pray for his coming. Blessed is that servant who shall be found watching and waiting.

FRIDAY, JULY 6, 1888.

The delightful lawn social, where you sit down on your best girl's white dress and tear it off at the waste and get a big bug or a nasty-looking worm in your ice cream, is near at hand.

The man who goes fishing Sundays and sits in a cramped position on the sharp edge of a rail until dewy eve and calls it fun, is the same man that never goes to church because the pews aren't comfortable. He lives here.—Plymouth Mail.

O. H. Carpenter went on a frogging expedition last week and captured sixty dozen of the amphibious animals which he shipped to Detroit parties and got in return a check for $50. A good frog pond well stocked ought to pay well.—Geyford Herald.

A telegram was received at Plymouth Tuesday from Eaton, Col. announcing the death of Miss Susie Jackson, who went there about eighteen months ago in hopes of benefiting her consumptive tendencies, with the above fatal result. She was thirty-one and highly respected.

Queer world, this. If some villain circulates a disreputable story about a girl, her character is blackened, and half the women in the community will shun her. While the drunken loafer, if dressed in fine clothes, is classed by the other half as a gentlemanly escort. Awful funny, isn't it?—Er.

Thanks to President Fisk for a copy of the Albion college year book, a neat little publication in four parts devoted to educational matters. This justly celebrated institution of learning shows a large increase of students over former years and by keeping abreast of the times is gaining a most enviable reputation as a modern college.

Listen, ladies, here's something for you: "The Lansing State Republican" says Monroe Peck, an aged farmer of Aurelius, wants a good woman to keep house and take care of him the remainder of his days. A lot in Mason, twenty acres of good tillable land, an organ, half of the household goods, a landy horse and carriage and fine retirement will be bestowed upon the proper person." A good chance for some homeless grass-widow or maiden lady from whose heart the fire of youth has departed.

B. F. Wright, aged sixty or more years, had a serious dispute with a vicious bull last Sunday morning. Mr. Wright was thrown in town and the animal was on its knees endeavoring to gore him, and but for the fact that its horns had been taken off, and the presence of his sons, who, armed with pitchforks drove the beast off, Mr. Wright would certainly have been killed. As it was, he received numerous bruises, and a sprained wrist which is badly swollen and quite painful.—Plymouth Mail.

J. H. DePue, of Reading, has been to California a year, and on his return wrote the Clare County Clear about the state as follows: "California is the hottest and the coldest, the poorest and richest, wettest and driest state in the union; with more streams and less navigable waters; more laborers and less labor; more gold and silver and less money; more cows and less butter and milk; more chickens and less eggs; where house flies live and flees never die, and men pay $1,000 an acre for climate and have the land thrown in."

J. R. CORSON'S.

Northville Record.

Many people who would not think of putting a dirty bank bill between their lips do not hesitate to make the mouth a convenience for holding silver change for a moment. But it is claimed to have been demonstrated that disease germs can be carried by silver pieces as well as by paper and if one could see all the hands through which the coin had passed it would probably be kept away from the mouth.

The girl who works—God bless her! She is brave and active. She is no too proud to earn her own living or ashamed to be caught at her daily task. She is studious, painstaking and patient. She smiles at you from behind the counter or desk. There is a memory of her own sown into each silver coin. She is like a beautiful mountain vine already far up the hill, and the sight of her should be a fine inspiration for us all. It is an honor to know this girl—to be worthy of her regard. Her hand may be stained by factory grease or printer's ink, but it is an honest hand and a helping hand. It stays misfortune from many homes; it is one shield that protects many a forlorn little family from the almshouse and the asylum.—Christian Advocate.

A delightful perfume for halls and parlors in dwelling houses or hotels can be easily procured at this season of the year, and it is such a pure yet delicious odor that it charms every one. It is simply a rose jar, which should be opened about one hour every morning and then carefully closed. A writer in one of our English contemporaries describes the best method for stocking the jar, and in doing it suggests the preparation of the rose stock should be detailed to the care-taking member of the family, who never forgets anything. Gather the rose petals in the morning; let them stand in a cool place, then heap up lightly for one hour to dry; then put them in layers, with salt sprinkled over each layer, in a large covered dish—a glass butter dish is a convenient receptacle. You can add to this for several mornings, till you have enough stock—from one pint to a quart, according to the size of the jar stir every morning, and let the whole stand for ten days. Then transfer it to a glass fruit jar, in the bottom of which you have placed two ounces of allspice, coarsely ground, and as much stick cinnamon, broken coarsely. This may now stand for six weeks, closely covered, when it is ready for the permanent jar, which may be as pretty as your ingenuity can devise or your means purchase. Those with double covers are the best, and very pretty ones in the blue and white Japanese ware, holding over a quart, can be bought for a few shillings.

Have ready one ounce each of cloves, allspice, cinnamon, and mace, all ground (not fine); one ounce oforris root, bruised and shrouded; two ounces of lavender flowers, and a small quantity of any other sweet scented dried flowers or herbs. Mix together, and put into the jar in alternate layers with the rose stock, and a few drops of oil of rose, geranium, or violet, and pour over the whole one-quarter pint of good cologne. This will last for years, though from time to time you may add a little lavender or orange flower water, or any nice perfume, and some seasons a few fresh rose petals. You will derive a satisfaction from the labor estimated by the happy owner of similar jars.

RENEWS HER YOUTH.

Mrs. Phoebe Chesley, Peterson, Clay Co., Iowa, tells the following remarkable story, the truth of which is vouched for by the residents of the town: "I am 73 years old, have been troubled with kidney complaint and lameness for many years; could not dress myself without help. Now I am free from all pain and soreness, and am able to do all my own housework. I owe my thanks to Electric Batters for having renewed my youth, and try a bottle, only 50c. at A. M. Randolph's Drug Store."
