

FOR BRAIN FOOD.

The Northville Fish Hatchery Produces a Lot of It.

A VERY IMPORTANT STATION.

Over Half a Million Eggs Hatched the Past Season.

But few people outside of those directly interested in the culture fully realize the amount of work accomplished at the various fish hatcheries in the United States each year. There are twenty-two government hatcheries located in the several states as follows: Washington, D. C. 3; Md. 2; N. J. 1; Mass. 2; Maine 3; N. Y. 1; Va. 1; Ohio 1; Mich. 2; Minn. 1; Mo. 1; Cal. 1; Oregon 1. The two Michigan stations, Northville and Alpena, are under the charge of Gen'l Sup't. Clark of this place. The Northville station ranks among the first in this country as to the amount of business done and is undoubtedly the most successful of any of the 22. Through the courtesy of Commissioner Clark and his able chief clerk, S. E. Cranson, we are able to give our readers some idea of the work accomplished for the season of 1891-92. There was 4,547,050 eggs taken at this station, 548,000 of which were successfully hatched. There was shipped from the station 2,732,000 eggs; 7,127 fingerlings and 69,590 yearling trout. There was also 10,000 fingerlings planted in the stream near the hatchery. In the shipment the loss was not more than 5 per cent. and in many cases not an egg was lost. As high as 10,000 eggs was taken from a single fish. The Alpena station, devoted chiefly to white fish culture, which is also under Mr. Clark's charge, furnished the Northville station with 2,533,000 trout eggs, and planted 17,750,000 white fish fry. This is a glowing report and one which the Northville station may well feel proud of. There are forty new ponds now under construction just south of the old ones which will soon be ready for the young trout now in the building.

HERE'S $3,000 MORE

The U. S. Fish Hatchery Gets Another Appropriation

When U. S. Fish Commissioner Clark was in Washington last week he learned that an additional appropriation of $3,000 had been granted for improvements at the Northville station. This in addition to the former appropriation makes $8,000. Mr. Clark, of course, knew the other $3,000 had been asked for, but did not learn of the good news until his recent visit there.

THE PROHIB

They Will Have a Big Rally Here Next Week.

The prohibition people of Northville will have a big rally meeting at the opera house next week Saturday afternoon, 2:30, and evening, 7:30. The Hon. A. G. Walfenbarger of Nebraska will speak upon the leading issues of the day and Prof. A. B. Hukins, the celebrated vocalist, will furnish the music. It will no doubt be an interesting meeting.

Persian Thieves.

In Persia the first time a man is caught in the act of stealing he is "bastinadoed" (beaten on the soles of the feet with an iron rod) and made to sign a paper declaring that that will be his last offense. If he forgets this when the soles of his feet quit burning and tries it again, the second offense calls for the amputation of his right hand. If he is still obdurate, and goes at it left-handed, the third and, of course, last resort is decapitation. —Times-Star.

MISS EDNA McROBERTS.

That Young Lady Captured Medal No. 5.

The fifth of the Demorest silver medal contests was held at the Presbyterian church Monday evening. There was seven contestants and the prize was awarded to Edna McRoberts. The judges were J. Jacobus, Prof. Smith and Rev. Riddick of So. Lyon. These gentlemen were strangers to every contestant and being men of unquestionable ability, there cannot be the slightest doubt of the fairness and impartiality of the award. Miss McRoberts failed of her memory and marked but 94. Mr. Knapp stood 94 in voice and gesture so that in the totals, while Miss McRoberts was 1414, Mr. Knapp was a very close competitor at 1401, eliciting much applause from the audience. Mamie Stevens stood 118 and Nellie Leadbeater 125, and their work was highly praiseworthy. Others did quite well and altogether the large audience was highly entertained. One pleasant feature of the evening was a very pretty song by thirty children, members of the Loyal Temperance Legion. Miss Burrows also entertained the audience with a well rendered selection while the judges were out making their decision. The next contest, No. 6, takes place at the Meads Mills school house next week Tuesday night, a number of Northville young people being the contestants.

IT COSTS MORE to make Royal Baking Powder than any other, because its ingredients are more highly refined and expensive. But the Royal is correspondingly purer and higher in leavening strength, and of greater money value to the consumer. The difference in cost of Royal over the best of the others does not equal the difference in leavening strength, nor make good the inferior work of the cheaper powders, nor remove the impurities which such powders leave in the food.

Where the best food is required, the Royal Baking Powder only can be used.

Dr. Bennett, Michigan's renowned and successful practitioner in curing chronic troubles, will be at the Macomber House, Northville, Wednesday, Oct. 12. Do you know he takes just those cases where no one can do anything for them, "where they say you must die" and even then he gets them well and they remain so. Not by fixing up the stomach with worthless drugs, or little sugar pills. He gets the power right that serves those organs and then they remain right. Do you wish to know more? Go and see him. NORTEVILLE, MICHIGAN

THE British letter-writer who ventured to say the latest unpleasant things about the United States met with an outburst of reproof so animated as almost to give ground for apprehension lest the memory of it in these days of international copy-right might deter the next British critic from a full deliverance of his feelings. It would be a great pity if it should—a great pity if anything should break Englishmen of the habit of speaking their minds freely about the United States, or woe American from the use of candor in their comments upon Great Britain. So long as Americans and Englishmen take true mutual delight in exposing one another's sores it would be too bad to inhibit them from enjoyment of the pleasure. If the sores are there, they may be an actual benefit to have them pointed out, and if they are not there the critic and his friends are getting pleasure out of something which does not exist—a kind of amusement that is too cheap and too filling to be spared from a world in which too large a proportion of the pleasures that are satisfactory are scarce and dear.

SKETCHES OF GENERAL KLAPKA AND GENERAL TELEKI.

The prime minister, Count Szapary was absent, and in his absence no one ventured to speak for the government. Then some hot-blooded Magyar cried: "Did Szapary authorize it? And is that why he is afraid to be in place to day?" A tremendous tumult arose. The chamber became a mob. Few suspected Count Szapary of being guilty, yet his absence was suspicious and none of his colleagues dared say a word in his defense. "Send for Szapary!" rose the cry. "Let him come at once or we will fetch him!" So the tumult raged for an hour. Then Count Szapary came hurrying in. He gave ample reasons for his absence and of course indignantly denied that he or any member of the government had been in the least responsible for the treatment of Klappa's remains. Indeed, he was anxious to do that soldier's memory all possible honor. The fact was, Klappa had been on cordial terms with the emperor and empress and had for years received a pension from them. So not even an Austria could

LOCAL GLEANINGS.

Things Said and Did in the Liveliest And Prettiest Village in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clerk rejoice in the arrival of a nice baby girl, Sept. 24.

W. F. M. S. meeting at Mrs. W. I. Ely's tomorrow, Friday, afternoon.

James Beatty has commenced his beautiful new residence at the head of Main street.

Remember the date of the Demorest silver medal contest at Meads Mills is Tuesday evening Oct. 11.

Do not forget the sixth Demorest medal contest at Meads Mills Wednesday night of next week.

Mrs. Rev. Parrish is a daughter of Hon. John Russell, the prohibition nominee for governor.

The new reservoir at the hatchery is completed and the pipes all laid to the dam. The work on the dam is being rapidly pushed along.

The teachers of the Northville school have "clipped in" and purchased a couple of tennis outfits with which to while away a Saturday now and then.

Bear in mind that Rollo K. Bryant, the great chalk talker will be at the Baptist church next week Friday night, Oct. 14. Admission 10c, children 5c.

Grant Power now of Ionia and Miss Jessie Steers of this place, will be married at the home of the bride, Dunlap street, next Wednesday evening. Both the contracting parties are well known in Northville. They will make Jont's their future home.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church will give their Harvest Home supper at the rink Friday evening. Supper served from six to eight o'clock. Don't miss this chance of satisfying the "inner man" for 20c.

The annual Wayne county Sunday school convention will be held in Wayne, Tuesday, Oct. 11. All Sunday school workers and all friends of the work, are earnestly invited to attend the convention. Good talent will be present.

"Bob" Frazer's speech at the rink last evening attracted an immense crowd. "Bob" Frazer for the republicans and Frank Dean for the democrats are two most eloquent speakers and no doubt the best that will appear for either party before a Michigan audience during this campaign.

The two willow trees which have done duty for years at the U. S. fish hatchery have recently been cut down which adds to the appearance of the place. The new driveway will be located just west of the spot and will be pleasantly laid out along the ponds and around the fountain to another entrance where Superintendent Clark's offices are now located.

On Monday, Oct. 3, The Detroit Evening News, the largest and most popular afternoon paper in Michigan made a new and radical departure by dropping its price from two cents to one cent per copy; or six cents per week, this action will be supported by renewed and far reaching improvements in the manner of news gathering, editorial, literary features, illustrations etc., which will not only place the paper in a vantage of its present excellent standard, but detailed plans have been made to make The People's Paper of Michigan the finest and best in the west.

But few business men in Northville have witnessed so many changes, like Damascus of old, as has A. L. Rockwell, Northville's popular and bustling jeweler. Mr. Rockwell commenced business in Northville in 1898, twenty-four years ago, and for twenty years has occupied the same store where he now is, and all this time he has never changed his business. He has witnessed the ups and downs, success and failure, changes and superlatives of merchant after merchant, of business after business and still it was the same Rockwell, the jeweler. Dr. J. M. Swift was then practicing medicine here, as he is yet, and we believe those two gentlemen are the only ones who have not in some way changed their business since that time.

Miss Bovee will be prepared to show you a full line of Fall millinery Saturday Oct. 8, and invites the ladies to call and see the same. Remember the date.

Miss Fuller, of North Center street having returned home and resumed dressmaking, would like to see her old customers and also new ones. Prices reasonable.

Remember the Prohibition rally at the opera house Oct. 15. Two of the best speakers in this country will be present.

The F. & P. M. railway will sell tickets at reduced rates to Northville and return Oct. 15 on account of the prohibition rally and addresses by A. G. Walfenbarger.

Hon. A. G. Walfenbarger of Nebraska will address the people of Northville at the opera house, next week Saturday afternoon and evening. Prof. Hucksins will furnish the music.

Harvest home supper at the rink tomorrow, Friday, night under the auspices of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Presbyterian church. A cordial invitation is extended to everyone to be present.

As for fast bicycling, village President Yerkes is conceded to be the champion of this place. Will has made the trip from South Lyon to Northville, twelve miles, in forty-seven minutes.

The majority of the subscribers to the refrigerator fund are no doubt under the impression that the agreement calls for quarterly payments. This is a mistake. The agreement calls for "four equal monthly payments."

The Wayne Review says that an uncommon occurrence, and one of either habituality, or absentmindedness, was the taking up of a collection at a funeral service at one of the churches there one week ago Sunday.

The Plymouth Mail advises exchanges to clear of the "Ford Pitts" and the "Exquisite Toilet Mfg. Co." ad., of Toronto, and wants those papers who are running them to advise the Mail when they get their pay. Will Bro Steers advise us when he gets his pay from the National Prune Syrup Co. of Chillicothe, Ohio.

Rev. Jacklin, associate editor of the Michigan Christian Advocate, occupied the Methodist pulpit last Sunday. Elder Jacklin is a very able speaker and his discourses Sunday were highly appreciated by a large congregation.

Rev. Parrish was unable to fill the appointment owing to the long distance to be traversed. He will be here next Sunday.

A new feature in telephoning has materialized through here. The Michigan Central is having a telephone wire laid along the fence on its line, and all trains will be provided with a telephone instrument, and in case of any accident occurring between stations they can attach the instrument to the wire and communicate at the nearest station any information they desire.

Mr. Howells will begin in the November Cosmopolitan, a department under the attractive title "A Traveler from Altonia." Those who have seen the first two papers think they will equal in interest and in their wide appeal to all classes, the Breakfast Table papers of Dr. Holmes. In order to give the necessary time to this work Mr. Howells has turned over the detailed editorial work to Mr. Walker.

Mrs. R. C. Yerkes and Miss Carrie Babbitt, elocutionists, assisted by Mrs. Aggie Whipple in instrumental and vocal music, gave an entertainment in the Presbyterian church at So. Lyon for the benefit of the Y. P. C. E. society of that place, Saturday evening of last week. There was a goodly attendance, the entertainment was highly pleasing and the young ladies received many deserved compliments. Why not repeat the entertainment here? A Northville audience will only be too glad to witness it.

The cooking school mentioned last week is now being organized and besides all the lady teachers of the Northville school, it also includes several other of our village's fair daughters among its members. The club will meet about once a month, when each member will bring a sample of her best culinary work and all will sit down to the feast. Besides mutual improvement in the art, (as if that were possible) they expect to have dead loads of fun.

"Economy is wealth," money well invested, will sometimes pay an hundred fold. Therefore it is Economy, when making a purchase, to get the best your money will buy. If you invest a quarter in a bottle of Hartwell's Cough Syrup, you have been economical, you have made a good investment and one that will pay you a hundred fold. For sale by Geo. C. Hueston.

During the months of July, August and September, children are liable to attacks of cholera infantum. The death rate from which is truly alarming. A great many of their dear little lives could be saved if proper care and exercise, and proper remedies used. If you would give your children a few drops of Hindoo Oil two or three times a day, cholera infantum would be unknown in your family. Try it. For sale by Geo. C. Hueston.

$1.25 night dresses for 97c at Eva Bovee's, Saturday, Oct. 8, only.

The liquor dealers of the state have determined to throw off the mask and jump actively into state politics this fall. They are becoming alarmed at the general opposition throughout the state, and propose to organize and fight the men who are in any form trying to restrict their traffic. It is the wholesale and retail liquor dealer's association of the state that is acting, and a confidential circular has been issued from Saginaw calling a state convention to be held in that city on the 18th and 19th of the present month. There are over 5,000 liquor dealers in Michigan, and it is understood party lines will be dropped in contests for the legislature, and the men supported who will best serve the liquor interests. The convention, it is understood, will endorse a gubernatorial candidate.

During their return trip from Washington, Capt. Simonds and Postmaster Horton visited parts of Seneca county, New York, the birth-place of quite a number of Northville people. Among other places, they visited the Willard asylum, the largest institution of the kind in the world. Capt. Gilbert, the superintendent of the asylum, is a nephew of Mr. Simonds and a cousin of Mr. Horton. Capt. Gilbert's son is married this week to a daughter of Dr. Chapin, superintendent of the great Quaker asylum, Philadelphia, and among the many presents the young lady will receive will be a handsome solid silver jar the gift of Messrs. Simonds and Horton. The jar is something entirely new and was one of the finest pieces in Rockwell's Northville jewelry store. Messrs. Simonds and Horton were highly pleased with the appearance of old Seneca county and especially with Willard and Ovid.

Warm knit vests and warm knit jackets for the babies at Miss Bovee's. They are beauty's. Call and see them.

THE NEWS OF THE DOINGS OF THE MICHIGANDERS.

Bloody Noses and Black Eyes.
The Lutherans of Bay Port are in a great turmoil. Herman Groesbeck and William Steinitz are the two factions which disagree regarding the organist. A daughter of Steinitz held the position till a few months ago, when the other side summoned sufficient strength to displace her. A meeting was held to choose a successor. Both sides were present in large numbers and before any action had been taken the respective partisans got into a lively tangle and Steinitz and Groesbeck were soon engaged in a regular fight right under the pulpit. Before they could be separated half those present were using their fists, and when the quarrel was finally ended many had black eyes, bleeding noses and torn clothes. The matter is still unsettled and more trouble is expected.

Horse Is Watched.

The justices of the supreme court on the evening of the 3d held a social session. Justice Long addressed Chief Justice Morse, and after speaking of the friendly relations which had so long existed among the members of the court, and referring to the fact that they would probably never again meet around the consultation table, presented the chief justice with a handsome gold watch and chain. On the inner case was inscribed upon the back with the chief justice's monogram in script, while on the inside is the inscription, "Chief Justice Morse, from his associates and clerk, Oct. 4, 1892."

A Would-Be Suicide Saved.

Mrs. Frank Pettit, of Port Huron, attempted to commit suicide by taking nine grains of strychnine. Four doctors and a stomach pump saved her. Mrs. Pettit was formerly Mrs. Mary Gray, of Algonac. She married Pettit, the proprietor of the Grand Central hotel, on July 3. Pettit had just graduated from the Keely institute and wanted a housekeeper for his new hotel.

A few weeks ago he took to drinking again and sold his hotel. He then announced that he was going west, leaving his wife behind. She became despondent and said that Frank did not love her, so concluded, to end her life. She still maintains that she will kill herself but is being watched.

A fishing tug ran down a boat containing Levi Frazer and Frank Cronmiller just outside the harbor at Marquette. Cronmiller was drowned, but Frazer succeeded in swimming to the breakwater. The tug developed the fact that the tug carried no lights as is required by the marine laws, and the master of the vessel is now liable to a revocation of his license, the payment of a heavy fine, a civil suit for damages and prosecution for manslaughter. Proceedings against the owner and master of the tug will doubtless be commenced as soon as the government officers have concluded their investigation into the circumstances of the accident.

Mopers Kidnap a Child.

Frank Wilcox and Ada Skinner, of Sand Beach, children of well-to-do people, and aged 23 and 19 respectively, have eloped and were married at Port Huron and have now been arrested in Barrie, Ont., on a charge of kidnapping. The kid they napped was the fleeing bride's sister and was taken along because the young lady couldn't bear to leave it behind. The young people have been lovers for a long time, but their parents were against their marriage because they differed radically in religion.

Robbed the Treasurer.

When the Flint River Valley fair closed at Bart's hall was given at the opera house in the evening. Washburn Hoising, treasurer of the fair society, had about $1.5 in silver in a shot bag which he was using to make change in selling dance tickets. A number of roughs started a fight and during the melee some one grabbed the bag of silver and got away with it. Two men were arrested, but the money is still missing.

A Strange Death.

John S. Flumerfelt, a wealthy old pioneer of Lapeer county, aged 70 years, was instantly killed in a peculiar manner. A heavy wind and rainstorm came up while he was in the field and he sought shelter behind a stump fence. He chose one of the larger stumps and crouched down among the roots. The wind tipped that particular stump to an upright position and he was instantly crushed to death.

An Aged Pastor's Giddiness.

Rev. Rodney D. Robinson, who was on trial five days in the Detroit M. E. conference at Owosso on a charge of doing several unministerial things, including hugging and kissing his pretty organist, was found guilty and deposed. He also walked in the cemetery with her at unreasonable hours, and participated in other events considered by the conference bad form.

The book on investigation proved to contain $27.61 in currency and certificate of deposit. Mrs. Lacy was so overcome with joy at the restoration of her lost fortune that she gave him two big silver dollars.

GENERAL NEWS TOPICS.

The Late Dr. Spurgeon's London Congregation Divided at His Successor.

Bomb Throwers in Brooklyn.

There was an enormous assemblage at Spurgeon's Tabernacle on Sunday evening to listen to the preaching of Thomas Spurgeon, son of the late eminent pulpit orator. The sermon was one of great power and it can no longer be doubted that Thomas Spurgeon is a preacher of originality and force who does not need to depend upon the prestige of a great name. The audience was disposed to be critical, and this fact adds significance to the many expressions of approval and the few of dissatisfaction which were heard. It is evident that Thomas Spurgeon has been steadily increasing among the admirers of his famous father, while on the other hand, there is a good deal of criticism upon the manner in which James Spurgeon, brother of the deceased, continues to ignore Thomas in public and private. James does not seem to be making any obtrusive effort to secure the succession to the pastorate himself, though there is a general understanding that he considers it in a sense his right and his friends are making an active canvass in his behalf.

Michigan Crops.

The state weather bureau bulletin says in northern counties winter wheat is being put in, fruit shipped, and corn and potatoes gathered in. Corn is an average and fruit a good crop. Frost came but did no harm. In central counties the weather has been very warm and pleasant. Pastures have advanced rapidly, and fields of early sown wheat are green. The warmth and sunshine which prevailed made all crops jump. Many pieces of corn which it was hardly thought would mature through, matured finely. Corn cutting is now practically finished. Fall seeding is about done. The quality of grain harvested has been fully up to the standard in most of the counties of that section. The harvest has been reported as troublesome in some counties, damaging fall wheat. Light frosts occurred once or twice at interior points, but no injury was reported. In southern counties most of the season's work is about done. A few pieces of corn which matured late yet remain to be cut, and in some localities wheat seeding has yet to be finished. Clover is being harvested and a light crop reported. Potatoes, also a light crop, but better than expected before the drought was broken. Fruits was a fair yield, except apples, which were below par.

A dynamite bomb was thrown from a window in the Garfield building, Brooklyn, N. Y., opposite the city hall. Fortunately, no one was injured, although the street in front of the building was as busy as it usually is at that time in the day. Lena Doremus, 15 years old was standing within 20 feet from where the bomb exploded and was badly shocked, but escaped without personal injury, although one of her shoes was nearly torn from her foot.

Ex-Mayor Hunter was passing when the bomb was thrown, and the police think that it might have been intended for him although they can give no plausible reason for this belief. Within a minute after the explosion hundreds of people filled the streets and were with difficulty kept out of the building. No arrests have been made. Strange as it may seem, no damage was done to the building.

Rapid Transit for Mails.

The committee appointed by the Postmaster-General to examine into the subject of a more rapid dispatch of mail matter between large cities and postoffice stations in large cities by means of pneumatic tubes or other devices has submitted its preliminary report. The committee states that it would not be possible in the time allowed before the fall session to make proper examination of all of the systems proposed in the eight bills submitted; but inasmuch as one proposition has been made which is more favorable to the department than any other, it recommends the acceptance of the offer of the Pneumatic Transit company of Jersey City to put down in the streets of Philadelphia between the offices and the East Chestnut street branch pneumatic tubes without expense to the department and without charge for a year's use of them.

"It Is Not Good for Man to Be Alone."

There was a sensation in society in Louisville Ky., when it was announced that Col. Cuthbert Bullitt and Mrs. Mary Ransom, two of the most prominent people in that city, had been married in Cincinnati. Both returned and denied the implication. Now comes the verification of the marriage and invitations were marked "Private." Col. Bullitt is 81 years of age and was a widower, while his bride was twice a widow and very rich.

Can This Be True?

A Winnipeg correspondent says: Twenty delegates of the Michigan state farmers have arrived here to select lands in the Canadian north west for those whom they represent. They say there will be a big exodus from Michigan here next year.

Forty Cars of Freight Burned.

Forty carloads of merchandise in the Nickel Plate freight yards at Chicago by fire. The loss will exceed $100,000. The origin of the fire is attributed to sparks from a passing engine.

Washington Stuck.

Washington Stuck, of Shelbyville, Ill., lost two small children by fire.

Seven of the 15 revolutionary widows in the United States lives in one Tennessee pension district, and four of them bear the good old name of Nancy.

A cable to the New York Herald from Valparaiso says that letters received from Rio Grande do Sul, Brazil, announces a movement to proclaim Dom Pedro's grandson emperor.

In honor of the birth of his daughter Empress William, of Germany, will pardon all female prisoners serving terms for first offenses committed while in distress or in fits of anger.

SENSATION AT HOMESTEAD.

A great sensation was created at Homestead, Pa., by the arrest for treason of a number of the advisory committee of the Homestead strikers. Those arrested were Thomas J. Crawford, William Baird, George Rylands, John Dierken and T. W. Brown. The arrests came like a thunderbolt to the strikers, they were so suddenly made and so unexpected.

It was late in the afternoon when the warrants, based on the information of Chief Justice Paxson reached Homestead and were placed in the hands of the officers to serve. They started out at 9 o'clock and first caught Crawford and Dierken, who were hurried to the provost guard tents. The others were caught in quick succession before the strikers had time to realize what was happening. As the prisoners were speeded to the prison tents, a great crowd of strikers gathered and many were hastened toward the guard but were held back and denied all information. Several of the prisoners did not know why they were arrested until safe behind the bayonets of the soldiers. It was intended first to keep the prisoners all night and hunt for others, but through fear of an attempt at rescue, they were taken to the city farm station, placed on the train, and taken to Pittsburgh.

The information for treason upon which the men were arrested stated that the defendants, who are inhabitants of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, did ordain, prepare and levy war against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania to the end that the constitution, laws and authority were defied, resisted and subverted, and that the said defendants, on July 1, with hundreds of others, armed and arrayed in warlike manner, that is to say, with guns, revolvers, cannons, swords, knives and clubs, did unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously assemble together in the borough of Homestead, in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and then and there with force and arms did falsely and traitorously and in hostile and warlike manner array themselves in insurrection and rebellion against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, contrary to the duty of allegiance and fidelity of the said defendants.

The Ex-Champion Slugger Says He Will Challenge Champion Corbett.

John L. Sullivan has startled his friends in Boston by announcing his intention of challenging Corbett to fight again. He has this to say: "I am saving money now with a respectable determination to challenge Corbett again and give me the chance to win back the money that was robbed from me in New Orleans."

"There was something wrong. I am not making any direct charges just now, but that I was not right I well know. After the first round I could see half a dozen Corbets, and as good a man as Corbett is I don't think he nor anyone else living can stand up and fight me 21 rounds without being hit. There was a scheme afoot to break what seemed to the poolroom men a dead sure combination, McAuliffe, Dixon and Sullivan, and I was the one selected to be thrown down."

A Regulation Track at Terre Haute, Ind. Scene of This Great feat—News Items of General Importance.

Nancy Hanks, that wonderful mare owned by the widely-known Budd Doble, has again lowered the world's trotting record by going a mile in 2:04 on a regulation track, at Terre Haute, Ind. The feat also goes below the pacing record and gives this animal the honors as the fastest horse in the world.

Over 10,000 people were in the grand stand when Starting Judge Walker announced that Nancy Hanks would go to beat her record of 2:07, made over the regulation track at St. Paul.

Coming like a whirlwind down the stretch, Abe was at her wheel, and Doble nodded for the word. The clip was a terrible one. She was at the eighth in 15 1/2 seconds and at the first quarter in 31 seconds. The second and uphill quarter was done in 31 1/2 seconds, the half being reached in 1:02 1/2.

The excited crowd began to cheer but at a word of admonition from the judge lapsed into silence. This was only broken by murmured "ohs" when the third quarter was done in 29 1/2 seconds. Even the judges were appalled at the wonderful burst of speed and thought the mare was running away.

So fast did she come that no one could tell her gait. On she fled and into the stretch never faltering.

Doble, with his steady hand and chocking gentle, "whoas" to keep her steady, squared her away for the great flight home. Even her light hoofs sounded low to the silent crowd.

As Doble gathered her in for the final effort he touched her gently with the whip, gave two of those masterful lifts of his, and the world's record was lowered 1 1/2 seconds and the record for regulation track 3 seconds. The 10,000 people who saw it sat breathless for a moment after the little mare passed under the wire and—Doble—who always modest of speech, occurred when carried to the judges' stand on the shoulders of the crowd and called upon for a speech, that "I am hoarse Nancy Hanks went so fast it took my breath away."

The day following five heats of the most terrific pacing meet ever held were made over the Terre Haute track. The horses were Mascot Guy and Flying Jib. In the first heat Mascot Guy in the fine work which gave him the laurels. The quarters were: First, 31 1/2; second, 31 1/2; third, 29 1/2—breaking Nancy Hanks' fastest quarter record of 29 1/2, fourth, 31, the mile in 2:04, thus tying Nancy Hanks trotting record.

The Print Paper Market.

A Chicago special says: Ready-print houses in the west and northwest and others who deal largely in white print paper, are endeavoring to buy extensively of this class of goods in view of the fact that there is likely soon to be still further advance in price, as indicated there has already been a perceptible upward movement. The rise in rates is caused by the quarantine which this government has placed on rags from foreign countries, the source from whence comes the greater bulk of raw material entering into the manufacture of print paper. There is a probability this embargo will last as long as there is any danger of cholera getting a foothold in this country, and though print paper has already exhibited an upward tendency the increase is thought to be only a forerunner of other and greater advances that will rapidly follow.

A Gentle Ferry Boat Launched.

The first of a number of ferries for service across Lake Michigan was launched with much ceremony by the Craig Shipbuilding company at Toledo. She was christened Ann Arbor No. 1. The boat will go into service as soon as completed between Frankfort, Mich., and Pewanuck, Wis., in connection with the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan railway. Cars will be run on the railroad tracks, which extend the entire length of the steamer and carried without being broken between Pewanuck and Frankfort. Twenty loaded cars will be carried at a time. The ferries will run the year around, and are expected to make the passage across Lake Michigan regardless of wind or weather. The boat cost $250,000.

A Strange Phenomenon.

San Francisco special advises from Ounalska state that the supply steamer St. Paul reached there Sept. 2 from San Francisco, and reported that Aug. 28 it steamed for four hours through a cloud so black and dense that lamps had to be lighted. When the steamer emerged from the cloud its decks were covered to a depth of several inches with volcanic dust. The nearest crater to the steamer's position is Pabloff Mountain, 265 miles away. It is thought at Ounalska that there has been an upheaval on the shore, or that a new island has emerged from the sea as did Bogaslof Island six years ago.

Rats, Cats, Rabbits and Foxes—What Next?

Some time ago a number of cats were sent from Halifax, N. S., to Sable Island to destroy the rats which were playing havoc with the rabbits. The cats multiplied and became so numerous that it was decided to send a number of foxes there to thin out the cats. The foxes did their work too well, not only killing off cats but destroying birds, raiding nests and eating up eggs by the thousands. People now ask relief from the foxes.

AN AGED COUPLE FIGHT.

The Woman Uses a Hatchet and the Old Man an Ax—The Former Injured.

Reuben Skinner, aged 89 years, was lodged in jail charged with murderously assaulting his wife. The old man has lived many years in Kent county on a five-acre farm 14 miles north of Grand Rapids, but he and his wife have not been happy together of late years. He owns considerable property and she has repeatedly urged him to deed it over to her. His wife is 63 years old and he says her purpose is to get possession of the property that she may use and dispose of it. The disposition of the property came up again for discussion on the day of the trouble and the discussion waxed warm. Finally in a rage the wife seized a hatchet and went for the old man. An ax was lying on the ground and Skinner grasped it. Turning quickly he hit his wife over the head with the ax and when she fell senseless to the ground, fearing he had killed her, he fled through the field and woods to the home of a son, where he remained all night. He did not tell his son what had happened, and early in the morning started ostensibly for home. He had hardly gone before neighbors, who had discovered Mrs. Skinner's condition and did what they could for her, arrived in search of the old man. They followed the path he took through the woods. When found Skinner had a rope in his hand and was preparing to hang himself.

Delegates from the United States already designated by the President are as follows: Senators Allison and Jones, Congressman McCreary, of Kentucky, Henry W. Cannon, of New York, F. W. Walker, of Massachusetts. In addition to these it is expected that Mr. Terrell, minister at Brussels, will be a delegate.

J. B. Moorehead, a theatrical manager, 21 years old, was found dead in his bed in New York City, having committed suicide by shooting himself. It was later established that Moorehead was a member of the suicide club, and that he ended his life to keep a pledge given there can be no doubt. Half a dozen letters addressed to friends and relatives were found in the suicide's room. One addressed to the coroner read: "I have committed suicide as per club. Please give verdict to such effect and oblige J. B. Moorehead."

A Brave Rescuer Injured.

The Buena Vista hotel at Denver, Col., was destroyed by fire. Gustave Kearse, a lodger, perished in the flames and Anna Gunderson, a McDougall and Tom Arnold were severely burned. The latter may die. Only the brave work of Patrick Mitchell saved those who escaped. The 40 lodgers had to jump from the windows. In 20 minutes the fire was discovered, the structure was in ruins. Mitchell broke both arms and both legs in leaping from a veranda when his work had been accomplished. Loss $10,000.

SONGS.

Because the sunset sky
Makes music in my soul,
Only to fade and die,
Shall I not take the whole
Of beauty that it gives While yet it lives?

Ah, yes, because the rose Fades, and the sunset skies Darken, and winter blows
All bare, and music dies, Therefore, now is to me Eternity!

Fades the rose: the year grows old;
The tale is told;
Youth doth depart
Only stays the heart.

Ah, no! if stays the heart
Youth can ne'er depart,
Nor the sweet tale be told—

THE ENEMY SHE LOVED.

"If I thought daughter of mine would so much as touch a hated Ger-man's hand I would swear she had been changed in her cradle!"

So spoke Jules Favart in hot breath just before the siege of Paris had begun—breath kindled by the news brought him by the girl shrinking before his anger—the news that one of her schoolmates and the child of an old neighbor had absolutely been married, the day previous to a young German officer, bearing active arms against the country of his newly-made wife.

All through the day old Jules kept muttering to himself at nightfall he called his little Olive to him.

"Women are strange beings," he began, as if to relieve his mind of a load which was weighing upon it, —and perhaps it's no right to believe you of different stuff from the rest.
These are uncertain times were in,
too. I want you, Olive, to make me a solemn promise nay, more, to kneel beside me and make me a solemn oath. Kneel, my girl—kneel!"

Pale and terrified, the young girl kneelt.

"Now raise your hand, and swear that you will never marry a man who cannot boast French blood in his veins!"

Solemnly the girl swore.

The old man smiled triumphantly as he bent and kissed the long, shin-
little head.

"I'm ready now," he said.

Within a week the siege of Paris had begun. Within a month the child of Jules Favart, who had enlisted, was orphaned. A German bullet had killed forever the heart so loyal to France.

For a time Olive was stunned. No one found opportunity to sympathize with her grief, for around and about her everyone was nursing some misery of their own. Every house bore some badge of mourning. Every heart carried its own burden.

But sorer days were in store in Paris—days when the Germans marched untroubled through its streets, and spoke their hated language in loud triumphant accents.

On a party of these Olive stumbled
one evening as she hastened home.
They were common soldiers and her pretty face from which she had thrown back her heavy veil of crape, attracted them.

Instantly two of them approached her, addressing her in insulting praise in her own tongue.

She hastily drew down her veil, but one bolder than the rest raised his hand to again uplift it. Scarcely had he done so than it was struck down by a sharp, quick blow from behind.
Olive turned to see the Frenchman who had delivered her, but to a young officer in full German uniform, stood before her, respectfully touching his hat.

the men sent them abashed away.
Then, with an accent almost as pure as her own, he begged that she would

Such outrages in time of war are difficult always to prevent," he said, —but you risk much by appearing un-
father—your brother—"

"Ah!" she interrupted, "do you leave us our fathers and our brothers?
No! I have been to the hospital, caring for the poor men who may be spared to their daughters and their
taken from me my all."

And she moved quickly away as if the conversation were at an end, but
the young officer kept pace behind her.

"Pardon me," he said, "but you are too young and too pretty to pass through Paris unmolested. You hate me as your foe, but you must let me
you hate me the more."

"There is no need," she replied.
"I go every day to the hospital, and every day at this hour, or very little

over the young man's face.

"I am stationed so near here that if you will permit me every night I will be your escort."

"I would rather die than accept a kindness from your hands, or those of any of your blood!" she answered, holy—you, who are my dear father's murderers!"

And as she spoke the last words she passed before a gate, which the concealer hastily opened for her admittance, and which instantly swung to behind her.

paused singularly enough, she could recall every feature of the young officer's face—a face which seemed to her to realize some dream of manly beauty; the echo of his voice lingered
and musical—musical even when he sternly addressed the soldiers in his own guttural tongue.

All the next day she was busy again among the wounded.
When the evening fell she hastened homeward, but with new dread, new sinking, until, looking behind her, as

saw, following her, her protector of the night before.

Until the gate again closed behind her, he let but that little distance intervene between them.

The hot blood mounted to her face and yet an instinctive sense of care and protection mingled with what she named presumption.

Every night after it was the same.
Earlier or later, as she might chance to be, he was near her, nor left her till
One night he approached her.

he said. "I cannot be here to aid
you. You must not go out alone.
Promise me that you will not."

For a moment she was almost tempted into forgetfulness that he was a German. For a moment she was almost tempted to answer—"I promise!" then she recovered herself, and turned hotly and indignantly upon him.
"Pass my word to you!" she said—
"to you, my enemy—the enemy whom I hate!"

"And you, my enemy are the enemy I love!" he replied. "Why should I love a woman to whom I have spoken scarce twenty words in my life, and who has answered me with scorn and contempt always?"
I know not. Some strange freak of fate perhaps, but so it is. I may go out to-morrow to meet my death."

I should, doubtless you will never know that thus France has avenged herself, but I should like to feel you sometimes gave me one kindly thought, even as my last thought, living or dying will be for the woman who gave me a stone for the heart I offered her. But, for heaven's sake promise me you will not go out alone
added torture that you are in peril."

They had reached the gate ere this.
Her hand was on the bell. She opened her lips meaning to rebuke, but to, instead, the two simple words,
"I promise!" alone, emanated from them in a low and thrilling whisper.

Before she had divined his intention, he had caught in his little gloved fingers and raised them to his lips. The next moment the gate swung to between them, and Olive lying to her own room, had lunged herself in a burst of bitter sobbing on the bed.

He was a German and she—hated him.

Three days after she paused beside two surgeons in earnest consultation.
"There's but one way to save him," said one. "It's an ugly wound, but he's sinking from loss of blood.
If we could get some one to submit to transfusion, I think he would recover."

"Impossible!" answered the other.
"And Olive passed on into the room where lay the sufferer. She paused beside the cot. He was lying white and insensible upon the pillow, his head bound in blood-stained band-
cry beside him.

To her he was nameless but he was the German whom she hated, and the man whom she loved!"

Ah, in that moment she knew the truth, and then she remembered the surgeons' words. They were about separating when she returned to them.

"You said transfusion would save him," she said. "I am strong and I am ready."

disclosed her bare white arm, with its dimly-outlined blue veins.

A little while the physician demurred, but it was a new experiment in science and in the end she had her way.

She did not even shudder as the sharp lance penetrated her vein,
and the faintness which crept over
blood poured from her veins into his
was ecstasy, for though to her it
—her life for his.

She swooned before the operation was completed, and days had passed before she could rally even to know that her sacrifice had been in vain.

But the terrible days were over.
When Olive was allowed to once more assume her role as nurse. Max Meyer-der was still in need of all her care, but when she stood once again beside him he looked at her with wide-open, conscious eyes, into which, as he recognized her there came a look of in-effable happiness.

tight in his.

Through long weeks she nursed him—weeks which taught her that all her future must be wretchedness, since her promise to her dead father forbade that he should share it.

But one evening as they sat together in the twilight he almost wholly convalescent now, he spoke
them, as in low, endearing accents, he asked her to be his wife.

Amid bitter sobs she told him all then, and hid her face within her hands. But he gently drew them down, and drew her head upon his heart.

"My own," he said, "your sacrifice has borne its fruit. Your husband must boast French blood in his veins.
Forsooth! Have I, then, none in mine? Did you not mingle yours with mine—the very blood of Jules Favart? Ah, Olive, keep your vow to your dead father and, keeping it, give yourself to me."

In silent rapture, Olive listened to the words; but as her arms close-clasped themselves about his neck, he knew he had won his cause, and that

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES FROM ST. LUKE'S GOSPEL.

Hug the Shore—The Text Used as an Incentive for Bible Study—A Sermon for Ministers to Read.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 2.—Since his return from Europe, Dr. Talmage has faced audiences unusually large and enthusiastic, who are attracted to the Tabernacle no less by the potent eloquence of the preacher than through a
message of thanks entrusted to him by the czar to the contributors of The Christian Herald famine cargo, which he and Mr. Klopsch conveyed to Russia in the steamer Leo. It is understood that Dr. Talmage has in preparation a
as well as his own preaching tour to Germany, England, Scotland, and Ireland. The text this morning was
into the deep."

the world's conquest, was selecting his staff officers. There were plenty of students with high foreheads, and
and refined tastes, in Rome and in Jerusalem. Christ might have called into the apostleship twelve book-worms, or twelve rhetoricians, or twelve artists. Instead, he takes a group of men who had never made a speech, never taken a lesson in "belles lettres," never been sick enough to make them look delicate—their hands broad, clumsy, and hard-muscle. He chose fishermen, among other reasons, I think, because they were physically hardy. Kneeling makes strong arms and stout chests. Much climbing of rathes makes one's head steady. A Galilee tempter, wrestled men into gymnasts. The opening work of the
not want twelve infidels hanging about him, complaining all the time how badly they felt. He leaves the delicate students at Jerusalem and Rome for their mothers and aunts to take care of, and goes down to the sea-shore, and out of the toughest material makes an apostleship. The ministry need more corporeal vigor than any other class.
Fine minds and good intentions are important, but there must be physical
mill-wheel may be well built and the
and grind the other.

He chose fishermen, also, because
man who cannot stand assault is not fit for the ministry. It always has been and always will be rough work, and the man who, at every sentence or caricature, sits down to cry, had better be at some other work. It is no place for ecclesiastical doll-babies. A man who cannot preach because he has forgotten his manuscript or lost his spectacles, ought not to preach at all. Heaven deliver the church from a ministry that preach in kid gloves, and from sermons in black morocco covers!
These fishermen were rough and ready.
They had been in the severest of all colleges. When they were knocked over by the main boom of the ship, they entered the "Sophomore," when washed off by a great wave, they entered the "Junior," when floating for two days, without food or drink, on a plank, they came to the "Senior," and then, at last, their education on the beach in a midnight hurricane, they graduated with the first honor.

My text finds Jesus on shipboard with one of these bronzed men—Simon by name. This fisherman had been sweeping his net in shoal water. "Push out," says Christ; "what is the use of hugging the shore in this boat? Here is a lake twelve miles long and six wide, and it is all populated—just waiting for the sweep of your net. Launch out into the deep." The advice that my Lord gave to Simon is as appropriate for us all in a spiritual sense. The fact is that most of us are just paddling along the shore. We are afraid to venture out into the great depths of God and Christian experience.
We think that the boat will be upset, or that we cannot "clew down the mizen top-sail," and our cowardice makes us poor fishermen. I think I hear the voice of Christ commanding us, as he did Simon, on that day when bright Galilee set in among the green
in an emerald cup: "Launch out into the deep!"

all those who are paddling in the margin of bible research. My father read the bible through three times after he was 80 years of age, and without spectacles, not for the mere purpose of saying he had been through it so often, but for his eternal profit.
John Golby, the brother-in-law of Daniel Webster, learned to read after he was 84 years of age, in order that he might become acquainted with the scriptures. There is no book in the world that demands so much of our attention as the bible. Yet nine-tenths of Christian men get no more than ankle deep. They think it is a good sign not to venture too far. They never ask how or why; and if they see some Christian becoming inquisitive about the deep things of God, they say:
"Be careful; you had better not go out so far from shore." My answer is:
The farther you go from shore the better.
If you have the right kind of ship
If you have mere worldly philosophy for the hulk, and pride for a sail, and self-conceit for the helm, the first
take the bible for your craft, the
have gone ten thousand furlongs, Christ will still command: "Launch out into the deep." Ask some such

gate of every parable; amidst the excitement of every miracle; by the solitaryness of every patriarchal threshing-floor, amidst the white faces of Sennacherib's slain turned up into the moonlight; amidst the flying chariots of the Golden City. Ask who Jesus is, and keep on asking it of every bible hly, of every raven, of every star, of every crazed brain cured, every blind man come to sunlight, of every coin in a fish's mouth, of every loaf that got to be five loaves, of every wrathful sea pacified, of every pulseless arm stretched forth in gratulation; ask it of his mother, of Agastus, of Herod, of the Syrophenician woman; of the damsel that woke up from the death sleep, of Joseph, who had him buried, of the angel posted as sentinel at his tomb, of the dumb earth, that shook, and groaned, and thundered when he died.

A missionary in France offered a bi-
took it, tore out a dozen pages, and
with them began to light his pipe.
Some years after the missionary happened in the same house. The family
war, and his bible had been sent back home. The missionary took it up, and
that he had left in the house, and from
dying soldier had written on one of the leaves of the bible: "Rejected and scuffed at, but finally believed in and saved." The bible may be used to light the pipe of witicism by some,
but for us it is a staff in life, a pillow in death, and our joy for eternity.

Walk all up and down this bible do-man! Try every path. Plunge in at the prophecies, and come out at the epistles. Go with the patriarchs, until you meet the evangelists. Run-
house, until they know what is in every room, and into what every door opens. Open every jewel-casket. Examine the sky-lights. Forever be asking questions. But to a higher use than was intended the Oriental proverb: "Hold all the skirts of thy mantle extended when heaven is raining gold."

Passing from Bonn to Coblenz on the Rhine, the scenery is comparatively tame. But from Coblenz to Mayence it is enchanting. You sit on deck, and feel as if this last flash of beauty must exhaust the scene, but in a moment there is a turn of the river, which covers up the former view with more luxuriant vineyards, and more defiant castles, and bolder bluffs, vine-wreathed, and grapes so ripe that if
their rich life away into the bowls of Bingen and Hockheimer.
Here and there, there are streams of water melting into the river, like smaller joys swallowed into the bosom
begins to throw its black mantle over the shoulder of the hills, and you are approaching disembarkation at Mayence, the lights along the shore fairly bewitch the scene with their beauty, giving one a thrill that he feels but once, yet that lasts him forever.

So this river of God's word is not a straight stream, but a winding splendor—at every turn new wonders to attract, stir, rapture, pressing to the brink, and crowded with castles of strength (Stolzenfels and Johannis-berger as nothing compared with the strong tower into which the righteous run and are saved), and our disembarkation at last, in the evening amidst the lights that gleam from the shore of
majority of bible voyagers stop at Coblenz, where the chief glories begin.

The sea of God's word is not like Gennesaret, twelve miles by six, but boundless, and in any one direction you can sail on forever. Why, then, confine yourself to a short psalm, or to a few verses of an epistle? The largest fish are not near the shore. Hoist all sail to the winds of heaven. Take
like some of the whalers that went out from New Bedford or Portsmouth to be gone for two or three years. Yea, calculate on a lifetime voyage. You do not want to land until you land in
eternity! Launch out into the deep.

The text is appropriate to all Christians of shallow experience. Doubts and fears have in our day been almost elected to the parliament of Christian graces. Some consider it a bad sign not to have any doubts. Doubts and fears are not signs of health, but festers and carbuncles. You have a valuable house or farm.
It is suggested that the title is not good. You employ counsel. You have the deeds examined. You search the record for mortgages, judgments, and liens. You are not satisfied until you have a certificate, signed by the great seal of the State, assuring you that the
their title to heaven an undecided matter! Why do you not go to the records and find out? Give yourself no rest, day nor night, until you can read your

Jn thinking people suppose that big cities grow like jelly fishes, gradually expanding from a single center. But they don't. They cover the ground just as a crop of parsley spreads over a newly-wooded garden. Shoots spring up here and there from a great number of central roots. From these various centers it gradually extends until the ground is completely covered.

The various root centers are plainly discernible about Chicago and the vacant spaces between them are just as plain. Leave the city and you run through a rapidly filling blank spot before you strike Englewood, a blank, then Auburn Park, another blank, then Pullman to the west, South Chicago to the east and just beyond you Hammond, with vacant spaces between each of them. Still another blank
rapidly growing new center.

This leads one to inquire, what is necessary to make a root-center? What determines where they will grow? Evidently railroads. The junction of two or three railroads in the vicinity of any large city is sure to develop
junction which is twenty miles from the center of a city is often worth
remote from any railroad or only on one.

lines. Moreover, one of its railroads is cago and bringing twenty-four more railroads into immediate switch connection. It is strange such an important point was overlooked for so long.

Dr. Prime, in his book of wonderful interest entitled Around the World, describes a tomb in India of marvelous architecture. Twenty thousand men
and the buildings around it. Standing in that tomb, if you speak or sing, after you have ceased you hear the echo coming from a height of one hundred and
The sound is drawn out in sweet prolongation, as though the angels of God were chanting on the wing. How many souls in the tomb of sin will lift up the voice of penitence and prayer? If now they would cry unto
not struck from the marble cupola of an earthly mausoleum, but sounding
flying with the news; for there is joy among the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth!

The small daughter of a well-known postmaster out of his cancellation fees, which constitute part of his revenue. Consequently he was arrested.

WITH THE WOLVERINES

THE NEWS OF THE DOINGS OF THE MICHIGANERS.

The Lutherans of Bay Port are in a great turmoil. Herman Groesbeck and William Steinitz are the two factions which disagree regarding the organist. A daughter of Steinitz held the position till a few months ago when the other side summoned sufficient strength to depose her. A meeting was held to choose a successor. Both sides were present in large numbers and before any action had been taken the respective partisans got into a lively quarrel and Steinitz and Groesbeck were soon engaged in a regular fight right under the pulpit. Before they could be separated half those present were using their fists, and when the quarrel was finally ended many had black eyes, bleeding noses and torn clothes. The matter is still unsettled and more trouble is expected.

Morse Is Watched.

A Would-Be Suicide Saved.
Mrs. Frank Pettit, of Port Huron, attempted to commit suicide by taking nine grains of strychnine. Found doctors and a stomach pump saved her life. Mrs. Pettit was formerly Mrs. Mary Gray, of Algonac. She married Pettit, the proprietor of the Grand Central hotel, on July 7. Pettit had just graduated from the Leely institute and wanted a housekeeper for his new hotel.

A few weeks ago he took to drinking again and sold his hotel. He then announced that he was going west, leaving his wife behind. She became despondent and said that Frank did not love her, so concluded to end her life. She still maintains that she will kill herself but is being watched.

A fishing tug ran down a boat containing Levi Frazer and Frank Cronmiller just outside the harbor at Marquette. Cronmiller was drowned, but Frazer succeeded in swimming to the breakwater. The tug carried no lights as is required by the marine laws, and the master of the vessel is now liable to a revocation of his license, the payment of a heavy fine and a civil suit for damages and prosecution for manslaughter. Proceedings against the owner and master of the tug will doubtless be commenced as soon as the government officers have concluded their investigation into the circumstances of the accident.

Lopers Kidnap a Child.
Frank Wilcox and Ada Skinner, of Sand Beach, children of well-to-do people, and aged 23 and 19 respectively, have eloped and were married at Port Huron and have now been arrested in Barrie, Ont., on a charge of kidnaping. The lad they napped was the fleeing bride's sister and was taken along because the young lady couldn't bear to leave at home. The young people have been lovers for a long time, but their parents were against their marriage because they differed radically in religion.

Robbed the Treasurer.
When the Flint River Valley fair closed at Burt a ball was given at the opera house in the evening. Washburn Fleming, treasurer of the fair society, had about $125 in silver in a shot bag which he was using to make change in selling dance tickets. A number of roughs started a fight and during the melee some one grabbed the bag of silver and got away with it. Two men were arrested, but the money is still missing.

A Strange Death.
John S. Flumerfelt, a wealthy old pioneer of Lapeer county, aged 70 years, was instantly killed in a peculiar manner. A heavy wind and rainstorm came up while he was in the field and he sought shelter behind a stump fence. He chose one of the larger stumps and crouched down among the roots. The wind tipped that particular stump to an upright position and he was instantly crushed to death.

An Aged Pastor's Giddiness.
Rev. Rodney D. Robinson, who was on trial five days in the Detroit M. E. conference at Owosso on a charge of doing several unministerial things at Clarkston, including hugging and kissing his pretty organist, was found guilty and deposed. He also walked in the cemetery with her at unseasonable hours, and participated in other events considered by the conference bad form.

GENERAL NEWS TOPICS.

The Late Dr. Spurgeon's London Congregation Divided at Its Successor. Bomb Thrown in Brooklyn.

There was an enormous assemblage at Spurgeon's Tabernacle on Sunday evening to listen to the preaching of Thomas Spurgeon, son of the late eminent pulpit orator. The sermon was one of great power and it can no longer be doubted that Thomas Spurgeon is a preacher of originality and force who does not need to depend upon the prestige of a great name. The audience was disposed to be critical, and this fact adds significance to the many expressions of approval and the few of dissatisfaction which were heard. It is evident that Thomas Spurgeon has been steadily increasing among the admirers of his father, while on the other hand, there is a good deal of criticism upon the manner in which James Spurgeon, brother of the deceased, continues to ignore Thomas in public and private. James does not seem to be making any obtrusive effort to secure the succession to the pastorate himself, though there is a general understanding that he considers it in a sense his right, and his friends are making an active canvass in his behalf.

Michigan Crops.
The state weather bureau bulletin says: "In northern counties winter wheat is being put in, fruit shipped, and corn and potatoes gathered in. Corn is an average and fruit a good crop. Frost came but did no harm. In central counties the weather has been very warm and pleasant. Pastures have advanced rapidly, and fields of early sown wheat are green. The warmth and sunshine which prevailed made all crops jump. Many pieces of corn which it was hardly thought would come through, matured finely. Corn cutting is now practically finished. Fall seeding about done. The quality of grain harvested has been fully up to the standard in most of the counties of that section. The Hessian fly has been reported as troublesome in some counties, damaging fall wheat. Light frosts occurred once or twice at interior points, but no injury was reported. In southern counties most of the season's work is about done. A few pieces of corn which matured late yet remain to be cut, and in some localities wheat seeding has yet to be finished. Clover is being harvested, and a light crop reported. Potatoes, also a light crop, but better than expected before the drought was broken. Fruit was a fair yield, except apples, which were below par."

A dynamite bomb was thrown from a window in the Garfield building, Brooklyn, N. Y., opposite the city hall. Fortunately, no one was injured, although the street in front of the building was as busy as it usually is at that time in the day. Lena Doremus, 15 years old, was standing within 20 feet from where the bomb exploded and was badly shocked, but escaped without personal injury, although one of her shoes was nearly torn from her foot.

Ex-Major Hunter was passing when the bomb was thrown, and the police think that it might have been intended for him although they can give no plausible reason for this belief. Within a minute after the explosion hundreds of people filled the streets and were with difficulty kept out of the building. No arrests have been made. Strange as it may seem, no damage was done to the building.

Rapid Transit for Mails.
The committee appointed by the Postmaster-General to examine into the subject of a more rapid dispatch of mail matter between large cities and postoffice stations in large cities by means of pneumatic tubes or other devices has submitted its preliminary report. The committee states that it would not be possible in the time allowed before the fall session to make proper examination of all of the systems proposed in the eight bids submitted; but inasmuch as one proposition has been made which is more favorable to the department than any other, it recommends the acceptance of the offer of the Pneumatic Transit company of Jersey City to put down in the streets of Philadelphia between the offices and the East Chestnut street branch pneumatic tubes, without expense to the department and without charge for a year's use of them.

SENSATION AT HOMESTEAD.

A great sensation was created at Homestead, Pa., by the arrest for treason of a number of the advisory committee of the Homestead strikers. Those arrested were Thomas J. Crawford, William Baird, George Rylands, John Dierken and T. W. Brown. The arrests came like a thunderbolt to the strikers, they were so suddenly made and so unexpected.

It was late in the afternoon when the warrants, based on the information of Chief Justice Paxson reached Homestead and were placed in the hands of the officers to serve. They started out at 9 o'clock and first caught Crawford and Dierken, who were hurried to the provost guard tents. The others were caught in quick succession before the strikers had time to realize what was happening. As the prisoners were speeded to the prison tents, a mob was taken and many strikers hastened toward the camp, but were held back and denied all information. Several of the prisoners did not know why they were arrested until safe behind the bayonets of the soldiers. It was intended first to keep the prisoners all night and hunt for others, but through fear of an attempt at rescue, they were taken to the city farm station, placed on the train, and taken to Pittsburgh.

The information for treason upon which the men were arrested stated that the defendants, who are inhabitants of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, did ordain, prepare and levy war against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania to the end that the constitution, laws and authority were defied, resisted and subverted; and that the said defendants, on July 1, with hundreds of others, armed and arrayed in warlike manner, that is to say, with guns, revolvers, cannons, swords, knives and clubs, did unlawfully, maliciously and traitorously assemble together in the borough of Homestead, in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and then and there with force and arms did falsely and traitorously and in hostile and warlike manner array themselves in insurrection and rebellion against the commonwealth of Pennsylvania, contrary to the duty of allegiance and fidelity of the said defendants.

SULLIVAN IS NOT SATISFIED.

The Ex-Champion Slugger Says He Will Challenge Champion Corbett.

John L. Sullivan has startled his friends in Boston by announcing his intention of challenging Corbett to fight again. He has this to say:

"I am saving money now with a resolute determination to challenge Corbett again and give me the chance to win back the money that was robbed from me in New Orleans."

"There was something wrong. I am not making any direct charges just now, but that I was not right I well know. After the first round I could see half a dozen Corbets, and as good a man as Corbett is I don't think he nor anyone else living can stand up and fight me 21 rounds without being hit. There was a scheme afoot to break what seemed to the poolroom men a dead sure combination, McArthur, Dixon and Sullivan, and I was the one selected to be thrown down."

A Regulation Track at Terre Haute, the Scene of This Great Feet-News Items of General Importance.

Nancy Hanks, that wonderful mare owned by the widely-known Budd Double, has again lowered the world's trotting record by going a mile in 2:04 on a regulation track, at Terre Haute, Ind. The feat also goes before the pacing record and gives this animal the honors as the fastest horse in the world.

Over 10,000 people were in the grand stand when Starting Judge Walker announced that Nancy Hanks would go to beat her record of 2:07, made over the regulation track at St. Paul.

Coming like a whirlwind down the stretch, Abe was at her wheel, and Double nodded for the word. The clip was a terrible one. She was at the eighth in 1 1/4 seconds and at the first quarter in 31 seconds. The second and uphill quarter was done in 31 1/2 seconds, the half being reached in 1:02 1/2.

The excited crowd began to cheer but at a word of admonition from the judge lapsed into silence. This was only broken by murmured "ohs" when the third quarter was done in 29 1/2 seconds. Even the judges were appalled at the wonderful burst of speed and thought the mare was running away.

"Doble, with his steady hand and clucking gentle 'whoas' to keep her steady, squared her away for the great flight home. Even her light hoofbeats sounded low to the silent crowd. As Doble gathered her in for the final effort he touched her gently with the whip, gave two of those masterful lifts of his, and the world's record was lowered 1 1/2 seconds and the record for regulation track 3 seconds. The 10,000 people who saw it sat breathless for a moment after the little mare passed under the wire and even Doble, who, always modest of speech, declared when carried to the judges' stand on the shoulders of the crowd and called upon for a speech, that 'I am hoarse. Nancy Hanks went so fast it took my breath away.'"

The day following five heats of the most terrific pacing meet ever held were made over the Terre Haute track. The horses were Vascot, Guy and Flying Jib. In the first heat Vascot got in the fine work which gave him the laurels. The quarters were: First, 31 1/4; second, 31 1/4; third, 29 1/4—breaking Nancy Hanks fastest quarter record of 29 1/4, fourth, 31, the mile in 2:04, thus tying Nancy Hanks trotting record.

The Print Paper Market.
A Chicago special says: Ready-print houses in the west and northwest and others who deal largely in white print paper, are endeavoring to buy extensively of this class of goods in view of the fact that there is likely soon to be still further advance in price, as indeed there has already been a perceptible upward movement. The rise in rates is caused by the quarantine which this government has placed on rags from foreign countries, the source from whence comes the greater bulk of raw material entering into the manufacture of print paper. There is a probability this embargo will last as long as there is any danger of cholera getting a foothold in this country, and though print paper has already exhibited an upward tendency the increase is thought to be only a forerunner of other and greater advances that will rapidly follow.

A Gigantic Ferry Boat Launched.
The first of a number of giant ferries for service across Lake Michigan was launched with much ceremony by the Crag Shipbuilding company at Toledo. She was christened Ann Arbor No. 1. The boat will go into service as soon as completed between Frankfort, Mich., and Pewankee, Wis., in connection with the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan railway. Cars will be run on the railroad tracks, which extend the entire length of the steamer and carried without being broken between Pewankee and Frankfort. Twenty loaded cars will be carried at a time. The ferries will run the year round, and are expected to make the passage across Lake Michigan, regardless of wind or weather. The boat cost $250,000.

A Strange Phenomenon.
San Francisco special. Advices from Unalakaska state that the supply steamer St. Paul reached there Sept. 2 from San Francisco and reported that Aug. 29 it steamed for four hours through a cloud so black and dense that lamps had to be lighted. When the steamer emerged from the cloud its decks were covered to a depth of several inches with volcanic dust. The nearest active crater to the steamer's position is Pablos Mountain, 265 miles away. It is thought at Unalakaska that there has been an upheaval on the shore, or that a new island has emerged from the sea as did Bogaslof island six years ago.

Kats, Cats, Rabbits and Foxes—What Next?
Some time ago a number of cats were sent from Halifax, N. S., to Sable Island to destroy the rats which were playing havoc with the rabbits. The cats multiplied and became so numerous that it was decided to send a number of foxes there to thin out the cats. The foxes did their work well, not only killing off cats but destroying birds, raiding nests and eating up eggs by the thousands. People now ask relief from the foxes.

The Woman Uses a Hatchet and the Old Man a Nail. The Former Injured.

Reuben Skinner, aged 89 years, was lodged in jail charged with murderously assaulting his wife. The old man has lived many years in Kent county on a five-acre farm 14 miles north of Grand Rapids, but he and his wife have not been happy together of late years. He owns considerable property and she has repeatedly urged him to deed it over to her. His wife is 65 years old and he says her purpose is to get possession of the property that she may use and dispose of it. The disposition of the property came up again for discussion on the day of the trouble and the discussion waxed warm. Finally in a rage the wife seized a hatchet and went for the old man. An ax was lying on the ground and Skinner grasped it. Turning quickly he hit his wife over the head with the ax and when she fell senseless to the ground, fearing he had killed her, he fled through the field and woods to the home of a son, where he remained all night. He did not tell his son what had happened, and early in the morning started ostensibly for home. He had hardly gone before neighbors, who had discovered Mrs. Skinner's condition and did what they could for her, arrived in search of the old man. They followed the path he took through the woods. When found Skinner had a rope in his hand and was preparing to hang himself.

Monetary Conference, Brussels, Nov. 22.
Secretary of State Foster has sent cable notifications to the European governments which have already signified a willingness to be represented at the international monetary conference that it has been arranged to have the conference meet in Brussels on Nov. 23 next; the Belgian government having signified its readiness to have the same hold its session in its capital, and the leading powers having approved the selection. The governments which have accepted the invitation, to the United States to send delegates to the monetary conference are as follows: Austria-Hungary, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Italy, Netherlands, Portugal, Roumania, Russia, Servia, Spain, Sweden and Norway and Switzerland. The delegates from the United States already designated by the President are as follows: Senators Allison and Jones, Congressman McHenry, of Kentucky, Henry W. Cannon, of New York, F. W. Walker, of Massachusetts. In addition to these it is expected that Mr. Terrell, minister at Brussels, will be made a delegate.

Belonged to a Suicide Club.

J. B. Moorehead, a theatrical manager, 21 years old, was found dead in his bed in New York City, having committed suicide by shooting himself. It was later established that Moorehead was a member of the suicide club, and that he ended his life to keep a pledge given there can be no doubt. Half a dozen letters addressed to friends and relatives were found in the suicide's room. One addressed to the coroner read:

"I have committed suicide as per club. Please give verdict to such effect and oblige. J. B. Moorehead."

A Brave Rescuer Injured.
The Buena Vista hotel at Denver, Col., was destroyed by fire. Gustave Kearse, a lodger, perished in the flames and Anna Anderson, A. McDougall and Tom Arnold were severely burned. The latter may die. Only the brave work of Patrick Mitchell saved those who escaped. The 40 lodgers had to jump from the windows. In 20 minutes after the fire was discovered, the structure was in ruins. Mitchell broke both arms and both legs in leaping from a veranda when his work had been accomplished. Loss $10,000.

SONGS.

Makes music in my soul,
Only to fade and die,
Shall I not take the whole
Of beauty that it gives While yet it lives?

Fades, and the sunset sky Darkens, and winter blows
All bare, and music dies,
Therefore, now is to me
Eternity!

The tale is told;
Youth deth depart
Only stays the heart.

Youth can ne'er depart,

THE ENEMY SHE LOVED.

of an old neighbor had absolutely been
made wife.

load which was weighing upon it,
"and perhaps I've no right to believe you of different stuff from the rest.
These are uncertain times we're in,

kneel.

Solemnly the girl swore.

little head.

"I'm ready now," he said.

Within a week the siege of Paris
so loyal to France.

carried its own burden.

But sorrier days were in store in
guage in loud triumphant accents.

attracted them.

in her own tongue.

hand to grasp uplift it. Scarcely had

who had delivered her, but lo! a
ing his hat.

the men sent them dashed away.
as her own, he begged that she would

difficult always to prevent," he said,

leave us our fathers and our brothers?
No! I have been to the hospital,

the young officer kept pace behind her.

through Paris unmolested. You hate

"There is no need," she replied.
"I go every day to the hospital, and

over the young man's face.

kindness from your hands, or those of
any of your blood!" she answered, hotly—"you, who are my dear father's

she paused before a gate, which the concierge hastily opened for her ad-
to behind her.

own guttural tongue.

again among the wounded.

homeward, but with new dread, now

the night before.

tervene between them.

named presumption.

Every night after it was the same.
One night he approached her.

he said, "I cannot be here to aid
you. You must not go out alone.

almost tempted to answer—"I promise —then she recovered herself, and turned hotly and indignantly upon him.

"And you, my enemy, are the en-
have spoken scarce twenty words in

out to-morrow to meet my death. If
know that this France has avenged herself; but I should like to feel you sometimes—give me one kindly

but instead the two simple words,
them in a low and thrilling whisper.

flying to her own room had flung herself in a burst of bitter sobbing on the bed.

him.

him," said one. "It's an ugly wound,
but he's sinking from loss of blood.

cry beside him.

Lo! he was nameless, but he was the German whom she hated,
and the man whom she loved!

separating when she returned to them.

"You said transfusion would save

its dimly-outlined blue veins.

way.

sharp lance penetrated her vein,
was ecstasy, for though to her it
her life for his.

that her sacrifice had been in vain.

But the terrible days were over,
when Olive was allowed to once more assume her role as nurse. Max Meyder was still in need of all her care,
him he looked at her with wide-open,
conscious eyes, into which, as he re-
effable happiness.

tight in his.

him—weeks which taught her that his future must be wretchedness, since his promise to her dead father forbade that he should share it.

them, as in low, endearing accents,
he asked her to be his wife.

that, and hid her face within her
heart.

must boast French blood in his veins, forsooth! Have I, then, none in
with mine—the very blood of Jules
to your dead father, and keeping it,

DR. TALMAGE PREACHES FROM ST. LUKE'S GOSPEL.

Hug the Shore—The Text Used as

Tabernacle no less by the potent elo-
Christian Herald famine cargo, which
in the steamer Lfo. It is understood

belles lettres, never been sick enough to make them look delicate—their hands broad, clumsy, and hard-knuckled. He chose fishermen, among other reasons,
hardy. Rowing makes strong arms
raftlines makes one's head steady. A Galilee temptist wrestled men into
not want twelve invalids hanging
licate students at Jerusalem and Rome for their mothers and aunts to take care
apostleship. The ministry needs more corporeal vigor than any other class.

and grind the other.

been and always will be rough work, and the man who, at every censure or
ecclesiastical dolls-babies. A man who
his manuscript or lost his spectacles,
that preach in black gloves, and from sermons in black morocco covers!

over by the main boom of the ship,
when, at last, their ship dashed on the
graduated with the first honor.

deeps of God and Christian experience.
We think that the boat will be upset,
mizzen top-sail," and our cowardice

out spectacles, not for the mere pur-
so often, but for his eternal profit.
he might become acquainted with the scriptures. There is no book in the world that demands so much of our attention as the bible. Yet nine-
than a glimmer. They think it is a
about the deep things of God, they say:
so far from shore." My answer is:
The farther you go from shore the better, if you have the right kind of ship.
for the hull, and pride for a sail, and
have gone ten thousand furlongs,

citement of every miracle; by the solitarity of every patriarchal threshing-floor, amidst the white faces of Sennacherb's slain turned up into the
of the Golden City. Ask who
it of every bible lily, of every
sunlight, of every corn in a fish's
mother; of Agastius, of Herod, of the Syrophenician woman; of the daniel that woke up from the death-sleep of Joseph, who had him buried, of the angel posted as sentinel at his tomb,
of the dumb earth, that shook, and

with them began to light his pipe.
honed." The bible may be used to light the pipe of witicism by some,

main! Try every path. Plunge in at
ing questions. Put to a higher use
ing gold."

Passing from Bonn to Coblenz on the Rhine, the scenery is comparatively tame. But from Coblenz to
a moment there is a turn of the river,
more luxuriant vineyards, and more
bowls of Hagen and Hockheimer.
approaching disembarkation at May-
bewitch the scene with their beauty,
once, yet that lasts him forever.

to attract, still riper vintage pressing
to the brink, and crowded with castles
beiger as nothing compared with the
Coblenz, where the chief glories begin.

Gennesaret, twelve miles by six, but
you can sail on forever. Why, then,
gone for two or three years. Yes, calculate on a lifetime voyage. You do

sign not to have any doubts. Doubts
and fears are not signs of health, but festers and carbuncles. You have a valuable house or farm. It is suggested that the title is not good. You employ a counsel. You have
have a certificate, signed by the great
their title to heaven an undecided mat-
and find out? Give yourself no rest,
day nor night, until you can read your
title clear to mansions in the skies.

interest entitled Around the World, de-
ing from a height of one hundred and
God were chanting on the wing. How
among the angels of God over one sin-

IT IS SO REPORTED.

"I'm going to write a book on 'How to Live on Nothing a Year.' 'It can't be done.' 'It can; I have a recipe.' 'What is it?' 'Marry a rich girl.'"

Young Lady—Mercy me! And so, when fast in the jungle, you came face to face with a tiger. Oooo! What did you do? Modern Traveler, proudly—Photographed it.

Mrs. Winks—Why do you hate Deacon DeGoode so? Mrs. Munks—He lost patience with a crying baby in a railway train. "Most any man 'will do that.' "Yes, but it was my baby."

Mrs. Fogg—I'm sure I never saw a woman who thought so much of her husband as Mrs. Pidgeon does. She really thinks there never was such another. Fogg—Reckon she's right.
It was her only chance.

"Yes the ceremony has been performed, and John and Mary are one."
"Indeed! Which one?" "Well," replied the father of the bride, "from what I know of Mary's mother, I should say—but, ah! here she comes."

Lady, to gentlemen who has just fallen down stairs—Good heavens, how it frightened me! I thought it was my husband who fell down. Gentleman—I wish to goodness it had been I, am much disappointed as you are.

"I see by that sign," said the man in the chair to the barber, "that you hone razors for private use." "Yes, sir. Have you some that you want honed?" "No, but I was wondering why you didn't hone the razors you use on your customers."

The small daughter of a well-known Boston physician went to visit her grandmother in the country recently, and being town born and bred the singing of the birds was a new sensation to her. "What is that noise?" she inquired. "Birds singing," replied her grandmother; "that is a golden robin." The next day the midget informed her mamma she would like to hear that brass hen again.

SCISSORED AND SIZED.

According to United States statistics farm land in New Jersey is rated at an average of $65 per acre, the highest of any state in the union.

The 5,129 liquor dealers in Michigan paid $1,896,157 in tax last year.
The saloonkeepers increased by 776, despite the fact of local option in several counties.

The definition of "A Friend" that took the prize in a late contest conducted by a London journal was "The first person who comes in when the whole-world goes out."

The world-famous grapevine at Hampton Court the largest in England and supposed to be 123 years old, bore nearly 1,200 bunches of ripe grapes last year. The fruit was packed in boxes and sent to the queen.

The Boston Herald would like to have the European custom of selling fish alive in the market, introduced in this country. "Our fashion of selling fish in the market," it says, "would fill a German with disgust. In the German cities fish is almost invariably sold alive."

A long tunnel near Paris has been lighted in a novel way. Reflectors throw the light from many electric lamps sixteen feet above the rails to the sides of the tunnel where it is again reflected by burnished tin, covered with glass, into the coaches, making a soft and agreeable light. The trains automatically turn the current on and off in entering and leaving the tunnel.

A man in a Wisconsin village got into trouble with the local postmaster, and to spite him established a rival post-office. This he did by placing a box in his shop and inviting his friends to place their letters in there. Twice a day he carried the letters to the train. By so doing he cheated the postmaster out of his cancellation fees, which constitute part of his revenue. Consequently he was arrested.

How Great Cities Grow.

Unthinking people suppose that big ones grow like jelly fishes, gradually
just as a crop of parsnips spreads over a newly hoed garden. Shoots spring up here and there from a great number of central roots. From these various
ground is completely covered.

discernible about Chicago and the vacant spaces between them are just as
through a rapidly filling blank spot before you strike Englewood, a blank, then Auburn Park, another blank, then
mond, with vacant spaces between
rapidly growing new center.

determines where they will grow?
Evidently railroads. The junction of
one.

a complete belt line, encircling Chi-
railroads into immediate switch connection. It is strange such an important point was overlooked for so long.
When a few months ago Jay M. Dwiggins & Co. of Chicago laid out a town there four factories immediately located and houses and stores are springing up like magic.—Chicago Daily

Mrs. William Murden, 197 Third St., Albany, N. Y., gives it the word of praise, as follows. "I have used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup and find it has no equal. No family should be without it."

The mind is susceptible to a higher cultivation than the heart.

The family physician, Mrs. Helen R.
Shalter, 430 Walnut St., Reading, Pa., states she always uses Salvation Oil for what it is recommended in place of a physician. "I never fails."

HOW DO YOU DO

when you buy shoes or clothing? Don't you go to the place (if you can find it) where they tell you that you may wear the articles out, and then, if you're not satisfied, they'll refund the money? Why not do the same when you buy medicine?

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is sold on that plan. It's the only bloodpurifier so certain and effective that it can be guaranteed to benefit or cure, in every case, or you have your money back.

It's not like the ordinary spring medicines or sarsaparillas. All the year round, it cleanses, builds up, and invigorates the system. If you're bilious, run-down, or dyspeptic, or have any blood-taint, nothing can equal it as a remedy.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lawther of Genesee county, ex-pioneers of Novi, are visiting their brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harmon.

It seems that your correspondent left the school meeting a little too soon last week, as we learn that a sort of supplementary meeting was held during which those taking part expressed their opinions of each other with more force than elegance.

The many Novi friends of J. S. Eoyden and family were pleased to see Miss Bowden, Miss Maggie and Ralph, in their old places in church and Sunday school last Sabbath. The two last mentioned returned to Howell after having spent Saturday and Sunday with friends at and near Novi, while Miss Jessie remained to attend the Baptist Association at Northville this week.

A ONE-ARMED CONVICT.

He Had an Iron Body and a Very Tenacious Mind.

The author of the "American Siberia" tells the story of a one-armed convict who was on the railroad. He was standing on the first flat car, pin in hand ready to make a coupling when the engine should approach closely enough. He was holding some oranges and his attention was somewhat divided between his duty and the safety of his fruit. The engine was not backing in, but coming pilot first, and when the coupling-bar struck the socket, the shock threw the man off his feet. He fell between the two and before the engine could be stopped, it struck him, drove him together, and ran over his body, lifting the truck wheels, quite off the track. There he was wedged into a ball sustaining the whole enormous weight, and the pile was carried over him at an angle of forty-five degrees. The captain of the gang supposed the man to be dead, and it was with no hope of saving him that he shouted to the convicts to pry up the engine at once. They ran at the word. Beams were thrust under the great mass of metal was raised by main force, and the man was pulled out. To the amazement of every one he stretched himself, felt his limb, and body slowly regained its feet, and said "Whar's my or-rizes?"
