THE THIRD GRAND SUCCESS.

That's What Everyone Says of the Annual K. P. Ball.

Two hundred hearts beat happily, and when music arose with its voluptuous swell, soft eyes look'd love to eyes that spoke again, and all went merry as a marriage bell. It has come and gone. The annual ball given by the Northville Knights of Pythias, at the rink Friday night, if such a thing were possible out did all previous occasions. The night was a stormy one, and in some respects it was fortunate it was. There were 100 couple who took part in the dance and nearly as many spectators lined the reserved space around the room, watching the gay dancers, admiring the beautiful decorations, or listening to the fine music. Had the evening been a pleasant one, there would have been a regular jam, for hundreds were kept at home by the inclemency of the weather. As it was every seat was filled with a rush to the very last and nearly every seat was occupied.

The building was most handsomely, and elaborately decorated with flags and bunting, and emblems of the order, and some sixty large incandescent lamps strung in a circle completely around the rink furnished a brilliant light. The music was by Finney's colored, Detroit orchestra and was pronounced as the finest ever heard in Northville.

Promptly at nine o'clock the grand march, led by Mr. A. Houppert and Miss Frankie Stewart, was started and the programs distributed. The march occupied 45 minutes owing to the large number of participants.

The crowd was a select one and there was not a word, look or deed to mar the splendor of the occasion or the enjoyment of a single guest. Everything was in keeping with the past enviable hospitable reputation of the Northville Knights and they have added another link to their chain of success.

Of all that did chance, there is one tale to tell. Of the dancers and those who were the ball. But each was so happy and all were so fair. The night stole away and never caught them there. The supper, an elegant one, was served by Landlord Butler, at the Park house. It was a fine affair and Mr. Butler received compliments on every hand for his successful effort. Mr. Butler had specially printed for the occasion some very pretty and elaborate menu cards, on the back of which appeared Knights of Pythias' emblems and a cut of the hotel.

There were guests present from Plymouth, Detroit, Ann Arbor, and other points.

A SINGULAR ACCIDENT.

Fractured Her Hip While Lighting a Stove.

Probably one of the most, if not the most, singular accident ever occurring, or ever known to the medical fraternity happened to Mrs. V. O. Whipple, Dunlap street, Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Whipple had just let some oil into the gasoline stove preparatory to lighting it and as she touched the match to it, it flashed up unexpectedly into her face with a startling, popping noise. Mrs. Whipple jumped quickly back, and in much the same way any other person startled in the same manner would have done, but by some unconceivable means that little jump had fractured the hip bone near the socket. She caught hold of a stove which prevented her falling to the floor until assistance could be summoned.

Drs. Swift and Burgess were at once called and pronounced the hip fractured as above stated. The physicians are of the opinion that the bone must have been diseased to have broken so easily, and the fact that the lady has been suffering from a pain in this hip for some time past, which she attributed to rheumatism, bears out their theory. The injury is the same as Mr. Jackson sustained two weeks ago and is probably the worst non fatal fracture that ever befalls mankind.

Mrs. Whipple is now resting easily as can be expected.

NEW BUILDINGS.

A Partial List of Northville's Improvements Booked for This Year.

Not for years will Northville have seen so many new buildings under course of construction, so many improvements, or so many changes in business and real estate as has already taken place of late and is yet to be accomplished.

When the Keeley institute left, some people thought the town had received a set back, but it made not the slightest perceptible change. Since then the new Savings bank was opened; Waterman & Co. bought the hardware store occupied by Knapp & Yerkes; W. G. Yerkes purchased the store occupied by C. A. Hutton & Co.; H. F. Jackson purchased the livery barn on Center street and also C. J. Ball's store; Wm. Thurtell of Bay City purchased the opera house block and is to fit it into a first-class hotel. The Hanrahan refrigerator works has been built. Among the contemplations for early spring are, John Highland will build a new brick meat market; W. H. Nichols has plans drawn for a new residence on Cady st; C. C. Chadwick has purchased Stephen Carrington's property on Beal ave. and will soon move there; W. E. Ambler will erect a new residence on Cady street just back of his father's place, S. E. Carrington will build a new residence on the Church and Cady street on the Yerkes addition; Archie Morris will build next to Mr. Carrington and Geo. Bradley will build next to Mr. Morris. Peter Ely and M. A. Poter also intend building right near that point. C. J. Ball will build a residence on his property, corner Dunlap and Center streets, and erect two tenant houses. There are a large number of other projects in view of which we shall give a more detailed report later.

PERHAPS one good reason why the British profess indifference to the annexation of Hawaii is that when we have got it we will have something in the way of a valuable consideration to offer for Canada. As Uncle Sam is of opinion that he might have Canada most anytime he may feel indisposed to a dicker.

The miserable jumbles of words that becloud the memories of great men, dead and living, middle history and pervert the public taste. When the world's civilization becomes perfect the police will suppress people who issue "lives" on the day of the funeral and puff their wares by describing themselves as the deceased victim's "intimate literary friends."

A PITTSBURGER left his home and a sorrowing wife. When he came back the other day expecting to break upon the heartstone like a ray of sunshine, he found that the widow had wiped her weeping eyes and married a better-looking man with more sense. This simple domestic episode shows that the Enosh Arden business should not be tackled by an amateur.

EVERYTHING in education must be up with the times. If up with the times the element of age does not affect very materially the usefulness of the school. Each state and city establishes its graded schools, and the latest Western system is often ahead of the best in old Eastern towns. Methods, teachers and text books can be located wherever the call for them is backed with liberality of money and spirit.

The French courts have sentenced poor old De Lesseps to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 3,000 francs. True, the Panama scandal was a nasty one and the operations of the swindlers connected with it were most damnable. But still justice might have been satisfied with the conviction and sentence of the other master-factors and spared this octogenarian now shown of the high honors the French people once delighted to heap upon him. The sympathy of the world goes out to poor old De Lesseps. He was at the worst but a cat-paw, a weak old man, helpless in the grasp of a crowd of unscrupulous sharpers.

FARM life may often seem dull and tiresome in the busiest seasons, but it is far less so than it used to be. Books, newspapers and magazines come as easily to the country farmhouse as they do to the city home. There is, too, on the average, as much reading at least by farmers as there is by city business men. What is read is generally more carefully pondered. The farmer is a work with nature all the time. Insensibly he gets into the habit of noting the hints nature gives. This makes the farmer more philosophical in his habits of thought than are the average of men engaged in occupations that quicken and sharpen intellect by contact with men but do not broaden mind, as communion with nature is sure to do.

The launching of the United States ram Katahdin at Bath, Maine, adds another formidable vessel to the list of great fighters now afloat under the American flag. The Katahdin will not be ready for service for some time, but once in active service, this vessel will be a coast defender, with appliances that will make the enemy hasten to cover. Another one of the unique class in the United States navy and one that has just successfully passed her proving trials is the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius. This boat shoots immense dynamite bombs accurately within a limit of 2,000 yards. The heaviest war ship afloat would be totally demolished if it should happen along under one of these death destroyers. In every respect the United States navy is pushing to the fore.

They who have watched the struggles of fathers, brothers and husbands with the tie of a cravat, and beheld their distressing servitude to the latest style of collar or the latest shape of hats, who have witnessed fits of apoplexy provoked by a blunder in cutting an overcoat an inch too short or too long, these unhappy witnesses of man's caprices know too well that no matter how loud the protest which now goes up, fashion is what men make it, and whatever they do not wear is not the fashion. There is not a man in the world who would brave the scorn of his fellows by openly violating the established canons of dress; witness the two buttons marking the waist-line at the back of a frock coat, which are neither ornamental nor useful, but which have been faithfully worn by men of every degree ever since the days when they served a useful purpose in holding up the sword-belt.

Knowing Americans who intend to go abroad this spring are already engaging their staterooms for the return trip. The homeward rush of Americans to escape cholera or to see the world's fair is likely to crowd all ships and embarrass those who do not engage passage in advance.

Some of the public schools at Mohansville, Pa., have been closed because of the very inflamed and sore condition of the pupils' arms after a wholesale "vaccination," all on account of a smallpox scare.

EPIDEMICS OF CRIME.

MORAL DISEASES AS CONTAGIOUS AS PHYSICAL.

The Infirmities of the Mind Appear to Be Subject to Laws Similar to Those Governing Disorders of the Body.

A few years ago, says a writer in the San Francisco Chronicle, the French physiologist Ribot called attention to some remarkable facts, illustrating the moral influence of climate and diet. "The infirmities of the mind," he said, "appear to be subject to laws strikingly similar to those governing the disorders of the body. Moreover, the progress of the medical science has left no doubt that the predisposition to almost every vice and every virtue can be stimulated by the action of special drugs."

And, to complete the analogy, moral aberrations seem, under certain circumstances, to become as contagious as physical epidemics. The Hindoo mania of self-torture has repeatedly spread beyond the Mediterranean, and there was a time when almost every Christian community of Southern Europe had a scar-covered anchorite or a fasting cult of its own. It might be supposed that life in the Middle Ages was so miserable that its renunciation required no special effort of self-denial; but suicide manias became epidemic at several periods of an era that has been celebrated as the golden age of paganism, and, in 235 B. C., Egypt, then ruled by one of the most enlightened successors of Alexander the Great, was invaded by a craze of that sort. Corpses were found dangling from almost every tree in the palastra, or gymnasium park, of Alexandria, the reedy shores of the Nile delta were covered with dead bodies, and agnostic philosophers fanned the mania by traveling about the country and delivering lectures in true Buddhist-fakir style, on the blessing of annihilation. One of these fanatics, called the "Orator of Death," was chased across the border by order of King Ptolemy, but suicides continued till the war against Syria turned the attention of the public to other topics of sensation.

Hashish fiends once became so numerous in Western Asia that the Sheikh ul Jebel availed himself of the mania to enlist a corps of desperadoes who, at his command, would get drunk together and rush upon their enemies with the fury of Spanish castiffs, till the word assassination (hashish rampage) became a synonym of murder.

But even without the aid of drugs manslaughter manias have more than once assumed an epidemic form. The soldiers of Tamerlane and Ali Pasha revelled in carnage with a gusto that needed no other stimulus, and found a horrible expression in the remark of a Bashir-Bazouk chieftain that "those who have once tried it are apt to prefer a first-rate man-hunt to every other sport." Muhammed Babes' troopers, too, howled for battle and needed all the stern resolution of their leader to keep them from provoking a quarrel with the timid natives of Northern Hindostan, but at the first show of resistance their destructive passion was given full reign and it may be doubted if, without an inducement of that sort, Suvaioff would have succeeded in leading his man-butchers from the Volga to the Alps.

During the carnival of blood preceding the fall of Robespierre not men only, but women, got "drunk with crime" and ranged the country clamoring for the privilege of massacre, on general principles if no special act of "un-patriotism" could be made to furnish a pretext for revenge. Of the 280,000 victims butchered in the course of a year and a half at least a quarter of a million were sacrificed on the altar of wanton blood-thirst. During the peasant's war, too, murder continued after the hunger of retaliation had been satisfied by the death of the feudal oppressors. In the little town of Weinsberg six knights were dragged from their hiding-places and impaled by the rabid rustics, who then proceeded to avenge the disappointment of their search for additional victims by falling upon helpless non-combatants and hewing away left and right till their axes got blunt with the smashing of human skulls.

Dr. Livingston, in the chronicle of his African travels, describes a Kafir chieftain who seemed to be seized with semi-annual fits of a butcher-mania, which obliged him to extend his man-hunt to tribes who had been entirely innocent of any act that could be construed into a fair case belli, so much so, indeed, that some of them were ignorant of the very name of their invader. The commander of his war-bucklers shared his passion, and justified it on the ground that it was necessary to keep their men in practice.

For similar purposes Malay pirates often attack and butcher the crews of vessels carrying nothing but ballast, or such unprofitable cargoes as sea-moss and teak-wood. One of these human sea monsters, hanged a few years ago at Singapore, confessed to have sunk or burned eighty-five Chinese junks, a circumstance which he merely mentioned because his capture had been effected by a French man-of-war, and the French were just then not on the best of terms with China. In the thousand islands skirting the coast of Sumatra the arrival of a boodie-freighted corsair will often stimulate a general revival of piracy and induce scores of fishermen to sell their tackle for firearms.

A still uglier epidemic, however, was the craze of persecution which almost depopulated the Netherlands during the administration of the Duke of Alla. A frenzy seemed to seize the Spanish soldiers, and during a heretic hunt of three years not less than 23,000 persons were burned alive, hanged or slain in the fields or woods like wild beasts. The desperate energy of the contest thus inaugurated may be inferred from the fact that the attempt to quell the insurrection was not discontinued until the Spanish kings had expended 750,000,000 pesos and lost 160,000 men in battles and sieges.

A still uglier epidemic, however, was the craze of persecution which almost depopulated the Netherlands during the administration of the Duke of Alla.

PLAIN THEOSOPHY.

AS TAUGHT BY OLNEY H. RICHMOND OF CHICAGO.

Something About the New Religion Which is Attracting Many Converts All Over the World—"All Things Are Destined" Its Law.

OLNEY H. RICHMOND is the grand mogul of the Ancient Order of the Magi, whose temple is in Chicago.

"The order," said Mr. Richmond the other day, "teaches the religion of the stars, based on a knowledge of astronomy, geology, mathematics and other sciences. It is a scientific religion which accepts nothing as a fact until proven, and every proposition we make is susceptible of mathematical demonstration and proof. I not only believe in a hereafter and heaven, but have absolute proof of a life to come and know exactly what it is; this religion is Christianity, with the absurdities of a bodily resurrection, a material heaven and an endless hell left out. It is theosophy, with the wild and untenable speculations of dreamers omitted. It is spiritualism of the highest type, with the false communications and ignorant teachings of unadvanced beings on the other side ignored. It is science, which does not place a limit on infinity."

"The temple is an oblong room of large dimensions fitted up very much like a Masonic lodge. On entering the mystic temple the visitor beholds a miniature representation of the solar system, which is in a more comprehensible and tangible shape than he has ever before seen. Suspended from the ceiling of the hall from end to end are heavenly bodies, tilted at various angles to the plane of the ecliptic, thus illustrating their polarities, while at the same time various satellites revolve around the primaries. Mr. Richmond has over 200 'mysteries' which can be exhibited as proof of occult knowledge. Among many other things he can delineate a person's horoscope and tell him things that he has forgotten, or is yet to know, the day he was born, giving year, month and hour from his astral number, which is contained in books which he has made through eighteen years of labor. 'Every person born in this world,' continued Mr. Richmond, 'has a planet which especially rules over him, and which during his span on earth, with other bodies of the solar system, plays an important part in shaping his life. Each person, male or female, has an individual number drawn from the value of this overruling star in these scientific calculations, and this number is the basis for many of the mathematical wonders. Many of these mysteries can be mistered and elucidated by novices. These facts are not the work of spirits, psychology or hocus pocus, but simple magic, based on the laws of astronomy as understood at the present time, aided by the ancient methods.' Among other signs and symbols with which the temple is decorated were noticed the different figures to be found on ordinary playing cards, more or less familiar to all. In the delightful game of whist it frequently 'happens' that one particular suit

A PLUCKY WOMAN.

Who Goes Out West and Is Made Much of by the Boys.

"The pluckiest man I ever saw was a woman," said Tom O'Farrell of Fargo as he brought his rich Irish brogue and big black pipe over to the crowd of story-tellers that had pre-empted a corner in the hotel rotunda. "With the first big rush to Dakota came a pale-faced young Boston schoolmar, who looked as though she had one dainty foot in the grave and the other hovering on the verge. She took up a claim, and the boys saw that she got the finest piece of land in the county. Then we set to work and built her a house. Every mother's son of us proposed to her before we got the roof on. She was just the sweetest little blossom that ever set fire to the masculine pulse, and she had a way of speaking to every man that led him to believe that he was all the world and part of Coney Island to her."

"After we got the house built she got up a little supper for us—seven great-rough bears, all of us 'clear gone.' Well, sir, after she'd fed us, and made much of us, and thanked us in her sweet way for her cozy little home, she told us that she was already engaged to a poor devil of a law student back in New England, who was working his way through college. We all felt pretty blue, but we swore we'd look out for her until her dude won his spurs, and we did. We broke land for her, planted and harvested her crops, and she repaid us by gathering us about her evenings and reading to us and singing old home songs that seemed to us holier anthems than ever rolled through the marble aisles of a grand cathedral."

"For two years she lived there alone, superintending her farm and improving it, and when one day the stage brought a pale-faced young attorney to Big Boy he found a plump, rosy-cheeked Dakota girl and a homestead worth $3,000 waiting to receive him. He is now the leading lawyer and one of the wealthiest men of the state, and he owes it all to his wife. Every man for two hundred miles around is in love with that woman, and would crawl on his hands and knees through a briar patch to serve her."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

His Simple Epitaph.

The following is the simple inscription upon a tomb in a quiet corner of the cathedral at Carthage, which has lately received the illustrious occupant for whom it was intended: "Here lies he who was Cardinal Lavigne, and who now is nothing but dust. Pray for him."

The Better Way.

The Brooklyn health protective association rejected the form, "Men must not spit on the floor," which was proposed for a placard to be placed in cars, and adopted this one, "Gentlemen will not expectorate on the floor."

with turn trump time after time, while one or two of the players will hold most of the best cards. This, Mr. Richmond claims, is not chance or luck, but that the cards are governed by law and the players who are apparently having bad luck are simply subjects of the law and their ruling card is not in the ascendancy at this time. The same person at the same time would be unlucky in other pursuits. Suppose he is unlucky in diamonds; just at this time he would also be unlucky in his pecuniary affairs.

No Cobblers Nowadays.

There is no sense in calling a shoemaker of modern times a cobbler. The nearest thing to a cobbler to-day is the custom-made man who confines his attention exclusively to that one branch. Machinery for making shoes in great quantities and in sections is of comparative recent date, and prior to its adoption the shoemaker or cobbler did the entire business, from taking the measure to collecting the money. In small towns and villages he literally performed the entire process himself, having insufficient trade to justify the employment of an assistant, and in larger cities he superintended the work from beginning to end himself. The labor-saving wonders of the times have practically swept this man out of the field, and there are few members of the trade who are really cobblers.

'August Flower'

My wife suffered with indigestion and dyspepsia for years. Life became a burden to her. Physicians failed to give relief. After reading one of your books, I purchased a bottle of August Flower. It worked like a charm. My wife received immediate relief after taking the first dose. She was completely cured—now weighs 165 pounds, and can eat anything she desires without any deleterious results as was formerly the case. C. H. Dear, Prop'r Washington House, Washington, Va. @

THE NEXT MORNING I FEEL BRIGHT AND NEW AND MY COMPLEXION IS BETTER. My doctor says it acts gently on the stomach, liver and kidneys, and is a pleasant laxative. This drink is made from herbs, and is prepared for use as easily as tea. It is called

Poor Health for Years. Doctors said he Could Not Live! HIS LIFE SAVED!

Mr. Willcox is a practical farmer and a successful country merchant. He is Postmaster of his village, deserving and popular and well known for miles around. He writes: "I had been in poor health for years. Four of our best physicians could give me no encouragement. Some of them said I would not live a year. My difficulties, aggravated by rheumatism, were so severe and chronic that I had given up ever being well again. I took Swamp-Root for a considerable length of time, three times a day, and to-day my health is very good, in fact, better than the majority of men at my age—forty-eight years. I give you Swamp-Root credit for saving my life, and the good health I now enjoy is due to its use." J. D. Willcox, Olmsted, Pa.

WILL BE GATHERED IN PROVISIONS ON THE HAWAII ANNEXATION TREATY.

The Stars and Stripes Will Supplant the Native Flag—Uncle Sam's New Role as King of the Sandwich Islands—Foreign Powers are Quiet.

The treaty of annexation concluded between Secretary of State Foster and the Hawaiian provisional government's commissioners has been transmitted to the Senate. The President also sent a brief message favoring annexation. He says the overthrow of the monarchy was not promoted by this government and that the restoration of the queen would be disastrous to the islands. He further says:

"It is essential that none of the other great powers shall secure these islands. Such a possession would not consist with our safety and with the peace of the world. Prompt action upon this treaty is very desirable. It meets the approval of the Senate, peace and good order will be secured to the islands under existing laws until such time as Congress can provide by legislation a permanent form of government for the islands. This legislation should be, and I do not doubt will be, not only just to the natives and all other residents and citizens of the island, but should be characterized by great liberality and a high regard to the rights of all the people and of all the foreigners domiciled there."

In a letter to the President laying the treaty before him, Secretary of State Foster recapitulates the history of recent events in the islands leading up to the revolution; the establishment of the Provisional Government; the appearance of the commissioners at Washington; the negotiations that have taken place, resulting in the preparation of the treaty; and the establishment of the protectorate by Minister Stevens. Secretary Foster confirms the President's statement that the revolution was entirely unexpected, so far as this country was concerned. "At no time," he says, "had Mr. Stevens been instructed with regard to his course in the event of a revolutionary uprising. The change was in fact abrupt and unlooked for by the United States Minister or the naval commander."

In regard to the protectorate, Secretary Foster says in his letter: "An instruction has been sent to the Minister commending his action in so far as it lay within the purview of standing instructions to the legation and to the naval commanders of the United States in Hawaiian waters and tended to co-operate with the administration of affairs by the Provisional Government, but disavowing any stress in excess of such instruction whereby the authority and power of the United States might appear to have been asserted to the impairment of the independent sovereignty of the Hawaiian Government by the assumption of a formal protectorate."

Secretary Foster says that the provisions of the treaty reserve to Congress the determination of all questions affecting the form of government of the annexed territory, the citizenship, and elective franchise of its inhabitants and all questions relating to the economic and political status of the islands.

In conclusion he says that, pending the negotiation, he received assurances from representatives of the leading powers of the world in this city and from our own Ministers abroad convincing him that the incorporation of the Hawaiian Islands into the Union will be regarded by these powers with satisfaction or ready acquiescence.

The treaty itself provides for the cession of all rights of sovereignty over the islands, all public buildings and property to the United States, revenue from public lands, except such as reserved for government purposes, to be used solely for the benefit of the people on the islands. Until Congress provides otherwise, the existing government laws of the Hawaiian Islands are continued subject to the paramount authority of the United States.

"A resident Commissioner is to be appointed who shall have power to veto any act of said Government. Until Congress enacts the necessary legislation, existing commercial relations of the Hawaiian Islands, both with the United States and foreign Governments, shall continue. Further immigration of Chinese into the islands is prohibited, and Chinese now in the islands shall not be permitted to come into the present territory of the United States. The public debt of the islands is assumed by the United States to the extent of $3,250,000. The United States agrees to pay Queen Liliuokalani $20,000 annually during life, and Princess Kaiulani $150,000. Provision is made for the exchange of ratifications of the treaty at Honolulu as soon as possible on the part of the United States by the Resident Commissioner provided for the treaty.

It will be observed that under the provisions of the treaty the sugar producers of Hawaii will not participate in the bounty provided by the McKinley law unless Congress should extend it to the islands. Accompanying the message and the treaty is the correspondence upon the subject between the two governments, tables giving full details as to the area of the territory proposed to be annexed, the public debt, the public lands, the annual allowances to, and revenue of the late royal household, and statistics as to the population and revenues, commerce, and other economic matters—all together forming a book of several hundred pages.

THE HOME RULE BILL.

Ireland's Legislature to be a Council and Assembly.

Mr. Gladstone's home rule bill for Ireland has been read in full in the House of Commons. The seven schedules are here given:

Whereas it is expedient that without impairing or restricting the supreme authority of Parliament an Irish Legislature be created for such purposes in Ireland as are in this act mentioned; be it therefore enacted by the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same as follows:

Part I. On and after the appointed day there shall be established in Ireland a legislature consisting of her Majesty the Queen and two houses, a legislative council and a legislative assembly.

With the exceptions and subject to the restrictions in this act mentioned, there shall be granted to the Irish legislative power to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Ireland in respect to matters exclusively relating to Ireland or some part thereof.

The Irish Legislature shall not have the power to make laws in respect to the following matters or any of them: The status or dignity of the Crown or the succession of the Crown or regency, the Lord-Lieutenant as Representative of the Crown; the making of peace or war; matters arising from a state of war; the naval or military forces, or the defense of the realm; treaties and other relations between the different parts of her Majesty's dominions, or offenses connected with such treaties, dignities or titles of honor, treason or treason-felony, alienage or naturalization; trade with any place out of Ireland; quarantine or navigation, except in respect to inland waters; local health or harbor regulations; beacons, lighthouses or seamarks, except so far as they can consistently with any general act of Parliament be constructed or maintained by local harbor authorities; standards of weights and measures; trade marks; merchandise marks; copyright of patent rights. Any law made in contravention to this section shall be void.

The powers of the Irish Legislature shall not extend to the making of any law respecting the establishment or endowment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, imposing any disability or conferring any privilege on account of religious belief or abrogating or prejudicially affecting the right to establish or maintain any place of denominational institution or charity, or prejudicially affecting the right of any child to attend a school receiving public money without attending the religious instruction at the school, or whereby any person may be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.

The executive power of Ireland shall continue to be vested in the Queen. The Lord-Lieutenant, on behalf of her Majesty, shall exercise any prerogatives other than the executive power of the Queen, which may be delegated to him by her Majesty, and shall in her Majesty's name, summon, prorogue and dissolve the Irish Legislature.

The Irish Legislative Council shall consist of forty-eight members. Each of the constituencies mentioned in the first schedule of this act shall return the number of members named opposite thereto in the schedule. Every man shall be entitled to be registered as an elector, and when registered to vote at the election of the council for a constituency, who owns or occupies land or a tenement in the constituency of the rateable value of more than £20, subject to like conditions as the man who is entitled to the passage of the act to be registered and to vote as a parliamentary elector with respect to ownership qualification; or provided that a man shall not be entitled to be registered nor if registered at the election of a council in more than one constituency in the same year. The term of office of every councillor shall be eight years. They shall not be affected by dissolution. Half the councillors shall retire every fourth year and their seats shall be filled by a new election.

The Irish Legislative Assembly shall consist of members returned by the existing parliamentary constituencies of Ireland of the existing divisions thereof and elected by parliamentary electors in those constituencies.

Princess Kaiulani Coming.

The Princess Kaiulani, heir presumptive to the Hawaiian throne, who is now in London, sends the following address to the American people: "Four years ago, at the request of Mr. Thurston, then Hawaiian cabinet minister, I was sent away to England to be educated privately and fitted for the position which, by the constitution of Hawaii, I was to inherit. For all these years I have patiently and in exile striven to fit myself for my return this year to my native country. I now am told that Mr. Thurston is in Washington asking you to take away my flag and my throne. Have I done anything wrong that this wrong should be done to me and my people? I am coming to Washington to plead for my throne, my nation and my flag. Will not the great American people hear me?"

Buchanan has decided to submit to the voters of the village on Monday, March 13, the question of issuing $50,000 of bonds to be used in building a system of water works. They are to be 30-year bonds, carrying 5 1/2 per cent interest.

The annual meeting of the Southern Michigan game and fish protective association was held at Kalamazoo. Desirable legislation was discussed. Officers were elected as follows: President, E. H. Kauter, Kalamazoo; first vice-president, Prof. C. H. Sage, Three Rivers; second vice-president, J. F. Cowgill, Kalamazoo; secretary and treasurer, H. Dale Adams, Galesburg.

THIS IN IRELAND.

Horse and Rider Unexpectedly Drop Eleven Feet, Uninjured.

The jump shown in the illustration was made by an officer of the Royal Irish Regiment on Nov. 26, 1892, at Clonmel, Ireland. The distance from

A BIG JUMP
The top of the wall to the road is eleven feet. There was a rise of five feet on the other or taking side of the wall, which completely hid the drop into the road. The rider did not see his danger until it was too late to turn back. His horse jumped out from the top of the wall and landed on the road almost against the opposite bank. The shock was tremendous, but no damage was done. Both horse and rider continued to the end of the run.

SOME BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Faces That Wore Their Bloom Until Past Middle Life.

The portraits of beauties of the time of Washington's inauguration show the highest feminine charms of wit, feeling, heart and mind in faces which wore their bloom staunchly up to 50. Mrs. Jay, daughter of Rufus King, with her black hair and brilliant blue eyes; Mrs. Bayard, whose pictured face it is impossible to see and not love; the faithful, frank wife of Alexander Hamilton, who could have kept her gallant husband from his erring ways had she been more of a woman and less of a model. Many will recall Mme. Rindersdorf, the singer, when over forty, beautiful as an image of rose and white Parian, and Rose Eyttinger, whether among the tapestries of her snugly picturesque rooms or in full sunlight, who defied time more successfully than any beauty who has ever trod the stage. Fortune was none too kind to either of these women; indeed, it seems as if those best befitted years who were constantly stirred up to effort. It depends upon a woman herself more than upon her advantages whether she can retain her charms and her youth up to three score.

Tenth Century Oaks in Massachusetts.

The great oaks at Waverly, Mass., are survivors of an oak forest that must have existed in that region, according to geologists and students of trees, as far back as the tenth century. They bear every evidence of great age, and an elm tree in the neighborhood, with its great limbs lying on the ground and nearly all of its branches decayed, is the most venerable object in the line of trees that can probably be displayed in any part of New England. It is well worth a visit to Waverly just to see this venerable elm. It is immense in the size of its trunk, and its dignity in decay is very impressive. The dozen oak trees in the neighborhood are of the sort that attain a very great age unimpaired. We know of only one other oak tree in New England that can be compared with them. That is located in Ipswich, and is larger and more venerable, apparently, than any of the Waverly oaks, and that and the Waverly oaks, we are glad to know, have been inspected by the State Park Commissioners, and are like to be preserved. It is worth one's while to see and study these majestic oaks. They are seen to great advantage in the winter, when the rugged limbs are bare and their immense strength is revealed, and in summer, when they are covered with foliage, they are objects of wonderful beauty. The State of Massachusetts has a duty to enfranchise these trees and make them public property. They are the glory of the State, and almost as much an object of interest as the old State House or the venerable structure called the Old South Meeting House.—Boston Herald.

Artificial Porous Stones.

One of the most interesting points in connection with the new water works at Worms, Germany, is the fact that artificial porous stones are used for filtering the water. Tests showed that the number of bacteria in the water after filtration is about one-twentieth of that before filtration. Steam pipes are so arranged that the stones can be sterilized whenever it is necessary.

Notes of Science.

Three quarters of a second is the time occupied by the fall of a knife in the guillotine. The knife is weighted by 140 pounds of lead, falls nine feet, and cuts through flesh and bone as easily as through a bar of soap. Divers in the clear waters of the tropical seas find that fish of different colors, when frightened, do not all dart in the same direction, but that each different kind takes shelter in that portion of the submarine growth nearest to its color.

The production of bituminous coal in the United States is now double that of anthracite. In 1892 there were 110,000,000 tons of bituminous coal mined, against 52,000,000 tons of anthracite. The area of production of soft coal is ten times greater than the area of production of hard coal. In the form of coke, bituminous coal is constantly encroaching upon the field of anthracite production.

IN LIGHTER VEIN.

She—Dudes haven't more than half sense. Mr. Sappy—Aw, Miss Maw, are there no exceptions? "Oh, yes, Mr. Sappy; some haven't any." "Things never does go right in this world," said the pessimist-chirped man. "Bobvire fences didn't come in until after leather pants had gone out o' style." He—Now that you have rejected me, may I say a word to you as a friend? She—Certainly. He—Well, I think you are making the greatest mistake of your life.

Penelope—O, I'm in awful luck. Perdita—What's the matter? Penelope—Engaged, and I have still eight new dresses of which I will never have a chance to try the effect.

Little Nellie had been quiet for a good while. "What's the matter?" asked her mother. "Is unhappy." "Unhappy?" "Yes m." "Why?" "I can't think of any question to ask."

Brown—There are some things in which the ancients surpassed the moderns. Dunn—What, for instance? Brown—Noah was a better weather prophet than the fellows who make the predictions nowadays.

"See that team of horses, how nicely they go together, John. Why can't a man and woman pull together like that?" "There's every reason, my dear. Those horses only have one tongue between them."

He—An agnostic, my dear, is one who knows nothing. She—I see. You refer to the youth fresh from college. He—Or, rather, I should say, one who does not claim to know anything. She—Ah, then of course, I am wrong. No, you can not mean the youth fresh from college.

"Coming out of church last Sunday," told a woman this week, "I overheard a woman near me ask a man as to the health of his wife. 'She is not very well,' he replied. 'She has suffered from insomnia for some weeks.' 'Oh, spoke up a third member of the group—a woman, alas! I can sympathize with her. I have myself, dreadfully. This morning in church I've had a severe attack.'"

DR. BENNETT.

Andrew Connor of Jackson Mich., two years ago came to Dr. Bennett in this condition:

Bladder trouble to that extent he could not urinate without the aid of a catheter, so inflamed was the urethra from the passage of small, sharp gravel.

Chronic constipation.

Inability to eat or sleep.

Extreme weakness and loss of strength.

He had employed the best loyal Physicians, also had been under treatment at several noted Sanitariums, without benefit.

The doctor told him, "All has been done for you known to Medical Science. You must soon die."

One treatment in accordance with Dr. Bennett's Official Philosophy relieved his pain and he began to improve.

Another treatment and he was able to resume work.

A few more treatments and he was well, and has remained so ever since.

His cure was effected without Alternatives, Blood Purifiers, Tonics.

Dr. Bennett's treatment removed the Fever (inflammation) which caused the diseased conditions resulting in Constipation, Bladder trouble, etc., and which also impairs the functions of every organ in the human body.

The above cited case is not that of some distant person, but a real resident of one of the cities where Dr. Bennett is and has been the past ten years successfully treating Chronic Diseases.

He invites all to come and learn more of his therapy and work at the Macomber hotel Wednesday, March 1.

Free consultation in German and English.

BARGAIN STORE, Northville, Mich

We have not said much about our summer things lately. With us it is quite different from what it is with a dry goods emporium, or a ready-made clothing house or shoe store. We cannot use big show windows in which to exhibit our "leaders." We cannot perform as Spring, or Macy, or Wanamaker or Altman, or Marshall Field—hang our samples of next summer gowns in the windows in January. We have no remnants to dispose of at three fourths off. We cannot cut you samples to take home and show sister, or to examine, alternately, by out door glare and gas light. But our think-factory is now working right along, day and night, (and to tell the truth, quite a little on Sundays,) preparing for the coming season, and working out new features tending to improve the provisions for your comfort and safety. Yes, I know the World's Fair will be the greatest item on the list of attractions—that is settled. The world, itself, will, however, move on in its usual dignified manner. There will be storms, and comets, and earthquakes, and deaths, and marriages, and births. There will be just as many people at Coney Island, and Newport, and Atlantic City, and Brighton and Old Point Comfort, and Ottawa Beach (Eh?) This being true—RIGHT and who will say nay!—then as many (and I say more) at Charlevoix, Petoskey, Bay View, Harbor Springs, Mackinaw, etc. Health will command just as much attention as it ever did, especially from the ill, overworked, the convalescent. Do you think it will get it, too? The young children of the well-to-do will require a change of air, even more than heretofore, and as they have the first mortgage on the entire domain of affection, they will be "in it" this year. The loving husband will run up to see the folks, just as loving husbands have, from way-back. The lover—well—the lover's visits increase in number with the increase in traveling facilities—and so they pay their part. Our department of anticipation is, therefore, on "full time," with a large order of new designs of fetching character, as it were. We are not ready to give details yet but would like you to kindly keep in mind that we are in it for next summer. Geo. Dr. H. V. General Passenger Agent

LOCAL GLEANINGS.
Things Said and Did in the Liveliest and Prettiest Village in Michigan.
 F. A. Sutherland is steadily on the gain.
 A. K. Dolph has sold his Yerkes ave. property to Wm. Wesley.
 The present demand for houses and stores in this village is unprecedented.
 Born on Feb. 16 a 10½ pound girl at Mrs. B. J. Thompson's. All doing well.
 Geo. Galbraith will occupy the rooms vacated by Dr. Hosmer over Wilcox's store.
 Will Burch lost three fingers instead of one as stated in last week's Record.
 The way property is changing hands in Northville of late suggests a live, healthy boom this spring.
 A sleigh-load of boys and girls went out to surprise Royal Larkins last Wednesday evening and they succeeded too.
 The F. & P. M. R. R. are doing an immense business these days. Some 700 or 800 freight cars are pulled by this station daily.
 C. J. Ball will close out his goods at auction sale commencing this week Saturday, in the dry goods department. L. L. Brooks will be the auctioneer.
 Lost—Small lettered account book, on reeds Saturday. Finder will greatly oblige by returning same to me or leaving at the Record office.
 D. S. WEBBER.

The Fairbank & Votey organ company, through their representative, B. F. Sprunger of this place, has presented the Northville W. C. T. U. with a very neat organ for their new hall.
 The Presbyterian people thought they had secured the permanent services of Rev. Belding, but it now transpires that he had not yet fully made up his mind and the church officials are now looking elsewhere.
 The ladies of the W. C. T. U. will dedicate their new hall March 1st. Services at 3 and 7 p. m. A cordial invitation is extended to our citizens to be present. An attractive and pleasing program has been arranged.
 SPRAYED OR STOLEN—Feb. 14, large fat Bull-Pug Dog. White breast, yellow legs scars on front legs. Liberal reward if returned to Mrs. Wm. HART, at Mrs. Mary Wilkinson's, Beal-town. Answers to name of "Pug".
 F. N. Blackwood fell from a load of hay one day last week while assisting to unload it, sustaining some severe bruises about the face. We are pleased to state the injuries did not prove serious and he is now out again.
 Tomorrow night the Methodist people will hold an "Electric Light" in their church parlors. They have just finished equipping their edifice with electricity. Light refreshments and a good program will be the order of the evening.
 As a result of the Y. M. C. A. meeting two weeks ago it is the purpose to establish a young men's meeting, and next Sunday the first meeting will be held at the W. C. T. U. hall. Prof. Don. C. Bliss and Edwin Thompson will address the meeting.
 Unless something unforeseen occurs the people of Northville will have the pleasure of hearing Mr. Gen. Custer, in her delightful reading of "Gar's Life on the Plains," some time in May. F. S. Neal has the arrangements in charge and has secured the Methodist church for the purpose.
 Miss Carrie Holt Babbitt gave a program of six recitations for class criticism at her home Wednesday evening Feb. 15. She is an eloquent list of more than ordinary attainment. Her manner is natural and self possessed and the selections rendered, showed that the excellence she has attained was won by long and studious training. Miss Whipple interspersed the program with vocal selections, rendered in a pleasing manner.
 William H. Tousey of Plymouth has asked the Probate Court to appoint Francis G. Terrell administrator of the estate of the late John H. Tousey, who died on Jan. 17 last. He says that the estate demands immediate attention, as he believes that Tousey's will will be contested and that in consequence the executor will not be competent to act for some considerable time. The heirs at law are three nephews and four nieces.

 I. N. Starkweather is just home, much improved in health, from a two weeks visit to Ypsilanti and Chicago.
 Rev. J. A. Bartlett of Saline will preach in the Presbyterian church next Sunday morning and evening.
FOOTED—In post-office, Ladies black muff. Owner can obtain same by applying at the Record office and paying for this notice.
 J. A. Sinclair, formerly principal of the Northville schools, has been nominated by the republicans for school commissioner in place of Archibald McCallum.
 Bro. Slocum of the Holly Advertiser has found it necessary to enlarge his paper to a 7 col. quarto, thus making the largest paper printed in Oakland county. Jim is a hustler and the people of Holly evidently appreciate the fact.
 The new fire hose has been here for some time past but the chief of the fire department informs us that it has not been turned over to him and that he knows nothing about it. It certainly should be put in shape for use at once and the correct way to do it, is to turn it over to the fire department and hold them responsible for its proper care.
 The following from the L. M. Olan, Democrat refers to a nephew of Mr. M. Maunk of this place:
 "A very sad death occurred in the family of Aaron Fisher, Delphos, in the person of his youngest son Edgar O., who passed away Sunday evening, Feb. 12, in his 21 year. He had been afflicted with some kind of chronic kidney disease for over a year, but was not thought to be in a dangerous condition until Saturday morning when he became suddenly ill and continued to grow worse until death relieved him. This is a sad and irreparable loss to the family of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher, as well as to the community in general, as Edgar was regarded by all who knew him to be a good boy. It seems all the sadder to see one so young stricken down by the grim hand of death, yet the young man died and the old must die, and the wisest knoweth not how soon! An entire town and community unite in extending sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Fisher and relatives in their saddest hour of bereavement."

 J. B. Wilson, 671 Clay St., Sharpburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with Pneumonia after an attack of "La Grippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber of Cookport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free Trial Bottles at A. M. Randolph's Drug Store. Large bottles, 50c. and $1.00.
A WONDERFUL STATEMENT.
 Proprietors of Dullman's Great German Remedies, Gentlemen—I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe Liver and Stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians, and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach, and Kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, papers, or any other papers in the States, to convince the afflicted that it is the best Blood, Liver and Kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. I have lived here over 40 years.

AT THE BAL-MASQUE.

When music sounded through the hall
And revelry was ruling all
With gleaming eyes were strangely bright
With thoughts that wait and wine excite,
In lover's arms, or in the dance,
He bent his head to say:
"Forever thus to dance with you
Would bring me lasting joy and true,
Nor would I ask
From now until life's final end
That fate should ever to me send
More grateful tale
Than guiding you—pray lift your mask!"
She owned it would be passing sweet
If down the halls of time their feet
Together strayed
To measure of the merry dance
Then, with an upward saucy glance,
"But then," she said,
"You know the piper must be paid."

THE MISADVENTURES OF JOHN NICHOLSON.

BY ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

CHAPTER III.—CONTINUED.

And suddenly there came upon him a mad fear lest his father should have looked him in. The notion had no ground in sense; it was probably no more than a reminiscence of similar calamities in childhood, for his father's room had always been the chamber of inquisition, and the scene of punishment; but it stuck so rigorously in his mind that he must instantly approach the door and prove its untruth. As he went he struck upon a drawer left open in the business table. It was the money-drawer, a measure of his father's disarray; the money-drawer—perhaps a pointing-providence! Who is to decide, when ever divides differ between a providence and a temptation? Or who, sitting calmly under his own vine, is to pass a judgment on the doings of a poor, hunted dog, slavishly afraid, slavishly rebellious, like John Nicholson on that particular Sunday? His hand was in the drawer almost before his mind had conceived the hope; and rising to his new situation, he wrote, sitting in his father's chair and using his father's blotting-pad, his pitiful apology and farewell:

"My Dear Father, I have taken the money, but I will pay it back as soon as I am able. You will never hear of me again. I did not mean any harm by it; I hope you will try and forgive me. I wish you would say nothing to the police, but not if you do not want to see me again. Please try to forgive me. Your affectionate son, JOHN NICHOLSON."

The coins abstracted and the misadventure written, he could not be gone too soon from the scene of these transgressions; and remembering how his father had once returned from church on some slight illness in the middle of the second psalm, he durst not even make a packet of a change of clothes. Attired as he was he slipped from the paternal doors, and found himself in the cool spring air, the thin spring sunshine, and the great Sabbath quiet of the city, which was now only pointed by the cawing of the rooks. There was not a soul in Randolph Crescent, nor a soul in Queensberry street, in this outdoor privacy and the sense of escape, John took heart again, and with a pathetic sense of leave-taking, he even ventured up the lane and stood awhile, a strange peri at the gates of a quaint paradise, by the west end of St. George's church. They were singing within, and by a strange chance the tune was St. George's "Edinburgh," which bears the name, and was first sung in the choir of that church. "Who is this King of Glory?" went the voices from within; and to John, this was like the end of all Christian observances, for he was now to be a wild man like Ishmael, and his life was to be cast in homeless places and with godless people.

It was thus, with no rising sense of the adventurous, but in mere desolation and despair, that he turned his back on his native city, and set out on foot for California, with a more immediate eye to Glasgow.

CHAPTER IV.

The Second Sowing.

It is no part of mine to narrate the adventures of John Nicholson, which were many, but simply his more momentous misadventures, which were more than he desired, and, by human standards, more than he deserved; how he had reached California, how he was robbed, and robbed, and beaten, and starved; how he was at last taken up by charitable folks, restored to some degree of self-complacency, and installed as a clerk in a bank in San Francisco, it would take too long to tell; nor in these episodes were there any marks of the peculiar Nicholsonian destiny, for they were just such matters as befall some thousands of other young adventurers in the same days and places. But once posted in the bank, he fell for a time into a high degree of good fortune, which, as it was only a longer way about to fresh disaster, it behooves me to explain.

It was his luck to meet a young man in what is technically called a "dive," and thanks to his monthly wages, to extricate this new acquaintance from a position of present disgrace and possible danger in future. This young man was the nephew of one of the Nob Hill magnates, who run the San Francisco stock exchange, much as more humble adventurers, in the corner of some public park at home, may be seen to perform the simple artifice of pea and thimble; for their own profit, that is to say, and the discouragement of public gambling. It was thus in his power—and, as he was of grateful temper, it was among the things that he desired—to put John in the way of growing rich, and thus, without thought or industry, or so much as understanding the game at which he played, but by simply buying and selling what he was told to buy and sell, that plaything of fortune was presently at the head of between eleven and twelve thousand pounds, or, as he reckoned it, of upward of sixty thousand dollars.

How he had come to deserve this wealth; any more than how he had formerly earned disgrace at home, was a problem beyond the reach of his philosophy. It was true that he had been industrious at the bank, but no more so than the cashier, who had seven small children and was visibly sinking in decline. Nor was the step which had determined his advance—a visit to a dive with a month's wages in his pocket—an act of such transcendent virtue, or even wisdom, as to seem to merit the favor of the gods. From some sense of this, and of the dizzy see-saw—heaven high, hell deep—on which men sit clutching; or perhaps fearing that the sources of his fortune might be insidiously traced to some roof in the field of petty cash; he stuck to his work, said not a word of his new circumstances, and kept his account with a bank in a different quarter of the town. The concealment, innocent as it seems, was the first step in the tragedy of John's existence.

Meanwhile he had never written home. Whether from diffidence or shame, or a touch of anger, or mere procrastination, or because, as we have seen, he had no skill in literary arts, or because, as I am sometimes tempted to suppose, there is a law in human nature that prevents young men, not otherwise beasts, from the performance of this simple act of piety, months and years had gone by and John had never written. The habit of not writing, indeed, was already fixed before he had begun to come into his fortune, and it was only the difficulty of breaking this long silence that withheld him from an instant restitution of the money he had stolen, or, as he preferred to call it, borrowed. In vain he sat, before paper, attending on inspiration. That heavenly nymph, beyond suggesting the words "my dear father," remained obstinately silent; and presently John would crumple up the sheet and decide, as soon as he had "a good chance," to carry the money home in person. And this delay, which is indefensible, was his second step into the snares of fortune.

Ten years had passed and John was drawing near to thirty. He had kept the promise of his boyhood, and was now of a lusty frame, verging toward corpulence; good features, good eyes, a genial manner, a ready laugh, a long pair of sandy whiskers, a dash of an American accent, a close familiarity with the great American flag, and a certain likeness to a R-y-I P-r-s-a-g-e, who shall remain nameless for me, made up the man's external as he could be viewed in society. Inwardly, in spite of his gross body and highly masculine whiskers, he was more like a maiden lady than a man of twenty-nine.

It chanced one day, as he was strolling down Market street on the eve of his fortnight's holiday, that his eye was caught by certain railway bills, and in very idleness of mind he calculated that he might be home for Christmas if he started on the morrow. The fancy tantalized him with desire, and in one moment he decided he would go.

There was much to be done; his portmanteau to be packed, a credit to be got from the bank, where he was a wealthy customer, and certain offices to be transacted for that other bank in which he was an humble clerk, and it chanced, in conformity with human nature, that out of all this business it was the last that came to be neglected. Night found him not only equipped with money of his own, but once more, as on that former occasion, saddled with a considerable sum of other people's.

Now it chanced there lived in the same boarding-house a fellow-clerk of his, an honest fellow, with what is called a weakness for drink—though it might, in this case, have been called a strength, for the victim had been drunk for weeks together without the briefest intermission. To this unfortunate John entrusted a letter, with an enclosure of bonds, addressed to the bank manager. Even as he did so he thought he perceived a certain haziness of eye and speech in his trustee; but he was too hopeful to be stayed, silenced the voice of warning in his bosom, and with one and the same gesture committed the money to the clerk, and himself into the hands of destiny.

I dwell, even at the risk of tedium, on John's minutest errors. His case being so perplexing to the moralist; but we have done with them now, the roll is closed, the reader has the worst of our poor hero, and I leave him to judge for himself whether he or John has been the less deserving. Henceforth we have to follow the spectacle of a man who was a mere whiptop for calamity; on whose unmerited misadventures not even the humorist can look without pity, and not even the philosopher without alarm.

That same night the clerk entered upon a bout of drunkenness so consistent as to surprise even his intimate acquaintances. He was speedily ejected from the boarding-house; deposited his portmanteau with a perfect stranger, who did not even catch his name; wandered he knew not where, and was at last hove-to, all standing, in a hospital at Sacramento. There, under the impenetrable alias of the number of his bed, the crapulous being lay for some more days unconscious of all things, and of one thing in particular: that the police were after him. Two months had come and gone before the convalescent in the Sacramento hospital was identified with Kirkman, the absconding San Francisco clerk; even then, there must elapse nearly a fortnight more till the perfect stranger could be hunted up, the portmanteau recovered, and John's letter carried at length to its destination, the seal still unbroken, the enclosure still intact.

Meanwhile, John had gone upon his holidays without a word, which was irregular; and there had disappeared with him a certain sum of money, which was out of all bounds of palliation. But he was known to be careless, and believed to be honest; the manager—besides had a regard for him; and little was said, although something was no doubt thought, until the fortnight was finally at an end, and the time had come for John to reappear. Then, indeed, the affair began to look black; and when inquiries were made and the penniless clerk was found to have amassed thousands of dollars, and kept them secretly in a rival establishment, the stoutest of his friends abandoned him, the books were overhauled for traces of ancient and artful fraud, and though none were found, there still prevailed a general impression of loss. The telegraph was set in motion; and the correspondent of the bank in Edinburgh, for which place it was understood that John had armed himself with extensive credits, was warned to communicate with the police.

Now this correspondent was a friend of Mr. Nicholson's; he was well acquainted with the tale of John's calamitous disappearance from Edinburgh; and putting one thing with another, hasted with the first word of this scandal, not to the police, but to his friend. The old gentleman had long regarded his son as one dead; John's place had been taken, the memory of his faults had already fallen to be one of those old aches, which awaken again indeed upon occasion, but which we can always vanquish by an effort of the will; and to have the long lost resuscitated in a fresh disgrace was doubly bitter.

"Macewen," said the old man, "this must be hushed up, if possible. If I give you a check for this sum, about which they are certain, could you take it on yourself to let the matter rest?"

"I will," said Macewen. "I will take the risk of it." "You understand," resumed Mr. Nicholson, speaking precisely, but with ahen lips, "I do this for my family, not for that unhappy young man. If it should turn out that these suspicions are correct, and he has embezzled large sums he must lie on his bed as he has made it." And then, looking up at Macewen with a nod, and one of his strange smiles. "Good-by," said he; and Macewen, perceiving the case to be too grave for consolation, took himself off, and blessed God on his way home that he was childless.

CHAPTER V.

The Prodigal's Return.

By a little after noon on the eve of Christmas John had left his portmanteau in the cloak-room, and stepped forth into Prince's street, with a wonderful expansion of the soul, such as men enjoy on the completion of long-nourished schemes. He was at home again, incognito and rich; presently he could enter his father's house by means of the pass-key, which he had piously preserved through all his wanderings; he would throw down the borrowed money, there would be a reconciliation, the details of which he frequently arranged; and he saw himself, during the next month, made welcome in many stately houses at many frigid dinner parties, taking his share in the conversation with the freedom of the man and the traveler, and laying down the law upon finance with the authority of a successful investor. But this programme was not to be begun before evening—not till just before dinner, indeed, at which meal the reassembled family were to sit rostrate, and the best wine, the modern fatted calf, should flow for the prodigal's return.

A Ballad and Its Story.

The famous ballad of "Auld Robin Gray" was written by Lady Anne Lindsay, daughter of the earl of Balcarres, when she was twenty-one years old, but it was not for fifty years later that she told how she came to write it. Robin Gray was a shepherd on her father's farm, and for something he had done she wished to immortalize him. So she began this ballad, but before she finished it she asked her little sister for her advice about it. She said she was making a ballad about distress in humble life; she was bringing sorrows upon her heroine's head; she had sent her Jamie to sea, broken her father's arm, caused her mother to fall ill, and given her auld Robin Gray for a lover. "But I want her to have a fifth sorrow. Now what shall I do?" "Steal the cow, Annie," was the little girl's reply. And accordingly Lady Anne completed the round of Jennie's troubles by having the cow stolen away.

Legal Lore.

John Jones recently passed his examination and is now a member of the New York bar. His strong card is in getting the truth out of witnesses. The following is a sample of his system of cross examination: "Are you a married man?" "No, sir; I am a bachelor." "Will you please tell the court and jury how long you have been a bachelor, and what were the circumstances that induced you to become one?" —Texas Sitings.

Electric Light Baths.

Electric light baths are among the latest inventions. The necessary parts of such a bath are a cabinet which will enclose the entire body except the head, and fifty electric lamps of sixteen-candle power, or 110 volts, arranged about the body in groups, with a separate switch for each group. The light is thrown on a section at a time, making the patient frisky, and browning the skin like an ocean bath.

NUT OF THE DEVIL DANCES.

An Insect Within Causes It to Move About Mysteriously.

A remarkable curiosity is a nut which grows at Hermosillo, Sonora, Old Mexico, says the Pioneer Press. It is called the nuez del diablo, which means the nut of the devil. Saturday afternoon Major Davis, who is just now holding down Colonel Barber's chair as adjutant general in the department of Dakota, was sitting in his easy chair, contemplating a half-dozen of the meats of these nuts, which had just been sent North by an officer of the regular army who is now in Mexico.

The meats were dancing about in a very mysterious way, and the reporter and several others who were watching the strange performance were completely mystified.

"I'll tell you what is the matter with those meats," said the major. "I'm not going to give away my trick. When a man learns a good sleight-of-hand performance he is going to give it away for nothing? I guess not."

The nuts continued to dance and Lieutenant Sturgis, who was as much in the dark as the reporter, began a critical examination of the crazy objects supposed to be inanimate.

"Oh, yes, I think I have the trick," said the lieutenant. "There is something alive in these meats. There is a strange throbbing in them."

The reporter picked up one of the meats, and, surely enough, there was a very peculiar throbbing sensation in it.

The major was so thoroughly amused by this time that he could not longer withhold the secret. It seems that a worm is born on the inside of the meat of this nut and that it lives there for some weeks and dies without seeing the light of day. The worm eats out the inside of the meat, then becomes restive and moves about a great deal. It is in this period that the nuts become apparently animate. The moving of the worm causes the nut to turn about.

IN A NEW STATE.

Queer Names in Washington Come From a Variety of Sources.

The names of some of the precincts in this state are certainly wonderful in Adams county there is a Washington, which sounds to the Tacoma News as if it was intended to call it Washington, but the Indian influence controlled before the word was completed. Anatone and Theon are rather simple, but Humpalops and Nynoe are at least unfamiliar. Catlapoodie and Chelatchie are closely followed in the list by Washington, Arkansas and Monticello, in Colville county, show the influence of the circumscribed south, but Tottle and Olequa are distinctly home productions. Fishhook, Pasco and Washuena are the combination offered by Franklin county, and Garfield has a Patash and a Tuckanor. Couperville and Utsalady are familiar in this part of the country, but would sound strange to a foreigner. The county named in honor of the sage of Monticello offers Chinacum and Quileene to the list of curios and Enunclew, Duwamish, Krain, Semmamish and Tolt are the contributions of King county. Ollalla, Coleckem, Monastash, Wenatchee, Peschastin, Swauk, Clagatou, Salcum and Skookumchuck are a string of pearls, Lincoln county has only Sasas to attract the attention, while Arcadia and Coqualuma and Humama are in Mason county. Ental, Looploop and Toats Coulee are in Okanogan county, Ilwaco and Tasal in Pacific. Kapousin, Ohop and Tanax seem to be all right because they are nearer home. Avon suggests the home of poetry in Skagit, but they have also Guemas, Sauk and Samish which are distinctly unpoetic. Port Susan in Skagit suggests home, but Stillaguamish and Tualco put us at sea again. Lummi, Nooksack and Semiahmoo are right alongside in Whatcom. Oueco, Penewawa, Tekoa, Cowychee, Kiona and Wenas are east of the mountains.

The "Big Mudd."

The dust blows out of the Missouri river. It is the only river in the world where the dust blows in great columns out of the river bed. The catfish come to the surface to sneeze. From the great, wide-stretching bars on the Kansas shore great columns of dust and sand, about 200 feet high, come whirling and sweeping across the river and hide the town as sweep through the train and make everybody so dry and gritty that a man can light a match on the roof of his mouth. The Missouri river is composed of six parts of sand and mud and four parts of water. When the wind blows very hard it dries up the surface of the river and blows it away in clouds of dust. It is just dreadful. The natural color of the water is seal brown, but when it rains for two or three days at a time and gets the river pretty wet it changes to a heavy iron gray. A long rain will make the river so thin that it can easily be poured from one vessel to another, like a cocktail. When it is ordinarily dry, however, it has to be stirred with a stick before you can pour it out of anything.—Robert J. Burdette.

The Last Thing He Needed.

The day after Black Friday, Mr. Gould's old partner, Henry N. Smith, shaking his finger in Mr. Gould's face, shouted: "I'll live to see the day, sir, when you have to earn a living by going around this street with a hundred organ and monkey." Maybe you will, Henry; maybe you will," was the soothing response; "and when I want a monkey, Henry, I'll send for you." —Argonaut.

sister, Mrs. O. M. Whipple, Friday.

Alvin Coats of Northville was taken sick at Mrs. Emma Coats on Sunday.
His wife was sent for and they were obliged to remain.

Instead of that "festive team" starting out Friday night as was the custom it went Thursday night, therefore Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Whipple were the more surprised when it drove up at their door and unloaded about forty lots of visiting and eating an excellent dinner, sewed sixteen pounds of carpet ings. Mrs. R. Colvan of Northville, one of the earliest members of the society, and who has not been able to attend the meetings regularly since she left Novi was a welcome addition to the company.

The extreme cold last Saturday evening rendered the attendance at the W. B. H. M. club smaller than usual, though a fair sized audience was present. The literary exercises were not wholly complete as called for by the program, as several who had members were absent. The society was assisted by Miss Little of Northville who gave two recitations in a very pleasing manner. The speakers managed to get a good deal of fun out of the question, and one of them, who is celebrated for his occasional lofty flights of oratory is said to have fairly outdone his previous record. Last winter the society secured the services of Herbert Sprague the character impersonator, for two entertainments, which proved eminently successful financially and in all other respects, and they are now taking steps to give the people of the surrounding country another rare treat in the near future, by giving them an opportunity to hear this gifted young man again. The matter is not definit-ly settled but it is hoped that the club will succeed in getting Mr. Sprague.
