THEY PAY TAXES.

Here's Thirty-Two Tax Payers Who Will Pay More Than $25. Each.

The Exact Per Cent Tax Is Just 006420719.

Below we give a list of the tax payers of this village who will each pay into the village treasurer this year more than $25 taxes. There are thirty-two names in the list and their aggregate amount is $2,027.73, or nearly one half the entire village tax:

Yerkes Bros.	44.69

The assessed valuation of the village is $778,730, of which $564,930 is real estate and $213,800 personal.

The amount raised by tax this year to run the village is $5,000, of which $4,500 is for general funds and $500 for highway. The poll tax, if all collected, will amount to $376.

The tax book is now in the hands of Treasurer Babbitt, at the State Savings bank, where it will remain until after we get through celebrating the 4th of July.

WONT RECORD THE DEEDS.

The New Tax Law Is Certainly a Nuisance.

The new tax law, which has just gone into effect, now makes it a misdemeanor for the register of deeds to record any deed, land contract, plat, etc., unless accompanied by a certificate from the auditor-general, or from the county treasurer of the county, stating whether there are any tax liens or titles held by the state, or any individual, against such piece or description of land sought to be conveyed by such instrument, and that all taxes due thereon have been paid for the five years preceding to the date of such instrument, and in default of the presentation of such certificate he shall not record the same until such certificate is secured and presented.

In consequence of this fool-law, which should have never been enacted, deed after deed is now being piled up in the register's office unrecorded, as in the majority of cases, it is utterly impossible for any county treasurer to give such certificates with the above information at hand. The whole business may yet end in the courts and the law declared unconstitutional.

COMING AMUSEMENTS.

Here Are a Few Dates to Bear in Mind.

The grammar rooms of the Northville schools will give an entertainment at the opera house Friday evening, June 16.

Wednesday evening, June 31, the pupils of the High school below the 12th grade have a prize elocutionary contest at the opera house. There will be about twelve participants.

Thursday evening, June 22, the commencement exercises of the High school will be held in the opera house.

The Violet.

(The following beautiful lines were written by a young lady pupil of the Northville schools.)

We were walking on the hillside, mother
Where the pretty flowers grow,
When up from among the grasses
A tiny face did show.
And mother, I looked around me,
And many more were there,
They were busily talking together
And nodding their heads so fair.
I gathered a tiny handful
And here they are for you:
See their little faces,
So beautiful and blue,
O, that we might be like them,
So modest and so true,
That we might be like the violet,
The little violet blue.

BURGLARS AT NOVI.

They Cracked Whipple Brothers' Safe.

LOCAL TALENT IS SUSPECTED.

A Thousand Dollars Worth of Notes Stolen.

Whipple Bros' safe at Novi was blown open last night and the small amount of cash it contained was taken together with about $1,000 worth of notes. The tools to accomplish the blowing of the safe were taken from Wooster's blacksmith shop. Local talent is suspected, though of course it might have been professional cracksmen from Chicago or New York for all that. Banks generally have been cautioned against negotiating for any of the paper.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

George Stark Is Injured in a Runaway Accident.

George Stark, father of Stark Bros., while driving the delivery wagon yesterday morning, probably met with the first runaway accident of his life. While coming up Main street, the harness broke letting the wagon against the horse's heels. The harder Mr. Stark pulled on the reins, the more the vehicle crowded on the horse. The horse turned on Center street and when near the opera house commenced kicking. Mr. Stark was leaning well in front and the animal's heels struck him between the eyes inflicting an ugly wound on the bridge of the nose and a bad bruise on the forehead. Mr. Stark still clung to the lines until in front of Geo. Hueston's residence when he climbed back through the wagon and dropped unconscious to the ground. His son Bert was the first to reach him and other assistance quickly arriving, he was soon placed upon a cot and carried to his home near by. The attending physician thinks no bones are broken and that he will soon recover. One of his hands and his limbs also are quite badly bruised, and he suffers considerable pain today though appearing as cheerful as a young man of twenty.

It was certainly a very narrow escape for Mr. Stark and while his many friends extend their sympathy they are thankful it is no worse. The horse was caught near the U. S. fishery, considerably cut and injured about the legs.

MILFORD'S SOAP FACTORY.

The Detroit One Didn't Come, but They Make Soap Just the Same.

A month ago Milford had apparently reached the height of her ambition. She raised the required $6,000 bonus, which a Detroit concern asked to come there and locate.

Milford was happy. Town lots jumped. You couldn't touch a real estate man with a 10-foot pole, and every farmer within a radius of a mile had transformed his wheat field into imaginary lots, 50x150.

But, alas! The Detroit company received even more flattering offers from other villages and told the Milford people so. Nevertheless, some of the taxpayers are very indignant, and the other day some of them set up a soap factory of their own. It stands on a vacant lot. It is correctly represented in the picture above, and Milford people show by this, that they still have the old time get-thar-ness of their forefathers, and that they are bound to keep clean even if they have to make their own soap to do it.

Monday Mrs. Carrie Seeley caught the largest fish which has been caught in the lake this spring, an 8 lb. pickerel, which she landed in her boat unaided. — Orion Review.

Bet a world's fair ticket that Carrie never landed that pickerel off the fish-hook unaided.

An Ann Arbor man named Wahr has had a porch-rocker, an arm-chair and a palm tree stole off the front porch of his residence and if he can get one of his own palms some "whap" on the sacks dollar that took 'em. He will have no use for either the porch-rocker or the arm-chair for several weeks to come.

The Farmington Enterprise offers to furnish that village with a grand old fashioned celebration the day following July 3rd, if the village will show up with a bunch of fire-crackers, a roman candle and a dozen lemons. The Enterprise will furnish the advertising, and the sugar for the lemons.

The Milford Times don't like Prof. McLaughlin a little bit. He engaged to run the school up there the coming year and then because he got some thing better, flunked. The Times almost asserts that they can get a better principal than McLaughlin, and not half try and really believes, though she doesn't say it, that Mickey is Irish and has red hair.

"Jim" Slocum of the Holly Advertiser has just returned from the world's fair and gives out the pleasant information that, "with a little care there is no necessity of being robbed." No, there is no real necessity of being robbed, we don't think. But Bro. Slocum had evidently gone prepared, for all he had in his pockets was a ten cent piece and a brass souvenir looking coin with a big "5" on one side and the word "Hirst" engraved on the back. At least this was all Mrs. Slocum found in Jim's pants the next morning after he arrived home.

Concerning a Benton Harbor boy who was made ill from eating jelly, we are indebted to the Jackson Patriot for the opinion of a local chemist who found that the jelly having soured, developed nitrogen gas, which with the tart principle—sulphuric acid—together with maline coloring developed nitro-benzine, a very poisonous substance. One shudders to contemplate the dangerous possibility the case presented. Suppose the lad's mother unaware of the explosive compound in her son, had "whaled" him with her slipper, for stealing the jelly! — Adrian Press.

Mothers should have their son's stomach properly analyzed before using a "whaler."

Sometime ago our Plymouth friends said they were glad that the Prouty & Glass factory was not located there, as their air-gun factories (which employ cheap boy labor), did more for their town than our factories did for us. But note what a change in a few years has taken place. Today the air gun factories have shut down and their men are loafing around town gazing on the burnt district and their water works, which are at a standstill, while our Wayne factories are being run to their fullest capacity, and our town is improving each day. — Wayne Review.

Heartless wretch, have you 'no pity at all? Wait till your new depot, that you haven't got, gets a fire and you want Plymouth's water works all brought down there to put it out. Wait we say, wait.

The story comes from Holly that during the heavy wind several days ago, a farmer of that section was sitting on a fence near his house, smoking a clay pipe, and that a brick was blown from the house and smashed the pipe without hurting the man. — Durand Express.

Now the way we heard it was that the whole chimney blew off the house; struck the fence, knocking it from under the man, leaving him sitting on top of the chimney in exactly the same position as on the fence and never losing a single puff on the old clay pipe. We wish the Express man would fix this pipe business up in the next issue. We dislike to have one of those old stand-by comforters dragged from the rosy-red lips of a village fence-sitter and ruthlessly destroyed in this manner.

houses being leveled with the ground. It is worth remembering that the most violent results of earthquakes are often to be seen in soft, alluvial regions, where the upper strata offer least resistance to the destructive forces.

So in Zante most of the hamlets are built upon the rich alluvial plain that forms the eastern part of the island. Ruins occupy the western part, and among them we came to was done. The city of Zante itself lies upon the flanks and at the bottom of the hill of Castro, an alluvial formation. It was along this soft, alluvial shore, hillsides and plain that the destruction was wrought.

Maid of Honor's Wedding Present.
It is a fact not generally known, but maids of honor to the Queen, although their duties are wearisome and the salary a small one considering the inevitable cost of their costumes, have one golden chance. If a maid of honor marries during her term of duty, the monarch gives her the handsome little present of $5,000.

His Reasons.
A professor, who used to teach the grandfathers of the present generation of students, objected to the pronunciation of "wound" as if it were spelled "woond." and his students used to hunt for chances to make him explain his objections. One day he stopped a student who was reading to the class, and said: "How do you pronounce that word?" "Woond, sir." The professor looked ugly, and replied: "I have never found any ground for giving it that soond. Go on."—Argonaut.

Love in Lodgings.

BY FLORENCE WARDEN.

CHAPTER X—CONTINUED.

"I—and my brother as well—wish to apologize to you for having spoken of you disrespectfully. Instead of honoring you as we ought to have done for your goodness to our grandfather. It was all because we didn't know. We have found out lately how good you were, you and—and your daughter." He shot out this last word with a hot blush, in a mumbled, shame-faced manner. "And—and we hope you will accept our apologies, you and—and your daughter."

It was lucky that he had come to the end of the sentence, since he could not have uttered another word. For Mrs. Hutchinson had suddenly put down her knitting, and was regarding him with a fixed look of icy displeasure.

"My daughter! Oh yes. I am exceedingly annoyed to find that my daughter has struck up some sort of an acquaintance with you, that she has so far forgotten what is due to herself and to me as to visit at your house, or I should say at the house which was your grandfather's. You understand that the acquaintance is entirely at an end. If your father thinks that in this affair the pride is all on one side, he is mistaken."

Now Cameron felt better. This defiant bitterness and the danger of losing sight of Annie altogether, loosened his tongue.

"My father has nothing to do with it," said he passionately. "I love your daughter. She's the nicest girl I ever met—as well as the prettiest, and I want to marry her. Let me see her, do let me speak to her. I never have, at least, not in so many words—but I think she knows."

"Whatever she may know or may not know will not make the slightest difference. I should not let her marry into your family if you had the virtues of an archangel."

"Why? Why? If I were as good as that?"

"I want to see your father yesterday, thinking he would want to know some details about his father's last illness. He had nothing to ask, he would not listen. He only seized the occasion to abuse and insult me. He was the loser by it, but that doesn't matter. My daughter is a great deal too good for any son of his, and—I will wear no more of this, nor will she."

"Yes, she will hear more of it," said Cameron doggedly. "You haven't the least right to treat me like this because you are angry with my father; I don't defend him; I don't say he's not in the wrong. But you are putting yourself just as much in the wrong as he. But I'm not going to visit the parent's sins upon the child. She'll be twenty-one in two months, and then if she should care to have me, as I hope and pray she will, she can snap her fingers at you as I can at my own father. Good evening."

With a short, stiff bow he shot out of the room before she had time to answer. But if he had looked in at the window as he darted in hot anger out of the house, he would have seen that Mrs. Hutchinson looked less disgusted with his hot-headed impetuosity than he deserved.

While his brother was undergoing the ordeal of his interview Temple had sauntered out in the direction of a spot where, truth to tell, it had for the last week been tacitly understood between Linda Frece and himself that they should meet every evening at about this time. They still kept up, nevertheless, the farce of exhibiting a little surprise at these encounters. Temple would reduce his pace to an apparently lazy saunter as soon as she appeared in sight. Linda would raise her eyebrows in the prettiest astonishment before she held out her hand. And yet either of these two hypocrites would have been desperately disappointed and amazed if the other had failed to appear at this particular spot at this particular time.

On this occasion, however, Temple forgot to show surprise. A more disturbing emotion was so apparent in his face and manner that Linda guessed he had something to tell her, and she, in her turn, dropped the little comedy of astonishment. They sat down on the first seat they came to, after a few perfunctory remarks upon the weather and the state of the tide. Still Temple said nothing. Miss Frece crossed her pretty little French boots, and in the search for something to say, let her eyes for a moment rest upon them.

"I've got the kid of my boots dreadfully on those nasty little pebbles," she observed placidly.

"Yes, I noticed it this morn—" began Temple without reflection.

And remembering, with a start, what a terrible revelation he had been on the point of making, he grew crimson and fell abruptly into silence. Linda seemed not to notice the abruptness with which he stopped, although, if he had dared to look at her, he would have seen the corners of her mouth twitching in an extraordinary fashion.

"I wonder," she presently went on, still looking down, "who it is that they get to clean the boots here." She appeared not to notice her companion's evident confusion at this remark. "The common or garden cleaner of boots, especially in seaside lodgings, is a person who thinks that a woman's boots require blacking, and who has a prejudice in favor of applying the blacking inside as well as outside. Now the boot-cleaner here uses cream, and moreover applies it with clean hands. It is quite clear that that cleaner of boots must be either a genius or a gentleman."

"He isn't either," said Temple in a hoarse voice, looking out to sea. "At least he's a fellow who ought to be a gentleman, but who begins to think he's been behaving very like a cad."

Miss Frece did not appear in the least surprised. She listened attentively, and she also looked out to sea. Temple cleared his throat and went on:

"He's been sailing under false colors, passing himself off as a guest in a house which he was really helping to ruin, and—and—he's awfully ashamed of himself."

As she said nothing, he stole a look at her, and saw that she was smiling.

"Don't you—don't you think it was awfully mean of him?" he asked humbly.

"Not at all mean, but so silly. For you see, I knew all about it all the time."

"What?"

"I saw you on the platform when you got out of the train, and I guessed that the two young fellows who met you were your brothers. And when we got to this house, by accident, when we were hunting for rooms, I recognized the one who opened the door at once, though in the interval he had managed to get a black eye."

"And—and your father? Colonel Frece?"

"Oh, of course he didn't know. He doesn't now. But I wonder how he could possibly have failed to see at once that neither of your brothers had had the slightest experience in the business he professed."

"But you knew?"

"Oh, yes, I knew."

"And yet you came here?"

Miss Frece laughed, and her color deepened a little. Still she would not let him see any more of her face than the pretty profile. Temple felt an indescribable exhilaration seizing him. She seemed to think it was necessary to excuse herself, and she began to give her explanation with great volubility.

"Of course I knew they were doing it for fun, and I thought it would be amusing to see what would happen. It was quite a disappointment to find how very well everything went after the first day. It was not until one morning I peeped over the banisters and saw—somebody cleaning my boots that I felt sorry. I didn't like you to have to do that!"

The gently deprecating tone in which these last words were uttered intoxicated Temple. He sat down on the seat beside her.

"Why," said he, "that was my great pleasure. I insisted on doing that. I wouldn't have let anyone else touch them for the world. You know very well there isn't anything I wouldn't do."

But she cut him short.

"Miss Hutchinson and I have laughed together about it till we nearly cried."

This did not please Temple so much.

"Oh!" he said coldly.

"She told me the whole story and explained everything. I think she likes your brother Cameron very much."

"Does she? She wasn't particularly kind to him to-day when he told her he liked her."

"Oh, but don't you see how difficult it is for her, considering the position she and her mother stand in to your family? What would your father say if she were to encourage your brother?"

"We don't care what our father says. We all think our grandfather was right to leave them what he did, and we have written to our father to tell him so."

Linda turned to him with a face full of excitement and enthusiastic approval.

"Have you? That's right," she said.

"I think it's splendid of you, I do indeed."

She checked herself and got up with a heightened color, to watch a little white sail that was glistening in the distance against the dark blue of the sea. Temple followed her and tried hard to look into her face.

"I—I'm—I'm so awfully glad," he said, trying hard not to be incoherent. "I—I would rather hear you say so, than—than any body, than everybody else in the world, in fact. I—I think more of your opinion than anybody else's. I—I—Never mind that beetle—You are listening, aren't you?"

"I mustn't listen any more, though. I must go in. Papa will be expecting me."

"Never mind papa. At least it's not for you to mind him, but for me. What will he say? Will he ever let me have you?"

"Mr. Monk!"

Her tone was full of haughty amazement and indignation. She seemed petrified into a statue by this undreamt-of impertinence, so that she was quite unable to continue her homeward walk. But Temple's tongue was loosened at last; he got his courage, or attained a stage of exaltation which replaced it, and he was not to be stopped.

"Don't pretend you don't understand. Don't pretend to be offended. It is only pretence. Oh, I know!" he pleaded, looking under her hat into her face with piteous anxiety.

"You wouldn't play with me, would you? Why, if you were to say you had been playing with me I wouldn't believe it! I know you better. I tell you I know you better. But—but—all the same—tell me, tell me, Linda! You do care for me a little, don't you?"

"You don't seem to want my assurance. You seem to take it for granted."

"He did have the decency to glance to the right and to the left before he kissed her, but really he scarcely noticed whether anybody was in sight. It was a matter of life and death to him; he must either have that kiss or fall dead for the want of it, and he chose the pleasanter alternative. Linda made but a faint objection. Murmuring 'Don't! The people,' she yielded. Then she forgot all about papa, and they walked together in the opposite direction from 'Sea-view.'"

CHAPTER XI.

The Course of True Love.

"Linda," said Temple presently, when they had at last turned their reluctant steps toward home, "we've been shunting the colonel, but he is not to be shunted indefinitely. The question must be faced. What will he say?"

"I don't think about it," said Linda, shutting her eyes. "For I'm perfectly certain that he will be horribly angry and say we mustn't think of it. He thinks the whole duty of a father is to find a rich husband for his daughter, and he wants me to marry a banker's son who paid me some attention this season. It was that young fellow who was so angry when I missed my dance with him through sitting out with you in the palm-house. Don't you remember?"

"What! That long creature with the carrot head, like a red lantern at the top of a mast? Well, you couldn't possibly marry that!"

"They say he's very clever."

"Of course he must be cleverer than he looks, or he would be in an asylum for idiots. Your father couldn't be so serious about it."

"He is though."

Temple began to look very blank. If the colonel had been inclined to receive him kindly as a son-in-law, they could have passed off the letting of the apartments to him as a joke, and induced him to remain as an ordinary guest, so that their father would have heard nothing of their escapade. But the action which would have been a joke on the part of a favored suitor would be a grievous offence from one not so favored.

"What does the colonel mean by rich?" he asked in a subdued tone. "No two people ever mean the same income by the word."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Butler That Killed Lord Nelson.

The musket ball that killed Lord Nelson, the "hero of Trafalgar," is at present the subject of much discussion. One writer claims that it is among the treasured relics of the British museum; another that it is among the many mementos of the late prince consort, which Queen Victoria carries with her in her periodic trips from Windsor to Balmoral. Beattie, the surgeon on board the Victory on the day of Nelson's death, and the man who removed the bullet from the body of the dead admiral, says in his "Authentic Narrative of the Death of Lord Nelson": "The fatal ball struck the forehead of his lordship's epaulet and entered the left shoulder."

On removing the ball I noticed that a piece of the gold lace, a part of the epaulet and a small piece of his coat were firmly attached to it. Indeed, the adhesion mentioned by Surgeon Beattie was almost as close as if the fragments had been driven against the metal when it was in a molten state. The next that was heard of this relic it was in the hands of one Captain Hardy, who had it mounted in a silver locket with crystal faces, who afterwards presented it to Surgeon Beattie. After the death of Beattie it fell to Rev. F. W. Barker of Bothwick, who presented it to the prince consort in 1851.—St. Louis Republic.

Engallant.

Although American gentlemen have the reputation in Europe of allowing the female members of their families to do much as they please, they have not the name of possessing the quality which the Frenchmen call gallantry. They are not makers of compliments.

In support of this view a story told by an English speaking guide in the Alps is repeated. The guide was conducting through various points of interest in the mountains an American and his somewhat querulous and fault-finding wife.

"In this direction," said the guide, "there is a most remarkable echo, which repeats clearly five times every word that is uttered. Shall I show it to you?"

"Well, I guess not," said the old American. "I can't holler none myself, an' I git words enough from my wife without hearin' 'em five times over."—Youth's Companion.

The Little Girl's Query.

The small daughter of a certain charity-minded family has been told frequently that Satan finds work for idle hands. The other morning one of the tribe of tramps called with the usual story of woes. The mistress of the house made the customary suggestion about obtaining employment, and was assured that every avenue to self-support was closed. Then the small girl came forward from the refuge behind her mother's skirts and said, in tones of kindly suggestion: "Couldn't Satan find anything for you to do?"

To Be Exact.

Miss Fithave—Jack kissed me on the piazza last night.

Miss Beacon—Now, Bessie, do pray, be more accurate. You mean that Jack kissed you last night when you were on the piazza, do you not?

Miss Fithave—Well, not quite. Jack was on the piazza, but I was—er—well, on Jack.

CROSS-EXAMINED.

A Judge Brings a Smart Lawyer to His Senses.

Skill in examination is perhaps one of the most important qualifications of the attorney, and in considering the big retainers of the present day the mind runs back to an exhibition of skill in an Ohio county court several years ago.

The case was a murder, and a cross-examination was retained for his reputed skill in criminal cases. On cross-examination he went at the witness after this manner:

"Now (ahem!) Mr. Tompkins, you say you saw the defendant kill the man?"

"Yes, sir."

"Yes—well—how did you know it was the defendant?"

"Because I saw him."

"But, sir, how did you know it was him?"

"I've known him for thirteen years."

"You have?"

"Yes."

"Known him all that time?"

"Yes."

"You state it under oath?"

"Yes."

"How did he kill him?"

"He shot him with a revolver."

"How do you know?"

"I saw him."

"Did you see the revolver?"

"Certainly."

"Did you see it revolve?"

"No, sir."

"Ah! How do you know it was a revolver?"

"It looked like one."

"Um-huh! Did you see him pull the trigger?"

"I saw the blaze and smoke."

"Did you see any bullet in the blaze and smoke? Would the blaze and smoke have caused death?"

"Of course not."

"Then what danger was there in firing?"

"The bullet was found in the victim's head."

"Did you see any bullet strike the deceased?"

"Of course not."

The attorney solemnly arose and addressed the court. "If your honor please, we would like to introduce testimony in impeachment. Here is a man who swears that he saw one man kill another with a revolver, yet he saw neither the bullet leave the pistol nor strike the victim. He didn't even see the man pull the trigger."

"Are you addressing the court?" asked the judge.

"Why, certainly, if your honor please."

"How do you know?"

"Why, your honor certainly hears me."

"Yes, but you neither see your words leave your mouth nor strike the court's ears."

The attorney sat down.

Pronounce It If You Can.

Perhaps the most difficult geographical name in the United States is Youghiogeny, or geny, as it is sometimes spelled, the name of a creek in Western Maryland and Pennsylvania. Few besides natives of the region pronounce it with the chief accent on the penultimate, and who so essays it with the accent elsewhere, finds his mouth filled with a meaningless confusion of vowels and consonants. The first syllable is "Yough," pronounced "Yo," with the short "o." The second is "i," short, the "o" following is almost, if not quite, unheard in the mouth of the native, while the last two syllables are those made familiar in "Allegheny," though there is here a question of "a" long, or "e" short. The pronunciation of Youghiogeny is, however, a simple matter with the modern spelling compared to what it must have seemed to the stranger who met with it in the old spelling. On an ancient map of the region the name is spelled "Yogh-youghghania." Doubtless this spelling came nearer than that now in use to indicate aptly the Indian pronunciation of the name.

Swings Open the "Big Gate."

The emperor of China has, of late taken some important steps in dress reform. Formerly no foreigner was permitted to look upon the face of the celestial monarch, who was sedulously veiled from worldly eyes, nor was any foreign potentate permitted to address the imperial divinity except through a third person. Moreover, even the greatest of foreign dignitaries were obliged to enter the royal grounds through the "small gate," as a mark of inferiority. But recently the British minister and one or two other dignitaries have been permitted to meet the emperor face to face in exception to the rule that has prevailed for centuries, and were even allowed to enter the "big gate."

This shows that China's emperor has determined not to be so much hedged in by divinity in the future. The opening of the "big gate" is undoubtedly proof that his celestial majesty has heard of the advent of hoop skirts and does not propose to forego the calls of distinguished ladies from abroad, even for the sake of a time-honored tradition.—Boston Globe.

Monkeys.

Oriental tradition assigns to monkeys a very peculiar beginning. Satan, we are told, tried to imitate the works of the Creator, but failed signally to equal them. Instead of the horse, he could produce only the ass; instead of the fish, a serpent; and instead of man, the monkey. Yet in India, the paradise of monkeys, they are held in high honor because of the aid which their king, Hanooman, in the days of old, gave to the god Rama when, to rescue his wife, Sita, he invaded Ceylon; Hanooman helping to bridge the strait.

Do You Wish the Finest Bread and Cake?

It is conceded that the Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest of all the baking powders.

The purest baking powder makes the finest, sweetest, most delicious food. The strongest baking powder makes the lightest food.

That baking powder which is both purest and strongest makes the most digestible and wholesome food.

Why should not every housekeeper avail herself of the baking powder which will give her the best food with the least trouble?

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Certain protection from alum baking powders can be had by declining to accept any substitute for the Royal, which is absolutely pure.

The Thinker, an English periodical, refers to an article in an American magazine by Mr. Gail Hamilton.

About the year 1793 the beats and calls of the drum were used in the service were put into a permanent shape. The tattoo beat, or beat of the drum calling soldiers to their quarters at night, was once called "tap-too," from the Dutch word signifying "no more drink to be tapped or sold."

Delaware has a curious collection of odd surnames. There is a family of Colts in Kent county. The Peppers and Mustards have long lived neighbors in Sussex county, and there are Peaches in Newcastle county, inauspiciously settled north of the peach belt. One man named his three sons for the several counties of the state, and Delaware is an occasional Christian name. A girl whose name was Leonora, Missouri Cannon provoked from a stranger the prompt declaration that the name was sentimental, patriotic and explosive.

They Work Wonders.

For over twenty years I have been afflicted with dyspepsia, could not eat without distress and sickness of the stomach afterwards. Have used Dr. Kane's Dyspepsia Pills for weeks and now eat all kinds of food without return of old trouble. They certainly work wonders in curing dyspepsia and stomach trouble.

Homes for World's Fair Visitors.

In view of the crowded condition of Chicago and its hotels during the World's Fair period, Fred Bros. have done a public service in issuing a very carefully prepared list of the homes in Chicago that are thrown open to the public upon this occasion.

The list is complete and gives the name, location, number of rooms, etc., so that correspondence may be had and arrangements made before the visitor comes to Chicago. This list is accompanied by splendid sectional maps of the city on a large scale, by which the location of every house can be accurately found. Copies can be obtained at the Michigan Central Ticket Office at the Publisher's price 50 cents—less really than the value of the maps themselves.

Three things ruin a man—to know little and talk much, to have little and spend much, and to be worth little and presume much.

Near Liskhead, in Cornwall, is a strange natural phenomenon. A pile of rock thirty-two feet high, shaped like a top, is balanced on the smaller end. It is quite immovable, though, apparently, a very slight effort would upset its equilibrium.

FOR MEN

[Edited weekly by one of them.]
Something special next Sunday. All men are wanted.

Jno. Walter spoke Sunday and his words were helpful to all who attended.

State Sec'y H. M. Clark writes that he will spend Sunday, June 28, with us and speak at the Men's meeting. Let us have a large attendance.

Every man, be he a Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian or other church attendant, or none, is cordially invited to attend our Sunday meeting and aid in making it a help to all.

The Young Men's Christian Association is not separate from the church but is a branch of it, using its talent in helping young men to build sound character and providing counter attractions to those places of questionable resort.

We find cause to rejoice over the good attendance and the interest taken in our Sunday service. Prof. Bliss is to be credited for a goodly share of our success and we ask all our readers to help just a little by a kindly word, by inviting some one to come.

L. E. Hartwick, Dear Sir:—It gives me great pleasure to recommend to those afflicted with lame or weak back your Oxene Plaster.

I have been troubled with lame back, more or less, for years and have tried all kinds of Plasters, but found no relief until I tried the Oxene, and after wearing it two weeks the lameness was all gone. It is now four weeks since I took it off and the lameness has not returned. I also wore one for a lame shoulder with the same result.

attendance.

Lost—Friday evening of last week,

by returning to Mrs. C. L. Dubuar.

G. S. VanZile wishes the person that left their old shoes in his yard to were left there the day of the fire at Mr. Booth's by some excitable person.

The Northville ball club (N. A. C.)
will play the Detroit High school nine at Plymouth tomorrow, Friday afternoon. It will be a hotly contested game and a large delegation from here will go over to see it.

The menu club held its last outing at Walled Lake Saturday, occupying the J. A. Dubuar cottage. Ten of the fair members were present and the fun they had would not go inside of ten empty molasses barrels.

Mr. and Mrs. D. T. Parks, Randolph street, were very pleasantly surprised last Wednesday by a number of their South Lyon friends calling on them in honor of the latter's birthday. The company numbered about fourteen and a very pleasant time is reported.

All who attended the children's day exercises at the Methodist church Sunday, were more than pleased with the work of the pupils. Those who built the program and drilled the parts were to be especially commended for their faithfulness. The decorations were very pretty.

The many friends of Rev. Charles Dunlap, both here and at South Lyon, will sympathize with him and his family in the death of his daughter Edith, who died at their home in Adel Iowa, June 3d. The young lady had many personal friends here, where she visited her relatives two years ago.

When the whistle blew for the fire
last week Wednesday one of the Globe Furn. Co. boys changed his shoes to go to the fire and became so excited that he grabbed up his old shoes and started, and did not discover that he had then in his hands until he was opposite VanZile's lumber yard, where he left them.

The theme at the Methodist church next Sabbath morning will be the somewhat romantic one "From the Pulpit to the Poor-house." The early meetings will be held at 6:00 p. m.
There will be no public worship in the evening, as the congregation will join in the baccalaagiate service at the Presbyterian church.

We haven't got much to say about the Ann Arbor vs. Northville ball game of last Saturday afternoon. We intended giving it about half a column notice but "want of time and space forbids," so to speak. Besides those Ann Arbor fellows beat us, don't you know. No one seems to know what the score was, but it was about two to one, (two to one dozen.) We could have mopped the ground with them had all of our regular players been home, and by the way, the ground needed mopping the worst way.

The attention of our taxpayers is called to the fact that while they are called upon to pay taxes for the support of a fire company and a water works system for fire protection, at the same time there is not yet the least sign of a fire alarm system in the village. Whose fault is it? The fire chief and every member of the fire company say one is needed badly and at once, and the council say the fire company has asked for nothing of the kind. Something should be done about it quickly. Thousands of dollars worth of property may be lost any day for want of just such a system.

Yerkes Bros are now offering the highest cash price for wheat. They want 10,000 bushel. Farmers now is your time.

The Northville gun club, seventeen strong, shoot at Milford today.

Children's day will be observed at Summit church Sunday afternoon.

Children's day exercises next Sunday morning at the Baptist church.

There is one lone little letter advertised in the post-office this week for Mr. Chas. Mills.

The editor of the Northville Record has been imposed upon with a bogus dollar and is uncertain what to do with it. Does it not occur to him that it would make an elegant show in a contribution box?—Adrian Press.

We are glad that we are not so wicked as some Adrian newspaper men are.

It is now about the time of year that the path masters get out the road scraper and drag the sand, rubbish, etc., back to the center of the road, and insure travelers another year of mud.
This year please invert the term of the divisor and proceed as before; clear the worn-out material out of the road, and then if you have no foundation left —why build one.

The K. P. memorial services last Sunday afternoon were very beautiful indeed. The address by Chancellor Commander Hutton was especially fine. The graves of Knight Toiman here and Knight Sackett at Plymouth were handsomely decked with flowers and evergreens and at the head of each was laid a lovely tri-angle floral offering. Knights were present from both Plymouth and Salem lodges.

Messrs Rorabacher and Callahan the new proprietors of the South Lyon Excelsior, which has just absorbed the Pickett, made their initial bow last week. The Excelsior is now a regular six column quarto and if kept up to the standard of the initial number will be the best paper that village ever had and deserving of a liberal support. No village of less than 4,000 population can support more than one paper, unless it be at a county seat, and the South Lyon publishers at last were wise enough to concede it.

The wrecked and ragged ruins of a once beautiful blown up Victor bicycle might have been seen as it was being dragged through the grass, along the back streets of our village Sunday evening, as it slowly wended its way towards the government buildings.
John Pinkerton will tell you all about it. How he thought he had the animal cunningly broke and then how the pesky critter ran away with him, climbing over several fences; through two wood sheds; mounting half way up a tree and then only stopping when there was nothing left of the wheel but John.

It was no common, wood-chuck that Alex. Daily plowed out of Will Taft's field Monday. His chuck-ship, though small, had an unusual amount of grit.
His first thoughts were that the horses were to blame for his being so unceremoniously disturbed and forthwith he made an attack upon the team. Alex.
rushed to the rescue and the animal in turn attacked him. In the meantime the horses had become frightened and started across the fields. The chuck's boldness was too much for Alex. and he also fled for his life in an opposite direction, more scared than the team, which was now fast getting out of sight in the western horizon. How it all terminated we are not informed but when last seen both the team and Alex were on the run and the wood-chuck was the sole survivor and proprietor of the ground.

Some very elaborate and exceedingly pretty commencement programs were issued from this office this week for the Northville High school class of '93.
The designs were entirely original and gotten up expressly for this class.
Embossed on the first cover is two books, an ink bottle and a pen staff.
Printed in gold on the ink stand is "93" while on the back of the books is the class motto, "Vorwärts, Aufwärts!" also in gold. In the upper right hand corner is the class flower, sweet peas. Below them is the class invitation. The first inside leaf contains the names of the graduates, while the next contains the program. The whole is tied with two silk cords, pink and blue, representing the class colors.
The announcement is very tastily made and the card is one the class may well, and they do, feel proud of, for it certainly is a credit to themselves as well as the printer.

for the grounds here, $5 per game, is also seemingly rather high to charge the boys.

THE NEWS OF THE STATE TOLD VERY BRIEFLY.

A Wronged Girl Murders Her Faithless Lover and Then Shoots Herself—Four Fatal Bullets Do the Work.

Murder and Suicide.
The most awful tragedy in the history of Grand Rapids was the murder of William Gray and the suicide of Dora Velzy in the room of the former on Crescent avenue near Canal street.

Gray's former home was in Bay City and for the past two years he has been in the employ of O'Brien Bros., undertakers of Grand Rapids. He was a bright young man about 23 years of age. At his boarding house was a very prepossessing domestic named Dora Velzy, aged 22 years, a daughter of a respectable farmer at Allendale. It was not very long before the young people became very intimate and Miss Velzy became passionately devoted to Gray and was often at his rooms. A few weeks ago Gray met another young lady, Anna Hetherington and began paying her considerable attention. Miss Velzy upbraided him for his faithlessness and her jealousy made things so uncomfortable for Gray that he decided to go west. He therefore resigned from his position with O'Brien Bros., and made preparations to leave, but sent for Miss Velzy for a last interview.

Just what took place at this meeting cannot be known, in fact the tragedy was not discovered until the couple had been missing two days, when the door was forced the sight which was presented was simply horrible. Upon the bed as if sleeping, lay Gray's body dressed but with a pool of blood on the pillow and bed underneath him. Near the head on the floor with scarcely any clothing on her body lay Miss Velzy. An ugly shot of 22-caliber ball dog revolver with four empty chambers. An examination showed that Gray had been shot through the right temple while sleeping and although death must have resulted instantly, another bullet was sent through his heart. Everything pointed to the girl as the one who fired the shots and after this deed she had placed the revolver under her chin and fired up, but the bullet came out near the bridge of her nose without killing her. She then placed the muzzle to her right temple and fired again and death came at once.

Macabees Twelfth Anniversary.

The Knights of Macabees entered upon the 12th year of their organization with a celebration in Detroit. The great officers of the order and Detroit division No. 4 listened to a sermon on "Fraternity" in the Church of Our Father by Rev. Lee S. McCollister. Their Maj. N. S. Boynton, of Port Huron, great record keeper of the Michigan Macabees, made an address, reviewing the progress of the order since it was established in Michigan in 1887. After the exercises the procession formed and marched to Elmwood cemetery where the graves of deceased members were decorated. Great Commander Aitkin, of Flint; Past Supreme Commander W. S. Linton, of Saginaw; Great Record Keeper N. S. Boynton, of Port Huron headed the parade. There were 500 knights in the column. It was commanded by Adj. Gen. A. E. Stanley, chief marshal, and the following aides: Col. John Evesson; Gen. C. G. White, Maj. P. W. Hall, J. D. Long and Sir Knight Tannenholz. An entertainment was given the following evening in the hall of the order. The Macabees throughout the state also quite generally celebrated the 12th anniversary by decorating the graves of their departed friends.

A Young Mother's Suicide.

Mrs. Isaac Potter, aged 25, wife of a West Bay City carpenter, committed suicide by cutting her throat with a razor. Her husband was sitting at a short distance from the room at the time and but a few moments before had been talking to her. The woman gave birth to a child a week before and had been deranged since that time, refusing to have anything to do with her child and giving no sign that she intended to take her life. She had been married about two years.

Slept on the Track.

John Fitch, who lives in South Ionia, went on a train to Grand Rapids and returned in the evening intoxicated, and instead of going home started down the D. & G. H. & M. track. Becoming tired he sank down on the track and fell asleep. When the midnight train came along he attempted to get out of the way, but went under the wheels almost instantly. Both legs and one arm were taken off and he was pulled out from under the engine dead.

Drowning at Grand Rapids.

Engene, 13-year-old son of Chas. Verghe, was drowned at Monroe while bathing in the River Raisin at Waterloo dam. Two companions were unable to assist him.

Mrs. Edward Marcholl, wife of a German teamster, of Ionia, was terribly burned. Her clothes caught fire from the stove and before the flames could be extinguished her clothes were nearly burned from her body. Her throat, shoulders, arms and body were terribly burned and it is doubtful if she can recover.

The remains of Robert Bender, who left Menominee for Chicago with $250 on his person, have been sent to Menominee by the authorities at Washburn, Wis. There is a bullet hole in the head, and in the absence of other information, it is supposed that Bender was murdered.

The proposed investigation into the lynching of O'Sullivan at Corunna, ordered by Gov. Rich, will go no further. The sheriff has been told by Shawanaw officials that they will allow no bills contracted for that purpose, and the state can appropriate no money to be thus used, the matter will drop.

THE EUROPEAN POWERS WANT TO GET A HAND

In the Control of the Nicaraguan Canal, a Thing Which the Projectors Will Seek to Avoid—Other News.

City of Mexico. The Mexican Financialer says: "The downfall of the Sacasa government in Nicaragua appears to have behind it an intrigue of foreign interests, hostile to the continuance of American control in the Nicaraguan ship canal, an enterprise purely American in its inception, and sustained entirely by American capital. When the canal was begun little attention was paid to it, but now that it is likely to be successful European governments wish to have a voice in its control. But before they secure a share in that control or a predominance therein they will have to fight for it, for the United States government cannot permit Europe to have any management in a waterway designed primarily for the use of the nations of this hemisphere, and it is not for the interest of Mexico that the revolutionists in Nicaragua should intrigue against a continental policy in Nicaragua." All nations may use the canal when it is completed, but that is a very different matter from allowing European governments to place their agents in the board of administration of the canal.

"The Democratic party now in power in the United States government is committed by its platform principles to giving government aid to the canal for the purpose of national defense and of the promotion of commerce between the states. Minister Guzman, who represented the late government of President Sacasa at Washington favors an American protectorate in Nicaragua, but it seems to us that the moral influence of the United States in Nicaragua is sufficient to maintain the status quo. Americans should not mix themselves up in the stormy politics of Central America, but they will not permit the successful revolutionists in Nicaragua to adopt a policy hostile not only to American but Mexican interests."

If the new government in Nicaragua cancels the canal company's concession there will be serious trouble and Sacasa may return to power.

Battleship Massachusetts Launched.

The big battleship Massachusetts was successfully launched from the shipyard of the Cramps at Philadelphia in the presence of Secretary of the Navy Herbert, a number of distinguished naval and army officers, and a multitude of 15,000. Miss Leah Herbert, daughter of the head of the Naval Department, christened the vessel.

The Massachusetts is built of steel. The hull is protected by belts of heavy armor seven feet wide, three of which are above water. This protection runs along both sides of the vessel for a distance of 148 feet amidships, at the extremities of which the armor turns in toward the center line at an angle of 45 degrees for a longitudinal distance of 24 feet, affording a total broadside protection of 196 feet and passing around and supporting the armor for the thirteen-inch gun turret. On top of this side armor is placed a steel deck, 2 1/2 inches thick, under which are the magazines and machinery. Above this belt of side armor and extending from redoubt to redoubt, the sides are 5 inches thick, with a backing of ten feet of coal. The vessel is cut up forward beneath the waterline, making a powerful ram bow.

U. S. Crop Report.

The government crop report based on returns to the department of agriculture, makes the acreage of winter wheat as compared with that of last year $7.8, being a reduction of 12.2 points. A vast amount of the acreage sown has been plowed up and put to other crops. The condition of winter wheat has improved but slightly since the last report, being 25.5 against 25.3 for the month of May, the percentages for the principal states being respectively: Ohio, 93; Michigan, 72; Indiana, 81; Illinois, 67; Missouri, 74; Kansas, 47. The condition of spring wheat presents an average for the entire country of 86.4. The average percentage of acreage for both spring and winter wheat for the whole country is 89.8 and the condition for same 78.8. The percentage of the acreage of oats as compared with last year is 100.7 and the condition 88.9 for June 1 as against 88.5 for the same month in 1892. Returns show the percentage of the acreage of rye as compared with 1892 to be 94.3, while the reports of condition make the general average 84.6, the lowest for years. Barley acreage as compared with last year shows a decrease of 5.1 points, or 94.9. The condition of this crop is 88.4 against 92.1 in June of last year.

Congress of Charities, Etc.

A rather large audience greeted the opening of the International Congress of Charities, Correction and Philanthropy in the Art Institute, Chicago. Many prominent people were present, representing very nearly every state in the union and many foreign countries. Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mr. C. C. Bonney opened the meeting followed by an address on ex-President Hayes, by F. H. Wines. Attorac Aderskas, the Russian representative, spoke briefly, after which addresses were given by Messrs. Marschal, of Paris, France; Prosper N. Geert, of Antwerp; Edward Booser-Jegher, Switzerland; Lieut. Col. Koster, London, Eng.; Miss Spence, of Australia; Mr. Kazarin, of Russia. These were followed by an address by Prof. Peabody, of Harvard University.

Electrocuted for a Double Murder.

John L. Osmond was electrocuted in the presence of the usual number of witnesses. John L. Osmond was convicted of the murder of his wife Mary and his cousin, John C. Burchell. He and his wife had lived in Burchell's apartments, New York City. He became jealous of his cousin, and after repeated quarrels left the house, and Mrs. Osmond began proceedings for a divorce. He went to the flat on October 3, 1891, and killed the woman and her admirer.

Mrs. Satelli will take an extensive trip to the Pacific coast.

A GREAT CONFLAGRATION.

Fargo, N. D., Visited by a $3,500,000 Fire—5,000 People Homeless.

The city of Fargo, N. D., was the scene of a conflagration which destroyed over 400 buildings. A heavy wind was blowing and the fire spread rapidly in spite of all the work of the fire department. The district burned by the fire comprises the best part of Fargo. The principal business street of the city lies within the burned district, and the finest business blocks are in ashes. In that part of the city there are also many residences, and these went down before the flames. Most of the buildings in that part of the city are frame structures, and these offered small resistance to the rush of flames sent against them by the gale that was blowing at the rate of 30 miles an hour. At one time it was feared that the fire would pass the turner of the river, but fortunately it failed to do so. Moorhead, Minn., people threw open their hotels and houses for the 3,000 people who have been suddenly made homeless. The loss is at least $3,500,000. The bridge between Moorhead and Fargo burned, and all telegraphic communication was cut off. Assistance was received at the scene from Grand Forks.

Michigan Crop Report.

The average condition of wheat in each section, and the state, June 1, was as follows: Southern counties, 77 per cent; central, 79 per cent; northern, 86 per cent, and state, 77 1/2 per cent, comparison being with vitality and growth of average years. The condition June 1, has been reported lower in the southern counties only twice in eight years, in 1888 when it was 62, and in 1890 when it was 76. The average condition in the state, June 1, has been lower but once in eight years, in 1888, when it was 63. In the southern counties where 83 per cent of the crop is grown and in the state, there was a gain of four points during May. In the central counties there was no gain, and in the northern counties a gain of three points. Owing to unfavorable weather corn was not nearly as planted June 1, but it was believed about the usual area would be planted. The area seeded to oats is 93 per cent, and of barley 83 per cent of the area in average years. In condition the former crop is 86 per cent, and the latter 83 per cent of condition in average years. Meadows and pastures, and clover sowed this year are, in condition, three per cent below a full average. Apples in the southern counties are now estimated at 55 per cent, in the central at 65 per cent, and in the state at 61 per cent of an average crop. The crop it is believed will be mainly of an early or early varieties. Peaches promise above 90 per cent of an average crop. The farm statistics of nearly 700 townships, collected by supervisors, have been received at the office of secretary of state. The footings of the sheep and wool columns indicate that the number of sheep now on hand in the southern counties is about 2 1/2 per cent less than sheared in 1892. There has been an increase in the central and northern counties nearly equaling in the aggregate the loss in the southern counties.

22 PENSION CLERKS KILLED BY FALLING WALLS.

Of Ford's Theater, Washington, in Which They Were Employed—The Building Had Been Condemned Repeatedly.

Over a Score Killed—Many Injured.
The floors of the old Ford's Theatre building on Tenth street, Washington, D. C., occupied by the records and pension division of the surgeon-general's office, fell in as though they had been the cards of a card house. On each floor there were scores of men at work. Without warning they were carried down as by an awful cataract. The floor was made up of iron girders, heavily enough to support the walls but heavy enough to stamp out human lives of bricks that were held together by plaster long since dried out of wooden beams that had been in place too long. There was no escape from such a flood. There were over 400 men in the building.

The following is the list of dead thus far reported, with the names of the states from which they were appointed. It contains 22 names, two of whom are from Michigan.

GEORGE G. ALLEN, Pennsylvania.
CARROLL H. ANDERSON, Virginia.
L. W. BOODY, New York.
SAMUEL B. BAINE, Pennsylvania.
JOHN BRIDGES, District of Columbia.

JOSEPH B. GAGE, Michigan.
JOHN H. GIBSON, Missouri.
J. M. JARVIS, Michigan.
J. BOY JONES, West Va.
J. L. JONES, New York.
E. W. O. KASPER, New York.
R. E. MILLER, New York.
HOWARD S. MILLER, Ill.
R. A. MULLER, Wisconsin.
F. C. SULL, Kansas.
WILLIAM SCHUBERT, Maryland.

M. T. MULLEN, Louisiana.
J. F. CAPLES, South Carolina.
EDWARD S. WOOD, New Virginia.
A. M. GERRAT, New Jersey.

Words cannot picture the awfulness of the accident. The imagination stands back and fails to give any idea of the scene. Its horrors will never be fully told. Its suddenness was almost the chief horror. Other cities have felt the visitations of awful calamities. They have been swept by fire and deluged by flood, and plagues have decimated their communities. In the national capital of the proudest nation of the earth there has been a catastrophe unparalleled in the annals of its history, and in every mind there is a terrible conviction that its genesis is to be found in the criminal negligence of a government too parsimonious to provide for the safety of its loyal servants by erecting buildings proper for their accommodation.

The news that the building had fallen spread with lightning-like rapidity, and soon Tenth street and adjacent thoroughfares were crowded with people. Within an hour the news was known all over Washington, and hundreds of anxious relatives and friends streamed to the vicinity. A general alarm was turned in a few minutes after the crash, and then all the ambulances in the city were summoned. As quickly as possible the police and firemen formed a reserve brigade, and ready hands assisted them to take out the killed and wounded. In less than an hour about 25 had been taken out, and every few moments thereafter some still form would be borne on a stretcher from the building. Police and army ambulances, cabs, carriages and vehicles of every description were pressed into service for carrying away the dead and injured, and scores of volunteers offered their services for this work.

Both the military and naval authorities took prompt action. General Schofield ordered two troops of cavalry from Fort Meyer, just across the river, and two companies of infantry from the arsenal to the scene of the disaster. The secretary of the navy ordered out all the navy medical officers stationed here and also opened the naval hospital to receive the injured. The commandant at the navy yard was ordered to render all assistance in his power.

None of those who escaped injury could tell which of the floors first gave way. For the occupants of each floor was but one crash heard, and instantly the whole building was filled with blinding lime dust. The entire back part of the building containing more than half of the floor space remained intact. There were many very narrow escapes from death. A number of clerks whose desks rested directly upon the line where the floors broke away saved themselves, while the desks at which they sat were precipitated down the awful chasm. Others who were walking across the room heard an ominous sound and stopped just at the very threshold of death.

The cause of the accident was the faulty construction of an underpinning which was being placed under the walls to allow an excavation for an independent electric light plant in the basement. The building had been condemned repeatedly and Congress had thought it so unsafe that the medical museum was removed from the building, but the lives of clerks was not of so much value.

Joseph B. Gage, of Potomac, who was killed, was a $120 clerk in the records and pension division. He was originally from Ohio and served during the war in the Tenth Ohio Independent battery. Light artillery from 1862 to 1865. He was honorably appointed in the census office, on recommendation of ex-Congressman Frank W. Wheeler, July 7, 1880. On the 22d of October of the same year he was transferred to the records and pension division, where he remained until he was slain at the post of duty. He was about 30 years old and had acquired many friends in Washington. Mr. Gage was buried at Arlington cemetery.

John Bassett, another of the slain, was a private in Company A, of the Fourth Michigan, but was appointed from another state. He leaves a widow and one child.

The following Michigan men were among those employed in the building: D. J. Streibel, Frank Van Vranken, J. M. Jarvis, H. H. Kropf, H. Workman, J. E. Nichols, Frank H. Hall, L. B. Rupp and M. A. Rawson.

EULALIA AT THE FAIR.

The Royal Spaniard Amazed and Delighted at the Display.

Princess Maria Eulalia, infant of Spain, spent one day and evening at the World's Fair. The great show was at its best and bright, warm June sunshines made the glistening white palaces, the temples of art and science seem a veritable enchantment. Flags of every nation were waving, their gorgeous colors in the bright sunlight, and thousands of gay streamers floated joyously in the gentle breeze. In the blue waters of the lagoons the splash of the oars of the Venetian gondolas in holiday attire could be heard, and to complete the attraction the air was filled with charming music from a score of bands scattered about the grounds. The board of admission estimates that there were 100,000 people on the grounds when the princess arrived.

The procession of carriages bearing the royal party was preceded by a mounted platoon of police, the gorgeous Chicago Hussars acted as escort and the sprightly, fine looking Michigan Military Academy cadets brought up the rear. All through the Midway Plaisance, the cosmopolitan side show, the different nationalities did homage to the princess according to their native costume and with their varied, fantastic costumes and strange music made a good feature of the show. The procession passed the Woman's building, the Festival Hall, Horticultural, Transportation, Electricity and Mining buildings and stopped at the Administration building. President Palmer received the guests and escorted them to the breakfast room. A mandolin orchestra discoursed music during the repast. A drive over other portions of the grounds followed.

In the evening the pyrotechnical display was simply grand and concluded with a set portrait of Eulalia 60x80 feet in size, constructed of over 2,000 pieces of changeable blue. The people cheered and the lights gave every evidence of being delighted.

International Typographical Union.

The forty-first annual convention of the International Typographical Union held in Chicago. There were fully 300 delegates present. President H. B. Prescott called the meeting to order. Mayor Carter H. Harrison made an address of welcome. Secretary-Treasurer Vines' report showed a prosperous financial condition. The year's receipts were $127,704 and including the balance of 1892 a total fund of $146,549 was the result. The outgo was $120,984, leaving a balance of $25,564. Out of a total fund of $84,559 the executive council used $48,467, leaving a balance of $36,092.

The trustees of the Childs-Drexel Home for Union Printers at Colorado Springs in the report of their various committees give an exhaustive showing of the good work done. The total funds for the year including the 1892 balance were $11,954.82 and the expenditures $24,223.38, leaving a balance of $17,731.44. During the first year 51 inmates were admitted, 30 of whom were consumptives. Ten deaths from this class and one from pneumonia have occurred.

The Benton Harbor & Southern Railroad Co. has filed articles of association with the secretary of state of Indiana. The capital stock is $30,000. The officers are: President, Milton Mercer; secretary, Aaron Zook; treasurer, Harvey V. Mercer. The proposed line will be built from Nappanee, Ind., to a point on the state line in Berrien county, a distance of 30 miles, and will later on undoubtedly be extended to Benton Harbor.

IF MOTHER WOULD LISTEN.

If mother would listen to me, dears, She would freshen the faded gown, And sometimes a trip to town, And it would be all for the children. The fun and the cheer and the play; With the patient droop of a tired mouth, And the "Mother has had her day."

Time, mother has had her day, dears, When you were her babies thro', And she stepped about the farm and the house As busy as ever a bee.

And so your turn has come, dears, Her hair is growing white, And her eyes are gaining the far-away look, Thus peers her old the night.

One of these days in the morning Mother will not be here, She will have flown into silence, The mother so true and dear.

And if mother would listen to me, dears, She'd lay her a gown of silk, With buttons of royal velvet, And fuffies as white as milk, And she'd let you do the trotting, While she sat still in her chair, That mother should have it hard all through, It strikes me isn't fair.

MRS. GRANIT'S TROUBLE.

Hers was such a common trouble, so insignificant to relate, and had such a strong flavor of the ridiculous, that no one thought of the tragic element it possessed. She was growing stout. She had always been pretty plump, but in the fifteen years which had elapsed since her wedding day she had gained flesh so steadily yet so imperceptibly that she had never realized her increasing weight. She might never have done so but for the chance remark of a careless friend, who told her that another acquaintance, wishing to distinguish her from her sister-in-law, had spoken of her as "the stout Mrs. Granit."

"What, me?" she had exclaimed, and her friend had remarked smilingly: "Well, you are a little stout, you know." The poor woman made no answer, but when she reached home she went straight to her room and studied herself in the long mirror. Yes, there was no doubt of it, she had grown stout.

From that day she began to be sensitive about her weight, and consequently she frequently heard (or thought she did) slighting remarks about it. One evening her husband told her that it was harder to embrace her than it had been ten years before, and her little boy added: "Yes, and mamma's chair is getting so small for her, too," meaning the little rocker her husband had given her on her first married birthday. Somehow the remark stung her, and for the first time in his life the child was told "not to talk so much."

Both husband and child were surprised, for how could they know how she suffered every time her growing size was mentioned? Not even the pang which she, in common with all her sex, had felt when she first heard herself spoken of as "stout," had been half so sharp as this latter one. Another time her least little girl, the baby, hearing her aunt and grandma discuss the subject in her mother's absence, asked her: "Is you goin' to be big like Aunt Sukey (the colored washerwoman), mamma?" She shed bitter tears over that innocent question, and when her dressmaker, who had fitted her ever since she had worn long dresses, told her that "she wasn't as easy to fit as she used to be," something very much like despair entered her soul.

She was full of life, strong, well and only 36, yet she felt herself relegated to the ranks of the "frumps" every time she thought of herself as stout. And there was no hope for her of course; her grandmother had died at the age of 80 years, but she had been an unrelenting burden to herself for the last twenty years of her life. To be sure her form was still good, her skin fresh and sweet, her hair abundant and glossy; and her hands and feet slender; but then all these charms would go, of course, and she would grow red-faced and clumsy.

her, but not because she was stout. "What on earth is the matter with that pretty Mrs. Granit?" they asked, and no one knew. But the poor lady numbered among her friends one good soul, who knew by sad, if opposite experience—she was painfully thin—how severely it was possible to suffer because of a fancied personal defect, and she intuitively divined the cause of the sadness which echoed in Mrs. Granit's voice and shone in her eyes. And so, being one of those patient saints, who, under a plain exterior carry angelic hearts and go about the world doing all the old deeds of kindness every one else leaves undone, and for which there is no reward—but virtue's own—she set herself to work to make Mrs. Granit happy. And "how" way she accomplished her kind intention was as follows:

First she called upon her friend and asked her to sing at a musicale to be given at her house, and pressed her request on the grounds that everyone else would be sure to sing something sad or mournful, and "no body I know sings merry ballads as well as you do, my dear." And besides, she added, as with an afterthought, "you have such a lovely presence that it will be a rest to the audience just to look at you after the numerous people all ranging from thin to scrawny who will take part first." Mrs. Granit felt sure she only said it out of kindness, but her heart softened and she consented to sing, and even ordered a new dress for the occasion. She had not worn an evening dress for so long that her bare arms and neck felt strange, but still it gave her the feeling of satisfaction which nothing but a handsome outfit can produce in the heart of a woman, and when her number was announced she found to her joy that music still gave her the power to forget. She had meant to go home early, but somehow she enjoyed herself so much that it was 12 o'clock before her husband, whom her great surprise she had seen seated in front of her when she sang, stood in the hall waiting for her. "I didn't know you were coming to-night," she had said with her old-time pretty manner, as they went upstairs, together. "I thought you said you were going to the play."

"So I was," he answered, "but you looked so lovely when you passed me on the way to the carriage, that I thought I would rather see you after all." It was easy to be courteous and gallant to a wife who looked so charming as she did just then, with that lovely, girlish blush on her cheeks, and the delighted, half-timid smile which his compliment had brought forth playing around her mouth and making the pretty dimples which had lain concealed so long. The happy smile still lingered while she donned her wraps, and draped the dainty white lace scarf around her head and throat (it was many a day since she had arranged it so carefully) and many of the other ladies cast admiring glances toward her, for, contrary to the general idea, women do admire each other frequently. Presently one of them ventured to tell her how handsome she was, looking and again she blushed like the maiden she was at heart, and her eyes filled with happy tears as she murmured something about being "so stout."

"You stout!" exclaimed the other with a merry laugh, "why, I'd give anything to be as plump as you are." And as the "common fatty," as she had often bitterly called herself, went down the stairs, she thought of another woman who had that evening told her she was "only stout enough to be dignified," and wondered if she was really as bad-looking as she had supposed.

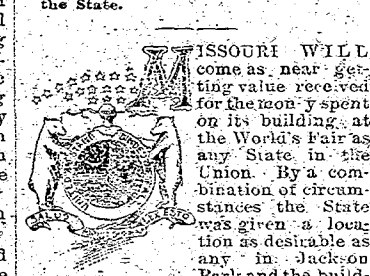

"Will you come again next week," asked the little missionary as she bade her friend good night, and even she was surprised at the ready answer of "Yes, indeed dear, as often as you like."

That night the happy woman stood so long in front of her tall mirror that her husband laughingly inquired if she contemplated admiring herself all night, and when he woke the next morning she was there again. With a mingled sigh and smile he turned away, but presently she called him, with a tone he had not heard for so long that it startled him, and, razor in hand, he went to her dressing-room door. "John," she said, timidly, coming up to him, with a shoe in one hand and a button-hook in the other, "I've been very cross this last year or two, haven't I?" "Well, you haven't been like yourself, dear," he answered, "why is it?" "Well, do you know," she murmured, blushing and hesitating, "I thought I was getting so fat and ugly that—that you wouldn't love me?" she finished, with her head on his shoulder. "Fanny," he said softly, using the love-name he had given her during their courting days, "don't you know you never were so pretty as you are now. Why, only the other day Brown (the artist, you know), was telling me he wished he could have you for a model. And, do you know, when I saw you looking at yourself so long, I was afraid you'd got tired of having only one man to admire you, and had concluded to go on the stage." "Why, you're a bigger goose than me," she laughed, giving him a kiss and a little push, "go finish your shaving." Ten minutes later she was ransacking an old trunk in search of a morning gown he had always liked, and in half an hour she was running down stairs, singing as she went. "How pretty you are, mamma," said all the children at once, and her cup of happiness ran over. And to this day she declares that the kindest act the little missionary ever did was the one which nobody but herself ever knew anything about—Ethel Maude Colson, in the Inter Ocean.

MISSOURI AT THE FAIR

DESCRIPTION OF THE BIG STATE BUILDING.

Located on One of the Most Desirable Spots in Jackson Park—The Governor's Private Room—The Zinc Industry of the State.

MISSOURI WILL come as near getting value received for the money spent on its building at any State Fair as any State in the Union. By a combination of circumstances the State was given a location as desirable as any in Jackson Park and the building now finished is creditable.

The building is the third on the street of States from the Fifty-seventh Street or South Park entrance to the Fair grounds. It looks out upon the great art gallery and the reproduction of old Fort Marion at St. Augustine, which is Florida's State building, is in its shadow. The gum and spruce building of Louisiana, as inflammable as a box of matches, is next door to it, and the State buildings of Minnesota, North Dakota, Texas and Arkansas are within a stone's throw.

The prettiest room in the building is the gold room, for Gov. Stone's private use. The room is so small the governor will have to open the windows when he wants to stretch, but there is $10 worth of hand hammered gold on the walls nevertheless. The ceiling and walls are of gold picked out in designs of silver and green.

The elliptical dome of the building is 40 feet long and 30 wide. At its apex the tinting is sky-blue and there are a few little gold stars twinkling there to get the credit for the rays of light, which are really furnished by concealed electric globes. The border is of terra cotta and gold.

There is a balcony or promenade at the front of the building which will be completely shaded from the afternoon sun. It is 50 feet long and 22 feet wide and has a floor of Florentine mosaic. The rotunda of the Missouri Building is one of its attractive features. The floor is of Florentine mosaic with a plain line in the center, and the ceiling is supported by ten columns with caps and marble bases. The rotunda is elliptical like the dome, and all the rooms on the first floor open into it as all the rooms on the second open into the auditorium.

This State is first in the Union in the production of zinc and second in that of lead; consequently the ores of these metals are the feature. They are shown most prominently in a pyramid structure containing about four tons of these ores, one chunk of which alone weighing 6,500 pounds. Missouri gave to the arts in 1892 120,000 tons of zinc and 32,000 tons of lead, a feat of which she is proud. Of specimens of small size there are from 7,000 to 10,000, most of which belong to the State; others are mainly loans, although a few individual exhibitors are represented. The State appropriated $150,000 for this exhibit.

ANTI-CRINOLINE LEAGUE.

Good Work Accomplished By John Strange Winter, the Author. John Strange Winter (Mrs. Stannard), who is at the head of the "No Crinoline" league in England, states that over 17,000 pledges have been secured from women who say they will not accept the crinoline under any circumstances. The members of the league are mainly ladies of position and include a great number of the best-dressed women in Europe. The Princess of Wales lost no time in emphatically refusing to countenance the proposed revival of crinolines, and expressly ordered that all her new dresses should be made without any increase of skirt width whatever. It is highly improbable that any of the British Princesses will sanction any marked departure from her royal high example.

"Unhappily," how, says Mrs. Stannard, "it is the effort to reintroduce the crinoline will not JOHN STRANGE WINTER (MRS. STANNARD) be abandoned because of royal disapproval, nor even of general destitution. Fashion-makers do not make feminine taste a factor in their calculations—why should they? They speculate on the probability of being able to force any fashion into vogue—and with good reason, for women are mainly guided by what the ladies' papers and certain modistes say is to be 'the thing,' and the fashion-makers control these founts of information! Although exceedingly bad for general trade, the crinoline would be exceedingly good for particular branches—many fortunes were made from it before—and, therefore, if it can anyhow be compassed we may be sure that the fashion will be forced on us again. A general and uncompromising refusal by women to accept it would defeat the attempt—nothing else will!"

Auctioneers' Ways. The ways of auctioneers in different parts of the world vary greatly. In England and America the seller bears the expense of the sale, but in France the purchaser pays the cost, 5 per cent being added to the price he pays. In Holland it is still worse, the buyer being required to pay 10 per cent additional for the expense of the sale.

SHE RAISED THE FLAG.

Mrs. Schuyler Hamilton, Representative of an Historic Family. Amid cloud and mist, Old Glory was recently hoisted to welcome the coming and speed the parting guests of the republic. Not a boy in the country but can tell with enthusiasm of John Paul Jones and the terror inspired by this old flag, with its coiling serpent and its warning words, "Don't Tread on Me!" The flag was made by the women of Philadelphia, under the supervision of Gen. Washington and Gen. Capt. John Brown.

The makers presented it to John Paul Jones, commanding the Bonhomme Richard. Then this daring tar went privatering, and near the English coast fell in with the British warship Serapis. A battle followed, the flag was shot away and fell into the sea. Lieut. James Bayard Stafford jumped overboard, recovered it, and nailed it to the mast. In appreciation of his gallant conduct Congress presented him with the flag, and it has remained in his family ever since. When the flag was hoisted, the first pull of the halyards was given by Mrs. Stafford, a member of this same family.

The flagpole was erected on a bluff in front of the twin lighthouses on the Navesink Highlands. Mr. John Winfield Scott, master of ceremonies, made a brief speech and was followed by Mr. McLowell. A veteran bugler, with only one arm, gave the signal "salute," and twenty-one guns from the Navesink fort greeted Old Glory as it rose in the air. This old flag was too old and too precious to be left to the mercies of the elements so a duplicate was made and hoisted in its place. Mrs. Adlai Stevenson was to have raised this flag, but in her enforced absence Mrs. Schuyler Hamilton, Honorable Regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, willingly performed the duty. This selection of the representative of two historic families was most appropriate.

A Famous Artist.

It is a little difficult to say whether England or America is best entitled to claim George H. Boughton. Although born in England, he was brought to this country at the age of 3. In Albany, where his parents resided, he began the study of art without masters, opening his first studio in 1836. He sold one of his earliest works to the American Art Union in 1837, and on the proceeds went to London for the purpose of observation and improvement. He returned to Albany in a few months, but subsequently went to New York. In 1859 he went to Paris, studying and copying until he removed in 1861 to London, where he has since resided. He has frequently exhibited at the National Academy in New York. He was made an academician in 1871 and in 1879 an associate academician of the Royal Academy of London. Mr. Boughton's early life having been passed in this country, he is more popular among English connoisseurs, and his works meet with ready sale. His scenes of the early history of New England and his pictures of Breton peasant life of the present day are widely known.

Amusements in the House of Commons. "Games" of every kind are either rigidly or passively forbidden in the House of Commons. The place is regulated by a most assiduous code of ethics. The theory of the Legislature is legislation. Everyone who enters Parliament is supposed to have only one object at heart—work. So amusement has never entered into the schedule of the M. P.'s life. An attempt was made some time ago to have a billiard table set up in one of the spare rooms at the House, but the proposer was disdainfully crushed by the Speaker. Card playing, even in the form of a game of innocent three-penny whist, is forbidden under all kinds of lawful penalties to be drawn out of the plenary armory of the Speaker. Chess also is suffered and this is "winked at" rather than permitted. Only a certain number of newspapers are allowed, and these are subject to the approval of the Sergeant-at-Arms, who, indeed, in this, as in other more serious matters, exercises a sovereign censorship.

A Turkish Romance.

A romantic affair has happened in the Turkish army. A short time ago the discovery was made, quite accidentally in Pristina, that a young girl named Hanka had been serving for three and a half years under her brother's name, Ali Redschek, in the Fifteenth Regiment there, and had distinguished herself by specially good conduct. The Sultan was informed of the unheard-of case of a woman honoring with men for years unweiled. When he learned that the young girl had taken this daring step in order to free her brother, who was the only support of his mother, from military service, he bestowed the Cheftakir Order of the Third Class on her, and has given her a life pension of five Turkish pounds a month. She was, of course, sent home at once, and her brother remained free from serving.

A Wealthy Beggar.

On his death-bed, a Greek beggar of Caracai had his poor wife promise that she would bury him in the tattered old overcoat he then wore. A friend came to see the deceased, and the widow spoke of the beggar's request. They examined the overcoat and it contained in the lining 35,000 francs in bank notes.

Strength of the Niagara Falls.

One hundred million tons of water pour over Niagara Falls every hour. This is said to represent 16,000,000 horse-power. Some idea of this enormous amount of water may be had by understanding that all the coal produced in the world would not make enough of steam to pump a stream of equal size.

An old count paid his addresses to one of the richest heiresses of Paris. On asking her hand in marriage, he frankly said to her: "Miss Blanche, I am very old, and you are very young; will you do me the honor to become my widow?"

"I consider Mr. Johnson a very nice fellow," said Mrs. Brown to Mrs. Smith the other evening at a party. "I don't," said Mrs. Smith; "why, he's not a bit like men who come to see me." "Well, that is nothing against him," rejoined Mrs. Smith, with acidity.

afternoon. The Sunday school at the

The W. B. H. M. circle spent a very pleasant afternoon with Mrs. Delos Flint on Thursday. About twenty ladies were present and nearly $3.00 was raised for papering two rooms at the parsonage.

Harrison Hammond, aged 80 years,
a highly respected citizen of this town, died at his home near Walled Lake on Sunday. He had been a resident of Novi about 35 years. He had been in very feeble health a long time. The funeral services occurred Tuesday. Rev.
Boydson of Howell officiating.

It was voted at the Baptist church last Sabbath to call Rev. Mr. Brundage of Allen to the pastorate of that church.
The gentleman comes very highly recommended, having been with his present charge five years, and they would be glad to keep him longer. His time of service there does not expire until July, when he will take his place as pastor of this church.

It has been decided by vote of the church to let Plymouth entertain the Wayne Association this year. The invitation of the Novi church was accepted at Northville last fall but as the Plymouth people had intended to extend an invitation and did not do so through some misunderstanding, and the clerk of the Novi church having received a request from Plymouth to put the matter before the church it was done with the above result.

Children's day was appropriately observed at both the churches here, at the Baptist in the morning and the Methodist in the evening. The attendance was large at both, and the exercises and decorations very pretty. The Methodist's had a Columbian service, which was extremely good and well rendered. The church was beautifully decorated with the National colors, and flowers and plants. One of the most pleasing features of the evening was the work of the tiny organist, little Hazel Coates, who is scarcely large enough to reach the pedals, but who played in a manner that would do credit to anyone. At the Baptist church the central decoration was a floral windmill supplemented by flowers and foliage and many fine plants. The baby elocutionist, little Johnnie Power, attracted especial notice and commendation. The finest decoration of the occasion, one which was used at both churches, was a large oblique cross of snowballs, and pauses, the work of Henry Wight.

There are certain women in our pleasant little village who should be taught to talk when it is necessary and to keep quiet and out of other people's business until they are invited to express an opinion by those interested.
The idle gossip that is engaged in by not a few women is fast becoming scandalous. It is getting so that no gentleman may speak to any lady outside his own family except a slander be started by women whose own personal conduct might possibly not be above reproach. Possibly certain persons, unless they discontinue this damnable gossip, may hear something drop and it may drop in open court.
It is good law authority that several women in this village have already said enough to cause them serious trouble, for it makes no difference about the truth of a rumor, whoever repeats a slanderous story becomes liable for slander. A word to the wise should be sufficient.
