A REMINISCENCE.

The Editor is Agreeably Carried Back to His Railroad Days.

While on a Detroit trip last week the Editor had the pleasure of making a call at the division superintendent's office of the Lake Shore railroad, in whose employ the writer was for some years. We were met with a cordial and hearty grasp of the hand, by that affable superintendent, S. S. Hand. Mr. Hand was for many years freight agent at Detroit and was promoted to his present position about five years ago. He is in every sense of the word a gentleman—genial, whole-souled, whom it is a pleasure, alike for the officials, an employe, or the public, to meet and converse with. Mr. Hand is not only the oldest division superintendent of the entire Lake Shore system, but is also undoubtedly the most popular one and the remarkable increase of business on his division the past few years reflects much credit as to his management.

We here too met the superintendent's chief clerk, W. E. Beal, and though not more than forty yet it seems as though he must have held this office of chief clerk at least 39 of those forty years. We remember our first introduction to the gentleman. It was back in '79 when the writer was operator and acting agent at Dundee, under the now Hon. W. A. Francis. It was, "Your oil can is at Mourou; why don't you send your requisition card to this office?" (signed) W. E. B. We did not know then who W. E. B. was—we had it copied Web, and for a long time wondered who Web was. Mr. Beal is a thoroughly posted railroad man and an exceedingly popular one.

And there was our old friend G. W. Johnson, who was chief train dispatcher during our time—now promoted to master of transportation. Mr. Johnson was as fat and jolly as ever he was when he used to fire in the train orders with his well known "12 G. W. J." on them. Mr. Johnson like all the officers in this office rose from the ranks and was at one time messenger boy down at White Pigeon or some place near there.

Mr. Johnson's former operator, Sam Edgner, is now chief dispatcher. Sam used to be known as the biggest "wire fighter" on the road and it was of no use trying to do business if Sam wanted the "line." Sam makes a tip-top "chief" and everybody likes him. Asst. Dispatcher France was away on his vacation and we missed the pleasure of seeing him. Mr. France, by the way, is quite well known in Northville, his wife being Hattie Clark formerly resident of the "Switzerland of Wayne county."

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Seril Adams is Struck by the Cars and Meets Instant Death.

HE WAS VERY DEAF,

And Had No Warning of the Approaching Train.

Seril Adams, father of Frank, Edward and Riley Adams of this place, was struck by the 6:40 south-bound mail train last night and instantly killed. Mr. Adams lives on Wm. Einkerton's farm some four miles north-east of here and he was returning home from a days work at his son Ed's, who lives on the Andrew Yerkes place, taking a short cut from the Novi road on the railroad track to where the track crosses the east and west road near the Knapp cemetery. Mr. Adams is almost totally deaf and the engineer's frantic endeavors with the whistle to warn the old gentleman of his peril was of no use. The train could not be brought to a stop in time and when but a few rods of the highway where he would have turned from the railroad track, the locomotive struck him, breaking his neck and throwing the body into the ditch. The train was soon brought to a stand still, the remains taken aboard and carried to Novi and the children notified. Mr. Adams was a highly respected old gentleman and his sudden death is a sad blow to his wife and six children. The funeral will be held from the late home at ten o'clock tomorrow.

MY SHIP.

O, Captains, if you sight my ship—
My ship that went to sea,
I pray you, wait a message
O'er the salt waves home to me.

THE OLD TAVERN.

Twenty years ago, before so many railroads were built, there was a great deal of travel over the old trail which runs through the mountains of Northern Georgia into Tennessee.

These were lawless times twenty years ago, but no trouble had ever come to Mr. Harbin through the lawless characters that infested the mountains, until a few weeks before the time of which I write.

Now Will was a merry-hearted fellow, always whistling and singing. In fact his father often said he could make more noise in a day than any other boy he knew could in a month.

He drove one horse hitched to a light wagon, with a queer, old-fashioned top which was drawn closely.

When Sully returned from the barn, he retired at once to his room, which opened off the kitchen, first inquiring where the others were to sleep.

What she had told him was strictly true, but owing to the peculiar manner in which the house was built, the back of Sarah's room adjoined that which had been given Sully. She was so afraid he would mistrust her proximity that she retired without a light and lay shivering and sleepless for hours.

Sully had lighted both lamp and lantern, and with the latter in his hand was in the act of leaving the room, fully dressed, even to overcoat and mittens.

When he had carefully arranged the bedding, he listened a moment, then, apparently satisfied all was right, he picked up the lantern and again passed out of sight.

Had they remained quiet, he would perhaps have not molested them, but, noiseless as were their movements, he heard them and followed ere they could close and bar the heavy store-room door behind them.

The boy obeyed, not daring to refuse and bending over, the ruffian began groping in the meal with his hand.

It had but little meal in it that night, and as Sarah saw the fellow bending so far over, an idea suddenly flashed into her mind.

Will after a moment, and a startled look came into his sister's face. A moment she stood in thought, then ran across the room and took an anger from the wall.

Still, I must go, and he rose with a resolute air. Sarah grew very white, but got his overcoat, muffler and mittens without a word.

Sarah opened the door, her worn, haggard face proving what a terrible waiting it had been to her. Sully was found where they had left him, half dead from cold and hunger.

What she had told him was strictly true, but owing to the peculiar manner in which the house was built, the back of Sarah's room adjoined that which had been given Sully. She was widely repeated; but I wish to ask you which was the bravest, the one who went, or the one who stayed?—Rye Johnson, in The Home.

THE GAY-GIRAFFE.

It is a man who can train to do tricks a kind of animal which has not been so trained before seems to be in a fair way to get rich.

That's not a very difficult trick to teach certainly," said the reporter. "But I don't think the public would care much to see that."

One fore leg and one hind leg are shifted at the same time, but he does not go evenly; he manages to get the jump of a canter into a pacer's stride.

In winter quarters, where they have many rooms than in the cages while on the road, I saw a peacock once strut proudly past the giraffe's pen, and one of the long-necked fellows reached over and, winding his wonderfully prehensile tongue about a dozen gay tail feathers, lifted the astonished bird off his feet and gave him a shake which took out about one-fifth of his gaudy appendage.

From Albany, N. Y., comes the story that in July, 1888, the bunco artist John Fries, now serving a nineteen-year sentence at Dannemora, slipped up behind F. K. Dedrick just as he left his carriage in the front of the Farmers and Mechanics bank and extracted from the seat a package containing $25,000 in negotiable bonds.

There recently died at Rome, Ricci Consorte, the well-known master of ceremonies of the capitol. Formerly he was the officer who preceded the pope's carriage in the streets to open the way and keep order.

Not to the Point. "Where were you last night?" asked Jolliboy, addressing Chappie, who was looking very much out of sorts.

To Alay Seaside. By a combination of movable ballast in the form of pendulums controlled by water cylinders fitted with loaded valves, it is proposed to control the rolling of vessels in a seaway that the disagreeable features attending their want of steadiness will entirely disappear.

Appropriate. Cumso—What are you going to do with that mouse, Johnny? Johnny Cumso—Use it for bait. Cumso (astonished)—For bait? Johnny—Yes; I'm going to try to catch some catfish.—Jester.

OLDEST SETTLERS.

THE PRE-HISTORIC INHABITANTS OF AMERICA.

It is believed that they crossed the Pacific in the fifth century—Some Relics of Their Existence—Serpent Mound of Ohio.

Four hundred years ago the country we live in was unknown to the rest of the world. There were no cities, no railroads and bridges, no horses and wagons, no broad smooth roads.

These little known people are called Mound Builders, from the huge piles of earth which they raised for various purposes. They are supposed to have been of the same race as the Indian tribes found by Europeans.

Many of these mounds were for purposes of burial. We learn something of the habits of the people from the ornaments of copper, stone and shell which they buried with the dead.

Whence came the early inhabitants of America? is a question that can not be positively answered. A company of Chinese sailors, in the fifth century, driven off shore by westerly winds, sailed many weeks until they came to a great continent.

Here they found the aloë and other plants that were strange to them, but which we know to be Mexican. The savages on either side of Bering Strait meet every year to barter their fish and furs.

Iceland had been occupied about a hundred years by a hardy, seafaring race from Norway, when, in A. D. 985, Eric the Red, an Icelandic chief, discovered Greenland, and planted a colony on its southwest shore.

by a storm, saw the mainland of North America stretching far away to the southwest. In A. D. 1000, Eric's son, Leif the Fortunate, undertook, with thirty-five brave companions, to examine this more fertile and attractive shore. They saw the flat rocks of Newfoundland, the white banks of Nova Scotia, and the long, sandy beach of Cape Cod. From its great numbers of wild grapes, Rhode Island was Good Vin Land.

Parties of Icelanders are thought to have visited the shores of what are now South Carolina and Georgia. The northern natives had told them of a "white man's land" to the southward, where fair-faced processions marched in white robes, with banners at their heads to the music of hymns.

ALL IN THE FINISH.

The Reason Why Fire-Proof Buildings Burn.

Any one who has ever witnessed the rapid spread of a great fire may well doubt the resistance of a steel building guarded only with a thin veneer of non-heat-conducting material.

The instances of the complete destruction of so-called fire proof factories, store houses, wheat elevators and other buildings composed mainly of iron and brick are so numerous, as to have given underwriters a profound distrust of iron or steel, unless so thickly encased with non heat conducting material as not to be liable to be heated to the point of dangerous expansion.

It thus happens that one often finds in the papers a record of the complete destruction by fire of what had been called either a fire-proof building or a slow-burning building free from hollow spaces and free from many of the faults which infest the common examples of combustible architecture.

It therefore follows that the true question of safety does not consist wholly either in limiting the height, or the number of stories, or the width and length of floor areas. Each of these elements must be dealt with, in connection with the method of finishing, and even then the final consideration must be given to the proposed use of contents of such buildings.

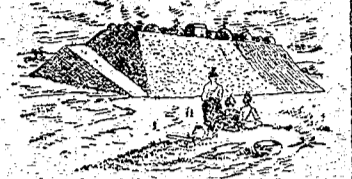

The Rajah of Sikkim encountered a Snow Storm and Came to Grief. The Rajah of Sikkim owes political allegiance to the government of India, but his heart is with the Grand Lama of Tibet, according to the New York Sun, and he is finding it exceedingly difficult to serve two masters.

The anchor thus lost on the night of August 2, 1498, nearly 400 years ago, from one of the ships of Columbus, off the southwest extremity of the Island of Trinidad (Point Arenas, as Columbus named the spot, vide Irving) has recently been recovered by Senor Argostino, the gentleman who now owns the point of land in question.

As would be expected from the age of this relic, it is an anchor in the simplest form of expression. The shaft is round and 8 feet 9 inches in length. At the head of the shaft is a round ring nearly a foot in diameter to which the cable was fastened.

There is not a particle of doubt, therefore, at the end of the rigid inquiry that has been made that the anchor recently found by Senor Argostino is really and truly the lost anchor of Columbus.

A German has invented an incandescent lamp apparatus for showing the interior of boilers while under steam. Waterproof cellulose paper, of one and two colors, is being introduced by a German firm for tablecloths, book back, temporary covers for roof, etc.

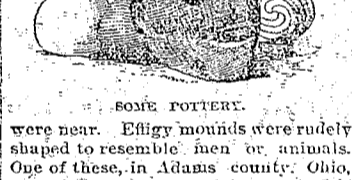

ETOWA MOUND.

as live to-day in a single city like Boston or Cincinnati. Far away to the southward, where corn grew with little care and where bananas and other tropical fruits were native, there were large villages in Mexico and Yucatan, and even on the dry plains of Arizona and New Mexico; but with these exceptions America might be called "an empty continent—a desert land awaiting its inhabitants."

The central part of America had not always been so lonely. The country drained by the Mississippi and the Great Lakes bears traces of a large population the white men found there. These little known people are called Mound Builders, from the huge piles of earth which they raised for various purposes.

Many of these mounds were for purposes of burial. We learn something of the habits of the people from the ornaments of copper, stone and shell which they buried with the dead. Other mounds were bases of watch-towers and signal stations; some were fortresses, and their angles show much skill in the art of defense.

SOME POTTERY.

Knives, chisels, and axes of flint and copper; carved pipes, beads and bracelets; vases of polished and painted earthenware have been found in the mounds, and some of them are of fine workmanship. Smoothly hatched plates of copper are stamped with figures of men and birds, which, though rude to our notions, show some idea of art.

Here they found the aloë and other plants that were strange to them, but which we know to be Mexican. The savages on either side of Bering Strait meet every year to barter their fish and furs. Many from Asia may have wandered southward along the coast.

Eric the Red, an Icelandic chief, discovered Greenland, and planted a colony on its southwest shore. This became a thrifty settlement through its trade with the Esquimaux, and paid a yearly tribute to the pope. One of Eric's comrades, driven out of his way

by a storm, saw the mainland of North America stretching far away to the southwest. In A. D. 1000, Eric's son, Leif the Fortunate, undertook, with thirty-five brave companions, to examine this more fertile and attractive shore. They saw the flat rocks of Newfoundland,

COLUMBUS'S LOST ANCHOR.

The Oldest Relic in Existence of the Great Navigator.

On the night of the 2d of August, 1498, the little fleet of Christopher Columbus, the discoverer of America, he being then upon his third voyage, lay at anchor just off the southwest point of the Island of Trinidad, off the mainland of South America, which he had seen that day for the first time.

The Rajah of Sikkim encountered a Snow Storm and Came to Grief. The Rajah of Sikkim owes political allegiance to the government of India, but his heart is with the Grand Lama of Tibet, according to the New York Sun, and he is finding it exceedingly difficult to serve two masters.

The anchor thus lost on the night of August 2, 1498, nearly 400 years ago, from one of the ships of Columbus, off the southwest extremity of the Island of Trinidad (Point Arenas, as Columbus named the spot, vide Irving) has recently been recovered by Senor Argostino, the gentleman who now owns the point of land in question.

As would be expected from the age of this relic, it is an anchor in the simplest form of expression. The shaft is round and 8 feet 9 inches in length. At the head of the shaft is a round ring nearly a foot in diameter to which the cable was fastened.

There is not a particle of doubt, therefore, at the end of the rigid inquiry that has been made that the anchor recently found by Senor Argostino is really and truly the lost anchor of Columbus.

A German has invented an incandescent lamp apparatus for showing the interior of boilers while under steam. Waterproof cellulose paper, of one and two colors, is being introduced by a German firm for tablecloths, book back, temporary covers for roof, etc.

DRESS MAKING. Mrs. F. F. Springer is prepared to do all kinds of Dress making at her rooms in the Kellogg Block. Satisfaction guaranteed.

There is an old saying that there is "nothing new under the sun." We want to tell you that there is something new, and it's very new, too. It is the new way, to the Summer Resorts, Petoskey, Bay View and Charlevoix, and one that will prove to be as popular a means of reaching them, as the places are popular in themselves. From all parts of the country come every year—the number increasing as the resorts become better known—a throng of tourists, some bent on pleasure only, and going from one resort to another, enjoying to the utmost the pleasures afforded by each. Others go to some favored place, spending the hot months in quiet rest and regaining the health and strength impaired by too close attention to business and the cares of every day life.

But everybody knows of the advantages to be derived from a vacation spent among the woods and lakes of Northern Michigan, and our object now is to tell you of the "New Way" to reach them. The extension of the popular CINCINNATI & WEST MICHIGAN RAILWAY is now completed, the new line running from Traverse City, through Charlevoix, to Petoskey and Bay View, a distance of seventy-five miles through magnificent forests and along the shores of beautiful lakes and rivers. Passing directly in front of the two resorts of Charlevoix (one of the most delightful places for a summer home of the many in that region), the road, a few miles further on, strikes the shore of little Traverse Bay, which, almost at the water's edge, it follows into Petoskey and Bay View.

Through train service did commence via the new route on June 26, and with the excellent service and fast time, which will be a special feature, "The New Way" cannot fail to prove a popular one with travelers.

Through parlor and sleeping cars are run from Chicago via the WEST MICHIGAN and from Detroit via the other line of this system, the DETROIT, LANSING & NORTHERN R. R., to Grand Rapids, thence via the C. & W. M. R. R. to Petoskey, through Traverse City and Charlevoix.

Try the "New Way" this year, and be convinced that it is a good one. GEO. DEHAVEN, Gen'l Passenger Agent.

LOCAL GLEANINGS.

Things Said and Did in the Liveliest
And Prettiest Village in Michigan.
When in Detroit you will not miss it if you stop at the Wayne hotel. You will be well and courteously cared for.
Manager Brown of the ball club says
he will play the Northville corner barn a benefit game in the near future.
A good scheme.
Union services at the M. E. church
Sunday evening. These Sunday evening union services will be continued
through the summer months.
Last week must have been a great visiting week for Ann Arbor. The Courier puts up four columns of 'em
and the half was not told.
Cleveland and baby Ruff; Harrison and baby McKee. Take your choice.
Farmingington Enterprise. The advantage is all with Atlee. He stands a chance of wearing grandpa's hat some day; Ruth never.
The band boys are getting in shape
to play on the streets again evenings.
The boys also need some cash with which to put themselves in shape
again and if you are called upon, please respond as generously as the occasion
will permit.
Some suggest that now would be a good time to buy the mill pond of M.
Gillespie, fill it up, and have the Refrigerator company build the new factory there. It looks quite possible and if it could be accomplished it would be killing two large birds with one stone.
We neglected to mention before that Oscar Peicy had returned from Northville, where he has been taking the gold cure treatment. He considers himself completely cured of the liquor habit, and could not, if he would, drink
a glass of liquor. Milford Times.
That's the way we fix 'em all up that come here.
In speaking of the Walled-Lake celebration last week we were negligent enough to entirely forget mentioning
the oration delivered by Northville's popular orator, Rev. W. T. Jaquess.
Life all of Mr. Jaquess' remarks, they were exceedingly good and thoroughly patriotic eliciting much applause
from the crowd.
The papers all over the state are telling how Prince Michael sold his hair
and whiskers to Wonderland, Detroit, for $750. The fact of the matter is Wonderland did not pay a cent for them
but they were presented to Manager
Moore by Warden Davis of the state prison. Wonderland now has a very correct wax figure of the Prince with his own hair and whiskers and another
as he appears since being shorn.
About $2,000 would accomplish
all the Refrigerator company ask for.
The majority of our people are in favor of it. Some suggest it be raised by popular subscription, while others favor a direct taxation. The latter would seemingly be the proper course,
as in that case the expense would fall alike on all, and inasmuch as every man, woman and child in the village would receive a benefit, all should share alike in the expenditure.
Don P. Yerkes one of Michigan's well known athletes and ball players
has been engaged to captain and coach
the Northville ball club the balance of the season. Mr. Yerkes will resume his old position in the box and with his past reputation in view there is no particular reason now apparent why Northville should lose another game.
The citizens, business men particularly have subscribed $100 towards a reserve fund to back the club the year out should the gate receipts fail to maintain the expense.
The editor of the average country newspaper is generally not only willing but glad to publish anything in the shape of news he can get hold of, and the more he gets the better it suits him and his patrons. But he is neither omnipotent, nor omnipresent; and yet people often think they are intentionally slighted because he does not publish some item that does not come under his observation, but which he would just as cheerfully publish whether it concerned friends or enemies did he only know of it. The moral of the above is, when you know of anything that you think would make your home paper more newsy
and readable just give the editor a tip
and see how quick he will grasp it.
We manufacture Sash, Doors, Blind
Mouldings and all kinds of mill work
York & Tiltson, Northville, Mich.

Another base ball club has been organized.
Ormal King and Luté Elliot have opened a shooting gallery in the south
Opera House store.
Our boys say that it is no trouble at all to beat "Brown's Colts," and they hope for something harder next time.
—Plymouth Mail. We can assure the Plymouth boys that their hopes will be well provided for.
In every community in this broad land of ours there are people who consider that because they pay $1 per year
for their home newspaper, which costs from $1.25 to $1.50 for every copy that is issued, that the publishers are under lasting obligations to them and must run his paper exactly to suit the taste
of each individual.
Ralph Wilkinson, son of Judge Wilkinson, of Detroit, well known in and about Northville, will be candidate for circuit court commissioner at the coming republican convention.
Mr. Wilkinson is a member of the Detroit bar; a popular young man, well-qualified for the position and if nominated will undoubtedly make a victorious canvass.
Messrs. Waterman & Carpenter who have purchased the hardware store
now occupied by Knapp & Yerkes do not expect to occupy the same until next spring. The firm say their present quarters were becoming too small and the change for a larger building was necessitated. Knapp & Yerkes as yet have made no definite arrangements as to where they will move to.
Eleven members of the Northville
wheelmen 'cycled' over to Orchard Lake Tuesday. They were Dr. Burgess, Claude Burgess, M. A. Porter, Geo. Waterman, H. Teichner, Will
Cappell, Swift, Millen, Ed. Simonds,
Ed. Lapshin, Thad Knapp and Eugene Briggs. The boys averaged some nine miles per hour. Five of them went on in to Pontiac while the balance took in the sights at the lake.
The council did a creditable act at their special meeting Saturday night when they placed in the hands of a committee the communication from the Refrigerator company. The committee were Councilmen Swift, Ray-son and Johnson, and they were instructed to confer with the directors and see just what the Refrigerator
company wanted, probable cost, etc.,
and report at the next meeting, July 19.
As will be seen in another column,
the committee, appointed by Council
to confer with the Globe Furniture company regarding the new refrigerator factory, have called a citizens meeting for Monday, July 18. Every citizen, having the interest of Northville at heart should be on hand.
The question of raising a bonus for this new institution, as we said last week, means something. In fact, a great deal more than may appear on the surface to the casual observer, and it behooves every citizen who has the slightest interest in Northville's welfare to put his shoulder to the wheel and help the new enterprise along.
Superstitious people will be surprised to know that on the new silver quarter dollars there are thirteen separate representations of the number thirteen.
It was probably the intention of the designer of the new silver piece to have this unlucky number occur thirteen times, but there are few people who have noticed this fact. There are 13 stars; 13 letters in the scroll head in the eagles' beak; 13 marginal feathers
in each wing; 13 tail feathers; 13 parallel lines in the shield; 13 horizontal bars; 13 arrow heads in one foot; 13
leaves on the branch in the other foot;
and 13 letters in the words "quarter dollar." Do not carry one of the unlucky coins around in your pocket, but bring it to this office and get the RE-CORD for at least three months.
Every year that it is published the local newspaper gives from 5 to 20 columns free for the sole benefit of the town in which it is located. No other agency can, or even offers, to tax itself to such an extent. The publisher of a local newspaper, in proportion to his means, does more for his own town as a rule than any other ten men, and in all fairness, man to man, he ought to be supported not because you happen to like him or admire his writings, but because his paper is the best investment the town can make. It may not be brilliant or crowded with great thoughts, but financially it is more beneficial to the town than the preacher or the teacher. Now we are not referring to the RECORD this time at all.
We have in mind simply the newspapers of other towns outside of Northville. The RECORD "cuts no figure."

The Eureka Mill men at Wyandotte
are out on a strike.
There are twenty-one patients here
at the Yamall Gold cure and six more new ones will arrive Saturday.
Dr. Tweedale of Salem who adver-

RECORD two weeks ago has had the same returned to him.
Ambler's hall is undergoing a lot of repairs in the way of paint and paper,
and, when complete, the societies will feel quite proud of their quarters again.
Under the present management the RECORD has never mentioned a drunk or fight in this village. In fact there has been but little call for it, but of late, brawls and drunken men staggering along the streets, or lying in the cutters, is getting so common that it leads one to almost remark, "is this Northville?"
The laying of the water works pipes
about the village is about completed.
The well at the springs is finished and the pipes are being laid from there to the reservoir. The work on the reservoir is progressing very slow, no work
having been done on it for some time, but when they get at it again it will soon be in readiness.

NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN

It is worth a good deal to us to get out of the hackneyed lines of life. But when we seek the novel we are least likely to find it. Our happiest experiences come unexpectedly.

The public need a little education. And then in the amenities of life as applied to the over-taxed preacher. It is the object of this paragraph to suggest a first lesson, viz., that the preacher is human and therefore entitled to as much consideration as the rest of humanity.

In the last ten years Canada spent $2,900,000 in bringing over 895,000 immigrants from Europe. In the same time the increase in the population of the Dominion has been only 504,000.

It is a curious fact in modern progress that no sooner does it achieve a great victory in any direction than nature or other influence in some way lessens the completeness of the triumph.

When the schoolmaster has done with us, when we have played our last "match game" of intercollegiate base ball, when we have done what faculty we can to the valves of our hearts in a struggle to outrow a rival crew, we enter upon life as a new contest for supremacy.

The steady increase of the French-Canadians in the rural districts of New England, and in our great manufacturing centers, has been constantly noted in recent years.

A new theory obtains among some church people that the life of a preacher is a perpetual picnic that he lives the typical life of a Sybarite. No theory can be further from the fact than this theory when applied to the life of a man of the cloth and of a conscience.

The spirit of discontent may or may not have been born in us—but it is bred in us of certainty at every step of our education. Our schoolmasters write in our copy-books that "contentment is bitter than wealth."

THE TOUCHING STORY OF HERBERT BECKWITH.

How Lincoln Came to Overrule the Verdict of a Court-Martial—Should Feel Like a Murderer if I Approved It.

They were speaking at one of the camp fires by a Grand Army post in New York city, says the Chicago Times of the offense which President Lincoln, sometimes gave to Secretary Stanton and the generals by the clemency which he showed to those sentenced by court-martial to the death penalty.

"And yet," said one grizzled veteran, "Lincoln seldom made a mistake, in showing this clemency. A 17-year-old boy named Herbert Beckwith, went from the high school of his native town into one of the New York regiments early in the war. He came of an excellent family. His father was a warm friend of Connecticut's war governor, Buckingham, and he reluctantly let the boy go into the army, feeling that he had done his share as an elder brother was one of the first to respond to Lincoln's call."

Young Beckwith pleaded so hard that his father gave him his blessing and told him to be a brave soldier, and always to bear in mind amid the temptations of the camp the lessons he had received in his home from childhood. Beckwith, though a mere lad, was a model soldier never shirking and gaining the favor of his officers and the friendship of his companions.

There had been fighting steadily for four or five days in the Chickahominy swamps and for two nights Beckwith had had scarcely any sleep. One night he did not sleep at all, and the next not more than two hours. On the third night he was on picket duty, but was so utterly fatigued that he could scarcely see when placed on post. At midnight when the relief came, the officer of the guard saw Beckwith standing motionless. The customary challenge was not sent by the picket. The officer spoke, but there was no response, and approaching Beckwith he called again without receiving any answer. Then he roughly shook the picket, who in a dazed and bewildered sort of way came to his senses and then it was discovered that Beckwith had been sleeping upon post. He was standing perfectly erect, but leaning slightly upon his gun, the butt of which was placed between his feet.

Of course, there had to be a court-martial. Beckwith, when called upon to make defense, said that when he went upon the post he found that he was to use his expression, almost killed with sleep. To keep awake he walked rapidly back and forth pinched himself, and suffered every terror and horror lest he should succumb to his drowsiness. At times it seemed as though he would fall. At last he heard what he thought was a great noise, and stopped to listen, and that was the last he remembered until he was awakened by the corporal of the guard. He said that he must have fallen asleep as suddenly as though he had become unconscious by a blow. He did not plead for mercy, but simply told that story, and every one who heard it knew he told the truth.

But there was no help for him. He had been caught sleeping on post and in the face of the enemy and he was convicted and sentenced to be shot. It was plain that the officers, although they appeared to be stern, would be secretly rejoiced if the president failed to approve the sentence, and one or two of Beckwith's friends, getting brief leave of absence, went to the nearest telegraph station and sent a message to his father, stating that Herbert had been court-martialed and would be shot as soon as the president approved the sentence. Within an hour Mr. Beckwith was closeted with Governor Buckingham and within two hours the governor, laying aside his great cares was on his way to Washington. He saw President Lincoln, told him that Herbert had been a Sunday school scholar of his, a boy who was as true as steel and insisted that there must be some extenuating circumstances. Lincoln was very much affected, and the next day when he received the report of the court-martial and read also a summary of young Beckwith's statement, he turned to Buckingham with tears in his eyes and said: "Governor, I should feel like a murderer if I approved this sentence on these papers. I will not approve it, but I will send for some one who knows the facts so that I can learn more about it." Three days later Beckwith, who was in the guard house, was called upon by an officer, who was a friend, who simply said: "Herbert, the president has pardoned you. Go back to your company and report yourself."

During the rest of the peninsula campaign—and especially at the battles of Antietam and Gettysburg—Young Beckwith showed himself so good a soldier that he was promoted. At Fredericksburg he displayed remarkable courage. In the Chancellorsville campaign he was taken prisoner and was removed to Andersonville, where he remained nine months. Exchanged at the end of that time, he, with other living skeletons, was brought North by transport and placed in the hospital at Baltimore. His reason was deteriorated. He weighed not over ninety pounds, although he weighed 150 when he went into the army, and the surgeons said the poor fellow would die, for his vitality had been sapped. One morning the nurse and one or two of his family friends who were with him trying to coax him back to life were amazed to see him open his eyes with a glance of consciousness in them. He asked in a whisper where he was and they told him, and a smile played on his lips as though he was rejoiced to be under the old flag again. "He made a sign and the nurse bending over him, heard him whisper. "Tell me where I can see the flag," and they drew his cot near a window, through which he could see the camp flag floating upon its staff. A look of unutterable joy came over the boy's face, seeing which one of the attendants put a little flag in his hands. Beckwith could not speak, but he tenderly drew the flag to his lips, there was a convulsion of sob or sigh, and when they looked in his eyes again they saw that he had passed away, the flag for which he had fought pressed caressingly to his face.

President Lincoln was told of this incident afterwards, and it affected him so greatly that he could not control himself and stepped from the library into an adjoining room for a few minutes. When he came back there were traces of tears on his face."

ALLIGATORS.

How They Live and Thrive in South America.

Until a short time ago, there lived in New York city a physician who had spent many years in South America, and who was well informed in natural history. His great delight was to tell stories about animals. Some of them are given here. "While exceedingly rich in vegetation, South America is poor in the higher forms of animal life," said he. "But although the higher animals are scarce, birds and insects are numerous, and the reptiles especially are large and plentiful. Of the reptiles, the alligator is one of the most disliked. That terrible creature feeds on fish, carrion and animals which it is successful enough to surprise as they come to drink at the water's edge. It also frequently falls a victim, and for that reason the natives of places where the alligator is common have devised various methods for killing it. There was a pond near where I once stayed, where the wild cattle went in, besides to drink, and their hunters used to lay in wait for them. One day one of the hunters, going into the water, came across an alligator, which seized him by the knee. He began to call for help, but his comrades instead of coming to his rescue, ran away, thinking he had fallen into the hands of the hostile natives. The alligator had not got a good hold of his knee, but would not let go while the man struggled. The hunter had presence of mind enough, however, to become still and pretend that he was dead; whereupon the alligator loosened his hold to take a new and secure one. When it did so the man pulled away his knee and interposed his gun, which the creature at once seized so savagely and firmly that it was jerked out of the man's hands.

At another time a small Indian village in which I was staying was periodically terrorized by one of its inhabitants being carried off by a large alligator. The natives became worked up to such a pitch of excitement that it was resolved to kill the terrible visitor at any cost. Accordingly, two powerful men were chosen to watch for it and destroy it. One night they saw a monster alligator rise out of the river and climb on a rock to rest. Forgetting all about danger, they waded in the river until they were only a short distance away from it, when they took true aim and thrust two harpoons into its body. After a struggle they killed that terror of the village. From the tip of his nose to the end of his tail, he measured fifteen feet, being one of the largest ever slain. The two men who killed him were, of course, the heroes of the hour.

The natives in some parts of South America are bold and reckless enough to give them some chance of fighting the alligator in the water. They dive under it and plunge a long dagger into its belly, and after a few struggles the hated monster turns over on its back and dies.

NEW TREASURY NOTES.

Perhaps the principal object of the revision of the United States paper money is to make the backs of the notes more open—that is, less covered with the engraving, so that the silk fibres shall be more distinctly visible. The distinctive paper now in use no longer has the two threads of silk running longitudinally through the note, says the Paper World, but in their place are two stripes, each half an inch wide or so, of short red and blue silk fibres scattered thickly in the paper, in such manner that they show only on the reverse of the bill. These two fiber stripes practically divide the note into three sections of about equal size, and this feature of the design is held to be an almost absolute safeguard against successful counterfeiting. But that is only one of several devices employed to insure the inviolability of the currency.

Each note has an entirely separate design, the work of which is so open as to show readily any error of an attempted counterfeit, and no portion of the design is repeated on the same note, so that no small part could be engraved by a skillful operator and then duplicated by mechanical processes to fill any amount of space, as has been the case with some of the previous "paper money" of the government.

The geometrical lathe work of the new designs is said to be the most exquisite and complicated ever executed, and such as to utterly baffle any attempt at its illicit reproduction. Don't Doubt. Jake—Believe me, darling, I am sincere when I tell you you are the prettiest and sweetest girl I ever saw. Cora (quickly)—Oh, I know you are.

THE WRONG RUSTIC.

Narrow Escape of a Drummer Who Liked Amusement.

On a recent trip through Ohio a peculiar incident occurred, which I think will bear telling, remarks a writer in the New York Recorder. A fellow-drummer, who represents a Chicago house, and myself were en route for Cleveland, and at a station at which our train stopped among the idlers and sightseers that were congregated about the depot was a tall, hulking fellow with his trousers in his boot tops and his hands thrust deep into his pockets. Just as our train was ready to start my companion thrust his head out of the window and addressing the rustic in a casual, friendly way, said: "How far is it up to the farm?" "What's that?" said the rustic. "I say, what's the name of this town?" "Oh, this is Chenworth."

Just then our train began moving away from the station, and the drummer to have some fun with the countryman, yelled at him: "You're a fool, and you don't know beans!" "Who's a fool?" exclaimed Mr. Rustic. "You are," retorted the drummer, shaking his fist at him, as the train disappeared from the station, then closed the window and joined in the laugh caused by his rencontre. Just then the train came to a stop and commenced backing up toward the depot. My drummer friend suddenly realized that his rustic acquaintance might want to renew the subject lately under discussion, and amid the roars of laughter from every man in the "smoker" made a break for the baggage car, and none too soon for the moment the train came to a standstill on a siding; to allow a west-bound train to pass, it rushed the excited rustic with "blood in his eyes."

"Where is he?" he exclaimed. "Show me the fellow that says I'm a fool," looking right and left in search of the drummer. "I'll bear his heart out and feed it to the dogs." Just then the west-bound train arrived and our train commenced to move forward again, and to avoid being carried away our enraged rustic was obliged to hastily leave without the heart of the hiding drummer, who soon came back into the car, amid the jeers and jibes of his fellow-travelers. At the next stop our joking drummer completely ignored the gaping rustics at the station and diligently pursued a Recorder three days old which he had found in his grip.

A Discussed Burglar. Dr. J. Ch. Bohlmann, of St. Louis, received a visit from an enterprising burglar a few nights ago. He wandered all night through the entire residence, but was apparently unable to find much of value. But when Dr. Bohlmann the next morning went into his office on the first floor he found that the burglar had left a note for him written on the slate where the physician's patients leave their calls. It was a very plain and frank communication, and concluded with the following indignant expressions: "Not a thing worth lugging away! D—all the doctors!"

What is Known About Fish. Play the great naturalist, who lived about the time of Christ, reckoned the whole number of known species of fish at ninety-four. Linnaeus, the great Swedish investigator of the eighteenth century, could classify 178, and he is known to have been the greatest ichthyologist of the age in which he lived. The progress made in that particular branch since the time of Linnaeus seems all the more wonderful for now, since the expedition of the Challenger and others, 1,300 species show up in the catalogues of the fish specialists!

An Electric Shock. "Why don't you build your nest on the top of a telegraph pole?" asked the blue jay. "Because it would be too shocking," laughed the wren, as he flew away.—Harper's Young People.

FUN AND FOLLY.

Mrs. Snaggs—"Easter is very generally observed nowadays." Snaggs—"Yes, even the children celebrate it extensively."

Rev. Mr. Dryadust—"And, my hearers, Joseph served in the courts of Pharaoh." Lawze Tenays (waking up)—"What's the score?"

Beaver—"Robinson tells me that his salary has been reduced." Melton—"For what cause?" Beaver—"He has just been taken into the firm."

"Just been studying Burke's Peerage." "Well, what did you find out?" "It struck me that the aristocracy travels under an awful lot of aliases."

Teacher—"What is your name, little boy?" New Kid—Jonah Cleero Tarbox." Teacher—"What do your playmates call you?" New Kid—"Pants."

Cunso—"So Mrs. Bunting is a Daughter of the Revolution; is she?" Mrs. Cunso—"Yes, why?" Cunso—"To me she looks old enough to be the mother of it."

TALMAGE IN EUROPE.

HAVING A VERY BUSY SEASON IN LONDON.

Churches of England Not Large Enough for America's Great Divine—A Thrilling Sermon on the Resurrection of Mankind.

London, Eng., July 10, 1882.—Dr. Talmage is spending a very busy season in England. Not only in the London churches, but in the provinces, enormous crowds have gathered to hear the eloquent American preacher. The great Shoreditch Tabernacle in the East of London, where Rev. W. Carr preached, was thronged almost to suffocation, and the large Congregational church in the Hackney district could not hold half the people who tried to get into it. Though it was on a Monday evening, that Dr. Talmage preached there. Outside London, the eagerness to hear him has been quite as intense. In Liverpool, Manchester, Nottingham, Crewe and Banbury, no church could be found large enough to accommodate the audiences. And Dr. Talmage preached in the halls in which the great political conventions are held, and the capacity of these was tested to the utmost. Since his arrival, he has preached seven times each week. The sermon selected for publication this week is from the text, Rev. 7: 9-10, "After this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude which no man could count, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb." It is impossible to come in contact with anything grand or beautiful in art, nature or religion, without being profited and elevated. We go into the art gallery, and our soul meets the soul of the painter, and we hear the hum of his forests and the clash of his glaciers, and see the cloud-blossoming of the sky, and the foam-blossoming of the ocean; and we come out, from the gallery better men than when we went in. We go into the concert of music and are lifted into enchantment; for days after, our soul seems to rock with a very tumult of joy, as the sea, after a long stress of weather, rolls and rocks and surges a great while before it comes back to its ordinary calm.

On the same principle it is profitable to think of heaven, and look out upon that landscape of joy and light which St. John depicts: the rivers of gladness, the trees of life, the thrones of power, the comminglings of everlasting love. I wish this morning that I could bring heaven from the list of intangibles, and make it seem to you as it really is—the great fact in all history, the depot of all ages, the parlor of God's universe.

This accords in my text gives a picture of heaven as it is on a holiday. Now if a man came to New York for the first time on the day that Kossuth arrived from Hungary, and he saw the arches lifted, and the flowers, hung in the streets, and he heard the guns booming, he would have been very foolish to suppose that that was the ordinary appearance of the city. While heaven is always grand and always beautiful, I think my text speaks of a gala day in heaven.

It is a time of great celebration—perhaps of the birth or the resurrection of Jesus; perhaps of the downfall of some despotism; perhaps because of the rushing in of the millennium. I know not what, but it does seem to me in reading this passage as if it were a holiday in heaven; "after this I beheld, and lo, a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed in white robes, and palms in their hands, and cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb."

I shall speak to you of the glorified in heaven—their number, their antecedents, their dress, their symbols, and their song. But how shall I begin by telling you of the numbers of those in heaven? I have seen a curious estimate by an ingenious man who calculates how long the world was going to last, and how many people there are in each generation, and then sums up the whole matter, and says he thinks there will be twenty-seven trillions of souls in glory. I have no faith in his estimate. I simply take the plain announcement of the text—it is "a great multitude, which no man can number."

Every few years, in this country we take a census of the population, and it is very easy to tell how many people there are in a city or in a nation, but who shall give the census of the great nation of the saved? It is quite easy to tell how many people there are in different denominations of Christians—how many Baptists, Methodists, Episcopalians and Presbyterians; of all the denominations of Christians we could make an estimate. Suppose they were gathered in one great audience-room; how overwhelming the spectacle! But it would give no idea of the great audience-room of heaven—the multitudes that bow down and that lift up their hosannas. Why, they come from all the chapels, from all the cathedrals, from all sects, from all ages; they who prayed in splendid liturgies, and those who in broken sentences uttered the wish of broken hearts—from Grace church to Sulzer's Bethel, from under the shapeless rafters and from under high-sprung arches—"a great multitude, that no man can number."

My friends, will you join that anthem? Shall we make rehearsal this morning? If we cannot sing that song on earth, we will not be able to sing it in heaven. Can it be that our good friends in that land will walk all through that great throng of which I speak, looking for us and not finding us? Will they come down to the gate and ask if we have passed through, and not find us reported as having come? Will they look through the folios of eternal light and find out names unrecorded? Is all this a representation of a land we shall never see?—of a song we shall never sing?

A Lord of Creation.
Friend! I heard your wife giving you fits again this morning.
Jinks—"That wasn't my wife. That was the servant girl."

William M. Davenport, though blind, owns and operates a 700-acre farm in Leyden, Mass., and is one of the best judges of live stock in the country. He earned his first dollar, sawing wood and threshing, and is now worth from $50,000 to $75,000.

This is good news from Germany. Colonel Murphy has succeeded in inducing the emperor to eat a dodger made of American cornmeal, and our meal is now to be used in the German army. German millers are ordering machinery for grinding maize.

The Canadian government is trying experiments on an extensive scale in the cultivation of trees. At the Central farm, near Ottawa, the seeds of Rocky mountain and European conifers have been liberally sown, and in 1891 175,000 seedlings were transplanted from the beds to be distributed later on to branch farms and private experimenters, who are to send careful reports of progress. Twenty-five gardens along the main line of the Canadian Pacific railway have been supplied from the experimental farms.
