The residence of Henry Lock in North township was totally destroyed by fire one day last week. The fire caught from a defective chimney. It will take the proceeds of a good deal of "garden sass" to make the loss good. They have the sympathy of every one but liberal patronage of their wagon will do more to help them rebuild than volumes of sympathetic words will.

In the recount of the votes in this senatorial district the majority of Theo. Reutz has been reduced from sixty-one to fourteen. In nearly every voting precinct in the district Mr. Dickerson gained a vote or two. This shows the unrelenting of the count made election nights immediately on the close of the polls. It is a singular fact that so many mistakes were discovered and nearly all of them in Mr. Dickerson's favor.

OUR HEROES.

HENRY BURNETT, EDSON JAMES AND DANIEL H. NOYES WHO SERVED IN COMPANY D.

By Lieut. H. H. White.

on the Maryland side of the Potomac, about ten miles above Harper's Ferry. The third division under Gen. Wilson, and our brigade under Gen. Custer were ordered across the river in the direction of Winchester, met the enemy. Our regiment dismounted to fight on foot but got back pretty soon, found we had bit off more than we could chew, fell back to a better position, fired it again with the same result.

Burnett, who had picked up horses shooting had been detailed as company blacksmith while we were at Stevensburg the winter before. But since the opening of the campaign had not only kept the horses of the company shod but had taken part in most of the engagements with the company. When we got to the horses very hot and thirsty Burnett said to me "I believe I sha'n't fight any more," I replied, I have thought you were foolish to do it if you keep the horses shod it is enough. "Well," said he, "I will stay each and fill the canteens so you boys can have a good drink of water when you come in." In less than an hour we were drawn up in line again and ordered to dismount, but before we could dismount the Rebs rose up in the edge of a field of standing corn, within easy range, and gave us a volley. At the same time they charged us in flank, we broke for the rear but soon found there wasn't any. Just as we broke a man of Co. I, standing at my left, was shot in the head. I reached out and caught him as he fell to the ground. In a minute more I saw a horse go galloping back riderless, the next glance showed me that it was Burnett's. One of the boy's saw him when he fell and said he was dead. It soon became evident that we were in a tight place. We found out afterwards that by a blunder of Gen. Wilcox in the early part of the day we were likely to all be cut to pieces.

Gen. Custer told him to take his division and make for Harper's Ferry and he would cut his way out with his brigade, which he did, an old gray gelding blind to a blind fold on the river where we crossed in safety. What we accomplished the men in the ranks never knew nor have I ever seen anything equal to it in army history.

But I am splitting this too long and must hasten. James remained with us the most of the time until our discharge, then came to his home in Troy, but home and friends could not restore a broken constitution and he died of quick consumption about the close of 1885.

In conversation with Mrs. Noughton, the mother of the principal of our high school, who was a sister of Burnett, she said: "I was not much acquainted with Daniel and Edson. We had two step brothers who were in service, one of whom died in prison. Henry was always a good boy, kind and helpful and father began to depend upon him so much but at his country's call we gave him up." As a tent mate I can say he was always with the company, always jolly, always ready for duty.

PROFITABLE BUSINESS.

Those who take an agency for a reliable enterprising house, learn their business and stick to it, "get on" in the world. People who have any idea of engaging in any canvassing business will do well to write George Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine—the great art and general publishers. They offer the most exceptional advantages to those who are sufficiently enterprising to be willing to make a push in order to better their condition. If nothing to try. Women make successful canvassers, as well as men. Full particulars will be sent to those who address the firm: their full address is given above.

FARM AND HOME.

Spending Before Götting.—The farmer who has his money all spent before he gets it is always working at a disadvantage, says a writer in the Practical Farmer. As soon as he gets it there is some one waiting for it and he no sooner receives it than it is gone.

And this is not all; very many times he is obliged to sell stock when it would be an advantage to have kept it upon the farm and fed and fattened for market. Often he is obliged to market a crop when by holding over a short time much better prices could be realized.

In addition to this, in a great majority of cases, the man who buys ahead, buying on credit, will almost invariably buy more than if cash or its equivalent is paid down.

I do not mean to imply that the farmer should never go in debt. There are many occasions when going in debt may be made profitable but paying down should be the general rule, and especially so in making a start. It is quite an item with the young man to build up his credit. If he goes in debt he may often be compelled to sacrifice his property or sell when it would certainly be to his interest to keep, in order to maintain his credit. A man that habitually buys on credit pays in the end a heavy interest upon the amount. A regular cash customer can always get goods at bottom prices while in addition, there are always occasions that will arise where bargains may be obtained for ready money and the man who makes it a rule to pay cash is generally in a condition to take advantage.

If prospects are good for an advance in price of any product when it is ready to harvest he can store and hold. Stock can be kept and fed to maturity and in this a better price and a larger profit be secured. A failure of a portion of the crops a loss of a very few stock may often be the starting point to a man in debt of serious consequences.

I know of one farmer who lost a fine farm from going in debt. With the prospect of a splendid wheat crop in sight, but a very few days before the crop was ready to harvest the chin-chag came on, and the crop was an entire failure; he borrowed money to tide over that year and went in debt again and in a short time had lost his farm. A good wheat crop that year would have made him all right. This is only one of a large number that I know have made a start down hill in a financial way from a singular cause.

The farmer who so plans his crops as to raise nearly, or quite all that is needed in his family, owns his farm and keeps out of debt is independent. But the farmer who buys our credit, is in debt for his farm, is in no better position than a large class that I've, I might say, from hand to mouth. Keep out of debt, as a rule, and be in a position to realize the most from your farm products as well as to take advantage of any decline in prices that may be presented.

Care of Colts in Winter.—It is necessary in order to have a colt grow into a well-developed horse that special pains should be taken to have him kept thriving during his first winter. If foaled late in the season, he should have an extra ration, in case the mare's milk is not sufficient to keep him growing and in good flesh. Skinned milk will answer for this, and a little oil-meal or cotton seed meal should be mixed with it, the amount to be given depending on the age and size of the colt. From a pint to a quart of the meal per day will be sufficient for a six months old, according to his size, colt of the heavy draft breeds requiring more than those of smaller frame. Oats, too, may be provided for colts, from one to four quarts per day, the amount depending, as in the case of the meal, on the size and development of the colt. One or two quarts of bran per day will be found a good additional ration, which will maintain a healthy condition of the bowels and keep them free from worms. The colt should have clean, comfortable quarters with a dry yard in which to exercise, and when it can be so arranged, the stable should open into the yard so the colt may pass out and in at will, except in stormy or very cold weather, when the door should be kept closed. During the winter is a favorable time to handle the colt, teaching him to lead quietly if he has not already learned this, and by occasionally placing harness on him accustom him to wear it.—Practical Farmer.

About Clover.

I am not disposed to argue with scientists when they lift up a voice of warning, proclaiming that by the continued use of clover we are simly accelerating the exhaustion of our soils.

I simply look back over fifty years and make a note of the fact that the farms of this locality on which clover has been grown with the greatest regularity are to-day the farthest from exhaustion. Clover is such a great help in solving the problem of available plant food that I believe it to be a work of benevolence to help in the management of it. I say sow clover with all small grain, no matter what crop is to follow it. Use plenty of seed; it is the cheapest way fertilizing and keeping your land clean at your command. Do not be so greedy for a little feed as to pasture the young clover before it has grown enough to cover the land for by so doing you will in the long run have much less benefit to the land. Remember that a soil densely shaded is always improving, and that no other crop you can grow will furnish as good shade as clover.—Country Gentleman.

Raising Turkeys.

The greatest secret of raising turkeys is to keep them warm and keep them from getting wet in any way. We have known of an entire flock rendered almost worthless by becoming very wet from a hard rain, from which they could not quickly escape to a place of shelter. For several years we have fed the following powder, commencing when a month old and feeding for several weeks, and have lost none from what is known as "shutting the red." Powder of cassia bark, three parts; ginger, ten parts; gentian, one part; anise, one part; carbonate of iron, five parts; mix well and give for every twenty young turkeys a teaspoonful twice a day in the food. If turkeys are raised by the old ones and forage a great deal, we consider this necessary.—Practical Farmer.

Farm Notes.

Farmers' children are a knowledge of botany easily, being much among the flowers and they will find the knowledge useful later.

In the management of a farm, as well as with all other pursuits attending to details has done more to ensure success than anything else.

In adjusting your stock to the size of the flocks rapping bear in mind that straw and corn fodder will be worth but little this year on account of frost and rime.

"Faro tickling" ought to be well done up this season if the oft-repeated advice of the average agricultural paper to do such work on rainy days has been heeded.

A man fond of lawsuits in which he may pose as plaintiff is little better than a common huckster in any neighborhood that has the misfortune of his presence.

The Farmer's Review estimates the corn crop at 2,110,926,258 bushels basing its opinion on returns from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

Professor Morris, of Wisconsin, says we do not yet half appreciate Indian corn and red clover. He expects to cut four crops of clover this season on the State Experiment Farm.

No farmer need sit down and expect some one to furnish him a ready-made system or plan of conducting his farm; he must make it himself—in the opinion of an acute agriculturalist.

Cabbage-growers in Northwestern Ohio are said to have formed a combination by which they agreed to furnish no cabbage for the neighboring cities for less than 5 cents per head in the field.

The farmer who will hire wicked, foul-mouthed hired men to become his children's every-day associates can expect them to grow up with their speech tinged with vulgarity and profanity.

It may sometimes pay better to purchase feeding stuff rather than to be obliged to dispose of desirable animals for the farm, and which it would be possible to keep after being wintered through.

The tone of English papers show that the quality of British wheat is showing up better than was anticipated, though below the average. The estimates of quantity are also slightly increased.

If a little clearing, a little ditching, a little enriching, or a little picking up is done each year, the farm will steadily improve. But if the farm suffers a little neglect each year it will soon run down.

Every lost or broken or worn-out screw bolt should be replaced with a new one before the implement is stored in the tool house or barn, so that when spring comes everything will be ready for work.

Household Hints.

The oyster flour is sifted for sponge cake the glaze the cake will be.

A small piece of sulphur placed in the cupboard or drawer will drive away ants.

The flesh of fresh fish should be firm, the gills should be light red and the scales silvery.

In making a mustard plaster for a patient with a delicate skin, use the white of egg instead of water. Wash mirrors in warm suds, then dust with whiting from a muslin bag and polish with chamois skin.

Hard soap lasts much longer if dried for several weeks before using it. It is also less hurtful to the skin.

If a cucumber is cut into strips and the pieces put into places where ants are found it will surely drive them away.

Brooms dipped for a few minutes in boiling suds once a week will last much longer than they otherwise would.

To prevent the smell of cabbage permeating the house while boiling, place on the stove a dish containing vinegar.

Rub your lamp chimneys after washing with dry salt and you will be surprised at the new brilliancy of your lights.

Dessert rice—One cup rice, half cup currants, cooked with a cup, diluted warm water and milk. Eaten with egg sauce.

In boiling meat for soup use cold water to extract the juices but if the meat is wanted for itself pour into boiling water.

Egg sauce—Beat the white of one egg till stiff, then add the yolks and beat well; one cup sugar, with a teaspoon lemon or vanilla; then add half a cup of cream or rich milk.

To remove paint from silk goods saturate the goods with equal parts of turpentine and ammonia then wash in soapsuds and lay dry between blotting paper under a heavy weight.

Quick pudding—Three eggs, one small cup of flour, four tablespoons of milk, two teaspoons of baking powder; steam in small cups for twenty-five minutes; this quantity will make five.

Sauce for pudding—One cup of sweet milk, one egg, two tablespoons sugar, one spoonful each of butter and corn starch; let all boil a few minutes being careful to keep from burning; flavor with lemon.

A Floating Dream.

When the sun is dying,
And the clouds are falling,
Packwell then my thoughts are flying,
Days and months of life are flying.

From the Wife of the ad

At how quickly time is passing!
Short the years, we are becoming
Dear my friends, I give greeting
In the days of which I'm dreaming.
Mid the night under the vine I lay

But through the moonbeam, the glow
Of the sun was visible, the rose,
Shed their light on me repeating;
For the dream was quick in going—
Like my youth in bright to late

—George Eliot.

The Fall of the Toe.

It has been supposed that the toe, even the great toe, was one of the most frivolous members of the human body. The toe has taken its place in our English speeches as the exponent of the "right fantastic." It is associated in the public mind with the mirth, the merriment, the waltz and other amusements that have to do with matter rather than a mind with gay living rather than high thinking. But after Mrs. Margaret Fox's disclosure, the popular estimate of the significance of the toe must be reserved.

Mrs. Kane was one of the pioneers of "spiritualism" on this continent, and she now testifies that the "spirit rappings" with which she once mystified people were not produced by disembodied spirits residing in another world, but by one of the toes belonging to her own embodied self, residing in this world.

The revelation, while it makes the toe more interesting than it was before does not impair its standing. We have been accustomed to fancy that brass showed itself solely in the cheek. But it takes a pretty brazen toe to be party to a fraud of this nature. Imagine the indignation that will take possession of the souls, that solemnly used to drift in ghostly counsel at those Fox seances of the old days, to learn that what they took for celestial sounds were merely the workings of the joint of the big toe of Margaret Fox. In their madness—which will exceed that of March's wildest hare—they will heap curses red with uncommon wrath on the toe. They will vow never again to trust the toe, declaring that, rather than the tongue, it is an unruly evil full of deadly poison. The tongue is sometimes guilty of backbiting. But it never tried to pull spiritualistic wool over confiding eyes.

However, there is one thing to be said to the credit of this abandoned Fox toe. It has confessed its sin and reformed. So to speak, the Fox toe has given the cold shoulder too, set its face like flint against and turned its back upon spiritualism. There is hope for such a toe.—New York Tribune.

A Zulu woman is equal to eight cows. How these ancient names do survive! An American is equal to one calf, jackedass not being legal tender.—Frederick's Magazine.

W. P. Tazliff, of Kentucky, represents the largest congressional district in the country. "I hear," says London French, "that he died at El Alamein, in a party of soldiers sent seventy miles up to the mountains to beat the Mediterranean squadron was at Adulis, and they expected abundant sport, but were woefully disappointed, for hardly any game was seen, and the bar consisted of two deer and a sow, which last creature the duke shot by accident."

At St. Ann's church, Montreal, among the attractions of a mammoth bazaar was a contest in which the boys of the society tried to pull half a guinea in the time it took the girls to save half a cedel of wood, and were most gloriously beaten for their pains. One of the judges said that they might have won had not the guinea-frame fallen down and stayed bare with needles' thread, thimbles, etc.

The etymology of the word honeymoon is thus given by good authority: "Among the northern nations of Europe there was an ancient practice of newly married couples to drink mead (mead, a kind of wine made from honey) throughout 30 days after marriage. Hence the term honeymoon. Little, the Huns drank so much mead at his wedding feast that he died."

From Brownsville, Ind., comes the story that a young lady sent a note to a disreputable lover requesting the return of a lock of hair which during his courtship had been plucked from her dainty tresses. His reply was brief, and to the point. Rummaging at his trunk he collected a number of tresses culled from various "best girls" during his law-breaking career and forwarded them to the girl, inclosing a note to the effect that he had really forgotten which was hers, but she might select it from those forwarded and return the rest at her convenience. They don't speak now as they pass by.

Two Californians crossing from Avalon, Catalina Island, to San Pedro in a small yacht had a peculiar experience. About half-way across they saw dead ahead a big whale breaching on the water. There was a gale blowing, and the whale wouldn't budge, and before the course of the boat could be changed she ran upon the tail of the monster. Luckily the big fellow didn't strike, but only spouted fiercely, and the boat, after almost capsizing, slipped off the tail and went safely on its course.

DISMISSED THE G. A. R.

Democratic Veterans Form New Society.

About 1,200 Democratic veterans members of the G. A. R. posts situated in the state, held a convention, in Indianapolis, Nov. 21, at which it was resolved that every Democratic member of the G. A. R. should renounce the order. All present pledged themselves to withdraw from their posts. Adjutant Gen. Scott presided.

Another meeting was held last night at Indianapolis, at which an organization was perfected, known as "the Democratic Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of Indiana." This organization is the result of what has been termed the revolt against the G. A. R. of the object of the new association is set in the following preamble to their constitution and by-laws:

The purpose of this association shall be to inculcate true principles of patriotism, love of country, and to teach and inculcate true democratic principles in the administration of the government, both state and national, and secure pure, simple and efficient administration of the same, and to resist, with all we might say and every effort, against open violation of the rights and liberties of the people.

To preserve and strengthen those blood and fraternal feelings which should bind together those who, as soldiers, sailors and marines, united to preserve the rebellion and to perpetuate the memory and history of the land.

To aid in every possible way all persons who have been honorably discharged from the military and naval service of the United States. To secure for them preference and protection in the civil service, etc.

After the adoption of the constitution the following officers were elected: President, F. L. Taylor; secretary, W. C. Parkinson; treasurer, L. C. Daniels; vice-president, Samuel C. Green.

Under the constitution the entire sum in arrears of the association is placed in the hands of an executive board. George W. Koots was elected chairman, and was given power to appoint the other members of the board, which he did by naming the men in each congressional district and two from the class at large of the next term.

SHERMAN'S WIFE AVOCATE.

The General's Wife Dead—Re-Union Taken to St. Louis.

Mrs. Ellen Sherman, wife of General W. T. Sherman, died at the family residence in New York Nov. 27.

Mrs. Sherman has suffered from heart trouble for about five years. About three weeks ago her malady assumed a serious aspect. Everything that still could be done to prolong the life of the patient, and hope was not abandoned until the morning of the day of her death, when she grew worse, and passed away about 10 o'clock.

Gen. Sherman and his wife had been married thirty-one years and grew up as children together in Lancaster, O., where Mrs. Sherman was born sixty-four years ago.

Her father was the celebrated Thos. Ewing, senator, representative and cabinet officer, and the mother was Miss Boyle, and it is from her that Mrs. Sherman inherited her strong Catholic faith, for which she was noted.

Mrs. Sherman's remains were taken to St. Louis, Mo., for interment. St. Louis is the old home of the Sherman family, several members of which are buried there.

A special car was placed at the disposal of Gen. Sherman to convey the remains west. The train started on the morning of Nov. 30, and reached its destination the next morning, the interment taking place in the afternoon.

Among the members of the family who accompanied the body to its last resting place were: Gen. Sherman and the two daughters, Lizzie and Rachel Thomas Ewing Sherman, the son who is studying for the priesthood, a married daughter, Mrs. Ellen Thackeray, at Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Pitch, another daughter joined the party.

A meeting of prominent G. A. R. men was held in Chicago as soon as her death was announced, and the following resolution of sympathy adopted and telegraphed to the General:

The undersigned, whose chief pride in life is that they were of the band you were so distinguished a leader of, beg leave in the name of your supreme agony to tender an expression of our most intense sympathy. May the God who shielded and protected you in the seething flame of battle avert you thy consonant which mortal torment.

A SERIOUS STORM.

Great Loss of Life and Property.

One of the most severe storms of snow and wind known in Canada for years broke out over the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, the other evening. The wind at times blew to more than 100 miles. The streets and the surrounding country were covered with snow drifts, 10 feet in places, and the most severe cold prevailed.

Fourty-four people were picked up in the streets of Montreal, either benumbed by the cold or bewildered by the winds.

At Quebec the gale raged furiously, and the iron ferryboats that plied between that point and Point Levis were caught in the ice, which threatened to crush them.

The steamship Pollio, bound from Cape Breton to Quebec, was seen struggling against the gale and ice in the gulf of St. Lawrence 200 miles below Quebec. She evidently dismasted and has not been seen or reported since. She had 40 passengers, a crew of 18 and a general cargo.

L'Islet and Riviere du Loup report 60 dead snow and ice, with heavy gales. Pointe au Cheneaux signs for 100 reports a brig caught in the ice, powerless to move and giving signals of distress. Her name can not be made out, nor can her captain be reached.

Telegraph wires are down everywhere, and all railroads are badly blocked trains being greatly delayed.

At Newcastle six schooners have been caught and driven in the ice, and a small sailboat has overturned 15 vessels at Charlottetown. Five vessels are caught off the coast and will be crushed.

Reports from all along the coast of Maine indicate heavy damage to vessels from the storm.

A large number of cottages at Cape May, N. J., have been undermined, and on some of the lower elevations the people were compelled to leave their houses in boats. The loss to property will reach $4,000.

Telegraph wires are down through the east, but reports come of great damage to shipping in New York, Halifax, Lewes, Del., Atlantic City. Fear is felt for the safety of 20 pilot boats out from New York.

Blaine for Senator.

A letter has been received in Washington from an intimate friend of James G. Blaine, in which the writer speaks of authority of the plans and intentions of the Maine senator. He says that at no time has Mr. Blaine ever entertained a wish of going into Mr. Harrison's cabinet, but is now on the subject of the proposed of the new president's cabinet family has ever passed between the two men, and Mr. Blaine has no idea of intimating indirectly or directly that he deserves a place in the cabinet. On the contrary, Mr. Blaine has no desire whatever of accepting any place in the gift of the president. It is added that Mr. Blaine entered the campaign partly as a republican, fearing the success of the party, and that a political preference he desires is said to be the legislature of the state of Maine can give him. From that it is understood that Mr. Blaine is anxious to re-enter the service of his state as a senator, and that in the event of his vacancy he will appear as a candidate for one of the seats in the senate.

A Postal Report.

The postmaster-general has submitted to the secretary of the treasury his estimates for appropriations for the postal service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1889. The aggregate is $2,678, as against $2,606,223, the appropriation for the present fiscal year. In the item of mail bags and mail catchers the estimates are $80,000 less than the appropriation for the present year, and the sum for locks and keys is $10,000 less than the present year. These reductions, it is said, are occasioned by the systematic repair of all defective pouches and bags, and by bringing into use locks which have accumulated in the various post offices throughout the country. The revenue of the department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1888, was estimated at $62,500,000, which is an increase of $3,000,000 over the revenues of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1887. This will leave an apparent deficiency for the year ending June 30, of $4,000,000.

To preserve and strengthen those blood and fraternal feelings which should bind together those who, as soldiers, sailors and marines, united to preserve the rebellion and to perpetuate the memory and history of the land.

To aid in every possible way all persons who have been honorably discharged from the military and naval service of the United States. To secure for them preference and protection in the civil service, etc.

After the adoption of the constitution the following officers were elected: President, F. L. Taylor; secretary, W. C. Parkinson; treasurer, L. C. Daniels; vice-president, Samuel C. Green.

"I mean that I was in the first stages of consumption; I was losing strength and vitality every day with the terrible disease when Smith advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Northville Record.

E. R. REED, Editor and Prop'r.

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1888.

Nine of our citizens belong to the Northville Commandery - Knights Templar and they have been going over there quite frequently of late, drilling. Tuesday night the train on which they usually came home was one hour and forty-five minutes late and the half dozen knights who went over concluded that they would rather walk home than wait for the train and they did so. It was a novelty, but the novelty were off before they got home. Plynott Mot.

Mr. L. W. Hutton, of Northville, Mich., has purchased of L. G. Moore his fruit farm just north of the city. Mr. Clarence Hutton, we believe, will occupy and manage the same. The many friends of Elder Moore and family will much regret their leaving this city, which they will doubtless do, as Mr. Moore contemplates devoting his entire time to the ministry.—Hartings Democratic.

Later. Since the above was in type Mr. Hutton has returned and we learn from him that he has accepted a position in Chicago and intends leaving for there in a week or ten days.

The Detroit Commercial Advertiser has the following to say of J. W. Donovan, who is to deliver a lecture here in the near future for the benefit of the band. "Mr. J. W. Donovan, one of the most popular speakers in the state, an earnest Republican, a well-known lawyer, and above all a cultured and honest gentleman, is being urged for collector of the port of Detroit, to succeed the present incumbent who was appointed by the outgoing administration. The latter gentleman has made a satisfactory record, but as a change will, of course be made by the new administration, it is pleasing to know such a worthy successor is spoken of for this important position. It is not known that Mr. Donovan would accept; at any rate the suggestion of his name is a worthy tribute by his friends."

Information wanted—William M. Dowell, who lives on a farm about three miles south of Howell, left home Oct. 10, for South Lyon, to obtain information on culture of celery. He left South Lyon that day, and from thence his whereabouts cannot be learned. He is man of excellent habits and a good reputation. He leaves a wife and four children. As he was out of health it is feared he is roaming the country in some. McDowell is aged thirty-four years, some five feet ten inches high, of blonde complexion. He was well dressed. He wore a black suit, also a brown derby hat, and had an overcoat of a brownish cast. He weighs 150 pounds; has a scar on one cheek, and wears a mustache. Any information leading to the discovery of Mr. Dowell will be thankfully received by the sorrowing family and friends.—Howell Democrat.

Frank Baldy, of Anthony, Kansas, who is visiting in Detroit tells a rather discouraging tale of the boom in southern Kansas. "The boom is as dead as a nail," he says, "the crops have failed for three years past, and during the coming winter there will be untold suffering among hundreds of farmers who have been unable to raise anything to eat and haven't money enough to take them outside the state. Just about every farm is mortgaged and some are paying as high as 3 per cent a month. If some measures of an extensive nature are not taken by outside people to anticipate the coming distress there will be a good many dead people in Kansas before spring." —Detroit News.
