FAREWELL.

Rev. W. T. Jaquess Preaches His Farewell Sermon Sunday Night.

IT WILL BE A UNION SERVICE.

The Methodist and Baptist Congregations Will Unite to Do Him Honor.

The Sunday evening service at the Presbyterian church will be a farewell to the pastor. Rev. Jaquess will deliver his last and farewell sermon to his congregation, with whom and for whom he has so earnestly labored for the past four and one-half years. It will also in reality be a farewell sermon to the whole village as both the other churches will close and the congregations unite in a union service to do honor and bid him God speed.

A SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

Mrs. Bennett of Denver Dislocates Her Wrist and Breaks a Bone of the Arm.

Mrs. H. W. Bennett of Denver, Col., sister of Edward Thompson, Duane street, while on a visit at her father's, John Thompson, last week Thursday, slipped from the stoop, falling in such a manner as to dislocate her left wrist and break one of the bones of the arm. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett were on their way home from an eastern trip and had stopped off here for a week's visit among Northville relatives. The injury proved a very painful one for Mrs. Bennett but she was able to continue the home-ward journey with her husband Saturday morning when they left on the 10:15 train.

THE 2d GOLD MEDAL.

May Leadbeater Wins It at Friday Night's Contest.

The second Demorest gold medal contest took place at the Baptist church last Friday night. The contestants were, Nellie and May Leadbeater, Jessie Lowden, Thad Knapp, Northville, Pearl Skinner, Miss Haegerty, Wixom. The judges were, John Marvin, Detroit; Miss Huntington and Miss Berch, Plymouth, and they awarded the medal to Miss May Leadbeater. The attendance was good, a number being present from Wixom, Novi and Plymouth. Each of the contestants rendered their pieces in a very creditable manner and the entertainment was very interesting.

AROUND ABOUT US.

Some Interesting Notes Clipped from Our Valued Exchanges.

The Northville Record takes a column and a half to prove to the citizens of that place that the mill pond at the depot ought to be cleaned out. And so it had.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Worth W. Wendell of Rose, who was appointed prosecuting Attorney of Ontonagon county by Gov. Winans, was re-elected this fall by a larger majority than any one on the county ticket.—Holly Advertiser.

Northville promises to clean up the mill pond near the railroad if the F. & P. M. would repair their depot so that it would present a respectable appearance. The railroad carried out their part and now editor Neal says that the citizens should come to the front and do as they agreed. Bro. Neal is right and it is his duty to keep at the people until they do as agreed.—Holly Advertiser.

We want to hire a boy. The back woods is full of them, but not such as we want. One whose object is to learn a trade is the one we want. Must be smart, polite, honest and have a fair education. No fresh "kids" or one who uses tobacco, drinks or swears need apply. Inquire at this office.—Holly Advertiser.

There is a boy over in Milford, Bro. Slocum, who just answers this description. He is dead however.

The limit of this country's just indebtedness to the old soldiers was passed years ago.—Detroit Evening News editorial, December 1.

Then all that the country has paid to the old soldiers, in pensions or otherwise, since that period years ago when the limit of the country's indebtedness to them was passed, has been a steadily accumulating debt against them; and in their crippled and decrepit condition it is manifestly a debt that they can never repay. Think of it, ye maimed veterans who have left here a leg and there an arm on southern fields; ye worn-out remnants of the proud ranks of '61 now glad of the shelter of a soldier's home, ye widows who gave all that made life worth living—think of it! You are hopeless debtors to a nation whose bounty has long since passed the measure of your deserving. A nation which has paid you a pension in full for all you gave to it, and has since been piling up obligations against you in the face of which you stand as mendicants, parasites, leeches, beggars, as the plain-spoken paper at Durham, N. C., calls you.

Is this true? Is this what you mean you sneaking, snakey, treacherous, disreputable and discredited Detroit Evening News? Is this what you mean James E. Scripps, owner and publisher of the News? Not so you talked in '61, when you encouraged the boys to go to the field—when from the fraternity of printers in Detroit, with which you then had some connection, there went out a number in those early regiments, the 1st and 2d Michigan, and others like the writer of this went to their homes in other states to enlist with their own friends. Not so you talked to Malachi O'Donnell who went from the Free Press force in the 1st, nor to his widow when he fell shot to death, possibly by the editor of the Durham Globe who now joins you in denouncing the veterans and widows as leeches and beggars. Passed the limit years ago, did it? Get out of our sight and don't you ever dare to speak again to any man who shouldered a musket and went to the field to preserve a country for you to get rich in!—Ypsilantian.

School Notes.

Once more we wish to call the attention of the patrons of the school to the dramatic entertainment soon to be given by the school lyceum. It fully deserves a generous patronage. A well equipped reading room would do much toward forming a literary taste among the pupils. The expense of procuring such periodicals as they desire is considerable. To raise the necessary funds they propose to give an entertainment calculated to please all who attend. The characters are represented by the best talent in the school and the play is one of Denison's best. Encourage them in their laudable endeavor by your presence.

"DID YOU EVER GET LEFT?"

Probably you have. Most everyone has, but there is one class of people who do not. They are the ones who buy their clothes at "Webster's." Why? That's plain enough, simple as the "rule of three." It is because they buy the best goods at the lowest prices. Every thing warranted both in quality and price. Can you ask anything better? Give me a trial.

A POSITIVE FACT.

Ladies do not delay your valuable time by waiting and suffering, but secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and be cured of your trouble either in old or young. It is the very best prescription I have ever prescribed in my extensive practice. It has given the best results in the greatest number of cases of female troubles of any medicine that I ever used. I do not make a practice of using or recommending patent medicines, but this remedy is prepared by a very competent physician and chemist of my acquaintance and I can cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it as the best.

From Geo. Alworth.

The following letter from our old friend Alworth explains itself.

Aylmer, Ont. Dec. 3, 1892

Dear Neal
I am now living at Aylmer, Ont., which by the way is a wide awake town of 3,000 population. My factory is located about a mile and a half from the town in an elegant dairy district with beautiful flowing springs. Plant is almost completed and I expect to be running by Dec. 15. You have no idea how my wife and I enjoy reading your valuable paper, I feel as a boy would that was away to school, anxious to know what was going on in his own town.

Remember me kindly to all my friends through your columns and say that I wish they would not wait for me to write, but drop me a few lines and I shall find time to answer them all, some way, if I have to employ a typewriter. I sincerely hope and wish that the Northville Condensed Milk factory will meet with the very best of success in the future as in the past so the patrons and officials may reap their reward. With the very best of wishes to all I am

LOCAL GLEANINGS.

Things Said and Did in the Liveliest and Prettiest Village in Michigan.

Jas Wilsey is still confined to his home on Plymouth Ave.
Press of orders keep the Globe Furn. Co. running on extra time, nights.
Yerkes Bros. will go out of the ice business and the old ice house will be torn down.
We are pleased to state that Mrs. I. N. Blackwood, who has been a long time suffering the past week, is now convalescing.

Clothes-lines and stove-wood thieves are reported in Beantown. The contents from the fire of Fred Wood disappeared one night last week.

We are informed that Dr. Sherill is soon to open up a new lumber yard in this village. It will probably be located near the milk condensery.

We have received no notices of bad places in the sidewalks about the village as requested last week and therefore conclude there are none.

Dr. Sherill is erecting a large ice house near Babillion lake. Mark Ambler, who has purchased Yerkes Bros' ice supply outfit, will have charge of the institution.

The base ball nine will give a Christmas party at the Light Guard Armory Friday evening Dec. 25. It is an invited affair and promises to be very select and enjoyable.

Geo. Humman will have an auction sale at his premises, one mile west of this place on the base-line, Tuesday, Dec. 20, 1,001 articles are advertised to be disposed of.

When next you visit Detroit just try the Wayne hotel opposite the M. C. Depot. The best meal, most courteous treatment and prompt service of any Detroit house.

T. G. Richardson lost a valuable and yellow plaid, wool horse blanket last Friday night between store and house. He will pay a liberal reward to the gentleman who will return it.

The pipes from the springs to the reservoir are now completed and the water is running into the reservoir in great quantities. There are but a few leaks yet to be overcome.

Northville people may consider themselves fortunate in having the opportunity to hear the celebrated Detroit Society Mandolin, Guitar and Banjo club, which appears for the first time in Northville, at the opera house, Monday night Dec. 20.

It is said of a farmer living not many miles from here, who drove to within half a mile of Plymouth village, last week and then being of the diphtheria scare, tied his horse to a barn and called out loud! He evidently had more fear for his horse than for himself.

Again do we request our readers to hand in items of news. Hand them in early and often. Let us know of every visitor at your house and every time you are visiting out of town. We want them every week. Leave them at the office or drop in our item box at the post office.

Dr. A. L. Blanchard is a new comer to our village and has his office and residence over C. R. Stevens' drug store. Dr. Blanchard was for a number of years medical superintendent of the St. Clair mineral springs at St. Clair, Mich. He comes here with good recommendations as an experienced physician and we bespeak for him a successful practice.

It is only right for us to state that when the mill pond committee interviewed some of the councilmen relative to a small appropriation with which to further investigate the scheme of elevating the mill pond, Councilman Swift informed them that while he could not legally sanction any bill for such an expense, at the same time, if five or six dollars was all that was needed he would pay one-fifth of the expense from his own pocket. The committee made a report at the council meeting last week and the idea presented was to have Mr. Gillispie cut the dam down and then flush out the refuse by using hose attached to the hydrants. Some favor one scheme and some another, but no one will care how it is done if it is accomplished in some way. The work can only be done during cold weather without danger to health and therefore if done at all, it must be within the next few months. The council have continued the committee and we may expect some preceptable steps being made within the next thirty days towards the final accomplishment of the end in view. In the meantime the RECORD has nothing personal at stake whatever in the matter and is only interested for the best interests of Northville, as every citizen ought to be, upon this or any other subject.

We extend a Merry Christmas to each of our correspondents and all our readers.

Friday night, Dec. 23, the Lyceum of the High school render "Odds of the Enemy" at the opera house.

Owing to the bad weather the Michigan musical union for Tuesday night has been postponed.

A new society directory is being issued from the RECORD office. Chas. Binstol is the compiler.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held Dec. 19 at 7-30 p. m. Every member is requested to be present.

Monday night, Dec. 20th, the Detroit Banjo and Mandolin club assisted by an elocutionist give an entertainment at the opera house.

Princess rink will be open for skating every Saturday night. Manager Staffer informs us that the best of order will be preserved. Everybody invited.

The Dean & Leonard company play the Ticket of Leave Man at the opera house tonight. They are a good clean troupe and are giving good satisfaction in every way. They give a ten cent matinee Saturday afternoon.

The social event of the season will be the Musical entertainment, and social by the Ladies Auxiliary Club at the parlors of the Yarnall Institute Tuesday eve. Dec. 27. The well known reputation of this society, for making everything they undertake a success, leaves no room for doubt, that this will be a success of the first quality.

Revs. Clark and Parrish with their respective congregations have volunteered to join in the farewell service to Rev. W. T. Jaquess next Sabbath evening. This is fraternal and fitting and a splendid valedictory occasion will be the result. Remember then, that the early evening meetings will be held in the Methodist and Baptist churches as usual next Sabbath evening but that there will be no preaching service.

Mrs. Jennie Voorhees of Plymouth, dist. president of the W. C. T. U., will speak in the Methodist church, after noon and evening, Wednesday, Dec. 25. Subject for afternoon at 2:30, her trip to the national convention at Denver, evening, her annual address. Both these services will be free. At the evening lecture a silver collection will be taken to defray the expense of the work. We promise all who come to hear Mrs. Voorhees a rare treat as she is a fine speaker.

The elocutionary entertainment held at the Presbyterian church last evening was, as might have been expected, a decided treat to the goodly audience who were present to hear them. This class is what is termed the juniors, taught by that talented elocutionist and charming lady, Mrs. Rivard of Detroit. Without exception the class were at their best and won for themselves rounds of applause and unbounded praise, and they deserved it. Nothing seemed undue. Every word uttered and every movement made appeared perfect. The teacher is to be congratulated at having such a class the class at having such a teacher.

After hauling a lot of mud at the RECORD last week about cleaning out the mill pond the Detroit Courier says "On Sunday last the Presbyterian minister tendered his resignation to take immediate effect, he having made arrangements to fill the Covenant church in Detroit, some time previous. Notwithstanding the fact that his year would not be up till some time in August his resignation was accepted."

"We are quite sure the taxpayers, at least that portion of them who live by their days' work and are paying for little homes, are not anxious at present to plague the corporation further into debt; particularly as those who are so fastidious about the malodorous perfumes of the so-called cesspool are about to leave for pastures more green."

As far back as "the oldest inhabitant" can remember the Courier has never lost an opportunity of slinging mud, for personal spite as a rule, at some of our citizens; the RECORD on some village improvement enterprise. Personally the present editor of the RECORD has never paid any attention to the filth which has been thrown at it from week to week but when a man with the reputation, ability, upright christian character and estimable qualities as has "The Presbyterian minister," referred to in the above article, and who, with several other of our leading citizens, were called "cranks" in a previous article for daring to circulate a petition to the F. & P. M. railroad for a new depot, is raked over for purely personal down-right devilishness it is time to call a halt, and the good people of Northville should with one accord sit down on such an outrage. If the Courier editor had the least bit of manhood about him the columns of that paper would never be lent for such contemptableness. It seems to be characteristic of the paper however and it will continue on just the same as long as a single citizen lends his aid by a perusal of its print. As for "that portion who live by their days' work" these are just the people who are the most anxious for the cleaning out of the mill pond and any quantity of these same gentlemen, whom today are making Northville what she is, the best village in the world, have repeatedly expressed themselves as more than willing to contribute from two to five dollars from their own pocket if necessary, to accomplish the result.

THE BOOKKEEPER.

All day he toiled with book and pen, And sums as lots of other men. Sometimes at night the clerk would say, "Bill Smith, you got 'em home to-day?" An' Bill'd lift his tired face, An' make a mark to keep his place. An' sorter sigh an' say he was ready as he'd ever be, He reckoned.

An' years went by, as years will do, An' somehow Bill was now through. An' when one day the clerk said, "Bill Smith, it's time that you was dead!" Bill sorter raised his eyes to look A minute from his balance book. "All right, I'm comin' now," says he, "I'm ready as I'll ever be, I reckon."

HER MISTAKE.

All the Barchester family had come to the conclusion, separately and collectively, that Bess looked like a princess in her white dress with the straight clinging sides the V neck and the knot of roses at the corsage that looked so awfully like real buds and leaves.

"Oh, Bess," cried Honora, "do wear your hair in a low coil at the nape of your neck, with just a few cunning little rings escaping."

"Nonsense!" said Eudora. "Do it in a fluffy mass at the top of your head, with a chamber dagger or a rope of roman pearls. The Greek knot is all out of date."

"Will you lend your tongue, both of you?" sharply demanded Bess, stamping her foot. "Oh dear how nervous I feel. Madeline, dear, if the first evening I have ever given should prove a failure I—I shall commit suicide."

"It won't prove a failure," said Madeline, the eldest sister of all. "Madeline herself was hopelessly plain. The hair that in Bess' case was Titian gold was in hers dull orange red. Her weak pale eyes were red lidded and slightly crooked, her nose was long and sharp."

But nevertheless Madeline was a genius in her way. Old Judge Barchester never could have tidal over the rough sea of creditors, privations and trials that beset him had it not been for her help.

Judge Barchester, always willing to leave the problem of life for someone else to solve, flung the pile of dunning letters into the fire, and buttoning a costly fur-trimmed overcoat around his portly form, took refuge in the aristocratic halls of the curb white Madeline like a faded-eyed bird of prey, flattered forth among the milliners, dressmakers and modistes for the benefit of Bess the debutante.

"Everything is arranged," said she composedly. "I ordered the supper from Vanessa. I had to pay something on our back indebtedness, but I took care it should be as little as possible. Steiner sends in the flowers. We've never ordered flowers there before, and the poor flowers are anxious to secure our custom. Mr. Bapper, the funny man, is to recite Mrs. Vivyan engaged him for me. And Miss Daio will sing a Scotch ballad. There are plenty of nice people than Bapper and Monica Daio, but every one else wants to be paid in advance."

Bess colored. "Oh, but we will pay them. Madeline when we're able," said she. "We don't mean to cheat them."

Madeline laughed. "Don't be silly, Bess," she said. "Everyone in the world is more or less engaged in cheating everybody else. At here's a letter Bess that I didn't show you."

"Another tormenting creditor?" "Worse than that. It is from Uncle Zabbidie Cooper down at the Blackford farm, where you stayed that summer you had the whooping cough. Don't you remember?"

Bess' eyes opened. A precious dimple came out at the corner of her mouth.

"What," she cried, "dear old Uncle Zab?"

"Very dear," observed Madeline contemptuously, "and very delightful! Just the person to make a sensation at your at home" under Mrs. Fitzalan's eye and raked by the nose of Mrs. Aubrey Rockingham's long-gneth! With his cowhide boots and pepper and salt trousers, and his fringe of chin whiskers, and that chronic entanglement of his! My dear Bess, if we allow that old nuisance to cross this threshold on Tuesday evening it amounts to throwing up the game at once. He's written that he's coming on that evening."

Bess grew pale. "Oh, dear Uncle Zabbidie!" ecstatically shrieked Dora and Nora with one accord.

Bess Barchester's "at home" was a very tame affair. The funny man did not come at all. Miss Daio had such a cold that her voice made no impression on the company. The wrong people all came and the right people stayed away. Altogether it scored as a failure, in spite of Madeline's heroic efforts.

"By the way, girls," said the judge, as he opened the morning paper at the morning's late and insipid breakfast, "you really must write for your old Uncle Cooper to come up here, and take some notice of him. It seems he has sold the old place for a stupendous price to some railroad company, which is going to build up a monster hotel there with a lot of mineral springs or some such money-making contrivance. Downes told me all about it at the club. They call the old man the 'Blackford millionaire.' I don't think he has many relations but ourselves. See it, Madeline, will you? You always were the family manager."

"Yes," said Madeline gloomily, "and I begin to think I've managed the life out of it."

Uncle Zabbidie, however, declined to be "taken some notice of," and great was the wrath of the judge and his two eldest daughters when they discovered the march that Dora and Nora had stolen on them.

GOOD ROADS COST MONEY.

It would be untrue to say that we do not know how to make roads in the United States. We do, but we are careful rarely to put our knowledge into practice. The magnificent pavement of Broadway—not made for a driveway, but for commercial traffic—shows what the road engineer can accomplish when not hampered with political pulls.

The Nicholson pavement laid thirty years ago on Wabash avenue, Chicago, is an instance of what wretched work can be done when managed by politicians. Says Goldthwait's Geographical Magazine, "And yet the same pavement on the Avenue de l'Opera, Paris, after fifteen years' wear is even better now than during the first year of its existence."

There is only one secret in the building of a good substantial road, and that is a solid rock foundation made water-tight to prevent undermining. When our country roads are made on this principle, we shall have roads that will last as long as the earth is peopled.

But our country roads are made on quite a different principle. First the sod is removed and then the roadbed, so-called, is rounded off. It is then simply a flaked road. If the spring rains are not too heavy the road will last a year. In most instances, however, only three or four months' wear and tear are necessary to convert it into a quagmire, during a short spell of rainy weather, and a dust volcano arises a few days of sunshine. The next year the road must be made over and regarded at an expense about equal to that of the construction of a new one.

A good road costs a great deal of money. It is true but not so much as a poor one. The money wasted on the wretched country roads of the Central states since their settlement, if judiciously expended, would have built the same mileage of road, equal in quality to the best Roman military roads. It is almost a pity that we could not have had Julius Caesar and his army with us during the last fifty years of our existence.

A SHREWD FARMER.

He was only an Am. one but he knew about Old Springs.

The amateur farmer looked wise. He had traded or driven over a large portion of the farm, had passed judgment on the richness of the soil, and had talked of the purchase of some improved machinery. Although he was very favorably impressed and announced that he had about made up his mind to buy the land.

When he noticed a little pool of bubbling water.

"What's that," he asked, quickly. "A spring," replied the old farmer, "one of the purest, coldest springs in this country."

"Yes, sir, and as clear as crystal." "Look here," said the amateur farmer sternly, "do I look like a man who can be imposed upon?"

"Why no?" "Would you pick me out for a man who doesn't know his business?"

"Of course not." "Then do you expect to unload this farm onto me handicapped by that thing?"

"Why, what's the matter with it?" "My wife! It! Don't you suppose I read the paper? They kill crops."

"Springs kill crops?" "Cold springs do. You can't fool me old man. I do look like a cypress man. A cold spring is worse than a backward spring according to the Young Farmer's Weekly, and you wouldn't dare to try to sell me a farm with a backward spring on it."

The old man leaned against a rail fence and didn't know whether to laugh or swear as he watched the amateur farmer stalk haughtily down the lane.

He sought a change.

The landlady was sick and the star-bowder was doing the marketing for her that morning.

"Yes, sir," said the man at the poultry stand, "we have some very fine chickens to day."

Um-er-um," hemmed the star-bowder as he looked them over.

"Do you want a pair of spring chickens?" inquired the dealer taking a couple up in his hands and exhibiting them.

"Well, no I don't believe I do," retorted the purchaser, "but you may give me a summer chicken or a fall chicken, there has been altogether too much spring in the chickens we have been having and I'd like to try a change once."—Detroit Free Press.

His feelings were wounded.

"Do you love me very much, pet?" "Yes, indeed, papa, but you're beginning to need shaving just awfully."

Putting the darling child gently off his lap the strong man went out on the back porch, leaned against a pillar, looked despairingly out into the darkness and wept bitter scalding tears. He had spent six of the hardest weeks of his life cultivating that first crop of whiskers.

A Wasted Fortune.

Sympathetic Passenger, on lake steamer—It usually affects people that way the first time. You'll soon get over it.

Uncle Josh, from Upthorpe—You mean well, stranger, but you needn't try to comfort me. That dinner cost me seventy-five cents 'b'gosh!

A BRIGHT WOMAN.

THE COUNTESS OF MACCHETTA AND HER WORKS.

Known to the Reading World as Blanche Roosevelt—First Had a Softener for the Operatic Stage, But Finally Drifted to Opera.

Macchetta, better known by her pen name of Blanche Roosevelt, originally studied for the operatic stage, but upon discovering that her voice was not suited to grand opera turned her attention to writing.

In addition to her recently issued sketch of M. Sardou, which has received much favorable criticism, she has written a sketch of Longfellow and a life of Dore and a sketch of Carmen Sylva. The distinguishing characteristic of Miss Roosevelt's work is its strong sympathetic tone. Her attitude is that of a friend and ardent admirer. Her beauty of face, remarkable in its regular, sculptured delicacy, united to a lively imagination and unusual fluency of speech in Italian and French, as well as in English, has made her a welcome guest in many circles. She was petted by Victor Hugo, on terms of sarcasm and repartee with Arsene Houssaye and is a worshiper of Verdi. There have long been rumors of a drama to be written in collaboration with Sardou. The manifest result, however, is the volume just brought out, "Victorien Said, a Personal Study." She is the first American authoress to be decorated by the French academy, of which she is an officer, and, quoting from the gallant M. Houssaye, "she is lovely with every loveliness."

Three years ago she was decorated and made an officer of the French academy in recognition of her "Life of Gustave Dore," which work has since been translated into Swedish, Spanish and German. The Dore Society of France also presented her with a complete set for the artist's great engravings, taken direct from the originals. Her winters are passed at Monte Carlo, her husband and herself being frequently the guests of the reigning Prince and Princess. This spot the author adores for its marvelous floral beauty, and also for the literary element her friend Alcega di Monaco, the Princess, gathers about her.

Busy Duchesses.

The Duchesses, new and old, says a London writer, are besting themselves. Her charming Grace of Portland, in excellent health, is leaving Langwell, promising to be more evidence than of late, the young Duchess of Sutherland, on good works intent, has presided at a women's meeting, the Duchesses of Bedford and Abercorn, also charitably disposed, are likewise busily engaged, and the Duchess of Devonshire, notwithstanding her recent bereavement, has invited a large party to Chatsworth for mid-November.

Australia as a Gem-Producer.

Mr. Streeter, the diamond merchant and expert in precious stones, is of the opinion that Australia promises to rival Ceylon as the gem-producing country of the world. Western Australia especially has high claims in this regard. All over the great island continent gems of every description abound, though as yet prospecting for them has only been conducted on a small scale. The greatest pearl fisheries of the world are off the West and Southern Australian coasts, and these in themselves are the makings of a fine industry.

A Productive Sermon.

Canon Fleming's sermon, which he preached at Sandringham on the death of Prince Albert Victor, has had the most extraordinary sale of any sermon in recent times. The profit during the short period of six months amounted to no less than $6,500, of which the sum of $3,250 was given by the Princess of Wales to the "Gordon Boys' Home," and $3,250 to the "British Home for Incurables." Over 50,000 copies were sold at that time—a sale certainly unprecedented in the annals of profit from a single sermon of a few pages.

Duelling in Russia.

Duelling in Russia is now forbidden to civilians on pain of imprisonment, and officers are only allowed to settle their quarrels by resorting to arms after a tribunal of honor composed of officers shall have admitted the gravity of the offence and the legitimacy of the reparation demanded.

In the event of a combat being pronounced necessary to satisfy honor, the Minister of War will in each case apply to the Czar to sanction the release of the combatants from all legal consequences.

ENGLAND'S FASTEST YACHT.

The Queen Mab Said to Be the Crack Sailer of Britain.

Englishmen are thorough sportsmen, but they cannot build as good yachts as the Americans. At least, if they can they will not. So in talking about the fastest yacht of her class which has been racing in English waters this year, it must be remembered that there are plenty of boats in America of the same dimensions that can beat her.

The racing yacht Queen Mab, a picture of which is given here, is interesting to Americans, because in her construction the Englishmen departed so far from their custom as to fit her with a gun-metal center board. Englishmen have long been averse to center boards, and the reason is said by some to be because they are so generally employed in America. But it is foolish to fly in the face of Providence, and after center-board yachts had scored victory after victory over the old-fashioned round bottom, the English yacht-builders suffered a change of opinion. The designer of the Queen Mab is G. L. Watson of Glasgow who had made the plans for all the fastest English and Scotch yachts. He designed the Thistle, which was once considered very fast and which was bought by Emperor William, who sailed her under the name of Meteor. In case the tedious arrangements which always precede international yacht races ever come to an end and Lord Dunraven's challenge for the America cup should be accepted, Mr. Watson would very likely be selected to build a new craft and its dimensions would be very nearly like those of the Queen Mab.

Under these circumstances the vessel should possess a peculiar interest for yachtsmen and all persons patriotic enough to wish to see us defeat the Englishman. The Queen Mab is not a handsome boat to look at, though her canvas is very well ordered indeed. The bowsprit, as will be seen from the picture, is very short, and the prow is convex instead of concave. This point will immediately catch the eye of the critical yachtsman. Her under-water lines are more symmetrical than those above, though, of course, being under water, they cannot be seen. She is 59 feet 6 inches long on the load-water line, and 80 feet over all. The sail area is 4,020 feet. During the season she has won thirty-six races on all kinds of water.

CAN'T TELL THEM APART.

A Pair of Twin Lungs Who Resemble Each Other Very Closely.

The celebrated Morrell twins, known along church-goers for their evangelistic work on two continents, are again making a tour of the West. There is something unique about the pair of exponents of the Gospel. Not only are they twins by birth, but in nature, looks and actions as well. They dress alike, even to the slightest detail. Their pictures, which are given herewith, are from a photograph recently taken. It shows them as they appear on the platform in their joint lectures. Both speak at the same time and manipulate their articulate powers so perfectly that were it not for their gesticulations an auditor would not know that more than one was speaking. They were born in Newark, N. J., and are the sons of the Rev. D. T. Morrell, D. D. of the Baptist church. They removed with him to the west when quite young. They attended the common and high schools of St. Louis, Mo., and when 20 graduated from La Grange college with degrees of B. A. Then they went into the missionary field and have worked in many parts of the world. They also publish a monthly paper called the Morrell Twins' Tidings, which has a large circulation among christians.

The Town of Terminals.

The proprietors of the new town site at the mouth of the Columbia, on the Oregon side, offer $100 for the best name for the future great city that is to eclipse Portland and all other great cities on the coast, says the Seattle Times. Two or three hundred names were suggested, out of which the owners finally adopted that of "Terminals." If the word has meaning at all, it is that of "Thrice-madness," or "Three-times-mad."

An Exaggeration.

The Widow Weed wears very heavy mourning.

Day—Yes; but she doesn't feel as black as she is dressed.

THACKERAY'S HEAD.

Large But There Was Lots in It—A Child-Like Heart.

Thackeray, like most Anglo-Indian infants was sent, when he was about five years of age to the mother-country for mental and physical nourishment. An aunt, with whom he lived, discovered the child one morning parading about in his uncle's hat, which exactly fitted him. Fearing some abnormal and dangerous development of the brain, she carried him at once to a famous physician of the day, who is reported to have said, "Don't be afraid, madam, he has a large head, but there's a good deal in it!" His brain when he died, fifty-three years later, weighed fifty-eight and a half ounces. In 1849 Charlotte Broote wrote of Thackeray: "To me the broad brow seems to express intellect. Certain lines about the nose and cheek betray the satirist and cynic, the mouth indicates a child-like simplicity—perhaps even a degree of irresolution, inconsistency—weakness in short, but a weakness not unamiable." And Mr. Motley, writing to his wife in 1858, said, "I believe you have never seen Thackeray; he has the appearance of a colossal infant, smooth white, shining ringlet hair, fawn alab with advancing years; a roundish face, with a little dab of a nose, upon which it is a perpetual wonder how he keeps his spectacles." This broken nose was always a source of amusement to Thackeray himself; he caricatured it in his drawings, he frequently alluded to it in his speech and in his letters, and he was fond of repeating Douglas Jerrold's remark to him when he was to stand as godfather to a friend's son—"Lord, Thackeray, I hope you won't present the child with your own mug!"

It is not pleasant to look upon the face of Thackeray—the face of which we love to think so pleasantly—as distorted by death. He was found dead in his bed on the morning of December 24, 1862. "So young a man," as Dickens wrote, "that the mother who blessed him in his first sleep blessed him in his last. The final word he corrected in print, continued Dickens, 'were'—And my heart throbbled with an exquisite bliss." God grant that on that Christmas eve when he laid his head back on his pillow and threw up his arms as he had been wont to do when very weary, some consciousness of duty done, and Christian hope throughout life humbly cherished, may have caused his heart so to throb when he passed away to his Redeemer's rest! "And lo!" said Thackeray himself once, of the most beautiful character in all fiction, his own Thomas Newcome—"And lo he whose heart was as that of a little child had answered to his name, and stood in the presence of the Master!"

We think of Thackeray as of our own Chalmers, found dead in like manner, the same childlike unspoiled open face, the same gentle mouth, the same spaciousness and softness of nature, the same look of power. What a thing to think of—his lying there alone in the dark in the midst of his own mighty London, his mother and his daughters asleep, and it may be, dreaming of his goodness. Long years of sorrow labor and pain had killed him before his time. It was found after death how little life he had to live. He looked always fresh with that bounding silver hair and his loving almost infantile face, but he was worn to a shadow, and his hands wasted as if by eighty years."

The cast of Thackeray's face, writes Laurence Hutton in Harper's, was made by Brucian on that sad Christmas morning at the request of Dr. John Brown of Edinburgh, as of our own Chalmers, found dead in like manner, the same childlike unspoiled open face, the same gentle mouth, the same spaciousness and softness of nature, the same look of power. What a thing to think of—his lying there alone in the dark in the midst of his own mighty London, his mother and his daughters asleep, and it may be, dreaming of his goodness. Long years of sorrow labor and pain had killed him before his time. It was found after death how little life he had to live. He looked always fresh with that bounding silver hair and his loving almost infantile face, but he was worn to a shadow, and his hands wasted as if by eighty years."

I was spending the night in a country town not long ago," said the drummer at the dinner table, "and in the evening before bed time several of the natives collected at the tavern and we sat around on the porch talking. One of the residents was telling me what a fine country they had about them."

"Why," he said in all earnestness, "Jack Binsy who has a dairy farm 10 miles from town gets 1,000,000 pounds of butter a week from his cows."

"Aw come off," I said, with a laugh, you can't make me believe any such stumpy speech as that."

"But it's true as precechin," he insisted.

"I demurred again."

"Ain't it so, my? he asked, appealing to an elderly man sitting next to me."

"Well, I can't say as to a million pounds," was the cautious reply, nor just how much exactly, but I know Jack has got three sawmills on his place that he runs entirely with buttermilk."

"There wasn't any use bucking against evidence of that sort and I never said a word."—Detroit Free Press.

32—The sound of bells.

The whole Moslem race despise and abhor the sound of bells which they say cause the evil spirits to assemble together. They do not use them on their mosques or churches, but have instead men called muezzins, stationed in the minarets, who call out five times each day for the people to assemble for prayer. The cry is "There is no god but God, and Moh'mmed is his prophet."

The Town of Terminals.

The proprietors of the new town site at the mouth of the Columbia, on the Oregon side, offer $100 for the best name for the future great city that is to eclipse Portland and all other great cities on the coast, says the Seattle Times. Two or three hundred names were suggested, out of which the owners finally adopted that of "Terminals." If the word has meaning at all, it is that of "Thrice-madness," or "Three-times-mad."

An Exaggeration.

The Widow Weed wears very heavy mourning.

Day—Yes; but she doesn't feel as black as she is dressed.

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS

It is now in order to lay aside all care and worry and look upon the brighter side of life. It is always in order in fact to do this, but more especially at times when Holiday Cheer abounds and all good people with one accord unite in wishing everybody else a Merry Christmas. The holidays stir up the better emotions and carry us above and beyond the drudgery of every-day considerations. He must indeed be a Misanthrope who is not affected pleasantly at this time; but the question of interest to all about now is what to get for our friends for Christmas Presents?

We therefore this week make some suggestions that may help you out of this dilemma, all of which we are now showing in large assortment, for instance

A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

Elkhart, Ind., July 1st, 1890: Dullam's Great German Medicine Co. My daughter has been afflicted with Female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. A lady friend advised me to secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and she has been completely cured by it. We gave it a fair trial and the results were wonderful. We cannot recommend it too highly to all ladies who are afflicted with Female trouble. Benjamin Granger, For sale by C. R. Stevens, Druggist, 1

A Million Friends.
A friend in need is a friend indeed, and at less than one million people have found just such a friend in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds.—If you have never used this Great Cough Medicine, one trial will convince you that it has a wonderful curative power in all diseases of the throat, chest and lungs. Each bottle is guaranteed to do much that is claimed or money will be returned. Trial bottles free at A. M. Richardson's Drug Store. Large bottles 50c and $1.00.

Merit Wins.
We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. A. M. Randolph Drug-gist.
