That Is a Portion of the Title Which Frank N. Clark New Carries.

HE'S A HIGH UP MASON.

And One of the Best Posted Fish Culture Men in the U. S.

At the annual meeting of the R. & S. M. Masons, held in Detroit last week, Frank N. Clark of this place was elected Most Illustrious Grand Master. At the annual meeting of the R. A. M. held the following day, he was elected Grand Master of the 2d Veil. Mr. Clark is one of the best posted Masons in the state and the honor conferred upon him by these grand lodges is a worthy compliment.

Frank N. Clark was born in the little hamlet of Clarkston, his father, the late N. W. Clark being the founder of the village. After attending school for some years and later the agricultural college, he taught school in Montcalm county some little time and afterwards was in the wholesale dry goods business with his father in Clinton and Cedar Rapids, Ia. In 1879 they returned to Clarkston and started a 40-acre garden seed farm, and in the winter time, with his father, experimented in the fish culture. The first work of the state in this direction being conducted in the Clark hatchery. In 1874, with his father, he founded the Northville hatchery and in the same year did his first work for the government. Among other important U. S. fish stations under his charge at various times have been, Harve de Grace, Md.; Navy Yard station, Washington; Delaware River station, Milford, Pa.; and in charge of fish culture on the U. S. fish commission steamer, Fish Hawk, besides the one at Alpena in addition to the one here, which are in his charge at present. In 1876 he had charge of the first shipment ever made by the government of young shad to the Pacific coast. Through the facilities for transporting young fish were not what they are today, he made a very successful trip, planting 200,000 in the Sacramento river. To this plant, with others following, the rivers of that coast owe their stock of today.

When Gen. Vance of North Carolina in 1877 called on the U. S. fish commissioner for an expert to take charge of the work of fish culture in that state Mr. Clark was sent for. In 1880 the work at Northville was taken in charge by the U. S. fish com., and Mr. Clark made superintendent. The work which has been so successfully carried on from a small beginning of turning out 2,000,000 fish has increased to over 50,000,000, making it one of the most important stations in the states. In 1880 he received diplomas from the Berlin fishery exhibition for fish culture inventions shown. In 1883 he received medals for finest display of alcoholic specimens of trout. This later exhibition required a year's time in its collection and included from the eggs to 6 1/2 lb. brook trout. A similar exhibit is now in course of preparation at the Northville hatchery for exhibition at the World's fair. In 1882 the Alpena hatchery was erected under Mr. Clark's direction who has charge of that station also. In the shipment of fish eggs, Mr. Clark has been especially successful and from Northville station they have gone to almost every state in the union, and to nearly every civilized country on the globe. Until 1890, the government had only leased the grounds and buildings here. They were then purchased of Mr. Clark. Later, additional grounds were bought together with a location for a dam a mile farther west, from which water is now carried through pipes to the buildings. Something over forty new ponds, besides other improvements, have been added the past year as a result of Mr. Clark's work.

A letter, to be sure of reaching Mr. Clark, should now be addressed something like this: Frank N. Clark, M. I. G. M., G. C. R. & S. M., G. J. M., G. M. 2d V.; R. A. M.; Gen'l Sup't U. S. Fish Hatchery for Michigan; Director Northville State Savings Bank, Corner Dunlap and High street, Northville, Mich. One need hardly add Wayne county.

A HEALTHY PLACE.

No Village in the State Can Show So Good a Record.

ONLY 30 DEATHS LAST YEAR.

The Average Life is Fifty-five Years.

During last year 1892, there were but thirty deaths in the village of Northville. With a population of about 2,000 people this shows but one death to 700 people. The deaths were almost entirely among old people. The oldest was 95 years, the youngest six weeks. The average age of eighteen was 73 years. The average age of all who died, two babies less than six months old excepted, was 55 years. One person was 55; nine were past 50; three were up in the 70's; five were up in the 60's; one in the 50's; none in the 40's; three in the 30's and three in the 20's. There was not a death between the age of 4 and 21.

The above record shows that Northville is not only the liveliest and prettiest village in Michigan, but also the healthiest. The natural surroundings, lofty hills, fine drainage, pure water, are proven as productive of good health and long life.

THAT METEOR.

They All Saw It and It Struck Within Two Miles of a Dozen Different Villages.

A large meteor was seen by many of our citizens Tuesday evening, at about 8 o'clock, lighting the sky for several seconds, and exploding with a loud report. —Farmington Enterprise.

Some of our villagers saw the falling of a meteor at about seven o'clock Tuesday evening. It illuminated our streets like the powerful electric lights South Lyon is talking of having—some time. —So, Lyon Excelsior.

A large and brilliant meteor passed over this village Tuesday evening, illuminating the atmosphere with the brilliancy of an electric light. It passed along less than one hundred feet from the ground, and exploded and dropped into a field about two miles west. —Fenton Independent.

The meteor that traversed across the sky last Tuesday evening was indeed a rare pyrotechnic display. It assumed a westerly direction and appeared to be about the size of an electric lamp globe. It separated into four pieces, each section being of a different color. —So, Lyon Picket.

THE LADIES LIBRARY.

Still Flourishing and Many New and Valuable Books Have Been Added.

The Ladies Library Association has just received their new books for the coming year. This purchase includes the best novels of the past year, by Stevenson, Howells, Hardy, Crawford, Kipling, McDonald, etc., a fine collection of children's books by Optic, Alden, Stoddard, Trowbridge, Stockton, Prentiss, Whitney, etc. Among the new books of travel are Whyper's Magnificent works on the Andes and Alps.

The association has made a special point this year of books for our young politicians and statesmen. —Byron's American Commonwealth, Von Holst's History of the Constitution of the U. S., Curtis' Constitutional History of the United States, Geo. Stuart Mills' Political Economy, Fawcett's Free Trade and Protection, Bastiat's sophisms of protection, American Statesman's series, the Political Science series, and several works on the labor question.

Every family in Northville should hold at least one membership. The books are numerous, the quality excellent, and such an opportunity deserves an increased patronage each week.

CLOTHES LINES AND HARNESSES.

Two Men Arrested, Charged With Thieving.

At Farmington, Detective White arrested Wm. Miller, an old man living near Phoenix Mills and Frank Zable, of Meads Mills. The former was charged with stealing some harnesses valued at $25 from Geo. Prindle of Redford. Mr. Prindle identifies about $25 worth of harnesses found in Miller's possession. He was charged with molesting children, etc. Both pleaded not guilty before Squire Blackwood yesterday morning. Miller's bail was fixed at $50 and he was bound over to the circuit court for trial. Zable will be tried at Justice Blackwood's court next week Friday.

While says that at Zable's house he found several trunks packed full of table linens, bedding and the like, and inside of some bed comfortable a number of horse blankets were sewed. It is said that several families in this village have identified some of the articles as missing from their clothes-lines. Both are married men with families.

CARD OF THANKS.

The family of Mrs. George D. Woodman extend their sincere thanks to the many Northville friends and the Masonic order for kind remembrances in their bereavement.

DR. BENNETT.

B. H. Bennett an old resident of Adrian, Mich. was afflicted with a severe form of chronic rheumatism and kidney trouble, attended with loss of energy and vitality.

Suffered intense and constant pain. For over 20 years had been unable to sleep without the use of an electric battery to stimulate his aching nerves. The kidney and bladder trouble were in a certain condition, chronic constipation rendered continual use of drastic cathartics imperative. Life was a burden and death looked forward to as the only possible release.

One treatment in accordance with Dr. Bennett's Official Philosophy and he at once improved, also the rheumatic pains were lessened. A few more treatments and he had no use for the electric battery. Appetite and sleep returned, also good digestion. The rheumatism was entirely cured. Strength was restored and his recovery has proven permanent. He is now a well man, upwards of eighty years of age.

Does the medical theory of today explain how this was accomplished with out the aid of medicine? It was done by removing the fever (inflammation) which impaired the natural power which controls energies and sustains the functions of every organ of the human body.

The above cited case is only one of the many remarkable cures which Dr. Bennett is, and has been doing the past ten years in his work of treating chronic diseases. He invites all interested to call and see him and learn more of his theory and his work at the Macomber Hotel Wednesday, Feb. 1st. Free consultation in German and English.

THE RECORD.

F. S. NEAL, Publisher.

NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN

THE wife of a Los Angeles man set forth his worthlessness in a long complaint. Immediately he committed a felony sufficient to land him in jail. He intended this as evidence of a broken heart, but the public, not always sentimental to a maudlin degree, accepted it as sustaining the complaint.

A NEW JERSEY girl recently shot her favorite young man and then herself. They were engaged. She loved him very much, and doubtless took measures almost harsh to save him from being married to her. She thought he deserved a better fate and being a creature of impulse she got a gun and shot him.

As showing the rapid changes in naval construction it may be pointed out that the Maine, Yorktown and Philadelphia are three types of vessels of which the United States will build no more, although they were considered almost perfect only a few years ago. Big battle ships and armored cruisers of great speed are what the navy wants now.

This interesting discovery has been made by a French investigator that it pays the consumer to throw away his incandescent lamps after about two hundred hours' service. They will burn a good deal longer, but that is the limit of their best illumination. After that time they gradually grow dim, and the fault is usually laid to the current, whereas the current may be and usually is constant.

NEW YORK is going to pull down its old city hall, which is one of the few antiquities of the town, and, with an admirable piece of architecture, in order to make room for a new building; which is not likely to be admirable architecturally, but will be full of fat contracts for the aldermen and their friends. Meantime New Yorkers will continue to go abroad when they wish to view ancient structures.

In the trial of a man for maliciously cutting the dress of a fellow elevated railway passenger in New York a few days ago, a Mrs. Hemming, was examined as a witness and was asked: "Why did you not inform the plaintiff when you discovered the sorry condition of her skirt?" The witness replied, "I didn't speak to Mrs. Brown because I have spoken to women on the street when they were losing their clothes and they always snubbed me. A man will at least thank you, but a woman only glares." There is food for reflection in this answer. There are some people who would rather choke than say "Thank you."

DISCIPLES of the bacteriologist theory are now investigating the subject of tetanus to see whether or not micro-organisms are responsible for a fellow's jaws being locked. The usual experiments upon the inevitable guinea pig have been made with satisfactory results. Is there no way by which these bacteriologists can be induced to direct their attention to the bacilli that fructifies in the brain of the lunatic-arbiter who is responsible for the threatened speedy invasion of that inebriated nuisance, the hoop-skirt? The bacilli that infect the brain of a man who seeks to revive the hoop-skirt are probably as big as maggots and ought to be at once extracted and chopped up with a hatchet.

THE city of Berlin has grown with greater rapidity than any city in the United States. Its proportionate rate of increase has not been so great as in a few of our large cities, but none that approach it in size has developed so rapidly. Most of this growth has been made since the war with France, and the expenditure of the money France was obliged to pay as indemnity is perhaps the secret of its start. By additions of surrounding territory soon to be made Berlin's population will be nearly or quite three millions. This is next to London, Paris having not more than two and a half millions, and New York with Brooklyn and adjacent cities having about the same population as Paris.

A DISTINGUISHED German physician declares this to be the age of nervousness, and thinks the civilized race is deteriorating under it. Our lunatic asylums are filling up at a frightful rate; women who should be plump and rosy, are pale and emaciated; school children, instead of being joyous, active, vigorous, are debilitated, overworked and unhappy; business men have become engines of perpetual worry and victims of insomnia; social life has become a nerve disordering whirl of excitement; cities are clamorous with the distractions of railroads, traffic, manufacture, and all bustling affairs that destroy repose and murder quiet. Everything is at high pressure. Headlong, mad activity has become the law of circumstances.

PRESIDENT DIAZ is said to own stock in all Mexican railway, telegraph, telephone and electric companies. There is consequently little danger of rival interests getting a foothold in that country while he is in a position to issue or refuse charters.

EVERYTHING in nature indulges in amusement. The lightning plays the wind whistles, the thunder rolls, the snow flies, the waves leap and the fields smile. Even the buds shoot and the rivers run.

GHOST ON SENTRY GOES.

THE CORPORAL'S THRILLING TALE OF THE ZULU WAR.

Killed the Day Before in the Attack on the Commissariat Train and Returning to Guard His Sleeping Comrades.

Some of the old-timers in the British army are excellent storytellers, and the guard-room, where they are wont to hold forth, is the place above all others to hear a good yarn. Here is one told by a lance corporal of the —the regiment which had lately returned from the campaign in Zululand, in the Main Guard, "D" line, Curragh Camp, Ireland.

"Of course you've heard," he said, addressing himself more particularly to a recruit who had not shared in the glories of disasters of that unfortunate war, "how two companies of our regiment were left at —to guard a part of the commissariat train while the main body went in chase of a horde of Zulus which we had that day encountered. Of course, too, you've heard how they failed to return as soon as was expected, and how night came on and found our little band isolated and at the mercy of thousands of the fierce enemy, who were lurking all around in the dense brush. Perhaps you know how our captain—God bless him—had the bags of flour, the biscuit tins and wagons formed into a small breast-work around us, and how at dawn the next morning, by their aid, we were enabled to beat off the attack of the enemy, who outnumbered us ten to one; how, the captain, next evening, when help was still delayed, assembled the men, telling them that the only chance he saw of rescue, was to surrender; that he could see no hope of any escape with his life through the enemy's lines and that account would undertake the task himself. Scores of us volunteered to go, but he wouldn't hear of it, only begging us if he fell to bear evidence of his motives, so that no misconception might be put on them; after handing over the command he did escape the enemy's vigilance and brought back success, how he was tried by court-martial for cowardice in deserting his post and how our evidence saved him. I, this you don't know, 'um, 'ad, that had it not been for a ghost the success would have been too late and not a mother's son of us would have lived to bear the honors of our brave fellows as they came in the nick of time and drove the yelling hordes before them.

"As soon as the captain crept out of the square under the shade of falling night the sentries of course, were double. I was one of the detail for duty that night and it so happened that my second spell occurred during the two hours just previous to dawn, when an attack might be expected. Back and forward I and my rear rank man paced as silently as we could, peering more and more anxiously into the surrounding gloom as dawn approached. Suddenly, as I turned on my beat, I saw Tommy Saugher as plain as I see you now, pacing in front of me. Now, Tommy had been killed the day before, and what's more, I couldn't in an ordinary way have seen any man under the circumstances. It's always darkest before dawn, you know. I paused a moment, fairly staggered, with the cold premonition of a pouring of me, and as I did so I saw a Zulu spring out of the darkness and drive his stabbing assegai fiercely at the phantom. I suppose he was revealed to me by the same mysterious light that showed the ghostly form of my late comrade, but be that as it may, I looked distinctly, and even noted a look of horrified surprise that passed over his features when he found that his weapons met with no resistance, or a moment he paused as if petrified, and in that moment I recovered my senses which for the moment being had deserted me. Quickly raising my rifle I covered the savage, and as its report rang out on the still morning air the ghostly light which had been of such service, faded and disappeared. My timely shot warned our fellows, and a moment had scarce elapsed each man was at his post, behind our improvised ramparts, outlying for dear life with a host of implacable foes which seemed to have arisen like an exhalation from the earth. Silently we struggled hand to hand and steel to steel, our rifles being of no advantage to us, for we had no chance to use them in the darkness and thought each man fought with that dogged courage born of despair it had acquired as nothing against such overwhelming odds. But help was at hand. A faint hurrah in the distance told us of the fact and nerved our hanging muscles to fresh exertions. With an answering shout we charged them on and again as our fellows, too, captain in the van, took them in rear. As they had come, so they went, vanishing like shadows in the now dispersing gloom so that when the sun shot up like a meteor in the east nothing remained of them but their dead and dying. The captain's return saved us, but just the same had not Tommy's ghost shown me the stealthy Zulu's advance I had never fired that shot and roused my comrades, and not a man of us would have survived to tell the tale."

Better Than That. Dr. Chisholm, a canny Scot, on being introduced to a gentleman the other day, said: "Your name is French, are you?" "On the contrary, I am Dutch and Scotch mixed," replied the new acquaintance. "Then your mother was Scotch?" "Well, yes, I should think so; she was a MacNabbi." "Ah, a MacNabbi! By the way, didn't you ever hear the old Highland story of the heated argument which the MacNabbi and the McNabb got into? No? Well, they were discussing their ancestry and MacNabbi said: 'I tell ya, man, we are the oldest of a the clans in Scotland. We were w' Noat in the ark.' 'Hoot, mon! dinna ye ken the MacNabbs had a boat of their ain?'

ment which the MacNabbi and the McNabb got into? No? Well, they were discussing their ancestry and MacNabbi said: 'I tell ya, man, we are the oldest of a the clans in Scotland. We were w' Noat in the ark.' 'Hoot, mon! dinna ye ken the MacNabbs had a boat of their ain?'

CHEESE OF FOREIGN NAME.

Manufactured of Excellent Quality, in the United States.

Simple folk who pride themselves upon their gastronomic taste are sometimes heard to speak scornfully of American cheese, but perhaps in nine cases out of ten they eat and praise as an excellent example of the foreign product a cheese that never crossed the ocean. Camembert and Brie are the only soft cheeses that are imported in considerable quantities, and even they are manufactured in the United States.

You may buy in July a so-called Camembert cheese with an elaborate foreign label, but as a matter of fact, little if any of the imported article is sold here between May and October. Camembert usually reaches the New York market ten or twelve days from the factory, some of it spoils on the way if the weather is not for a season. It comes over in the swiftest ships from Havre and what's brought in one ship is pretty well consumed before another arrives.

It is confessed that the native Camembert and Brie are not so good as the foreign article, but the cheese-makers of New York and New Jersey have come at length to produce a admirable Roquefort and good imitations if they may be so called of many other foreign cheeses. The French cheese makers with the conservatism characteristic of rural Europeans have neglected to adapt their product to the American market. The Brie cheese from abroad, for example, comes in large disks that puts it beyond any but those who consume it in large quantities, whereas the native Brie is made in small cakes that may be purchased for family use.

The sale of Gorgonzola cheese, which is still imported, is much smaller than it would otherwise be if made in smaller parcels. Only two or three English cheeses are now imported in large quantities, and so-called English dairy cheese is a native product. Meanwhile enormous quantities of American cheeses are exported to Great Britain. Some English cheese-makers have taken to putting up their products in jars instead of bladders, in this way making them more easily preserved.

The German and Swiss cheeses are imitated here though less successfully than some others. As to the Italian cheeses they are made without pretense of concealment wherever there is a considerable Italian quarter, though the imitations are not liked by the Italians themselves, and cheap Italian cheeses are imported in large quantities. Parmesan is a favorite with the Italians, since it is cheap and in various ways useful. Limburger is imitated here, as is Neuchâtel. According to local tradition, says the New York Sun, the earliest maker of foreign cream cheese in this region was a Frenchman, whose first customer was a fashionable restaurant. He produced in small quantities, almost perfect imitations of French cheeses, and delivered them to his customers himself. The manufacture of these cheeses has now so extended that many grocers make no effort to keep a stock of foreign cheese, and probably the larger portion of the cheese consumed, even in the French tables of hotels, that established the fashion of cheese eating among all sorts of New Yorkers, is of native manufacture. As yet, however, the conservatism of the commercial world seems to make it necessary to stick to old names and foreign labels.

They Couldn't Wait. "I met a man on the train the other day, coming from one of the bad sections of the Southwest," remarked the drummer easily, "and sounded him as to why he was returning to Michigan."

"Don't like it down there," he said in a plaintive key. "What's the matter with it?" "They shoot too much. Why, when I first went down there, just as regular as Saturday night came they killed two or three people."

"Did they keep it up at that rate?" "No." "Ah, got better after you went there, did they?" "No. They got so they couldn't wait until Saturday night, and I thought it was time to leave."—Detroit Free Press.

A Misunderstanding. "Maia," said Mr. Fortuay, "I wish, dear you would go down with me to-morrow and we'll select a new hat." "Of course," said Mrs. Fortuay. "I've been noticing the new styles myself. We must pick out something new." "Yes, something from London." "With a fine shape." "Well-crowned." "No, trimmed with roses." "Roses," said Mr. Fortuay, "what are you talking about?" "Why, my new hat, weren't you?" "I course not," said Mr. Fortuay, glaring. "I was talking about my new hat."—Chicago News-Record.

Veterans of '1812. A charter has been granted in Philadelphia to the 'Society of the War of 1812.' The society numbers among its members fifty-five veterans, scattered throughout the union. David McCoy, aged 102 is probably the oldest. He resides in San Bernardino, Cal. When he volunteered in 1812 he furnished his own gun and horse. There are several members whose age it is said approaches 100. Abram Daily, of Brooklyn, who is over 97, signed the charter without glasses in a clear, legible hand.

MILK AS A FOOD.

Its Chemical Composition Makes It Suitable to Children and Invalids.

George M. Whitaker of the state dairy bureau spoke at the women's headquarters at the Mechanics' fair on "Milk Its Constitution and Food Value and the Difficulties in the Way of Delivering It Pure and Wholesome to a Large City," says the Boston Transcript.

Milk he says is of universal use and peculiarly adapted to children and invalids because it contains in its normal condition a proper proportion of food elements in a palatable and easily digested condition. These are, under normal conditions: Fat, 3.7 per cent; sugar, 4.7; casein, 8.3.

The casein represents the muscle-forming and force-giving element. Under some circumstances milk from which the cream has been removed may be as valuable a food as whole milk. The sugar gives palatability and furnishes a prominent carbonaceous element. The fat adds an easily assimilated carbonaceous element, very valuable under some circumstances to invalids giving milk its value as a tonic in coffee, on camel milk with desert. It is also the most expensive element in milk.

Milk is more susceptible to change from the normal condition than any other food product. The first class of changes has been brought about by the action of breeders. By many years of attention to breeding for fat production, it is now possible to get milk which may be twice as rich as the normal. On the other hand, other breeders have paid special attention to production of large quantity, even at the expense of quality, until pure milk is sometimes produced having as low as 10 per cent of solids when the normal is 13 per cent.

A second set of causes, which influence the quality of milk, grows out of the ignorance or carelessness of the producer or seller. Where the persons hold the exploded idea of the value of one cow's milk for children, anything in the treatment of the cow which affects its nervous temperament may unfit it for food for very young children. Uncleanliness or neglect is often a grave source of trouble in the handling of milk, not only on account of the possibilities of the addition of visible filth, but because milk is peculiarly susceptible to odor, various kinds of bacteria and disease germs. Epidemics of scarlet fever and typhoid fever have been traceable to the milk supply, unclean cans and other utensils and particularly to propagating bacteria. The third source of trouble with the milk supply is due to the criminality of those who handle it, either by adding water or removing a part of the cream.

SWEET REMINDERS.

Pretty Feminine Faces Which Mar the Artistic Value of Photographs.

All these photographs are useless! They represent a summer thrown away. And yet are greatly admired! Every one says they are 'so artistic.' When I took them I thought they would remind me pleasantly of the happy days. But they don't! There is a girl in every one of them. That is the defect.

Here is a view of Lake Esby. Notice the beautiful reflection of the mountain in the water.

Also notice the girl seated in the bow of a boat whose bow rests on the shore.

This is a scene in the woods. See how delicately the tree tops are outlined against the sky.

It is a very clear negative, but there is the girl on the stump in the foreground.

This is the finest 'interior' I ever took. The hall at the Cedars. Yea, that's the girl again, just coming down the stairs and holding up her skirt with one hand.

No, she isn't always as pretty as that. She looked particularly well that day.

This is looking down the valley from Sleepy Rocks. How well those thunder heads come out in the development—big, white and feecy.

You can almost feel the electricity in the air. The lace on the girl's parasol is blurred a little. It moves in the wind.

Here I am helping her across Kasloog brook just above the old saw mill.

I gave her small brother a quarter to press the button for that picture. I wish I hadn't.

This is she and I again. In 'Cozy Nook.' Don't I look like a sentimental idiot?

I was. For she jilted me. And spoiled 200 plates. She is in every one of them. I shall have to throw them away.

Or no, I will mail them to her. That will dispose of them gracefully. I don't want them around.

But when I photograph next year there will be no girl in front of the camera.

No, sir, not much.

See! Safety in the River. The buffaloes in Sumatra, according to an English writer, in fear of their enemy, the tiger, take refuge at night in the rivers, where they rest in peace and comfort with only their horns and noses sticking above the water.

German Pianos. German piano manufacturers are reported to be in great distress. Formerly they sold many instruments in Russia, but the present duty of $100 on a grand piano and $80 on an upright has almost put an end to the export of pianos.

A LAY OF THE RIALTO.

I've played the melancholy Dane,
I've been a nymph as well as satyr,
I've played the chameleon, sent the rain,
And tumbled in many a theater.

I've played Iago, Richelieu, Biancone and old Hamlet,
I've supped a dozen seasons touch,
Announcing lords with tragic frenzy.

From Texas back to Union Square
I've walked, a hatted constellation.
One year I wore shino hair,
I've been alone a constellation.

But now I'm weary of my art—
An art at which I never was thriving—
Which is just why this butcher's cart
At three a week I'm driving. —Life.

"SOME DAY."

"Ada come with me into the library. I must—I will see you alone for a moment!"

"Oh, nonsense, Philip; how tiresome you are! Say what you wish to say at once. I am engaged to Lord Mordant for the next set, and I can't go away just now; they will be forming directly."

"You can excuse yourself to him; say you are fatigued. Let him find another partner, and you can sit the dance out with me. Surely I have a right to ask such a small favor?"

"You have a right to ask whatever you please, and I have an equal right to refuse, Philip. I do refuse to leave the ball-room at present until the next set is finished."

"And then?" asked Philip, leaping eagerly, his clouded brow brightening for a moment.

"Then," repeated Ada Shirley, "well, then," her better nature prompting her to relent and please her lover by acquiescing in his wish.

"Then I may very likely have a few minutes to spare, which I may bestow upon you if you are very meek and promise not to look like a horrid bluebeard at me again," and she looked at him with a half-winning, half-defiant smile which her lover generally found irresistible, but which failed to win an answering smile just now.

"I have no wish to be a tyrant to you, Ada. You know that your happiness is my daily study, but I cannot submit to such treatment as I have received at your hands to-night."

"I do not understand you," said Ada pettishly, but at this moment Sydney Roland, a handsome young fellow of her own age and quite as poor as herself, approached and claimed her as his partner in the "Polo Quadrille" now forming, and soon in that merriest of quadrilles Ada forgot her gloomy mood, and flirted recklessly, as was her wont in company at all times, I am sorry to say.

Meanwhile Philip stood and watched her angrily. He was a man of great wealth and talents fifteen years her senior. He might have chosen a wife from among the noblest and fairest in the land, but he preferred to woo a laughing Ada Shirley, the eldest daughter of a country clergyman with a small stipend and large family.

No sooner was the dance ended than Philip claimed Ada's promise, and led her away from the ball-room. He was seriously angry, yet her gay, childlike manners and witty tongue had almost restored his good humor, so that instead of coldly handing her a seat, as he had intended to do, he took her in his arms directly they were alone, and, only, whispered:

"Darling Ada, you are very dear to me; but oh, why do you torment me so? If you do not care for me, tell me so honestly, and I will go away and never trouble you again."

"No, no, dear Philip, don't go away! I do love you. I could never be happy now without you!"

"The loving words, completed, Philip's conquest. Peace was now restored, and lasted for some minutes until at length Ada said:

"Oh, Philip, what is the time? I hear the music beginning, and I promised this waltz to Sidney."

Philip's brow darkened again. Could it be possible that this girl loved him when she was so anxious to leave his society to be whirling round the room with a man of whom she knew he, her future husband, disapproved?

"So now he said coldly:

"As you are so fully engaged to-night, Ada, that I cannot enjoy five minutes of your society, I may as well make my adieu at once to you and Mrs. Ainsleigh, as I shall not stay any longer."

All the pride and willfulness of Ada's nature rose against what she considered her lover's tyranny, and she answered her tones as cold as his own:

"Very well, Philip; if you are not enjoying the ball perhaps you had better go. Anyhow do not stay an hour on my account."

"I take you at your word, Ada; but remember, if I leave you to-night, because you prefer another man's society to mine, I go altogether. I will never, if I can avoid it, see you again."

"As you please," Ada replied, trying to make her tones careless and steady.

Without another word he led her to the ball room. Dancing had not recommenced but a girl was singing, and the words uttered fastened themselves on Ada's mind and remained for many a weary year:

Some day, some day, I shall meet you Love, I know not when or how,
Only this, only this, that once you loved me.

Only this, there you now!

Next day the news was spread over society that the engagement between Mr. Philip Irvine and Miss Ada Shirley had been suddenly broken off, and that the gentleman had gone abroad for an indefinite period. Bitter indeed was Ada's repentance, and sad were the days that followed.

Mrs. Ainsleigh was very angry at her folly, as she called it, and sent her back to her home in disgrace.

"I want nothing more of any young lady whom I chaperone than ladylike conduct and decorous behavior, but Ada Shirley has transgressed every rule of good breeding, and female modesty is outraged by her conduct. Not only has she driven Philip Irvine away and made herself the laughing stock of all our circle, but she has caused a rupture between our family and the Monteiths, who are our best friends by her encouragement of Sydney's ridiculous pretensions, when she should have considered him but a foolish boy beneath her notice, remembering who had honored her with his preference, especially as Sydney had been all but engaged to Clarice Monteith before she appeared on the scene. I wash my hands of such a girl."

And this terrible verdict being sent home with her, Ada's life was made unbearable by her father's unappeasable displeasure, and her mother's constant meaning over her ruined prospects.

Not one word or sign from Philip; he evidently intended the separation to be final. Not a sign, that they even remembered her existence from the crowd of friends and lovers who had flattered and petted her when she was the belle of London society. Poor Ada's life was dreary indeed!

But one lovely spring day a year after, Ada was sitting busily sewing, and thinking of that happy past which could never return, when the slatternly housemaid ushered in Sydney Roland.

Ada sprang to her feet, a flush of pain and shame crimsoning her face, as her boy-lover came forward, and looking with great commiseration at her tearful eyes, said:

"Ada, I consider they treated you shamefully, and as it was all my fault I've come to ask you to marry me. I shall be twenty-one next year, and my own master. I am not so rich as that old bear, but I can keep you very comfortably, and I'll do my best to make you happy."

"You are very good, Sydney," faltered Ada, "and I am very grateful to you, but I cannot marry you, and please don't call Philip an old bear."

"Why, Ada, what now? You don't mean to tell me you care for him after his shabby treatment of you? Do you think I'd have gone and left here Sydney hesitated and stammered, as he saw Ada's eyes fixed keenly on him, but he went on hastily: "You or any girl, because she danced with another fellow, and liked a bit of fun? I should think not indeed."

"You would not have given up Clarice, dear Sydney? I quite believe, and oh, if you want to do something for me, to make me a little less miserable, go and marry her; do not think of me. You love her, in spite of your noble resolve to marry me, because you blamed yourself for my folly, and I know she still loves you. Oh, go to her, and make her happy, and give me the comfort of knowing that I have not sundered you two, and spoilt your lives as well as my own."

"You're a right down brick, Ada," responded Sydney, "flushing to the roots of his hair. 'I believe I am rather fond of Clarice still, and since you do care for the old-I beg your pardon—for Mr. Irvine, why, I'll just go back and tell Clarice I'm sorry, and we shall be all right again."

He departed and in a few weeks Ada, whose real nature was pure and unselfish, was rejoiced to hear that their wedding day was fixed, and their respective families as well as themselves, reunited.

Four years had passed—years of added misfortune to the Shirley family. Philip Irvine had just returned, and sitting at his club took up the evening paper and scanned it carelessly. Suddenly he dropped it with a violent start. Taking it up again, trembling with excitement, he read:

"Ada Shirley, who is accused of being concerned in a jewel robbery, with others met in custody from the house of Mr. Grimstone, the well-known picture-dealer, was remanded till to-morrow for further evidence."

"How foolish I am! After all these years of travel and change I can not see, her name without a pang. Of course, it is only an accidental coincidence—she is doubtless Mrs. Sydney Roland, and the mother of his children. I certainly thought I was cured, but it takes a long time."

Next day the prison cell door slowly opened, and Philip Irvine stood face to face with Ada Shirley—his Ada, the only woman whom he had ever loved, changed indeed, but the same to him in poverty and disgrace as when she had been the flattered belle of a London ball-room.

With a bitter cry, she shrunk away from him, and covered her face.

"Darling," he murmured, bending over her and speaking with even more than his old tenderness. "I know not what has brought you here, or by what terrible series of misfortunes your life is so changed, but I see you are lonely and helpless, and I am here to be your friend. Tell me all, and let me help you."

Ada's story, sad but not uncommon, was soon told. Her father had died suddenly in his vestry one day; her mother and the younger children were with some relatives; she, with two brothers, had tried to get a living in London. One of them drew and painted, and she had been in the habit of taking the sketches to a dealer who disposed of them for her.

Two or three weeks before this man had dared to insult her with an offer of his love, his wife being alive, though separated from him on account of his violence and jealousy and his proposal being repulsed with scorn, he had falsely accused her of being implicated in the jewel robbery.

Nothing that love could do was left undone, and Ada was soon released from her perilous position, and declared perfectly innocent. Philip hesitated to seek her love fearing that she had really loved Roland, and not himself, until he happened to meet that young gentleman, and heard how Ada had refused him and sent him back to Clarice.

So, after all, Ada became Philip's loved and happy wife, and the song she had once degraded to hear, because it reminded her of happy days in the past, she had never hoped to enjoy again, she now sings herself, and the love-light in her eyes sends a thrill of happiness to her husband's heart as he hears her declare, "I love you now—I love you now!"

A COURT FESTIVAL.

The Manner in Which Hospitality Was Observed in Vienna.

The court festivities which were lately held in honor of the Archduchess Louise and the Saxon prince, who may be his heir-presumptive to the throne of Saxony, have shown all the Viennese once again how admirable are the arrangements for court pageants in the Austrian capital.

One day there is a gala performance at the opera, and the next there is a concert at court. In both these performances everything has been arranged just as it should be. Lord Brogham, attending a chapter of the Order of St. Patrick in Dublin, and seeing a herald bungling through his work, once wrote that the foolish man did not know his own foolish business. This never could be said in Vienna.

Punctually to the time appointed in any court ceremony, whatever it may be, the emperor appears cool and genial, and the audience rise at once like one man to receive him. Nor is there any crowding. Prince Hohenlohe, the grand master of the imperial household, and Prince Hunyady, the grand master of the ceremonies arrange between them as to the number of seats to be disposed of, and not a seat more than the proper number is given away. All the ladies and gentlemen invited are comfortably seated, and there is no crushing of dresses or pushing into places.

Everything is so ordered that the opera, gala performance or at the court concert, all the guests are quietly installed at least a quarter of an hour before the court arrives, and when the emperor comes in the general rising of ladies and gentlemen is really a striking sight.

The men wear their uniforms or their national costume, or they appear in dress clothes with their orders, and the ladies blaze with all the diamonds which they possess. The emperor comes forward, composedly takes a general survey of the audience, and then takes his seat. He does not applaud himself, but by a calm head he notifies when applause may be given by the audience.

It may be added that all persons attending the opera or court concert on gala occasions are treated as the emperor's guests. Between the acts footmen in the richest state liveries, circulate among them, bearing silver trays loaded with ices, confectionery, lemonade and claret. There is in fact no court in Europe, where hospitalities are accomplished in such splendid style and in such perfect order as that of Vienna.

PAST BELIEF.

To the Russian Peasants Their Country Is All the World.

In Mr. Herbert Barry's account of things as he saw them in Russia during his residence there, he remarks upon the simplicity of the peasant character as it appears in quiet self-sufficient little villages whose inhabitants never wander far from the place of their birth, and scarcely know the name of the nearest town.

One such village he used to visit on occasional shooting expeditions after bear and elk, which were to be found in the neighboring forests.

I always stayed at the house of one Staresta, a very old man, whose wife was still active and lively at seventy years of age. She used to interest herself vastly in the conversation that passed between me and her husband.

This man, a forester, was a remarkable character. By intelligent industry and perseverance he had raised himself from a common sort to the management of woods greater in extent than many a German principality.

He had given his son a liberal education, and was himself a man of inquiring disposition, anxious to get information on all sorts of subjects. Our long discussions of things in general, and the world's recent history in particular, were highly amusing. If a little perplexing to the old lady who sat and listened to them.

One morning I was sitting before the stove, talking with the forester about the British constitution, and happened to mention our gracious queen. At that moment the old lady broke into the conversation.

"You will excuse me," she said, "that I do not speak English. I hear you always talking about your Queen Victoria; now I want to know what does she do for our emperor, because of course she lives at Petersburg?"

"At Petersburg," I said. "No, she lives in her own country—my country—England."

"What part of Russia is England?" asked the old lady.

"England is not in Russia at all. It is another country by itself."

But I could not convince her of that. She had never heard of any other country that was not Russia, and nothing would make her believe in its existence. She could not get over it for a long time, and continually repeated to her husband—

"Only fancy, his trying to tell me there is another country beside Russia!"

Justice to All.

It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasure of becoming the possessors of

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited

THE MERCHANTS

Throughout the Nation to unite with the Banks in placing Columbian Half-Dollars on sale. This is done that the masses of the people, and those living at remote points, may be afforded the best possible opportunity to obtain the Coins.

THE FORTUNATE POSSESSORS

of SOUVENIR COINS will be those who are earliest in seizing upon these new advantages.

$10,000 Was Paid For The First Coin

They are all alike, the issue is limited, and time must enhance their value. The price is One Dollar each.

HOW TO GET THE COINS:

Go to your nearest merchant or banker, as they are likely to have them. If you cannot procure them in this way, send direct to us, ordering not less than Five Coins, and remitting One Dollar for each Coin ordered.

Send instructions how to ship the Coins and they will be sent free of expense. Remit by registered letter, or send express or post-office money order, or bank draft to

Those Who Come and Those Who Go.

Azel Blair of Detroit was in town this week.

Emery Beal of Ypsilanti was home over Sunday.

Ira Lyon is just out from a two weeks sickness.

Geo. Barley and wife visited Milford relatives Sunday and Monday.

Miss Ethelwyn Dubuar is spending the week with Ypsilanti friends.

Miss Nina Chamberlin of Farmington is the guest of Miss Jessie Ely this week.

Mrs. E. Whitney of Fenton is a guest of Mrs. C. A. Evatt for a few weeks.

Miss Sylvia Wilsey is home from Detroit, where she will spend a few weeks with her parents.

Wm. Chadwick left for Lansing last week where he has a position as watch man at the reform school.

Mr. and Mrs. Chambers and daughter of Ypsilanti were guests of Chas. Filkins and wife over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Dean of Auburn N. Y. were guests of the latter's uncle, Mr. H. M. White, over Sunday.

Chas. Booth is in attendance at the Grand Lodge F. & A. M. at Saginaw this week. Frank N. Clark is also there.

Miss Jessie Lowden is back to work in the Record office again after an absence of several weeks on account of sickness.

While trying to round some corners of a board, Willie Simmons made a sad mistake and rounded off the corner of his hand.

Chas. S. Brooks of Lansing and Mrs. Chas. H. McFarlin of St. Johns are spending a few days with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Brooks.

Mrs. Paige Hill of Grand Blanc, who has been on an extended visit through Vermont, New Hampshire and Massachusetts spent a few days of last week with Northville friends.

Our dealers are paying nine cents or more for pork and claim that even at that figure not enough can be obtained to supply the local trade.

Rev. J. M. Belding of St. Louis, Mo., (temporarily of Detroit), will preach, a simple sermon as it were, at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and evening.

The sleigh-ride-social at E. R. Reed's last evening was a decided success. Something like an hundred guests were present and they had a very enjoyable time.

In E. L. Riggs' ad last week the sale of boys short pants should have read Jan. 21 instead of February. Mr. Riggs will make the same sale for this week Saturday on account of the error in dates.

Word was received last week from Fred Reed who is with his father at Denver, Colo. that he had suffered another hemorrhage. Fred had been gaining quite rapidly up to this time. It is to be hoped he will recover from his last attack.

There will be trotting and pacing races on the Dunlap street track in this village Saturday afternoon. The prizes are: 1st, $7 horse blanket; 2d, $5 cash; 3d, $3 whip. The track has been nicely leveled down and there will be large crowds to witness the fine sport.

It is rumored that a Keeley club will be started at Monroe among the Keeley graduates.—Detroit Tribune.

Inasmuch as the Monroe graduates are, with but one exception, from the Yarnall Gold Cure, this village, we hardly see what Keeley has to do with it. There has been a Yarnall club organized there for several months and the Tribune has evidently just "caught on."

There is now enroute a whole car load of screen door wire for the J. A. Dubuar Mfg Co. of this place. This is probably the largest single shipment ever made by any wire screen factory in the country. The cost reaches nearly $2,700. It is quite evident that the manufacture of screen doors by the Dubuar company is reaching no small magnitude and it has already become one of our important industries.

The Edwin Perry company carry their own special scenery, so that Northville people will witness just as good a play tonight for 25 and 50 cents as they would pay from one to two dollars for at Detroit. This company play, as before stated, only the cities. They play at the Detroit opera house later in the season. The prices tonight to everyone are, gallery 25 cents; down stairs everything 50 cents, except the three back rows of chairs which are 75 cents. Get your seats reserved at Hu ston's drug store without extra charge from above prices.

Realizing that many are anxious about our hall project we thought we would say to all those interested that we are getting along as well as could be expected. Our aim was to raise $550 to make the first payment on our property. We have already raised in cash and pledges $231 with a large field yet to canvass. As far as we have visited the ladies of the village, there has been a general response and nearly all seem to be anxious to help in the work. When we realize that the society our children are to mingle with, greatly depends on what we make it, we feel that we cannot be too much in earnest to keep public sentiment in sympathy with the good and pure ideas, instead of looking on the vices with favor. Several of the men of our town have volunteered to help us in our work and have donated in a commendable manner. In behalf of our ladies we thank the brethren and earnestly hope Northville still has many more such. Should any be overlooked or neglected in the canvass for funds for this object bring or send your offering to Mrs. A. W. Reed, cor. secretary, at Reed's store. We earnestly hope that every lady in Northville will have a share in this hall, be it ever so small.

The January number of The Art Amateur shows that this highly popular magazine is not only depernated to maintain its high standard, but also to surpass its former excellence, during 1893. Its large and rapidly growing subscription list is proof of the strong hold it has upon public favor, and of the appreciation of the practical character of its contents. The color plates this month will give delight, whether used as adornments for the home or as copies for the student. "Holiday Gifts" by Francis C. Jones, represents a pretty girl sitting in front of an old fashioned bureau, with a lap full of gay ribbons and worsteds. "Still Life" by Victor Dangon, is a cluster of Jacqueminot roses thrown upon two books which with the flowers are reflected on the polished table. "Melody" by Lisbeth B. Conins is a plate for china painters, shows a maiden listening to the music of a harp played by a cupid. The directions for treating the color studies and the supplement designs for wood-carving, china painting, and embroidery are as full as usual and the correspondence columns answer questions in various lines of decorative art. 85 cents a number. Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedies. Gentleman—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe Liver and Stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians, and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach, and Kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, papers, or any other papers in the States, to convince the afflicted that it is the best Blood, Liver and Kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. I have lived here over 40 years. J. M. Livingston, Grand Rapids, Mich. For sale by C. R. Stevens, Druggist.

The will of the late Henry Touney was filed for probate last Saturday.

The estate is worth about $50,000, and with the exception of $1,300 bequeathed to his niece, Ida Touney, it is all given to his three nephews. His sister, Esther Touney, is given the income from $2,000 during her life.

President Beal of the Globe company arrived back from his southern and eastern trip Saturday. Mr. Beal says he ran across some very cold weather on his journey and found plenty of fine sleighing. He visited Pittsburg, Baltimore, New York, Boston and other points, and reports as finding business in an unusual good condition.

A ten days session of special meetings

A peculiar incident occurred at Whitmore Lake, a day or so ago.
James Reed, a farmer, had complained for several weeks of an intense pain in his ear. He tried all the neighborhood recipes and finally visited a doctor, who made an investigation and removed from the ear a kernel of wheat, which had sprouted full three fourths of an inch since lodging in the ear.

A very well to do farmer called at one of our millinery shops one day last week, and, after introducing himself, announced that his wife died sometime ago. The lady waiting on him began looking for a soft spot on his shoulder, as he did act as if he was going to purpose then and there but there was a decided change in her feelings when he got down to business and proposed that she should fix over a velvet bonnet his wife had paid $3.75 for, and sell it, on commission for him.

Miss Octavia Bates of Detroit, who is a member of the committee for women's work at the Columbian Exposition, will address the Friends in Council in the ladies' library next Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock. Her topic will be the exposition in general and the representation secured to women and their work in particular, and as her knowledge of the subject is extensive and accurate the ladies of the club are anxious to extend the advantages of the afternoon to all the ladies of the village and vicinity, who are hereby cordially invited to be present. By Order of the Directors.

George D. Woodman, aged 47 years, died at his home, 1186 Fourteenth-st., Detroit, Sunday morning. Mr. Woodman was a son of Hon. E. S. Woodman of this place and resided in Wayne county nearly all his life. For the past few years he has been engaged in the hardware business on Grand River-ave. He leaves a wife and one daughter, Mrs. Dr. Patterson, of this village. The funeral was held at the house at 11 o'clock. The remains were brought here on the afternoon train and interred in the Rural Hill cemetery. Mr. Woodman was taken with typhoid fever about eight weeks ago which finally settled on his lungs, from which he was to walk to-rally. His father, E. S. Woodman, is still quite ill and was unable to attend the funeral.

that evening also. Every member is requested to be present.
Northville visitors to Detroit will consult their own interests by stopping at the Wayne hotel when in Detroit.
No hotel in the state surpasses the Wayne in the way of an elegant meal or prompt and courteous treatment.

The opening of the new union depot at Detroit Saturday evening was an elegant affair. The whole interior was handsomely decorated with flags, evergreens and plants. The building was brilliantly illuminated with electric lights. The crowd was a large one and before nine o'clock had developed into a perfect jam. The 19th Infantry band furnished the music.

The Junior Elocutionary Class of this place will give an entertainment at the Baptist church on next Wednesday evening for the benefit of the mission work. This is the one hundredth year of mission work begun by Wm. Carey and the object is to raise a $1,000 this year as a memorial fund and this entertainment is to help toward it.
We hope all who possibly can will patronize this worthy effort of our young people.

These are the days your fellow townsman meets you, grasps your hand warmly, inquires after your health, the health of your wife, her mother, your wife's mother's father, the children, your business and things generally.
You wonder what's warmed his heart so, and think it's the influence of Christmas or some other fellow. A month from now he will meet you again and gently ask your support for the office of collector, town clerk, assessor, or some other high and lucrative office.

The F. & P. M. now have two passenger trains to Monroe and return per-day instead of one. The 10:17 a. m. and 2:35 p. m. both go through. The return trains are the 2:15 and 6:10 p. m. trains. The other trains go to Wayne only. The 10:17 train makes the run from Northville to Detroit in 55 minutes. Tickets between Plymouth and Detroit will be good on D. L. & N. trains and vice versa. All trains will stop at the D. L. & N. depot and all will stop at the F. & P. M. depot except the afternoon train.

We were in error last week in stating that L. A. Beal had sealed his hand and we hasten to make the correction. Lou attempted to wash the face of the type-writer. Now the type-writer at the Globe office is not a common Remington but a direct action Johnson. The type-writer was setting in a chair and Lou picked up chair and all and when between the safe and the coal stove one of the type-writers arms caught against the safe throwing Lou with considerable force against the stove, badly burning his hand. This is the way the accident occurred and we are sorry we made the mistake.

Wonderland has a genuine novelty this week. It consists of an illustration of plantation life before the war.
A number of darker specialty people have combined to give such a performance, and it is one of the nextest and most unique entertainments ever given in curio hall. A scene of an old log cabin is set. The women of the cabin are engaged in spinning raw cotton with old-fashioned spinning wheels, and the men amusing themselves at telling quaint stories, singing and dancing. The scene lives up after the women put away their spinning wheels and all the merry making that only happy careless colored people could do is indulged in. Old slave-time melodies, dancing and the like, makes the scene one of the liveliest and most harmonious.

The nail and button social at the Yarnall Gold cure Tuesday night was another success for the Ladies Auxiliary club. The ladies were given ten pails, a block of wood and a hammer.
The one who drove the nails the quickest and the slowest received first and body prizes respectively. Same with the gentlemen who sewed on buttons. Some of the ladies drove the nails in less than ten minutes. Miss Pinkerton won the gold of her finger. There were some six couples

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that the undersigned hereby continue and renew the limited partnership of McClure, Kelsey and Co., now existing under the provisions of an Act of the Legislature of the State of Michigan, approved May 15, 1896, and of the acts amendatory thereof, being Chapter 78 of Howell's Annotated Statutes.

1. The name or firm under which the partnership business is to be conducted is McClure, Kelsey and Co.

2. The general nature of the business to be transacted by said partnership is buying and selling lumber.

3. The names of the general and special partners in said partnership are as follows: General Partners, Albert V. Mc-Clure, John Kelsey, residents of Detroit,
Michigan; Special Partner, Warren
G. Vinton, resident of Northville, Michigan.

4. The amount of capital stock which said special partner has contributed to the common stock is twelve thousand dollars.

5. The said partnership is to commence on the 1st day of January, A. D. 1893, and to terminate on the sixth day of January, A. D. 1896.

In witness whereof the said parties have hereunto set their hands and seals this 15th day of January, A. D. 1893.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned have formed, pursuant to Chapter 78 of the provisions of the revised statutes of 1846 as amended, a limited partnership to be conducted at the village of Northville, Wayne county, Michigan, under the firm name of THE YARNALL GOLD CURE COMPANY. The general nature of the business is the buying and selling of fuel, ice, building materials and farm sup-

Your Shoes

Ought to fit your feet. Feet shouldn't be twisted to fit shoes—that's blacksmithing. There are plenty of shoe theories, but only one real model—the natural human foot. That is the pattern of our celebrated Ladies "Paris" shoe. No misplaced leather to raise floor rent on one side and corns on the other. "Paris" shoes don't sprawl nor pinch; the fit and they wear.
The name is on the sole. Look for it.

Who Wears The Pants?

REMNANT SALE.

PANT SALE.

Now comes the time to determine who wears the pants, for every man in Northville and vicinity that dares to do such a thing will be interested in this sale. Now I have More Pants than I can wear and in fact more pants than I want or have room for, and consequently I am going to Whack Up and divide with the pant-wearing-fraternity, and now the question arises, "Do you Wear Pants"? If you ever do you certainly need them more during this Zero Weather and will be able to do so with less expense than you have ever experienced.

Listen to our Pant Song.

There is nothing like Kerseys for Warmth and Durability and these are two very important features to wearers of pants, and to say that I have struck it rich in Kerseys is but mildly expressing the case. Last week I inspected a big stock of clothing in Detroit that had been placed in a receiver's hands, and to my best judgement I selected the best bargain in the whole lot. Namely: A complete line of those desirable Kersey Pants. They are All-wool Half Lined, with Canvass Bottoms and every seam Warranted not to rip, being double sewed and would be sold at the regular price at $2.00 per pair, and worth it too, but as I have told you how I got them and bought them at less than the cost of manufacture, I propose to have the greatest pant sale Northville has ever seen, and the Sale price 88c per pair.

Think of it, less than the price of Common Cotton Pants. Look at the pant display in front of the Busy Big Store on Saturday and come in and see for yourself. Remnant sale still open. Don't fail to call during the remnant sale. It includes remnants in all departments. Will continue until Feb. 1st.

It Should Be In Every House.
J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free Trial Bottles at A. M.
