The Ann Arbor Courier has just entered upon another New Year of its existence, brighter and fairer than ere before. The Courier ranks way up on the top shelf of Michigan's weekly press.

The Record has been in the line of being about as near perfect as possible to be. During the recent cold weather, not the least trouble has been experienced to comfortably warm every room in the building.

Almost every one has been enjoying sleigh ride about the village this week. There were an almost countless number of cutters, drawn by spirited animals, driven by fair ladies, speeding along our avenues Tuesday afternoon.

The county board of supervisors has authorized the offering of a reward of $250 for the apprehension of S. H. Wilhelms, the missing Milford bank cashier. The local committee of citizens in Milford will add $250 to the sum, making a total reward of $500. (Pontiac Courier Tribune).

Remember the date! Monday and Tuesday night, Feb. 1, and 2. Prof. John Reynolds, the greatest mesmerist of the age, will give an exhibition of his powers of mind at the opera house here of those dates. This will be a treat for Northville people, such as is not often possible to offer them.

Arthur D. Power, who has been ill with pneumonia for a week past, died at 5:30 last night. Mr. Power was one of the most popular men in southern Michigan, and he will be greatly missed both in social and business circles. We hope to be able to give a more extended notice next week.

Mrs. C. H. Johnson, of Detroit, was taken very ill one day last week while visiting the day with Mrs. A. K. Carpenter. She is now in a critical condition with but little or no hopes of recovery. Her husband, Chas. Johnson is a son of W. T. Johnson of our village, with whom they have been spending the holidays.

5. Song without words. Mendelsouh, a. "By the Sea" b. Spring Song

In case your knives and forks, or other cutlery should become rusty, they should be rubbed with a flannel dipped in sweet oil, then covered with slacked lime and allowed to rest for twenty-four hours. They should then be wiped clean and finished off with some powdered whiting and a piece of chamouis leather, when they will become as bright as new. So says one who has tried it.

It doesn't pay to make a mistake in a printing office. An Mr. H. H. has a paper not a few plants in town have read as follows: "The largest and most complete printing office in the city." In making up the plants, a mistake was not noticed until the paper was printed. The whole town was in an uproar and when the lady's husband read the item he armed himself with a revolver and started for the printing office, but the editor saw him coming and escaped through a back window.

A reverse of seasons is supposed to take place upon this earth once in every 10,500 years, so scientists tell us, due to the varying inclination of the earth's axis. About 1,500 years ago we entered the epoch of a more general winter temperature, and if nothing happens to prevent, we may expect a gradual softening of our winter climate during the next nine thousand years, when another glacial epoch will begin. What sort of a country will this be in the year 11,500? Will it resemble Egypt, with remains of great buildings buried or sticking up out of the sand, and known to be more than 4,000 years old?

The Art Amateur hears that a great Art Loan Exhibition is to be held at the Madison Square Garden from some time in November, 1892, until some time in January, 1893, in aid of the building fund of the American Society of fine arts. The objections that were raised as to the suitability of our great New York amphitheatre when Mr. Elwell proposed his National American Salon scheme last winter, it is said, are to be over come in a very original way by the architect of the building. A $50,000 guarantee fund has been provided, which considering the enormous rent of the building and the great cost necessary for equipping it for such an enterprise, the editor thinks, does not seem too large.

The following from the Napa (Cal.) Daily Register will be of interest to Northville readers:

There was a happy family reunion at the home of Prof. J. H. Simonds on Third street, New Year's Day. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Simonds, arrived from Michigan last week with the intention of spending the winter here with their son's family. The senior Simonds has a brother, Judge E. B. Simonds, whose home since 1891 has been in the northern part of this state. With a view to a pleasant surprise, Professor Simonds telegraphed this uncle to come down and "see the folks." The Judge accordingly arrived from Redding Thursday night and for the first time in thirty-two years looked into the face of his brother Edward and shook the hand of a nephew whom he had not seen since 1860. It goes without saying that notwithstanding the storm the home of the Simonds was witnessed a very happy New Year!

A Winter Night: Found in a Snow-Drift.

Dorothy saw only the love-light in his eyes, the smile of welcome on his lips, as he knelt down and put his arms about her, saying:

"Oh, my beautiful love, how I have longed for you! Daring are you better? You are white as the snowdrifts under your chin, and your lips look too pale to give me a caress. I will kiss them red again."

"Put your arms about my neck, dear; you need comfort me, for my heart is torn with anxiety, for, Dora, darling, I cannot find little Ally."

"Ah, but you will, darling! I shall soon be strong and well again, and we will go out in the world to look for her together; my woman's wit shall help you, and we will wander the wide world over till we find our little treasure. Take comfort, dear heart, she will be well cared for and kindly treated, for she is so sweet and lovable no one could harm her."

"Do you know who stole her, darling?" "No; who was it? She was very wicked, the woman who tore her from me; that horrible man, Oh, Pierce, why did she do you such cruel wrongs—what spite had she against you?"

"When you are well enough to hear my history, dear, you will understand and pity me. Now you must think of nothing but getting well."

"No one has discovered you, dear, that is good tidings. You could not bear worry now, my poor pale snowdrop."

The dusk came upon them as they sat in the bright firelight, chatting happily. Pierce held Dorothy's hand, and she looked into his face, listening to her voice in a hush of spirits very pleasant after the rushing life he had led of late.

The next day was dull and stormy, and after luncheon Dorothy was taken very tenderly into the cozy sitting-room that led from the hall.

Mrs. Steel had gone home to see her youngsters, so the lovers were alone, and, as it were, with many sweet things to each other.

Pierce put off the unhappy recital of his history.

"I will wait till she has had time to rest and recover herself," he thought, as he looked down lovingly upon the little recumbent figure on the pretty crimson sofa couch.

The stars eyes looked up fondly at him, the little hands clasped over his arm were white as the snowdrifts that fell noiselessly outside.

All inside was warm and cozy, and outside was chill and dull.

Pierce, after propping Dorothy up with pillows, bent over her and kissed her fair face, saying:

"How nice it is to be alone together, Dora, darling! I am afraid lovers are very selfish, they want to shut all the world out from even the sight of their happiness. You feel stronger to-day, don't you? I can see just a faint rosebloom on your cheek like the first flush of dawn in the sky. Confound it, who is this last remark was called forth by a loud impatient knocking at the hall door.

From the sitting-room they could see a carriage covered with snow, two steaming horses, and a coachman in a fur cap.

"Come, back, back, dear, try to get other countries."

"I am, Pierce, my darling, tell him it is false, she cried in agonized accents as she took up her hat and coat before them."

Pierce took a hand kindly, and, assisting her to rise, said:

"My dearest, had a wife, but the law has freed me from her ever, or I should not have dared to stir this dear hand. Stand up, my love, and go a brave heart, no one shall harm you."

"But yourself, I suppose, sir, don't listen to him, Dorothy, is telling an untruth. I saw his wife but a few days ago."

"You say my wife chose to call here—your wife, Alice?" For the love of mercy, tell me, had she my little child with her? Was she?"

Horace Middleton grew unpleasantly, while Dorothy bent her head, her hands clasped, as though to add to the father's entreaty.

"I know nothing of the child. The mother is a fine woman, with plenty of spirit in her. Set told where to find my truant."

"Come, my dear, be quick and get your things, side, put on your hat, and go."

own base heart; you insult yourself more than you do me. Your ward was driven from home by your insults. Your own conscience is the best accuser. I see by your eyes you know I speak the truth. If you are sensible you will go away in silence, and leave your ward where she is."

"I am not quite an idiot, Mr. Penfold. You are a young man, and may like to play the part of a Don Juan. I must protect my ward from such unfair influence. Where is she? I insist upon seeing her. She has given me trouble enough, I must assert my authority. You know of course that she is under age."

"I know that if she were of age you would not rule a moment at Castle Gower. You cannot see her; she has been very ill, and is not fit to see anyone. She gave me a message, which was that she will not enter Castle Gower while you are there."

"If health is only a paltry excuse, she must and shall return if I have to take her away by force."

"You would have to lift her over my dead body if you carried her away by force."

"Sir, I have no time to bandy words with you. Let me see my ward at once. I have authority, and evidently must exert it."

"I tell you she is ill—totally unfit to be bothered by you. She is not a child, and she stays here at her own desire."

"I have only your bare word for that."

The door opened slowly and Dorothy entered, a light in her eyes. Pierce had never seen her so bright. She took the jeweled casket at her waist, and the hand that was adorned by her father's massive ring.

The two men looked at her as though she was a being from another world.

Pierce said entreatingly:

"For God's sake, go to your room, Dorothy, and leave me to deal with this man alone."

"I will go, Pierce, when I have told him I stay here of my own free will. You need me from my frozen to death, my love, my love, my love. I am your promise-keeper, and I will keep it. I am your promise-keeper, and I will keep it. I am your promise-keeper, and I will keep it."

"To save myself from worse than death I will come to you, and I will stay with you, until you find me, half-dead in the snow-drift, when he made me desperate with the weight of his hand."

Dorothy looked hardly earthlier, as she spoke, but her eyes were fixed on the man who had been counted as a king among his fellows, and his bold eyes drooped beneath the scornful fire of hers. His voice was hoarse as he begged:

"You must come home with me, that man has my wife's child."

"It is all over, Pierce, my darling, tell him it is false, she cried in agonized accents as she took up her hat and coat before them."

CHAPTER XI.

"You had better come to me at once, dear," said Mrs. Steel when she heard of the scene there had been in her absence.

Dorothy lay, white and weary, on her couch. Pierce had been bathing her forehead with some sweet essence that made the room smell like a flower-garden.

The scene had upset her, and following it came Pierce's entreaty for an early marriage.

He had told her his history in a few words. While at Oxford he fell in love with a girl who was at a small boarding-school, and, led away by boyish ardor, married her, disregarding the fact that she was but a beautiful gipsy, whom her ambitious parents wished to make a fine lady.

She behaved pretty well the first year, then a boy was born, whom she simply worshipped. He died in a childhood illness, and instead of being chastened by grief, she seemed to be made desperate.

She sought excitement far and near, visiting her own people, and, to Pierce's annoyance, spent most of her time with them when they brought their circus to Card if.

One member of the company was a handsome athlete, a man of splendid physique and the brain of a brute.

Alison was cautioned against encouraging his attentions, but she disregarded all advice, and her foolish parents indulged her in this as in every other whim.

Attended in her husband's hearing of the flirtation, and forbidding her to hold any intercourse with her father or any member of his company.

After this, Pierce met his wife and her lover in the Sophia Gardens, and horseplay was the handsome athlete and ordered his wife home, where there was an awful scene, which was followed by many days of estrangement and misery.

When the circus went away, Mrs. Penfold was missing.

She had cast aside her fetters, and flown away free to the roving life she loved.

She left her baby behind without regret.

Her father, a fierce temper-dreaded fellow, fancied his girl had been badly used by her husband, so he protected her from the wronged man's just anger, and excused her sin.

He would have pardoned anything for the pleasure of keeping his handsome girl with him.

This, of course, is a bare outline of much domestic misery that Dorothy understood and sympathized with in all the tenderness of her heart.

Then came the history of divorce.

"You remember my coming home on New Year's Eve, dearest, full of happy relief? Well, that day saw the last of all trouble connected with that dark page in my history. I was free."

"I had settled with my lawyers about the allowance it was my wish to make her, so that she should have no excuse for sin. I wanted to wash my hands of all connected with her, and begin afresh with the new year, new aims, new hopes."

"Now knowing all, can you love me and be happy as my wife?"

"I can love you all my life, dearest, but do you think it can be right to marry a man whose wife is still alive? That is nothing together in holy wedlock as long as both shall live. Can anyone, in sight of God, be justified in taking another woman, tell us his wife is dead?"

"Why, certainly."

Oiga, may have had the said west of her subjects for the treatment she received at his hands, but she certainly never suspected their love. The new Queen, wife of King William II, is more likely to retain and retain the affection of the Württembergers, for she is young, amiable and beautiful. She is the second wife of the King, whose first spouse died six years before he married the present Queen. The latter is the eldest daughter of Prince William of Schaumburg-Lippe, and was born in 1864. Her youth was spent at Ratiboritz and Nachod castles, in Bohemia, where her parents reside. She received under the eyes of her mother, Princess Bathildis of Anhalt, a most careful education, eight tutors being engaged to teach the seven children—four sons and three daughters—of the family. Thus Queen Charlotte became well read in German and foreign history and literature, an accomplished linguist, musician and amateur artist, but was also taught how to handle a horse and how to drive a pair of fiery Bohemian ponies, not to mention her great personal attractions and the winning ways of each other.

Wales and the United States reveal a difference damaging to us and suggests that the government—the state—should give better attention to this matter. The penitentiary and reform- atory prisoners of the United States have in the last decade increased in a slightly larger ratio than the increase in the general population, while the county jail prisoners have increased a ratio more than double. During nearly a similar period of years, ending with 1889, the prison population of England and Wales has decreased 27.5 per cent, notwithstanding the increase in the general population.

ONE may get an idea of the number of pennies lost from the history of the old half cents of fifty and sixty years ago. Where are they now? Of these 800,000 were coined about twenty-five years ago. Where are they now? A few are in the cabinet of coin collectors. None have been returned to the mint for re-coining or are held by the treasury. Nobody sees them in circulation any more. All of them except hundreds have been curio hunters have absolutely disappeared. Of the old copper pennies 119,000,000 still remain unaccounted for, save that once in a while one sees an old specimen. There are more than 2,000,000 bronze two-cent pieces somewhere out of 4,500,000 of them that the government issued.

UNFORTUNATELY when the law shall have done all that it can in restraining the use of dynamite, the danger will still be great so far as the murderous crank is concerned. He can always make his dynamite for himself. It requires a very small knowledge of chemistry, while the materials necessary may be bought separately for a trifle at any drug store. But so far as the law can go it ought to go without delay. For the most murderous impulse of the crank is less likely to persist while he buys materials and manufactures his explosives than while he simply purchases a cartridge already loaded. Legal restraint upon the sale of dynamite will go far to prevent its criminal use. A system which shall follow every ounce of it from the hour of its manufacture to the moment of its use, holding each possessor responsible for his disposal of it, is not impossible to devise, and such a system would very greatly reduce a danger against which we have no security at all.

The illustration depicts a two-story commercial building. The upper story has three tall, narrow arched windows. Above these windows is a decorative cornice with the year '1887' in the center. Below the cornice, a row of small text reads 'REGISTERED TRADE MARK'. The lower story features a large storefront with a sign that reads 'T. G. RICHARDSON, THE OUTFITTER'. The storefront has large display windows showing various goods, including what appears to be a horse-drawn carriage in the left window. In front of the building, a horse-drawn wagon is being loaded or unloaded by several people. A man on a horse is visible on the right, and a woman is standing near the wagon. The scene is set on a street with a horse and rider in the background.

CUT THIS OUT.

And Wait Until Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 9 a. m.

One of the largest clothing houses in New York city has failed for $500,000.
The entire stock has been brought to Detroit, Mich., by order of court, and will be closed out at retail in eight days by a well-known Detroit firm. On account of this great failure the immense building at No. 157 Jefferson avenue, between Woodward and Griswold, sixth door west from Woodward, fifth door east from Griswold, Detroit, has been hired by the assignee expressly for this great bankrupt assignee's sale. The stock consists of nearly $500,000 worth of fine clothing etc. The entire building will remain closed until Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 9
a. m., when this great sale will begin in the immense building, 157 Jefferson, between Woodward and Griswold. Below we quote a few prices, in order to show what extraordinary bargains will be offered.

Men's heavy winter overcoats $1.98, positively worth $2.50; you may keep this coat home five days, and if it is not worth $2.50 return the same, and we hereby agree to return the $1.98. Men's heavy ulsters $3.75, positively worth $5.00, or your money refunded. Men's Whitney chinchilla overcoats, $5.25, positively worth $20 or your money will be refunded.

Men's ribbed diagonal suits, $2.89, worth $12.50. Men's English worsted, cutaway suits, $7.99, valued at $28. You have same privilege on these suits as on above mentioned garments.

Men's Melton cassimere pants, worth $3, for 98c. Men's all-wool cheviot pants (25 styles), $1.49, worth $5.

Boys' cape overcoats, $1, worth $4. Boys' pants ($5.00) at 9c a pair.

Boys' suits, $1.25, worth $4.50; good woolen socks, 6c per pair, worth 40c; fine embroidered suspenders, 9c, worth 60c; fine heavy red flannel underwear, 37c per suit, worth $2.50; men's hats, 60c, worth $3.75 (all shapes); boys' hats, 15c, worth $1.50, and 30,000 different articles we cannot mention here.

It will pay you to come a hundred miles to visit this great sale. If you value money don't miss it. Everything sold as advertised. We advise you to cut this out and bring it with you, so you get exactly the goods mentioned here. This sale will positively commence on Wednesday, Jan.
20, at 9 a. m., in the immense building, 157
Jefferson avenue, between Woodward and Griswold, sixth door west from Woodward, fifth door east from Griswold, Detroit, Mich.
N. B.—Railroad fare paid to all purchasers of $25 and over.

"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple, when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, beautiful, good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only. It is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvellous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.
Look for this stamp—The Rochester. If the lamp dealer has not the genuine Rochester and the style you want send to us for our new illustrated catalogue and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 2,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.

PLYMOUTH

Mrs. Pepworth is seriously ill. Mrs. John Strang has a severe attack of the grippe.

Geo. W. Springer of Grand Rapids is in town on a visit to his parents.

Several parties from Detroit were out hunting in this vicinity last week with great success.

Geo. Hillmer was obliged through illness, to resign his position with Daniel Scotten & Co. of Detroit, and returned to his home here.

There is a petition in circulation for the establishment of a branch post office at Northville. It would certainly be a great convenience to the farmers of that part of the town.

Farmers are taking advantage of the winter to do their plowing. The only plow respondent has noticed in this vicinity is the only one that has been used upon the massive brows of the citizens.

PLYMOUTH MILLS

Pomeroy Sundayed with the grippe. The grippe is quite prevalent in our town last week.

Geo. W. Springer has had an attack of the grippe last few days.

Thomas was confined to the bed last week.

The school is well attended. The services are held as usual.

Kalamazoo is that we shall be glad to see it. Those who have been suffering from the grippe for some time are much better.

Northville while the grippe was taken ill but recovered.

By the and treatment of the grippe on the road near Northville.

Revival meetings are being held in the M. E. church conducted by Rev. Ebling pastor assisted by his niece Miss Ebling.

Mrs. J. L. Hogle went to Pontiac last Saturday where she met her husband. They Sundayed with E. M. DuBois and family in Detroit.

Teas, coffee's, spices and extracts are the specialties at C. A. Hutton & Co's.

aconite, and remedies given to produce vomiting prevented a fatal result.

Mr. Geo. Green's mustangs ran away one day last week and did not do a cent's worth of damage as far as breakage was concerned, but Mr. Burdick, who chanced to be on the route which the runaways took, is sure he escaped by them only by the "skin of his teeth" as the wheels of the two vehicles clicked as they passed. Mr. B. must have had on his usual safety glasses, as the boy who went in pursuit thought the distance between the two wheel tracks was about four feet.

FARMINGTON

Mrs. Fred Warner is quite sick with the grippe.

The men are busy cutting ice and filling ice houses.

The Misses Sherman are visiting relatives at Avon.

J. L. Hogle, supervisor, was in Pontiac last week on business.

Botsford hotel, Clarenceville, Friday evening, Jan. 15, social hop.

Perry Smith of Pontiac was in town last week visiting relatives and friends.

Guy Pettibone entertained a number of his little friends last Friday evening.

S. H. Adams has purchased the Power lot just east of the Enterprise office.

Mrs. J. L. Wilbur has returned from Plymouth where she has been nursing a sick aunt.

Mrs. C. J. Sprague is quite sick at this date, also her aged mother who resides with her.

The Misses Gibbs after a pleasant two weeks visit with their parents have returned to Ypsilanti.

Francis B. Owen and wife, former residents of Farmington, are visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. T. H. Turner was called to the bedside of her mother who is very low with not much hopes of her recovery.

The spicy little Enterprise will not be issued this week on account of the editors absence, on the editorial excursion.

Revival meetings are being held in the M. E. church conducted by Rev. Ebling pastor assisted by his niece Miss Ebling.

Mrs. J. L. Hogle went to Pontiac last Saturday where she met her husband. They Sundayed with E. M. DuBois and family in Detroit.

Teas, coffee's, spices and extracts are the specialties at C. A. Hutton & Co's.

Quite a large attendance at the social dance last week Wednesday evening at the residence of Thomas Hitchcock and a very enjoyable time reported.

The Misses Chamberlin who have been visiting friends in Detroit have returned home after a very delightful time. While there Miss Stella supplied a vacancy in one of the schools.

Quite a number of school-boys met at the home of Mrs. Nellie Bloomer last week Tuesday evening in honor of her 12th birthday. A very pleasant time was enjoyed and the company dispersed wishing Nellie many happy returns of that day.

Personals.

Those Who Came Yesterday, Here Today, and Gone Tomorrow, as it Were.

Miss Phoebe Beal is seriously ill.

W. H. Yerkes is just entering upon his second week's wrestle with the grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. George Allen of Detroit spent last week with their parents at this place.

State agent Houghton, of the mutual Assurance Co., of Mass., was a visitor in our town last week.

Dr. Tweedale and Fred Wheeler of Salem, J. D. Murdock and Mr. Hood of Plymouth, Mr. Wingrave of Detroit, were among others who witnessed Damon and Pythias Friday night.

Emma A. Yerkes of this place and Thos. G. Scott of Byron Ohio, were married by Rev. F. Bradley last Saturday afternoon. The happy couple will make New Baltimore, Ohio, their future home.

Preston and Stella Fuller of Livonia returned last week, from Caro Vassar and Gagetown, where they visited friends during the holidays, and resumed their studies at Plymouth school. They report having had a very pleasant time.

IT gives us pleasure to announce to the public, and our many patrons that 1891 has been a most successful business year with us, and our many customers have gone from our doors happy and smiling. Our success has been due largely to the fact that we are selling goods at a small margin and endeavoring to give satisfaction in every instance. We are also pleased to have this opportunity of thanking our many, many friends for their liberal patronage, and assuring them that we will be as ready to serve them in the future as we have been in the past.

Yours Very Truly,

SANDS & PORTER.

THE OLD RELIABLE FURNITURE HOUSE.

It Should Be in Every House. J. B. Wilson, 571 Clay St., Sharpsburg Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free Trial Bottles at A. M. Randolph's Drug Store, Large bottles, 50c. and $1.00.

A Mystery Explained. The papers contain frequent notices of rich, pretty and educated girls eloping with negroes, tramps and coachmen. The well known specialist, Dr. Franklin Miles, says all such girls are more or less hysterical, nervous, very impulsive, unbalanced; usually subject to headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, immoderate crying or laughing. These show a weak nervous system for which there is no remedy equal to restorative nerving. Trial bottles and a fine book containing many marvelous cures, free at Geo. C. Hueston's, who also sells and guarantees Dr. Miles' celebrated New Heart cure, the finest of heart tonics. Cures fluttering short breath, etc.
