A WORLD'S FAIR VISIT.

A Few Points on Things to Be Seen There.

A visit to the world's fair may well be said to be a trip around the world in a miniature way. Here one may see the different races of the entire globe and form good ideas of their way and mode of living. The magnitude of the buildings and the grandness of the exhibits are simply indescribable.

No one should go to the fair with the intention of seeing everything for that is impossible, even could one stay until the close of the exposition. Unless one has plenty of time it will hardly pay them to visit all the state buildings, for nearly the same exhibit will be found in the proper department of each of the main buildings as are found in the state buildings. Many of the state buildings are built simply for the comfort of visitors from their home state. Especially is this true of Michigan where may be found easy chairs, writing tables, toilet rooms, ice water, free check rooms, news rooms, post office and many other conveniences. The old liberty bell which everyone will wish to see is at the south entrance of the Pennsylvania building. The California building is almost entirely filled with a fruit exhibit and is certainly a magnificent sight. The Illinois state building has some splendid special grain exhibits and is well worth a visit.

Of the foreign buildings, the most interesting are perhaps the India, Guatemala and Ceylon. These are right near the U. S. fishery exhibit which, of course, no one will wish to miss.

Of the main buildings they should all be seen if possible, and but little advice can be given how or when to do it. One might just as well go right ahead, hit or miss, with the first one they come to. Those of most interest will probably be "Mechanical Arts," where everything conceivable is being manufactured; "Manufacturers and Liberal Arts," where everything that has been manufactured is on exhibit; "Agricultural," where everything produced from mother earth is shown; "Machinery," where the articles used to till the soil, and gather its products are exhibited; "Transportation," where will be found every thing that the name implies, from a baby cab to a train of palace cars and an ocean steamer.

As to the expense, one may spend little or much. Besides railroad fare, if one is economical $2 per day will see them through. There is no limit to what can be spent, for there are a thousand ways and attractions for money. The necessary expenses would be something like this: Rooms at Rev. H. S. Jenkinson's, engaged in advance, South Chicago, fifty cents per day; street car fare to grounds and return, ten cents; breakfast just outside the grounds, with a lunch put up to take inside with you for dinner, fifty cents; supper outside as you leave the grounds, twenty-five cents more; sundries fifteen cents. Total $2.

About the first peculiar sensation one experiences after being on the grounds for two or three hours is that awfully "tired feeling" inside the shoes. This feeling wears off usually after you have been back home a week or two. While you are at the fair, keep going until you can't stand up, then fall into one of the many thousands of seats or chairs, which are thickly and conveniently scattered about the grounds and buildings, until you are rested enough to start forward again. There are plenty of these seats free of charge at almost every step you take and the report that there were charges for seats or for use of the toilet rooms is false. A charge of five cents is made for the use of soap, towels, etc., but these too may be had free of expense at the state buildings.

Charges are not exorbitant any where on the grounds. The charges for meals, lunches, cream, lemonade, etc., are however just double the price asked outside the grounds, but this is only to be expected.

The larger portion of the visitors take their lunches with them on the grounds, and it is certainly the most satisfactory and cheapest way. No pass-out checks are given, so that when you once enter the grounds it is policy to stay. A regular dinner, a first class one too, on the grounds costs $1; a lunch about fifty cents.

About the Midway Plaisance, of which so much has been said. It is something like a side-show to a circus. Portions of it will prove very interesting to the visitor and he will here find an opportunity to spend as much money as he likes. The "Streets of Cairo," the "Ostrich Farm," the "Diver at work," "Representatives of 46 Nations," and the "Ferris" wheel are well worth the admission. Just outside the ground is Buffalo Bill's wild west show. This is especially a fine attraction and will prove nearly as much interest to the visitor as the whole Midway, providing one cannot see both.

Don't go with expectations of seeing everything that is there. Don't be in a hurry—go slow. Don't wear new shoes. Wear your straw hat, if you don't want to get badly tanned. And above all don't stay at home. Go and see, as P. T. Barnum says, "the greatest show on earth." Don't lay out any plans, or go by any guide. Plunge right into the whirl, hit or miss. It is the only way to do it.

THE PYTHIAN PICNIC.

The Knights Had a Fine Time Yesterday.

The K. P. picnic held in Beaton's grove, down on Plymouth avenue, yesterday was a fine affair, largely attended and hugely enjoyed by all.

The exercises consisted of music by the Plymouth cornet band; solos by Misses May Shier of Salem and Zada Pinkney of Plymouth. Rev. P. Ross Parrish offered prayer and Chancellor Commander Hutton delivered an address of welcome. Mr. Powell, representing the Endowment rank and the Michigan Pythian, delivered a very fine address on the order universal, the Endowment rank, etc. Dinner was served about 1:30 and it was a bountiful one indeed. The elegance of the service and abundance of the food was only surpassed by the wonderful appetites of those present.

Grand Chancellor Curtis who was expected to arrive on the afternoon train failed to put in appearance and to fill in the gap Mrs. Hall kindly consented to favor the audience with another beautiful solo.

There were upwards of 150 present from Plymouth, Salem, Detroit and this place.

A HANDSOME PRESENT.

Past Chancellor Carpenter Gets a Beautiful Jewel.

As a token of appreciation of both the gentleman and worthy Knight, the members of Mystic Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of this place resolved to present Kt. O. F. Carpenter, p. c., with a suitable testimonial of their appreciation of his services and to show the high esteem in which he was held by that body. Upon his removal to Tukhannock, Pa., the Knights procured for him a handsome gold mounted silver past-chancellor's jewel and beautiful book entitled "Pythian Knighthood." The appropriate engravings on the jewel were, across the hanging bar "O. F. Carpenter, p. c." and along the sides of the triangle was, "Presented by Mystic Lodge No. 100, Northville, Mich." The whole was accompanied by a well worded resolution signed by the various members of the Northville lodge.

The purchase was made some time ago, the delay in sending the presents being caused by the tardiness of the engraver. The tokens were expressed to Mr. Carpenter today and over the Sabbath will float before him happy thoughts of the sunny days spent in our village and of the many warm friends left behind.

Crews who were one of the big guns of the Chinese six companies, has arrived in this country with a mission of some sort on his hands. He has vast wealth and untold power at his back among the Chinese, and nothing will be lost by keeping the sharpest kind of an eye on him.

Twelve innocent-looking Texas farmers last week whipped out their revolvers and put a sudden quietus upon a desperate gang of train robbers. This jury of twelve good men and true ought to be hired by the frontier railroad lines to give up farming and travel for a living.

Somebody proposes to adorn tombstones with the pictures of the deceased persons whose last resting-places they mark. There does not seem to be much reason for doing this. The average citizen is too busy to think of anything but getting on with the help of the artist.

Walter Bryant said a year ago that it seemed almost safe to prophesy an outburst of genius in the United States such as has not been seen since the days of Elizabeth. In order to keep him in countenance as a prophet, let us have that outburst of genius while he is visiting us.

The prevalence of crimson-colored in certain fishes found off the New England coast is said by Professor J. Brown Good to be due to the red pigment in seaweeds eaten by the crustaceans, which in turn are eaten by the fish. Proximity to Harvard college has nothing to do with it.

The latest flying machine is the invention of an Oregonian. While not on the lines of any of its predecessors in the field, it is believed to have one trait in common with all of them. This trait is unconquerable and irritating deference to the law that whacked philosopher Newton on the head with an apple.

According to the figures compiled by Carroll D. Wright, superintendent of the United States department of labor, there are now in this country 5,869 building associations with 1,656,456 shareholders and with net assets of $89,923,435. In the list of states encouraging such associations Pennsylvania stands first and Ohio is second.

A French-Soviet official suspected of undue friendliness to the Chinese has been dismissed. He complains that he should have been given a chance to retire, his plan illustrating the difference between a dun and a twiddle-dee. He is as effectually retired as though he himself had had the trouble of performing the operation.

There is no doubt a growing tendency to postpone murder trials too long. A murderer is not a man to be handled with kid gloves but a man under suspicion of murder is presumably innocent until his guilt is proven and should be treated with the consideration of an innocent man under suspicion. It is an outrage upon his personal rights to unnecessarily delay his trial.

It is stated by a prominent Texas cowman that the number of cattle on the ranges has greatly decreased of late, the government report to the contrary notwithstanding; but the number of farmers has also increased on the lands formerly used as cattle ranges in the Southwest, and they all raise cattle, so that the number in existence is pretty apt to be as the government figures it, after all.

William Astor Chandler has pushed into hitherto unexplored regions of Africa and made some important discoveries. It is something anomalous that in this Columbian year the infant continent of America should be thoroughly explored, while the old continent of Africa, which had a flourishing civilization in its Nile valley in the time of Abraham, has regions still that have never been penetrated by civilized man.

For farmer, of all men, should take pains to encourage his boys if he wishes them to adopt the business of farming as they grow to manhood. He better than one engaged in other business, can do this. What is the loss if a small piece of land rented to the boy does not produce quite so much as if the better divided skill of the father were used to direct its cultivation? What is lost in money is more than made up by the value of the experience gained. Let there be competition between an acre worked by father and another worked by the son, and the boy who can excel his father in growing a crop will in so doing acquire more love of farming than he can get in any other way.

Two young men have set out from New York with the intention of walking to San Francisco. If it is glory they want they have taken the wrong tack. Several people have already tramped the route, and the scroll of fame is scanned vainly for their names.

An Idaho man has been sentenced to death for arson. People prone to set incendiary fires for the purpose of collecting insurance on the furniture, if operating in that state, will be simply prudent in having their life insurance policies also in good repair.

COMFORT FOR BUSINESS MEN DISCUSSED BY TALMAG

The Recent Disturbances in the Business World the Subject of an Eloquent and Appropriate Sermon—The Church of God.

BROOKLYN, July 16.—The Rev. Dr. Talmage has selected for his subject to-day, a topic of the greatest interest and timeliness, viz.: "Comfort for Business Men," the text being Isaiah 41: 23. "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem."

What an awful six weeks in commercial circles! The crashing of banks from San Francisco to New York, and from ocean to ocean. The complete uncertainty that has halted all styles of business for three months, and the pressure of the money market for the last year have put all bargain-makers at their wit's end. Some of the best men in the land have faltered; men whose hearts are enlisted in every good work, and whose hands have blessed every good charity. The church of God can afford to extend to them her sympathies, and plead heaven with all availing prayer. The schools such men have established, the churches they have built, the asylums and benevolent institutions they have fostered, will be their eulogy long after their banking institutions are forgotten. Such men can never fail. They have their treasures in banks that never break, and will be millionaires forever. The stringency of the money market, I am glad to say, begins to relax. May the wisdom of Almighty God come down upon our national legislation at their convening next month in Washington, and such results be reached as shall restore confidence, and revive trade, and multiply poor properties. Yet, not only how in the time of financial disaster, but all through life our active business people have a struggle, and I think it will be appropriate and useful for me to talk about their trials and try to offer some curative prescriptions.

In the first place I have to remark that a great many of our business men feel anxious and tempted to come to the end of their small and limited capital in business. It is every where understood that it takes now three or four times as much to do business as it once did. On a few hundred dollars were turned into goods, the merchant would be his own storekeeper, his own salesman, his own bookkeeper, he would manage all the affairs himself, and everything would be net profit. Wonderful changes have come: costly apparatus, extensive advertising, exorbitant store rents, heavy taxation, extensive agencies, are all parts of the demand made upon our commercial men, and when they have found themselves in such circumstances with small capital, they have sometimes been tempted to run against the rocks of moribund financial destruction. This temptation of limited capital has ruined men in two ways. Sometimes they have shrunk down, yielded the battle before the first shot was fired. At the first hard gun they surrendered. Their knees knocked together at the fall of the auctioneer's hammer. They blinched at the financial peril. They did not understand that there is such a thing as being a man of honor, and that there are waterfalls of the counter, and that a man can fight a better battle with the sword than he can with the yardstick. Their souls melted in them because sugars were up when they wanted to sell, and unsalable goods were on the shelf and bad debts in their ledger. The gloom of their countenances overshadowed even their dry goods and groceries. Responding to the limited capital, they blushed them. Others have felt it in different ways. They have said: "There I have been struggling along, I have been trying to be honest all these years. I find it is of no use. Now it is make or break." The small effort that could have stood the stream, is put out beyond the light-house, on the great sea of speculation. Stocks are the dice with which he gambles. He bought for a few dollars vast tracts of western land. Some man at the east, living on a fat homestead, meets this gambler of fortune, and is persuaded to trade off his estate here, for lots in a western city with large avenues and costly palaces, and lake steamers smoking their way across the water, and being down with lightning speed from ever direction. There it is all on paper. The city has never been built, nor the railroads constructed, but everything points that way, and the thing will be done as sure as you live. And that is the process by which many have been tempted, through limitation of capital, into labyrinths from which they could not be extricated. I would not want to chain honest enterprise. I would not want to block up any of the avenues for honest accumulation that open before young men. On the contrary, I would like to see our country quicken our cities are crowded with men resolved to be rich at all hazards. They do not care how money comes. Our best merchants are thrown into competition with men of more means and less conscience, and if an opportunity of accumulation be neglected one hour, some one else picks it up. From January to December the struggle goes on. Night gives no quiet to limbs tossed in restlessness; nor to a brain that will not stop thinking. The dreams are harrowed with imaginary loss, and flushed with imaginary gains. Even the Sabbath cannot escape the tide of anxiety; for this way of worldliness dashes clear over the churches, and leaves its foam on bibles and prayer-books. Men who are living on salaries, or by the culture of the soil, cannot understand the wear and tear of body and mind to which our merchants are subjected, when they do not know but that their livelihood and their business honor are dependent upon the uncertainties of the next hour. This excitement of the brain, this corroding care of the heart, this strain of effort that exhausts the spirit, sends a great many of our best men, in mid-life, into the grave. They find that Wall Street does not end at the East river. It ends at Greenwood! Their life dashed out against money-safes. They go with their store on their backs. They trudge, like camels, sweating from Aleppo to Damascus. They make their life a crucifixion. Standing behind desks and counters, bled from the flesh, air, weighed down by banking cares, they are so many suicides. Oh, I wish I could, I wish I could lift some of these burdens from the heart, that I could give relaxation to some of these worn muscles. It is time for you to begin to take it a little easier. Do your best, and then trust God for the rest. Do not fret. God manages all the affairs of your life, and he manages them for the best. Consider the lilies—they always have robes. Behold the fowls of the air—they always have nests. Take ye no thought, therefore, for your bodies, for ye cannot put on a garment, nor can ye take off a garment, nor can ye add to the shingles, and in the light of the holy Sabbath day resolve that you will give to the winds your fears and your fretfulness, and your distresses. You fretful nothing in the world, and it is very certain you can carry nothing. Having food and raiment be therewith content. The merchant came home from the store. There had been great disaster there. He opened the front door, and said, in the midst of his family circle: "I am ruined. Everything is gone. I am ruined. I wish I had never seen the light of day. The little child threw up its hands, and said: 'Papa, I am here.' The aged grandmother, seated in the room, said: 'Then you have all the promises of God, beside, John. And he burst into tears, and said: 'God forgive me, for I have been so ungrateful. I find I have a great many things left. God forgive me.'"

Again I remark, that many of our business men are tempted to neglect their home duties. How often it is that the store and the home seem to clash, but there ought not to be any collision. The home is the center of the family, the sort of agent to see that they have dry goods and groceries. The work of family government he does not touch. Once or twice in a while he comes to the children up on a Sabbath afternoon when he has a half hour, he does not exactly know what to do with, and in that half hour he disciplines the children, and chides them and corrects their faults, and gives them a great deal of good advice, and then wonders all the rest of the year that his children do not do better when they have the constant guidance of their father's instruction. The family table, which ought to be the place for pleasant discourse and cheerfulness, often becomes the place of perilous opposition. If there be any blessing asked at all, it is set off at both ends, and with the hand on the carving knife, he counts on his fingers, making estimates in the interest of the repast. The work done, the list goes to the head and he starts down the street, and before the family have risen from the table, he has bound up another bundle of goods, and says to the customer: "Anything more I can do for you to-day?" A man has more responsibilities than those which are discharged by putting competent instructors over his children, and giving them drawing-masters, and music-teachers. The physical culture of the child will not be attended to, unless the father looks to it. He must imbibe his joints. He must sometimes lead them out to their sports and games. The parent who cannot forget the severe duties of life sometimes, to fly the kite, and trundle the hoop, and chase the ball, and jump the rope with his children, ought never to have been born. It is a cruel and cruel and unbecomingly solitaneous. If you want to keep your children away from places of sin you can only do it by making your home attractive. You may preach sermons, and advocate reforms, and advocate wickedness, and yet your children will be captivated by the glittering saloon of sin, unless you can make your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them. Oh, gather all charms into your house. If you can afford it, bring books and pictures, and cheerful entertainments to the household. But, above all, teach those children, not by a half-hour, but day after day, and every day teach them that religion is a great gladness, that there is a religion of God about the neck, that it takes no spring from the foot, no brightness from the heart, no sprinkling from the eye, no ring from the finger, but that her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace. I sympathize with the work being done in many of our cities, by which beautiful rooms are set apart by our young men's Christian associations, and I pray God to prosper them in all things. But I tell you there is something better of all that, and that is that we need more happy, consecrated, cheerful, Christian homes in America.

Again, I remark that a great many of our business men are tempted to put the attainment of money above the value of the soul. It is a grand thing to have plenty of money. The more you get of it, the better, if it come honestly and go usefully. For the lack of it, sickness dies without medicine, and hunger finds its coffin in the empty bread tray, and nakedness shivers for lack of clothes and fire. When I hear a man in canting trade against money, a Christian man, I think he has no possible use of it, and he had no interest in it. I come almost to think that the heaven that would be appropriate for him, would be an everlasting poorhouse. While, my friends, we do admit there is such a thing as a lawful use of money—a profitable use of money—let us recognize also the fact, that money cannot satisfy a man's soul, that it cannot glitter in the dark valley, that it cannot pay our fare across the Jordan of death, that it cannot unlock the gates of heaven. There are men in all occupations who seem to act as though they thought of no other business but to get a piece of bread and a mortgage and be made off for a little to heaven, and as though gold would be a lawful tender in that place where it is so common that they make payments out of it. Salvation by Christ is the only salvation. Treasures in heaven are the only incorruptible treasures. Have you ever ciphered out in the rule of loss and gain, the sum: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? How ever fine your apparel, the winds of death will scatter it like rags. Home spun and a threadbare coat have sometimes been the shroud of coming robes made white in the blood of the lamb. The pearl of great price is worth more than any gem you can bring from the ocean, than Australian or Brazilian min's string in one cannot seek after God, and his righteousness, and all shall be well hereafter. But I must have a word with those who during the present commercial calamities have lost heavily, or perhaps lost all their estate. If a man loses his property at 30 or 40 years of age, it is only a sharp discipline generally, by which later he comes to larger success. It is all folly for a man to sit down in a life of discouragement. The far-alls of Napoleon came to their commander and said: "We have lost the battle and we are being cut to pieces." Napoleon took his watch from his pocket and said: "It is only a clock in the afternoon. You have lost that battle, but we have time enough to win another. Charge upon the foe." Though the meridian of life has passed with you, and you have been routed in many a conflict, give up in discouragement. There are victories yet for you to gain. But sometimes a man's disaster comes to a man when there is nothing in his age, or something in his health, or something in his surroundings, which make him know well that he will never get up again. But let me estimate that, for many years previous to that time, annually there had been $500 failures in the United States. Many of those persons never recovered from the misfortune. But let me give a word of comfort in passing. The sheriff may sell you out of many things, but there are some things of which he cannot sell you out. He cannot sell out your health. He cannot sell out your family. He cannot sell out your Bible. He cannot sell out your God. He cannot sell out your heaven. You have more than you have lost. Sons and daughters of God, children of an eternal and all-loving father, your own souls are yours, and your own lives are yours, and immortality is yours, and thrones of imperial grandeur are yours, and shining mansions are yours, and God is yours. The eternal God has sworn it, and every time you doubt it you charge the king of heaven and earth with perjury. Instead of complaining how hard you have it, so home, take up your Bible full of promises, get down on your knees before God and thank him for what you have, instead of spending so much time in complaining about what you have not.

Some of you remember the shipwreck of the Central America. This noble steamer, had, I think, about five hundred passengers aboard. Suddenly the storm came, and the surges tripped off the decks and swung into the hatches, and there went up a hundred-voiced death-shriek. The foam on the jaw of the wave. The pitching of the steamer as though it were leaping a mountain. The dismal flare of the signal rockets. The long cough of the steam pipes. The hiss of the extinguished furnaces. The walking of God on the floor. The steamer went not down without a struggle. As the passengers stationed there, tread rows, so, bade out the vessel, bark to the hump of the buckets, as in a usual toiling with blistered hands and strained muscles, tug for their lives. Here a sail seen against the sky. The flash of the distress gun sounded, its voice is heard not for it is choked in the leader booming of the sea. A few passengers escaped, but the steamer gave one great lurch and was gone. So there are some men who sail on prosperously in life. All's well, all's well. But at last a catastrophe. Down they go, the bottom of this commercial sea strewn with shattered hulks. But because your property goes, do not let your soul go. Though all else perish, save that for I have to tell you of a more stupendous shipwreck than that which I have just mentioned. God launched this world six thousand years ago. It has been going on under freight of mountains and immortals; but one day it will stagger at the cry of fire. The timbers of rock will burn, the mountains flame like masts, and the clouds like sails in the judgment hurricane. Then God shall take a passenger off the deck, and from the bosom of those who have long been asleep in Jesus, and he will set them far beyond the reach of storm and peril. But how many shall go down that will never be known, until it shall be announced one day in heaven: the shipwreck of a world! O, my dear hearers, whatever you see, though your houses go, though your lands go, though all your earthly possessions perish, may God Almighty, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, save all your souls.

After that conversation she determined to be firm with her idolized boy, and to give him his first lesson in reading. She went into her boudoir, whither she ordered the child to be brought. He came in laughing, triumphant, clapping his hands and carrying with him a pretty white kitten.

"Thank you, Mary," said Lady Carew. "Leave Sir Carlos here."

The baby-baronet lay on the soft thick rug, alternately caressing and teasing the white kitten, while the beautiful girl-mother stood watching them.

A certain sense of maternal importance came to her. She was about to give him his first lesson. She brushed aside the thick locks of golden hair; it would never do to have them falling on the book for Carlos would clutch them joyfully. She drew the coquettish widow's cap nearer her brow; the weight of it reminded her of her responsibility. Then she took a silver pencil case, and opening an illustrated alphabet book looked up and said:

"Carlos, come to me. I want you."

The future master of Firholme took not the slightest heed, but continued playing with the kitten, which he compelled to travel along the steel bar of the fender; if it fell on either side it was punished. Even Lady Carew herself sat watching the scene with some little anxiety. It was hardly to be expected that the boy could answer until the perilous journey was accomplished. When the kitten had been rapturously taken up by its owner, Lady Carew said gently:

"Carlos, come here to me. I want you."

"Not yet," he replied; "wait, mamma, until Snowball goes."

If Lady Carew had been wise, she would have shown her authority at once by compelling him to obey her. She lost a chance then that she never afterward regained.

"I will let him wait," she thought, "until Snowball is gone. The loss of a few minutes will not matter."

She sat thinking of all that her husband had said while the child played on happily enough. The fair and gentle lady did not see that she was actually and at that very moment disobeying her husband by not compelling the child to obey her.

A butterfly flew in at an open window; down went the white kitten, and the boy tried to catch the insect, and again, in the sweetest of voices, Lady Carew said:

"I want you, Carlos—come here."

The butterfly hovered for a few moments over a vase of roses; the boy clapped his hands and it flew off again, paused for an instant over a tall arm-chair, and then flew out through the open window over a bed of fragrant flowers. Out went the boy after it, trampling the flowers under foot in pursuit of his prey, regardless of Lady Carew's remonstrances.

This will never do, she thought—this was the very thing Sir Anthony had warned me against. She must resist from the first any attempt at disobedience. Still she stood for a moment or two to watch the lovely upraised face flushed rosy red; then with a more determined look she rang the bell.

"Mary," she said when the nurse appeared, "go into the garden and bring Sir Carlos to me. I want him."

In a few minutes the girl returned, looking rather flushed and hurried, her attitude indicating that she had had a severe struggle.

"If you please, my lady, Sir Carlos will not come."

Lady Carew's eyes opened with astonishment.

"You must never bring me a message of that kind from Sir Carlos."

"No, my lady," replied the maid, dropping a courtesy; "but what must I do if he will not come?"

"Carry him here," said the mistress.

"I cannot, he is too strong."

"Then," replied Lady Carew, quietly, "send John: tell him if Sir Carlos resists to take him up in his arms and bring him here."

Shortly afterward John, the giant footman, carried the dauntless little heir into his mother's presence.

John had suffered in the conflict. His curls which were the pride of his heart had been ill-treated, and some of the buttons and tags had been torn from his coat. Mary followed bearing one of the boy's slippers and his broad black sash. The child himself flushed and breathless, resisted even as he was brought in.

"Mamma," he cried, "he would not let me walk; and he frightened the butterfly away! He shall not carry me; I will walk! I will never come when he is sent for me!"

"Place Sir Carlos on the ground," said Lady Carew; and the footman was only too pleased to do so.

Flushed, rebellious, but very beautiful, the boy flung himself at his mother's feet.

"He shall not touch me again," he cried.

The man gave a sigh of relief; the maid bent down to arrange the torn ribbon; Lady Carew became the most sweet and gentle of lecturers, when the door opened suddenly, and the rector was announced.

For a few moments he stood in silent astonishment surveying the scene. It changed as if by magic. Footman and maid disappeared. Lady Carew raised her child, and, looking at her visitor said with a smile:

"My little boy has been naughty."

"Your little boy has been very naughty," said the rector; "and I must talk to him."

Then, lest the rector should be too hard upon him, lest he should hurt the child's feelings, Lady Carew held Sir Carlos' hand in her gentle clasp. The rector's words were simple enough for any child to understand, but gravely spoken; and as he listened to his stern voice, so unlike his mother's musical tones, the boy's lips quivered and tears fell from his eyes. He clasped his arms round Lady Carew's neck as she bent down.

"I will be good," he sobbed. "I will never be naughty again."

"A fine nature," remarked the rector; "but he wants great care."

"I am so helpless," faltered Lady Carew.

"Nonsense, my dear lady!" laughed the rector. "I have never seen a really helpless woman. Women are the most helpful creatures in the world—full of activity and resource. You have but to be firm. Now tell me truly, if I had not come in at the critical moment, what would you have done? Would you have corrected the child, or would you have filled his hands with sweetmeats and bribed him to be good?"

Lady Carew shook her head.

"I am afraid I should have bribed him," she replied.

Before he left her, Dr. Elsdale strongly advised Lady Carew to find a governess for the boy. To this she agreed; and during the next three years there were some stormy scenes at Firholme. Many were the ladies who came and went away disappointed. None of them could manage Sir Carlos.

One more strong-minded than the rest, did try to punish him; and while Lady Carew was out visiting, he was shut up in a room without any dinner; but even she gave up hope when she found that one of the footmen had put a ladder to the window, climbed it, and filled the boy's hands with fruit and cakes. The governess laid her complaint before Lady Carew, who sent for the culprit; but the man won his mistress's favor by declaring that he could not eat his own dinner while he thought the child was hungry.

Even the ladies who had retired discontented could not help loving the spirited, handsome boy. The servants worshipped him. When he did wrong they screened him; they could never be persuaded to tell any of his escapades.

"The boy will stand but a poor chance if he remains here," Dr. Elsdale would say. The best thing for him is a public school, where, instead of being one by himself, he will be one of many."

But Lady Carew would not here of this. Her darling should never be treated as she had read of boys being treated at public schools.

"Your husband would have wished it," the rector told her.

She raised her lovely eyes to his face.

"I do not think so," she replied.

"He did not go to a public school himself!"

There was no answer in her opinion to this line of argument. Lady Carew was one of those gentle, amiable, unselfish women whom perhaps Thackeray has painted more cleverly than any other writer—a woman who must have a master of some kind. Some women are always in subjection to father, brother, husband or son. She was one of this class—one who loved the chains that bound her, and would have been unhappy without them. She was tall and graceful with a face as sweet and tender as it was beautiful; a woman with a soft voice and gentle gestures, everything about her denoting refinement and good breeding; a woman to be almost worshipped for her weakness.

She was essentially a woman of one idea. While her husband lived, she had loved him solely and entirely; now that he was dead, her son had his place in her heart. Young fair and generally beloved when Sir Anthony had been dead some time, many admirers thronged round her. She received many offers of marriage, one from the great magnate of the county, the Duke of Culross, who had never admired any woman so much in his life.

"Marry me," he said to her, "and I will not only be the kindest of husbands to you, but I will be the best of fathers to your boy; and he will need a master to believe me."

She shrank from him in trembling dread that was something like horror. Another husband, while Anthony was waiting for her in another world—a second father for her boy whom Anthony had clasped in his dying arms and had left to her care! She thanked the Duke with a scared and bewildered expression, but told him it was impossible.

She could not she said to herself, have two husbands; and hers to her simple mind and loving heart was waiting for her. How could she teach her son to call any one else "father," when Sir Anthony's last words and dying caress had been for him?

She went to the room where her husband had died and kissed with passionate love and pale the pillows where his head had lain. The memory of that beloved husband was dearer to her than the most tender love of any living man.

As she had lived for her husband, so now she lived for her son. Lovers sighed in vain. The only gentlemen who pleased her were those who admired Sir Carlos, and the secret was soon discovered. If any despairing lover went to Firholme and asked for Lady Carew without asking for the boy, he was never invited to Firholme a second time; but if one came with anything for her son—curious eggs from birds' nests, a riding whip, or a whistle—anything likely to please him—then all that there was of the best in the house was at his service. The way to Lady Carew's heart was through her boy.

It was a great pity, all her friends said, that she did not marry again. The boy would be so much better if he had a man to control him. Sweet yielding, gentle Lady Carew was ill-fitted for the care of a high-spirited boy who had will enough to hold his own against almost anybody.

"Perhaps," thought some of her admirers, "when the boy is older and she has less an iety on his account, she may be persuaded to marry." But they could not feel any resentment against her or annoyance, only something like envy for the boy to whom she gave up everything.

After the troop of governesses came relays of tutors; and there was less trouble. Sir Carlos had often thought it beneath his dignity that he should be under the tuition of women. He resented the fact that at Firholme there were so many women, and before he was eight years old he professed himself tired of them.

With the tutors came a new order of thought. Perhaps they were more worldly-wise than the ladies. While they taught Latin and Greek, they did not forget to instruct the boy in the sports he loved. His mother, turned pale when she saw him ready to leap gates or fences and the spirited little pony he rode never refused either. She admired his reckless courage, however, and did not try to check it. The boy must not be a mil sop, she reflected; he must grow up like the brave and martial Carews of old.

To the heir of Firholme grew up one of the handsomest, bravest and brightest of boys. He was generous beyond measure; he had a wonderfully sensitive heart, and could not endure the sight of pain—nor did he ever wilfully inflict it on the weak or helpless. Many a time did he dismount from his pony to carry the burden of an old man or woman toiling along in the roadway.

He was idolized by the country folks. Gray-haired men bowed low to him, and pretty maidens blushed and brightened at his approach. His word was law; his will was master; and when he reached the age of sixteen and looked back upon his life he could not remember that at any time he had wished for anything and been refused.

FIELD GUNS.

Difficulties of High Velocity—A Few Extra Feet.

The high velocity is gained not only at the expense of the carriage, but of the projectile. The violent forces in the bore break up projectiles formed of the ordinary cast-iron, and steel has to be employed for shells. A material not only more costly, but less well adapted to the purpose, or when it is intended. Cast-iron breaks up readily into small pieces and allows the force of the bursting charge to have full effect, while a steel shell is strong enough to resist the explosion inside it too effectually is only partially opened, and does not fly into splinters. Other difficulties also arise in connection with fuses, says the Saturday Review, and these have, in fact, proved so insuperable that the great powers of the 12-pounder cannot be fully utilized—as regards shrapnel, at any rate—because a time fuse cannot be made to act at anything except ordinary ranges.

The situation is this—that if you insist on high velocity you have to add so much additional machinery to your gun carriage and have to so greatly strengthen its construction that you destroy its mobility, while even if you gain a long range you are still unable to make use of your most efficient projectile at it. Moreover, since the remaining velocity of its shrapnel is a truer measure of the value of a gun than its initial velocity, and the two are by no means directly proportional, it does not follow that we benefit as much as we might expect by submitting to these disadvantages.

Thus the 12-pounder has an initial velocity of over 1,000 feet per second and a remaining velocity at 3,000 yards of 862 feet; while the 13-pounder with an initial velocity of only 1,660 feet, has at the same range a remaining velocity greater, by six feet per second than that of its rival. One of our highest authorities on field artillery has indeed recorded his opinion that as regards the efficiency of shrapnel we gain nothing by the increased muzzle velocity of "the best field-gun in Europe" at all practical ranges. Moreover, it is the attempt to squeeze out the last few extra feet that does all the harm.

A MINIATURE.

A Beautiful Portrait of Washington Owned in Lynchburg, Va.

In his diary under date of Oct. 3, 1793, General George Washington made this entry: "at Ramage near two hours to-day, who was drawing a miniature picture of me for Mrs. Washington." What is believed to be this identical portrait of Washington, painted on ivory, is now in the possession of Harry S. Stabler of Lynchburg, Va., says the Collector. It was painted by Ramage, an Irish miniature painter, of New York at that time, for Mrs. Washington, from whom Betty Washington, afterward Mrs. Betty Lewis, had it. She in turn left it to her granddaughter, Otrayna Carter, who married Dr. W. O. Owen, of Lynchburg. He left this portrait, together with other relics of Washington, similarly inherited, to Jenny Woodville Latham, of Lynchburg, who married Thomas S. Stabler, the father of Harry S. Stabler, the present owner of the relics. This miniature is in a time-worn case oval in form. In the back of it is a lock of Washington's hair. It is a beautiful piece of work and even under a magnifying glass bears the closest inspection. The lock holding the miniature and the lock of hair is something more than two inches in length.

WATCHING THE OXEN.

Queer Maneuvers on the Part of Cattle to Get Their Food.

I live in a country village, writes a Maine correspondent of the Youth's Companion, and just outside the back window of my office, a farmer the other day hitched a yoke of oxen. He dropped down a ration of hay in front of them and then left them to enjoy it after their own fashion. An interesting contest over it at once arose between "Buck" and "Broad."

The intent of their maneuvers to get possession of the toothsome pile was as apparent as if words had spoken their thoughts. As they were attached to each end of the unyielding yoke, success depended largely on the application of muscle, to one end of the yoke or the other.

Buck, the "high" ox was at first "the best feller" in this game of tug, and pretty soon had nosed the whole bundle of hay over to his side so far that Broad could not get a bite except by the exercise of his wits. If he used no reason in his cogitations, he certainly had something in his nose, pretty closely akin to it.

He found by practice that he could pull Buck better than he could push him, and he took advantage of the fact in a queer way.

When Buck had got the hay well over to the length of the chain on his side, Broad braced himself and resolutely pulled; the stinging fellow over his way, so that both of them were kept destitute.

Buck scolded, hooked and tried to reach the hay by running out his long tongue, but to no avail; Broad held him out of reach. Then the cunning fellow used stratagem, on Broad, by pushing him off in the direction in which he was drawing.

Broad did not know what to make of the new tactics, and plainly looked puzzled. But he determined to oppose his mate even to the detriment of his own purposes and began to push Buck over toward the hay.

This, of course, was just what the wily animal wanted. He acquiesced gracefully and in a moment grabbed should try to get to the top," said at the hay voraciously. Broad instantly saw the situation and began tugging the pulling process again.

"The result was that Buck, having his nose deep in the hay, when he was suddenly pulled over by Broad, brought more or less of the coveted food with him, and at this point Broad seemed to evolve a new idea, and over which his big, placid eyes fairly twinkled. Buck, of course, was trying to resist his efforts, but when he had hauled a part of the hay over, Broad suddenly gave way and let Buck back. Thus he was enabled to get possession of a few mouthfuls, which he enjoyed hugely.

Broad continued this process until the game was stopped by the appearance of the owner to take them away. And how like the life of mankind it all was!

JUST ISSUED! A WEEK AT THE FAIR.

A comprehensive and thoroughly reliable Guide, illustrating the exhibits and wonders of

THE WORLD'S COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

With ground plans of the main buildings, showing the exact location of home and foreign exhibits, and an indexed map indicating the position of every building on the grounds.

ILLUSTRATED WITH OVER 275 ENGRAVINGS.

The most complete and reliable Guide published, containing DESCRIPTIVE ARTICLES, specially written by the following Exposition officials and eminent authorities:

Mr. W. J. Ebb, Chief Architect Government Building.
Mr. Frank W. Crogan, Designer "Millions" Battle Ship.
Miss Sophia C. Hayden, Architect of Woman's Building.
Mr. J. W. Hunt, Architect of Vermont Building.
Mr. W. B. Tenney, Architect Horticultural Building.
Mr. Henry Van Brunt, Architect Electrical Building.
Mr. Frank Whitehouse, Architect of Choral Hall.

And other Architects of State and Foreign Buildings. Also descriptions of the Statuary, Paintings and other decorations by the sculptors and artists who designed and executed them, with exhaustive explanations and criticisms.

Assuming that the visitor has but a week at his disposal and in that time desires to do the greatest amount of sight-seeing possible, with the least trouble and expense, the "A Week at the Fair" has been compiled with a view of enabling him, without other purpose desired.

It is not a mere dull, dry catalogue of exhibits, but a guide that will enable the visitor who visits the Exposition to see it either in complete detail or to select intelligently what is best worth seeing in every department.

Prof. Landmark, one of Denmark's Fish Commissioners to the world's fair, was looking over the hatchery over the past week. The Professor is very scholarly and expressed himself as delighted with his American trip. He paid a fine compliment to our citizen Mr. Clark.

E. N. Clark is in Washington. He left Saturday spending Sunday at Niagara Falls. A $25,000 appropriation for a fish hatchery on the St. Lawrence, has caused some disagreement at headquarters and Mr. Clark was sent for to settle the matter and locate the hatchery where he thinks best. Some four hundred letters from interested parties await his attention in Washington. In this connection it might be proper to say that Mr. Clark at Washington is considered one of the best men in his line that the U. S. has in their employ.

BALD HEADS!

What is the condition of yours? Is your hair dry, harsh, brittle? Does it split at the ends? Has it a lifeless appearance? Does it fall out when combed or brushed? Is it full of dandruff? Does your scalp itch? Is it dry or in a heated condition? If these are some of your symptoms be warned in time or you will become bald.

Skookum Root Hair Grower

is what you need. Its production is not an accident, but the result of scientific research. Knowledge of the diseases of the hair and scalp led to the discovery of how to treat them. "Skookum" contains neither minerals nor oils. It is not a dye, but a delightfully cooling and refreshing tonic. By stimulating the follicles, it stops falling hair, cures dandruff and grows hair on bald heads.

Keep the scalp clean, healthy, and free from irritating eruptions, by the use of Skookum Root Hair Soap. It destroys parasitic insects, which feed on and destroy the hair.

If your druggist cannot supply you send direct to us, and we will forward prepaid, on receipt of price. Grower, $1.00 per bottle; 6 for $5.00. Soap, 50c per jar; 6 for $2.50.

LOCAL GLEANINGS.

Things Said and Done in the Prettiest and Best Village in the World.

The space writer has bread can make
if he will work and try.
The editor can "take the cake."
But the printer gets the pill.

Mrs. W. P. Sessions' handsome new residence has the slate roof on and will soon be finished.

The Presbyterian parsonage is about settled and the pastor will soon be at home to his friends.

Don't forget the ice cream and cake
social given by the fire department
Saturday evening of this week.

Dr. Root intent upon maneuvering on a bicycle, fell and fractured a rib.
He has been disabled the past week.

A number of the Northville wheelmen accompanied by their bicycles will attend the races at Detroit Saturday.

The milk condensery are not carrying their milk now but send it to Detroit, where it is sold to milk wagons.

The Foreign missionary society of the Methodist church sent a box of Christmas presents to the children in Pekin, China, Tuesday.

Two Salvationists, young women, were in town selling the "War Cry," their army organ, and distributing notices of the big rally at Flint.

Rains and warmth have been admirably distributed from a grower's point of view in this section of the country so far this summer. The farmers of this section are a lucky lot.

Late Elliott has purchased an engine and separator, and is now prepared to do all kinds of threshing in the latest approved style, with promptness and dispatch.

Rev. Mr. Parrish looks well rested since his vacation and is now ready for a long and faithful campaign.
Nothing pays a better dividend than rest and change when one is weary.

The numerous friends of ex-Rev.
Donald Fletcher, who used to be the Presbyterian shepherd at this place, will be sorry to learn that with other Denver men, he has been forced to assign.

At last the council have arranged a fire alarm system. It is not a great one, but it is a far better than the old way of none at all. The council are to be congratulated upon their wise movement.

Chas. Dolph has purchased the Carrington place of C. C. Chadwick.
Mr. and Mrs. Chadwick will continue to occupy the same until this fall when they will move to their farm on the Base-line east.

The alarm of fire that was given
Monday evening was only an alarm for exercise. The fire company were in the third ward—where the fire was supposed to be in—almost a shorter time than it takes to write it.

The water-works company are rushed with orders for pipe connections.
They put in the water at rate of two orders a day and yet some are very impatient to get it and can hardly wait. First come, first served, is their motto. The Sunday night audiences at the Presbyterian church are putting the water on the church lawn.

If you wish to measure anything and have no rule or tape line at hand, but happen to have a silver quarter, half dollar or dollar those convenient articles will fill the bill to your entire satisfaction. A U. S. dollar is one inch and a half in diameter, a half dollar is just an inch and an eighth and a quarter dollar just seven-eighths of an inch.

Bro. H. O. Wills, his gospel wagon and three singers, were here Tuesday and Tuesday evening. At noon they held a service at the factories and in the evening on the public square, followed by a gospel temperance meeting in the Methodist church.
There were large crowds in attendance at all the meetings and the singing and services were very interesting.

Last Sunday night there were unusual attractions in our churches Mr.
Brown of the Y. M. C. A. spoke at the Baptist; Rev. Mr. Parrish, refreshed from his summer outing, spoke on
"Courtship and Marriage." Rev. J. M.
Belding made an address on "American Citizenship," taking the un-American act of Gov. Altgeld in pardoning the anarchists as the cause of his timidly expression.

All patrons of the Northville City laundry can take a bath at their bath rooms for 15 cents.

Ed. Simonds and family now occupy the Baptist parsonage.

Geo. Shaffer will soon have a new house in the new Sherill addition.

There was not any ball game here last Friday as was anticipated, on account of the heat.

W. M. Osband is now sole proprietor

Croquet holds its own among our villagers. Harrison Yerkes is a great lover of the mallet and ball and makes many a studied crack shot. The lawns of Yerkes' and Ely's keep up a musical racket in that neighborhood.

The council should order the low hanging shade tree limbs cut from over the sidewalks. It certainly should not take a petition and a kick from the whole village to get so needful a thing done. There has been a general complaint about this for a month.

Our Thayer's Corners correspondent suggests that our "Special Congress" be asked to boom up prices for the farmer's products as well as for the "silver" men. There is something in this and a few more suggestions along this line might get the Washington rulers badly mixed up.

One great advantage Northville visitors to the world's fair will find in stopping at Rev. H. S. Jenkinson's.
So, Chicago, is the fact of the easy access to the grounds, the perfect quietness of the neighborhood, and the conveniences at this home. The street cars are never crowded, as they are towards other parts of the great city.
The cars stop in front of the entrance and go within half a block of Mr.
Jenkinson's home.

A Homeric spirit recently prevailed in the Northville council, for about fifteen minutes; when the "grave and reverend seniors" ordered the marshal to stop cigar, ice-cream and milk selling, Sunday. The marshal sprang up, virtually told the council that they were a set of fools and actually made them believe it. They laid the matter on the table. "Suzer" Cox once said.

to be excessively right."—Adrian Press.

The Hammond Refrigerator Co. of Northville have shut down their factory.—Wayne Review.

There's just two lies in this article.
Firstly there is no Hammond refrigerator factory here—its the Hamrahan.
Secondly they have not shut down nor are they likely to. The usual number of men, say nine or ten, throughout the entire Globe works were laid off on account of the dull time of the year.
This occurs every season and is never thought worth mentioning.

Just before the Chicago excursionists of the Michigan Press Association broke up, after six day's pleasures at the big fair, many of them gathered in the Mecca Hotel parlor, and through President J. E. Beal presented J. M.
Page, secretary of the National Editorial Association, with a silver coffee urn, in appreciation of the courtesies he had caused to be extended to the Michigan quill drivers. At the same time and place was presented by Wm. P. Nisbett, for those who made the excursion from Detroit to Chicago by water, to Secretary James Slocum a very handsome bronze clock, as a token of esteem and appreciation of his good services, and also a case of sterling silver spoons to his wife. It was a happy ending of a most pleasant and enjoyable meeting of the prosperous State Press Association.

NEWS WHICH WILL INTEREST WOLVERINES.

Manitou County's Financial Difficulties.—

One of Uncle Sam's Boys Responsible for a Girl's Suicide.—Accidents.

Curtiss & Wiley, of Petoskey, have begun suit in the United States court at Grand Rapids against the county of Manitou to collect $2,500 due on bonds issued six years ago. The county is made up of the islands in the upper part of Lake Michigan, a dozen or more, lying off the counties of Leelanau, Charlevoix and Emmet, and includes the Beavers. The islands are sparsely settled and the people are dependent upon fishing and a little farming for a subsistence, and have very little surplus wealth. Seven or eight years ago the county fell behind financially in the ordinary running expenses and the bonds to the amount of $2,500 were issued to wipe out the old debt.

These bonds were negotiated in Petoskey and Curtiss & Wiley who purchased them have since whistled in vain either for principal or interest, the people insisting they have no money, and that payment is impossible. The bonds are secured by the entire county and it is within the possibility that the bondholders may by the foreclosure proceedings become the nominal owners of the entire territory.

The islands are cut off from the mainland in winter except such traffic as may be possible over the ice when the lake freezes. The islanders depend upon their summer fishing and crops for winter subsistence and have very little left with which to purchase luxuries or pay for government.

A MAGNIFICENT NERVE.

A Grand Rapids Young Man Lays Plans to Forge $500,000.

The biggest sensation in the matter of forgeries which has ever occurred at Port Huron has been unearthed, the result of which is that Leon S. Smith, of Grand Rapids, is in jail for passing nearly $4,000 worth of forged paper. The victims are the banks of Flint and Grand Rapids. Had it not been for the sharp detective work the forger might have been on his way to Europe with half a million dollars in cold cash.

He arrived at Port Huron last week and passed a forged check upon the Commercial bank. This was discovered, but the matter was smoothed over. He then went to Flint, where he was well-known, and passed a draft on the Coldwater National bank of New York for $355. He was arrested on this return from St. Clair with three Port Huron girls and had in his possession $4,200 in money and paper sufficient to forge $500,000. Smith had secured his blanks by ordering them from the Calvert Lithograph company, of Detroit, by pretending they were for a bank. Had the jobs at Port Huron been successful he would secure passports, then worked New York and Boston banks and sailed for Europe with the proceeds. He is only 21 years of age, and his only regret for the crime is the effect it will have on his mother. His excuse for his crime is that he was poor and desired to live like a gentleman.

Later Smith's friends settled the claims of Flint and Port Huron parties against the culprit and he was released at Port Huron, but was promptly taken to Grand Rapids where he will undoubtedly be prosecuted.

Michigan World's Fair Expenditures.
The regular quarterly meeting of the board of Michigan's World's Fair commissioners was held in the Michigan State building at the World's Fair with Commissioners Weston, Belding, White, Flynn, Pond and Valentine present. Secretary Stevens presented a statement of expenditures of the board since its organization, Aug. 1, 1891, and the balances to the credit of the various funds. It shows that of the $125,000 appropriated $79,876.75 has been expended and there still remains $45,123.25 on hand. Bills to the amount of $6,000 were allowed and ordered paid.

Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 13 and 14, having been designated as Michigan days the following committee was appointed to make the proper arrangements for celebrating them: Governor Rich, President Weston and Commissioners Flynn and Valentine. The committee was authorized to appoint an auxiliary committee of citizens representing the various sections of the state to assist in the work. As Sept. 14 has also been assigned to Ohio and as the buildings adjoin, it was decided to have Michigan's principal celebration on Sept. 13.

For Head at the Agricultural College.
The state board of agriculture filled two vacancies in the faculty of the Agricultural college. After canvassing the matter thoroughly the board selected Prof. Lewis G. Gorton, of Detroit, as successor to President Cline, whose resignation takes effect Aug. 1. The resignation of P. M. Harwood, professor of agriculture was accepted by the board, and Prof. Clinton D. Smith, director of the Minnesota Agriculture Experiment station, was elected to this position. Prof. Smith is under 40 years of age and a graduate of Cornell university.

Whipped to an Awful Death.
Hugh Green, a young man employed at a mill at Charlevoix, was caught by a belt while putting it on a pulley and whirled about the shaft with an awful force. Every bone in his body was broken. His chest was mashed in and one foot torn off, while the timbers overhead were broken by his body before the engine could be stopped.

Hon. Fred Brasted's Generosity.
The Winthrop and Mitchell mines at Ishpeming which closed down recently have resumed operations again. Hon. Fred Brasted, the local manager and half owner of the company, submitted a proposition to the men to supply them with provisions from his store, on the order plan, until such time as the ore had been sold, which they gladly accepted.

William Schroeder, a wealthy and prominent farmer of Galesburg died from injuries received by the breaking of a whiffletree while he was driving.

A SOLDIER'S CRIME.

A Young Girl Suicides Because Her Honor Had Been Destroyed.

Lillian Saulte, an 18-year-old girl employed as a chambermaid at Mackinac Island, committed suicide by taking a dose of laudanum. She left two very compromising letters implicating one of the soldiers at the fort, who, she said, outraged her a few nights previous while returning from a village dance. She could not stand the disgrace and has for days been pleading to have him put in prison. The letters are of the heartrending kind, telling of her struggles as an orphan and her battle for her honor. Her only relatives reside at Petrolia, Ont., where the remains were sent. The officers have the man named in the letters in custody.

An Unnatural Mother.
While on a manure pile in his barnyard, Arthur Joslin, a farmer living northwest of the city, noticed a piece of paper, and upon pulling it out, found that it contained the body of a well-developed colored babe. Rachel King, aged 41 years, admits she is the mother and that it was buried by her son William Johnson, aged 21. The child's skull was crushed and the doctors claim it was murdered. Johnson and his mother have been arrested. Mrs. King is the mother of three grown children and has been twice married, but does not now live with her husband.

No Surgeon-General Now.
In his letter to the state military board tendering his resignation as head of the medical staff of the National Guard, Dr. J. E. Clark of Detroit, complained of the action of the board in abolishing the rank of surgeon-general, which he has held for two years. It now appears that there is no authority in the law for the creation of such a rank and that the preceding board acted in ignorance or disregard of the statute in conferring it upon him. The present board merely restores the chief of medical staff to his legal status as brigade surgeon, which ranks is provided for in the military act.

Wants Her Marriage Annulled.
Mary Louise Groves asks the court to annul her marriage with Charles A. Steele. Charles resides at Los Angeles, Cal., and needing a wife he visited at Jackson last summer and acquainted Miss Groves with the fact. She liked his looks and prospects and promised to be his in the spring. He secured a license and the twin were made one by Justice Burgess. She afterward changed her mind and claims she thought the marriage ceremony was only an engagement and alleges that she was induced to consent to it by misrepresentation.

Many Jackson Convicts Idle.
By the removal of the Fargo shoe factory from the Jackson prison 60 convicts were thrown out of work and Warden Chamberlain is in a quandary what to do with them. The Washington Tool company was to take 25 convicts July 1, but is not yet ready for them. Negotiations with an eastern shirt company have fallen through, owing to the stringency of money. It is expensive keeping so many convicts idle and the warden fears it will make a bad showing in the finances of the institution for the present year.

Bart Against the Brotherhood.
W. R. Bart, receiver of the Toledo, Ann Arbor & North Michigan railroad, stating that he would meet a committee of engineers to make terms to take back 30 striking engineers and firemen. Mr. Bart stated emphatically that there was not the slightest foundation for the report that he had not met a committee of engineers there, nor had he made any terms; on the contrary, he said the road would be operated as a non-brotherhood road.

Killed by a Feroocious Bull.
Christian Mott, of Waltz, was gored to death by a bull. The deceased was about 70 years of age, and a German. One horn entered the right side and tore across to the center of the breast through the lungs and liver. Another wound pierced the left side to the neck and a gash extended from the low knee of the right leg up and across the small of the back. He was pained and gored until he was a mass of bruises and cuts. He was completely stripped of his clothing, except part of one pants leg and his shirt collar.

The Bestial Old Villain Ought to be Hung.
Charles Sheffield, of Hastings, a man upwards of 60 years of age, was detected in the act of taking indecent liberties with the person of Goldie Collins, a bright little girl of 8 years, daughter of George Collins, of Hastings. Sheffield was noticed enticing her to an out of the way place, and was watched. The story of the little girl indicates that this is not the first time nor she the only girl he has assaulted. A complaint was made against him for a felonious assault, and he was arrested and held under $1,000 bail.

Fatal Fall of a Widow.
Mrs. Sarah Ketcham, aged 45, a widow, entered a clothing store at Grand Rapids to buy clothes for her children, and met with a fatal accident. She leaned against a pile of clothing upon a counter which rested against the top of a stairway. The clothing slid off the counter, causing her to fall backward down the stairs. She died in a few minutes.

NOW WILLIAM SMILES.

THE ARMY BILL FOR GERMANY IS A SETTLED MATTER.

The Government Secures a Majority of Sixteen Votes on the Final Ballot.—Other General News Items.

Berlin special: The army bill was passed by the reichstag by a majority of 16, the vote standing 201 in favor of the measure and 185 against it. Soon after the bill was put on its final passage and after the speaking had commenced it became certain that the leaders of the opponents of the government meant business and that they did not intend to let the measure be adopted in a perfunctory manner. The atmosphere of the house felt too electric for formalities. Speaker after speaker paid less attention to attacking or supporting the bill than to railing at their political opponents. The Kaiser had become impatient and had driven up to the minister's private entrance, through which he entered the "parliamentary building." The chancellor was summoned to meet him. They were closeted together in the chancellor's private room for half an hour. It is understood that his majesty urged the chancellor to have the bill carried through the house at once, as he desired to start for Kiel, from which place he intends to go to Bornholm, an island belonging to Denmark. He did not desire to leave Berlin until he knew positively the result of the vote on his pet measure.

The emperor's delight at the passage of the bill and rumor has it that he will confer upon Chancellor von Caprivi the dignity of a prince. The opponents of the bill are very much chagrined at the turning down they received and take no pains to conceal their feelings. If the debate had been short and decisive as was expected in official circles, the emperor would have appeared in the house to close the session. Instead of closing the house in Berlin he goes that task to the chancellor who read the imperial order immediately after the passage of the bill. He also read a speech from his majesty saying that the federal governments were highly satisfied with the result of the deliberations and had firm confidence that the reichstag would grant the sacrifices recognized as necessary. Events, the speech continued, have not deceived the firm convictions of the federal governments that the proposed increase of the army does not go beyond the absolute necessities. After the reading of the speech the chancellor added: "It is a special pleasure to me to be charged to give you the emperor's thanks."

President von Lernetzow then called for three cheers for the emperor and they were given with enthusiasm by all the groups, except the socialists, who had left the house before the chancellor had finished.

The initial expenditures arising from the operations of the new military law will be covered by a loan of 45,000,000 marks. This loan has been approved by the budget committee.

Killed in a Runaway.
While Dr. F. B. Hynes and his wife driving about two miles from Allegan their horse shied and dashed the buggy against a pile of wood with considerable force, both the occupants being thrown out. Both jumped up quickly, however, Mrs. Hynes starting to go to a farm-house near by, and the doctor commenced extricating his horse from the tangle of the harness and thills. He asked his wife if she was injured, to which she replied that she was badly hurt. At this moment a young man drove up in a buggy, assisted his horse in and drove to the nearby house. He then turned to the scene of the accident, and found the doctor dead beside the horse. There is a wound in his forehead, evidently made by the heel of a horse shoe. It is supposed that the struggling animal kicked him after Mrs. Hynes was driven away. Dr. Hynes was one of the prominent physicians of Allegan. Mrs. Hynes' injuries are serious but not fatal.

Three Children Fatally Injured.
Wm. Cox, aged 12, his sister, Matilda, aged 14, and Georgia Ward, aged 12, found a point and a quart bottle under a tree at the roadside near Washington, Pa. They threw several stones at the bottles. When one of the bottles was struck an explosion followed that shook houses a mile away. A large hole was blown in the earth, trees and fences were thrown down and the children hurled many feet away. The bottles contained nitro-glycerine. All were fatally injured.

A TERRIBLE RECORD.

Five Murders, at Least, Laid at the Door of Dr. H. C. W. Meyer.

A German physician was arrested in Detroit on the charge of murder—in order to obtain the insurance of his wife—and since his record has been looked up five murders for the same purpose have been traced to his hand. The man's awful criminal history is about as follows:

Dr. Henry C. W. Meyer—known to different parts of the country as Hugo Weyler, alias William Reatter, alias Schaffer, alias Oswald alias Stofen—graduated from the Chicago Homeopathic College of Medicine in 1873. He came originally from Minden, Prussia. He began the practice of medicine in Chicago after graduation and is said to have poisoned his first wife in Chicago but for what reason he did so is unknown. His next crime was the poisoning of a grocer of Chicago named Gedebrand. Shortly after Gedebrand's death in 1879, he married Gedebrand's widow. Meyer was tried in Chicago for the murder of Gedebrand and acquitted. Mrs. Meyer No. 2 had a child by her first husband and in order to get rid of it Meyer is alleged to have poisoned it. For this act he was arrested and tried and again acquitted. His next crime was the attempted poisoning of his wife. His motive in this action was his infatuation for a girl named Dresser. His relations with this girl were such that Mrs. Meyer secured a divorce from Meyer and thus escaped the fate that her husband is said to have intended for her. Miss Dresser was the daughter of a rich German living in Chicago, a man of good standing and character. Meyer, who she had secured her divorce from, married Miss Dresser, and shortly afterward insured her life in the Germania Life Insurance company for $5,000 by forging Mr. Dresser's name. The forgery was discovered there and Meyer fled to Denver, but was extradited and brought back to Chicago for trial. The fact of Meyer's not deserting him and he was again acquitted. Pending the trial Meyer was detained in prison and there met Ludwig Brandt, also in prison for forgery.

Meyer and Brandt hatched up a scheme to insure Brandt's life heavily, have him fall sick, pretend to die and bury a corpse procured for the purpose while Brandt disappeared. The scheme worked to perfection to a certain point. The two went to New York; Brandt's life was insured for $4,500 in four companies including $3,500 in the Mutual Life; a mock marriage was performed between Meyer's wife and Brandt, the latter fell sick and several physicians of repute were baffled by the disease and finally Brandt died in reality. The Mutual Life was not satisfied and refused to pay their policy, but the other companies did and Meyer and his wife vanished. The Mutual Life placed their best man on the case after ascertaining that Brandt had been poisoned.

The detective was hot on the doctor's trail which case very similar to the one on which he was working fell under his observation.

Hugo Weyler and his sister in June, 1892, located in Toledo and employed as a servant Mary Weiss. He tried to insure her as his wife in the Michigan Mutual, was unsuccessful, but obtained a $5,000 policy in the Equitable Life and moved to South Bend, Ind. Here Weyler—otherwise Dr. Meyer—opened a bucket shop and attracted attention by a sensational failure. Mary Weiss was ill for several weeks and at last Brandt had been, and on advice of her friends left the Weylers, who then went to Indianapolis. Here another girl was secured who passed as Mrs. Weyler—although the alleged sister was his real wife—and it was only a short time before she was very ill and finally died. The Equitable Life investigated and found that while the policy described Mrs. Weyler as a blonde, with gold filling in her teeth, a dark woman was dark and had no filling in her teeth. Mary Weiss turned up suddenly and the Weylers fled.

The detectives working on the Brandt case took up this clue, and following Weyler's trail finally located him at Detroit where he was known as Dr. Schaffer. He was arrested and thoroughly identified as Dr. Meyer.

Gov. Rich's Pardons.
Gov. Rich has pardoned James M. Shook, sent to Jackson from Muskegon for 12 years for burglary. The pardon board and the governor both believed the sentence to be excessive. Shook had already served five years. Alfred Englemann was sent to Ionia from St. Joseph county in 1891 for forgery. His sentence was five years. Both his victim and the prosecuting attorney petitioned for the release.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.
New York July 11.—Bradstreet's weekly review of the state of trade says: Anticipations of excessive demands on New York banks resulted in preparations to meet such requests, and the banks took place the looking up of funds by capitalists, bankers and others, cause high rates for money, further restriction of commercial discounts, resulted in several banks cashing checks at the subpar rate instead of using the clearing house and in other ways produced a rather unfavorable financial situation, which, however, has since been relieved. Money market has felt an increase in demand for funds and New York's relative inability to supply the same was commented on west and southwest. An unexpected heavy increase in stocks of wheat in Europe and a cut for Europe was not entirely offset by the relatively small decrease in the United States and Canada, even with the 100,000 bushels decrease in Australia included. Iron and steel industries are slack, with stocks of the latter accumulating. Manufacturers think the price of wool will go lower. Anthracite coal has been arbitrarily advanced, lumber is stronger at the northwest and sugar is up a cent. Cotton and corn are also advanced fractionally, while leather, live hogs, Indian corn and lard have declined correspondingly.

During June the World's Fair cleared over $1,000,000 above expenses.

The Bankers' association of Buffalo, have declared for the repeal of the silver purchasing section of the Sherman act.

The village of Princeton, Ind., was nearly destroyed by fire and an unknown man burned to death. Loss, $250,000; insurance, $150,000.

Robert Larkin, a Negro, was lynched and his body riddled with bullets in Gila, Fla., for assaulting Fanny Alexander, a young lady of high social connections.

FIVE KILLED IN A WRECK.

A West Shore Passenger Train Jumps the Track With Fearful Results.

West Shore day express No. 1 was wrecked in the West Shore freight yard at Newburg, N. Y., resulting in the death of five persons and the injury of a large number of others. The train consisted of locomotive, baggage and express car, a smoking car, day coaches and parlor car. The train was a few minutes late at Cornwall, four miles south of Newburg and was running very fast. When it reached the switch which connects the main road with the West Shore freight yard, a mile south of the Newburg station, the engine jumped upon the frog and left the track. It ran upon the ties a distance equal to the length of the train and then crashed into a freight train standing in the yard. The crash was terrific. The express engine was evidently further off the track than the remainder of the train and when it struck the freight engine it was thrown to one side and the tender torn from it.

The engineer, upon feeling the engine leave the track, shut off the steam, whistled for brakes and he and the fireman jumped. The latter sustained a blood vessel and was badly bruised. The engineer escaped with very slight injuries. Fred Holland, engineer of the freight, had his skull fractured at the base and was cut over the eye. It is thought that he will recover. No one else on the freight train was hurt.

There was about a dozen persons in the smoking car and nearly all escaped injury. Coach No. 71 was filled with passengers, every seat being occupied. Nearly all the casualties occurred in this car. It swayed to one side and struck the projecting end of a box car standing on a side track. The entire side of No. 71 was ripped off and the end nearest to the smoker was smashed. All those who were killed were on that side of the car.

Several Italians Killed by a Bomb.
By the premature explosion of a fire works bomb at Chicago, at an Italian picnic several people were killed and a number of others injured. The bomb was fired from an extemporized mortar and was intended to be exploded high in the air, the explosion to be accompanied by a shower of brilliant fire. Just as the charge was about to be fired there was a deafening roar and the liquid fire and burning explosives together with the pieces of the mortar containing the bomb were hurled in every direction. Hundreds of persons were standing about the spot and the flash and report were followed by the cries of those stricken to the earth. No lights were at first to be had and the dead and wounded lay together beneath the feet of those who were able to escape from the spot.

World's Fair Closed on Sundays.
The World's Fair is to be closed on Sundays and it will not be open to the public on the first day of the week. The admissions of last Sunday had already been donated for the relief of the families of the firemen who lost their lives in the recent fire on the grounds and but for this fact the fair would probably have been closed on that day. The vote of the local directory reversing its former action was overwhelmingly in favor of closing. It standing 24 to 4. When the meeting of directors was called on Sunday evening, the meeting was called at 7 o'clock Sunday closing, signed by all the leading Chicago clergymen, was read. The close of the address was the signal for a series of speeches, all of them in favor of closing the fair and strong resolutions were passed.

During the quiet hours of Sunday night, July 16, a glaring burglary was committed at the corner store occupied as store and new post-office, with the present incumbent E. C. Grace, P. M., who is proprietor of both departments and owner of said premises. The violence seemed to have been perpetrated in the early hours of Monday morning. The outside front entrance door to the store seemed to have been pressed in so as to pass the bolt from the catch of the other single door, passing to the center of the store where the safe was located. When found the same was blown up into a fragmentary mass of ruin and debris. The booty obtained amounted to $100. One half to private and one half to government funds in money. The papers, goods and all personal effects, unmolested. There is no clue to the doers of the act. As yet it remains a silent mystery.

George A. Waterman, professor elect to the chair of veterinary surgery in the Connecticut agricultural college, is in Chicago, where he expects to remain until near the beginning of the college year in September.

The pastors of the two churches here are expected home to occupy their pulpits on next Sabbath morning. Rev. Mr. Conrad and lady have been at Indianapolis attending the Baptist Young People's National convention. Mr. and Mrs. Shannon have been attending the Y. P. C. E. convention at Montreal. Their churches will give them a hearty welcome home.

Farmers—men, women and children—are so busily engaged with harvest work that very little gossip is heard, at the usual news stands. The Record man from this point of the woods submits this as in his opinion an available apology for the brevity of his effusion this week. He would remark, while passing, that before the Record issues its this week's copy, the wheat harvest in this locality will be nearly over, and would remark further, that while there are some pieces of light wheat the crop as a whole will average above its predecessors for several years. Timely rains seem to assure good crops of oats, barley and potatoes—in short all spring crops are promising well. Their abundance will certainly tend to reduce their market value. Why not ask Congress for legislation at the approaching special session to boom prices, as our brethren of the silver states ask to have the price of the white metal borne up by statute.

The music of the mowing machine is now mingled with the melody of the binder. The hay crop is so plentiful that harvest time has arrived before the hay could all be secured.

Lee West met with an accident last week by being too familiar with a horse bay fork, one of the points striking him on the leg. The injury though apparently slight was very painful for some time, but, it is hoped, will have no serious results.

The W. B. H. M. circle met last week Thursday afternoon at Mrs. N. West's. About a dozen ladies were present and quilting was the occupation. The young ladies mission society the "Cheerful Workers" met at the same time with Miss Jessie West. All enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon.
