THEY GRADUATED.

Interesting Exercises Held Last Friday Night.

NEARLY 700 PEOPLE PRESENT.

Probably the Largest Crowd Ever in the Opera House.

As before announced, the Commencement exercises of the Northville High school were held at the Opera house Friday evening. Long before 7 o'clock the crowd began to arrive and they kept coming until the exercises were over. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity and a hundred or more were glad of even standing room. The stage was beautifully trimmed and tastefully arranged with flowers, evergreens, ferns, etc. The decorations were of red, the class color, and suspended in the front center of the stage was a handsome and perfect miniature ship, with flying sails, underneath of which was inscribed the class motto, "Sailing, Not Drifting." The five graduates alone occupied the stage and the school board, teachers, and families of the graduates occupied seats specially reserved for them in the parquet.

A few minutes after eight o'clock Miss Hattie Yerkes stepped upon the stage and played a very pretty solo upon one of Mr. Springer's sweet toned pianos and then Rev. Seth Reed, P. E., offered prayer, followed by a trio, sang very neatly by Mrs. Beal, Mrs. Long and Miss Filkins.

The first essay on the program was Miss Babbitt's, "Mountaineers are always freemen." This young lady is an elocutionist of considerable ability and she handled her subject in a manner which redounded to her credit. History proves Miss Babbitt's assertions that the warring people of this country, as a rule, were those who lived on the plains and level lands, while those of the mountainous regions were inclined to peace and freedom.

"Woman's advancement" was the subject of Miss Minnie Reed's essay and she handled it well and with the assurance of one of years experience. The subject, though by no means a new one, was well managed and many new ideas were brought forth showing that the woman of today, in deeds of valor and works of invention, were being recognized with the equality of man.

Just here Miss Agnes Whipple sang a very sweet solo, entitled "Among the Clover," and then Miss Bradley stepped to the front of the stage and recited her essay, "The true ideal, the only real." It was a good one and showed much thought and study. Miss Bradley leads us to believe that nothing imaginary is true and nothing true can be imaginary. Imaginary lines around the earth are not imaginable ones but actually exist, etc.

For her subject, Miss Edith Reed took "The Midas Touch." King Midas, whose wish, that all he touched should turn to gold, was granted, was likened unto nature whose touch turns all to gold; the golden touch of civilization; the golden touch of love, of friendship, of harmony, truth, etc., were all blended together and from the retrospective of the golden fable we are brought closer to the brighter golden touch of the Divine ruling power of today.

Mrs. Long then sang "The Daisy" and elicited a round of applause for her efforts.

"The Harmony of discord" was Miss Dubuar's subject. Miss Dubuar has a fine delivery and reminded one of Miss Garrison, the elocutionist, both in expression and voice. The essay was a very fine one and most ably handled. Miss Dubuar shows us that there are no discords in life. All is harmony to work out some good. If there be discord, it is in ourselves. Afflictions are not discords but simply a harmony blended together to work out some good end.

Dr. Swift then presented the diplomas with a few well chosen remarks; the quartette rendered some more music; Rev. L. G. Clark pronounced the benediction and the great event was over.

The graduates were all attired in white, and wore white kid slippers and they looked very lovely. The juniors acted as ushers and were distinguishable by their class color, badge of pink and blue. A table in one of the boxes was completely loaded with bouquets and baskets of flowers sent in by friends of the fair five.

THAT BALL GAME.

Time on Small Bills is Not Correct.

The great ball game, Northville vs. Plymouth, to be played at Walled Lake, July 4, will commence at 3 p. m. instead of 9 a. m. as incorrectly stated on small bills. Omnibuses have been arranged with to meet all trains at Wixom, and Northville people can go by train and witness the great event. Half fare on the F. & P. M. railroad.

THEY WILL TEACH.

There will be two new faces, Professor Bliss and Preceptress Francis McConnell. Prof. Sinclair retires with the good will of the pupils, board and public, and that he is a competent instructor no one can for a moment question. We shall miss him both here and in social life. ## Society Notes.

K. O. T. M.
The Knights of the Macabees of Michigan have changed the time for their annual encampment in order to be in Detroit at the time of the Exposition. In their honor Wednesday, August 31 has been designated as Macabees day. They will then have their grand parade, and their expectations of attendance are so high that they have requested the printing of 50,000 special exposition tickets for their use.

Miss West has just organized a L. O. T. M., with 27 charter members at Wixom.

The newest Knights of Phthias lodge is at Belleville and was organized with about 20 charter members last week.

Northville lodge worked the 1st last Thursday night and expect to work the 2d tonight.

Wonderland.
Chas. Adams, the handless crayon artist, who is in curio hall at Wonderland Detroit this week, deserves of all that has been said of him in advance. His work which is done in from three to five minutes, would be a credit to an artist who is possessed of two good hands and who would take a much longer time on a picture of equal merit. Miss Leah Sherman, the young lady whittler, and the Mexican feather workers are also good attractions. The stage show is given by Hines & Remington's Manhattan Vaudeville. Hines and Remington, Willie Gauze, Ed. Sanford, Jcs. Curranetta, and Dolan and Lenbar compose the company. Wonderland will in the future open at 10 o'clock every morning.

Exposition Notes.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

INTERESTING HAPPENINGS IN A BRIEF RESUME.

A Young New Yorker Shoots His Sister's Betrayer in a Court Room.
—Balfour Nearly Mobbed.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Max Clergett, 18 years old, was shot and instantly killed in part I of the court of general sessions yesterday by Edward Divens. Clergett had been arraigned before Judge Martine on the charge of raping Divens' 15-year old sister, Sarah, on the 13th instant and had pleaded guilty. He was remanded for sentence until next Thursday and as he turned and walked through the aisle to go to the prisoner's pen young Divens arose and holding a self-cooling derringer to Clergett's breast fired before a hand could be outstretched to restrain him. Clergett fell on the broad of his back dead. For an instant there was not another sound in the room. The smoke from the pistol mounted in the air. Divens stood over his victim, a look of hate on his face and his revolver pointed down at the motionless figure on the floor. The police arose first from their lethargy and jumped for the murderer. He made no resistance and was led into the hall. Then he became hysterical and cried aloud for his sister. He was taken before a coroner, who committed him at once. He refused to make any statement, but on the way to prison he continued to call for "Sarah, Sarah, Sarah," the dead man's body.

Clergett's body was taken to the morgue, where an autopsy was made. The bullet went clean through his heart. Death was instantaneous. General sympathy is expressed for Divens whose brain is thought to have been turned by the ruin of his sister, who was his pet and favorite. He has always been sick and paralytic, the muscles of his right side being seriously affected. He gave his age as 23 years.

A Disgraceful Abair in London.

LONDON, June 28.—Advises from all parts of the country show that the electoral campaign is opening amid the greatest excitement. Mr. Balfour arrived at Sheffield yesterday to address an open air meeting. The conservative agents, expecting disorder, summoned a number of workmen to protect the meeting and to prevent organized opposition to the meeting. Fifteen thousand persons were present at the meeting. At the beginning of his speech Mr. Balfour was continually greeted with cheers and groans. Finally he expressed regret for the deplorable accident that had occurred to Mr. Gladstone. This caused the uproar to increase and finally the noise became so great that Mr. Balfour could be heard by no one except the reporters. The crowd made several attempts to rush upon the platform, and the police present had the utmost difficulty in repulsing them. Women screamed to the top of their voices, fearing that they would be crushed to death by the howling crowd and several of them were extricated in a fainting condition. Subsequently the speeches were as brief as it was possible to make them and the meeting terminated in the wildest disorder. Mr. Balfour was rescued by police from the crowd.

LOWERED THE FLAG.

Finch Vessels Compelled to Fly Russian Colors When Entering Lubeck.

BERLIN, June 28.—It has long been the custom of ships when entering the port of Lubeck to fly the German flag out of compliment to the German empire. The Russians have had some reason of late to believe that the motive for this courtesy is case of vessels from Finland, which is part of the Russian Empire, was not always merely one of compliment, and that the Finns wished the Germans to understand that they preferred Germany to Russia. Yesterday, therefore, the Russian consul at Lubeck, boarded the Finnish steamer Hebe as it was entering the port with the German flag flying and demanded that the captain lower the German colors and run up the Russian colors in their place. The Finnish captain of the Hebe demurred, saying it would look like an insult on his part to the German authorities. The Russian consul thereupon threatened that unless the captain complied he would be punished on his return to Russian jurisdiction. The captain concluded to obey, and the German flag came down and the Russian flag went up in its place. All Finnish vessels now entering German ports are treated in a similar manner.

OPPOSE ANTI-OPTION.

Delegation of New York Brokers Leave for Washington to Fight It.

NEW YORK, June 28.—The principal event in the minds of the produce and cotton exchange members to-day was the departure of the New York brokers who are to appear before the senate judiciary committee in Washington in opposition to the Hatch anti-option bill. President Evan Thomas of the produce exchange said that the delegation of business men would endeavor to convince the Judiciary committee that the proposed law is unconstitutional. He does not think the bill will ever pass. In fact, he and his associates have entertained strong hopes all along that the legal questions involved were such that an adverse report would be made to the senate.

MR. HARRISON OBJECTS

THEREFORE MR. CLARKSON WILL NOT SERVE

As Chairman of the National Republican Committee—N. J. Campbell, of Illinois, Selected Instead.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—It was 11:30 o'clock yesterday morning when the meeting of the Republican National committee was called, to order by the temporary chairman, Gen. J. S. Clarkson. After the roll had been called showing the presence, either in person or by proxy, of all the members of the committee except those from Nevada, Wyoming and Oklahoma, J. S. Fasset, of New York, took the floor and placed in nomination for permanent chairman of the committee Gen. J. S. Clarkson.

Mr. Fasset's remarks were several times interrupted by applause and it was hearty and enthusiastic when reference was made to Mr. Clarkson's services early in the campaign of 1888. As Mr. Fasset took his seat, Gen. Clarkson arose and said that although a majority of the members of the committee had tendered him their support and votes he had it from the President that he desired some other person for the position. He (Mr. Clarkson) believed it would be for the best interest of the party to place in the chair some one who was recommended by the candidates for president and vice president. After a recess, a committee was appointed to draft resolutions on the labors of Mr. Clarkson as chairman. James F. Burke, of the University of Michigan, president of the College League of Republican clubs, made an address which was well received.

Mr. Payne, of Wisconsin, placed in nomination as chairman of the Republican National committee, William J. Campbell, of Illinois. Representatives of several other states seconded the nomination as one eminently fit and proper and predicting under his leadership complete success for the Republican party in November. Mr. Campbell was elected by acclamation.

Representative Haubrough, of North Dakota, placed in nomination as vice chairman A. H. DeYoung, of San Francisco, and he was elected by acclamation. Thomas Carter, of Montana, was selected as secretary; C. N. Bliss, of New York, treasurer; F. L. Swords, of Iowa, sergeant-at-arms. Resolutions, thanking Mr. Clarkson for his services were passed unanimously and he made a happy reply. Mr. Fasset, of New York, was also thanked for his services.

In the evening the committee met at the Arlington and went in a body to the White House to call on the President. The committee was conducted to the blue room where they were joined by the President. Chairman Campbell introduced each member and explained that the committee had effected an organization and had called to pay their respects. The President in a few words expressed his appreciation of the courtesy and after shaking hands with all who were present the committee withdrew.

STRUCK BY A WOMAN.

Gladstone, the Great Liberalist, receives a Malicious Blow in the Eye.

London cable. While Mr. Gladstone was driving through Chester to attend a meeting of a liberal club some one threw an object that struck him near the eye. The pain was not great at first and he announced that he would go on and attend the meeting. As he proceeded the crowd that had gathered cheered him lustily. It was ascertained that the guilty person is a woman, and that the missile which she employed was a large piece of hard gingerbread. The gingerbread was thrown with considerable force and struck Mr. Gladstone on the nose, just beneath the left eye, and then glanced upward, grazing the aged statesman's eye and causing him much pain. Mr. Gladstone endured great discomfort throughout his drive to the place where the meeting was held. When he arrived at the headquarters of the club two doctors made an examination and found that the injured eye was considerably inflamed and that the skin on the nose was grazed. They succeeded in moderating the pain. In spite of the disturbing incident Mr. Gladstone made a spirited speech, which was applauded throughout and at its close the speaker received an ovation.

RIOTERS DISARM POLICE.

Belgian Socialists Intend to New Order of Things.

BRUSSELS, June 28.—A number of socialists of this city who were returning from an excursion last night marched through the streets and singing and acting noisily. The police ordered them to disperse, but the socialists refused to do so and the police charged upon them. In the conflict that ensued the police were overpowered, and their swords were taken away from them. A number of the policemen were severely wounded by their own weapons in the hands of the rioters. The civic guards were called out to suppress the rioting and they dispersed the mob in a short time. Several of the more prominent rioters were arrested.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

SENATE.—The postoffice and agricultural appropriation bills were reported from the House and passed on the 22d. The conference report on the military academy bill was presented and agreed to. A bill was passed subjecting to homestead law the public lands undisposed of within the Fort Fetterman hay reservation and wood reserve in Wyoming. After disposing of some bills on the calendar the Senate spent the three subsequent hours on the free silver bill. Mr. Perkins made a speech against the bill. Several other members also spoke on the bill and adjournment was taken without action. HOUSE.—The Senate bill was passed extending to the port of St. Augustine, Fla., the provisions of the act for the immediate transportation of dutiable goods, went into committee of the whole on the general deficiency bill. When the committee rose a roll call disclosed that there was no quorum, and the House adjourned.

SENATE.—After passing several bills on the 23d, among them to appropriate $50,000 for the Sherman pedestal, there took place quite a discussion on the resolution introduced by Mr. Morgan for the passing of additional copies of the report of the committee on foreign relations on the Nicaragua canal. The agricultural appropriation bill was taken up and, without taking a vote thereon, the Senate adjourned. HOUSE.—The interest in the Chicago convention prevented a quorum from being present and no business was transacted.

SENATE.—The entire session on the 27th was taken up with appropriation bills. In order to get them through before the close of the fiscal year. To this end nearly the whole day was given up to the legislative, executive and judicial bill, which provides for the salaries and ordinary expenses of Congress and of all the legislative and judicial branches of the government. Considerable progress was made in its consideration. All the Senate committee amendments (which increased the aggregate amount $850,000) were agreed to, except one which was reserved for further discussion. This was the amendment relating the Utah commission which the House had adopted. Mr. Stewart, of Nevada, indicating that his belief that the pending free coinage bill still has some chance of passage by submitting an amendment to its text, to be printed and called up when consideration of the bill is resumed. HOUSE.—Only a slightly increased attendance. The general deficiency appropriation bill was passed. The conference report on the military academy bill was agreed to. A bill for a uniform system of banknotes was placed on the calendar. Adjourned on account of no quorum.

THE MISLAID MESSAGE

A Fourth of July Story by Leon De-veraux.

IFE VILLAGE folk of Crystal Rapids had for many years back been asking why Albert Nilved had never married.

"There is a sad chapter in his life somewhere," said the village gossip—and there were several of her in Crystal Rapids.

"He has never been the same since he returned from California," she continued, if pressed for further information. "He met someone there who touched his heart."

There is little wonder that the gossips were busy unravelling the mystery of Albert's single blessedness. He had now attained his 32nd year. He lived alone on the old Nilved homestead above the village. For a good many years no woman had crossed the threshold of his pretty country home, which, with its great broad terraces, resembled the summer seat of a Roman advocate in ancient Pompeii.

The great snow white pillars which supported the terraces could be seen among the evergreens for a mile away. When he returned from California after the death of his father, the retinue of female house servants were discharged and replaced by Chinese. Nobody ever knew the reason for the change. The young master was delicate on this point and to avoid investigations kept out of the social gatherings. During the last few years he became known as the Silent Man. Others called him the Mystery of Evergreen Terrace. The village belles had all had their turn for the honor of bringing him out and introducing him at the little affairs up to Albert Nilved's place and insist on his attendance" asked Viola Belden of the party of girl friends who had volunteered to assist her in making ready for the entertainment. "Now don't all answer at once."

They neither answered at once nor singly. One and all of them stamped the proposition with silent disapproval, however, but the idea of bearding the lion in his den was too much for them. Any one of them would have been only too willing to enter the house as the mistress.

"So you refuse, do you?" said Viola raising her voice to a high pitch and assuming an air of bravado. "Then I shall take the task upon myself. The mystery of Evergreen Terrace, as we have called him, shall be a mystery no longer if I can prevent it."

All the other girls were somewhat amazed. Could it be that Viola was planning to lay siege on Evergreen Terrace? Was there any chance of reciprocation? The crimson was still playing havoc with the poor girl's face when Grace Hawkins thundered another broadside.

"Yes, and you know you came down on the train with him from Richmond in May. How did that happen?"

Viola recovered in time to say that her meetings with Mr. Nilved were quite accidental.

"I can recall them as quite agreeable, though," she continued, "and whatever his eccentricities may be he is a true gentleman and one whom we all may feel proud to entertain."

"But we all feel quite sure that we shall not entertain him, not this year," Grace Hawkins laid the floor or the ground rather, again. "The group were on the Belden lawn which sloped down to the river near where the crystal waters rippled in thunder torrents over a stony and somewhat steep decline of eighty feet. The facade was now in summer splendor—a pristine picture fair to look upon. The grass had lately been cropped by Paddy Hanks, the man of all work, who had done the same job for many years. This year he made the acquaintance of a lawn mower, a new invention which he characterized as a "cravithur of hiven's own sendin'" to use his own words. Paddy usually took part in the Independence day ceremonies on the lawn. His part generally consisted of hoisting the stars and stripes to the top of the big pole which stood in the center of the lawn. He took great pride in executing the job. It always seemed to him the most important piece of the day's program.

The morning of this particular Fourth of July arrived. The dawn had just broken and the preliminary din, started the night before, had subsided. The village was at rest, all but Paddy Hanks. He slept with one eye on Old Glory all that night. He was up with the daylight and when the sky cleared away proceeded to the lawn to float "Old Glory" to the breeze.

"Hurrah for the land o' the free an' the home o' the brave," ejaculated Paddy as he pulled the cord, unfolding the stars and stripes at the top of the pole. "Hurrah for ould Ireland too," and—

"Everybody for his own country," was Paddy's quick retort, indicating his belief that Satan was somewhere in close proximity. A cold shiver must have agitated his spinal when he felt a hand on his shoulder. He waited long enough to feel assured that the hand was not a hot one, and that its owner was not his Satanic majesty. Then he looked around and saw Albert Nilved enjoying a hearty laugh.

"Why, Master Albert, fwyat be ye doin' here at this hour of the mornin'?"

"I came to see you," the other replied, "and on a very urgent mission, too. Do you remember the time you told my father what you would do for him or his, if you ever got a chance? I'm going to put you to a test."

"I'm yer man," and Paddy placed his roughened hand between those of his former employer's son. "I'll do anything inside or out the law."

"Then do you see this piece of paper?"

"I do."

"Take it and when your young mistress sends you to the dressmaker for the dress she is to wear this afternoon, place it in one of the pockets."

"I'm yer obedient servant, Master Albert, here's me hand again fer yer Divil the sow! shall ever know a whit about it."

"I couldn't sum up courage to tell her that I loved her in any other way," said Albert to himself, "but she will have read it this afternoon and then I can explain all if this business don't fail me again."

When the ceremonies began in the afternoon the Master of Evergreen was called upon to read the Declaration of Independence, which he did in a highly creditable manner. As he descended from the stand his eyes met those of Viola Belden. She was the first to congratulate him and afterwards they sought the seclusion of a narrow glade that led to the river below. As they proceeded both seemed surprised. Their conversation was not on the subject that each intended it should be. The Master of Evergreen said nothing of love.

Viola said nothing of the note she had received.

The situation became disagreeable and they soon retraced their steps. They parted on the lawn and met no more that day.

Neither did they ever meet again.

A few weeks afterwards all that was mortal of pretty Viola Belden was laid away in the village churchyard. Nobody seemed to know the malady. Some said it was a broken heart. She being the only child the Beldens in their deep bereavement adopted another a year later.

When little Florence Allen came into the Belden household she was 12 years old. She looked like Viola and that name was given her in tender remembrance of the real Viola.

Ten years have passed away since Viola Belden died. The Independence Day gatherings at Squire Belden's are still long-looked-forward-to affairs. Preparations are in progress for the meet his. The little hostess congratulates him and they walk away down near the silvery stream just as did another pair ten years before.

"Do you know, Albert, I could hardly contain myself until we got away by ourselves?"

"It's always pleasant to be alone when one is in good company," facetiously answered the Master of Evergreen.

"Yes, it took me completely by surprise."

"The deuce it did."

"Albert, don't jest."

"What do you mean, girl? What have I done?"

"How dare you, sir, ask a girl to be your wife and then jest with her?"

"Me, marry? What girl? Who? I never asked anybody."

"Look here, Albert, Nilved, this is sufficient," and she handed him a note which she had been holding in the palm of her hand. It read:

INDEPENDENCE DAY.
Dearest Viola—I love you and take this means of asking you if you will be my wife. Will be at the celebration this afternoon and waiting.
ALBERT NILVED.

He looked at the handwriting. It was his. Then at the large hazel eyes; then at the costume. He pinched himself to make sure that it was not all a dream and that the real Viola was still alive. He found himself very much awake.

"You found this note in that dress pocket?"

Viola blushing replied that she did. "You placed it there, of course?"

"Well, not exactly; but I meant what I said when I wrote it." Then he thought of the scene with Paddy Hawkins ten years before. "Yes, I meant just what I said."

"And you mean it yet?"

"Well, yes," and they sat down near the side of the glade and arranged a day for an event the coming of which was announced in the village church the Sunday following the Fourth of July.

PICTURES IN FIRE

How the Fourth Can Be Celebrated in Grand Style.

Pictures of famous revolutionary scenes have of late years become prominent features in commemorating National Independence. These are mostly shown by aid of fireworks and at night.

Portraits of Washington are now frequently shown in red, white and blue fire, mechanically arranged and so true to life do the likenesses invariably seem that great enthusiasm is invoked. Another picture often shown by aid of fire is Washington's journey to New York. The scene is an inspiring one for American youth especially. The same may be said of the battle scene at Stony Point, which makes a gorgeous sight in front of a black background. The pictures are credited with these innovations, the most notable among them being a naval fight between American and English frigates. The battle between the Richard and Scipio, with the frequent explosions, as if of guns, is calculated to elicit admiration. An irredeemable feature of this sort of a celebration is that it is always on the speculative plan. Enclosures are rented by the projectors, who charge a regular price of admission, which varies from 25 to 50 cents. A show of this kind generally costs from $500 to $1,000, according to the number of scenes displayed. It is not improbable that before many years have passed the big cities will take the business out of the hands of speculators by specially taxing the people and giving a free show in return. Such an innovation cannot come too soon.

THE FOURTH ABROAD.

Independence Day Celebration as Seen in Other Lands.

The Fourth of July is always a big day in Paris. This is especially so in the American colony, which now numbers about 300,000 people, men, women and children. Flags, bunting and fireworks are the order of the day. The celebration generally winds up with a banquet at the residence of the American Minister. Speech-making of the patriotic order is always indulged in. In this French Statesmen join and in a small way the sympathetic relations which were formed between the two countries over a hundred years ago are annually renewed. In England the celebration is on a much smaller scale. The banquet is never attended by the nobility nor even by English Statesmen. In Germany, Austria and Italy the legations always present a gay appearance on July 4. In many parts of Canada the display of American flags from house-tops and in places of business has reached a degree where it has become offensive to the ultra royalists. This is particularly so of Montreal and Windsor. The latter city recently elected an annexationist to the provincial parliament which probably explains the independent feeling of the people there.

The circumference of the earth's orbit is about 612,300,500 miles, that of the moon about 1,500,493 miles.

A LITTLE IRISH GIRL.

By "The Duchess."

CHAPTER XV.—CONTINUED.

And thus bidden she tells it. A most halting, woeful tale, but true in every point. So true, indeed, that it defeats itself. It does not lay clear the fact that love for him and want of love for his rival had been the motive power that worked her return.

There is a dead silence when she has finished her forlorn confession.

"So you were afraid to go in the long run," says he at last, his voice stern.

"Afraid! No—yes." She began boldly, but now breaks down. "Yes, I was afraid."

"Oh, must I answer that?" says she, clasping her cold hands in front of her. "Surely you know. Do you think I have not seen enough to do you think I am without all feeling? I spoke to set you free."

"So anxious for your own freedom?" says he with a sneer. He flings the now cold cigar over the balcony, away into the dark beyond. "You are ingenuously itself! to put it upon me is a good move. Well, and so I am to consider our engagement at an end?"

"Of course," says she very bravely; and in another moment to her intense discomfort, finds that she is crying bitterly, silently, desperately. So silent is her crying that in the darkness he is not aware of it.

"I think you could have found an easier way to say more graceful way out of your difficulty," says he contemptuously. "A word to me would have been enough. But I suppose I was not worth even so much trouble to the girl who had promised to marry me?"

"You had promised, you know," trying to see her face and speaking with merciless persistence. "Did you imagine, wretchedly, that I was so enamored of you that I would marry you against your will? Great heavens, what a world this is!"

He turns suddenly away from her stricken figure, and begins to pace vehemently up and down the balcony.

"Here come in?" says he at last, roughly. "Come in out of this cold, rainless and worthless as I hate you and know you still you must live. I suppose, to the undoing of other men?"

He had laid his hand on her arm, and drawn her to the open casement. The lights from within falling more distinctly on her face wakens him to the fact that the tears are running down her cheeks.

"You are crying," says he fiercely. He lets her go. Crying for Eyre! He curbs his passion by a supreme effort, and once again addresses her. His voice now is under control, though his eyes still show the angry grief that is consuming him.

"If you are crying for Eyre," says he, "that can soon be set right. To judge by his manner last night."

He had betrayed himself. As if struck, the girl starts back from him. "You were there—you saw—you heard?"

"I saw, I did not hear."

"You knew, and let me speak!"

"Why should I not be silent? I waited."

"Waited? for what? Could you not, wildly, have broken our engagement instead of leaving me to do it?"

"I could not." If she had not been so overpowered with the fresh knowledge that meant so much fresh shame she might have read between the lines of his short answer.

"Oh, you should—you should!" cries she, weeping on my now.

"Don't cry," says Anketell, catching hold of her. "Do it! And I'm miserable enough? It can all soon be set right."

"Oh, never, never!"

"I tell you yes. You know his address?"

"His?"

"Eyre's?"

"No."

"It can easily be discovered, however."

"I don't want to discover it," says she, covering her face with her hands.

"Then why are you crying?" asks he coldly. "Let us, now that the truth is so bare between us, cease from deception. Tell me this, your voice growing almost frozen now, when you proposed to leave your home with him, where were you going?"

"To his sister, Lady Stanning," faintly.

"She had arranged to receive you?"

"Oh, no! he—he only insisted about our going the morning before I left. When was it?" wearily. "It seems a long, long time ago."

"I dare say," grimly, "but a telegram will bring him to you in no time. Well, and so you were to go to Lady Stanning in the middle of the night, without previous arrangement with her of any sort?"

"So he said."

"Did it ever occur to you that Lady Stanning might not be exactly pleased to receive an unknown young lady at an hour approaching midnight?"

"I did not think—I—"

"And he," with growing wrath, "this precious lover of yours, did he never think either? Did he never dawn upon his vacant brain what a cut was he making upon you?"

"But Eyre may be the model of all virtues, all genius in your eyes; in mine he is merely a first-class idiot."

"Oh, yes," agrees she with a sob. Anketell stopped as if struck. He had expected vituperation, tears, support of Eyre; but this—this open agreement of the verdict against him, is more than he had prepared himself to receive.

"But he was very kind, very," says Dulcie hurriedly. "He was very, kind to me when you—when every one was against me. If I had liked him a little bit more I should have been glad to go with him; but—she lifts her earnest, half-drowned eyes to his."

"But—?" queries he so sternly.

"But—I didn't," replies she gently. To disbelieve her would be to be a fool. Anketell's face paled for a moment, and then slowly, so slowly a healthier, happier he returns to it.

"Come in," says he gently. He does not wait for her to obey him this time, however. He draws her with a strong, if tender arm, to the shelter of the warm room within.

"See her! Dulcie!" says he, standing before her and taking her hands gently in his own. "Shall we begin all over again, you and I?"

"You and I?"

"Why not? Look! I set you free—I release you," pressing her back from him, not very far, but still far enough for him to know that Dulcie's fingers have tightened over his, as if in fear or protest or both. Even such a little distance has frightened her. Oh, the glad thrill of dawning hope that beats his veins as he feels the nervous clasp of her hands!

"You are free, Dulcie; I have no smallest claim upon you. You can go your way, and I mine. You, understanding, you quite understand that?"

"Yes," faintly.

"Well, now," he pauses as if afraid to go on. After all it is only an experiment; who knows how it will end? "Now—I propose to you, all over again. I beg, I entreat, you to marry me! You have your freedom; you can keep me or let me go as you will; but, passionately, I beseech you to keep me."

"Oh, no!" Her pretty head is hanging down, her voice has sunk into a whisper. "Not after—that?"

"After that—after everything?"

Miss McDermot raises her head slowly and looks at him. Reproach is in her glance.

"Why—why were you not like this always?" asks she.

"How could I be?" The reproach is all on his side now, and strong enough to dwarf hers. "Do you know how you treated me? What a little was ever colder? Why, I was afraid to go near you. Once I kissed you. Do you remember it? I do, and your look after it—Once only. This, stooping and pressing his lips lightly to her cheek, is the second time. And," sadly, "I do not call that kissing you at all."

"And what do you call it?" asks she, a gleam of mischievous fun creeping into her face in spite of her. Then suddenly she flings her arms around his neck. "Well, I'll kiss you," says she, "because I love you, Ralph; I do indeed."

"You are sure of it?" he asks five minutes later.

"Quite, quite sure."

"I wish you had been sure a little earlier."

"I should not. The waiting has made it ever so much surer."

"And you are happy, darling?"

"I never felt so happy."

"Not even one regret?"

"Well," curiously, "there is something—something—fidgeting awkwardly with the flower in his coat."

"Yes, something? Go on, say he anxiously. "Can it be about Eyre?"

"It's—he seemed very uneasy about it."

"So he, very well, might!" indignantly.

"Oh, but it was all for me."

"All for himself, in my opinion."

"You wrong him," warmly; "you do, indeed."

To hear her stick up for Eyre's gall and wormwood, but to shake the good feeling established between them now is not to be thought of for a moment.

"Well, don't let us quarrel about him," says he, and his tone lightens itself as he looks as heavy as lead.

"What was he uneasy about in special?"

"About the—the lies he told you."

"He? who?"

"Why, poor Andy, of course; whom were you thinking of?"

"Of Eyre. Forgive me that."

"Nonsense," says Miss McDermot. "Why, airily, I've forgotten him. No, it was Andy. You know he told you last night that he had brought me to the station, and as I told you, I—"

"Is that all?"

"Yes. It was a good deal. And Andy is greatly put out about it. You are sure you don't think badly of him?"

"I think," enthusiastically, "very highly of him."

"Oh, do you, really?"

"Well, how else should I think of him? Was he not trying to help you?"

"And you will say something lovely to him in the very first thing in the morning?"

"No! I shall say something lovely to you then."

"Oh, Ralph! Well, good night. Good-night again. Good-night, really, this time!"

TITE END.

What a Zouave Is.

A local character in war times was interested in the formation of a local militia company. He and others discussed it much, and public opinion was about equally divided as to whether they should have a straight military company or zouaves.

One day a conversation occurred in the village store.

"I'm in favor of zouaves," said our friend.

"You so?"

"Sure."

"Well, what is a zouave, anyway?"

"Well, a zouave, you see a zouave is one of them fellows that wears a red suit and them soft boots that buttons up to his knees. He's kind of a dandy feller, and in battles, as I understand it, you see, he mostly—well, I guess generally—he gets down and lays on his belly and deplores."—Lewiston Journal.

THE NEW WAY
There is an old saying that there is "nothing
new under the sun."
We want to tell you that there is something new,
and it's very new, too.
It is the new way to the Summer Resorts, Petoskey, Bay View and Charlevoix, and one that will prove to be as popular a means of reaching them as the places are popular to themselves. Profit all parts of the country come every year—the number increasing as the resorts become better known—a throng of tourists, some bent on pleasure, only,
and going from one resort to another,
enjoying to the utmost the pleasures afforded by each. Others go to some favored place, spending the hot months in quiet rest and regaining the health and strength impaired by too close attention to business and the cares of every day life.

But everybody knows of the advantages to be derived from a vacation spent among the woods and lakes of Northern Michigan, and our object now is to tell you of the "New Way" to reach them.

The extension of the popular CHI-CAGO & WEST MICHIGAN RAILWAY is now completed, the new line running from Traverse City, through Charlevoix, to Petoskey and Bay View, a distance of seventy-five miles through magnificent forests and along the shores of beautiful lakes and rivers. Passing directly in front of the two resorts of Charlevoix (one of the most delightful places for a summer home of the many in that region), the road, a few miles further on, strikes the shore of little Traverse Bay, which, almost at the water's edge, it follows into Petoskey and Bay View.

Through train service will be commenced via the new route on June 26, and with the excellent service and fast time, which will be a special feature,
"The New Way" cannot fail to prove a popular one with travelers.

Through parlor and sleeping cars are run from Chicago via the WEST MICHIGAN GAX, and from Detroit via the other line of this system, the DETROIT, LAN-SING & NORTHERN R. R., to Grand Rapids, thence via the C. & W. M. R'y to Petoskey, through Traverse City and Charlevoix.

Try the "New Way," this year, and

FOR SALE BY

MANY of the evils of life, which are unceasingly deplored by men of a melancholy stimp, are counterbalanced very cunningly and well; this age, which may be considered as an evil being a deprivation from many pleasures both of body and mind, being accompanied by a loss of vigor and a weakness of all our best faculties, is counterbalanced by youth. For at least twenty years of our existence we have the intoxication of that period of life, the excitement of novelty of freshness, the want of cure and anxiety, and that thoughtless boldness which makes youth so delightful. Age does not keep with us so long; many men die ere it comes, and with others it lingers but a little while gently to let them down to their departure.

"Allyson we must see what she says to that; but I will not object." They entered the wigwam, carrying sunshine into it. De Lillie stood up to Nanita and said, "Nanita I am an Indian. Help me to be a good one." Her bright eyes danced in ecstasy, as she threw herself on his bosom and wept there. He looked round, and the mother was weeping on the old man's bosom. Even the old warrior's eyes were moist.

De Lillie was adopted into the tribe with the usual ceremonies, and great rejoicing was there on the occasion.

at 12 o'clock you sneak quietly out of the house and meet me at the corner. I won't have a carriage, as we must be as economical as possible.

IN FAMOUS LONDON.

DR. TALMAGE GREETED BY A MIGHTY THRONG.

His First Sermon Heard by Many Thousand People—"Ye Are Bought With a Price" For a Text.

LONDON, England, June 25, 1892.—An enormous audience greeted Dr. Talmage in this city to-day, composed of people who had come from all parts of the British metropolis to hear the famous American preacher. His reception in England has been most enthusiastic. Many letters were awaiting him from different cities eagerly pleading for a visit. The Doctor will have to preach five or six times a week if he accepts even a small percentage of the urgent invitations already sent to him. He is very much gratified by the extreme cordiality of his reception. Dr. Talmage outlines his sermon, "The Immense Cost," from the text, 1 Cor. 6:20: "Ye are bought with a price."

Your friends takes you through his valuable house. You examine the arches, the frescoes, the grass-plots, the fish-ponds, the conservatories, the parks of deer, and you say within yourself or you say aloud: "What did all this cost?" You see a costly diamond flashing in an earring, or you hear a costly dress rustling across the drawing-room, or you see a high-mettled span of horses harnessed with silver and gold, and you begin to make an estimate of the value.

The man who owns a large estate cannot instantly tell you all it is worth. He says: "I will estimate so much for the house, so much for the furniture, so much for laying out the grounds, so much for the stock, so much for the barn, so much for the equipment—adding up in all making this aggregate."

Well, my friends, I hear so much about our mansion in heaven, about its furniture and the grand surroundings, that I want to know how much it is all worth, and what has actually been paid for it. I cannot complete in a month nor a year the magnificent calculation, but before I get through to-day I hope to give you the figures. "Ye are bought with a price."

"With some friends I went to your Tower to look at the crown jewels. We walked around, caught one glimpse of them, and being in the procession were compelled to pass out. I wish that I could take this audience into the tower of God's mercy and strength, that you might walk around just once, at least, and see the crown jewels of eternity, behold their brilliancy, and estimate their value. "Ye are bought with a price."

Now if you have a large amount of money to pay, you do not pay it all at once, but you pay it by installments—so much the first of January, so much the first of April, so much the first of July, so much the first of October, until the entire amount is paid, and I have to tell this audience that "you have been bought with a price," and that price was paid in different installments.

The first installment paid for the clearance of our souls was the ignominious birth of Christ in Bethlehem. Though we may never be carefully looked after afterward, our advent into the world is carefully guarded. We come into the world amid kindly atten-tions. Privacy and silence are afforded when God launches an immortal soul into the world. Even the roughest of men know enough to stay back. But I have to tell you that in the village, on the side of the hill there was a very bedlam of uproar when Jesus was born. In a village capable of accommodating only a few hundred people, many thousand people were crowded; and amid hostlers' and muleteers and camel-drivers yelling at stupid beasts of burden the Messiah appeared. No silence. No privacy. A better adapted place hath the eagle in the eyrie—hath the whelp in the lions' lair. The exile of heaven lieth down upon earth. The first night out from the palace of heaven spent in an out-house! One hour after laying aside the robes of heaven, dressed in a wrapper of coarse linen. One would have supposed that Christ would have made a more gradual descent, coming from heaven first to a half-way world of great magnitude, then to Caesar's palace, then to a merchant's castle in Galilee, then to a private home in Bethany, then to a fisherman's hut, and last of all to a stable. No! It was one leap from the top to the bottom.

Let us open the door of the caravan-sary in Bethlehem and drive away the camels. Press on through the group of idlers and loungers. What, O Mary! no light? "No light," she says, "save that which comes through the door." What, Mary! no food? "None," she says, "only that which was brought in the sack on the journey." Let the Bethlehem woman who has come in here with kindly intentions put back the covering from the babe that we may look upon it. Look! Look! Un-cover your head. Let us kneel. Let all voices be hushed. Son of Mary! Son of God! Child of a day—Monarch of eternity! In that eye the glance of God. Omnipotence shethed in that Babe's arm. That voice to be changed from the feeble plaint to the tone that shall wake the dead. Hosanna! Hosanna! Glory be to God that Jesus came from throne to manger, that we might rise from manger to throne, and that all the gates are open, and that the door of heaven, that once swung this way to let Jesus out, now swings the other way to let us in. Let all the bellmen of heaven lay hold the rope and ring out the news: "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people: for to-day is born in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord!"

The second installment paid for our soul's clearance was the scene in Quar-antania, a mountainous region, full of caverns, where there are to this day panthers and wild beasts of all sorts, so that you must now go there armed with knife, or gun, or pistol. It was there that Jesus went to think and to pray, and it was there that this monster of hell—more sly, more terrible, than anything that prowled in that country—Satan himself, met Christ.

The rose in the cheek of Christ—that Publius Lestullus, in his letter to the Roman Senate, ascribed to Jesus—that rose had scattered its petals. Abstinence from food had thrown him into emaciation. A long abstinence from food recorded in profane history is that of the crew of the ship Juno; for twenty-three days they had nothing to eat. But the sufferer had fasted a month and ten days before he broke fast. Hunger must have agonized every fibre of the body, and gnawed on the stomach with teeth of death. The thought of a morsel of bread or meat must have thrilled the body with something like ferocity. Turn out a pack of men hun-gry as Christ was a-hungered, and if they had strength, with one yell they would devour you as a lion a kid. It was in that pang of hunger that Jesus was accosted, and Satan said: "Now change these stories, which look like bread, into an actual supply of bread." Had the temptation come to you and me, under those circumstances, we would have cried: "Bread it shall be!" and been almost impatient at the time taken for mastication; but Christ with one hand beat back the hunger, and with the other hand beat back the monarch of darkness. O ye tempted ones! Christ was tempted. We are told that Napoleon ordered a coat of mail made; but he was not quite certain that it was impervious, so he said to the manufacturer of the coat of mail: "Put it on now yourself, and let us try it," and with shot after shot from his own pistol, the emperor found out that it was just what it pretended to be—a good coat of mail. Then the man received a large reward.

I bless God that the same coat of mail that struck back the weapons of temptation from the head of Christ we may now all wear. For Jesus comes and says: "I have been tempted and I know what it is to be tempted. Take this robe that defended me and wear it for yourselves. I shall see you through all temptations."

But, says Satan, still further to Jesus, "come and I will show you something worth looking at, and after half a day's journey they came to Jerusalem; and to the top of the temple. Just as one might go up in the tower of Abner and look off upon Belgium, so Satan brought Christ to the top of the Temple. Some people at a great height feel dizzy; and a strong disposition to jump, so Satan comes to Christ in this way. Stand-ing there at the top of the temple they looked off. A magnificent reach of country. Grain fields, vineyards, olive groves, forests, and streams, cattle in the valley, flocks on the hills, and villages and cities and realms. "Now," says Satan, "I'll make a bargain. Just jump off. I know it is a great way from the top of the Tem-ple to the valley, but if you are divine you can fly. Jump off. It won't hurt you. Angels will catch you. Your Father will hold you. Besides I'll make you a large present if you will. I'll give you Asia Minor. I'll give you China. I'll give you Ethiopia. I'll give you Italy. I'll give you Spain. I'll give you Germany. I'll give you Britain. I'll give you all the world." What a tempta-tion it must have been!

Go to-morrow morning and get in an altercation with some wretch crawling up from a gin cellar in the lowest part of your city. "No," you say, "I would not demean myself by getting into such a contest." Then think of what the King of heaven and earth endured when he came down and fought the great wretch of hell, and fought him in the wilderness and on top of the temple. But I bless God that in the triumph over temptation Christ gives us the assurance that we also shall triumph. Having himself been tempted, he is able to succor all those who are tempted. In a violent storm at sea the mate told a boy—for the rigging had become entangled at the mast—to go up and right it. A gentleman standing on the deck said: "Don't send that boy up; he will be dashed to death." The mate said: "I know what I am about." The boy raised his hat in recognition of the order and then rose, hand over hand and went to work; and as he swung in the storm the passengers wrung their hands and expected to see him fall. The work done he came down in safety; and a Christian man said to him, "Why did you go down in the fore-castle before you went up?" "Ah!" said the boy, "I went down to pray. My mother always taught me, before I undertook anything great to pray." "What is that you have in your vest?" said the man. "Oh! that is the New Testa-ment," he said; "I thought I would carry it with me if I really did go over-board." How well the boy was pro-vided! I care not how great the height or how vast the depth, with Christ

An Old Fashion Revived.

A fancy has arisen for a parting in the hair. Few women can stand one just in the center of the head, for that requires a good forehead, a perfectly outlined pair of eyebrows and a straight nose. However, the hair can be parted on the top of the head a little to one side, or indeed, if it is be-coming, very much to one side, and the parting not allowed to come through the short fringe which is just over the forehead, and which produces a softening effect.

There's a wide difference between the help that's talked of and the help that's guaranteed.

Which do you want, when you're buying medicine?

If you're satisfied with words, you get them with every blood-purifier but one. That one is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. With that, you get a guarantee. If it doesn't help you, you have your money back. On this plan, a medicine that promises help is pretty sure to give it.

But it's because the medicine is different, that it's sold differently. It's not like the sarsaparillas, which are said to be good for the blood in March, April, and May. At all seasons and in all cases, it cures permanently, as nothing else can, all the diseases arising from a tor-pid liver or from impure blood.

It's the best blood-purifier, and it's the cheapest, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar.

With this, you pay only for the good you get.
