SCORCHED.

That's What One of the Dubuar Factory Buildings Got Monday.

PROMPT ACTIONS SAVED THE DAY.

The Globe Furniture's and Peter Gillespie's New Fire Fighter to the Rescue.

At twenty minutes past twelve Monday noon the engine whistle in the Dubuar factory commenced blowing a fire alarm and three minutes later a stream from the chemical engine was playing on the flames which had just burst from a small two story building adjoining the large Dubuar factory. A moment later an immense stream from the Globe furniture company's and Peter Gillespie's new fire engine, carried from the Gillespie pond through the long hose, was also knocking the life out of the destructive element and what might have been a serious conflagration was soon under control and then extinguished. The building was used as a store room for mouldings above and on the lower floor for a dryer and was nearly filled with lumber. Mr. Dubuar thinks the fire must have caught at the north end from a spark from the engine as no one had occasion to visit that portion of the building that day. Had the wind been blowing from the east or north the whole factory must have been consumed, and had the fire been at a place not reachable by the Globe company's hose the same results must have happened for it is very evident that the chemical engine, though doing all that could be expected of it, could not have successfully combated with the fire. The fire department were on hand with surprising promptness and their training stood them in good stead, and there is no question but when the water-works system gets operation they will be able to cope with almost any conflagration.

The loss will foot up to $200, covered by insurance.

STILL THEY COME.

That's What They're Doing at the Gold Cure.

100 SUCCESSFULLY TREATED.

And New Arrivals are Reported Every Day.

As we predicted from the start, the Yarnall Gold cure is proving a phenomenal success, and though starting under difficulties and with all the opposition of the greatly advertised Keeley system to contend with, it now has as many or more patients as any Mich. institute. Every patient who arrives and is treated here is loud in his praise of Northville and its now famous Gold cure institute.

A patient cured and discharged last week, who by the way is a well known Michigan man having held a number responsible government offices, could not say enough in behalf of the management and treatment of patients. "Why," he said, "they have the formula of all the gold cures there, but they have no use for those that cause mental depression, loss of appetite, weakness, and run down the system. When I came here I supposed the life would be taken out of me from what I had heard of some of the gold cure treatments, but I was agreeably surprised to find none of these objectionable results prevalent in the Yarnall treatment. I lost no sleep; my appetite for food was extra good; my head and eyes lost none of their clearness, and I felt, and was, as strong during my treatment as ever before. The Yarnall treatment is surely the thing after all." The RECORD was personally acquainted with the gentleman and to say that he was highly elated at his cure from the dread disease of liquor habit is but putting it mild.

BOOM! BANG!

The New Refrigerator Factory Stays in Northville.

$2,500 BONUS IS SUBSCRIBED

The Event is Celebrated by the Firing of Cannons.

When you get Northville people once woke up they are inclined to get right to the front in short order. The talk of the town for the past two weeks has been regarding the raising of a $2,500 bonus for the new refrigerator factory according to the proposition submitted by the Globe Furniture company. There was a good representation of the solid, pushing men of the village at the citizens meeting Monday night. J. M. Swift, chairman of the committee, in a few well chosen remarks, set forth the purpose of the meeting, and outlined the benefits which Northville had already derived from its manufacturing interests and which it would likely derive from the advent of the new factory. "Every man, woman and child in Northville," said the Doctor, "cannot help being benefited by it." Some one in the audience asked what assurance the people had of the success of the new institution. "The assurance of its success," he replied "is seemingly unquestionable when we see at the back of it such successful manufacturers and business men as those who have shown their ability in the past and have mainly made Northville what she is today." The doctor was heartily cheered as he took his seat.

J. S. Lapham, treasurer of the Globe Company, made a few remarks and stated that he was now able to say that if the citizens would subscribe a $2,500 bonus instead of furnishing the site, brick and stone, that the company would put up their own factory and they would guarantee to be employing at least fifty men inside of one year in the manufacture of these refrigerators. "And," said Mr. Lapham, "though I shall be a stockholder in the new institution I am with you and will put my name down for $100." Mr. Lapham's remarks were received with much cheering and Mr. Swift called for voluntary subscriptions. T. G. Richardson was the first to respond with $100 and then they kept coming till the sum reached about $700 and then Mr. Lapham remarked that soon as $200 more was subscribed he would put down F. R. Beal's name for $100. Then they kept coming until $2,140 had been reached. The balance required is now in sight and next week we shall publish the name of every subscriber with the amount of his donation. Watch for it. It will be an interesting keep-sake. We had intended to publish all the names this week but the list has grown to such proportions and is yet growing that we found it impossible to accomplish it and get the paper out on time.

THE CARNEGIE STEEL WORKS.

Description of the Immense Plant Just Now of Such Special Interest.

The following description of the great steel works at Homestead, Pa. which has occupied the attention of the whole United States for the past two weeks will no doubt be of much interest to our readers: The great works cover 110 acres. Twelve big buildings and a score of smaller shops and sheds occupy much of the space. Among these are the converting mill, where Bessemer steel is made, the beam mill, the plate mill, the open hearth mill, the finishing department, the 10-inch, the 22-inch, and the 119-inch mill, and the big plate pressing room.

The water for the works comes from the Monongehela river, and is sufficient in quantity to supply a town of 50,000. One hundred and fifty boilers run the great engines the pumps and the steam hammers. Natural gas for fuel is furnished by the company's own wells. About 4,500 men are employed, and the output is four times as big as from the great Krupp works in Germany. The Carnegie company has purchased 100 additional acres, and will add to the works next year. It is already fenced in by heavy barbed wire. The steel works are completely surrounded by a stout board fence 12 feet high, built upon a foundation of slag 5 feet high. The fence is three miles long, and is strung along the top with three strands of barbed wire, so connected with the electric plant that the turning of a switch makes the wires alive with a powerful current of electricity.

Hydrants are stationed at frequent intervals, from which great streams of hot and cold water can be poured. The fence is lighted with electric lights, while powerful search lights make the approaches as clear as day. Four-inch port holes are bored in the fence. The office is fenced in additionally, and a railroad track connects it with the Munnhall station. A bridge connects the office with a building outside the works. The place has been completely fortified, and preparations have been made to accommodate an army of defenders.

A big camera has been set up to take instantaneous pictures in case of riot. On the river front is an armed steel launch.

THE RECORD. AS DRUNK AS A LORD.

F. S. NEAL, Publisher.

NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN

THE most pernicious falsehoods which are dealt in by that supreme receiver, the father of lies, are the falsehoods we tell ourselves. It is one of the vagaries of human nature that a man can sit down with one-half of his brain and deliberately tell lies to the other half, and the other half will innocently believe the lies.

Man is a preying animal and delights in the chase. As a slayer of beasts he has distinguished himself from the days of Nimrod until these later times. As a hunter civilization has not stayed his passion, though it has directed it in other channels. The civilians of cities are not now given to roaming through the fields and forests in search of prey, but their instincts are not at all lessened, and instead of hunting for birds and beasts they now hunt for books and pictures and china and postage stamps. And to say truth if the matter is to be well weighed, the pleasures of the civilians far outgo those of the nimrods.

Small minds cannot resist the inclination of all insignificance to disguise itself. The ass will put on the lion's skin at every opportunity. The monkey strut in the borrowed finery of its master. This tendency does not spring from the instinct of weakness to shield itself by deceptive appearances as the kitten bristles or the cur barks. It is born of the longing of impotent aspiration to be other than it is. No soul is so small but it holds an immeasurable ambition to be larger, and just in proportion that it is incapable of expanding to the limits of its desire will it attempt to counterfeit the unattainable attributes of greatness.

Forget when you close your ledger that your bookkeeper made a mistake which cost you a hundred dollars; forget when you close your safe that the note you hold is yet unpaid, and the money you depend on to meet the claims upon you to-morrow is not there; forget all banish the listless, agreeable, business talk as you leave your friend, and stop from the car at your home, and if you can't carry into it the brightest sunshine don't bring a cloud by harping on failure. Life is worth living if its pleasures are not murdered by the misapplication of things to time and place. Let your out-of-business hours drive the wrinkles from your brow, and strengthen your manhood for the effort to the future will demand.

Are we wise in our straggling, endeavor? Or are we merely the luckless victims of a false system of education which sends us into the battle of life already drunk upon the wine of excited ambition? Is this a "divine discontent" or an internal one? It certainly aids achievement. It has built our railroads, constructed our cities and filled the land full of inventions that contribute to comfort. But has it made us happy, or can it ever do so? Did life mean more for the boy who pushed up on the mountain to his death with the Excelsior flag in hand than it would if he had tarried to love the maiden by the way or to rest his limbs in the freight that appealed to him as he passed?

Every young man intending to follow mercantile pursuits ought to spend some years of preparation in a methodically conducted establishment. If he enters hap hazard, he becomes a haphazard merchant. He should be trained as to values, how to buy and how to sell, and also as to management, from the picking up of the string from the floor of his stores to the banking of his cash. It is a mistake for the mechanic, the professional man or the farmer to rent a store, furnish limited capital and start "the boy" in business, without his having any training or having any knowledge of the quicksands, shoals and rocks of the sea on which he is about to launch his craft.

The families of the North are smaller than those of the South, not so much because of the lack of children, as because the younger members leave home at an early age for school or for work so that they go to swell the aggregate of boarding houses, instead of being counted in the home family. And to this may be added the fact that the young people of the north state when they marry, instead of remaining to increase the family under the parental roof, start out to have a dwelling of their own, even though it is but two rooms in a tenement-house. Whether this is the better way or not, may be a matter for argument. In some cases they become more independent and self-reliant by setting up as a separate household, while in others they might be better to be kept longer under the guidance of those who are older and may be wiser.

OLD TOM GIN CAPTURES A MOUNTAIN GRIZZLY.

An Overland Stage Driver Relieves Himself of an Incredible Story Which Is, at Least, Very Amusing—It Is a Drunkenard.

Way back in the 50s I was temporarily handling the lines for the Sacramento Overland Stage company, and it was over lots of land, I tell you for my route ran through the roughest section of the Sierra Nevada. One night about sunset I was swinging along the rocky trail at a pretty good pace, as I wanted to reach Rabbit Creek before dark, where we changed horses and got supper.

I had three passengers, all men, and for freight carried on a barrel of gin strapped on behind the stage. There was gin for "Red Mike," who ran a free-and-easy at the mining camp at Rabbit Creek. Suddenly my attention was called by one of the passengers to a novel race which was going on down the side of the mountain between a miner and a grizzly bear, with the man about one hundred feet ahead running like a deer. But the bear was gaining rapidly and it seemed that he had him sure, when suddenly the miner turned and darted off in another direction. The grizzly was slow in stopping, but when he did get straightened the way he annihilated distance was a caution to cautionists.

Several times the miner played this trick, and on each occasion failed miserably, for in one direction or another it could be seen he was rapidly tiring, and unless something happened the bear was dead sure to get him. We were wondering what we could do to help the poor fellow, when suddenly the leaders smelled the grizzly. They snorted and pranced and started off on a dead run. I put on the brake and it was all I could do to stop them, and wouldn't have succeeded only the trail was up grade.

Well, when the horses made their jump the barrel of gin broke loose from its fastenings and went tearing down the mountain side toward the man and bear, who were coming along on a dead run. The man saw the barrel coming and avoided it, but not so the grizzly. He stood up on his hind legs and, reaching out his fore paws, grabbed it. The way that barrel rolled him down the mountain would make a coyote laugh. The impromptu journey was brought to a sudden ending by an immense boulder, against which the bear and barrel rolled. The shock separated them, and, strange to say, the barrel stood right side up with the head broken in and only a small portion of the contents was spilled. It says the bear was surprised would be putting it right.

He thought he had his quarry, and when he discovered it was only a barrel his face took on an expression of intense disgust. However, as is natural for a bear, he began to lick his shaggy coat, which had been sprinkled with some of the gin.

The taste was apparently agreeable, as he kept on absorbing the liquor with his rough tongue until, the flavor disappeared. Then he went over and smelled of the barrel. The inspection was undoubtedly highly satisfactory, as he inserted his snout and took a sup, then he took a good long draught, and in less than half an hour that bear was as drunk as a lord.

We watched the proceedings with interest, and after we were satisfied the bear had a jug on we went down, tied him up with ropes, dragged him up the hill and threw him inside the stage. We drove on to Rabbit Creek and sold the drunken grizzly to "Red Mike" for $100, and he chained him up in the corner of his saloon and kept him as a curiosity to draw trade. "Mike" gave him a quart of whisky a day, and after a while he became so docile that his chain was removed. After that for many years he would sleep around the barroom, and when one of the boys would come and ask the house to drink the grizzly would walk up to the bar, stand on his hind legs and wait to be served with a tincupful of whisky. He was a source of great interest, but unfortunately, being attacked with delirium tremens one day, he killed the bartender and a miner with one blow of his powerful paw, and it required twenty Winchesters and about one hundred pounds of lead to cure him of his uncontrollable passion for intoxicants.

FRAUDS IN THE MAILS.

An Illustration of How Dead Beats Sometimes Get Their Work In.

The following story is told by a postoffice inspector now located in the office of Postmaster-General Wanamaker.

The postmaster at Colorado Springs received complaint from the postmaster at Kearney, Neb., that a small box, accompanied by a letter saying that the same contained a fine gold watch, was received empty at Kearney. The sender and addressee were cousins and presumably no fraud was intended. Being at hand I looked into the complaint. I telegraphed to Kearney for the box and letter, and upon receiving them put my own watch—an ordinary gold watch in the box and weighed it. The package then was deficient in postage, and upon weighing the box empty it had on it just postage enough to cover it. This was very good evidence that the box was mailed empty, especially so as the box was registered, and postmasters are required to see that registered packages are fully prepaid. There would naturally be about about a man intending to send a fine gold watch by mail, yet such things are too often done. I then called on the sender, who strongly protested that he had enclosed the watch; and his wife swore she saw him do it, and wanted to call in several neighbors to corroborate her. They protested so much and were so certain that I knew very well that the watch had been intentionally withheld. So I told the man that the postage was just enough to cover the mailing of an empty box. He replied, "That may be, but some of the stamps fell off on the way. I remember very well putting on more stamps."

I asked him, "What amount?" and he answered, after figuring mentally a minute, "Sixteen cents."

"Yes," added his wife, "I remember Charley put on seventeen cents, because he came home and told me the postmaster gave him eight cents change for a quarter. I got the quarter out of my bureau—see it in there?—and I've got the eight cents now somewhere. If you want to see 'em I'll get 'em for you."

"But," I suggested, "was your watch a very heavy extra thick silver case watch, like railroad men carry, or about like mine?"

"Oh, thinner than yours—a light Swiss watch."

"But the box and my watch would only take fourteen cents and yours would have taken no more postage."

"Oh, that's all right, because now I come to think of it had a jump fall with the clerk, and told him to put on three cents extra so it would go all right. That's the way it was."

"Well, then, come with me and we'll see this clerk about it," I said. He held off awhile, but went to the postoffice, and none of the clerks was "the clerk." While he was talking with the postmaster I drew up a letter to the district attorney, purporting to enclose the box and letter as evidence for him to prosecute the sender for fraudulent use of the mails, but the man still held out doggedly and went home. I was engaged on some other matters until late that evening, and when I went to dinner "Charley" had weakened and was anxiously awaiting me with the watch in his hand, as I thought probably he would be. It was his care to see and I had it duly forwarded to the owner at Kearney.

HIS HORSE SAVED HIM.

A Young Hunter Tumbles on a Den of Bears and Has a Tussle for Life.

A young huntsman of Helena, Mont., was following the upper course of the Milk River and came suddenly face to face with a bear. He brought his rifle to his shoulder, took careful aim and shot the bear dead. The next moment a second bear appeared from a rocky den. The young hunter again made a successful shot. To his surprise a third bear came out of the den. He killed this one also, and before he had time to move from the spot bruin No. 4 appeared. It was exciting sport, to be sure, but there were more bears than he cared to see at one time. However, he made a good shot and bruin tumbled over, making four dead bears.

While the huntsman stood watching his game a fifth bear, larger than any of the previous ones, came out of the den and rushed forward. The young man fired, but missed, and before he could reload the infuriated beast was upon him. One blow of the huge paw sent the gun flying from his grasp, but he quickly drew his hunting knife and wounded bruin in the neck. In doing this he received a severe squeeze from the brute and a fearful bite on the shoulder. Then he lost consciousness. When he recovered his sense his horse was between him and the bear. The horse was kicking viciously and bruin was making but feeble resistance, and soon lumbered off into the brush. The hunter was badly shaken up, and the wound in his shoulder was exceedingly painful. With difficulty he mounted his horse, which was quite unharmed, and rode to a place of shelter a few miles further on, where his injuries received attention and his game was secured.

Black Looking-Glasses.

Black glass was once used for mirrors, as well as transparent glass with some black substance on the back. It is related that the Spaniards found mirrors of polished black stone, both convex and concave, among the natives of South America.

SAD TALE OF POOR JAKE.

AS A FIGHTING GOAT HE HAD FEW EQUALS.

He Brought to These Every Animal of the Farm—When He Tackled Bruin, He Found Himself Very Much Out-Classed.

Fentmore C. Kase, of Racket Creek Penn., owned a goat until recently that bossed every animal on the place for more than four years, according to the New York Sun. His name was Jake, and he was so pugnacious that every dog in the neighborhood feared him. Jake made Mr. Kase's cattle and sheep get out of the way, drove the hogs into the yard whenever they broke out and kept the public highway through Mr. Kase's farm clear of stray cows, hogs and geese. Every time Jake spied a stray cow in the road he ran up to her, butted her legs and sent her cantering homeward, and he tackled colts and horses in the same way.

Last winter Mr. Kase bought a large long-wool ram, and put him in his flock of sheep. Jake pitched into the ram right away, and the big newcomer instead of allowing the cross old goat to boss him around as the other sheep did, butted Jake in the head and knocked him end over end. The way the ram stood up for himself seemed to puzzle Jake at first. He immediately retired to a corner in the barnyard, where he shook himself for several minutes and appeared to be in deep thought. He soon tackled the ram again, and the result was the same. For a day or so Jake brooded over his defeat and behaved himself better than he had done in three years. He was not at all pugnacious during that time, and Mr. Kase hoped that he had been broken of his way of leading it over the other animals on the farm.

But the goat's fighting nature was not conquered by a good feat. Jake was contriving how to get even with the big ram, and one day, when the ram wasn't on his guard, the goat butted him in the side and keeled him over in the snow. Then Jake stamped on the ram and hooked out a tuft of his wool, and the ram jumped up and butted Jake all over the yard. A day or two later the goat pitched into the ram again, and they had a lively fight until Mr. Kase parted them. Jake gave battle to the ram nearly every day after that, and by spring he drove the ram around the place as he did the rest of the sheep. Jake was master of all the animals on the farm until one afternoon in November, when he met his match in a piece of woods where Mr. Kase was cutting hoop poles.

The goat had followed him into the woods, and all at once Mr. Kase saw Jake stamping on something in the bushes. In a moment the goat came bleating out of the brush, as though he had been hurt and ran toward Mr. Kase, who saw at a glance that Jake had been jumping on a live porcupine, for the little creature's quills were sticking in his nose and fore-legs. Jake was so angry that he turned back and sprang upon the porcupine again before Mr. Kase could prevent him. He got more quills in his legs, and by that time he was so badly whipped that he legged it for home. Mr. Kase pulled the quills out and for two weeks Jake nursed his wounds and didn't offer to raid the other farm animals. One Wednesday recently Mr. Kase set a bear trap in a Tamarack swamp at the north end of his farm. The next morning he shouldered his rifle and tramped to the swamp to see whether a bear had been caught.

The goat was at his heels when he reached the edge of the swamp, and a little further on he saw a bear beating down the bushes and tearing about with one of its forefeet in the trap. Jake spied the bear about as soon as Mr. Kase did, and giving a grunt he cantered towards it. Mr. Kase stayed back to see if Jake would dare to go near the enraged bear, and while he was watching Jake danced up to the bear and butted it in the rump as though he meant to drive it out of the swamp. The bear was wild with rage and pain, and in a twinkling it swung around and knocked the goat's horns loose with one sweep of its paw. Jake began to bleat and before Mr. Kase had time to shoot the bear, grabbed the goat in its paw and crushed the life out of him. Mr. Kase then blazed away at the bear, firing three bullets into it before he killed it. Poor Jake was in the bear's clutches when Mr. Kase approached the lifeless brute, and nearly all his bones were broken.

Fought to a Finish.

"May I have the pleasure of your company to the dance this evening, Miss De Lightful?" asked young Featherhead of a visiting young lady. "I am engaged this evening—so sorry," she murmured.

"Then I will request the privilege of taking you to the theater to-morrow evening?" "I am engaged every evening this week," she said with a smile of sisterly sympathy.

"Oh, then I presume you will be married on Sunday," he retorted, and the conversation was wound up.

Getting His Eyes Opened.

Jim Doollittle lately married a Fifth-avenue society lady, and some rumors of an impending divorce are already afloat. He complains that his wife has a very bad temper, and flirts with Tom, Dick and Harry. "When did you first get acquainted with your wife?" asked a friend. "I have known her a good while, but I didn't get really acquainted with her until after we were married," replied Jim, with a sigh.—Texas Sitings.

TALMAGE ABROAD

A THRILLING SERMON FROM "ALL ARE YOURS."

The Vicissitudes of Life, So Far as They Have Religious Front—Are in the Right of the Christian—Greeted by Thousands.

LONDON, England, July 17, 1892.—Dr. Talmage's preaching tour in England has been a continuous series of unprecedented successes. The sermon selected for this week is entitled "Our Possessions," from I. Corinthians 3:22: "All are yours."

The impression is abroad that religion puts a man on short allowance; that when the ship sailing heavenward comes to the shining wharf, it will be found out that all the passengers had the hardest kind of sea-fare; that the soldiers in Christ's army march most of the time with an empty haversack; in a word, that only those people have a good time in this world who take upon themselves no religious obligation.

I want to-day to find out whether this is so, and I am going to take account of stock; I am going to show what are the Christian's liabilities, and what is his income, and what are his warrants, debts, and what are his bonds and mortgages, and I shall find out before I finish just how much he is worth, and I shall spread before you the balance-sheet in time to warn you all against the religion of Jesus Christ, if, indeed, it be a failure, and in time for you all to accept it, if indeed it be a success. I turn first to the assets, and I find there what seems to be a roll of government securities—the Empire of Heaven, promising all things to the possessor. The three small words of my text are a warranted deed to the whole universe when it says, "All are yours."

In making an inventory of the Christian's possessions, I remark, in the first place, that he owns this world. My text implies it, and the preceding verse asserts it—"Whether Earth or Apollo, or Cephus or the World." Now, it would be an absurd thing to suppose that God would give to strangers privileges and advantages which he would deny his own children. If you have a large park, a grand mansion, beautiful fountains, stabling deer, and statuary, to whom will you give the first right to all these possessions? To outsiders? No, to your own children. You will say, "It will be very well for outsiders to come in and walk these paths and enjoy this landscape; but the first right to my house, and the first right to my statuary, the first right to my gardens, shall be in the possession of my own children."

Now, this world is God's park, and while he allows those who are not his children and who refuse his authority the privilege of walking through the gardens, the possession of all this grandeur of park and mansion is in the right of the Christian—the flowers, the diamonds, the silver, the gold, the morning, the bright, the evening shadow. The Christian may not have the title-deed to one acre of land as recorded in the clerk's office, he may never have paid one dollar of taxes; but he can go up on a mountain and look off upon fifty miles of grain field and say, "All this is mine; my father gave it to me." "All are yours."

A lawyer is sometimes required to search titles, and the client who thinks he has a good right to an estate puts the papers in his hands, and the lawyer goes into the public records, and finds everything right for three or four or five years back; but after a while he comes to a break in the title, to a defect, to a diversion of the property; so he finds out that the man who supposed he owned it owns not an acre of the ground, while somebody else has the full right to the entire estate. Now, I examine the title to all earthly possessions. I go back a little way, and I find that men of the world—bad men, selfish men, wicked men—think they have a right to all these possessions; but I go further back, and I trace the title from year to year, and from century to century, until I find the whole right vested in God. Now, to whom did he give it? To his own children! "All are yours?"

The simple fact is, that in the last days of the world all the architecture, all the cities, all the mountains, all the villages will be in the possession of the Church of Christ. The meek shall inherit the earth. Ships of Tarshish shall bring presents. The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof. "All are yours."

"But," you say, "what satisfaction is there in that when I haven't possession of them?" These things will come before the Supreme Judge of the Universe, and he will regulate the title, and he will eject these squatters upon the property that does not belong to them, and it shall be found that "All are yours."

So again, the refinements of life are the Christian's right. He has a right to as good apparel, to as beautiful adornments, to as commodious a residence as the worldling. Show me any passage in the Bible that tells the people of the world they have privileges, they have glittering spheres, they have befitting apparel that are denied the Christian. There is no one who has so much a right to laugh, none so much a right to everything that is beautiful and grand and sublime in life as the Christian. "All are yours." Can it be possible that one who is reckless and sinful, and has no treasures laid up in heaven, is to be allowed pleasures which the sons and daughters of God, the owners of the whole universe, are denied?

So I remark that all the sweet sounds of the world are in the Christian's right. There are people who have an idea that instruments of music are inappropriate for the Christian's parlor. When did the house of sin or the bacchanal get the right to music? They have no right to it. God, in my text, makes over to Christian people all the pianos, all the harps, all the drums, all the cornets, all the flutes, all the organs. People of the world may borrow them, but they only borrow them; they have no right or title to them. God gave them to Christian people, in my text, when he said, "All are yours."

David no more certainly owned the harp with which he harped the praises of God than the Church of Christ owns now all chants, all anthems, all ivory key-boards, all organ diapasons, and God will gather up these sweet sounds after a while, and he will mingle them in one great harmony, and the Mendelssohns and the Beethovenes and the Mozarts of the earth will join their voices and their musical instruments, and soft south-wind, and loud-lunged evrology, and will sweep the great organ pipes, and you shall see God's hand striking the keys, and God's foot tramping the pedals in the great oratorio of the ages! So all artistic and literary advantages are in the Christian's right. I do not care on whose wall the picture hangs, or on whose pedestal the sculpture stands; it belongs to Christians. The Bibles and the churches are all working for us. "All are yours." The Luxembourgs, the Louvres, all the galleries of Naples, and Rome, and Venice—they are all to come into the possession of the church of Jesus Christ. We may not now have them on our walls; but the time will come when the writ of ejectment will be served and the church will possess everything. All parks, all fish-ponds, all colors, all harvests—all, "all are yours."

Secondly, I remark that the right to full temporal support is in the Christian's name. It is a great affair to feed the world. Just think of the fact that, this morning, sixteen hundred million of our race breakfasted at God's table! The commissary department of a hundred thousand men in an army will engage scores of people; but just think of a commissary department of a world! Think of the gathering up from the rice swamps, and the tea fields, and the orchards and the fisheries. No one but God could tell how many bushels it would take to feed five continents.

Then, to clothe all these people—how many furs must be captured, and how much flax broken, and how much cotton picked. Just think of the infinite wardrobe where sixteen hundred million of people get their clothes! God spreads the table first of all for his children. Of course, that would be a very selfish man who would not allow other people to come and sit at his table sometimes; but, first of all, the right is given to Christian people, and therefore it is extreme folly for them ever to fret about food or raiment. Who fed the whales sporting off Cape Hatteras this morning? Out of whose hand did the porpoiser pick its food? Whose loom wove the butterfly's wing? Who hears the hawk's cry? If God takes care of a walrus, and a Siberian dog, and a wasp, will he not take care of you? Will a father have more regard for reptiles than for his sons and daughters? If God clothes the grizzly bear, and the panther, and the hyena, will he not clothe his own children? Come, then, this morning, and get the key of the infinite storehouse. Come and get the key of the infinite wardrobe. Here they are—all the keys. "All are here."

Remarkable Wooden Blocks. The Falklands produce no trees, but they produce wood in a very remarkable shape. You will see, scattered here and there, singular blocks of what looks like weather-beaten, mossy, gray, stones of various sizes. But, if you attempt to roll over one of these rounded boulders you will find yourself unable to accomplish it. In fact, the stone is tied down to the ground—tied down by the roots; or, in other words, it is not a stone, but a block of living wood.

Tobacco as a Barometer. There are many natural barometers, which, in a general way, are just as reliable as the best aneroid instrument that ever came from the factory. A plug of tobacco by its moisture and softness will indicate the approach of a storm, a loose window cord will tighten up just before a rain, and a pair of gloves ordinarily tight on the hands, will become almost baggy on the approach of bad weather.

Following America's Lead. The American ambulance system, that is, the establishment of permanent hospitals in the rear, while the ambulances closely follow a body of troops, is now in use in all the European armies. A dozen systems for merely peevish, but the good sense and sound practicality of the American plan caused it to supersede all the others.

Insuring Against Marriage. An Atchison, Kan., woman is trying to organize a very peculiar insurance company. Girls over eighteen may become members, and are required to pay a small sum every year. If they are unmarried at forty they will be given the amounts they insured for. A marriage annuls the contract, which has a tendency to make pretty girls quite "leary" of the scheme.

Nearly Ready. Little Boy—"Papa, I wish you'd send me to college." Papa—"It will take a long time to prepare you for college, my son." Little Boy—"Huh! You just come down to the river and see me pull an oar."

At Atlantic City. "I hired a baby carriage from you, didn't I?" "Yes, sir." "Well, that vehicle you sent me is, at least, twenty years old. That's no baby carriage."

The Mohaves believe that all who die and are not cremated are turned into owls, and when they hear an owl hooting at night they think it is the spirit of some dead Mohave returned. After any one dies they do not eat salt or wash themselves for four days. They had formerly an annual burning of property, and all would contribute something to the flames in expectation of its going up to their departed friends in heaven, or "White Mountain," as they call it.

Fixed just right—Liver, Stomach, and Bowels, by Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They do it in just the right way, too—by using Nature's own methods. That's why they're better than the dreadful, old-fashioned pills, with their gripping and violence.

But they're better in every way. In size, for instance, and dose. They're the smallest and the easiest to take; only one little Pellet is needed for a gentle laxative—three for a cathartic. They cleanse and regulate the system thoroughly—but it's done easily and naturally. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the Liver, Stomach and Bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned. You pay only for value received.

Something else, that pays the dealer better, may be offered as "just as good." Perhaps it is, for him, but it can't be, for you.

SWEET REST.

In memory of the late S. D. Adams.
Tis that little grassy mound
Where pretty roses bloom,
Your father lies beneath that ground,
Tis your true husband's tomb.
Alas did your father die,
It seems so sad a woe,
So quick he'd meet his birth on high,
And bid farewell to friends so dear.
Weep not, nor wish him back dear friend,
He is resting now in peace.
Soon he'll greet you at your journey's end,
When here your life shall cease.
With dear friends he's now dwelling,
Who have gone so long before,
They've been waiting to bid him welcome,
When he stepped upon the golden shore
His lifeless form lies here,
His spirit lives above,
And sees with visions bright and clear
The God of life and love. J. H. F.

At this season of the year Coughs and Colds are so prevalent, that almost every person you meet is more or less afflicted. If in need of a remedy, try a bottle of Hartwell's Cough Syrup. You will be both pleased and surprised at the immediate relief obtained. For sale by Geo. C. Hueston.

Northville people will consult their own interest by stopping at the Wayne hotel when in Detroit. The prompt and courteous treatment from the proprietor and clerks will please
you. The table fare is surpassed by no doubtedly manufacturing one of the best grades ("Gold Lace") of flour to be found in the state of Michigan.

In fact there can be no better made.

A BARNUM DAY CROWD.
Notwithstanding the threatening aspect of the weather this forenoon the country people flocked to town in great numbers to take in Milesorvton's circus, taking good care to have bugs fed and the other chores done in time to get in and see the parade at 10 a. m. Bigger parades have been, but that of this morning was highly creditable. The open dens of wild animals were wide open, and the two bands blew as vigorously as they were expected to, and the elephants, camels, ponies, etc., departed themselves with becoming dignity

THEY'RE MARRIED.

Northville's City Electrician Weds
one of Muir's Fair Daughters.
Last week Wednesday evening, City
Electrician Sam Wilkinson and Miss Corra Kimball were married at the home of the bride, Muir, Mich. Miss Kimball is a popular young lady; is held in high esteem by Muir people, and is a sister of Mrs. W. T. Gerr of this place. Mr. Wilkinson has been in the employ of the Globe furniture for a number of years and has had charge of their extensive electric light plant ever since its birth. He is a young man of unquestionable habits and is thought a great big lot of in this village. The RECORD unites with scores of others in wishing the young couple years and of wedded bliss.

It is said that it cost $700 per day to run the big Orton circus.
Mr. Bailey, who has been seriously ill for a week past, is somewhat better today.
A pretty sight and one worth going some distance to see is a ten acre field of beans cultivated by Ed. Starkweather on his father's, E. K. Starkweather, farm two miles west of the village.
The beauty lies in the accuracy in which the article is planted as well as its thrifty condition. From a short distance the field looks as though it were covered with green tufted work so systematically is it laid out and it is the admiration of all passers by.
C. R. Stevens and some others were up at the lake for a fish last week.
Capt. Simonds caught, among a quantity of others, a perch measuring a foot long, and Mr. Stevens has a life sized cut of a yellow bass measuring 17 1/2 inches in length which has Charles's affidavit attached setting forth that it was only one of several which he caught just like it that day.

A Pingree boom delegation by special train stopped here a few moments
Tuesday on their way to Saginaw.
They were a healthy lot of individuals and made things lively around the depot for a brief period. Artilleryman Hastings was prepared for them with a big cannon and it was soon bleaching forth its noise and smoke mingled with the cheer of the Pingree men. Mayor Pingree stood on the rear platform of the last car, bowing and smiling to Northvillers as the train pulled out.
The mayor should have sent word of his coming and see what a crowd Northville could have shown him at the depot.

Yerkes Bros. of this place have an optional lease on the South Lyon flouring mills and have commenced the manufacture of that necessary bread article which South Lyon people have been obliged to obtain from neighboring towns for some time past.
The past record of this bustling firm is an assurance to the people of that livly village that they will have not only a first class article of flour manufactured in their midst, but an energetic firm will be at the back of it with both push and money. The firm are now in search of a "brand" that will be keeping with the quality of the flour and a credit to that pretty village.
Among other good things, the Picket of last week had this to say of the boys:
"Our citizens should be the first to encourage this new enterprise in our midst, by using no other brand except the South Lyon variety. Yerkes Brothers are men of experience, ability and integrity. In all of their dealings they will be found to be square dealers, and what they agree to do, may be depended upon."
Right you are my dear Picket.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mothers and Daughters.
Over twelve years ago I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help. One of my friends persuaded me to try a bottle of Dullam's Great German Uterine Tonic, and after taking three bottles, can say I am in better health than I have been for twenty years and am now sixty years old, but feel as young as at thirty.—a bottle

MICHIGAN STATE ITEMS OF MORE OR LESS IMPORTANCE.

Children Playing With Matches Explode a Can of Powder with Fatal Results.

When the 12-year-old daughter of George B. Green, residing 12 miles north of Harrison, was alone in the house, John Craig, a teamster in the employ of a lumbering company, went to the house to learn his way, he having lost the road. It is alleged that on finding the girl alone he committed an assault upon her and then fled to the woods. Officers are in pursuit. Mr. Green is a highly respected citizen, and it is thought that little mercy will be shown the man Craig should he be found.

Assaulted a Young Girl.

A serious accident occurred in Matteson township, Branch county. Three young children went into Park Beach's workshop while lighting a match the heater flew into a quantity of powder a few feet away which exploded, injuring the 11-year-old son of Mr. Beach so severely that his life is despaired of. Another boy's face was filled with powder and his eyes badly injured, while the third child, a little girl, escaped with singed eyebrows and a burned arm.

A Headless Mystery.

Saginaw authorities are trying to identify the remains of a man found in the "Bitter Lake" mine. The body is minus head and one shoulder and arm and the theory is advanced that it may be a victim of the Midland explosion, that has been in the water ever since and floated down the stream. Others scout this idea and say that all of the missing in the Midland catastrophe have been accounted for. The discovery remains a mystery today.

A Ludicrous Fight.

An Indian giant 6 feet 10 inches high and a higher of white men 7 feet 5 inches high engaged in a street fight at St. Ignace. The white man did not have a long enough reach to do his opponent any harm, and was too agile for the red skin to hurt him. He settled matters by doubling up his antagonist by butting him in the stomach.

Strange Fatal Accident.

Ely Shovard was thrown out of his buggy on Cross street at Ypsilanti in a runaway and his head dashed against a tree striking a short stub of a limb which was broken off into the top of his head, killing him instantly. His head was badly smashed and the buggy was ruined. He leaves a widow and one daughter.

An Old Soldier Found Dead.

Samuel Lerry, an inmate of the Soldiers' home, was found dead in the woods near the home at Grand Rapids. He was subject to fits and from appearance he fell in a fit with his face buried in the dirt and leaves and smothered to death. He was a veteran of the forty-sixth Ohio and went there from Adrian.

Despondency—Suicide.

Mrs. Albertus Reed, of Moreland township, Muskegon county, was despondent because stories had been circulated about her and she attempted suicide by shooting herself in the left breast while her husband and 1-year-old child were in an adjoining room. She is in a serious condition.

THE LEADERS ARRESTED

CHARGES OF MURDER PREFERRED AGAINST SEVEN

Of the Leading Spirits in the Recent Sad Affray at Homestead.—Strikers Will Have Erick Arrested.

Pittsburg special: The situation at Homestead is constantly assuming a new shape. The latest sensational developments was the issue of warrants for seven of the leaders of the locked-out men, upon the charge of murder.

The information was made by Secretary Lovejoy, of the Carnegie company. They were made against Hugh O'Donnell, the leader of the strikers; John McLuckie, Burgess of Homestead; Sylvester Crick, Arthur Blair, Sammie Burckett, James Hannagan and Hugh Koss, who are collectively charged with the murder of T. J. Connors and Silas Wayne on the morning of July 6, during the riot. The former was a Pinkerton man from New York, while the latter was a workman residing at Homestead. The warrants were placed in the hands of constables who are left to find their men, but returned empty handed.

A little later, Burgess McLuckie appeared at Alderman McMaster's office and announced that he was ready to answer the charge of murder preferred against him. The alderman then had a commitment issued and he was placed in jail. McLuckie said that the other defendants had not left the city to escape arrest, and that all but O'Donnell would be on hand. Burckett, he said, was a colored driver and was sick in bed on the day of the riot and was not present at any time during the fight. Crutchlow is a Butler county farmer who formerly worked in the mill, but was at home on July 6. Crick is a doctor of his own medicine, and information against the officials of the company are now being prepared.

Later William J. Brennan, counsel for the Amalgamated Association, was in conference with President Wehrle. It was understood for the purpose of making out charges against Messrs. Erick, Crick and Blair. The charge will be based on the introduction of Pinkerton men with arms.

DEFEND RAUM.

Minority Report of the Pension Office Investigation Committee.

Mr. Lind, on behalf of the minority of the committee appointed to investigate the administration of the pension office submitted the views of the minority to the house. The charge will be based on the introduction of Pinkerton men with arms.

The body of Morris A. Collins, president of the Dallas, Tex., suicide club was cremated at Chicago on the shore of Lake Michigan. Collins, whose mind was believed to have been affected by injuries received in a railroad accident, killed himself by shooting. He left a letter directing that the Whitechapel club take charge of his body. The club caused a funeral parlor to be built, 20 feet high, 8 feet wide and 18 feet long, of pitch-soaked wood. The body was placed upon it and the torch applied to it shortly before midnight, the members of the club marching around the burning pile, singing a dirge. The chaplain of the club and several members delivered addresses, and a funeral sermon was delivered by Dwight Baldwin.

The ceremonies were kept up for five hours, after which the charred remains of the body were gathered up in trowels and placed in an urn. It was sunrise the next morning before the parties returned to the city.

Mrs. Luman Eggleston, of Tonawanda, N. Y., went to Buffalo, leaving her daughters Susie and Jennie, aged 10 and 8 years respectively, in the care of Mrs. Garlock, Ella Holderidge, aged 14, went over to the Garlock house with something mixed up in the cover of a tin box. Some of this she left in the Eggleston children and the 6-year-old son of Mrs. Garlock, telling them it was cocoa.

Soon after the children were taken violently ill. Dr. Edmunds was called and relieved their suffering, but it was some hours before they were out of immediate danger. An investigation showed that the children had been given "rough on rats." The Holderidge girl would give no reason for her conduct. She was arrested. It is now known that she was responsible for the mysterious death of 10-year-old Zoena Sturmer which occurred a short time ago. The Sturmers and Holderidges are near neighbors and the children were often playing together.

For Better Highway.

Legislation in the interest of good roads has received a great impetus. At the hearing before the Senate committee on the interstate commerce, Col. Burdett, president of the League of American Wheelmen, and other leaders made addresses in favor of the national highway commission bill. General Bar Zeno, of New York, the author of the bill, explained its features and urged the adoption of the simplified bill which was introduced by Congressman Post, of Illinois. The wheelmen are pressing its immediate passage upon the members of the Senate and House, and especially as it provides for an exhibit at the World's Fair.

The Alliance Will Carry 13 States.

Henry Loucks, president of the Farmers' Alliance, says the vote for Alliance candidates in November will astonish the world. He is confident that the Alliance will carry Kansas, Colorado, the two Dakotas, Nevada, Montana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Georgia, the two Carolinas, Florida and Texas.

Stock Yards Burned.

The Cleveland, O., stock yard buildings were entirely destroyed by fire. The only thing saved is the stock yard hotel. The loss is $45,000.

SENATE AND HOUSE.

SENATE.—The sundry civil appropriation bill covered the larger portion of the session of the 15th. Mr. Peffer's amendment prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on the World's Fair grounds was lost after being agreed to in the committee of the whole. Mr. Vest's substitute to Mr. Quay's Sunday closing amendment was tabled. A bill to retaliate upon Canada for unjust discrimination against the United States was referred. A bill to repeal that portion of the silver act of 1890 which provided for the monthly purchase of silver bullion and the issue of treasury notes therefor, was referred, as was another which provides that the coinage of gold is hereafter prohibited. A bill to regulate the salaries of all government employees 25 per cent. when they are receiving over $600. Several resolutions—among them one for a committee to investigate the Homestead affair and the Pinkerton organization—were tabled after some discussion. The conference reports on the diplomatic and naval bills were received and agreed to. Adjourned. HOUSE.—The conference reports on the legislative, naval, diplomatic and consular bills were agreed to. Adjourned.

SENATE.—The Senate on the 13th adopted final conference on the army, navy and legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bills, and assented to a House resolution extending existing appropriations, for objects not yet acted upon until July 30. It also passed the fortification bill with amendments. Adjourned. HOUSE.—The consideration of the sundry civil bill occupied the attention of the House. The World's Fair appropriation of $5,000,000 being the item under discussion. A resolution was passed calling on the Postmaster-General for information regarding the letting of mail contracts to railroads since March, 1893. The conference report on the army appropriation bill was also agreed to. The House recessed until 8 o'clock for pension business.

SENATE.—About the only important business on the 16th was the passage of the appropriation bill to supply the deficiency of June 30, 1892. Executive session. Adjourned. HOUSE.—After routine business the sundry civil appropriation bill was taken up in committee of the whole. The debate on the amendment for closing the World's Fair on Sunday, which was discussed during the entire session. Adjourned.

SENATE.—The deficiency bill was passed on the 15th. After which the appropriation bill was taken up, bringing it to the point of regular order. The speaker then proposed a motion of obstruction, but the friends of the bill stood their ground and when the Senate adjourned the bill was the "unfinished business" of the next day. HOUSE.—The famous McGarran bill, which has been before the House for 25 years, was passed. A bill which opens to further competition the design and construction of public buildings was passed, with a few other minor measures. A Senate joint resolution was passed, authorizing the labor committee to investigate the slums of different cities. Recess until 8 o'clock when the World's Fair appropriations were discussed.

GENERAL NEWS ITEMS.

TRAIN ROBBERS MAKE A BIG HAUL OUT WEST.

Blow up an Express Train's Safe and Secure $75,000.—The B. X. P. U. Hold their First Convention.

Between $65,000 and $75,000 was secured by a bold robbery of a Missouri, Kansas & Texas train in the Indian Territory by the Dalton gang. Near Adair in the Cherokee country the train was halted and two men mounted the engine, covering the firemen and engineer with their guns. The passengers heard numerous shots outside and Capt. J. J. Kinney, chief of the M. K. & T. road detectives; T. A. Flora, member of the Indian police; and two doctors ran to the doors and opened the doors. The robbers who were located by the flashes of their revolvers. When these four brave men found themselves out of ammunition they had to retire into the cars and each bore serious wounds.

The firing warned the express messenger who barricaded his doors and locked the safe. The robbers said they had dynamite under the car and would blow him up unless he opened the door and this brought him to terms. He opened the door and three men at once seized him. One man held the messenger under cover while the other two blew up the safe. This was soon accomplished and the contents, amounting to between $60,000 and $75,000 taken. The robbers then left the train which proceeded on to Adair, where the wounded men were cared for and a posse formed to track the robbers.

The scene in the cars would have been humorous had it not been so serious. Men of all sizes, who appeared brave and strong at other times, were crouched behind the seats and lying flat in the aisles, while the robbers outside did not molest them in the least, simply firing in the air to frighten the passengers. The ruse succeeded perfectly with the exception of the four men mentioned.

The B. X. P. U. of A.

Thousands of young Christians, members of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, assembled in Detroit in the first annual convention of the society. The Huron Auditorium was filled to overflowing at the opening session and all were full of deep enthusiasm as the grand old national anthem, "America" welled from the 4,000 throats. After a short praise service the convention was called to order by John H. Chapman, president of the society. A. H. Finn, president of the Detroit city union made an address of welcome and presented to President Chapman a garland made from the trunk of the famous Pontiac tree.

President Chapman responded and Rev. Dr. Gifford, of Detroit, and Rev. Wm. M. Lawrence, D. D., of Chicago, also made glowing, enthusiastic addresses. The history of the society or union was given by Rev. Frank L. Wilkins, D. D., general secretary. In July, 1891, the organization was effected in Chicago with 2,500 delegates enrolled and the growth of a year has been surprising with the greatest possibilities of the future.

Rev. J. B. Cranfill, candidate for vice-president on the Prohibition ticket, was present and presided over one of the meetings. A reception of splendid proportions was given in the Light Infantry armory.

12,000 SOULS PERISHED

An Island Completely Depopulated by Volcanic Eruption.

London cable: Authentic reports have been received to the effect that the island of Sangir, in the Malay Archipelago, had been destroyed by a volcanic eruption and that the whole population, comprising 12,000 souls, had perished. According to the natives of a neighboring island from whom the story of the eruption was secured it occurred in the night and was accompanied by severe earthquake shocks that were plainly felt nearly 100 miles distant.

On the following day the natives noticed pieces of wreckage floating in the sea and several ships put off for Sangir from which reports had previously indicated that a volcanic eruption was about to occur.

The island was found to be almost completely covered with a thick coat of lava that was boiling hot and the volcano was still spouting forth great masses of ashes and lava.

Houses and huts had been leveled and out of the entire population of 12,000 which the island was said to have, the rescuers found but two or three people still living.

Sangir, or Sangaris, is an island in the Malay archipelago, about thirty miles in length and ten miles wide. The surface is mountainous and in its centre is the volcano reported to have caused the awful disaster. A few Christians, mostly representatives of Dutch traders, dwell on the coast.

KILLED BY "WHITE CAPS."

A Pretty Jackson Girl Frightened to Death by a White Cap Letter.

The death of Miss Rose Woodruff, the adopted daughter of Mrs. Geo. Woodruff, of Jackson, has caused a sensation here. She was taken with spasms which resulted in hemorrhage of the lungs and heart trouble from which she died. She was a beautiful girl, 28 years of age. It is claimed that scandalous talk is responsible for her death. About June 1, a story came to her ears which made her very despondent and about two weeks ago she received a white cap letter with a skull and crossbones printed in red ink upon it. At the bottom was written "You are white capped by 12 of your best friends. Look out, we give you but two more of these warnings." Miss Woodruff was greatly distressed by this white cap letter and she became nearly frantic with grief. It is believed that the matter preyed on her mind to such an extent as to cause the spasms. Officers are investigating the case and will attempt to publish the author of the letter.

Up in a Balloon.

R. J. Woodward, the Ventura, Cal., farmer who has for several weeks been preparing to make a balloon journey to New York, made an ascent in the presence of several hundred people. The balloon shot up like a rocket to a great height. He soon struck a current of air that moved the balloon rapidly toward the ocean. Woodward threw out his edibles, ballast and everything else, except his anchor. The balloon finally struck a current of air which bore him rapidly inland and he disappeared from view. The observer says that Woodward struck a current of air having about 25 miles velocity and he thinks Woodward will never be heard of again.

The Big Floods of the past few months have caused great damage in portions of Alabama. In Sumter county many families are destitute and on the verge of starvation.

THE PERFECT FRIEND.

One only friend we have accounted sure; One only love is ours That will endure.

A LOADED BOMBSHELL.

The return of New Year's day recalls always to my memory an episode of the siege of Paris which gained me some credit. I am proud of it.

Let the reader be reassured. I shall not conduct him to the ramparts nor to the outposts but only to the Rue Trevisse and the house of my old friend Dutailly.

Surprised by the investment of Paris when he had packed his trunks to leave, he was consoled by the conviction that the city would not hold out a week.

Before I had finished the soup I had made up my mind respecting Robillard. The exploits of the soldier of fortune consisted of stripping the houses in the suburbs of the furniture that might tempt the greed of the enemy, and putting it in a safe place.

The rogue was no fool. He said he was interested in a large coal mining business that obliged him to journey over Europe, and entertained us very pleasantly with reminiscences of his travels.

The Dutailly household was fascinated. Robillard had interested Mme. Dutailly by his good humor and a grace of gallantry to which no woman of her age is insensible.

His disrepute was more obvious after the affair of Bourget, where the courageous boy had bravely done his duty, and whence he had returned wounded in the fight the death of Barache, killed by his side, the surrender and retreat, the sad end of a brave combat with so pitiable a dependency that the captain treated him for awhile as a deserter and coward.

Olse, marching on Rouen, and then arriving triumphantly at Havre, which moved Dutailly to enthusiasm, while poor Anatole, humiliated, and suffering greatly from his still open wound, received no attention from any one but Gertrude and myself.

On the next day he had a fever, and kept his bed, and for some weeks was absent from our meals. The captain quickly established his pretensions to the hand of Gertrude and her parents did not discourage him.

Dear madame," he said smiling. "I would have liked to offer you the head of the owner of this helmet."

We sat down at the table, and the repast was very gay. They had killed a pig for the occasion, and the black pudding was a great success.

"Do not open it, dear madame; it is a shell!"

"Dutailly has often expressed his desire to have a shell, a genuine one that had been used, and my friend Roland, commander of a battery, at my request, sent me one from the plateau d'Arzon, which failed to explode in falling."

"What is the matter?"

"Dear Friend, I send the shell requested. Only it has been impossible to find an artillery man who knew how to unload it. Make him carry it to the house of the armorer, near the entrance to the opera house, who can do it very skillfully. Take the greatest care. The least blow, the least friction, for it is only the thickness of paper, and the shell will explode."

"I was interrupted by cries of fear. 'Take it away,' cried Madame Dutailly. 'It is terrible! This shell in my drawing room!'"

"Do not touch it!"

"You will only let it fall on the staircase or in the ante room."

"What?" cried Madame Dutailly. "To-morrow? Why, I cannot close my eyes all night! I shall go to a hotel to sleep."

Then Anatole said, quietly: "Remain at home, madame; I will carry away the shell."

"But the captain," said Dutailly. "I have confidence only in him. Go quickly, captain, take the monster and deliver us from this nightmare."

"I will run, dear madame." Saying this, the captain took his military cap and cloak and went. By the way he ran down the stairs it was evident he was in a hurry.

"I went back to the drawing room, where fear reigned. Madame Dutailly, wavering between the wish to fly and the desire to watch over the shell."

"I would have been so easy to let me take it," murmured Anatole. "Be silent," replied Dutailly, a little surprised by the quiet courage of this boy.

"I wish to say, friend Dutailly, that your captain is an impostor and I rejoice to have dismounted the batteries of his booster by the aid of this engine."

"And the captain was never heard of after—Romance."

MERE SLAVES.

In Dr. Peters' book telling how he fought his way in Africa, he narrates a curious story of the killing of two natives by Lieutenant Nyauza.

"The man, much to the surprise of the white men, burst out laughing. 'Oh, it is nothing,' he said, 'they're only slaves. It is no matter whatever. Besides, it was not your friend, but the gun that was to blame. Your friend has done nothing wrong at all.'"

"The women echoed the words of their master. They said it was nothing and they tried to make merry, though Peters thought their laughter was a little forced. Some men bore the bodies out of the hall. They sprinkled sand over the pools of blood and brought in another bucketful of banana wine with which the king and his guests regaled themselves after the tragic spectacle. Peters said it was a good deal like the accidental breaking of a vase by a guest in a European drawing room and the host and the hostess endeavoring to relieve embarrassment and asserting that the incident was of no consequence."

"Killed by Bees." A horse was killed by bees at Leslie, Ga., recently. A colored woman was driving by a place where the pestiferous little insects were being hived. A swarm alighted on the horse and began stinging him. The woman ran off to secure help. There was a great commotion, and the horse was driven off, but the horse died shortly afterward.

VENGEANCE OF APES.

MURDERING A MAN WHO ABDUCTED ONE OF THEM.

A Story Vouched For by an English Officer—Orang-Outangs Can Talk and Think and Run Just as Well as Humans.

"Look at that, will you now?" said an Indian soldier, calling my attention to a recent widely-discussed article debating the question whether or not monkeys and apes have a language of their own.

"To my mind the thing won't bear disputing over, for if there is anything certain it is that apes at least not only have a language, but that it is a language having a wide range. This I know from actual experience."

"We had got about enough of it, when, on our way to the coast, we reached a little stream, the name of which I do not remember. Here we halted for the night, and as all of the party were pretty well worn out we contented ourselves with a cold supper, and fell asleep at once."

"The natives held a brief consultation among themselves and disagreed, but at last Muti directed H. and me to climb one of the larger trees and projected to do the same himself. The others, seeing this, after a look around, soon followed our example. All this time the noise was coming nearer, and we could perceive that it was the voices of a large number of animals."

"They are orang-outangs," whispered the natives, but the English body, for their men-mischief, did not believe them. Each carried in an enormous club made of the husky stripped bough of some tree, and all were evidently wild with some unusual excitement. It was a sight to make anybody's blood run cold, and I am free to confess that mine did."

"No mob of lawless men ever looked more ferocious as they did that evening. Those powerful arms, gashing their teeth in a rage, all more alarming than that it was unarticulate. Their eyes flashed, the growling sound they made was accompanied by a horrible display of pointed, gleaming fangs, and that we said he was a infant in the grasp of those powerful arms one had only to look at them to know."

"They were led by a gigantic fellow six feet in height, and looking more human than many an Ethiopian I have seen. They came straight on, though from a different direction from ours, and soon perceived us as we sat in the branches of the tree. H. raised his gun to fire, when I warned him not to shoot, for we were gone men if we directed their rage to us. The mass of the apes made a break for us as it was, but the leader paused as if puzzled."

"Seeing the others rush upon us he started forward and bringing up one arm as a man might do, gave a hoarse yell. The living gathered about him in an instant, grunting and evidently remonstrating, but obedient. At last the leader dropped to all-fours and examined the ground with great care, the others watching his movements with the greatest possible interest. When this was concluded the big ape stood up and regularly harangued the rest, and at last he seemed to convince them of something, for they all started off down the river with renewed enthusiasm, with one exception."

"This was evidently the doubting Thomas of the party, for leaving his companions he ran back, and, club in hand, he began to climb the tree in which H. and I were perched. H. grabbed his gun and was about to fire when Muti begged him to wait until he saw that the ape was bent on attacking us, and the next moment we found that this was good advice, for the old chap was only desirous of smelling us all over, it seemed."

treating not to exasperate the ape, but the old chap did not seem to take my levity amiss, and only drew back to look me in the face gravely, as if to question what I meant by such conduct. When he had apparently satisfied himself he dropped to the ground and ran off to rejoin his companions, who by this time were nearly out of sight."

"By Muti's advice we scrambled down with all speed and took up our march. The moon was nearly setting now, however, and it soon grew impossible for us to go on, and we struck camp once more, though the natives were for pushing forward at all hazards."

"Something has been stolen from the orang-outangs and they are looking for it," said the men, who seemed to have an overwhelming fear of the animal.

"I was just breaking when we heard the splash of oars coming down the river, and presently we saw a boat, or rather a raft, coming down, propelled by four or five native rowmen, and with two other men on board. There was also something chained to a short mast near the center."

"They paused for a moment on reaching the water, but the boatmen, only for a breath, and the whole party were in the river swimming for their lives. The oarsmen, seeing them, stopped rowing, and, turning to the other men, called to them to untie the ape at the mast. This they evidently refused to do, and the next moment the foremost of the rowing party reached the boat and was just in the act of leaping aboard when one of the men struck at him with an oar."

"We looked to see the other men killed also, but with great presence of mind one of them ran, and cutting the foremost of the rowing party to the edge of the raft and pushed it over into the water. One of the apes saw it as it struck and instantly raised a cry that caused the rest to pause when they saw their companion striking out for the shore."

"They followed at once, clearing the raft in a twinkling of an eye. Getting on the bank they set off for the woods at a run, and were soon out of sight. Seeing the raft was going our way, we hailed it and soon completed an arrangement with the men to take us on to the coast."

"We learned from the survivor that he and his companion had been employed by the proprietor of a menagerie to procure a living orang-outang for him, and that they had ensnared this young female the day before. Now this may sound like a traveler's yarn, but it is the truth exactly as I saw it."

"A Boy Brings Aid to His Master Too Late to Save Him." Recently Mrs. Mattie Fenner, whose husband owns a small farm near Leach's swamp, was attacked by the continued barking of a strange dog. Upon the approach of Mrs. Fenner it crouched at her feet, as though having something to communicate. The lady tried to take the dog to the house, but it refused to stir in any path except a narrow muddy one that led directly to the swamp. Mrs. Fenner got her husband's boots and struck out on the dog's trail. After going to a mile she was suddenly brought to a halt by the sight of a man's head and shoulders protruding from the black, slimy mud.

"The head was bent back, eyes closed, and the face black. His right arm was extended, grasping a low tussock, and the other resting in the mud. The brave woman struggled into the mud to ascertain if the man was living. She began to sink in the quagmire, and was only able by the exercise of great strength to regain the path. She returned to her home and summoned her husband, who, with two men, returned and carried the body to the house, where, after rubbing with flannel, consciousness was restored. The stranger gave his name as Chief Sanders, a glass-blower of Pittsburgh, Penn. He said he was walking from Aton here, having missed his train, and was hunting for water-cresses in the swamp."

"In attempting to push himself from a tussock to reach a fine cress, without a thought of sinking very deep, he jumped into the mud. His legs went down into the black deposit. He clutched at the tussock and was about to gain hold, when he sank deeper and deeper. There seemed to be something pulling him down. He exhausted himself with his cries for help, that were only answered by the piteous wail of his dog. He calculated he sank one inch every hour, and fell into a stupor about night. He was buried twenty-one hours."

"A Creditor Outwitted." The celebrated French poet, Saint Foix, who, in spite of his large income, was always in debt, sat one day in a barber's shop waiting to be shaved. He was lathered, when the door opened and a tradesman entered, who happened to be one of the poet's largest creditors. No sooner did this man see Saint Foix than he angrily demanded his money. The poet composedly begged him not to make a scene.

"Won't you wait for your money until I am shaved?" "Certainly," said the other, pleased at the prospect.

"You had a scandal, I understand?" "I utterly detest it." "I heard a choice bit this morning." "What was it?" "Yarmouth Register."

HAVOC OF GREAT WAVES.

They Are the Products of Powerful Downward Currents.

The sea has in store one danger that the landsman never sees. Like the voyager, he may receive a visit from a cyclone, but he knows nothing of the power and terror of great waves. Uniting in themselves the force of a flood and that of a tornado, they are appalling and resistless."

The experience of the Normania, which suffered severe damage, is from a visit of one of those monsters of the deep, says the Rochester Courier and Advertiser, and recalls that of other vessels. But this wave was slight compared with the waves that they have encountered. While it injured only several of the Normania's crew, the wave that struck the Italian bark Rosina in October, 1882, swept every man aboard but one into the sea; he escaped only because he was an invalid below. A hundred persons lost their lives from the wave encountered by the steamer San Francisco in December, 1857.

The height of these waves can hardly be realized. The one encountered by the Umbria five years ago rose to the top of her masthead, fifty feet above the sea. Several waves measured by Captain Kiddle of the Celtic, in January, 1875, rose to the height of sixty feet and moved at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. Equally high waves were observed by Admiral Fitzroy, of the English navy off the Cape of Good Hope. The appalling height of 100 feet was reached by the waves that DuRoiat d'Urville saw in the Southern sea.

Of course, nothing could withstand the weight and force of these masses of water. Under them the most powerful vessel ever built would scarcely be more than an egg shell. There is no doubt that many of the ships that have gone down to sea never returned have fallen victims of their pitiless and resistless force."

As to the origin of the great waves there has of late been some interesting speculation. It has been discovered that they are combined to the temperate latitudes.

In these latitudes, it has been discovered further that the surface of the ocean is often struck during storms by powerful downward currents. The conclusion is drawn from these two facts that the waves in question were drawn from these two facts that the waves in question were the products of these vertical currents. Students of the subject claim in support of this conclusion that the most powerful wind blowing over the surface of the sea could not raise a crest above twenty-five feet.

"THE MUSIC." Did Not Soothe the Savage Beast, But It Saved the Small Boy. Straville Penn. has a new brass band. It played its first piece the other day. The band considerably went half a mile out of town to try its first tune. That delicate consideration undoubtedly saved the life of Jimmy Strong, a Straville small boy, but it killed Farmer Fred Stauffer's valuable young bull.

At the time the band went out to play the bull was placidly cropping the grass in his pasture, which was near the spot chosen by the band for its maiden effort. While the band was getting its collective lip ready to compel a tune from its horns, Jimmy Strong was taking a shout through the pasture to get to the spot where the band was. The bull had a reputation for a temperament that was entirely incompatible with the presence of a small boy in his pasture, and he no sooner had taken note that there was one, even one trespassing on his domain than he started in to hasten the small boy's trip across the lot. The small boy hastened amazingly, but the bull was gaining on him. The band was so much absorbed with itself that it did not notice the procession moving across the meadow, although the bull was mouthing his displeasure lustily as he bounded along, and the small boy was lifting up his voice in fit-reaching tones.

The bull got within a few jumps of the tiny boy just as the band was ready to play. The band played. At the first burst and bare of sound that the band projected on the circumference of the bull stopped short, threw up his head, and sniffed and snorted. The horns leapt again. The bull turned and rushed wildly toward the stone wall. He reached the wall, stopped, and looked back with terror in his eyes. The band blew another installment of its soul into its horns. The bull gave one wild leap and went clear over the wall, fell into the ditch below and broke its neck. It wasn't exactly a compliment to the band, says the New York Sun, but it saved Jimmy Strong.
