The Death Roll.

HORACE WILKINS.
As noted in last week's issue, Horace Wilkins died at his home in this village Thursday morning, April 14.

Mr. Wilkins had been a great sufferer for a long time and for two years had been unable to perform any manual labor, although he had been about our streets until about six months ago, since which time he had been confined to his bed.

He was born at East Henrietta, N. Y., Dec. 25, 1853, was married to Clara V. Cobb, sister of Earlin and Albert Cobb, about 12 years ago and had resided in Northville since that time. Four children were born to them, the eldest dying a few years ago, and the wife and the three remaining children are left in mourning for a faithful husband and kind and loving father.

The funeral took place from the M. E. church, of which he had been a member for the past five years, Saturday afternoon, the pastor Rev. Bradley officiating, and the remains were interred in Rural Hill cemetery.

Mrs. CATHERINE FRY.
Died at the home of her son Frank in the west part of the village the 18th inst. of general debility.

Mrs. Fry, whose maiden name was Speer, was born in New Jersey in 1811, and married for her second husband John Fry, who died in 1862, about fifty years ago. They settled in Michigan in 1846 where she had since resided.

Frank Fry is the only son born of this union. The step children living are Thomas, Alfred, and Edward residents of New York state. Wm. E. of Northville, and Frederick of Farmington.

Mrs. Fry was a member of the Baptist church and an earnest christian woman.

The funeral occurred from the M. E. church the 14th, Rev. L. G. Clark officiating, and the remains were interred in the Livonia Union cemetery.

MARY JANE ELY.
Died at her home in this village the 15th inst. of erysipelas.

Mrs. Ely, whose maiden name was Lee, was born in New York City in 1828, was married to W. V. Ely in the state of New Jersey in 1847, and settled in this township in 1854, and have since resided here and about here and Farmington.

Eleven children were born of this union, nine of whom are still living: W. L., Alfred W., Jessie M., and Mrs. Minnie Paulger of our village, Chas. H., John Y., Mrs. C. L. Lapham and Mrs. Rebecca Armstrong of Farmington.

Mrs. Ely had been in somewhat feeble health for some time past and had not been able to be upon our streets but perhaps twice for a year or more, but it was thought that the pleasant spring, and summer weather would find her much improved. She had been a sufferer from erysipelas several times previous but had soon recovered. A week or two ago Mr. Ely purchased the home where he now resides that they might enjoy their remaining days in comfort, but the good wife and kind mother was not permitted long to enjoy it. Mrs. Ely with her husband joined the Plymouth Baptist church more than 30 years ago. She was loved and highly respected by all who knew her.

The funeral occurred from the home Sunday afternoon, Rev. L. G. Clark, assisted by Rev. F. Bradley, officiating and the remains were interred in the family lot in the Farmington cemetery.

ARBOR DAY PROCLAMATION.

In accordance with established custom, I hereby designate Thursday, April 28, 1892, to be observed as Arbor Day.

The beneficial effects of the observance of Arbor Day have been noticed with interest and pleasure by the citizens of Michigan. Other States may excel us in extent of natural forests, but in fertile plains, smiling valleys and beautiful lakes, Michigan can nowhere be surpassed.

I earnestly appeal to all our people to observe Arbor Day by the planting of trees along the highways and about their homes. Fruit trees, shrubbery and flowers are a blessing which all can enjoy, and every citizen can do something to render them more abundant.

By the Governor,
ROBERT R. BLACKER,
Secretary of State.

Dr. Bennett.

Dr. Bennett, Specialist, of Detroit, will be at the Macomber House on Wednesday, April 27th.

Our Village.

And the Keeley Institute As Viewed By One of Our Guests.

James W. Brown, a well known member of the Grand Rapids board of review, and a recent graduate of the Keeley institute has this to say, in the Grand Rapids Leader, of Northville:

"Northville is called the Switzerland of Wayne county. It is a beautiful place of some 2,000 inhabitants, and one of the oldest villages in the state. It is situated on the F. & P. M. R. R., 25 miles from Detroit and 11 miles north of Wayne junction. The people of the village are very hospitable and kind, they throw their parlors and their homes open to the graduates from the institute, the most of whom board and lodge at the private houses. Board is moderate. I paid $5 per week, and the ladies are constantly fixing up dainty dishes to tempt indifferent appetites.

The physicians at Northville are regular graduates who have had large experience in their professions, and have by long practice thoroughly identified themselves with Dr. Keeley's methods of treatment. My sojourn at Northville will always be remembered with pleasure and benefit to myself. Ten years of wasted life might have been saved to some worthy purpose had the Dr. Keeley treatment been known to the world as it is now, (that is providing I had taken it then). It offers new hope and new life to all who are in the toils of opium, liquor and kindred diseases. It has brought a peace and contentment to me that can only be appreciated by those who have passed through what I have."

HOW TO WORD AN ADVERTISEMENT.

A man was denouncing newspaper advertising to a crowd of listeners.

"Last week," said he, "I had an umbrella stolen from the vestibule of the church. It was a gift, and valuing it very highly I spent double its worth in advertising, but I have not recovered it."

"How did you word the advertisement?" asked a merchant.

"Here it is," said the man, producing a slip cut from a newspaper.

The merchant took it and read:

"Lost, from the vestibule of the church, last Sunday evening, a black umbrella. The gentleman who took it will be handsomely rewarded by the undersigned. High street."

"Now," said the merchant, "I am a liberal advertiser and have always found it paid me well. A great deal depends upon the manner in which the advertisement is put. Let us try your umbrella again, and if you do not acknowledge that advertising pays I will purchase you a new one."

The merchant took a slip of paper from his pocket and wrote:

"If the man who was seen to take the umbrella from the vestibule of the church last Sunday does not wish to get into trouble and have a stain cast upon the christian character which he values so highly, he will return it to No. High street."

This duly appeared in the paper, and the following morning the man was astonished when he opened the front door of his residence. On the porch lay at least a dozen umbrellas of all shapes and sizes that had been thrown in, while the front yard was literally paved with umbrellas. Many of them had notes attached to them saying that they had been taken by mistake, and begging the loser to keep the little affair quiet.

THROUGH generations of incessant education and practice man has developed his vocal powers to marvelous perfection, but left his poor nose run itself until it has become an alow for whose misbehavior he declines to be held responsible. To this lapsed development is no doubt due man's notoriously defective sense of smell. How powerfully this sense may be developed is shown in the ferret, which follows the trail of a scent alone though it be several hours old. Man, with all his boasted superiority, could hardly do it though a fox should drop a crumb of Limburger in every track. There are millions of delicate odors in nature each capable of exciting pleasurable sensations in insects and animals, but all lost on the untutored sense of man. Again when he is free to taste or not to see or as he pleases, his olfactory is the mercy of every stretch that comes along. A nose at once responsive to pleasurable odors and impervious to offensive smells at will, as the eye protected from hurtful light, would be an achievement worthy of evolution philosophy.

Death also makes room for improved physical machinery. Our bodies have wondrous powers, but they are very limited. There are beasts that can outrun us, outlift us, out-carry us. Birds have both the earth and the air for travel, yet we must stick to the ground. In this world, where the human race takes for its own, the angels are creatures of God that can surpass us in some things. Death removes this slower and less-adroit machinery and makes room for something better. These eyes that can see half a mile will be removed for those that can see from world to world. These ears which can hear a sound a few feet away will be removed for ears that can hear from zone to zone. These feet will be removed for powers of locomotion swifter than the reindeer's hoof, the eagle's plume, or lightning's flash. Then, we have only five senses and these we are shut up. Why only five senses? Why not fifty, why not a hundred, why not a thousand? We can have, and we will have them, but not until this present physical machinery is put out of the way. Do not think that this body is the best that God can do for us. It did not half try when he contrived your bodily mechanism. Mind you, I believe with all anatomists and physiologists and with all scientists and with the Psalmist that "We fearfully and wonderfully made" I believe and I know that God can give us better physical equipment. Is it possible for man to make improvement in almost anything and God will be able to make improvements in man's physical machinery? Shall canal be given way to limited express train? Shall slow letter give place to telegraph, that places San Francisco and New York within a minutes of communication? Shall the telephone take sound of a voice sixty miles and instantly bring back another voice, and God who made the man who does these things, not be able to improve the man himself with infinite multiplication? Beneficent death comes in and makes necessary removal to make way for these supernatural improvements. It also our slow process of getting information must have a substitute. Through prolonged study we learned the alphabet, and then we learned to spell and then we learned to read. Then the book is put before us, and the eye travels from word to word and from page to page, and to take whole days to read the book, and if from that book of four or five hundred pages, we have gained only friends departed. The body they had put off is only as when entering a lighted and resounding with music bands, you leave your hat and cloak in the cloak-room. What would be a quieter do if he had to carry those encumbrances of apparel with him into the brilliant reception? What would he have departed do with their bodies if they had to be encumbered with them in the King's drawing room? Gone into the light? Gone into the music! Gone into the festivity! Gone among kings and queens and conquerors! Gone to meet Elijah and hear him tell of the chariot of fire drawn by horses of fire and the visions of mounting the sapphire steps! Gone to meet with Moses and hear him describe the pile of black and salt that shook when the law was given! Gone to meet Paul and let him tell how Felix trembled, and how the ship went to pieces in the breakers and how thick was the darkness in the Mamertine dungeon! Gone to meet John Knox and John Wesley! Gone to meet Hannah More and Frances Havergal. Gone to meet the kindred who preceded them. Why should not wonder if they had a larger family group there than they ever had here. O, how many of them have we forgotten again! Your father and mother, years apart, but they got together, and their children that you years ago got together again. G. where they have more room. G. where they have more joyful society! G. where, to you, there have mightier capacity to love than when they were here! G. out of hindrances into unbounded liberty! Gone out of January into June! G. where they talk about you, as we always talk about absent friends, and say: "I wonder why they will come up here to join Hark! the outside door of heaven swings open. Hark! they are for the golden stairs. Perhaps they are coming!"

On weep no more your comforts slain,
The Lord is risen, he lives again.
"And now may the God of peace who brought again from the dead Lord Jesus that great Shepherd through the blood of the everlasting covenant make you perfect in every good word and work." Hallelujah! Amen!

PERFUMES OF ANTIQUITY.

How the People of Rome Scented Their Bodies and Clothing.

The amount of perfume used in the palmy days of Rome was enormous; the wealthy patricians were most prodigal in this respect. The perfumers were called unguentarii, as they principally compounded unguents, and must have done an immense business. In Rome they congregated in a quarter called the "Vicus Thuriferarius," says Knowledge. The most celebrated perfumer in the time of Martial was a certain individual named Cosmus, whom Martial frequently mentions. At Capua there was such a number of perfumers that the principal street of the city, named Sepasia, was almost entirely occupied by them. For the most part these tradesmen were Greeks, and as at Athens, their shops (tabernae) were the rendezvous of the rich idlers of those days.

The perfumed oils and ointments were made in great variety. The basis of the oils was generally the oil of Ben and that of the unguents was a bleached and partly purified tallow. They were used not only for the hair, but to anoint all parts of the body, especially after the bath, which was quite a complicated process. It was also customary at banquets to honor the guests by pouring costly perfumed oils over their feet. Some of these were simple oils such as rhodium, made from roses; melinum, made from quinces; nepetium, from bitter almonds; narcissinum, from the narcissus.

Perhaps the most fashionable oil after the oleum sissinum was that called crocinum, made from saffron (crocus), which communicated both a fine color and odor to the person; Hellogabalus never bathed without it. Butter is noticed by Pliny as used by the negro and lower classes of Arabs for anointing their bodies.

The natives of India prefer strong perfumes for this purpose, and use oil of sandal and oil of patchouli. Savages also grease their bodies, but probably with the idea of being enabled to escape more easily from the grip of an enemy.

The Romans were not acquainted with the use of regular soap, but they employed an alkali, with which the greasy dirt was dissolved out of their clothes. This alkali, called nitrum, is referred to by Pliny; but the cheapest solvent was urine, which was mostly used. The clothes were put in this mixed with water, and then stamped upon with the feet. This process was performed by old people, while boys lifted the clothes out of the tubs. The white garments, after being washed, were subjected to the vapor of sulphur, being stretched on a frame and the sulphur burned beneath. Poor people in Rome cleansed their bodies with meal of lupins, called lomentum, which, with common meal, is still used in some places for that purpose.

QUEER MONKEY TRAPS.

Where His Love for Sweets Gets the Best of Him.

Where do the monkeys come from? asks the Toronto Week. Doubtless thousands of people have asked themselves this question. Yet it is one easily answered. Nearly all one sees in the United States come from Georgia, a little village a short distance from the Panama railroad. Once a Mexican, transfer camp, it is now mostly inhabited by colored people, who do not mind the fever-laden atmosphere. This region is the paradise of monkeys. They travel in groups around the woods, led by an older monkey. When the people receive information that the group is near the village, they repair to the woods in crowds to capture them.

Their plan is very simple. They cut a hole in a coconut large enough for a monkey's paw. The nut is now hollowed out and a piece of sugar is placed inside. A string is tied to the nut and the trap is placed in the way of the approaching monkeys. The animals are the most inquisitive known, next to man, and when they spy a nut in goes a hand and grasps the sugar, but the hole is too small for the hand to be withdrawn with the prize, and so the monkey holds on and is dragged along by means of the string, and is followed by a crowd of his fellows toward the ambushade. At the supreme moment a large net is spread over the animals and they are made prisoners before they know it. They are sold to the employees of the Panama railroad and they reach the North through commercial dealers.

In South Africa the baboon was, until late years, considered a vegetarian, and his worst offense was stealing mealies from the garden when he got a chance. Now he seems to have joined the carnivora—at least, he is not above tearing open the young lambs. He also robs all the beehives and steals the honey, doing the work by night when the bees are drowsy and dull. The baboon is a blessing in that he attacks the wild aloes and pulls the pith out for food. It was hoped that he would rid the country of the prickly pear, but as the substance of both leaf and trunk is nothing but water there is not much likelihood of it. The baboon has made himself such a nuisance in civilized Africa that shooting and poisoning clubs are fast destroying him. The poison has to be taken with palatable surroundings to fool him, but he is not proof against temptation, and so he dies.

In the cathedral of Genoa is preserved, and has been for 600 years, a vase of immense value. It is cut from a single emerald. Its principal diameter is 1 1/2 inches and its height 5 1/2 inches. Wood is used in making an eatable and nutritious food by Dr. Krug, a German physician, whose method consists in transforming the cellulose into grape-sugar and adding to this about 40 per cent of meal of wheat, oats or rye. I feel it my duty to write you in regard to the benefit your Bradycrotine has been to my wife. Ever since a child she has been subject to the most dreadful headaches, usually several times a month. She has tried doctors from Maine to California, but none could prevent these spells running their course. Bradycrotine has not failed to effect a cure in a single instance, one dose usually being sufficient. Oscar F. Frost, Monmouth, Maine.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only cure that will reach the seat of the disease, and is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It cures in a few days or a few weeks, and offers a sure cure for all cases of Catarrh. Address, F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. The use of Ely's Cream Balm, a sure cure for Catarrh of the Head, is attended with no pain, inconvenience or dread, which can be said of no other remedy.

I feel it my duty to say a few words in regard to Ely's Cream Balm, and I do so without solicitation. I have used it half a year, and have found it to be most admirable. I have suffered from catarrh of the worst kind ever since I was a little boy and I never hoped for cure, but Cream Balm seems to do even that. Many of my acquaintances have used it with excellent results.—Oscar Ostrum, 45 Warren Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Husband's Mistake. —Husbands too often permit wives, and parents their children, to suffer from headache, dizziness, neuralgia, sleeplessness, fits, nervousness, when by the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine such serious results could easily be prevented. Druggists everywhere say it gives universal satisfaction, and has an immense sale. Woodworth & Co., of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Snow & Co., of Syracuse, N. Y.; J. C. Wolf, Hillsdale, Mich.; and hundreds of others say "it is the greatest seller they ever knew." It contains no opiates. Trial bottle and fine book on nervous diseases, free at Geo. C. Hueston's.

The Excelsior renovating bed company have leased the vacant store in the opera house block and will open up for business about Saturday. The company comes well recommended.

Frank Tuckers minstrels drew a good house Monday night and gave general satisfaction. They have an elegant band but his show is not up to the standard that one might expect of Tucker.

Under the leadership of Dr. Swift the Choral union are acquiring considerable proficiency and Northville people are looking forward to the time when they will be favored with a public entertainment.

Some one carried off the affidavit of marriage license 10863 at the county clerk's office last week, presumably the groom. The bride's name is Freda Ruda and county clerk May wants to know who the gentleman is.

We are told that out of some sixty examined at the teacher's examination at Plymouth, a month or two ago, but eight passed, and at the one at Detroit a week later, only sixteen, out the 100 examined, were granted certificates.

It's a very strange device in the shape of an address on an envelope that Postmaster Horton can't decipher. A letter was received this week addressed to "Jim the bear," and Mr. Horton concluded to try James Dubour and it was his alright enough.

Messrs Stark & Harding have purchased Geo. Green's meat market in the opera house block. Mr. Stark was a former employer of the furniture factory and Mr. Harding is his brother-in-law, formerly of Milford. Mr. Banks will continue to assist the new firm.

The free express delivery is working like a charm. Mr. Jackson has the contract and makes deliveries from each train to the business places. The out going express is also delivered to the depot free, upon notice from the business houses. We presume the express company will furnish call cards to those who have not already got them.

Bertie Wilkins will tell you advertising pays. He lost a dollar bill on the street a week ago Sunday and put an ad. in the RECORD last week regarding it. Geo. Kidd found the bill near King Ambler's place and upon seeing the notice in this paper, he kindly returned the money to this office and it has since been handed to the owner. Mr. Kidd is one in a thousand.

In the rush of business last week we forgot to mention Miss Currier's dancing exhibition at the opera house the 8th inst. It was a very enjoyable affair, all the same and judging from the manner the pupils acquitted themselves, Miss Currier had been an accomplished instructor and the scholars very adept at learning. There were some 150 present and many of the numbers were heartily enjoyed.

"Says the Detroit Journal editorially: Dr. Keeley, who is now at the head of the famous Dwight institute, was once a poor boy. He learned the painter's trade in his youth and trained though Illinois looking for a job. In 1857 he landed in Helena, but as he could get no work and had no money he was compelled to walk out of town. He lets the other fellows do the walking, nowadays."

W. V. Ely's horse became frightened at the corner of Dunlap and Center streets Saturday, and slewed the carriage in such a manner as to throw his daughter, Mrs. Lapham out, though fortunately with but slight injury. Mr. Ely was also thrown from the vehicle, but pluckily clung to the reins until the animal was forced to stop. The rig was completely demolished. Mr. Ely escaped with some bruises about the hands.

John Brown, a well known Hollyite, and interested in the Exchange hotel at that place for some years, has been engaged by the Northville Keeley Institute as gaffer, etc. Mr. Brown will be incoming patients at the trains and assign them to boarding places and the like. Mr. Brown graduated at the institute this week and is loud in its praises and says he has no more use for hotel life. He will commence his new duties next week and move his family here soon as a house can be found.

The power and duties of chief of our fire department, we believe, is hardly understood by majority of our citizens and to help to avoid any confusion that might possibly occur during a serious conflagration we print herewith Sec. 2, of Chapter XXV of the revised ordinance, relative to fires and fire companies: "The chief shall have power, control and command over all persons at a fire, except members of the common council. In the absence of the chief, then the assistant chief, and in the absence of both chief and assistant chief, then the first member of the department to reach the truck or apparatus shall assume command until the arrival of his superior."

When the afternoon trains arrived at the depot Tuesday, it seemed as if half the population of Northville was there to meet them. The attraction was the excursionists who were billed to arrive from Detroit and the Saginaw valley, to attend the formal opening of the Yarnall Gold Cure. In all there were about 100 representative citizens from those places. They were shown through the new institute and driven about our beautiful village and they were loud in its praise. Speeches were indulged in at the institute by the Hon. E. S. Woodman of Northville, Hon. Tim Tarnsey, and Rev. Hunter of Saginaw, Rev. Clark of Plymouth, James Brown of Grand Rapids, Dr. Yarnall, and Secretary Crosby. The Yarnall people dined the guests before their departure for the 7 p. m. trains.

MESSRS. DULLEY BROS.—Gentlemen:—For over 4 years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave any permanent relief until I took Dulley's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Remedy and since taking I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it. $1 a bottle.

"Time is money." Of course if you save time you save money. If by avoiding an attack of sickness, which would prevent you from attending to your business or earning your daily bread, you have saved time and money. The way to do this is to have some remedy at hand which will prevent and cure many of the sudden attacks liable to occur during the summer months. Hartzell's Hindoo Oil is such a remedy and is invaluable for pains, internal and external.

MANIAC MOTHER'S DEED.

KILLS HER LITTLE GIRL AND THEN DROWNS HERSELF.

A Cruel, Cold-Blooded Murder Near Marine City—Postmistress at Laster Suicide.

A Mother's Murderous Mania.

The insane act of an insane mother has suddenly broken up what was a happy home in the southern part of Monticounty. Well-known, a prominent farmer, living near Bushnell, on returning from a trip to Fenwick found his wife and his little nine-year-old daughter Elsie missing. His son Bertie was at home, but could tell nothing as to where his mother and sister had gone. As Mrs. Hoy's mind had been a little unbalanced for some time past, Mr. Hoy immediately suspected that something was wrong. It was with a sick heart that he and some neighbors started out to search. Whatever hope he had was lost at the terrible sight that greeted him in a marshy springy spot in the woods. There, submerged in the muddy water and partially hidden by the weeds, were the two bodies. When found the body of the mother was lying partially on that of the little girl. The bodies were taken out and a careful examination made. The girl was evidently dead before being thrown into the water and the supposition is that the mothered the child away from home, choked her and then smashed in her skull with a stone. Having done this she dragged the body to a marsh and threw it into the dirty water, throwing herself on top of it. An examination of her person revealed the fact that she had weighed her dress with stones. Her death had been by no means an easy one, as was shown by the twisted up condition of the head and neck. It seemed as though it was only by the exertion of an abnormal will power that she managed to keep her head under water so as to meet her coveted death. The bodies were carried back to the home, by sorrowing friends. Mr. Hoy is overcome by his sudden and terrible affliction. This was Mrs. Hoy's third attempt at suicide.

A Most Distressing Accident.

Prof. Edward D. Campbell, assistant professor of metallurgy at the Michigan university, was severely injured in the chemical laboratory measuring the amount of hydrogen there was in the gas produced from the combustion of steel by means of an acid. It is part of the experiment to draw the hydrogen with the other gases through a preparation of spout palladium. In the process the palladium became red hot and the oxygen and hydrogen united and the explosion occurred. At the time of the explosion Mr. Campbell had just finished a lecture and was standing at the head of the large lecture hall, and received the full force of the explosion directly in his eyes. Prof. Campbell stood for a moment with his hands clasped to his eyes, then staggered back, crying, "I am blind!" His face was terribly lacerated and the blood streaming through his fingers from the wounds. He was laid away and, after an examination had been made he begged to be told the worst and the reply was that both eyes were lost beyond all hope. Prof. Campbell lay an instant stunned, by the measure of his misfortune, and then threw himself to the wall and begged the doctor to kill him. At the university hospital the right eye was at once entirely removed. The students were more deeply affected by the professor's misfortune than they would have been by his death. That one so young and with so much to expect from the future should go through the world blind seemed almost too terrible to believe. Prof. Campbell is a son of the late Judge J. V. Campbell, of Detroit. He has a wife and two young children.

Murder at Marine City.

William Colby has confessed to having killed a fellow worker on the farm of William Stephenson, four miles from Marine City. They were both in love with the farmer's daughter, and frequently quarreled. Colby was found under the girl's bed by Cook and jerked out by the scruff of the neck. They then went to the barn; Stephenson being absent, and renewed the quarrel, when Colby grabbed a neck reeve and, as he himself says, "knocked Cook out the first round." Colby then went up his knees and begged Colby not to kill him. His assailant replied with a blow that crushed the victim's skull. Colby then set about to save himself. He dragged the body headfirst under the heels of a horse, and going to the house reported that Cook had been kicked by one of the horses and terribly injured. Stephenson had by this time returned and went to the barn. Cook was dead, and a bloody neck reeve was not far away. The murderer soon saw the weakness of his story and admitted the killing, but asserted that he acted in self defense. He was soon after arrested. He admitted he crawled under the girl's bed with the intention of criminally assaulting her during the night. Justice in the case was speedy. Within three days after the murder the murderer was arrested and sentenced to 20 years.

State Crop Report.

The Michigan crop report for April is compiled from returns made by 327 correspondents, 373 of which come from the southern four parts of the state. Up to April 1 the wheat plant had sustained no material injury. Although the top is more or less brown the root is believed to be little damaged, but the condition is not up to last year, when it was 97 per cent in the southern and 92 in central counties. It is now 90 and 89 per cent respectively. With warm rains during the remainder of April and May the wheat crop will be good. Clover meadows and pastures have suffered from freezing and thawing, and the condition is 10 per cent below a year ago, but 10 per cent better than in 1930. Eighty-three per cent of the mules and elephants reported 1,055,997 bushels of wheat marketed in March, and the number of bushels marketed in the eight months from August to March was 12,302,815. The outlook for fruit is very promising.

The local society is a particularly flourishing one and although its meetings are held in the strictest secrecy, new members are added at nearly every session. The agents of the society are servant girls or butlers. They secure employment in wealthy families and pay close attention to every detail of the household. The manner of living of the families is carefully noted, as are also the kind of foods used on the table and the estimated cost of the same, the amount and kind of wine drunk, the furnishings of the residence, the quality of the clothes worn by the inmates, and in fact everything that goes to make up a first-class establishment. The agent makes a weekly report of all this to the society. The ultimate object of all this is not apparent, but the wealthy people are already having visions of dynamite bombs and other terrible missiles of assassins.

What Does It All Mean—War?

Advices from St. Petersburg state that the council of the empire has adopted a series of drastic measures, which indicate that preparations are being made for war. A plan has been approved by which all private railways and steamers will be turned over to the government in the event of a mobilization of the forces being ordered. The severest penalties are provided for anyone who shall communicate abroad any of the plans of the government or any document containing information which because of considerations of external security should be kept secret. The authorities will also punish without trial such persons as shall be discovered as secretly teaching in the Polish language.

Murdered His Employer's Wife.

Harriot, the cold-blooded murderer of Mrs. Leonard, was hanged at Freehold, N. J. His neck was broken. Harriot was employed as farm hand by Charles T. Leonard, a wealthy farmer. In November, 1890, Mrs. Leonard was found cold and stiff in the farm house. Her skull had been battered in on both sides and a piece of rope was wound tightly around her throat. The murderer tried to escape to New York, but was caught on a steamer. He admitted having strangled the victim, after striking her over the head in a frightful manner.

A Bloody Battle in Venezuela.

Bloody battle between the revolutionists and the government forces has been fought at Trujillo, Venezuela. Over 200 men were killed and many others were injured. The rebels were beaten and all is quiet now, but there may be an attack at any time. The trouble here may involve Great Britain and the United States. The former country claims certain land which does not belong to her. The matter was left to President Harrison for arbitration, but the subject has not yet been settled satisfactorily.

Built His Own Funeral Pyre.

Fred, Buse, a well-to-do German farmer, living near Monmouth, Ill., committed suicide. He went to a thicket of timber reeve, and with a double-barreled shotgun. A neighbor saw the light from the fire, which led to the discovery of the remains before they were badly burned. Buse had a family and was in easy circumstances and no cause for his act was brought out in the inquest. He came from Chicago to this county about 10 years ago.

Cahota Is Banished.

Private Edward De Cahota, the only Chinaman in the army of the United States, has been banished in disgrace from Fort Sheridan, near Chicago, to the distant west. Cahota, who is a private in company H, Fifteenth Infantry, fought through the war and has been in the service over 27 years. The cause of his removal is his new station, Fort Niobrara, is for selling liquor and keeping a gambling house, which was patronized by his white comrades-in-arms.

Mrs. A. S. Holmes, the first white woman born in Chicago and who it was expected would be an attraction at the World's Fair, died suddenly at Hampton, Ill.

Casper Casel and William Spain, German laborers in Chicago, each agreed to commit suicide. Both men shot themselves, one in a saloon and the other in his room. Casel is dead and Spain may not recover.

The city of Lockport, N. Y., at its election used the Myers voting machine. The novelty brought out many voters and the machine proved a big success. At the close of the balloting the machine was unlocked and the number of ballots each candidate received was announced at once.

Iowa blue laws are being rigidly enforced in Sioux City by the Sunday Enforcement League. This organization is made up of former saloon men, now forced out of business because of prohibition. They say they will give the people all the laws they want. It was almost impossible to buy a cigar on Sunday.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

SENATE.—Mr. Dolph from the committee on foreign relations, on the 13th, reported House bill for absolute prohibition of the coming of Chinese into the United States with a substitute. He stated that the substitute was the bill passed by the Senate to continue in force for ten years all laws now in force prohibiting and regulating the coming of Chinese persons and persons of Chinese descent. The bill and substitute were placed on the calendar.

The resolution asking the secretary of the treasury for information on the purchase and coinage of silver came up. Mr. Morgan spoke, favoring free coinage and the resolution went over without action.

The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of bills on the calendar, and the following were passed: To reorganize the artillery and infantry of the army and to increase its efficiency. To extend the jurisdiction of the supreme court so as to include judgments and decrees of the highest courts of the Cherokee Creek, Seminole, Choctaw and Chickasaw tribes of Indians. Authorizing the secretary of war to cause an exploration and survey to be made of the interior of the Territory of Alaska. House bill to establish lineal promotion throughout the several lines of artillery, cavalry and infantry of the army. For the examination and promotion of enlisted men of the army to the grade of second lieutenant. To increase the pay of certain non-commissioned officers of the army. To amend the railroad land forfeiture act so as to permit actual settlers to purchase the lands within three years after forfeiture. For the relief of the purchasers of timber lands and stone lands under the act of June 3, 1878. To provide for fixing a uniform standard of classification and grading of wheat, corn, oats, barley and rye. For the preservation in custody of the records of the volunteer armies (creating a record and pension office in the war department). A bill was passed for the better control and safety of national banks. After an executive session the Senate adjourned. HOUSE.—In the committee of the whole the naval appropriation bill proved a stickler and several delays in legislation were caused by it. The item which stopped the way was for the increase of the navy. The committee arose without action, however, and the House adjourned.

SENATE.—Among bills passed on the 14th were the following: Appropriating $75,000 for a foundation and a pedestal for a bronze statue of Christopher Columbus at the foot of the canal of the canal grounds on Pennsylvania avenue, where the peace monument now stands; to authorize the Grand Rapids Water & Electric Power company of Grand Rapids, Mich., to construct a dam across the Mississippi River, extending the privileges of the free delivery of mails to cities and towns with a population of not less than 5,000 and where the postoffice gross receipts for the previous year amounted to $5,000. The act to establish circuit court of appeals and regulate in certain cases the jurisdiction of the circuit courts of the United States. The subject under discussion when the Senate went into executive session and soon after adjourned. HOUSE.—The incident of the day was the debate on a resolution of Mr. Burrows to expunge from the Record extracts from the book by Henry George on "Protection or Free Trade" which had been delivered before the House by Democratic members as their own effusions. It was brought out that the idea of those members was to have the speaker printed in the Record and distributed throughout the country as campaign literature at the expense of the government. Mr. Burrows' resolution was laid on the table by a strict party vote. The remainder of the session was taken up by the naval appropriation bill.

SENATE.—No session on the 15th. HOUSE.—Although the proceedings of the House were without interest and would not occupy more than two or three pages of the Record, the Record for the day is a voluminous one. Mr. Miliken, of Maine, published the brochure on "Plymouth Rock to McKinley" and Mr. Dolph, of Iowa, called for publication a series of articles from the New York Tribune. Mr. Smith, of Illinois, printed a number of editorials and letters in the American Economist, and several other members on the Republican side, by printing extraneous matter, emphasized and brought into public prominence the action of the House the previous day which declared in substance that under leave to print members may make of the Congressional Record a medium of advertisement. The bill for safety of National banks, with the Senate amendments thereto, was sent to the committee on banking and currency. A recess was taken until 8 o'clock when private pension bills were considered.

SENATE.—A communication was received on the 15th from James R. Young, the former chief executive clerk of the Senate who was removed on the charge of betraying the secrets of executive sessions; the communication was tabled. Mr. Vest introduced a bill to prohibit contracts by the postmaster-general with any steamship company making unjust discriminations against any part of the United States as to imports by vessels carrying foreign mails; referred to the committee on commerce. The resolution requesting the Secretary of State to obtain information concerning the use of electricity as a power in propulsion of farm machinery and implements, and on the propagation and growth of plants in foreign countries was taken up, explained briefly by Mr. Pepper, and agreed to. The calendar was then taken up and the Senate went into executive session. The bill to facilitate the disposition of the causes in the court of claims was then taken up but no important action taken. Adjourned. HOUSE.—A bill was introduced to quiet the titles of settlers on swamp or overflowed lands in any state and to place to the credit of the state what those settlers had paid to the United States government. The motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill was defeated. In committee of the whole on the naval appropriation bill the amendment for the construction of two battleships and torpedo boats was defeated as was the amendment for an additional armored cruiser. The bill was passed after the committee arose and the House then adjourned.

SENATE.—No session on the 16th. HOUSE.—The House went into committee of the whole on the naval appropriation bill. The discussion was upon Mr. Holman's amendment to strike out the clause for the construction of an armored cruiser, two battleships and torpedo boats. No action was taken. The committee arose and the House adjourned.

Supt. William Murray of the New York police department, has made application to be relieved from the superintendency. His retirement is on account of ill health. Inspector Byrnes has been made superintendent of police.

GENERAL NEW ITEMS.

A GANG OF VILLAINOUS HOUSE-BURNERS IN NEW YORK.

Burned Houses for Percentage.

The existence of a systematically organized band of firebugs and anarchists in Brooklyn and New York have been discovered. Two men are now in jail. One of them has made a full confession. The arson, it appears, was the work of men who not only were familiar with strong combustibles, but were intelligent enough to lay their plans with a degree of circumspection which long defied investigation. They would go to the dwellers in tenement houses who carried proportionately large insurance on their furniture and propose to burn the house or rooms of such persons and take a percentage of the insurance money in payment for their work. The gang usually sought to intimidate their new accomplices by threatening them with swift and mysterious death. They told the accomplice who has made the confession that they would "scratch" him with poisoned finger-nails if he ever divulged the crimes which they had committed. The entire gang is likely to go to prison.

It Didn't Work Well.

A farmer named Burk, who lives near Rathfriland, Manitoba, advertised for a wife about a year ago. Miss Leder of London, Ont., came to the marriage and wedding. On the same day. They soon found that they did not care for each other, and then Burk's partner, named Dale, became impatient with the woman. It was then agreed that Dale should take her as his wife and go away leaving Burk in quiet possession of the farm. The marriage ring was returned to Burk and the certificate and license torn up, and Dale and Mrs. Burk left for Winnipeg and were married. They went to Moosejaw and lived happily together until last week when Mrs. Burk-Dale was arrested for bigamy. In addressing the court during the trial the deputy attorney-general said the whole trouble evidently arose from ignorance of the laws and that the case was a painful one, but the crown was compelled to prosecute. Mrs. Burk was committed for trial.

Brazil in a Turmoil.

A cable from Rio Janeiro says: This city is in a state of siege. A number of prominent military and naval officers have been placed under arrest for having participated in a great public manifestation in favor of ex-President Fonseca. The prisoners will be tried by a council of war. Revolution has started in the state of Matto Grosso. The legislature has proclaimed it independent of the republic. The river is obstructed by hulks. Col. Barbosa is in charge of the rebels. The new governor, Embank, who was prevented from landing from the steamer which took him to Matto Grosso from Rio Janeiro, was fired upon by the fort. He went to the Pataguary side of the river.

Bulgaria Seeks Independence.

The gravest apprehensions have been caused in Vienna by the announcement that Bulgaria has sent a note to the powers complaining that the Sultan has ceased to protect Bulgaria's interests and that the Turkish government protects Russia's pretenses, who have entered upon a campaign of assassination against Bulgaria's public men from Prince Ferdinand down. The note demands that Turkey be compelled to expel the assassins whom Russia supports on her soil. The note is supposed to be the precursor of a proclamation of Bulgaria's independence from Turkey, and such a proclamation would inevitably result in a European war.

Police Superintendent Poisoned.

It has just leaked out that Gatsburg, superintendent of police at Pittsburg who died three months ago, was poisoned. At the time of his death foul play was suspected. Friends here had the body examined, and it has been found that enough poison had been taken to kill several men. He was evidently murdered, but there is no evidence to show who gave the man the arsenic, and it looks as though the guilty parties would go free.

Mixed Up Marriages.

Addie E. Baker's second husband, and his stepson, of Staunton, Va., together with Mrs. Baker's two daughters, aged 15 and 20, went to Washington recently on a visit. They took $2,500 of Mrs. Baker's money. Mrs. Baker has received a letter from her husband saying she need not expect them back as he was going to marry her daughter Hattie and his son would marry Amanda. She has gone in pursuit.

650 Men Thrown Out of Work.

The upper works, comprising about half the capacity of the Anaconda smelting company at Butte, Mont., has closed down indefinitely. It is stated that an agreement has been entered into with other large copper producers to decrease the product and thus strengthen the market. Five hundred men were thrown out of employment at Anaconda and about 150 miners were laid off at Butte.

No Monument for Lowell.

The London Athenaeum says that owing to the scantiness of the unoccupied space in Westminster, has reluctantly declined to add room in the abbey for the proposed monument to the late James Russell Lowell. The dean has suggested that instead of a monument a window in the chapter house, the scene of the delivery of some of Lowell's addresses, might be filled with a stained glass memorial.

Paris Anarchists Cause a Scare.

The excitement at Luxembourg over the anarchist outrages has been increased by the discovery of two large bombs on a goods train from Brussels. Luxembourg has until recently been remarkably free from anarchist agitation, but a short time ago several foreigners appeared who are suspected of being among those who were driven out of Paris.

Powder Mill Explosion.

The Press and Corning mills of the Moosic Powder company, at Scranton, Pa., were blown up. John Gibbons, George Carew, Edward Vanderberg and James Colbaugh were killed, and probably two others. The wrecked buildings caught fire and were destroyed. The citizens had great difficulty in saving adjoining buildings.

The London Times Cairo correspondent says Egypt has handed over to Turkey all the Egyptian military posts on the Arabian shore of the Red sea.

THE LEGISLATURE EXCITED.

A Tammany Brave in New York's Assembly Inevitably Inevitably Inevitably.

Phil Whissig, of the Eighty New York assembly district, made a most indecent speech on woman suffrage in the assembly at Albany, N. Y. Women present as spectators hid their faces to hide their burning blushes. Whissig thought he was smart. Every sentence contained a double meaning. Mrs. Margaret J. Hoey, of New York City, who represents the woman labor organization of this bill, said that she would bring the matter to the attention of every labor organization in the state. "And this is a man," she said, with a sneer, "one of the lords of creation, who are supposed to be alone competent to rule the government. I will see that he does not come back to the legislature again to insult modest women with foul indecency." The most extraordinary part of the proceeding was that Whissig's own wife sat in a chair within 40 feet of the spot where he stood. The Tammany leaders were sickened by the spectacle which one of their representatives made on the floor of the assembly. The speech was occasioned by the passage of the woman suffrage bill, by a vote of 70 to 34, a bill giving women the right of suffrage in all state elections.

A Chronical Suicide.

William Dooling walked down to the foot of Sloane street, Toronto, Ont., coolly threw off his coat and hat and plunged into the icy water. A yacht near by came about and sailed up to the spot. It was found that the would-be suicide had struck a shallow place, and much to his apparent disappointment his design had not been carried out. He was, however, calmly standing in the water, carefully removing his cuffs preparatory to another plunge. When asked what he was doing there the fishman said he was engaged in taking his life, and did not want to be interfered with. Afterwards, partly by force and partly by persuasion, he was induced to step ashore. On his way to the police station Dooling tried to cut his throat with a pen-knife and in his cell he endeavored to hang himself with a pair of suspenders. A few years ago he was a rising manufacturer but drink made him penurious.

Anxious for War.

Barron De Baur, the imperial minister of war of Hungary, has submitted to the emperor a proposition to add 10 men to each company of infantry regiments, and to create two new cavalry regiments. The feeling in Austria is that war with Russia cannot long be avoided. In Hungary there is an ardent desire for war in order to obtain revenge for Russia's share in subduing the Hungarian struggle for independence.

Striking School Marms.

One of the most unique strikes that has ever been inaugurated is in progress at Fort Dodge, Ia. On account of the small salaries received, the school teachers have nearly all organized to strike the trustees and principals. Many attracted by higher salaries have gone elsewhere. Nearly all those who remain refuse to teach until their salaries are raised.

A WESTERN SUNSET.
We stood upon the clovered hill
And watched the splendid sun go down
Behind the old forest in the west
And scattered cabins, small and brown.
Some trees with branches interlaced
Were clustered near a shadowed pond,
Each slender twig was clearly traced Against the gorgeous glow beyond.
A purple steamer in the west
Was stretched above a bank of snow,
While sunset clouds in the west
In spreading orange fields below.
Two fleecy shapes did twist and twine
Until they formed a giant cup,
Which mingled into a sea of wine
And bubbling over was lifted up.
She pointed to a scarlet bar—
A sweet companion, young and fair—
And wondered if it was a star
Were frightened as it trembled there.
We lingered long; a cooling breeze
Was laden with the breath of musk;
We heard low drooping through the dusk
And clear notes dropping through the dusk.

A BRAVE SURRENDER.
When Howard Corson married at 23 his friends said that he was taking an unwise step for a young man, whose bank account was yet unborn and whose profession (journalism) was so capricious. But when they met his wife, they understood and pardoned his unwisdom.
When his first child appeared on the scene he did a more audacious thing.
"That ends this lodging-house existence," he said. "I'll quit Bohemia, and get a home for me and mine."
And he bought a neat little place not far up town, and furnished it "on time," binding himself to make weekly payments on the furniture and semi-annual ones on the house.
"He's acquired a stock of worri-ment to last him the rest of his days," remarked Borge, a reporter who had struggled for three months to pay for a floor full of furniture on the installment plan, and had finally beheld most of his goods hauled back to the store from which they had come.
"I haven't got in the way of saving yet," Corson told me one day, over an after-lunch mug of beer. "But that'll come when the house is paid for. Then I'm going to let up a bit on back work and do something creditable to myself. I don't bother about fame yet. Once I'm on Easy Street though, I'll begin to try my best abilities have a show and try to build up a reputation."
And he confided to me an idea which he intended to embody in a novel entitled "A Brave Surrender," a concept that surely would win celebrity for any man who would treat it artistically.
"Why don't you begin it now?"
I asked.
"Oh, I haven't time yet to do anything that isn't sure to bear pecuniary fruit at once. I can't wait for a late harvest. The thing would probably give me standing with literary people and magazine editors and would lead to laurels, perhaps. But for itself there isn't the money in it that there is in the sort of rot I'm doing now." He spoke the truth. There is explained the existence of a host of brilliant backs.
The sudden killing of Haskell, the artist, in a railroad accident, was like a flash of lightning to Corson. When he heard of it his face paled and a horrible awakening showed in his blue eyes.
"A man never knows what may happen to him," he said in a low voice. "I could easily read that he was thinking: 'If I had been on that train, I'd still be hanging over the home;
Blanche and the babies!' He added aloud: 'I'll write to that life insurance man to call to-morrow.'" Three days later—it was on a Sunday—I dined at his house. His wife was a charming hostess—contentment and gaiety personified. The children reflected her brown eyes and her amiability. Their home was manifestly that of an art lover, made so with such economy as woman's ingenuity renders easy. We had a merry afternoon.
When I left at evening Corson walked with me to the corner. We stopped beneath an electric light.
"How happy you ought to be, my boy!" I said.
"Yes," he replied, quietly.
"But you work too much. Surely you can afford to reduce the pressure a few pounds."
"No, I found out yesterday that I must increase it."
His soft eyes met mine. There was a hidden sadness there, and his face was without its wonted animation.
The electric light gave it an almost ghastly look.
"What do you mean?" I asked.
"Simply this. They wouldn't insure my life. They found I have consumption and also liability to valvular lesions of the heart. Whether I exert myself or not, the doctor won't give me more than four years to live.
By loafing I might gain a few months,
but I can't clear the home of debt.
I can pay it off in nine months if I hustle. I shan't know a moment's rest until I do. If there's nothing else, you and the youngsters can let the two upper stories and live on the rent."
"But your great idea—your 'Brave Surrender,' your bait for fame?"
"I'll have to drop that. It's a living for Blanche and the children that I must look for now. I mean to stay in the ring till every cent is paid. If I drop dead the moment after—Don't mention it to anyone, old man. His mustn't know it. I'll have to say good night now. I want to do a comic song for Kershaw, the comedian, before I sleep. I hunted down a funny idea in bed last night. It'll be worth $5 a stanza if it's good."
I looked at his face as he walked back, hurrying homeward to begin that race with death which more than one man has run and many a man has lost.

Any attempt to influence or to persuade him from his course would have been futile. He had stiffened his lips and dilated his nostrils, and he meant business. When I met Dr. Harbster in the lobby of the Broadway theater between the acts on the next night I asked him if Corson's case was as grave as Corson thought it.
"Consumption will probably have claimed him long before heart disease would have time to announce itself."
"Won't he shorten his life still more by keeping that manuscript factory going in his brain?"
"Yes—but perhaps no. You see he knows he's doomed, and a reasonable amount of work won't hurt him as much as anxiety would. If he gave up work he'd fret about the payment of his debts. That would bring insomnia, while toil begets fatigue, which produces sleep."
"He's paid a good sum on his house already. The man who holds the notes might let it go at that."
"Do you know what some people who sell real estate are made of?"
"Yes, like the houses they deal in—of stone. Perhaps Corson's friends would raise the amount required to square his accounts."
"How much could you give?"
"I? Why, I can hardly keep my own head above water."
"I thought so. And those who can help him don't have the inclination.
That's the sort of a world it is. Besides, no human power could add more than a few months to the time that the disease will leave him. Hard work will hasten the end, but worry would hasten it more. Let the boy die content, at least."
Corson's face grew slightly cadaverous and assumed a hectic hue as time went on. Sometimes his eye-lids were red edged, and the lines beneath his eyes sank deeper. Perpendicular folds ascended the middle of his forehead. The smile that had once been so radiant and so quickly summoned was now slow to come, and when it appeared it was mischievous.
Formerly so observant of all external things, he now hurried through his luncheon abstractedly, sometimes saying nothing.
As to what pains he endured, at home alone he told no one. The quality of Corson's productions for magazines and newspaper syndicates had advanced with their quantity.
"How do you keep up the standard so beautifully, old fellow?" I asked him one day in a short chat on a street corner.
"By concentration and intensity of effort," he replied. "You see, I can't afford to grind out unvaluable matter. I simply have to make everything so striking that it catches an editor's attention at the start, and so fairly good that he feels bound not to send it back. I can't waste time writing matter to be rejected. If I do a good thing quickly it's because I've learned how by sheer will-power to crowd an hourful of thought into twenty minutes."
"But the reaction after this steam-engine sort of labor will be frightful."
"It can't be worse than fatal," he answered, with a doleful smile, "and I've got to die anyhow. Work won't kill as soon as any one of a great many other things will."
I have no doubt that Corson was sustained by the conviction that his will-power would preserve his faculties until his purpose should be accomplished. So his labor continued.
It was the sublimation of back work.
His wife had become alarmed for him in the early stages of his race.
With her woman's power of divination she may have foreseen this end. But at first she concealed her apprehensions as well as she could and gently but constantly endeavored to make him abate his pace. The time arrived, however, when she plead with him to take a rest.
"Not just yet," he said, kissing her on the forehead, that she might not see the look that came suddenly into his face. "But I promise you solemnly that I'll stop exactly three months from now. It'll be warm weather then and we'll go to the sea somewhere. Look up the Summer Resort Guide for some quiet place on the New England coast—some place where there are cliffs, you know."
And so he passed the last quarter-pole and rushed down the homestretch. Toward the end his work began to deteriorate in quality. Some of his offerings were declined by editors, but the checks for articles that had long been submitted were now pouring in.
On the loveliest morning of last June he redeemed his final promissory note. He walked home staggering with elation.
"The race is won!" he gasped to me at his door, and he caught his wife in his arms almost shouting. "The home is ours now, every cubic inch of it!"
They were to start for the Maine coast on that afternoon. When his wife went to finish preparing the children for the departure he said to me:
"When the thing happens you tell her what to do, old man. The two upper floors should bring $40 a week if all the rooms were taken. She knows how to economize. I've stowed away a superfluous few hundred for a starter. I'm so happy!"
He sat down on a chair and underwent a transformation. The race was over, the tension was released. His arms hung limp, his head fell forward he breathed aloud the moles of his face twitched. When his wife came to tell him that the trunks were ready he was dead.

Harbster said it was a first attack of angina pectoris, the result of a mental strain. Corson had eluded consumption, at least. Death had resorted to another steel.
A few of the boys at the office and elsewhere found time to go to his funeral and to cover his body with flowers. The Cannikin club passed resolutions, and some one said at the Rathskeller that night:
"He was clever enough to have left a name, if he hadn't always chased the immediate dollar. It's a bad thing to be too avaricious." They knew nothing of that which perished with him—the idea that was to have made him famous—the work unwrought—the dream sacrificed to love. He had chronicled no "brave surrender," but to have made one was perhaps the greater work.—National

SERVANTGALISM.
How Mary Is at the Play and Door—Another Servant Girl.
After all the servant girl, whatever may be her shortcomings, increases the gaiety of nations.
Mary, green as shamrock, was sent by her mistress to go to the Grand opera house to see "Maurice." It was an evening of mingled pain and pleasure. In the first place she went at 6 o'clock and was tired before the doors opened. Then there was a snow-storm in one act which troubled her greatly, as the evening was fine when she left home so she put on her Sunday clothes and brought no umbrella. But the play was lovely;
there was as fine a young man as ever you saw, who saved a beautiful lady from a bad villain and Mary knew that that would be a match yet.
"But Mary, the young man is married." He has a wife at home—a nice lady.
"That young man! A wife a home!
The Lord be bane to us and harm!"
Mary answered a ring at the door.
"Have you any furnished rooms?"
"Sure an' we have plenty a' them."
"I'd like to see them."
It was an English basement house and the lady was taken up stairs, where the mistress found her walking through the house.
"I was looking for furnished rooms."
"This is a private house."
"But your servant said—"
"She asked, 'mam, if we had furnished rooms. An' they is furnished, every wan of them. She could see that for herself.'"
A young couple went down to Castle Garden to engage a girl of all works. A tidy, trim little Swede attracted them.
"Can you cook?" they asked.
"No," she answered demurely.
"Can you wash and iron?"
"No."
"Can you sweep and make beds?"
"No."
"Well, what can you do?"
"I can milk reindeer."
She was not engaged.

Why Is It That Bees never store up honey where it is light?
The moth has a fur jacket and the butterfly none?
Leaves will attract dew when sticks boards and stones will not?
A horse always gets up foreparts first and a cow directly the opposite?
Corn on the ear is never found with an uneven number of rows?
Fish, flies and caterpillars may be frozen solid and still retain life?
A squirrel comes down a tree head first and a cat tail first?
Electricity is never visible except when it comes in the form of zig-zag lightning?
A horsely will live for hours after its head has been pinched off?
The dragon-fly can devour its own body and the head still live?
Some flies thrust their eggs into the bodies of caterpillars, but always in such parts of the body that when the larva are feeding on the flesh of the foster parent they will not eat into any vital part? Can this be explained?
Does the fly reason?

Uncle Billy's scrapes.
Uncle Billy recently developed a great deal of interest in religious matters, and it was observed with a good deal of surprise by several boat owners that he was no longer ready and willing to take a hand at the work they offered him. One of the men who had depended a good deal on his services
said:
"I'm sorry that you won't work any more."
"Deed sah, I is puffickly willin' to wunk; but I kain't wunk in yoh boat."
"Why not?"
"Kese she's a two-master."
"Why, that's no reason at all."
"Masah, if you wants to 'peril yer own soul,' tain' none ob my business; but the Good Book says plain as day dat no man kain't sarbe two-masters."
—Washington Star.

She Had Written Everything.
She stepped up to the editor's desk demurely and said:
"Do you want any writing done?"
Two weary editor looked at her and
said:
"You write poetry, I suppose?"
"Yes, I have written a little poetry.
I have also written several short stories, a novel and a play."
"I beg your pardon," said the editor, catching his breath, "but is there anything you haven't written?"
"I don't believe there is," she said confidently, yet shyly. "You see I'm a stenographer and type-writer, and I do a great deal of work for literary gentlemen."—Washington Star.

A Antique Tom-Tom.
The finest guitar in Portland belonged to a lady who thirty years ago took lessons of Anguerra, of Boston, who was one of the best guitarists in the world. Under his supervision this guitar was made for her after an old Spanish model. There are very few like it in this country. The box part is curved. It was made of rosewood that had been seasoned 100 years. It is consequently now 180 years since the box was cut.—Bangor Commercial.

A LITTLE IRISH GIRL.
By "The Duchess."
CHAPTER I.
What is love? 'Tis not hereafter;
Present mirth hath present laughter What's to come is still unsure."
"Bridget! Bridget!" cries Bridget's young mistress, in a clear, sweet tone.
There is something of anxiety in it—enough to make the old woman to whom the name belongs bobble more swiftly from the kitchen to the sitting-room than is her usual custom.
"An' what is it, aggra?" says she,
stepping over the threshold, and looking up the big, bare room to where, in the third window, a tall, slight, childish figure is standing.
"Something dreadful, I'm certain.
Come here! Come here!" beckoning hurriedly to the old woman, without taking her eyes off the window.
"Hurry, can't you? Look out over there—pointing." "What is that?"
"A man, eh?—a man hurt, wounded?"
"Faix, 'tis like that!" says the old woman, laying her hand to her brow, and staring into the growing darkness of the November evening.
"What can be the matter with him, Bridget?"
"I don't know, me dear. But he do look bad, whatever it is!"
"He should have come this way," says Miss McDermot, anxiously.
"You know these bogs down there;
and those—Oh Bridget, did you see!
He was nearly in them!"
"May the devil carry him!" says Bridget, wrathfully, "whoever he is, for trouble he like this! An' may the heavens send him home, to keep him for the future from searchin' for cowd mud baths at this season of the year."
"You never care a pin about anything, Bridget," says her young mistress, glancing angrily at her over her shoulder, "except—"
"You, me dear," retorts the old woman promptly, whereupon, both mistress and maid laugh in a subdued sort of way, as if a little afraid of being heard.
"Pon me conscience! he'll be there all night, if the morning doesn't see him in the other world," says the old woman presently, who again has returned to her watching of the distant figure that is trying in an uncertain fashion to cross the morass. She is a rather handsome old woman, with masses of snow-white hair that are but partly hidden beneath her still more snowy cap. Her dress is that of the ordinary Irish peasant, with a big white apron flowing over the skirt of the gown.
"Whoever he is," says Miss McDermot, peering over the old servant's shoulder through the parlor window,
"he certainly knows nothing of the neighborhood. Ours about the most dangerous bog about here. Don't you think, Bridget, we ought to send some one to help him?"
"Unless ye mane me," says Mrs.
Driscoll, whose Christian name is Bridget, "I don't know who ye can send, as ye know well enough yerself, miss (an' faix 'tis yon's head cause to know it), the master never lets Patsy out ov his sight, from mornin' till night. 'T would be ridic'ulous to count on him. An' besides—Glory be, miss! did ye see that? For a winged bird, he's a wonderful lopper."
Indeed, the man in the bog below seems (in spite of the fact that he is battling with an injured arm) extraordinarily full of life. The ill luck that has led him into this dangerous mass of water and spongy soil is not strong enough to destroy him; even as the two women, watching him breathlessly in the window of the gaunt old house, have almost given way to despair. He makes a last effort, and, landing on a firm bit of turf, jumps from that again to the firm land beyond.
That last effort seems, however, to have exhausted him. He staggers rather than walks toward the house.
As he nears it, the girl, watching him, can see how ghastly is his face; and,
flinging open the old-fashioned casement with an abrupt gesture, she springs down to the soft grass beneath, regardless of the old servant's reproachful glances.
A few minutes brings her to the stranger's side.
"You are hurt, sir. You are faint.
Lean on me. Oh! we watched you crossing that terrible bog, and at one time we feared— But you are safe now. You will come in? Your arm, I fear, is—"
"Broken," says the young man, with a nervous smile.
"Oh! I hope not. Sprained, perhaps—but not broken. There!—are you easier now? Lean heavier on me; I don't mind a bit; and—Oh, don't faint! Oh, Patsy! Patsy!" to the groom, gardener, boot-cleaner, man-of-all-works, who comes hurrying up to her. "Catch him! He's awful heavy!" Patsy catches him.
"Is he dead entirely, d'ye think, miss?"
"No; only faint. There! Be careful! His arm, he says, is broken.
There, now! Oh, is that you, Bridget?" to the old woman, who has hobbled out to her in a very angry frame of mind; "where can we put him, do you think? In the north room?"
"The hall will do him, I'm thinkin', till the doctor tell us where to send him," says the old woman icily. With open unwillingness she lends a hand to convey the fainting man into the house.
Two or three chairs arranged in the hall make an improvised stretcher; but the unconscious man lying on them looks so miserably uncomfortable that the girl's heart dies within her.
"He can't stay there! Take him to the north room," she says sharply.
"Miss Duclinea, don't do that!" says Bridget, compressing her lips, and regarding her young mistress with an anxious gaze. "Tis unluckily enough that a half dead creature should cross the threshold; but to take him in—to keep him—till death claims him, that will be bad, miss! I'm tellin' ye 'twill be for your undoin', tell me."
"Nonsense!" says the girl scornfully.
"What superstition! Besides, he is not going to die because his arm is broken. Patsy, give a hand here—to the north room, I tell you!"
"Miss Duclinea darlin', be sensible
now. I tell ye a hurt man brings no luck. An' yer father, darlin'—think ov him! What'll he say?"

"The McDermot, whatever his faults, would not grudge hospitality to a fainting man."
"Well, well, maybe. But look here-now, my dearie! There's Sir Ralph to be thought of! If he should hear of this—"
"Let him hear of it!" says the girl angrily. "Am I to study his wishes, even before I—?" she pauses as if to finish the sentence is distasteful to her, and a frown contracts her exquisite, low, broad, Greek brow. "I'm tired of hearing of Sir Ralph!" says she a second later, in a clear, ringing, wrathful tone.
A tone loud enough to reach the ears of the foremost of two men who now enter the hall by the lower door.
CHAPTER II.
"O sweet fancy! Let her loose!
Everything is spoilt by me."
"There is a garden in her face."
He is a tall man, between thirty and thirty-two years, but looking considerably older. Not a handsome man —not even a commonly good-looking
one. A more decidedly plain man in a well-bred way than Ralph Anketell, it would be difficult to find. That his large mouth is kindly and his small eyes earnest does little to redeem his face. But one thing at least he has:
a magnificent figure. A better set up man than he, or one more strong, or more vigorous, is hardly to be found in the Irish county to which he belongs.
Miss McDermot's last words have been quite clear to him, and being engaged to her he may be pardoned for not finding them exactly palatable.
Beyond a swift glance at the girl, however, he takes no notice of them; and the glance goes astray, as she is looking at the prostrate figure on the chairs rather than at him, a fact that saves him from a face that would seem home to Anketell with a little chill.
"He had entered the big hall (beautiful even in its decay and disorder) by the lower door, that leads to the garden, followed by Duclinea's father.
The latter—the McDermot—is a spare, tall, gaunt man, with dull eyes covered by overhanging brows, and a most dogged mouth. Perhaps from him the girl has taken her obstinacy and hatred of control, if from her dead mother she has inherited the great love of truth and honor and the well of hidden affection that lives almost unperceived within her breast.
"What is this? what is this?" demands her father, hurrying forward to where, in the dim growing of the autumn twilight, the silent figure lies.
Duclinea, in a low tone, and with a slender hand uplifted, as if to insure quiet for the wounded man, tells her tale.
The whole scene makes a picture, hardly to be forgotten if once seen—as once seen it was!
The soft, gray, dying light, that scarcely lights up the grand old hall;
the central figure prone, inanimate;
the old woman there, with her white hair and cap and scornful air, the bending figure of the man-servant;
and here, where the lights from the eastern window fall full upon her,
the proud slight figure of the girl, drawn to its feet by the rays from the lovely face upon the floor, the rays from the departing sun fall with a rapture in part to gold. She is looking stirred, anxious; she is leaning a little toward her father, and her eyes—such eyes! blue, deep, heavenly blue; blue, like the ocean when it dreams of storm—are turned expectantly to his.
Her lips are parted. And in the background, the two still figures—the father's and the lover's—both silent, wondering.
"He is ill, father; he will die if moved," says the girl, in soft tones fraught with fear.
"He?—who is he?" asks the McDermot suspiciously.
"Ah! of that we know nothing."
Her hand is still uplifted. "But Bridget says he is to rest there—there!" with a swift gesture towards the comfortable lounge, "until the doctor comes."
"Certainly not!" says the McDermot, taking a step forward. "There! Here, Patsy, what are you about? Carry this stranger to where, Duclinea?"
"The north room is the warmest."
It has been prepared for Andy; but he may not come," says Miss McDermot.
"And even if he does—Take care, Patsy. Father! his arm is broken."
She runs to the body they are lifting, and thrusts her own young, firm arm under it, where the broken limb hangs helpless.
"This is a man's work, not a woman's," says Sir Ralph curiously, if courteously. "You must try to give me if you find me in the way."
"No, no, no, do you think, Bridget?" asks Miss McDermot half an hour later of her henchwoman, when she has soothed down that angry despot to a proper frame of mind.
"How can I tell, honey? He may be the devil himself for aught I know; an' fer, I wouldn't wonder. Who but the old boy could come through that bog alive? What did he mane at all, I wonder, by comin' this way? Was there no one to warn him? or hadn't he an eye in his own head? But what's the good of an eye wid them English? Why, they haven't a grain of sense between them."
"You think he's English?"—eagerly.
"Couldn't ye see that much in the cock of his nose? Faix, ye're near as blind as he is himself if ye couldn't note that much; and the strange twist of his tongue. Ock! English, sure!"
"I don't think he looks English! He is so dark. Did you notice that?
And from where is he? What is he?"
"One o' them young gentlemen up at Ballybeg, I'm thinkin'. Two o' em came last night, as I'm told by Larry Murphy, the cab driver. You know him, miss?"
"No—no," dreamily. "Not at all."
"What! Not Larry the thief?
Array, what ails ye at all, me dear?"
"Oh, Larry? Oh! of course, blushing furiously. 'I thought you were talking of—of—'
"Well, I wasn't," says the old woman dryly. "I wouldn't presume to let me tongue run a race about them English folk."

"You really think the poor man was rescued was—is an Englishman?"
"Sorry doubt of it! Bad scan to the day we saw him. Ye'll see now, miss, 'twill bring us no luck. An' naught but a wanderin' artist, I'll bet me life! The old Lord above there is cracked on fools o' that kind, I'm told."
"Why should artists be fools?" asks Duclinea, perhaps a little coldly.
"Well, for one thing, they never has a penny to their name."
"We haven't a penny either," says the girl, with a superb straightening of her lovely figure. "Are we fools?"
"More or less," says Mrs. Driscoll, serenely—"yer father any way."
"What's he bin doin' wid the property all these years? Makin' ducks and drakes o' it. However," says the old woman, "let McDermot do what he likes. It's not of the likes of him I'd dare speak the unkind word; but him others!" with a contemptuous sniff.
"What's him? Nothin'! People as go thruvelli here an' there through the country, an' niver a roof to their heads, or a grandfather to their portion. A McDermot shouldn't be named in the same day wid him, penny or no penny."
"An' the pennies count, Bridget," says the girl, with a quick but heavy sigh.
"Wid them that are risin', but not wid the gold stock," says the old woman eagerly. "A McDermot poor is the same as a McDermot rich."
"No, no," shaking her head sadly.
"Ye say that? The more shame to him as makes ye feel it!" cries the old woman fiercely, her lips quivering.
"How dare any one forget the days, not so long distant, when this old house was the best in the County Cork, and when the McDermots could shake their fists in the faces of all their enemies?"
"I suppose, could do that now," says Duclinea, laughing in spite of herself. "Then, going back to her former mood. "Well, that's all over, Bridget," says she impatiently. "The end of the McDermots has come.
Father, as you know, is the last of them."
"No, I don't! There's you! there's you!" cries the old woman hastily.
"A melancholy specimen," says the girl, with a rather sad laugh. "I'm afraid I should never summon up enough courage to shake my fist at anybody."

WHAT A HORSE CAN DO: Interesting Statistics as to the Extent of Equine Capabilities.
A horse will travel 400 yards in four and one-half minutes at a walk, 400 yards in two minutes at a trot, 400 yards in one minute at a gallop, says the Humeau World. The usual work of a horse is taken at 22,500 pounds raised one foot per minute for eight hours per day. A horse will carry 250 pounds twenty-five miles per day of eight hours. An average draft horse will draw 1,600 pounds twenty-three miles per day on a level road, weight of wagon included. The average weight of a horse is 1,000 pounds; his strength is equivalent to that of five men. In a horse mill moving at three feet per second, track twenty-five feet, diameter, he exerts with the maching the power of four and one-half horses. The greatest amount a horse can pull in a horizontal line is 900 pounds, but he can only do this momentarily; in continued exertion probably half of this is the limit. He attains his growth in five years, will live twenty-five and average sixteen years. A horse will live twenty-five days on water without solid food, seventeen days without eating or drinking, but only five days on food without drinking. A cart drawn by a horse over an ordinary road will travel 1.1 miles per hour of trip. A four-horse team will haul from twenty-five to thirty-six cubic feet of limestone at each load. The time expended in loading, unloading etc., including delays, averages thirty-five minutes per trip. The cost of loading and unloading a cart using labor is $1.25 per day and a horse 75 cents is 25 cents a perch—$1.75 cubic feet. On metal rails a horse can draw one and two-thirds as much as on asphalt, pavement, three and one-third times as much as on good Belgian blocks, five times as much as on good cobble stone, twenty times as much as on good earth road forty times as much as on sand. A modern compilation of engineering maxims states that a horse can drag, as compared with what he can carry on his back in the following proportions:
On the worst earthen road, three times; on a good macadam road, nine;
on plank, twenty-five; on a stone trackway, thirty-three, and on a good railway, fifty-four times as much.

Surgical Wit.
As good an instance of surgical wit as can be found is still told about the staff of the Roosevelt hospital, says an exchange. A dangerous operation was being performed upon a woman.
Old Doctor A., a quaint German, full of kindly wit and professional enthusiasm, had several younger doctors with him. One of them was administering the ether. He became so interested in the old doctor's work that he withdrew the cone from the patient's nostrils, and she half-roused and rose to a sitting posture, looking with wild-eyed amazement over the surroundings. It was a critical moment and Dr. A. did not want to be interrupted. "Lay down dere woman," he commanded, gruffly. "You ha' more curiosity as a medical student." She lay down, and the operation went on.—Argonaut.

TEICHNER AND COMPANY

WORKS OF ART BY TWELVE FAMOUS ARTISTS.

Sometimes a magazine varies its plans of make up for a single number, in a way that makes that issue unique. The Cosmopolitan, published one number some months ago, filled entirely with contributions from women. In the same way the May issue of the Cosmopolitan will be noteworthy on account of the change in the style of illustration. With hardly an exception, the number is entirely made up of original works of art and all by the best artists that could be found. There has never been a number of any magazine that contained so high a class of illustration, and the names of Walter Crane, the English decorator, W. M. Chase, E. W. Kemble, E. Remington, C. S. Reinhardt, etc., are enough to distinguish the issue alone.

Mrs. Lapham, Mr. Booth and Rev. Jaquess were visitors last week. They were right welcome and we can only hope they will repeat the visit ere long.

There were so many absent Tuesday on account of the excursion excitement, incident to the Yarnall institute, that school was excused at 3:30. There were 34 absent from Miss Cover's room, 16 from Miss Alexandre's, and other rooms suffered proportionally.

Let all parents, patrons, and friends interested in the High school rally to our entertainment to-night, Friday. Much patience and perseverance has been shown by the participants and we trust they will be rewarded by a full house.
