A WORLD'S FAIR VISIT.

A Few Points on Things to Be Seen There.

A visit to the world's fair may well be said to be a trip around the world in a miniature way. Here one may see the different races of the entire globe and form good ideas of their way and mode of living. The magnitude of the buildings and the grandness of the exhibits are simply indescribable.

No one should go to the fair with the intention of seeing everything for that is impossible, even could one stay until the close of the exposition. Unless one has plenty of time it will hardly pay them to visit all the state buildings, for nearly the same exhibit will be found in the proper department of each of the main buildings as are found in the state buildings. Many of the state buildings are built simply for the comfort of visitors from their home state. Especially is this true of Michigan where may be found easy chairs, writing tables, toilet rooms, ice water, free check rooms, news rooms, post office, and many other conveniences. The old liberty bell which everyone will wish to see is at the south entrance of the Pennsylvania building. The California building is almost entirely filled with a fruit exhibit and is certainly a magnificent sight. The Illinois state building has some splendid special grain exhibits and is well worth a visit.

Of the foreign buildings, the most interesting are perhaps the India, Guatemala and Ceylon. These are right near the U. S. fishery exhibit which, of course, no one will wish to miss.

Of the main buildings they should all be seen if possible, and but little advice can be given how or when to do it. One might just as well go right ahead, hit or miss, with the first one they come to. Those of most interest will probably be "Mechanical Arts," where everything conceivable is being manufactured; "Manufacturers and Liberal Arts," where everything that has been manufactured is on exhibit; "Agricultural," where everything produced from mother earth is shown; "Machinery Hall," where the articles used to till the soil, and gather its products are exhibited; "Transportation," where will be found every thing that the name implies, from a baby cab to a train of palace cars and an ocean steamer.

As to the expense, one may spend little or much. Besides railroad fare, if one is economical $2 per day will see them through. There is no limit to what can be spent, for there are a thousand ways and attractions for money. The necessary expenses would be something like this: Rooms at Rev. H. S. Jenkinson's, engaged in advance, South Chicago, fifty cents per day; street car fare to grounds and return, ten cents; breakfast just outside the grounds, with a lunch put up to take inside with you for dinner, fifty cents; supper outside as you leave the grounds, twenty-five cents more; sundries fifteen cents. Total $2.

About the first peculiar sensation one experiences after being on the grounds for two or three hours is that awfully "tired feeling" inside the shoes. This feeling wears off usually after you have been back home a week or two. While you are at the fair, keep going until you can't stand up, then fall into one of the many thousands of seats or chairs, which are thickly and conveniently scattered about the grounds and buildings, until you are rested enough to start forward again. There are plenty of these seats free of charge at almost every step you take and the report that there were charges for seats or for use of the toilet rooms is false. A charge of five cents is made for the use of soap, towels, etc., but these too may be had free of expense at the state buildings.

Charges are not exorbitant any where on the grounds. The charges for meals, lunches, cream, lemonade, etc., are however just double the price asked outside the grounds, but this is only to be expected.

The larger portion of the visitors take their lunches with them on the grounds, and it is certainly the most satisfactory and cheapest way. No pass-out checks are given, so that when you once enter the grounds it is policy to stay. A regular dinner, a first class one too, on the grounds costs $1; a lunch about fifty cents.

About the Midway Pleasure, of which so much has been said. It is something like a side-show to a circus. Portions of it will prove very interesting to the visitor and he will here find an opportunity to spend as much money as he likes. The "Streets of Cairo," the "Ostrich Farm," the "Diver at work," "Representatives of 46 Nations," and the "Ferris" wheel are well worth the admission. Just outside the ground is Buffalo Bill's wild west show. This is especially a fine attraction and will prove nearly as much interest to the visitor as the whole Midway, providing one cannot see both.

Don't go with expectations of seeing everything that is there. Don't be in a hurry—go slow. Don't wear new shoes. Wear your straw hat, if you don't want to get badly tanned. And above all don't stay at home. Go and see, as P. T. Barnum says, "the greatest show on earth." Don't lay out any plans, or go by any guide. Plunge right into the whirl, hit or miss. It is the only way to do it.

THE PYTHIAN PICNIC.

The Knights Had a Fine Time Yesterday.

The K. P. picnic held in Beaton's grove, down on Plymouth avenue, yesterday was a fine affair, largely attended and hugely enjoyed by all.

The exercises consisted of music by the Plymouth cornet band; solos by Mrs. Hall of Plymouth; recitations by Misses May Shier of Salem and Zada Pinkney of Plymouth. Rev. P. Ross Parish offered prayer and Chancellor Commander Hutton delivered an address of welcome. Mr. Powell, representing the Endowment rank and the Michigan Pythian, delivered a very fine address on the order universal, the Endowment rank, etc. Dinner was served about 1:30 and it was a bountiful one indeed. The elegance of the service and abundance of the food was only surpassed by the wonderful appetites of those present.

Grand Chancellor Curtis who was expected to arrive on the afternoon train failed to put in appearance and to fill in the gap Mrs. Hall kindly consented to favor the audience with another beautiful solo.

There were upwards of 150 present from Plymouth, Salem, Detroit and this place.

A HANDSOME PRESENT.

Past Chancellor Carpenter Gets a Beautiful Jewel.

As a token of appreciation of both the gentleman and worthy Knight, the members of Mystic Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of this place resolved to present Kt. O. F. Carpenter, p. c., with a suitable testimonial of their appreciation of his services and to show the high esteem in which he was held by that body. Upon his removal to Tukhanock, Pa., the Knights procured for him a handsome gold mounted silver past-chancellor's jewel and beautiful book entitled "Pythian Knighthood." The appropriate engravings on the jewel were, across the hanging bar "O. F. Carpenter," and along the sides of the triangle was, "Presented by Mystic Lodge No. 100, Northville, Mich." The whole was accompanied by a well worded resolution signed by the various members of the Northville lodge.

The purchase was made some time ago, the delay in sending the presents being caused by the tardiness of the engraver. The tokens were expressed to Mr. Carpenter today and over the Sabbath will float before him happy thoughts of the sunny days spent in our village and of the many warm friends left behind.

Crews of the Chinese six companies, has arrived in this country with a mission of some sort on his hands.

Twelve innocent looking Texas farmers last week whipped out their revolvers and put a sudden quietus upon a desperate gang of train robbers.

Somebody proposes to adorn tombstones with the pictures of the deceased persons whose last resting-places they mark.

WALTER BRANT said a year ago that it seemed almost safe to prophesy an outburst of genius in the United States such as has not been seen since the days of Elizabeth.

The prevalence of crimson colors in certain fishes found off the New England coast is said by Professor J. Browne Goode to be due to the red pigment in seaweeds eaten by the crustaceans.

The latest flying machine is the invention of an Oregonian. While not on the lines of any of its predecessors in the field, it is believed to have one trait in common with all of them.

According to the figures compiled by Carroll D. Wright, superintendent of the United States department of labor, there are now in this country 5,869 building associations with 1,665,456 shareholders and with net assets of $89,923,435.

A former Somo official suspected of undue friendliness to the Chinese has been dismissed. He complains that he should have been given a chance to retire.

There is no doubt a growing tendency to postpone murder trials too long. A murderer is not a man to be handled with kid gloves.

It is stated by a prominent Texas cowman that the number of cattle on the ranges has greatly decreased of late. The government report to the contrary notwithstanding.

WILLIAM ASTOR CHAMBER has pushed into hitherto unexplored regions of Africa and made some important discoveries. It is something anomalous that in this Columbian year the infant continent of America should be thoroughly explored.

The farmer, of all men, should take pains to encourage his boys if he wishes them to adopt the business of farming as they grow to manhood. He better than one engaged in other business, can do this.

Two young men have set out from New York with the intention of walking to San Francisco. If it is glory they want they have taken the wrong tack.

An Idaho man has been sentenced to death for arson. People prone to set incendiary fires for the purpose of collecting insurance on the furniture, if operating in that state, will be simply prudent in having their life insurance policies also in good repair.

COMFORT FOR BUSINESS MEN DISCUSSED BY TALMAGH

The Recent Disturbances in the Business World the Subject of an Eloquent and Appropriate Sermon—The Church of God.

BROOKLYN, July 18.—The Rev. Dr. Talmagh has selected for his subject to day, a topic of the greatest interest and timeliness, viz: "Comfort for Business Men," the text being Isaiah 41: 21: "Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem."

What an awful six weeks in commercial circles! The crashing of banks from San Francisco to New York, and from ocean to ocean. The complete uncertainty that has halted all styles of business for three months, and the pressure of the money market for the last year have put all bargain-makers at their wit's end.

In the first place I have to remark that a great many of our business men feel quivering fears and temptations to turn their backs on small and limited capital in business.

There is no doubt a growing tendency to postpone murder trials too long. A murderer is not a man to be handled with kid gloves.

It is stated by a prominent Texas cowman that the number of cattle on the ranges has greatly decreased of late. The government report to the contrary notwithstanding.

brain, this corroding care of the heart, this strain of effort that exhausts the spirit, sends a great many of our best men, in mid-life, into the grave. They find that Wall street does not end at the East river. It ends at Greenwood! Their life dashed out against money safes. They go with their store on their backs. They trudge, like camels sweating from Aleppo to Damascus. They make their life a crucifixion. Standing behind desks and counters, blinded from the flesh air, weighed down by caring cares, they are so many suicides. Oh! I wish I could, I wish I could lift some of the burdens from the heart, that I could give vent to some of the worn muscles. It is time for you to begin to take it a little easier. Do your best, and then trust God for the rest. Do not fret. God manages all the affairs of your life, and he manages them for the best. Consider the lilies—they always have robes. Behold the fowls of the air—they always have nests. Take heed, ye men of little faith, that ye do not fail. Do not let yourselves be troubled as the fowls and the lilies, and in the light of the holy Sabbath day resolve that you will give to the winds your fears and your fretfulness, and your distresses. You brought nothing into the world, and it is very certain you can carry nothing out. Having food and raiment be therewith content. The merchant came home from the store. There had been great disaster there. He opened the front door, and said, in the midst of his family circle: "I am ruined. Everything is gone. I am ruined!" His wife said, "I am ruined!" and the little child threw up its hands, and said: "Papa, I am here." The aged grandmother, seated in the room, said: "Then you have all the promises of God, beside, John. And he burst into tears, and said: "God forgive me, that I have been so ungrateful. I find I have a great many things left. God forgive me!"

Again I remark, that many of our business men are tempted to neglect their home duties. How often it is that the store and the home seem to be at war. It is the case that the father, the mere treasurer of the family, a sort of agent to see that they have dry goods and groceries. The work of family government he does not touch. Once or twice in a year he tells the children up on a sabbath afternoon when he has a half hour, he does not exactly know what to do with, and in that half hour he disciplines the children, and chides them and corrects their faults, and gives them a great deal of good advice, and then wonders all the rest of the year that his children do not do better when they have the constant advantage of that semi-daily correction. The family table, which ought to be the place for pleasant discourse and cheerfulness, often becomes the place of perilous expedition. If there be any blessing asked at all, it is out at both ends, and with the hand on the carving knife, he counts on his fingers, making estimates in the interest of the repast. The work done, the rest goes to the head and he starts down the street, and before the family have risen from the table, he has bound up another bundle of goods, and says to the waiter: "Anything more I can do for you to-day?" A man has more responsibilities than those which are discharged by putative competent instructors—his children, and giving them a drawing-master, and must-teacher. The physical culture of the child will not be attended to, unless the father looks to it. He must sometime to his dignity. He must number his joints. He must sometimes lead them out to their sports and games. The parent who cannot forget the severe duties of life sometimes, by the life and hand, and trundle the hoop, and chase the ball, and jump the rope, with his children, ought never to have been born out of a crumpled and unresolvable selfishness. If you want to keep your children away from places of sin you can only do it by making your home attractive. You may preach sermons, and advocate reforms, and denounce wickedness, and yet your children will be captivated by the glittering saloon on earth, unless you can make your home a brighter place than any other place on earth to them. Oh! gather all charms into your house! If you can afford it, bring books, and pictures, and cheerful entertainments to the household. But, above all, teach your children, not by bath-tub, but day after day, and every day teach them that religion is a great gladness, that throes chains of God about the neck, that takes no spring from the foot, no thinness in the heart, no sprinkling from the eye, no ring from the finger, but that her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. I sympathize with the work being done in many of our cities, by which beautiful rooms are set apart for our young men's Christian associations, and I pray God to prosper them in all things. But I tell you there is something back of that, and something more, we need more happy, consecrate, cheerful, Christian homes in America.

Again, I remark that a great many of our business men are tempted to put the attainment of money above the value of the soul. It is a grand thing to have plenty of money. The more you get of it, the better, if it come honestly and go usefully. For the lack of it, sickness dies without medicine, and hunger finds its coffin in the empty bread tray, and nakedness shivers for lack of clothes and fire. When I hear a man in canting tirade against money, a Christian man who has had no position upon earth, and he had no interest in it, I come almost to think that the heaven that would be appropriate for him, would be an everlasting poor-house. While, my friends, we do admit there is such a thing as a lawful use of money—a profitable use of money—let us recognize also the fact, that money cannot satisfy a man's soul, that it cannot glitter in the dark valley, that it cannot pay our fare across the Jordan of death, that it cannot unlock the gates of heaven. There are men in all occupations who seem to act as though they thought the world of beds and mortgages could be sold off for a little to heaven, and as though gold would be a lawful tender in that place where it is so common that they make payments out of it. Salvation by Christ is the only salvation. Treasures in heaven are the only incorruptible treasures. Have you ever ciphered out in the rule of loss and gain, the sum: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? How ever fine your apparel, the winds of death will utter it like rags. Home spun and a threadbare coat have sometimes been the swaow of coming robes made white in the blood of the lamb. The pearl of great price is worth more than any gem you can bring from the ocean, than Australian or Brazilian diamonds, or any other gem. Seek after God, and all shall be well hereafter. But I must have a word with these who during the present commercial calamities have lost their property, or perhaps lost all their estate. If a man lose his property at 30 or 40 years of age, it is only a sharp discipline generally, by which later he comes to larger success. It is all folly for a man to sit down in mid-life discouraged. The far-hair of Napoleon came to their commander and said: "We have lost the battle and we are being cut to pieces." Napoleon took his watch from his pocket and said: "It is only 1 o'clock in the afternoon. You have lost that battle, but we have time enough to win another. Charge upon the foe!" Though the meridian of life has passed with you, and you have been routed in many a conflict, give you up in discouragement. There are victories yet for you to gain. But sometimes when a disaster comes to a man when there is nothing in his age, or something in his health, or something in his surroundings, which make him know well that he will never get up again. He has estimated that, for many years previous to that time, he had made there had been $5000 failures in the United States. Many of those persons he recovered from the misfortune. But let me give a word of comfort in passing. The sheriff says sell you out of many things, but there are some things of which he cannot sell you out. He cannot sell out your health. He cannot sell out your family. He cannot sell out your Bible. He cannot sell out your God. He cannot sell out your heaven. You have more than you have lost. Sons and daughters of God, children of an eternal and all-loving father, your not when your property goes. The world is yours, and life is yours, and death is yours, and immortality is yours, and thrones of imperial grandeur are yours, and rivers of gladness are yours, and shining mansions are yours, and God is yours. The eternal God has sworn, it, and every time you doubt it, you charge the king of heaven and earth with perjury. Instead of complaining how hard you have it, so home, take up your Bible full of promises, get down on your knees before God and thank him for what you have. Instead of spending so much time in complaining about what you have not, you remember the shipwreck of the Central American. This noble steamer, had, I think, about five hundred passengers aboard. Suddenly the storm came, and the surges tripped the decks and swung into the hatches, and they went up a hundred-foot death-shriek. The foam on the jaw of the wave. The pitching of the steamer as though it were leaping a mountain. The dismal flare of the signal rockets. The long cough of the steam pipes. The hiss of the extinguished furnaces. The walking of God on the floor. The steamer was not down without a struggle. As the passengers straggled through the rows, so, hale out the vessel, bark to the hump of the buckets, as it is used to toil, with blistered hands and strained muscles, tug for their lives. Here is a sail seen against the sky. The flash of the distress gun-sounded, its voice is heard not for it is choked in the leader booming of the sea. A few passengers escaped, but the steamer gave one great lurch, and was gone. So there are some men who sail on prosperously in life. All's well, all's well. But at last, some financial disaster comes, and they are down. Down they go, the bottom of this commercial sea strewn with shattered hulks. But because your property goes, do not let your soul go. Though all else perish, save that for I have to tell you of a more stupendous shipwreck than that which I have just mentioned. God launched this world six thousand years ago. It has been going on under freight of mountains and immortals; but one day it will stagger at the cry of fire. The timbers of rock will burn, the mountains flame like masts, and the clouds like sails in the judgment hurricane. Then God shall take up the passengers of the deck, and from the wreck those who have long been asleep in Jesus, and he will set them far beyond the reach of storm and peril. But how many shall go down that will never be known, until it shall be announced one day in heaven: the shipwreck of a world! O, my dear hearers, whatever you see, though your houses go, though your lands go, though all your earthly possessions perish, may God Almighty, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, save all your souls.

THE LARGEST TOMB IN THE WORLD is the pyramid of Cheops, 451 feet high and covering thirteen acres of ground. More than two-thirds of the male prisoners in the state's prisons of the various states are under 30 years of age. The largest church in the world is St. Peter's in Rome. The smallest church ten feet square in the Isle of Man. The deepest English colliery at present is Moss colliery, near Ashton-under-Lyne, which is sunk 2,820 feet. A monster marine eel, thirty feet long, was caught in the waters of the Provincetown, Cape Cod, fishermen a short time ago. The fourth verse of the twentieth chapter of Revelation contains more words than any other verse in the New Testament. The little island of Iceland has the same number of newspapers as the great empire of China. The Saylor family of Maryland, Pa., which numbers seventy-eight members, has experienced, but one death in the past sixty-four years. The highest chimneys in the world are two in Glasgow, one being 468 feet high and the other 455 feet, while one near Cologne comes next with a height of 441 feet.

Like No Other Love.

By Charlotte M. Braeme.
CHAPTER II.—CONTINUED.

After that conversation she determined to be firm with her idolized boy, and to give him his first lesson in reading. She went into her boudoir, whither she ordered the child to be brought. He came in laughing, triumphant, clapping his hands, and carrying with him a pretty white kitten.

"Thank you, Mary," said Lady Carew. "Leave Sir Carlos here."
The baby-baronet lay on the soft thick rug, alternately caressing and teasing the white kitten, while the beautiful girl-mother stood watching them.

A certain sense of maternal importance came to her. She was about to give him his first lesson. She brushed aside the thick locks of golden hair; it would never do to have them falling on the book for Carlos would clutch them joyfully. She drew the coquettish widow's cap nearer her brow—the weight of it reminded her of her responsibility. Then she took a silver pencil case, and opening an illustrated alphabet book looked up and said:

"Carlos, come to me. I want you."

The future master of Firholme took not the slightest heed, but continued playing with the kitten, which he compelled to travel along the steel bar of the fender; if it fell on either side it was punished. Even Lady Carew herself sat watching the scene with some little anxiety. It was hardly to be expected that the boy could accomplish until the perilous journey was accomplished. When the kitten had been rapturously taken up by its owner, Lady Carew said gently:

"Carew, come here to me. I want you."

"Not yet," he replied; "wait, mamma, until Snowball goes."

If Lady Carew had been wise, she would have shown her authority at once by compelling him to obey her. She had a chance then that she never afterward regained.

"I will let him wait," she thought, "until Snowball is gone. The loss of a few minutes will not matter."

She sat thinking of all that her husband had said while the child played on happily enough. The fair and gentle lady did not see that she was actually and at that very moment disobeying her husband by not compelling the child to obey her.

A butterfly flew in at an open window; down went the white kitten, and the boy tried to catch the insect, and again, in the sweetest of voices, Lady Carew said:

"I want you, Carlos—come here."

The butterfly hovered for a few moments over a vase of roses; the boy clapped his hands and it flew off again, paused for an instant over a tall arum-lily, and then flew out through the open window over a bed of fragrant flowers. Out went the boy after it, trampling the flowers under foot in pursuit of his prey, regardless of Lady Carew's remonstrances.

This will never do, she thought—this was the very thing Sir Anthony had warned me against. She must resist from the first any attempt at disobedience. Still she stood for a moment or two to watch the lovely upraised face flushed rosy red; there with a more determined look she rang the bell.

"Mary," she said when the nurse appeared, "go into the garden and bring Sir Carlos to me. I want him."

In a few minutes the girl returned, looking rather flushed and hurried, her attire indicating that she had had a severe struggle.

"If you please, my lady, Sir Carlos will not come."

Lady Carew's eyes opened with astonishment.

"You must never bring me a message of that kind from Sir Carlos."

"No, my lady," replied the maid, dropping a courtesy; "but what must I do if he will not come?"

"Carry him here," said the mistress.

"I cannot, he is too strong."

"Then," replied Lady Carew, quickly, "send John; tell him if Sir Carlos resists to take him up in his arms and bring him here."

Shortly afterward John, the giant footman, carried the dauntless little heir into his mother's presence.

John had suffered in the conflict. His curls which were the pride of his heart had been ill-treated, and some of the buttons and tags had been torn from his coat. Mary followed bearing one of the boy's slippers and his broad black sash. The child himself flushed and breathless, resisted even as he was brought in.

"Mamma," he cried, "he would not let me walk; and he frightened the butterfly away! He shall not carry me; I will walk! I will never come when he is sent for me!"

"Place Sir Carlos on the ground," said Lady Carew; and the footman was only too pleased to do so.

Flushed, rebellious, but very beautiful, the boy flung himself at his mother's feet.

"He shall not touch me again," he cried.

The man gave a sigh of relief; the maid bent down to arrange the torn ribbon; Lady Carew became the most sweet and gentle of lecturers when the door opened suddenly, and the rector was announced.

For a few moments he stood in silent astonishment surveying the scene. It changed as if by magic. Footman and maid disappeared. Lady Carew raised her child, and, looking at her visitor said with a smile:

"The child's name, my lady, Carew held Sir Carlos's hand in her gentle clasp. The rector's words were simple enough for any child to understand, but gravely spoken; and as he listened to his stern voice, so unlike his mother's musical tones, the boy's lips quivered and tears fell from his eyes. He clasped his arms round Lady Carew's neck as she bent down.

"I will be good," he sobbed. "I will never be naughty again!"

"A fine nature," remarked the rector; "but he wants great care."

"I am so helpless," faltered Lady Carew.

"Nonsense, my dear lady!" laughed the rector. "I have never seen a really helpless woman. Women are the most helpful creatures in the world—full of activity and resource. You have but to be firm. Now tell me truly, if I had not come in at the critical moment, what would you have done? Would you have corrected the child or would you have filled his hands with sweetmeats and bribed him to be good?"

Lady Carew shook her head.

"I am afraid I should have bribed him," she replied.

Before he left her, Dr. Elsdale strongly advised Lady Carew to find a governess for the boy. To this she agreed; and during the next three years there were some stormy scenes at Firholme. Many were the ladies who came and went away disappointed. None of them could manage Sir Carlos.

One more strong-minded than the rest, did try to punish him; and while Lady Carew was out, visiting, he was shut up in a room without any dinner; but even she gave up hope when she found that one of the footmen had put a ladder to the window, climbed it, and filled the boy's hands with fruit and cakes. The governess laid her complaint before Lady Carew, who sent for the culprit; but the man won his mistress's favor by declaring that he could not eat his own dinner while he thought the child was hungry.

Even the ladies who had retired discomfited could not help loving the spirited, handsome boy. The servants worshipped him. When he did wrong they screened him; they could never be persuaded to tell any of his escapades.

"The boy will stand but a poor chance if he remains here," Dr. Elsdale would say. The best thing for him is a public school, where instead of being one by himself, he will be one of many."

But Lady Carew would not here of this. Her darling should never be treated as she had read of boys being treated at public schools.

"Your husband would have wished it," the rector told her.

She raised her lovely eyes to his face.

"I do not think so," she replied.

"He did not go to a public school himself!"

There was no answer in her opinion to this line of argument. Lady Carew was one of those gentle, amiable, unselfish women whom perhaps Thatcheray has painted more cleverly than any other writer—a woman who must have a master of some kind. Some women are always in subjection to father, brother, husband or son. She was one of this class—one who loved the chains that bound her, and would have been unhappy without them. She was tall and graceful with a face as sweet and tender as it was beautiful; a woman with a soft voice and gentle gestures, everything about her denoting refinement and good breeding; a woman to be almost worshipped for her weakness.

She was essentially a woman of one idea. While her husband lived, she had loved him solely and entirely; now that he was dead, her son had his place in her heart. Young fair and generally beloved when Sir Anthony had been dead some time, many admirers thronged round her. She received many offers of marriage, one from the great magnate of the county, the Duke of Culross, who had never admired any woman so much in his life.

"Marry me," he said to her, "and I will not only be the kindest of husbands to you, but I will be the best of fathers to your boy; and he will need a master believe me."

She shrank from him in trembling dread that was something like horror. Another husband, while Anthony was waiting for her in another world—a second father for her boy whom Anthony had clasped in his dying arms and had left to her care! She thanked the Duke with a scared and bewildered expression, but told him it was impossible.

She could not she said to herself, have two husbands; and hers to her simple mind and loving heart was waiting for her. How could she teach her son to call any one else "father," when Sir Anthony's last words and dying care had been for him?

She went to the room where her husband had died and kissed, with passionate love and pale the pillows where his head had lain. The memory of that beloved husband was dearer to her than the most tender love of any living man.

As she had lived for her husband, so now she lived for her son. Lovers sighed in vain. The only gentlemen who pleased her were those who admired Sir Carlos, and the secret was soon discovered. If any despairing lover went to Firholme and asked for Lady Carew without asking for the boy, he was never invited to Firholme a second time; but if one came with anything for her son—curious eggs from birds' nests, a riding whip, or a whistle—anything likely to please him—then all that there was of the best in the house was at his service. The way to Lady Carew's heart was through her boy.

It was a great pity, all her friends said, that she did not marry again. The boy would be so much better if he had a man to control him. Sweet yielding, gentle Lady Carew was ill-fitted for the care of a high-spirited boy who had will enough to hold his own against almost anybody.

"Perhaps," thought some of her admirers, "when the boy is older and she has less an eye on his account, she may be persuaded to marry." But they could not feel any resentment against her or annoyance, only something like envy for the boy to whom she gave up everything.

After the troop of governesses came retays of tutors; and there was less trouble. Sir Carlos had often thought it beneath his dignity that he should be under the tuition of women. He resented the fact that at Firholme there were so many women, and before he was eight years old he professed himself tired of them.

With the tutors came a new order of thought. Perhaps they were more worldly-wise than the ladies. While they taught Latin and Greek, they did not forget to instruct the boy in the sports he loved. His mother, turned pale when she saw him ready to leap gates or fences and the spirited little pony he rode never refused either. She admired his reckless courage, however, and did not try to check it. The boy must not be a mil sop, she reflected; he must grow up like the brave and martial Carews of old.

So the heir of Firholme grew up one of the handsomest, bravest and brightest of boys. He was generous beyond measure; he had a wonderfully sensitive heart, and could not endure the sight of pain—nor did he ever wilfully inflict it on the weak or helpless never appealed to him in vain. Many a time did he dismount from his pony to carry the burden of an old man or woman toiling along in the noonday heat.

He was idolized by the country folks. Gray-haired men bowed low to him, and pretty maidens blushed and brightened at his approach. His word was law, his will was master; and when he reached the age of sixteen and looked back upon his life he could not remember that at any time he had wished for anything and been refused.

FIELD-GUNS.

Difficulties of High Velocity—A Few Extra Feet.

The high velocity is gained not only at the expense of the carriage, but of the projectile. The violent forces in the bore break up projectiles formed of the ordinary cast-iron, and steel has to be employed for shells, a material not only more costly, but less well adapted to the purpose, or when it is intended. Cartridge breaks up readily into small pieces and allows the force of the bursting charge to have full effect, while a steel shell is strong enough to resist the explosion inside it too effectually is only partially opened, and does not fly into splinters. Other difficulties also arise in connection with fuses, says the Saturday Review, and these have in fact proved so insuperable that the great powers of the 12-pounder cannot be fully utilized—as regards shrapnel, at any rate—because a time fuse cannot be made to act at anything except ordinary ranges.

The situation is this—that if you insist on high velocity you have to add so much additional machinery to your gun carriage and have to so greatly strengthen its construction that you destroy its mobility, while even if you gain a long range you are still unable to make use of your most efficient projectile at it. Moreover, since the remaining velocity of its shrapnel is a true measure of the value of a gun than its initial velocity, and the two are by no means directly proportional, it does not follow that we benefit as much as we might expect by submitting to these disadvantages.

Thus the 12-pounder has an initial velocity of over 1,000 feet per second and a remaining velocity at 3,000 yards of 862 feet, while the 13-pounder with an initial velocity of only 1,560 feet, has at the same range a remaining velocity greater, by six feet per second than that of its rival. One of our highest authorities on field artillery has indeed recorded his opinion that as regards the efficiency of shrapnel we gain nothing by the increased muzzle velocity of "the best field-gun in Europe" at all practical ranges. Moreover, it is the attempt to squeeze out the last few extra feet that does all the harm.

A MINIATURE.

A Beautiful Portrait of Washington Owned in Lynchburg, Va.

In his diary under date of Oct. 3, 1793, General George Washington made this entry: "at for Ramage near two hours to-day, who was drawing a miniature picture of me for Mrs. Washington." What is believed to be this identical portrait of Washington, painted on ivory, is now in the possession of Harry S. Stabler of Lynchburg, Va., says the Collector.

It was painted by Ramage, an Irish miniature painter, of New York at that time, for Mrs. Washington, from whom Betty Washington, afterward Mrs. Betty Lewis, had it. She in turn left it to her granddaughter, Otwayna Carter, who married Dr. W. O. Owen, of Lynchburg. He left this portrait, together with other relics of Washington, similarly inherited, to Jenny Woodville Latham, of Lynchburg, who married Thomas S. Stabler, the father of Harry S. Stabler, the present owner of the relics. This miniature is in a time-worn case oval in form. In the back of it is a lock of Washington's hair. It is a beautiful piece of work and even under a magnifying glass bears the closest inspection. The locket holding the miniature and the lock of hair is something more than two inches in length.

WATCHING THE OXEN.

Queer Maneuvers on the Part of Cattle to Get Their Food.

I live in a country village, writes a Maine correspondent of the Youth's Companion, and just outside the back window of my office a farmer the other day hitched a yoke of oxen. He dropped down a ration of hay in front of them and then left them to enjoy it after their own fashion. An interesting contest over it at once arose between "Buck" and "Broad."

The intent of their maneuvers to get possession of the toothsome pile was as apparent as if words had spoken their thoughts. As they were attached to each end of the unyielding yoke, success depended largely on the application of muscle to one end of the yoke or the other.

Buck, the "right" ox was at first "the best feller" in this game of tug, and tried soon had nosed the whole bundle of hay over to his side so far that Broad could not get a bite except by the exercise of his wits. If he used no reason in his cogitations, he certainly had something in his nose, a pretty closely akin to it.

He found by practice that he could pull Buck better than he could push him, and he took advantage of the fact in a queer way.

When Buck had got the hay well over to the length of the chain on his side, Broad braced himself and resolutely pulled; the stung fellow over his way, so that both of them were kept destitute.

Buck scirmed, hooked and tried to reach the hay by running out his long tongue, but to no avail, Broad held him out of reach. Then the cunning fellow used stratagem on Broad, by pushing him off in the direction in which he was drawing. Broad did not know what to make of the new tactics, and plainly looked puzzled. But he determined to oppose his mate even to the detriment of his own purposes and began to push Buck over toward the hay.

This, of course, was just what the wily animal wanted. He acquiesced gracefully and in a moment grabbed his long tongue, but to no avail, Broad held him out of reach. Then the cunning fellow used stratagem on Broad, by pushing him off in the direction in which he was drawing. Broad did not know what to make of the new tactics, and plainly looked puzzled. But he determined to oppose his mate even to the detriment of his own purposes and began to push Buck over toward the hay.

This, of course, was just what the wily animal wanted. He acquiesced gracefully and in a moment grabbed his long tongue, but to no avail, Broad held him out of reach. # None but Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Govt Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

If you want the Best Food, Royal Baking Powder is indispensable.

Are Grabber's writings all original, do you think?—Yes; I guess the writing is all that is tough.

Jinks—Don't you think that the intentions of French duellists are more honorable than is generally conceded?—Fikins—Oh, yes; as a rule they aim high.

Dora—What road did you travel over?—Clara—The North Southern railroad, and I'll never patronize that line again, either. Their carriages are Qurtaycher says that every man should try to get to the top, said the big voraciously. Broad faintly saw the situation and began pulling process again.

The result was that Buck, having his nose deep in the hay, when he was suddenly pulled over by Broad, brought more or less of the coveted food with him, and at this point Broad seemed to evolve a new idea, and over which his big, placid eyes fairly twinkled. Buck, of course, was trying to resist his efforts, but when he had hauled a part of the hay over Broad suddenly gave way and let Buck back. Thus he was enabled to get possession of a few mouthfuls, which he enjoyed hugely.

Broad continued this process until the game was stopped by the appearance of the owner to take them away. And how like the life of mankind if all was!

The crown of the old Scottish kings is still preserved. It is formed of two circles of gold, the upper and narrow circle being surmounted by a row of crosses and gem-encrusted imitation flowers.

John Morgan, a farmer of Parkersville, Edgefield county, S. C., has greatly interested his neighbors by alternating rows of cotton with rows of speckled peas. He expects to have a crop of each.

Fritz Christen, aged twenty-three years, from Switzerland, who arrived at Ellis Island a few days ago, is reputed to be one of the smallest immigrants ever landed. He is said to stand but two feet and a half in height.

The townships of Earl and Cernarvon in Pennsylvania have each account books which have been continuously in use since 1792. Both townships have purchased new books in which to record their accounts, beginning April, 1892.

There is an old miller, ninety-four years of age, living nine miles from Versailles, Ky., who has been running the same mill for about eighty years. He started it before the war of 1812 when he and a boy, and the waters of the Elkhorn creek have kept it going for him ever since.

Probably the largest tombstone in the world is that of the late Henry Scarlett of Upson county, Ga. Several years before Mr. Scarlett's death he selected a monster boulder—a miniature mountain of granite, 100 feet by 250 in dimensions—and when he died this huge tombstone was placed over his grave.

Letter boxes have been attached to the street cars in Huddersfield, England, and letters can be posted in these boxes as the cars are traversing the suburbs, the boxes being emptied by the post office employes on the arrival of the car at or near the central post office on each trip. If a person stops the car especially for the purpose of mailing a letter, a penny is collected by the conductor and deposited in the fare box.

The projected canal from Bordeaux to Narbonne, France, whereby a connection will be obtained between the Bay of Biscay and the Mediterranean, is now again to the fore. Applications have been made to the government for a ninety-nine years' concession and a state guarantee for two per cent. The aggregate length of this waterway would be some 350 miles, breadth 120 feet to 200 feet, and depth twenty-seven feet, so that the largest vessels could pass through it.

A List of Those Who Come and Those Who Go.

Chas. Booth Detroited Wednesday. Carl Capell is home from Detroit. E. L. Phipps spent Sunday at Milford.

Mrs. Fred Taylor is with Mrs. W. G. Lapham.

Miss Lottie Lake visited relatives at Wixom last week.

Mrs. L. A. Yerkes and daughter Hattie are in Chicago.

Miss Flora Duronsa of Flint is the guest of Mrs. Peter Connell.

Albert Long and Adelsaid Blodgett are at the Dubuar cottage at the lake.

Miss Nina Ambler is visiting her friend, Miss Blanche Bigelow, at Flint.

Mrs. I. N. Starkweather and daughter are visiting in Detroit this week.

Mrs. Nellie Arnold and daughters are spending a few weeks at Algonac.

Will Long is spending a few weeks with relatives and friends at Oxbridge, Ont.

L. A. Beal was on a business trip to Detroit, Lenox and other places this week.

Herman Steif "wheeled" it to Detroit Saturday to spend Sunday with friends.

Ed. and Gene Riggs took in the Detroit races this week—but were not taken in.

F. R. Beal returned Saturday from a business trip in the interests of the Globe Co.

W. W. Dibble and wife have just returned from a two weeks' visit at the world's fair.

Miss Maude Merritt spent last week in and about Salem with her mother and other friends.

Mrs. Clara Allen of Detroit spent the week of the fourth at Mayor Linton's, Saginaw.

Miss Jessie Ely is attending Permin's Business College, Detroit, having left for there Saturday.

Mrs. F. W. Rawdon and son Walter of New York are visiting her brother, Rev. J. M. Belding.

Fred Root, a former Northviller, now of Detroit, is taking in the beauty of our village this week.

H. Teichner started for the world's fair Saturday night, where he will spend about two weeks.

C. M. Joslin, wife and daughter Nellie are taking in the sights at the White City this week.

J. M. Ambler arrived in town Saturday morning after a month's absence in Pennsylvania and New York.

Mrs. Hurd of Detroit and Mrs. Waring of Alma have been guests at the Randolph homestead this week.

Miss Della Armstrong, now Mrs. Edward Thorchill, of Milford spent several days last week at the Park house here.

Louis Root is captain of the fishing and exploring party at Walled Lake.

The party consists of Major General Foster VanZile, Commodore George Allen.

Misses Lyda and Edna McRoberts left for Lexington for three weeks visit after which time Lyda will go on to Mackinac to spend the summer and Edna will return home.

Miss Flossie Pamer, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. Yerkes, left Tuesday for Detroit. After visiting the world's fair, she returns to her home in Gainesville, Fla.

Orr Webster returned from the famous City of Springs, Saratoga, N. Y., last Friday. He says Northville is the same place he left her last spring only she has grown larger and prettier.

Mrs. P. F. Lapham of So. Dakota is visiting her father-in-law, Luther Lapham and family here. Before returning home Mrs. L. will visit relatives and friends about the Wolverine state.

Prof. Landmark, one of Denmark's Fish Commissioners to the world's fair, was looking our hatchery over the past week. The Professor is very acholary and expressed himself as delighted with his American trip. He paid a fine compliment to our citizen Mr. Clark.

E. N. Clark is in Washington. He left Saturday spending Sunday at Niagara Falls. A $25,000 appropriation for a fish hatchery on the St. Lawrence, has caused some disagreement at head-quarters and Mr. Clark was sent for to settle the matter and locate the hatchery where he thinks best. Some four hundred letters from interested parties await his attention in Washington. In this connection it might be proper to say that Mr. Clark at Washington is considered one of the best men in his line that the U. S. has in their employ.

"Our Men's Meeting."

Is the young man safe?

"Hold on, hold fast, hold forth, hold up, hold out." That is a good motto for each of us.

We extend a cordial invitation to you to attend our meetings. You haven't forgotten have you?

"Success is seldom accidental," some one has well said. It comes in answer to persistent and well directed effort.

Education is a grand acquisition, but character is a nobler one, having that, the American boy should always be radiant with hope, whether his hands ever grasp a college parchment or not.

"A genuine enthusiasm is both inspiration and strength. It is a cheer in the race; a song on the march; the battle cry in a charge. Enthusiasm is contagious—the leader will impart it to others."

H. M. Filibrown is always an inspirer and Sunday's meeting was no exception. He knows how to force a truth home to his hearers. His subject was "Helpless, Hopeless, Healed." Despite the rain fifty attended the service. W. J. LaFraugh entertained Mr. F. while here.

ONE OF THE MEN.

A POSITIVE FACT.

Ladies do not delay your valuable time by waiting and suffering, but secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and be cured of your trouble either in old or young. It is the very best prescription I have ever prescribed in my extensive practice. It has given the best results in the greatest number of cases of female troubles of any medicine that I ever used. I do not make a practice of using or recommending patent medicines, but this remedy is prepared by a very competent physician and chemist of my acquaintance and I can cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it as the best.

BALD HEADS!

What is the condition of yours? Is your hair dry, harsh, brittle? Does it split at the ends? Has it a lifeless appearance? Does it fall out when combed or brushed? Is it full of dandruff? Does your scalp itch? Is it dry or in a heated condition? If these are some of your symptoms be warned in time or you will become bald.

Skookum Root Hair Grower

Is what you need. Its production is not an accident, but the result of scientific research. Knowledge of the diseases of the hair and scalp led to the discovery of how to treat them. "Skookum" contains neither minerals nor oils. It is not a dye, but a delightfully cooling and refreshing tonic. By stimulating the follicles, it stops falling hair, cures dandruff and grows hair on bald heads.

Keep the scalp clean, healthy, and free from irritating eruptions, by the use of Skookum Skin Soap. It destroys parasitic insects, which feed on and destroy the hair.

If your druggist cannot supply you send direct to us, and we will forward prepaid, on receipt of price. Grower, $1.00 per bottle; 6 for $5.00. Soap, 50c per jar; 6 for $2.50.

Don't forget the ice cream and cake social given by the fire-department Saturday evening of this week.

Dr. Root intent upon maneuvering on a bicycle, fell and fractured a rib. He has been disabled the past week.

A number of the Northville wheelmen accompanied by their bicycles will attend the races at Detroit Saturday.

The milk condensery are not carrying their milk now but send it to Detroit, where it is sold to milk wagons.

The Foreign missionary society of the Methodist church sent a box of Christmas presents to the children in Pekin, China, Tuesday.

Two Salvationists, young women, were in town selling the "War Cry," their army organ, and distributing notices of the big rally at Flint.

Rains and warmth have been admirably distributed, from a grower's point of view, in this section of the country so far this summer. The farmers of this section are a lucky lot.

Lute Elliott has purchased an engine and separator, and is now prepared to do all kinds of threshing in the latest approved style, with promptness and dispatch.

Rev. Mr. Parrish looks well rested since his vacation and is now ready for a long and faithful campaign. Nothing pays a better dividend than rest and change when one is weary.

The numerous friends of ex-Rev. Donald Fletcher, who used to be the Presbyterian shepherd at this place, will be sorry to learn that with other Denver men, he has been forced to resign.

At last the council have arranged a fire alarm system. It is not a great one, but it is a far better than the old way of none at all. The council are to be congratulated upon their wise movement.

Chas. Dolph has purchased the Carrington place of C. C. Chadwick. Mr. and Mrs. Chadwick will continue to occupy the same until this fall when they will move to their farm on the Base-line east.

The alarm of fire that was given Monday evening was only an alarm for exercise. The fire company were in the third ward—where the fire was supposed to be—in almost a shorter time than it takes to write it.

The water-works company are rushed with orders for pipe connections. They put in the water at rate of two orders a day and yet some are very impatient to get it and can hardly wait. First come, first served, is their motto. The Sunday night audiences at the Presbyterian church are putting the water on the church lawn.

If you wish to measure anything and have no rule or tape line at hand, but happen to have a silver quarter, half dollar or dollar those convenient articles will fill the bill to your entire satisfaction. A U. S. dollar is one inch and a half in diameter, a half dollar is just an inch and an eighth and a quarter dollar just seven-eighths of an inch.

Bro. H. O. Wills, his gospel wagon and three singers, were here Tuesday and Tuesday evening. At noon they held a service at the factories and in the evening on the public square, followed by a gospel temperance meeting in the Methodist church. There were large crowds in attendance at all the meetings and the singing and services were very interesting.

Last Sunday night there were unusual attractions in our churches Mr. Brown of the Y. M. C. A. spoke at the Baptist; Rev. Mr. Parrish, refreshed from his summer outing, spoke on "Courtship and Marriage;" Rev. J. M. Belding made an address on "American Citizenship," taking the un-American act of Gov. Altgeld in pardoning the anarchists as the cause of his timely expression.

The alligator at the U. S. fish hatchery is dead. Ever since Rob. Waterman left, the animal has been failing, and it is thought that it mourned itself to this untimely end.

The Marie Knibloe enter tournament Saturday night called out a small but appreciative audience. Miss Knibloe is fine and if she comes again under favorable circumstances will find friends here.

It is reported by that wagging tongue of Dame Gossip that one or two weddings are drawing to a head, and that four hearts will soon dwindle down to two "with but a single thought, etc."

Croquet holds its own among our villagers. Harrison Yerkes is a great lover of the mallet and ball and makes many a studied crack shot. The lawns of Yerkes' and Ely's keep up a musical racket in that neighborhood.

The council should order the low hanging shade tree limbs cut from over the sidewalks. It certainly should not take a petition and a kick from the whole village to get so needful a thing done. There has been a general complaint about this for a month.

Our Thayer's Corners correspondent suggests that our "Special Congress" be asked to boom up prices for the farmer's products as well as for the "silver" men. There is something in this and a few more suggestions along this line might get the Washington rulers badly mixed up.

One great advantage Northville visitors to the world's fair will find in stopping at Rev. H. S. Jenkinson's, So. Chicago, is the fact of the easy access to the grounds, the perfect quietness of the neighborhood, and the conveniences at this home. The street cars are never crowded, as they are towards other parts of the great city. The cars stop in front of the entrance and go within half a block of Mr. Jenkinson's home.

A Homeric spirit recently prevailed in the Northville council, for about fifteen minutes; when the "grave and revered seniors" ordered the marshal to stop cigar, ice-cream and milk selling, Sunday. The marshal sprang up, virtually told the council that they were a set of fools and actually made them believe it. They laid the matter on the table. "Sunset" Cox once said, "It is well to be right, but not well to be excessively right."—Adrian Press.

The Hammond Refrigerator Co. of Northville have shut down their factory.—Wayne Review.

There's just two lies in this article. Firstly there is no Hammond refrigerator factory here—its the Haurahan. Secondly they have not shut down nor are they likely to. The usual number of men, say nine or ten, throughout the entire Globe works were laid off on account of the dull time of the year. This occurs every season and is never thought worth mentioning.

Just before the Chicago excursionists of the Michigan Press Association broke up, after six day's pleasures at the big fair, many of them gathered in the Mecca Hotel parlor, and through President J. E. Beal presented J. M. Page, secretary of the National Editorial Association, with a silver coffee urn, in appreciation of the courtesies he had caused to be extended to the Michigan quill drivers. At the same time and place was presented by Wm. P. Nisbett, for those who made the excursion from Detroit to Chicago by water, to Secretary James Slocum a very handsome bronze clock, as a token of esteem and appreciation of his good services, and also a case of sterling silver spoons to his wife. It was a happy ending of a most pleasant and enjoyable meeting of the prosperous State Press Association.

FROM OUR OWN STATE.

NEWS WHICH WILL INTEREST WOLVERINES.

Manitou County's Financial Difficulties.

One of Uncle Sam's Boys Responsible for a Girl's Suicide.—Accidents.

Curtiss & Wiley, of Petoskey, have begun suit in the United States court at Grand Rapids against the county of Manitou to collect $3,500 due on bonds issued six years ago.

These bonds were negotiated in Petoskey and Curtiss & Wiley who purchased them have since whistled in vain either for principal or interest.

The bonds are secured by the entire county and it is within the possibility that the bondholders may by the foreclosure proceedings become the nominal owners of the entire territory.

A MAGNIFICENT NERVE.

A Grand Rapids Young Man Lays Plans to Forge $500,000.

The biggest sensation in the matter of forgeries which has ever occurred at Port Huron has been unearthed.

The victim is the bank of Flint and Grand Rapids. Had it not been for the sharp detective work of the forger...

He arrived at Port Huron last week and passed a forged check upon the Commercial bank. This was discovered, but the matter was smoothed over.

Later Smith's friends settled the claims of Flint and Port Huron parties against the culprit and he was released at Port Huron, but was promptly taken to Grand Rapids where he will undoubtedly be prosecuted.

Michigan World's Fair Expenditures.

The regular quarterly meeting of the board of Michigan's World's Fair commissioners was held in the Michigan State building at the World's Fair with Commissioners Weston, Belding, White, Flynn, Pond and Valentine present.

Secretary Stevens presented a statement of expenditures of the board since its organization Aug. 5, 1891, and the balances to the credit of the various funds.

Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 13 and 14, having been designated as Michigan days the following committee was appointed to make the preparations for celebrating them: Governor Rich, President Weston and Commissioners Flynn and Valentine.

See Head at the Agricultural College.

The state board of agriculture filled two vacancies in the faculty of the Agricultural college. After canvassing the matter thoroughly the board selected Prof. Lewis G. Gordon, of Detroit, as successor to President Cuite, whose resignation takes effect Aug. 1.

Whirled to an Awful Death.

Hugh Green, a young man employed at a mill at Charlevoix, was caught by a belt while putting it on a pulley and whirled about the shaft with an awful force. Every bone in his body was broken.

Hon. Fred Brasted's Generosity.

NOW WILLIAM SMILES.

THE ARMY BILL FOR GERMANY IS A SETTLED MATTER.

The Government secures a majority of sixteen votes on the final ballot.

Berlin special: The army bill was passed by the reichstag by a majority of 16, the vote standing 201 in favor of the measure and 185 against it.

The emperor's delight at the passage of the bill and rumor has it that he will confer upon Chancellor von Caprivi the dignity of a prince.

The opponents of the bill are very much chagrined at the turning down they received and take no pains to conceal their feelings.

Sandusky was chosen as the next place of meeting, second Tuesday in July, 1894.

Many thousand Maccabees were the guests of Muskegon, and Hackley park was the scene of a grand reunion.

A TERRIBLE RECORD.

Five Murders, at Leetz, Laid at the Door of Dr. H. C. W. Meyer.

A German physician was arrested in Detroit on the charge of murder—in order to obtain the insurance of his wife—and since his record has been looked up five murders for the same purpose have been traced to his hand.

Dr. Henry C. W. Meyer—known to different parts of the country as Hugo Weyler, alias William Reutter, alias Schaffer, alias Oswald alias Stoffen—graduated from the Chicago Homeopathic College of Medicine in 1873.

He began the practice of medicine in Chicago after graduation and is said to have poisoned his first wife in Chicago, but for what reason he did so is unknown.

His next crime was the poisoning of a grocer of Chicago named Gederman. Shortly after Gederman's death Meyer was tried in Chicago for the murder of Gederman and acquitted.

Mrs. Meyer No. 2 had a child by her first husband and in order to get rid of it Meyer is alleged to have poisoned it. For this crime he was arrested and tried and again acquitted.

His next crime was the attempted poisoning of his wife. His motive in this action was his infatuation for a girl named Dresser. His relations with this girl were such that Mrs. Meyer secured a divorce from Myers and thus escaped the fate that her husband is said to have intended for her.

Miss Dresser was the daughter of a rich German living in Chicago, a man of good standing and character. Meyer, after his wife had secured her divorce, married Miss Dresser, and shortly afterward insured her life in the Germania Life Insurance company for $5,000 by forging Mr. Dresser's name.

The forgery was discovered there and Meyer fled to Denver, but was extradited and brought back to Chicago for trial. The judge of Myers did not desert him and he was again acquitted.

Pending the trial Meyer was detained in prison and there met Ludwig Brandt, also in prison for forgery. Meyer and Brandt hatched up a scheme to insure Brandt's life heavily.

He had him fall sick, pretend to die and buy a corpse procured for the purpose while Brandt disappeared. The scheme worked to perfection to a certain point. The two went to New York; Brandt's life was insured for $3,500 in four companies including $3,500 in the Mutual Life; a mock marriage was performed between Meyer's wife and Brandt.

Brandt fell sick and several physicians of repute were baffled by the disease and finally Brandt did die in reality. The Mutual Life was not satisfied and refused to pay their policy, but the other companies did and Meyer and his wife vanished. The Mutual Life placed their best man on the case after ascertaining that Brandt had been poisoned.

The detective was hot on the doctor's trail when a case very similar to the one on which he was working fell under his observation.

Hugo Weyler and his sister in June, 1892, located in Toledo and employed as a servant Mary Weiss. He tried to insure her as his wife in the Michigan Mutual, was unsuccessful, but obtained a $5,000 policy in the Equitable Life and moved to South Bend, Ind. Here Weyler—otherwise Dr. Meyer—opened a bucket shop and attracted attention by a sensational failure.

Mary Weiss was ill for several weeks and an address of Brandt had been, and on advice of her friends left the Weylers, who then went to Indianapolis. Here another girl was secured who passed as Mrs. Weyler—although the alleged sister was his real wife—and it was only a short time before she was very ill and finally died. The Equitable Life investigated and found that while the policy described Mrs. Weyler as a blonde, with gold filling in her teeth, her dark woman was dark and had no filling in her teeth. Mary Weiss turned up suddenly and the Weylers fled.

The detectives working on the Brandt case took up this clue, and following Weyler's trail finally located him at Detroit where he was known as Dr. Schaffer. He was arrested and thoroughly identified as Dr. Meyer.

Gov. Rich's Pardons.

Gov. Rich has pardoned James M. Shook, sent to Jackson from Muskegon for 12 years for burglary. The pardon board and the governor both believed the sentence to be excessive. Shook had already served five years. Alfred Engleman was sent to Ionia for forgery. His sentence was five years. Both his victim and the prosecuting attorney petitioned for the release.

Italians Becoming Citizens.

There is a movement among the many Italians of this section about Red Jacket to become American citizens. The "Independent Italian club" has been organized with a charter membership of 150 and it is expected that the number will soon reach 600. The object of the club is to educate its members on the political matters of this country and to have all who join it become naturalized.

Congressman Found Dead in Bed.

Gen. W. H. Enoch, congressman from Ironton, O., was found dead in bed. Gen. Enoch died from apoplexy. He had been suffering from the grip for several months. Congressman Enoch was born near Middleburg, Noble county, O., March 29, 1842. He was elected to represent the Tenth Ohio district in the coming Fifty-third congress.

Dr. G. A. Waterman, of Reading, has been called to the chair of professor of veterinary science in the Connecticut State Agricultural college at Storrs, Conn., and will enter upon the discharge of his new duties in September.

Andrew Spencer, superintendent of the eastern Cherokee Indian school, has been transferred to the superintendent of the Mt. Pleasant Indian school, and will assume his duties as soon as he can be relieved at the eastern Cherokee institution, at which time Mr. Riopel will step down and out.

The old Drury Lane theater in London, which has been in existence 266 years, is about to be demolished.

Admiral Farragut's old flagship, the Hartford, is to be remodeled and placed in a starry service with a modern battery.

FIVE KILLED IN A WRECK.

A West Shore Passenger Train Jumps the Track With Fearful Results.

West Shore day express No. 1 was wrecked in the West Shore freight yard at Newburg, N. Y., resulting in the death of five persons and the injury of a large number of others.

The train consisted of locomotive, baggage and express car, a smoking car, day coaches and parlor car. The train was a few minutes late at Cornwall, four miles south of Newburg and was running very fast. When it reached the switch which connects the main road with the West Shore freight yard, a mile south of the Newburg station, the engine jumped upon the frog and left the track.

Since equal to the length of the train and then crashed into a freight train standing in the yard. The crash was terrific. The express engine was evidently further off the track than the remainder of the train and when it struck the freight engine it was thrown to one side and the tender torn from it.

The engineer, upon feeling the engine leave the track, shut off the steam, whistled for brakes and he and the fireman jumped and he was badly bruised. The engineer escaped with very slight injuries. Fred Holland, engineer of the freight, had his skull fractured at the base and was cut over the eye. It is thought that he will recover. No one else on the freight train was hurt.

There was about a dozen persons in the smoking car and nearly all escaped injury. Coach No. 71 was filled with passengers, every seat being occupied. Nearly all the casualties occurred in this car. It swayed to one side and struck the projecting end of a box car standing on a side track. The entire side of No. 71 was ripped off and the end nearest to the smoker was smashed. All those who were killed were on that side of the car.

Several Italians Killed by a Bomb. By the premature explosion of a fire works bomb at Chicago, at an Italian picnic several people were killed and a number of others injured. The bomb was fired from an extemporized mortar and was intended to be exploded high in the air, the explosion to be accompanied by a shower of brilliant fire. Just as the charge was about to be fired there was a deafening roar and the liquid fire and burning explosives together with the pieces of the mortar containing the bomb were hurled in every direction. Hundreds of persons were standing about the spot and the flash and report were followed by the cries of those stricken to the earth. No lights were at first to be had and the dead and wounded lay together beneath the feet of those who were able to escape from the spot.

World's Fair Closed on Sunday. The World's Fair is to be closed on Sundays and it will not be open to the public on the first day of the week. The admissions of last Sunday had already been donated for the relief of the families of the firemen who lost their lives in the recent fire on the grounds and but for this fact the fair would probably have been closed on that day. The vote of the local directory reversing its former action was overwhelmingly in favor of closing. It standing 24 to 4. When the meeting closed the directors called an address meeting Sunday closing, signed by all the leading Chicago city managers, was read. The close of the address was the signal for a series of speeches, all of them in favor of closing the fair and strong resolutions were passed.

WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

New York, July 11.—Bradstreet's weekly review of the state of trade says: Anticipations of excessive demands on New York banks resulted in preparations to meet such requests and all orders were promptly placed the looking up of funds by capitalists, bankers and others caused high rates for money, further restricted commercial discounts resulted in several banks cashing checks at the subpar rate instead of using the clearing house and in other ways produced a rather unfavorable financial situation which, however, has since been relieved. Chicago, too, has felt an increase in demand for funds and New York's relative inability to supply the same was commented on west and southwest. An unexpected heavy increase in stocks of wheat in Europe and a cut for Europe was not entirely offset by the relatively small decrease in the United States and Canada, even with the 100,000 by decrease in Australia included. Iron and steel industries are slack, with the latter, however, accumulating. Manufacturers think the price of wool will go lower. Anthracite coal has been arbitrarily advanced. Lumber is stronger at the northwest, and sugar is up. Wheat, oats, cotton and co. have also advanced fractionally while leather, live hogs, Indian corn and lard have declined correspondingly.

During June the World's Fair cleared over $1,000,000 above expenses.

The Bankers' association of Buffalo, have declared for the repeal of the silver purchasing section of the Sherman act.

The village of Princeton, Ind., was nearly destroyed by fire and an unknown man burned to death. Loss, $250,000; insurance, $150,000.

Robert Larkin, a Negro, was lynched and his body riddled with bullets in Ocala, Fla., for assaulting Fanny Alexander, a young lady of high social connections.

"German Syrup"

I simply state that I am Druggist and Postmaster here and am therefore in a position to judge. I have tried many Cough Syrups but for ten years past have found nothing equal to Boschee's German Syrup. I have given it to my baby for Croup with the most satisfactory results. Every mother should have it. J. H. Hobbs, Druggist and Postmaster, Hobbs, Texas. We present facts, living facts, of to-day: Boschee's German Syrup gives strength to the body. Take no substitute.

AMONG THE CLOUDS.

During my life I have had only one adventure, but that was of so fearful a nature, so full of peril that it has left on my mind so vivid an impression that I shall never forget it. Should my mind become a blank, should all other things fade away, the memory of those few hours would still remain. Although years have passed since then I still retain the memory of that awful experience as if it happened yesterday.

When I was to be among my friends an aeronaut, Professor Dixon by name. One day the professor gave me an invitation to accompany him in an ascension to take place in San Francisco. Being adventurously inclined, I accepted. My knowledge of balloons was very small, being gathered mainly from what I had read. I have lived the larger portion of my life in a small country village and had never yet witnessed a balloon ascension. Indeed, I had never seen a balloon other than those of those small paper toys. But my ignorance of ballooning instead of making me hesitate caused me to be all the more eager.

At last the eventful day arrived. When I reached the grounds the balloon was already inflated and Professor Dixon was delivering a short lecture upon ballooning from a loggoleer to the present day. The wind was blowing strongly, almost a gale it seemed to me, but as the aeronaut felt no apparent concern, I took my place without anxiety.

The professor soon finished his discourse and ordered the men therefor that purpose to cut the ropes. They obeyed his command. At the same time there came an extremely powerful gust of wind.

By some means the anchor, which was upon the outside of the basket, at that instant became loosened, slipped and fell to the ground. The wind coming with such force at the same moment gave to the balloon a sideways tendency. Instead of ascending directly it was borne along by the wind, dragging the anchor after it over the ground.

This immediately caused a panic among the spectators, who rushed to the right or left to escape the danger. All were fortunate enough to do so except a negro.

He was so frightened that he stood still, staring at the oncoming anchor. The anchor, trailing on the ground, hooked the balloon and the rope an inclination oblique to the earth. Consequently the negro was struck by it on the forehead and being very fat, it instantly upset him. At the same time his feet flew up and the spokes of the anchor caught him under the knees, causing him to convulsively bend them. There was a sudden lull in the wind and the balloon changing its course from a horizontal to a vertical one, rapidly arose, with the negro dangling from the end of the anchor line.

We were for a moment appalled by his peril, but Professor Dixon quickly grasped the rope, and with an exhibition of strength I had not given him credit for possessing, hauled up the anchor and pulled the negro into the car. The negro's peril seemed to have in some way affected his senses and we were unable to get any words from him. Whatever we said or did he only stared at us with a vacant expression.

The professor decided to continue his trip, and after leaving over the ballast we sat down and talked of the negro's adventure, the balloon in the meanwhile going in a southeasterly direction. At the same time he told me a number of exciting adventures that had happened to himself and his aeronaut friends.

the peculiar phenomenon. Half an hour had passed when we again espied an island. We looked at it. Yes, it was the same island! The professor stared at it as it so quickly neared and as quickly disappeared; but with a vacant look in his eyes. This time it was still further to the right.

When it had disappeared from our sight, Professor Dixon turned to me. "Fred," he said, and there was something in his very tones that warned me of greater perils, "we are in the path of a cyclone. Faster and faster it is carrying us around; always nearing the center, soon we will be in the very eye and then what happens none of us will ever know." And with a pale face he resumed his seat in the bottom of the car.

I realized the dreadful import of his words. We would continue our circuitous course to the middle of this aerial maelstrom and would at last reach the center and then what would happen? Where was the outlet? Did it reach downward to the blue waters far below us, or did it reach upward far into space?

If we lived we would know. Our speed had increased until it was faster than the fastest train. Now all around us there was flying driftwood, trees and wreckage of every nature, all going in the circular course with us but in the center of the aerial whirlpool the motion was upward. Huge trees would arise with lightning-like rapidity to disappear—where?

During all this time we had been obliged to hold ourselves to the bottom of the car by main force. The negro, although he held on tightly, uttered no sound until the car was struck by an immense tree. Opening his eyes, which were shut, he uttered an awful shriek; a cry of intense horror that I can hear to this day, and springing up the side.

"Gravitation seemed suspended; he remained in the air for a minute, and then there was a sight which would have sickened any man. He was struck by two masses of wood and fairly tumbled into pulp before our eyes.

The sight was horrible. It shocked my senses that man though I would, I have done so had not the scene around me possessed so terrible a fascination as to keep my mind busy. Huge trees, spars and many other things there were; all twirling and twisting about as lightly as a feather.

But now a change occurred. The circles of the balloon grew smaller and smaller, and the speed faster and faster, and finally with a loud whizz our course was changed from a circular to an upward one.

Although our former speed had been great, far swifter than any form of locomotion, it was now ten—yes, probably twenty times greater. Upward we shot with a swiftness that took my very breath away; yes, that took the vision away from before my eyes. Nothing could I see, not even the sides of the balloon car of which I had held. Everything appeared as an unbroken gray mass of chaos.

GULIANA AT CHICAGO.

INTERESTING EXHIBITS FROM A PROGRESSIVE COUNTRY.

Samples of Timber in the Agricultural Building—The Zoological Collection—Something About Guliana's Wild Animals—Industrial Resources.

(World's Fair Correspondence.)

HAT THE WORLD shall fully understand the many attractions of British Guiana, a brief description is in order. The exhibit is a general one, not an agricultural exhibit, as one might expect from the fact that it is in an agricultural hall. It is almost the first one the visitor runs across as he enters the big building from the northwest corner. One of the top big signs reads: "British Guiana, Commissioner (Qu-let) is a believer in having signs plain and plentiful. Every article in the show is plainly placarded, and something told about it is very satisfactory to the curious sightseer."

There is a great deal to see and it is arranged in attractive manner. One of the chief inducements of the country is the manufacture of sugar, and it is given prominent position in the arrangement of the exhibit. Mr. Qu-let is a scientist, a pleasant gentleman, and takes pleasure in telling the visitors that they are looking at and where it came from, what it is used for, how much it weighs, etc.

He will tell anybody interested in the technical questions of sugar making all about it, but to the general sightseer it may be well to state in common terms what there is to be seen in this line. In an immense case are arranged in regular order all kinds of sugar crystals. They grade in color from the lightest to the darkest. On each is a card telling what part of the process each crystal comes from. One it says that it is intended for the American market. It is not a fine grade, and is intended for this market for the purpose of refining. In this case there may be six grades of sugar crystals, and the process of making them, as well as the process of making rum and other products.

British Guiana is a wild country. It is settled only in coast towns and is only a little strip that has been made to yield its natural richness to the uses of mankind. But in its thousand square miles of territory there are millions of wealth yet to be taken away. Not the least of these fields of promise are the great primeval forests of the grades of timber. In the exhibit in the Agricultural building are samples of 107 kinds of timbers found in abundance in British Guiana. They are almost all of the best and finest varieties. Some of them are so heavy that they cannot be floated on the streams, but have to be brought from the forests by floats. The specific gravity of several of these woods is more than 1, and in one case it is 1.04. Said Commissioner Qu-let to your correspondent: "We do not say that British Guiana has the finest woods in this world for that we were making an absurd claim; but we do say that we cannot be surpassed. We have the letter wood, one of the handsomest woods for cabinet work found in the world. We have the finest kind of shipbuilding wood, and for railway sleepers and similar uses. The shipbuilding woods are particularly valuable, not only for their ordinary purposes, but for the fact that worms will not touch them; so strongly impregnated are they with bitter juices. The greenheart and purpleheart are particularly fine woods, and we have so many that I hardly know of which to speak first. The names of these cabinet woods are peculiar, and express little to an American who is unacquainted with other than American woods. Each is represented, not by a small piece, but by a log. In some instances they are more than three feet thick, and all might be, as far as the natural supply is concerned. The list is as follows: The palm, cabral, cooper palm, kanta balli, yellow sanders, moraball, toweranero, pakoorie, greenheart, monkey pot, forest, lomari, purple heart, hoobo balli, hacin, crabwood, wa, laka, bollet, woo, siki, siki, danna, manara, mora, ligna, vito, mawa, pakoorie, wathama, rallow, cirou, walli, sayh, tababou, irriacitum, bina, buho, rava, duka, and many others.

Samples of these wood are in plain sight of the waf, showing them in a polished state, and they are to be seen in a natural condition as well. As there is 65 little Gons in the forests of British Guiana and in the west, there are fortunes in the woods yet for the man who develops them.

The gold mining of British Guiana has had a wonderful increase in the few years that the gold fields have been worked, and the area still almost undeveloped. The work began in 1884, and in that year 279 ounces of gold were exported. In 1885 the ounces were exported, and the rate of increase kept up. In 1892 the export was 1,645,915 ounces. The total for the year is 353,981 ounces. The diswood fields are only opening and are expected to show large yields. South African diamond men are on the way to British Guiana now to prospect for a foot in the very pretty, and are all kinds of brilliant colors: rock-of-the-rocks, magpies, parrots, owls, hawks, king vultures, pelicans, scarlet ibises, purple breasted cotingas, fire birds, humming birds, and many others. There are crabs of several kinds, an alligator, or as it is called in British Guiana, a cayman, and long nosed snakes, lizards, and saw fishes, a full grown manatee or a cow. It doesn't look much like a cow. The collection of monkeys is a large one. There are shown several bear howlers. These animals are not large, but they do great work with their throats. They have a peculiar formation that enables them to make a sound louder than the roar of a lion, and when they get it in the woods nights the sound is something new to be forgotten. Two kinds of ant-eating bears are on exhibition, and a good deer a little creature not more than a foot high, very pretty, and graceful. Red deer, hares, green and common forest rodents, water hags, kinkajou, kishiee, aquatic, squirrels, raccoons, two kinds of armadillos, opossums, peccaries or wild hogs, lagna onis, an Iwana, several coco onis, black-tailed otter, and other animals are in the collection.

In one of the cases is a caecora bread. That is the chief food of the native Indians. It is made from manioc, as is also starch. The bread made is very nutritious and keeps a long time. In the exhibit of cereals is rice in husk in sacks bleached, which grows in the swampy land, and other grains. The display of fibers is large. Hemp fiber, palm fiber, silk grass, wadda, wadda, wadda, wind, mahoe, katarally, and other fibers are in cases and many of them are of remarkable length. There is a collection of all kinds of preserved fruits, coffee, molasses, rums, chocolate, cocoa, fish glue, locust beans, etc. In the exhibit of manufactures are shown a large collection of clothing and things in general use. In one corner is a collection of newspapers published in the country. There are several dailies published in Georgetown, the capital, and even a good paper devoted to the gold-mining industry, so important has it become. There is a large collection of photographs of scenes in British Guiana, showing native and white peoples. The exhibit is one that can only be appreciated by careful inspection. It is full of interest, and a visit of an hour to the corner in the agricultural building is well repaid. As a visitor, as near as one can come to a visit to the place itself. Everything is shown as plain as can be, and the things to be seen are beautiful as well as instructive.

The superb bronze doors ordered by William Waldorf Astor, to be placed at the south and front entrances to Trinity Church of New York, as a memorial to his father, John Jacob Astor, are now finished. They are veritable works of art, and picture certain portions of biblical stories. Each door is said to weigh a little under 5,000 pounds and the cost of the set will be about $100,000. They may be compared on most points to those wonderful doors in the capitol at Washington, although hardly so carefully executed or with the figures so well grouped.

It was recently discovered that a young girl had been serving in the Turkish army for three, and one-half years under her brother's name and had distinguished herself by especially good conduct. An investigation was immediately made and it was found that the girl had taken this heroic step—which means even more in Turkey than it would here—in order to free her brother, who was her mother's only means of support. The Sultan, when informed of the sacrifice, bestowed the Schesaket order of the third class and a life pension of five Turkish pounds a month. The girl was sent home and her brother remains free from serving.

TOILERS OF ALL TRADES.
A new paper weight is made to imitate a railroad station sandwich. Work has been resumed by the striking weavers of the American Lacc company at Patchogue, L. I., who decided to submit to the terms of the company.
A St. Louis lawyer recently gave an opinion to the effect that printers are not mechanics but artists, and therefore can not take advantage of any mechanics' lien law.

An unusually large egg, which contained a second egg with a shell equally as hard as the outer one, was laid by a hen on the farm of W. H. Stocks, at Contenton, N. C., a short time ago. "Baby," a cat belonging to Mrs. Cragin, of Worcester, Mass. is believed to be the giant of the domesticated feline race. It is two and a half feet long, sixteen inches high and weighs thirty pounds.

Wagon Traveling.
Whether on pleasure bent or business sake, every trip is a little of a journey. It is not only pleasant and economical on the children's liver and bowels, but prevents fevers, headaches and other forms of sickness. It is sold in 50¢ and $1.00 bottles by all leading druggists. Manufactured by the California Fly Syrup Co. only.

Justice is scaled strengthened and honored by the judicious practice of merit.

$100 Reward $100.
The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one cured disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh of the Bladder. Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

CURED ME.
Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.
Gentlemen: "I desire to tell you just how I was, so that the public may know of your wonderful Swamp-Root. Two years ago last October I had spells of vomiting. I could not keep anything in my stomach. The Doctor said I had consumption of the stomach, and I was reduced to run-down in weight. I was reduced to 60 lbs. I would vomit blood, and at one time as much as three pints; we had two of the best Physicians and they said my case was hopeless. "Oh, my sufferings were terrible." A neighbor told us of your Swamp-Root, and my husband got a bottle; I took it to please him. I used six bottles of Swamp-Root and I am now nearly as well as ever. I weigh 108 lbs., do my own work and take care of my baby. Every one says, I was raised from the dead, and many will not believe that I am still living until they come and see me, and then they can't believe their own eyes, I am looking so well."

The Emperor's Brother-in-Law to Visit the United States.

Emperor William of Germany has accepted to represent him at the Columbian Exposition his brother-in-law Duke Ernst Guenther. The duke is the only brother of the Empress of Germany and just before he sails for America will celebrate his thirtieth birthday. The duke is colonel of the Schleswig-Holstein Hussars, and although far too young to have achieved renown in war, he has done so in military. He is not attracted by politics and court life has few charms for him. But he is one of the first horsemen of Germany. He was a close friend of the late Archduke Victor.

Muritz Carl Franz von Rathbar, who was president of the club. He has large estates, and as the brother-in-law of a powerful monarch ranks high in the nobility of the empire, yet he puts on no haughty airs. Rather, he is noted for simplicity in manners and for his democratic tastes. He is far from being effeminate, having a robust physique, developed by athletic training at college and army discipline. He seems to enjoy what some would call the hardships of a soldier's life, and loves outdoor sports. The official titles of this imperial representative are: Ernst Guenther, duke of Schleswig-Holstein, heir in no way he belongs to the first branch of the first line of the house of Holstein descended from Christian I., King of Denmark, Norway and Sweden in the fifteenth century, count of Stormara and the Ditmarshes, also of Oldenburg.

She—You must take supper with us tonight, and then you can ask my father for my hand.
He—Do you think it will be a good time? She—No, I don't. The girl is away, and I shall cook the supper. He won't risk having the stay around to try it again.
