THE BATHRICK MURDER CASE

Now on Trial in the Circuit Court at Pontiac.

The trial of young Bathrick, Novi, began Tuesday at Pontiac. The prosecuting attorney asked for a verdict of nothing more than manslaughter, which, many think, shows that his hopes for conviction are slim. The prosecution produced four witnesses to prove the cause of the shooting as stated by his father in his ante-mortem statement. Their testimony, however, indicated that the father was the aggressor. The chances are that the young man will be acquitted.

Drs. Swift and Burgess of this place are in attendance as witnesses in the case.

COMING AMUSEMENTS

Here Are a Few Dates to Bear in Mind:

DELIGHTFULLY ENTERTAINED.

The Presbyterian Pastor's "Pastime" Evening, a Decided Success.

Friday evening last, the attractive home of Mr. William G. Yerkes was thrown open to an invited company of young people connected with the Presbyterian church and congregation. The company was entertained by Rev. J. M. Belding, assisted by the genial host and his wife and Miss Hattie Yerkes. At 8:30 o'clock the "Pastime" program began, which consisted of ten tables of games, regulated by the head table, where the fascinating game of tiddleywinks was played. Drummond's Addresses, in lavender and silver binding constituted the first memento, while the delightful story of L. Cole was presented to the less fortunate player. Refreshments were elegantly served and at a late hour the guests left, carrying with them the most pleasant memories of a happy evening. Tomorrow evening Mr. Belding will entertain a like number of invited guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark. Those who ranked first were Misses Nellie Joslin, Belle Covert, Mrs. F. D. Adams and Floyd Northrop. The winners of the second memento were, Misses Mattie White, Inez Rockwell, Anna Houser. The deck was broken by lot, which fell to Mrs. Adams first and Miss Houser second.

Those present were, Misses Nellie Joslin, Mattie White, Belle Covert, Ethel Dubuar, Mabel Clark, Grace Yerkes, Anna Houser, Lillie Lewis, Beryl Brooks, Rachel Stevens, Mattie Yerkes, Inez Rockwell, Flora Clarkson, Aggie Whipple, Carrie Steers, Carrie Babbitt, Harvie Root, Mergie Thompson. Messrs. Sam Cranson, Harry German, Frank Lewis, Jas. McFarland, Royal Starkweather, Bruno Fredyl, Ed. Lapham, Geo. Lammerts, Ed Shields, Thad Knapp, Ben Porter, Floyd Northrop, Harley Johnson, Roy Barrett, Orr Webster, Arch Burtch, Roy Smith, Thomas Swan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Macomber, Mrs. Powers.

HIS SEVENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Seth Reed to Be Tendered a Reception at Saginaw.

On the 16th of June, according to neatly printed programs just issued, the ministers and members of the Saginaw district will tender Presiding Elder, Rev. Seth Reed, a reception in the Jefferson avenue Methodist church of that city. Among other things the invitation says:

"You are aware that this is the last year of our Presiding Elder, Rev. Seth Reed, on this district, and aside from all other considerations, it is a time-honored custom for the ministers of a district to put on record some token of their appreciation of the Presiding Elder's faithful work. But in this case there are other considerations calling for our special attention. Bro. Reed is seventy years of age in June, and he has been in the ministry forty-nine years; eighteen of these years a Presiding Elder, four years secretary of the Conference, an active member of the Superannuated Preachers' Aid Society from the beginning, and secretary of the Board of Trustees of the Detroit Corporate Conference. He has never missed a Conference roll-call, and is a man of faithful and spotless character. It is therefore evident that at this ripe age, and having been so many years in active service, he must soon retire. It seems fitting then that he should be specially remembered by his brethren."

Rev. Seth Reed is well known in Northville, and at one time was presiding elder of this district. Over forty years ago he came to the village of Northville for the first time to preach the funeral sermon of Mrs. David Burns, sister of Mrs. John Sands. He is, in point of service, the oldest minister in the state, and has the honor of having held the office of presiding elder the longest term of years of any preacher in Michigan. He is as hale and hearty as some men at forty and still accomplishing much good work. He has now under course of erection and repairs nine churches on his district.

Around The Country.

Bro. Bloomer forgot to send his Enterprise last week.

The Holly Advertiser is just entering upon another successful year.

Ypsilanti is indulging in what they call cyclone socials. Sounds sarcastic.

Milford has four saloons. No wonder the Times wants all "kids" off the streets promptly at 3 o'clock every night.

Arbor Day did not make any great stir hereabouts. It is not as deely rooted as it ought to be. — Ann Arbor courier.

There seems to have been the same ground for complaint here.

"The mean temperature in Ann Arbor during the month of March," says the Argus, "was 30 degrees." It was a pesky sight milder than that, at Adrian. — Adrian Press.

The Holly Advertiser compositor who took a piece of Editor Slocum's copy to the Chinese laundry has been notified that his services are no longer required. He got his wash just the same. The Chinaman didn't know the difference.

Big "Jim" Slocum of the Holly Advertiser had the audacity last week to call us a liar. Not only that but he sent down his magazine without cutting the leaves. That settles it, we are now arranging with a man to go up Holly and put a bump of judiciousness on the editor's head.

The village band is hard at work these warm spring evenings, and will be in fine shape for Memorial Day. So, Lyon Picket.

Here that now! "Warm spring evenings." South Lyon must be indulging in a different climate from the most of us poor mortals.

Rev. E. W. Ryan of the Ypsilanti Methodist church demands that the normal professors stop playing card. The reverend gentleman challenged any card player to stand up and say it was not his purpose to cheat, and denounced the "progressive" parties, where prizes are bestowed, as gambling.

This is from the naughty editor of Wayne Review: The Young Ladies' Improvement club asked permission of the council the other night to trim up the trees in the public park and that honorable body granted the request, though not without some caution, owing to the height of the trees, no doubt, and requested the committee on parks to be present and inspect the job.

FIRST ANNUAL REUNION.

The Yarnall Gold Cure Club Held It Yesterday.

The Yarnall Gold Cure club held their annual reunion here yesterday. There were some fifty of the members present from various points in the state. All were entertained under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary club in a very hospitable manner. In the evening the Ideal Dramatic club played the "Spy of Gettysburg" at the opera house, to which all the visitors were given reserved seats free of charge.

The club transacted a general routine of business, amended some of the by laws and had a grand social good time. Hon. Tim Tarsney addressed the club at the opera house in the afternoon, and in the evening Dr. Sutherland made a few remarks and in behalf of the club thanked the citizens of Northville, the Auxiliary club and the Dramatic company for all their kindness. Altogether the meeting was very successful and enthusiastic.

THE RECORD.

F. S. NEAL, Publisher.

NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN

The theory that flies may spread cholera, now being discussed by medical men, is a great "snap" to the fly-screen manufacturer. It is as effectual an ally as is a polar wave to the weather-strip man.

After having killed two women and burned their bodies a Wisconsin man seemed likely to be lynched, and the governor called out the militia and saved him. This action was of course proper, but it was considerable trouble to take on account of that sort of a man.

If there is but one law for peer and yeoman in England, as those from perfidious Albion do vainly boast, it behooves the next costermonger who is jailed to plead the duchess of Sutherland as a precedent and demand a cell begirt with tapestry and fine wines from a fashionable caterer.

There is much amusement in watching from the standpoint of unconcern the horror of doctors at the fees of lawyers and that of lawyers at the fees of doctors. Never did pot so lustily lampoon kettle, for salubrity of fate. The rule merely seems to be that which works so admirably in other fields, of charging all the traffic will bear.

SOMETHING should be done for the protection of the American dude against the competition of the foreign article. There is the Bradley-Martin case for an example, where a haughty family of American-coopers have imported a sample and annexed him to the family at a cost of more than a million, while anybody would consider the home product dear at three for a quartet.

The government fish commission doesn't sort over its eggs as a careful housewife would. For instance, it planted an unlimited number of eggs which were supposed to contain the potentiality of shad in the Susquehanna. Returns are now coming in from that district and the results indicate mackerel by a large majority. The theory of the fish being piscatorial fairy changelings is about the best defense the commission can put up.

We shall probably always export a smaller proportion of corn to Europe than of any other grain. Educate its people to use corn as we may, what is consumed as human food, directly, must be a small part of what is used for feeding stock. In that the greater cheapness of corn at home will always give us the advantage. It costs less to transport a ton of pork to Europe than it does to send thither the corn required to feed and fatten so much.

OSCAR WILDE's new play consists of a title and a jumble of epigrams. It would be improved by the elimination of the epigrams. When, for instance, Wilde makes one character aver that "a bad man is one who admires innocence," he is indulging in something very like idiosyncrasy. His further allegation that a "well tied tie is the first serious step in life" is only half complete. A well tied tie, trespassing somewhat on the ear, is also often the last serious step in life.

A LABORER in the employ of the queen of England has been sued for debt. He testified that he received only ten shillings a week and was unable to make both ends meet. He also volunteered the information that the queen's laborers received less than other people and had to work harder. "Ah," said the judge, "but you must think of the honor, to which the man sturdily replied: 'There isn't much honor to get out of ten shillings a week.' Shakespeare never put a wiser speech in a man's mouth, not even in Jack Falstaff's when he soliloquized over Henry Hotspur's body. A man cannot pay his debts with honor.

FARMERS who have clay farms must not expect that they will soon prove mines of wealth for the manufacture of aluminum. This valuable metal can indeed be extracted from clay in the proportion of one-third of aluminum to the amount of clay used in the process. But large beds of bauxite, a metal containing aluminum in proportion of forty-four to forty-eight per cent, have been discovered in Georgia and Alabama. They are exceedingly valuable, as aluminum is undoubtedly a metal that will be largely used in the near future. May be there are beds of bauxite in some of the Northern states. It pays modern farmers to post themselves to some extent in geology and mineralogy. The lack of such knowledge has led many a farmer to dispose of land containing valuable minerals for much less than its true value. It is quite likely that this has already been done by farmers in Alabama and Georgia in selling lands which are now regarded as extremely valuable.

Mrs. GESSER of Patterson, N. J., is accused by her neighbors of being a witch and is persecuted accordingly. If this had happened anywhere else in this end of the nineteenth century, it would seem strange. But in New Jersey one expects to find people two to five centuries behind.

The Cuban filibusters now trying to break away from the watchful eye of Uncle Sam claim that once in Cuba they will be able to put 15,000 men in the field and can drive the Spanish authorities into the sea.

ISLADY CADOGAN NOW

THE FATE OF PRETTY CORNELIA BRADLEY MARTIN.

Who Recently Surrendered the Title of An American Girl for That of a Countess—May Prove a Happy Alliance, However.

LADY CADOGAN.

THE OLD ADAGE about being sent to Coventry will not hold good in the case of Miss Cornelia Martin, for when, as Countess of Cadogan, she takes up her residence at Coombe Abbey, near that place, not only will the elite of British society be pleased to talk to her, but even our own dear exclusives will detect increased euphony in the magic words, "my lady."

What Miss Martin's dowry will be has not been officially made known. It will probably be at least a million dollars.

Of course American society smiles at this approaching marriage, but let it not be thought for a single moment that it considers it a favor that a peer of the united kingdom select a wife from its aristocracy. Perish such a thought! It is very nice, to be sure, to marry an Earl, says society, but not every Earl can marry such a nice girl as Cornelia Martin.

So much has been said about the wedding, which took place in New York city the other day, that a sketch of the high contracting parties will undoubtedly be of interest.

Miss Martin is nice. She is quite English in looks and manners, and perfectly unaffected. Few ever have known her, and those few but little, for the reason that Miss Martin is very young, only a little over 18 years, and has not had a long acquaintance with society. She is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley-Martin and has two brothers.

Her mother is the daughter of the late Isaac Sherman, who inherited his entire fortune, supposed to be about $4,000,000, judiciously invested.

The Martins have lived in England for the past few years. They have had an establishment in London and a place in the Highlands, and have entertained extensively. Their dinners have attracted international celebrity, and would have filled the heart of a Brillat-Savarin with pious joy.

The prospective bridegroom is not in the predicament that Sidney Smith found himself, when he facetiously remarked: "Finding that all my neighbors had pedigrees, I thought to make one out for myself." For his is a lengthy one.

ant with the title of Countess, the social aspirations of the Earl of Craven's lady, if they exist, will have valuable assistance in their realization. In the Countess of Coventry and the Countess of Cadogan, the Earls' aunts, two of the most influential and distinguished women in British society, under their guidance the young Countess will surely make a great social hit.

While they will take precedence of her, Lady Craven will come before the wives of younger sons of Dukes, even of royalty, only the highest and most worshipped order of the peerage—the ducal—and marquis ranking before that of her noble spouse.

If her gracious Britannic Majesty finds "my lady," as she doubtless will, the Countess of Craven will probably be appointed a lady in waiting to the Queen, and in that honorable capacity will have the opportunity of wearing a small jeweled coronet.

MARINE ASTRONOMY.

Celestial Phenomena Has an Unusual Interest for Sailors.

Every one who has been much at sea knows something of the peculiar splendor of the heavens when beheld from the deck of a ship. Celestial phenomena seem to possess an unusual impressiveness under the circumstances. The clearness of the air in fair weather and the lateness and distance of the horizon tend to heighten this effect. A similar impression is noticed upon the broad, grassy plains of Texas.

Sea captains sometimes bring into port accounts of the sighting of comets and meteors which have escaped notice on land.

On this account particular interest attaches to the official request emanating from Washington, which was addressed to the masters of all vessels which might happen to be within the shadowy track of the solar eclipse of April 16th, that they should make and record careful observations upon the phenomena visible during the eclipse.

They were especially to notice whether any changes occurred in the clouds corresponding with changes in the temperature while the sun was hidden behind the moon; the behavior of the barometer while the eclipse lasted; the temperature of the air; any peculiar appearances of light, and the position of any faint comet which might be detected near the sun while its light was shut off.

It was a happy thought to enlist the sea captains in the service of science. While for obvious reasons the solid land is best for the accurate observations, there seems good cause to hope that hereafter large additions to astronomical knowledge may be made by the masters of vessels happening to be in the path of the eclipse.

A FAMOUS BEAUTY.

Miss Amy Bend of New York Caught in Cupid's Web.

Miss Amy Bend, the famous New York society beauty, who, since her debut a few years ago, has been one of the most admired young women in the fashionable world, announces her engagement to the fortunate man who has won her heart.

It was a happy thought to enlist the sea captains in the service of science. While for obvious reasons the solid land is best for the accurate observations, there seems good cause to hope that hereafter large additions to astronomical knowledge may be made by the masters of vessels happening to be in the path of the eclipse.

TWO KINDS OF DROP.

Mr. Younger's Gun Wouldn't Fire and He Died.

The most notorious inmates of the penitentiary at Stillwater, Minn., are the Younger brothers. Memory may recall the fact that they were for a time connected with the James boys, but were finally captured after the famous raid on the bank at Northfield, Minn., and compelled to pursue the paths of peace within the prison walls of a castle of the state.

The four Younger brothers, while mere boys, became members of Quantrill's band of guerrillas, who were the terrors of Southern Missouri and the Kansas border during the war, says the New York Herald. The proclamation of peace was not roiled by these freebooters, and the restless spirit of adventure and derring-do kept their neighborhood uneasy for a long time after the close of the great American conflict. Shortly after the close of the war the Younger brothers concluded to move West toward the mines of Colorado, and in pursuance of this intent, joined a wagon train. For the first week things went smoothly enough—poker games were finished without a funeral and whisky kept tongues oily without precipitating serious debate. This even tenor of way was unnatural, considering the elements enlisted in the expedition.

One evening the eldest of the Younger boys became involved in a spirited discussion with a teamster and incautiously denominated the muleteer as a liar. The recipient of the compliment whipped out his revolver. Younger's jaw dropped, for, strange to say, he was for once divested of his side arms.

"You wouldn't kill an unarmed cuss without a gun," whined the desperado. The teamster, with a spirit of fairness, dropped his arm, and wheeling around, said: "I advise you to heal yourself."

Next morning when the teamster had arisen from breakfast and was leaning on one of his mules, he heard a voice, and turning about, looked blandly into the muzzle of a "forty-four," held by the vengeful Younger.

"I've got the drop, and my gun this time," said the desperado, with a leer.

"You wouldn't shoot me like a dog, without a chance," remarked the cool teamster.

"The hell I wouldn't," epigrammatically responded Younger, as he pulled the trigger.

The hammer fell with a slap on a defective cartridge. The next instant the teamster had his revolver out of his saddle holster and put a bullet through the elder Younger's heart.

ROBBING INDIAN GRAVES.

Outrages Upon Connecticut's Remains.

The Pequot Indians in Connecticut, last of that famous tribe of Indians, are aroused over another attempt on the part of white men to rob their burying-ground of bones and relics. The Indians discovered some men on last Thursday at work on a grave-site which, it is said, a descendant of Robin Cassin was buried.

Several half-breeds at once gave chase to the men, who fled to a sleigh near at hand and drove off in the direction of Lantern Hill, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

The burying-ground is near the middle of the Pequot reservation which is a rough, heavily wooded tract of land about one mile wide by two long, in the southwest corner of North Stonington, seven miles north of Mystic Bridge. It is known as an Indian town. The state long ago set it off to the exclusive use and practical ownership of the descendants of the Pequots, so long as any remained.

About a dozen families of mixed blood have remained there during the last twenty-five years. The last pure-blooded Pequot to die was Amanda Nedson, about three years ago. The Pequot-descendants are for the most part poor, but they have the highest regard for the burial place of their race, and for years have been forbidden by relic-hunters.

For some time there seems to have been an unusual demand for Pequot Indian relics. Many rich finds have rewarded explorers in the Indian cemeteries about here. In South-eastern Connecticut and Southwestern Rhode Island have been found large quantities of Indian pipes, beads, arrow heads, lances, drills, knives and trinkets worn by the Indians. If any one is found trespassing in the Pequot cemetery now it may be at the risk of his life, for the Indians are said to be very angry.

600 Years Building.

Cologne, a fine old city on the Rhine, can boast of possessing the grandest Gothic cathedral in the world. The building of it was begun in 1248, and as each portion of the church was finished it was utilized for the purpose of divine service. It was not till 1880, however, that the whole structure was complete in every part. The cathedral, as a perfected temple, was opened on the 15th of October in the latter year, in presence of the Emperor William I., grandfather of the present German emperor. Thus this famous cathedral was more than six hundred years a-building.

A LITTLE BIT OF A BOY.

There never was a smile in a weary while, And never a gleam of joy, Till the eyes of light made the whole world bright— A little bit of a boy!

He came one day when the world was May And thrilled with life and joy, And with all the roses he seemed to play— A little bit of a boy!

But he played his part with a human heart, And time can never destroy The memory sweet of the pattering feet Of that little bit of a boy!

We had wondered how he could play all day With never a gleam of rest, But once he crept in the dark and slept Still on his mother's breast!

There never was a smile in a weary while, And never a gleam of joy, Till the world seemed dim since we dreamed of him— A little bit of a boy!

Love in Lodgings.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

CHAPTER IV—CONTINUED.

Without heeding this and other comments of the same kind, Cameron rushed again into the garden. But being afraid that the sight of him might have a deterrent effect upon the lady who had received such rough treatment at his hands, he slipped into a rickety erection of trellis-work which was half arbor, half trellis, and waited for the sound of her footsteps on the other side of the wall.

But he had to wait a very long time.

First, the stars came out, and then the carwings; and by the time the expected sound did reach his ears he felt that he was honeycombed by ants. Then he was astonished to find how fast his heart was beating. He heard the soft footfall on the stone path, heard the splash of the water from her can on the flowers. Should he go out now and humbly address her? He felt that he should choke at the first word. Then he thought that he would sneak back into the house.

How could he ever have imagined that he would have the courage to speak to her? He had quite made up his mind that he would retire quietly when, to his astonishment, he heard the lifting of a latch, and a moment later he saw dimly through the trellis-work in the fast fading twilight the figure of the slender girl in his garden. She came forward stealthily, with light, quick steps, straight to his hiding-place, put her watering-pot down on the path, and with one hand she arranged the straggling branch of a creeper, with the other she felt inside the arbor for some implement she wanted.

And the soft fingers of this second hand came in contact with the bristly surface of a man's face.

CHAPTER V.

Those Wicked Hutchinsons.

The girl withdrew her hand quickly, uttering a long "Oh-h!" of un-speakable terror.

Cameron hopped out from his hiding-place among the earwigs and stood humbly on the garden-path before her.

"I'm so awfully sorry—I didn't mean to frighten you. I was only waiting to apologize for my awful stupidity this evening—for not seeing where I was throwing the water. I'm so awfully sorry—I don't know what to say—I feel as if I should like to knock my head against a wall, I do really."

"Oh, that was nothing. Of course you didn't see. You need not trouble your head about it; I did not, I assure you."

"It is very good of you to say so. But it only makes me feel guiltier. Isn't there anything I can do for you—fetch for you? What was it you were trying to find in that little shed?"

"Only a bit of bass I thought I had left on the shelf just inside."

"I'll find it." Cameron sprang into the arbor again, with so much energy that the loose boards of the flooring flew up and rattled around him. He brought the bass and with his pocket-knife cut it into small pieces for her to tie up the straggling branches of honeysuckle and Virginia creeper. He was falling more in love every minute. It was only just light enough for him to see the outline of her face, but it seemed to him to be of almost supernatural loveliness. It was really a pretty little face enough, with small, delicate features expressive of much feminine gentleness and refinement. She began to apologize for her intrusion; while Cameron, on his side, felt inclined to apologize for his very existence in a world which held so lovely a creature.

"You see," she said, "I am staying next door, and I don't like to see the flowers die. So I always come in when the sun goes down, to water them. I knew of course that—that—here she grew somewhat confused—that the house was no longer empty. But I thought that perhaps—perhaps the flowers would get forgotten. So I meant to steal in and out when it was dark, without being seen."

"And they would have been forgotten, too!" chimed in Cameron, heartily.

"You'll come in and water them every night, won't you? I don't like to see flowers die, but I don't in the least know how to manage them. May I fill the watering-pot for you?"

He hastened to perform this little service for her, and stood by while she watered the flowers, and tied up such of them as needed this attention.

"This is an awfully nice garden. It would be a pity for it to get neglected," he remarked by way of making conversation.

All the answer she now made, for instance, was the single word: "Yes," pronounced with sudden diffidence, as if his trifling remark had called up thoughts to which she dared not give expression. Cameron was puzzled.

What was her next door neighbor's garden to her? At last he got a ray of inspiration. That door between her premises and his suggested an idea to him.

"Perhaps you used to take care of this garden when my grand father lived here?" he said.

She started, and the watering-pot shook in her hand. With a little laugh she emptied it of its last few drops, and turned to hand it to her companion.

"What makes you think so?" she asked, looking up into his face in the gloom with an expression of keen inquiry.

Cameron, who was sensitive on the subject of his black eye, was thankful for the darkness.

"Why, I know those two old vampires who lived upon him would never have spared the time from their money-grubbing to plant flowers."

"Two old vampires—who lived upon him?" repeated the girl slowly, in utter bewilderment.

"Yes, the two old women, mother and daughter, who called themselves his housekeepers. Didn't you know them?"

The girl's face suddenly brightened into intelligence.

"Oh, those two!" said she quickly. "Oh yes, I knew them. Of course I knew them. The Hutchinsons you mean?"

"Yes, that's it, the Hutchinsons. A pair of thieving wretches! What were they like?"

"Well, you seem to have made up your mind," she said, smiling.

"I mean—what do you think of them?"

The young girl seemed rather amused and puzzled as to her answer.

"Well, you see, I had only heard their side of the story."

"Yes, of course; they didn't tell you how they had wormed their way into the confidence of a helpless invalid, and undermined his affections for his own relations, and cringed and crawled until they had succeeded in getting him to leave them half his money which ought to be his son's?"

There was a little pause before the girl answered. She was examining the leaves of a rose tree which had suffered from blight, and it was getting so dark that she had to bend down low over the bush to make her investigation. Cameron began to feel slightly aggrieved that she should show so much more interest in a plant than in the fortunes of his whole family. He was on the point of drawing back with a cold apology for having troubled her with his affairs, when she stepped lightly on to the path again, and answered him with a gravity which showed that she had not been inattentive after all.

"No, they did not tell me that."

She paused a moment, and borrowed his knife to cut a withered twig from the rose tree. Then she went on.

"It seems singular, after what you told me, that these people should have had the idea that it was they who were rather badly used."

"They! I like that!"

"Very amusing, isn't it?" said she with a little laugh, but without any wild hilarity.

"They seemed to think that, instead of being looked upon with suspicion by old Mr. Monk's family, they deserved some respect and consideration from them for having tended the old gentleman night and day for many years, and kept him alive by their care when the doctor had given him up. Indeed I have heard Mrs. Hutchinson say that the real reason why Mr. Monk's son disliked her so was that she was keeping his father alive when he wanted to be enjoying his father's money."

"She dared to say that of my father? The impudent hag!" cried Cameron hotly.

"Well, it was no worse than what he said of her," returned the girl softly, but in a voice which was scarcely steady.

The tone of partisanship which he now began to notice in the girl's voice irritated him beyond endurance.

"Of course," said he stiffly, preparing to go indoors. "If you defend the conduct of these people, I have no more to say. Only I dare say you will be pleased to hear that my grandfather made a will leaving them this house and half the rest of his property."

"Oh," said she quickly, "I heard of that. But I know on the best possible authority that he made a new one after that—through the persuasion of one of the Hutchinsons. But that will, I understand, cannot be found."

"And which of the women was it that persuaded him to make it?" asked Cameron fiercely.

"The daughter, I believe. It was she who was said to have most influence with Mr. Monk."

"Very well then. If ever that girl does turn up, I'll hunt out that daughter and shoot her."

"Before you know what was in the will?"

"I know that already. Of course it would make us beggars."

"And you would shoot a woman? Not very chivalrous, is it?"

"How can you call such creatures women? They are beasts of prey."

"As well as everybody who thinks they may have a grain of right on their side, I suppose," she suggested demurely.

"No," said he, with some constraint, "it is not possible for you to understand such people. In the same circumstances you—"

"Would do just as they have done."

This was too much. A girl may be ever so beautiful, but she has no right to trample on the most sacred instincts of a man's self-interest. Cameron, who had no hat on to raise, made his tantalizing neighbor a ceremonious bow, wished her "Good evening" in the coldest of voices, and turned to go into the house.

At that moment Temple rushed excitedly out, seized his brother by the arm, and began dragging him toward the door, talking all the time in tones loud enough to reach the ear of the young girl, who was hidden from his sight by the corner of the arbor.

"They're ringing the bells like mad again, and have been for ever so long," he burst out incoherently. "And Hildred and I have had a row, so he says he won't go. And the Cub's gone out shrimping with a pocket-handkerchief tied to the handle of your umbrella. You must go up. I won't. I'd rather die!"

"My umbrella!" cried Cameron, only interested in that part of the speech which concerned his property.

"Why didn't you stop him?"

"He said sea-water wouldn't hurt an umbrella, if it was a good one," said Temple apologetically.

"But it wasn't a good one!" said Cameron in an injured tone.

"Well, but what about this miserable bell?"

"Oh, confound the bell! Let them ring. They would know they weren't in a real lodging-house if we answered whenever they rang."

"But perhaps the old gentleman's in a fit?"

"Serve him right."

Temple started back, not in horror at his brother's wicked words, but in surprise at the sight of a girl's figure close behind them.

"Please excuse me. I couldn't help over-hearing you. Perhaps I can help you."

Temple raised his hat to her, and shook his head wearily.

"You are very good," said he. "But nothing short of the loan of an able-bodied female domestic could get us out of the hole my accomplished brother here has got us into."

"Oh, said she, then I believe I may be able to help you. At least there's a girl I know something about, who is out of a place, staying at a milkman's a few streets off. Shall I go and see if she can come?"

"Oh," said Temple after a breathless pause, "if you only will you may take our purses and our lives and welcome!"

"Especially our purses!" murmured Cameron.

"But I don't know whether she would care to—"

"Tell her she shall have eighty pounds a year," cried Temple; "we can scrounge her on the eve of quarter-day," he added softly as an afterthought.

"And found in tobacco and guineapigs," found up Cameron.

"You see," said the lovely neighbor, "she is staying with relations. And I don't know whether they would let her come to a house full of—"

She hesitated a moment, not wanting to seem unkind.

"Unchained imps of evil," finished Cameron gravely. "Quite right. Hildred shall marry her."

"No, no, objected Temple. "What harm has the poor girl done? Let her come, and bring her relations with her, and see for herself if we are as bad as we're painted."

With the interchange of a few more light-hearted words, for the spirits of both brothers had risen high at the glorious prospect of a partial release from their domestic troubles; the new acquaintances separated. Cameron, who had already forgiven the lady's perverse championship of the Hutchinsons, assumed something like an air of proprietorship in the lady, on account of his having met her first.

"There now, isn't she pretty? Did you ever see such an awfully nice girl?" he asked eagerly.

But Temple, who was in love could not reasonably be expected to be quite so enthusiastic.

"Oh, yes, she's all right," said he. "Is that the lady you threw the water over?"

"Yes," admitted Cameron contritely. "And no girl who wasn't three parts an angel and the rest a goddess would have so much as looked at a fellow who had done that, now would she?"

A Spanish Yonkey Changer.

The street Cambista or money changer is an interesting character in Spanish cities. He stations himself at a principal street corner early every morning, and exchanges a bag of coppers for silver. By 10 o'clock his bag is exhausted and he goes home. All the servants on their way to market get their money changed by him, as they are not skillful in counting and afraid of false coins. He gives them full count, his coppers being obtained from the bankers, who get rid of their coins at a discount. Cambistas are also found seated in the markets with a tray of coppers before them.

Ships Sheathed With Copper.

The proposal to sheath ships with copper coated with mercury is attracting attention. The idea is that such an arrangement would effectually prevent barnacles from adhering to the bottom of the vessels. In order to keep the mercury on and to prevent oxidation the copper would be constantly charged with electricity. This would bring about another interesting possibility. Any gold or silver that might be in the water would be precipitated on the bottom of the vessel, and it could then be scraped off when the vessel arrived in port.

The Salt of the Earth.

The waters of the oceans and seas of our globe hold not less than 60,000,000,000,000 tons of salt in suspension. If these figures are correct and the ocean should be entirely dried up, there would be a deposit of salt 450 feet deep over every foot of the great basin. If taken out and spread upon what is now dry land it would give us a salt covering nearly 1,500 feet thick.

DANGEROUS RAINDROPS.

Why They Do Not Kill Those Whom They Fall Upon.

Of course we all know that it would be an utter impossibility for storm clouds to form and rain to fall were it not for the forty odd miles of atmosphere that rise above our heads. But, supposing it were possible for human beings to exist in an atmosphere that only rose to a level, with their mouths and that storm clouds could form in a region outside such a low-grade atmosphere, then every raindrop would prove as fatal to earthly creatures as if it were a steel bullet fired from a dynamite gun, says Nature.

All falling bodies, whether they be crystal raindrops or meteors, fall with what philosophers term a uniform accelerated motion. In other words, if a body be moving at a certain velocity at the expiration of one second from the beginning of its fall it will be moving with twice that velocity at the expiration of two seconds, gaining speed at a uniform rate throughout the whole course of its fall.

Careful experiments have shown that the rate per second at which bodies acquire velocity in falling through the air is thirty-two feet a second at the end of the first second from starting. At the end of the next second it is going at the rate of sixty-four feet a second, and so on through the whole time of falling. Where the velocity is known the space through which the body has fallen may be ascertained by multiplying the velocity at that period by the number of seconds during which it has been falling and dividing the result by two.

This rule applies, however, only to bodies falling through a vacuum. The resistance of our atmosphere materially retards raindrops, hailstones, snowflakes and all other bodies which fall through it, and were it not for the resistance it presents every rainstorm would be disastrous to the human race, as each drop would fall with a velocity great enough to penetrate the full length of a full-grown man's body.

The Advantage.

A dapper little fellow called on a Swan-street man the other day, and said:

"You were a policy holder in the Early Bird company before it collapsed, were you not?"

"Yes," replied the Swan-street man.

"I represent the Sure Thing company, and I called to tell you that we would be glad to transfer your policy to our company upon the payment of $100 by you and continue your insurance."

"But I don't see where I get any benefit out of it?"

"Don't? Why, my good man, you get the privilege of paying your premiums to us!"—Buffalo Express.

They All Do.

The streets were slippery and two old friends met on Woodward avenue.

"Confound these sidewalks," said one.

"The wicked stand on slippery places," quoted the other, laughing.

"I guess I'm now wicked enough, then, because I sat down on several yesterday."

"Did you break anything?"

"Yes, I did."

"No? Is that so? What?"

"About half the commandments."

"Good, too," said the questioner. Then a little man piped out "Littleton." Whereupon the coal dealer sat down.

ASSORTED PARAGRAPHS.

servatory at St. Petersburg, said: "The coldest spot on earth inhabited by man is the village of Verkhnoansk, in Siberia. Observations show that the mean temperature for the year in this place is thirteen degrees above zero, Fahrenheit."

One marked difference between the poor in the English cities and the corresponding class in American towns is that the latter buy their clothing of tailors and manufacturers, and therefore get it new, while the English poor, and particularly the English women of low estate, prefer the cast-off finery of "the quality," that is sold at the second-hand shops.

In the Sandwich Islands, the same names are bestowed indiscriminately upon males and females. A man living in Honolulu is called the Pretty Woman; a male infant was recently christened Mrs. Tompkins; one little girl is named Samson; another The Man; Susan is a boy, so are Polly, Sarah, Jane Peter and Henry Ann. A pretty little maid has been named by her fond parents The Pig Sty.

The old Nynabo depot at Meadville, Pa., is being torn down. It was on a pane of glass in this depot that John Wilkes Booth cut with a diamond the date of Abraham Lincoln's assassination, several months before the president was shot. The date of the glass and the date of the shooting did not correspond, but it showed the deed was in contemplation. The pane of glass is now in the national museum at Washington.

Jean Vostki, a native of Hungary and a resident of Irwin, Pa., is delighted over the purchase of a wife at the nominal sum of $30. A neighbor named Jenson had a wife, but being out of work and unable to provide for her, proposed to Vostki that the latter pay him $50 for her. They finally compromised, Vostki paying $30 cash for her. Now Jenson claims that the amount of sale is clear profit, as a friend in the coke region presented the wife to him, and he can secure as many as he wants at $10 apiece.

Are You Happy? The man or woman who is profitably employed is generally happy. If you are not happy it may be because you have not found your proper work. We earnestly urge all such persons to write to R. E. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., and they can show you a work in which you can be happy and profitably employed.

DON'T LISTEN to the dealer who is bent on bigger profits. The thing that he wants you to buy, when you ask for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, isn't just as good. Proof of this is easy. The only guaranteed remedy for the ailments of womanhood is the "Favorite Prescription." If it ever fails to benefit or cure, in making good on a female complaint, or suffering women well, you have your money back.

Anything "just as good," or as sure to bring help, could be, and would be, sold in just that way.

This guaranteed medicine is an invigorating, restorative tonic, especially adapted to woman's needs and perfectly harmless in any condition of her system.

FOR MEN.

[Edited weekly by one of them.]

Take time to consider and then decide quickly.

The coming motto of the business man will be "Live and help live," instead of "Live and let live."

John B. Gough's dying words: "Young man keep your record clean; ought to inspire you to right living; for that is indeed highest wisdom."

F. A. Sutherland addressed the meeting Sunday on the "Three important dates in a man's life." His helpful words will be carried with us. Forty-three were in attendance.

"Nothing in the past quarter of a century has done more to fill our churches, to give us earnest day workers, and more than all, to save young men and lift them up than the Young Men's Christian Association."

One of the chief necessities for genuine success is that we should love our work and thoroughly believe in it. Nearly all successful work in the world today is done by men who have boundless faith in the enterprise they have undertaken.

Dissuasively.

These are not matters to be slightly thought on.—Tillotson.

It is especially unfortunate that, at this season of the year—when men are admonishing each other with regard to arboriculture, and saying that tree growth and shade have also a money value, a debit and credit on the country's ledger—our community has made itself conspicuous through neglect to foster native growth of taste and sentiment. Sixty or more of our people lately made choice of a "pleasant" name for their residence quarter. A name having a little suggestion of calm, and of home comfort after toil; and a little glow of poetic sentiment within. Their wishes were disregarded and the little spring like promise of freshness, of newness and variety, has been nipped by the untimely frost of non-appreciation and indifference.

It is plain that poetry is not regarded with municipal favor in Northville.

LOCAL GLEANINGS.

Things Said and Did in the Liveliest and Prettiest Village in Michigan.

The Globe shop shut down on quarter time Saturday afternoon to put in a new exhaust fan.

Benj. F. Springer has a fine display of Farrand & Voley organs in fine quarter sawed oak cases.

Earl Hastings got his finger on the sand wheel and ground off the flesh till the bone showed.

Old papers, nice and clean, just the thing for shelves, or putting under carpets, any quantity, cheap at this office.

C. R. Doyle is becoming quite a real estate man. He is building his third residence in the past year, all of which he has disposed of at good advantage.

Farmington's best ball club are coming over here Saturday to again get beat by the Northville club. Seats will be provided for lovers of the sport and it promises to be a lively game.

When in Detroit stop at the Hotel Wayne, opposite the M. C. depot, where you will be well entertained and handsomely cared for. It costs no more to stop at the best hotel in the city than the cheapest.

The Whitney Family's circus exhibits here Saturday afternoon and evening. The well known name will no doubt insure them the usual big crowd from among the circus going people of the village.

Next Sunday will be the Epworth League anniversary day. At 6:30 a sunrise service will be held. Everyone is invited to make special effort to be there. The league will present a fine program in the evening.

Miss Prada Pierce of Livonia has been engaged to teach the first grammar department of the Northville schools for the next year, in place of Miss Hooper who declined to accept the situation again at the same salary.

Milo E. Marsh of Lansing has just received the appointment of statistical agent for Michigan to succeed Franklin Wells the republican incumbent. Mr. Marsh is well known in this village where his many friends will be glad to hear of his good luck.

Lovers of a good drama should not forget about the Labadie-Rowell company in Damon and Pythias at the opera house Monday evening, May 29. The company's reputation is well enough known to theatre going people of Northville to insure a good patronage.

"Uncle" Henry Watson, who was so ill at the hotel here about a year ago, died at his home in Greenville last week, and his many warm Northville friends learn of the sad news with sincere regret. He was one of those genial whole souled fellows whom to know was to love.

Joseph Cook's "Baggage Check" company failed to check up here Monday night as billed. The players all went on a strike in Detroit about as they were ready to leave, and left Cook in the lurch for about every dollar he was worth, which he had invested in this enterprise. Cook himself is a hustler and came with recommends from Whitney's Detroit opera house and the failure is to be regretted.

That neat, lively and newswy - Milford Times gave the Ideal Dramatic club a very complimentary notice last week. The club plays there tomorrow night and will no doubt get that what they deserve—a full house. Their play as repeated here last evening for the third time was a repeated third success. The Record takes great pride in the opportunity of being able to so justly bestow upon the company so much well merited praise.

A communication in another column signed "X" evidently refers to Pleasant Valley vs Northside, and "X" perhaps does not understand that the name was decided regardless of sentiment by a popular vote of the residents of that part of the village. Northside had the largest number of votes and therefore won the title. We still have all the ballots on file and if any doubts exist as to the correctness of the count, the proof is ready for inspection.

Is there anyone who has not called on Benj. F. Springer to see and hear the sweet toned Fischer Piano?

Rev. J. M. Belding entertains at the home of Mr. Frank N. Clark tomorrow evening.

Rev. Arnold of Ypsilanti has been engaged by the Northville Baptist Society to fill the pulpit here until July.

Miss Lillian Amador of Detroit will take part in the Gipsy-festival at the opera house Saturday night, May 20, and will do the Gipsy and Spanish dances. She is an expert dancer.

Miss Lillian Clark, a Holly school teacher, has been arrested for striking Essie Harper ninety-five times on the hand with a ruler. Miss Clark teaches the B grammar room of the Holly union school.

We notice that Mrs. R. C. Yerkes will assist the Mehan quartette with readings at their concert at Milford May 26. Mrs. Yerkes is a very fine reader and Milford people will certainly be pleased with her selections.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church will hold a social in C. J. Ball's store tomorrow, Friday, night. Light refreshments will be served, everybody invited, and a dime pays the bill. Special amusements.

Backward, turn backward, O time, in thy flight! Give us July again, just for one night: give us mosquitoes and give us the flies, but turn on some heat before every one dies! Bring back our straw hats and good linen pants; give us a chance to live, give us a chance!

Sunday morning the topic at the Presbyterian church will be "More than Conquerors." In the evening the pastor will deliver the fifth sermon on Joseph. Subject, "Joseph and His Brethren." The ten sons of the aged Jacob go down to Egypt to purchase corn and are recognized by Joseph, the Egyptian premier.

At the commencement exercises of the Detroit College of Medicine held in Detroit last week, J. A. Attridge, Northville's popular veterinary surgeon, was presented with an original $10 gold medal as a special mark of commendation from the faculty. This speaks very highly for Dr. Attridge having graduated with the highest honors of the whole class.

T. S. Fish Commissioner, F. N. Clark of this place has been selected by the government to take charge of the fish egg exhibit and hatching process at the world's fair. Mr. Clark is now securing eggs for the purpose and thinks he can arrange to keep them in a state of incubation as late as July. The selection of Mr. Clark for this work is a deserved compliment from the government, and shows that they recognize his qualifications as an expert in fish culture business.

During May, every subscriber is authorized to act as our agent, only remember—the offer applies for new subscribers only, not for renewals.

Willie, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Evatt, died Friday morning, May 5th, after several months of suffering. He was born in Northville in May 1891 and had lived until Sunday would have been just two years of age. Willie was a very affectionate child and no one who knew him could avoid loving him. The funeral services, conducted by Rev. J. M. Belding, occurred at the home Saturday afternoon and the remains were taken to Grand Blanc and placed in the vault. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Evatt extend their sincere sympathy in their sorrow.

Messrs C. A. Lacy and C. A. Altman of the Whitney Grand Opera House from Detroit realizing that the closing for the summer season of the many big theatrical companies places at liberty many artists whose names are well known to all, have organized a comedy company composed of some of the brightest and wittiest comedians and talented soubrettes in the country for a summer tour. This company has been secured for only one performance by the management of the opera house here and will be seen in "Blunders," a ridiculously funny farcical comedy. The attempt of the managers of our opera house to bring here companies of known merit should be appreciated.

Benj. F. Springer employs none but professional Piano Tuners from Detroit. Send in your orders after house cleaning have your Pianos put in good tune. Its sweet tones will then make you happy.

Never give up, stick to the right, Never play fast and loose. Onward! Ahead, to the mountain light. With a stiff upper lip—like a goose!

Yerkes Bros. want all the wheat they can get hold of for which they offer the highest cash price.

The stars and stripes are now daily flying from the Yarnall-Gold Cure Institute as well as from the school grounds.

Bert Stark got mad in the post-office the other morning and tried to lick a Columbian stamp. He didn't succeed at first; but he stuck to it.

Laudford Thurlieff of the park house is making some improvements in the waiting room of the hotel. It will be enlarged and made more attractive.

Next Wednesday at 3 p. m. there will be a mother's meeting at the W. C. T. U. hall. Every mother is invited to attend. By order of the com.

We are now settling up the names of the subscribers to the refrigerator bonus fund. Everything is complete and the publication will be in next week's Record.

Some Cadillac friend mails the Record a bouquet of trailing Arbutus. We can hardly imagine who the sender is but if at all like the flowers, is certainly very sweet and pretty.

People who think Highland's meat market is closed up make a mistake. Take the elevated train to the back yard where it will now be found right in the swim—disfigured but still in the ring.

Speaking of the recent successful plays of the Ideal Dramatic club, in "The Spy of Gettysburg," right here it would not be amiss to say that in addition to the good work done by all the players toward this end, much credit is especially due Manager W. H. Hutton for his unceasing labor from start to finish, which has proved such an important factor in the result achieved.

The story is going around about a Farmington man whose wife had gone away and would not listen to his appeals to come home before her visit was out. He took a copy of the Enterprise and carefully clipped out just one item, then sent the paper to her. She wrote and asked what the item was about, and he refused to tell her. The scheme worked admirably, and in less than twenty-four hours she was at home to find out what happened that her husband did not want her to know about.

The funeral of John G. Lerchen, whose death was announced in last week's issue, occurred from the home of his son E. H., 555 Jefferson avenue, Detroit, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Lerchen was born in Germany a trifle more than eighty years ago. He was a quiet, reserved man, being seldom about the streets, preferring rather the calm of the home where it was his custom to almost constantly peruse the various newspapers. Mr. Lerchen leaves six children: Charles, of Greenfield, E. H., and Mrs. U. Totten, of Detroit; Mrs. D. Snyder of Milford; Mrs. Geo. Hill and Mrs. F. A. Miller of this place. For the past six years deceased made his home with Mr. Miller.

A VERY HOT TIME.

STATE HOMEOPATHIC SOCIETY FORCES A RESIGNATION

From Dan Oetz, of the University, for Alleged Conspiracy, Disloyalty and Misrepresentation—State Items.

The Pioneer hall of the state capital at Lansing was the scene of a very stirring meeting of the State Homeopathic Medical Society. The call issued for the meeting was a special one signed by President Nottingham. No time was spared in getting to work and the president's address—a very lengthy document—brought the matter to a focus in short order. The trouble was caused by the action of Dr. Oetz, dean of the homeopathic school at the University, in advocating a union of the homeopathic and allopathic branches at that institution. The president of the society charged Dr. Oetz with duplicity, misrepresentation, disloyalty, conspiracy and libel. The alleged duplicity consisted of saying one thing to the regents and another to the profession, disloyalty in advocating a scheme which would destroy the distinctiveness of the homeopathic department, conspiracy in saying to W. A. Campbell, demonstrator of anatomy, that if the colleges fused, he (Oetz) expected to be professor of anatomy, and would resign in two or three years, and as Campbell was in the line of promotion, he would doubtless succeed him. The libel consisted in saying in substance that "only old school physicians who desire to trade upon a name want to keep up separate colleges and distinctive organizations, which is a libel on every intelligent and honest homeopathic physician in the world."

Dr. Oetz replied in a straightforward and plain. He said the president's address was an extraordinary document, founded largely on hearsay, and declared that he had never before been so grossly misrepresented. The whole trouble, he said, grew out of his attempt to defend the students. The homeopathic department had but 76 students, while the regular college had 375. The former were compelled to pass all the chairs prepared over by the old school professors, who passed upon their standing. He wanted the departments consolidated so that the rights of his students might be better protected in this respect. The primary object of the scheme, however, was to give the homeopathic professors a larger body of students to enable them to teach homeopathic doctrines to old school students and thus spread the doctrine. He had such faith in homeopathy that he was convinced that its principles could be brought before the regular students they would prevail.

The matter was referred to a special committee, which supported the president in his charges. Dr. Oetz then offered his resignation, which was at once accepted. The following day a committee report was presented and adopted by the society, which was in line with the previous action. The report called for the resignation of Dr. Oetz from the homeopathic chair at the University. The methods of the society were severely criticized by Dr. Oetz's friends and disinterested practitioners as unjust and without giving him a fair chance to defend himself and by appointing committees known to be opposed to Dr. Oetz. The latter says that the charges against him were actuated by malice and petty jealousy. He insists that he will not resign; that his students are with him in his fight, and that he does not care anything about the action of the society, as the motives of its leading spirits are very plainly written between the lines.

The 24th annual commencement exercises of the Detroit College of Massages were held at the Auditorium in that city. It was a most brilliant and important event. The vast building was filled to its full seating capacity with the learning and fashion of the city, and many were present from outside the city, from a personal interest in some of the members of the large class of 70 graduates. There is no question that it was the leading event of the kind ever witnessed in Detroit, and reflects added honor on an institution that has brought many laurels to the city in past years.

There were 64 graduates in three branches. All 37 graduates in pharmacy were from Michigan. Of those in veterinary surgery and medicine four were from Michigan, three from Ohio and two from the Province of Ontario. Of the medical graduates, 32 were from Ontario, 31 from Michigan, 2 from Ohio and 1 each from New York, Illinois, Indiana, Manitoba and Minnesota. A grand banquet was held at the Wayne hotel.

School Fund Apportionment. The semi-annual apportionment of primary school interest money has been made by Superintendent of Public Instruction Patterson, in accordance with the provisions of Act No. 292 of the public acts of 1885. The entire number of children school age in the state is 674,379; the number included in the apportionment is 674,324, and the total amount apportioned is $517,735.68, the rate per capita being 77 cents.

Gasoline and Cigarette—Two May Die. A son of Mrs. William Hilton, of Port Huron, lighted a cigarette in a room where the mother was cleaning some clothing with gasoline. The room was filled with the fumes from the liquid and immediately an explosion occurred. The gasoline fell on Mrs. Hilton's dress and caught fire, burning her to such an extent that recovery is doubtful. The son was also badly burned about the face and arms.

WAS SHOCKED TO DEATH

CARLYLE HARRIS DIES OF A PROTEST OF INNOCENCE

The Famous Wife-Murderer Breathes His Last in the Electrostatic Chair at Sing, N. Y.

Carlyle W. Harris, convicted of the murder of his wife, was electrocuted at Sing Sing prison, New York. His last words were, "I have no further reservation to make. I desire to say that I am absolutely innocent."

The crime, trial and execution of the Harris was one of the most famous of recent times. The story of the crime has been so often told that it is not necessary to tell it again. The trial was very exhaustive and the counsel and friends of Harris made a most determined fight and after the sentence of death had been passed appeals were made to the governor and every measure possible taken to avert or modify the sentence. Every effort was vain, however, and the sentence was carried out as intended.

Carlyle had the same cold-blooded courage to the last which had sustained him throughout his long imprisonment and trial.

Harris had been an affectionate, farwell to his broken-hearted, trusting mother and the night before the execution he slept peacefully. A light breakfast at 3 o'clock and the spiritual ministrations of the prison chaplain were followed by a clean shave and a hair cut, then in a new suit of clothes Harris was ready for the ordeal.

The apparatus which provided the death-dealing current had been tested at 1,700 volts and 27 witnesses—physicians, officials and reporters—had assembled in the death room when Harris was brought in. A moment later he was in the chair and when he made the remark given above, protesting his innocence, he was very pale, but calm. His legs and arms were then strapped to the chair, the helmet placed on his head and the signal given. A current of 1,700 volts shot through the body and it straightened up until the straps creaked. In two seconds the current was reduced 150 volts and in 3 1/2 seconds the current was cut off. The physicians made an examination and said that death came at the first contact.

Three hours later the body was taken in charge by an undertaker and taken away to friends.

THE VETS GAN VOTE.

But Not at the Soldiers' Home if Their Home is Elsewhere.

The case against the election inspectors of Grand Rapids township, Kent county, for refusing to accept the votes of 15 inmates of the Soldiers' Home came to a sudden end at Grand Rapids.

As the attorneys were prepared to make their arguments, Judge Grove cut them short by taking the case out of the hands of the jury. He revised the case briefly and cited a decision of the New York supreme court upon a case identical with this one, and said he considered it his duty to order a verdict of not guilty. There is no question that the soldiers had a right to vote, but the question is as to where that vote should be deposited.

The New York supreme court held that a man neither gained nor lost a residence by his admission to a state institution, and according to this the inmates of the Soldiers' Home have a right to vote, but only in the town or precincts where their private homes are. The jury therefore returned a verdict of not guilty and the respondents were discharged. As the case was a criminal one instead of civil, it is now ended and cannot be appealed.

This result is a great victory for the Democratic election inspectors, and their attorney, Hon. J. M. Turner, especially, as Judge Grove is a Republican.

Health Officers' Criminal Carelessness.

Secretary Baker of the state board of health, has been active trying to overcome the criminal carelessness of several health boards in Tuscola county.

There was a death from diphtheria at Caro, and a letter received by Secretary Baker from Dr. D. S. Stevens, the local health officer, it appears that the victim was a child who, after suffering with the disease for several days, was brought on the cars from Millington where diphtheria has been very prevalent for some time. The sick child reached Caro after having stopped at the Vassar depot. As soon as a physician was called he pronounced it a fatal case of malignant diphtheria, and death ensued within three days. Dr. Stevens says that nothing has been done, as the health board does not like to offend the family. He was rather sharply reminded of his duty by Secretary Baker, who also sent instruction to the health officials at Millington and Vassar.

An Old Man Sidelined.

Andrew Marczinski killed himself at Bay City. He was 75 years old and lived with his son-in-law, Ignatz Shroka. His son-in-law on the night before had asked him if he had made any arrangements by which his sons would contribute toward his support. He replied that he had not. Nothing more was thought of the matter until his daughter found him hanging by the neck in the woods. When found his knees nearly touched the floor.

There were 13 competitors for the appointment to West Point military academy from the eighth district at the examination held at Lansing. The successful candidate was George E. Mitchell, aged 17, of Saginaw, who passed a most creditable examination, and Congressman Linton has appointed him. He is a son of George A. Mitchell, a lumber commission dealer of Saginaw.

MICHIGAN LOYAL LEGION HAS A BIG TIME AT DETROIT.

The Late Bishop Brooks' Successor Elected at Boston—A Panic Feeling Causes a Flurry on Wall Street.

The ninth annual meeting of the Michigan Commandery of the Loyal Legion was held at Detroit, and as is the custom of the order, was followed by a banquet in the evening. The meeting revealed a very satisfactory state of affairs, both in membership and financial matters, and the banquet was a brilliant assemblage of officers, the largest being followed by several sterling speeches. The report of Recorder James T. Sterling showed that the membership in this state is at present 274. A year ago it was 257, but since that time there have been 25 accessions and a loss of eight. The membership is divided as follows: First class, original, 242; first class, by inheritance, 17; second class, 12; third class, 3. The annual election resulted as follows:

Commander, Gen. Luther S. Trowbridge, of Detroit; senior vice-commander, Henry S. Dean, of Ann Arbor; junior vice-commander, J. T. Patton, of Detroit; recorder, James T. Sterling, of Detroit; registrar, C. Larned Williams, of Detroit; chancellor, C. R. Brand, of Detroit; treasurer, O. C. Allen, of Grosse Ile; chaplain, Rev. L. A. Arthur, of Detroit. Council—Charles Dupont, James Rhines and Henry C. Bates, of Detroit; William Keith, of Bay City; P. V. Fox, of Grand Rapids.

The annual banquet was held in the dining room of the Hotel Cadillac and it was the finest thing of the kind in that city this season. The balcony and north end of the room were profusely decorated with flags and flowers, and at the north end the speakers' table faced the other tables in the room. The tables were named after the celebrated battles of the war, and each had its chief. The Nineteenth U. S. Infantry orchestra furnished the music. Gen. W. H. Withington, of Jackson, the retiring commander, was toastmaster and his introductory was very favorably received. The toasts were as follows: Hon. T. A. E. Woodard, "President of the United States;" Hon. Wm. C. Maybury, "Lex Regit Armis;" Hon. J. C. Burrows, "Our Country;" Rev. J. M. Barley, "The Boys Who Wore the Blue, by One Who Wore the Grey;" Hon. E. P. Allen, "The Boys Who Wore the Buttons;" John Patton, Jr., of Grand Rapids, "The Record of the Fathers Safe With the Sons."

BROOKS' SUCCESSOR.

Dean Lawrence Made Bishop of the Diocese of Massachusetts.

The Episcopal convention at Boston chose Dean Lawrence, of that city (the broad churchman's candidate), as bishop of the diocese of Massachusetts.

Dean Lawrence has been dean of the Episcopal theological school there many years. He is 42 years old, and was graduated at Harvard in 1877. After his graduation he studied at Andover and later in Philadelphia. In 1875 he was graduated from the Episcopal theological school at Cambridge, and soon afterward he became assistant at Grace church, Boston, to Dr. George Packard, and was ordained in Grace church, June 11, 1876. Dr. Packard died in November, 1876, and in February, 1877, the assistant was elected rector. He continued in the rectorship until December 31, 1883, when he resigned to accept the chair of professor of noumenals at the Episcopal theological school in Cambridge. After the death of Dean Gray, four years ago, Prof. Lawrence was elected dean of the theological school. He married in Boston, some 12 years ago, Miss Julia Cunningham, granddaughter of Bishop Parker, and has a family of five children.

HOT TIMES IN WALL STREET.

Cordage, Trust, Chicago Gas and Sugar Drop and Crush Several Firms.

Wall street, New York City, the famous place where fortunes are made and lost in an hour has had a very panic experience which shook the brokers and dealers on "change" very severely. The stock of the National Cordage trust had been shaky for several days and finally took a heavy slump toward the bottom. To cap the climax the trust was unable to stem the tide and Chancellor McGill, of Jersey City, the National Cordage company headquarters, appointed a receiver for the concern and the drop which followed in Wall street caught three prominent firms and pushed them to the ground.

Chicago gas, sugar and General Electric stocks were carried down and the scenes on "change" were of the wildest kind. Then came the announcement that "Deacon" White, one of the prominent leaders, had failed and the storm grew more violent until the nerves of operators were at their highest tension. As the time for closing drew on a change was evident and most stocks grew firmer. The storm had passed.

Mrs. Chauncey Depew Dead.

Mrs. Elize Hagerman Depew, wife of Chauncey M. Depew, died at her residence in New York City. Although Mrs. Depew was known to be seriously ill this sudden termination of her life was not expected by her family and those who were most intimately connected with her. The funeral was held from St. Bartholomew's church, of which organization Mrs. Depew was a member.

About 700 Chicago horsehoes went on strike for shorter hours.

The British ship Earl of Strafford was wrecked off the southwest coast of Ceylon and the captain and five of the crew were drowned.

The news has been received from Havana that the chief Cuban rebels have surrendered. Manuel Sartorius, one of the leaders, when he surrendered, confessed frankly that he had yielded because he discovered the leading filibusters had deceived him in professing to have the support of the most powerful classes. His brother, Ricardo, was permitted to return to the mountains and he induced Galle and other conspirators to lay down their arms.

A U. of M. Orator Won.

L. G. Long, of the Junior literary class of the University of Michigan won the oratorical contest of the Northern Oratorical league at Oberlin, Ohio. Long's oration was entitled "The Relation of Modern Isms to Progress." He received first rank by all three judges on thought and composition, and two first ranks by judges of delivery. Wisconsin took second place, Northwestern third; Oberlin fourth, Iowa fifth. At the business meeting of the association, Chicago university was admitted to membership, and Minnesota was refused.

Those Scab Ann Arbor Engineers.

A freight train on the Ann Arbor crashed into freight standing in the yard at Owosso. The locomotive, nine cars and the caboose were smashed, but fortunately nobody was injured. Until the wreck was cleared away the passenger trains were run on the Milwaukee tracks to Durand.

David Runnels, an engineer on the Ann Arbor road who came from Des Moines, Iowa, a month ago, was found dead at the National Hotel, Owosso. He had left the gas turned on and was suffocated to death.

Convict Killed by a Joke.

James Ray, colored, who was received at Jackson prison from Detroit in January, 1892, on a five year sentence for assault, having struck a man in the head with a coupling pin, is dead. He was in the engine room and was leaning against the belt, the engine was suddenly started as a joke by a convict named Heilein, and Ray was thrown down, his head striking heavily on the floor. At the time his injuries were not thought serious.

Kidnaped Her Own Child.

While the kindergarten class at the state school at Coldwater was walking near the grounds and under the care of their teacher, Miss Custer, one of the children, a child of six years, was kidnaped by its mother, Miss Harriet Custer, who rapidly fled with the child. Before assistance could be secured she had disappeared, and so far has successfully el

THE CAMPFIRE.
SONG OF THE SOLDIERS.
BY MILES O'BRIEN.

Comrades known in marches many,
Comrades tried in dangers many,
Comrades bound by memories many,
Prayers ever let us be.

Wounds or sickness may divide us,
Marching orders may divide us,
But, whatever fate befalls us,
Brothers of the heart are we.

Comrades known by faith the dearest,
Tried when death was near and nearest,
Bound we are by ties the dearest,
Brothers evermore to be.

And if spared and growing older,
Shoulder still in the path shoulder,
And with hearts no thrill the colder,
Brothers ever we shall be.

By communion of the banner—
Crim on, white, and starry banner—
By the Captain of the banner,
Children of one church are we.

Cred not in action can divide us,
Still, whatever fate befalls us,
Children of the flag are we.

—Our New Navy.

The feeling of pride in our splendid navy is rapidly taking hold of all our people, and is to be encouraged, as being a common bond which helps to bind us together. That it is based upon substantial grounds is demonstrated by glance at the facts. Our navy has suddenly sprung from obscurity, where it was an object of derision to other peoples, and a source of humiliation to ourselves, to the place of acknowledged superiority. In the "Columbia" we have the swiftest cruiser in the world. The battery of the "Indiana" surpasses in power that of any other vessel afloat. Our 12-inch guns were proposed only three years ago; today they are finished and in service, and the projected 14-inch will soon be ready for testing. In ship armor, we have again taught all nations a lesson, and the great naval pioneers have come to us to learn how to make the Harveyized nickel-steel plates which alone are able to resist modern projectiles fired from modern guns, with modern fulminants. We have our own smokeless powder, superior to that of any other nation, our own high explosives for shells, to explode only after the projectile has entered the enemy's armor; improved breech-mechanism, for handling heavy pieces—in fact, having undertaken the work, we have left our rivals far behind us—as it is the habit of the American people always to do, when they try.

No Fight, No Prayers.
A group of navy officers were indulging in reminiscences of the war, when one of them told the following story:
"Early on the morning of Dec. 25th, 1864," he said, "Admiral Porter signalled to the fleet before Fort Fisher: 'Get under way and follow me!' The ship to which I belonged was assigned, in the program, to the position before two iron and steel forts, under the fire of which we were to pass. We anticipated hot and terrible work. The flagship led the way, and was approaching within range, when Lieutenant Commander B—, of my ship, ordered all hands to muster. The bravest tars gathered aft on the quarter-deck, with the officers in their usual places, and our commander began to read from the prayer-book the 'Prayer Before Battle.' It was a solemn moment, none knew who or how many among us might suddenly be ushered into the presence of the God of battles. Our commander read as though he felt it the whole ship's company were awe-struck and hushed, and the throbbing of the engines and the wash of the water along the side seemed prematurely loud. When about half through a signal was reported from the flagship: 'Come to anchor in your positions.' When it was read to our commander a sudden revulsion of feeling came over him. Throwing down the prayer-book upon the hatch, he exclaimed: 'Well, I'll be damned if I'm going to pray if we ain't going to fight.'—Army Navy Union.

A "Nervy" Trick.
Edwin Crockett, Company H, Sixty-fifth New York, Cour d'Alene, Idaho, says that a comrade friend of his, H. L. Bancroft, tells of a "nervy" thing that was done by a young prisoner of war whom he knew. In March, 1865, the rebels were moving a lot of prisoners from Cahaba to Vicksburg, through Demopolis, for exchange. Some 500 were placed on a steamer, on which were two heavy guns for the fortifications at Mobile. One of the prisoners conceived the idea of spiking these guns, and managed to get hold of two rat-tail files and a hammer. The guns were covered by a heavy canvas, and a sentinel with a loaded rifle stood close by, who had orders to shoot anyone interfering with them. The man got a number of the sentinel by offering him some most tempting trades, at the same time making all the noise they could, while he slipped under the canvas and spiked the guns. He ran a desperate risk, for if the sentinel had discovered him of course he would have shot him.—National Tribune.

A Misunderstanding.
There is a funny story told in the Senate of the mistake made by a member of that body at the time of Gen. McCook's marriage, some half dozen years ago. Senator Dolph undertook to get up a subscription for a suitable wedding present, and offering the paper to one of his colleagues, who was somewhat deaf, explained the case and asked for what amount he might put his name down in the list. The Senator from Oregon was nonplussed and considerably nettled to meet with a point blank refusal. The affair was the more inexplicable, as the Senator of whom the contribution was desired was known to be a warm personal friend of Gen. McCook. Later in the day the situation was unconsciously explained by the offending Senator, who remarked to a group of his friends: "What the deuce do you suppose Dolph means? He came to me to-day, and after telling me that his cook was going to be married, actually asked me to contribute for a wedding present."—Kate Field's Washington.

General Sherman on Grant.
From a letter to Senator Sherman in the Century for March:
NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 5, 1864.
DEAR BROTHER: * * * Grant is as good a leader as we can find; he has honesty, simplicity of character, and a plainness of purpose, and no hope or claim to usurp civil power. His character more than his genius will reconcile armies and attack the people. Let him alone. Don't disgust him by flattery or importunity. Let him alone. * * * If he is better, hampered or embarrassed, he would drop you all in disgust, and let you slide into Anarchy. * * * Let us manage the whites and niggers, and all the physical resources of the country, and apply them where most needed. Let us accomplish great results, leaving small ones to conform in due season.

I will be here about two weeks, and then to the front. Let me hear from you. I care no more for the squabbles about the Presidency than I do for the causes of the Schleswig-Holstein difficulty, and Grant cares still less.

Your brother, W. T. SHERMAN.

Give All the Boys a Chance.
Lieut. A. B. Wyckoff, United States Navy, has written a paper on "The United States Naval Appointee System," in which he proposes the extension of the system in a manner to gain recruits from the rural districts of the States, where good American stock is going to waste. He would have the navy recruited from the good boys of the country rather than from the bad boys of the city. "Why should the navy be confined to seaports of the country?" asks Lieut. Wyckoff. "If a young officer could be recruited from place to place, advertising thoroughly in advance, and remain only a few weeks in each town. The personnel needed could be restricted to three or four persons, and the expenses of each party would be small. When a dozen boys had been enlisted they could be sent to the nearest rendezvous. In this way the navy could be Americanized and popularized, for the poor boys of every State would have an equal chance."

Souvenir of Grant.
Mrs. John A. Logan is a woman who possesses the somewhat rare feminine ability to comprehend and intelligently converse upon politics. She and Gen. Grant had many a heated battle. The story is told that in the midst of a discussion which had been particularly long and interesting the General lost sight of the fact that he was talking to a woman. He was vigorously refuting one of her statements when he reached into an inside pocket, pulled out and opened a cigar case and offered Mrs. Logan a cigar. She took it, and apparently not noticing the incongruity of the situation, quietly concluded it. The General lit his pipe and launched an objection. Among these things, the cigar—Washington News.

A Clever Female Pirate.
Several men took passage in a Chinese coasting vessel. During the journey a young "widow" professed that she had been robbed. A search was instituted. Then she professed to discover the jewel in her "box." As a mild sort of punishment for the trouble she had occasioned, one of the men suggested that the lady should make tea and serve it to all on board. It was thought to be great fun. She reluctantly consented. Soon after nearly all on board fell into a profound slumber. The mysterious men were pirates, and the widow a confederate, and after plundering the vessel they disappeared in boats, leaving the vessel to drift on with its still sleeping crew.

Japanese Baths.
The Japanese take their baths at very high temperatures—about 140 degrees Fahrenheit—and come out of them as red as lobsters; but there appears to be no fear whatever of catching cold. Every fairly large house in Tokio has its own bath room; but there are no fewer than 800 baths in the city of Tokio, where 300,000 persons bathe daily at a cost per head of one sen three rin, or a half-penny. The Japanese suffer from many special diseases due to too exclusive diet of fish and rice, and to the want of exercise—especially from indigestion; but they escape a great many by their personal cleanliness.

Truly Hospitable.
The changeableness of woman is seldom met so promptly by the gallantry of man as it was in the shop from which Truth brings this little story:
Jeweller—I have shown you all the rings that I have suitable for a daughter 12 years old.
Mrs. Russell—Well, I have changed my mind now. I think I'll wait until she's 15.
Jeweller—All right. Take a chair.

Big Drops.
The influence of the scientific spirit is felt in all departments of modern literature.
A traveler in the tropics waxed enthusiastic over the suddenness and violence of a shower which overtook him and his companions.
The raindrops," he says, "were of marvellous bigness, varying in size from a dime to 15 cents."

A Handsome Model from Felix.
has the skirt finished with the wide, gathered circular Spanish flounce. To certain types of tall, slender women skirts of this sort are becoming, but they are only desirable when they are very skillfully handled.

The new grenadiers are shot and broadened, striped, embossed and jetted and are usually made up of great shot silk and trimmed with ruffles of satin or flappings of lace.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

PICTURES OF NOTABLE SIGHTS AT THE GROUNDS.

The Magnificent Terminal Passenger Station for Excursion Trains—Largest in the World—A Redstead Worth $250,000.

BY FAR THE MOST interesting object in the way of transportation facilities at the World's Fair grounds is the big union terminal station. It is the largest structure of the kind in the world. When one considers that it must be razed as soon as the great exposition closes its gates in October the lines of Kingsley are recalled:

So fast the works of men,
Back to the earth again,
Ancient and holy things fade like a dream.

The architecture of the terminal station is exactly in harmony with the style observed in the postoffice, casino and music hall, facing the administration building on the eastern or opposite side. The intention of the architect was to preserve as far as possible the unity of architectural effect about the great building that serves as the key to the whole architectural scheme about the grand court. The terminal structure is 54 feet high, 458 feet long and 162 feet wide. It faces east and stands just behind the administration building. The railroad tracks run up to within a hundred feet of the west side of it.

Between the trains and the station is a person 462 feet long by 80 feet wide. On this are situated the ticket office and turnstiles, through which the passenger will be obliged to pass before gaining admission to the grounds. The entire center of the building is a passage way with four rows of pillars running east and west. There are no doors to the main passageway, and it extends to the top of the third story. In the center of the hall is a bureau of information. The first floor on the top side is given up to toilet rooms and two large parlors, in which are comfortable chairs for three attendants. The north wing, charged with the room, the north wing on the ground floor is occupied by a bar and lunch room, an office for the station master, a large smoking room in the northeast corner and the concessions, such as candy, peanuts, and soda-water and the like. The second floor is devoted to public comfort. In the southwest corner is a large room provided with tables for those who bring their lunches with them. Coffee and milk will be sold to those who want it. Leading from this is the woman's restaurant, and on the balcony on the east side and in the large hallways will be placed tables for the accommodation of any who desire to use them free of all charge. In the north wing is a writing room, lunch room and the main office of the bureau of public comfort. The intramural railroad is on a level with this floor, with a station adjoining the building on the west. All passengers who leave the electric elevator at this station pass into the building and down to the main floor by two broad staircases which lead to the floor from the north and south ends. The north wing of the third floor is occupied by the railroad offices and the south side by the secret-service men under Capt. Lonsfield. A large room is used for sleeping purposes and there are eight small offices on the south side. In the loggia on the east side are long benches for the accommodation of those who want to rest while waiting for trains. World's Fair ticket offices will be erected at once on the second floor and on the person, so that all visitors will get their admissions before they get to the main floor of the building. It is lighted throughout by electric lights. On the east face are eighteen candelabra, lighted by electricity, and four on the west side. On top of the building are placed eight heroic figures, representing an orator, Indian, fisherman and navigator. They stand on the four columns on the east and the two on the north and the two on the south side. It is estimated that thirty-six trains carrying 25,000 people, can be handled in an hour on the terminal tracks. Every train carried its full complement of passengers half of them could find comfortable accommodation in the great station and its person. The main waiting-room on the floor is figured to accommodate 5,000, while the women's sitting-rooms orient say is worth $450,000. It weighs two tons and a half, and more than half of it is alleged to be made of silver. Special foundations had to be constructed in the room where it stands to sustain the weight. According to the entry accompanying the shipment, the couch was once the property of a royal princess of the House of Turkey, but for many years has not been occupied and was stored away in the Sultan's palace. The bed is of the old-fashioned high-post pattern, with a canopy worked out in massive silver filigree work, surmounted by a crown. The posts are round and perfectly plain, but the side pieces are all carved in artistic floral design. The head is open-work and rather plain in design. At the foot is the "Toma," the reputed signature of Mohammed, who, it is said, when called on to write his name dipped his hand in ink and made the queer scrawl which is put on all Turkish designs. The bed stands about five feet from the floor, and four steps, not unlike those used in the sleeping cars of to-day, assist the personage lucky enough to "sleep in the silver bedstead."

The room in which it stands is made up after the manner of a typical Turkish bedroom of the high-st class. The floor is covered by heavy rugs, the walls are hung with costly fabrics and the room is strewn with quaint settees.

OUR OWN GRACE DARLING.
Ida Lewis Will Exhibit Her Famous Boat Rescue in Chicago.

For some time past the management of the World's Fair has endeavored to get Miss Ida Lewis to allow her medals and trophies to be used as a part of the Fair exhibit from Rhode Island. Miss Lewis has firmly declined every offer made by the management explaining that if any of the medals were lost they could never be replaced. It is the association, she says, and not the intrinsic value, for which she values them. She has, however, permitted a photographer to take several photographs of the different medals and trophies, and these will be exhibited in Chicago. By special request Miss Lewis will also exhibit the rowboat in which she has saved so many lives. The State of Rhode Island will bear the expense of fitting the boat for exhibition. For fifteen years Ida Lewis, now known as the Grace Darling of America, has kept the lighthouse at the Lime Rocks, near Newport. She received the appointment in 1879 after the death of her father, who had charge of the lighthouse before her.

She received her first medal, a silver one in March, 1879, for rescuing two fort soldiers who had been capsized in a boat while crossing the harbor. This medal was presented by the Life Saving Benevolent Association of New York. On Feb. 4, 1881, she saved two men who had drifted out into the bay in a boat. Hearing their cries as they clung to their capsized craft, she went to the rescue in her life-boat. She saved them both, but a lad who was with them was drowned. For saving the men the government presented Miss Lewis with a gold medal. The Humane Society of Refuge of Massachusetts presented her with a silver medal for many heroic and successful efforts in saving human lives. A prominent summer resident of Newport gave her a silver medal representing the State seal of Rhode Island. In 1879 General Grant presented Miss Lewis with a boat named the Rescue and this she has used ever since. In all she has saved sixteen persons.

MAGIC EYE-GLASS.
It Mystifies Those Who Do Not Understand Its Simplicity.
A little box containing four numbers is handed to an assistant, who is asked to place the numbers in the box in whatever order he pleases, and to close the lid. The guessing glass, which is set in a little tube like the one shown in the sketch and marked No. 1 is placed on top of the box, and at once indicates the numbers correctly, 4, 1, 2, 3. In order to operate promptly a little compass is dropped into the tube, unknown to the operators. Each numbered block contains a magnetic bar concealed from view. As soon as the tube is placed on top of each number, the magnetic needle points in the opposite direction from the magnet contained in the numbered block. The needle takes four different positions, corresponding with those of the four numbers in the box.

This little toy is by no means new, although it was only lately been revived. It was a favorite trick with the magicians of the seventeenth century, and is mystifying to-day to those who have never seen it before.

The Marchioness of Tweeddale.
The Marchioness of Tweeddale, who is one of the loveliest and most charming of the aristocracy in the English aristocracy, is of Italian birth. She is the daughter of Signor Vincenzo Bartolomeo of Caneano in Italy, and possesses the soft manners and graceful ways of the ladies of her native land. Her husband has served in the Indian army, and has been a prominent member of TWEEDDALE of Parliament. They have a handsome country seat in Jadingtoashire.

At half past seven o'clock on Saturday evening, May 6th, Mrs. Mary Skinner, one of the oldest pioneers of Novi, passed away after 81 years and seven months of life. Had she lived only eleven hours longer, she would have survived her husband exactly one year. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner came to Novi in 1834, immediately after their marriage in the state of New York. They passed 55 years of life together, respected by all who knew them. Of their family of five sons and three daughters all survive them except one daughter, who died in childhood. Mrs. Skinner has been entirely helpless for seven months, from injuries received by a fall, suffering intensely the greater part of the time. The family are very grateful to their neighbors and friends for their kindness during the sickness, death and burial of their revered parents. Mrs. Skinner was one of a family of eleven, four of whom are still living, all aged people. The funeral was held at the old homestead on Monday, the services being conducted by Rev. Lee S. McCollister of the church of Our Father, Detroit. The following, relative to the death is from Tuesday morning's Free Press: "An able and appropriate address was delivered by the Rev. Lee S. McCollister, who also preached the funeral sermon of her husband a year ago today. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner were pioneer settlers of the Township of Novi, having settled there when the state was a territory, and were highly esteemed as honorable citizens. They leave four sons and two daughters. The four sons served an aggregate of fifteen years in the war of the rebellion, all receiving honorable discharges. Mr. and Mrs. Skinner were both octogenarians and celebrated their golden wedding five years ago."

A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

Elkhart, Ind., July 1st, 1890: Dullam's Great German Medicine Co. My daughter has been afflicted with Female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. A lady friend advised me to secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and she has been completely cured by it. We gave it a fair trial and the results were wonderful. We cannot recommend it too highly to all ladies who are afflicted. Benjamin Grainger.

DR. PRICE'S BAKING POWDER.

Supplying the Army, Navy and Indian Department.

The purchasing agents of the United States Government have ordered nearly one hundred thousand pounds of Dr. Price's Baking Powder in the first five months of this year.

The government exercises great care in selecting its supplies of all kinds, rejecting everything that is not of the best, and the very fact that it has adopted Dr. Price's Baking Powder is proof that it has found it the best of all the baking powders. Dr. Price's is peculiarly adapted for export, as neither long sea voyages nor climate changes affect it; this brand keeping fresh and sweet for years while other baking powders deteriorate rapidly. It is guaranteed to the government to be a pure cream of tartar powder free from ammonia, alum, or other harmful substances, and it is also the only baking powder prepared by a physician of high standing.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.
