THE MONEY MARKET.

A Few Timely Remarks on the Situation.

During the present money tie-up almost anything in the way of remarks on the question is of interest. The scarcity of money seems to be mostly caused by people drawing their money from the banks and storing it around their homes or in safety vaults. Therefore the people and not the government is at fault. Banks do not receive money for deposit for the purpose of locking it in their safes to have it all on call at the whim of their customer. This would be fun perhaps, but banks of the present day, like most other folks, are not doing business for fun. It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the recent bank failures have been caused by foolish scares. We understand that so scarce is the money market that in Chicago, one can get a $1,000 New York draft for $985. In Detroit and other cities the banks are refusing to pay depositors out any cash except as they can show good cause for its use, such as meeting payrolls and the like. They will readily give out New York drafts, which as everyone knows are good as the wheat, but no cash checks are treated in like manner. This is done to discourage the useless drawing of money from the banks.

Those best posted think that a month from now things will have settled down again in good shape and the scarcity of money will be practically over. Northville with her big factories constantly at work and her great amount of building and improvements the past year has felt none of the draw backs and hard times experienced in many villages and cities throughout the country.

Girl and Bicycle.

Ward McAllister permits American young women to ride tricycles because the Princess of Wales and her daughters ride tricycles. But it is highly improper, quoth Wardie. "For young women to use bicycles." Dear! dear! A woman mounted upon a tricycle looks like a spider, it is true, and she can make no sort of speed. Likewise the tricycle is fatiguing to operate; moreover, it is rather apt soon to make a creaking noise that sets sensitive nerves crazy. But if the Princess of Wales is willing to wear herself out and look like a spider and not cover any distance worth speaking of besides, of course that settles it. But if some of our modest, merry, pretty American women who, with the full approval of their parents, husbands or grandmothers and without a thought of impropriety, fit gracefully through our city parks every day upon bicycles, occasionally taking long and health bringing tours in the same manner, get hold of Wardie McAllister we wouldn't take even chances on him. They would tell him, these independent American girls, that immodesty exists in his own toadish little mind, and nowhere else. If the Princess of Wales were to ride a bicycle, appearing just once upon it, Ward McAllister would see in bicycle riding henceforth the most modest and healthful of exercises for American girls, and he knows it. Wardie better come to Northville and see how gay and pretty our young ladies look on their wheels. Every little while one of Northville's fair daughters is added to the list of cyclists and that is right. The Record wants to see a ladies' "eye" club.

Council Proceedings.

Neal relative to printing water works ordinances, rules and regulations rec'd and on motion referred to water commissioners with power to act. Communication from Geo. Proper on motion was rec'd. If any action be needed to refer him to ordinances prohibiting the running of billiard halls. STEVENS, Clerk.

PURDY'S PEARS

Cause the Burning of a Freight Car at Plymouth.

The Detroit "peddler" car with its entire contents was burned while standing on the siding at Plymouth Wednesday night. The train, after loading the Northville local freight, left here about 8:00 p. m. Among other articles in the car was the following from our local shippers: Eight baskets of pears, R. H. Purdy; six cheese, Smith's factory; three crates of eggs, Teichner & Co.; several boxes of dowel pins, Ely Dowel works. A tramp, evidently enticed by Purdy's pears, broke into the car and leaving a lighted match among the inflammable articles undoubtedly caused the conflagration. The tramp was not cremated as stated by yesterday's Free Press.

Pontiac now has its fourth paper, the "Republican." The Eastern Michigan asylum is also located at Pontiac.

Two Buffalions promise to revolutionize the pastime of wheeling. They have applied for patents on an attachment which will run bicycles without peddling. It is a gas engine and said to be a novel invention.

Here's to you, one better Mr. Gazette: Northville has more ladies who ride bicycles than any other town of its size in Michigan.

A Jack the Ripper has made his appearance at Northville. This scamp seems to be making a business of slaying cushions so as to render them worthless. A long drawn out cushion would be good for him.—Pontiac Times. Or a pneumatic and then puncture it.

The Lansing Driving club has a big meeting and a large assortment of races beginning August 15. The races will last as long as people have got 50 cents and will come to see the horses run. The association were safe in sending us a "non-transferable" comp for this notice as they knew we couldn't go personally.

It is said that the new comet can be plainly seen by following with the eye a imaginary line drawn through the handle and lower corner star of the big dipper to the point near the horizon. Try it.—Pontiac Gazette.

If you can't make the big dipper work try an old time pair, or an oyster bucket. Anything will do if you follow that imaginary line long enough.

"Begory now, luk at the monkey on a stick!" remarked a Celtic gentleman yesterday as one of our army of wheelmen passed by. The rider's back was humped like a cat on a fence, and his general appearance was that of a person in the last stage of cholera morbus. If these humped over riders knew how ridiculous they appear they would assume a manlier and more dignified position. That racing "hump" should be confined to the race track.—Ex.

If a man should tell you that he lived in Michigan, 140 west of Chicago, you would think him a little off, wouldn't you? Well, he could do that very thing, for the upper peninsula of Michigan extends 140 miles west of Chicago.—Ann Arbor Courier.

We would say he was a blamed fool to live way over in that neck of the woods when there are such pretty places as Ann Arbor and Northville about double that distance east of the hurry-to-death city.

Judging by the appearance of some of the exchanges received at this office our Brother Printers imagine that the Record is on their "X" list for the purpose of accumulating a lot of waste papers. If some of them have any papers all blurred up with offsets, wholly unreadable, we seem to get them. Our exchange list is small, with just the papers which are of interest to us and everyone is carefully perused each week. We "X" for just this purpose. We have no need of spoiled papers.

He Died Early—This Morning of Typhoid Fever.

Just as we go to press we learn the sad news: that John W. Fuller died at 6:45 o'clock this morning of typhoid fever. We shall give a more extended notice next week.

Success. Success.

What leads to success? How can we attain success?

If you wish success in business or trade, you must first learn that business or trade. You must familiarize yourself to it. You must adapt yourself so as to be equal to the emergency. If you wish to become a Tailor, a Dentist, a Carpenter or Blacksmith and be successful at it you must learn it. You must make your trade a study, adapt yourself to it.

Simply because you have a SEWING MACHINE does it make a Tailor out of you. Do you think you could be a success at making Suits, Pants or Overcoats after having a paper pattern cut for you, any more than you could build a house simply because some one drew up the plans for you; or become a Blacksmith by buying the shoes, could you drive them on? Do you think you would be successful as a Dentist because you know the properties that go to make up a set of teeth? If you want success go to F. J. Hoar's Tailoring Parlor and have him make you a suit of clothes from the latest styles.

I have been SUCCESSFUL in procuring the very latest patterns of Fall and Winter Suits, Pants, Overcoats and Silk Vests.

I have been SUCCESSFUL in learning how to make up these goods. I am in hopes to attain SUCCESS by your liberal patronage.

I am in hopes to give you SUCCESS by giving you the very lowest figures on Suits, Pants and Overcoats. Give me a call. F. J. HOAR, Merchant Tailor.

WALTER BASANT believes that Chicago will be the metropolis of America. Chicago will regard Walter as rather stupid. Couldn't he see that she is already that?

The king of Siam introduced street cars into Bangkok, he lights his harem with electricity and is adopting the agencies of civilization rapidly. The bicycle hasn't got there yet, it appears.

The suggestion has been made that Chicago is in danger of growing too fast. However, by means of grade crossings and a high rate of speed, the city seems in a fair way to avert such calamity.

That crank who was so blatantly proposing to be buried alive for a month or so reduces on being "called down" to what the sporting fraternity is wont to denigrate as a "counterfeit." A New York association wanted to conduct the test and change gate money, offering the fellow $4,000 if he was successful. He declined, and quite sensibly, too. He knew the public if it paid to see him buried alive would see to it that there was no trickery about it, and in that event $4,000 would be about as useless to him at the end of a month as to any other candidate for harp and crown.

A GREAT name among Arctic explorers was that of Dr. John Rae, whose death in London at an advanced age was lately announced. Dr. Rae was a native of a northern region, the Orkney Islands, and began his active life as a surgeon in the service of the Hudson's Bay company. His first voyage of Arctic exploration was made in two small boats in 1845 and was successful in its objects. Dr. Rae was at one time the repository of all that was known of the Arctic regions and was one of the bravest of the brave men who have endured so much to solve the problem of the pole.

The claims and counter-claims between Chili and the United States have given rise to more irritation in Chili than in this country and it is well for our commerce that steps have been taken to get them out of the way. The selection of the president of the Swiss republic as arbitrator and his appointment of the Swiss minister at Washington as his representative is a good move toward clearing off the claims. Possibly when these are settled the Southern republic will look with more friendly eyes on the United States and be more willing to throw its trade in this direction.

The next war, if there ever to be, is to be carried on by whom? To the hundreds of other implements of destruction which have recently been invented, a French genius has added a piece of light artillery which has a capacity for firing four charges in fifteen minutes, each of which throws 250 bullets over a distance of 2,000 square yards at a distance of two miles. With such death-dealing machines as this, there seems little need for the 22,000 soldiers composing the European armies, unless it be as food for the enormous quantities of powder and shot, which otherwise might be wasted.

THE was when Boston was essentially an American city and when old landmarks were cherished as fondly as a filial son cherishes the memory of his parents. Bunker Hill monument, old South church, Faneuil hall and the old graveyards were sacred in old Boston. But now a new order of things obtains. The reverence and care which were distinguishing characteristics have given place to vandalism. Old South church is gone, Faneuil hall will soon be among the things that were and as for the old graveyards, where sleep revolutionary heroes, were Massachusetts' illustrious Governor Winthrop lies buried, are turned into playgrounds for Russian and Hungarian children who have knocked down and carried away nearly every grave mark.

A LONDON dispatch states that three years ago Lord Salisbury made an agreement with the French ambassador at London by which the British were to occupy the Shan States claimed by Siam, while the French were to have all the left bank of the Mekong. In other words, Siam was to be dismembered without even the pretense of consulting her on the disposition of her own territory. If China should conquer Germany and the United States should occupy Italy, after which they should proceed to make a treaty by which each generously gave the other a slice of France, the statesmen of Europe would probably consider their conduct rather high-handed. Distance not only lends enchantment to the view, but seems to lend morality to theft.

FRANCE takes foreign territory against the will of its occupants. The United States declines to take valuable territory that is trying to fall into her arms. There are republics and republics.

News that a thoughtless sealer had taken a porpoise and disabled the Mohican sent a thrill of indignation through the American navy. To be sure the news was erroneous, but there is nevertheless a feeling that the Mohican ought not to be exposed to such danger.

THERE'S DANGER AHEAD

PRESIDENT CLEVELAND IN HIS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

Says We are Drifting to a Silver Basis in Our Government's Finances and That the Sherman Silver Law Should be Repealed at Once by Congress.

(International Press Washington Special.)

President Cleveland's message to the special session of the Fifty-third Congress deals solely with finances and is here given in full:

To the Congress of the United States: The existence of an alarming and extraordinary business situation, involving the welfare and prosperity of all our people, has constrained me to call together in extra session the people's representatives in Congress, to the end that through a wise and patriotic exercise of the legislative duty with which they so clearly are charged, present evils may be mitigated and dangers threatening the future may be averted.

Our unfortunate financial plight is not the result of untoward events nor of conditions related to our natural resources; nor is it traceable to any of the attacks which frequently check national growth and prosperity. With plentiful crops, with abundant promise of remunerative production and manufacture, with unusual invitation to safe investment and with satisfactory assurance to business enterprise, suddenly financial distrust and fear have sprung up on every side. Numerous moneyed institutions have suspended because abundant assets were not immediately available to meet the demands of frightened depositors. Surviving corporations and individuals are content to keep in hand the money they are usually unable to loan, and those engaged in legitimate business are surprised to find that the securities they offer for loans are no longer accepted. Values, supposed to be fixed, are fast falling, and the general confidence has invaded every branch of business. I believe these things are principally caused by congressional legislation touching the purchase and coinage of silver by the general government. This legislation is embodied in a statute passed on the 15th day of July, 1890, which was the culmination of much agitation on the subject involved, and which may be considered a truck, at once, between the advocates of free silver coinage and those intending to be more conservative.

Undoubtedly the monthly purchases by the government of 4,000,000 ounces of silver, enforced under that statute, were regarded by those interested in silver production as a certain guaranty of a higher price. The result, however, has been entirely different, for immediately following a spasmodic and irregular rise in the price of silver, there followed a sharp decline, and since then the price of the metal has steadily advanced, and has now reached the highest point ever known. This disappointing result has led to renewed and persistent effort in the direction of free silver coinage. Meanwhile, the only real effect of the operation of the present law constantly accumulating but the result to which this accumulation is being put is being made palpable to all who give the least heed to financial subjects.

This present rate of payment for the 4,000,000 ounces of silver which the Secretary of the Treasury is commanded to purchase monthly, there shall be issued treasury notes, not exceeding in amount in gold or silver coin, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, and that said notes may not be redeemed in gold, but that the act to be established by the United States to maintain the value of the metal in parity with each other upon the present ratio or such ratio as may be provided by law. This declaration is to prevent the action of the secretary as to the exercise of the discretion nominally vested in him, if by such action the parity between gold and silver is disturbed. Manifestly a refusal by the secretary to pay these treasury notes in gold, if demanded, would necessarily result in their discredit and depreciation, as obligations payable only in silver, and would thereby create a discrimination in favor of gold.

Up to the 15th day of July, 1892, these notes had been issued in payment of silver bullion to the amount of $100,000,000. While all but very small quantity of this bullion remains uncollected and without usefulness in the treasury, the notes in circulation in its purchase have been paid in gold. This is illustrated by the statement that on the 1st day of May, 1892, and the 15th day of July, 1892, the notes of this kind issued in payment for silver bullion amounted to $100,000,000, and that during the same period about $19,000,000 were paid by the treasury in gold for the redemption of such notes.

The policy necessarily adopted of paying these notes in gold has not spared the gold reserve of $50,000,000, and has also added to the government the redemption of other notes, for this fund has been exhausted, and the government is now under obligations amounting to about $150,000,000 on account of silver purchases, and as a consequence for the first time since its creation, been encroached upon. We have thus made the depletion of our gold reserve, and have tempted other and more appreciative nations to add to their stock. That the opportunity has been offered has not been neglected is shown by the large amounts of gold which have been recently drawn from our treasury and exported to increase the financial strength of foreign nations. The excess of exports of gold over its imports for the year ending June 30, 1892, amounted to more than $2,000,000. Between the 1st day of July, 1890, and the 15th day of July, 1892, the gold coin and bullion in our treasury decreased more than $120,000,000, while during the same period the silver coin and bullion in the treasury increased more than $100,000,000. Unless government bonds are to be constantly issued and sold to replenish our exhausted gold, only by the sale of gold, it is apparent that the operation of the silver law now in force leads in the direction of the entire substitution of silver for gold in the government treasury, and that this must be followed by the payment of all government obligations in depreciated silver.

that there is no reason for lack of confidence in the purposes or power of the government in the premises. The very existence of this apprehension and lack of confidence, however, is a menace which ought not for a moment to be disregarded. Possibly if the undertaking of a specific known quantity of silver at a party with gold, our ability to do so were overlooked, but times are the present, and in view of our unparalleled growth and resources might be favorably passed upon by financial experts, and it is to maintain such parity in regard to an amount of silver increasing at the rate of $50,000,000 yearly, with no fixed termination to such increase, it can hardly be said that a problem is presented whose solution is free from doubt.

The people of the United States are entitled to a sound and stable currency and to money recognized as such on every exchange and in every market of the world. Their government has no right to incur the expense of a currency which is opposed to the policy and practice of other civilized states, nor is it justified in permitting a currency to be issued which is a reliable reliance on our national strength and ability to jeopardize the soundness of our financial system. It is above the plane of party politics, it vitally concerns every business and calling, and it is a subject which should never be overlooked, but times are the present, and when the evils of unsound finance threaten us, the speculator may anticipate a heavy profit from the knowledge that the government will be induced by the depreciated currency and the loss to receive the benefits of its correction. It is practically impossible for those who work upon the ventures of confidence and contented capital, this falling him, his condition is not a matter of indifference to him, nor to his labor. One of the greatest evils which have befallen our country since more than fifty years ago, when a derangement of the currency had caused a general panic, and the people were in a state of confusion, and who suffers from the same derangement, is the man who earns his daily bread by his toil.

It is of the utmost importance that such relief as Congress can afford in the existing situation be afforded at once. The relief which is to be afforded is not a matter of party politics, it is a matter of national safety, and it is directly applicable to the relief of the suffering masses of our people who are suffering from the effects of the present situation. It is a matter of national safety, and it is directly applicable to the relief of the suffering masses of our people who are suffering from the effects of the present situation.

It is my purpose to summon Congress in special session early in the coming September, that we might enter promptly upon the work of tariff reform, which is the most important and urgent of our duties, and that we might also take the opportunity to consider the financial condition of the country, and to take such action as may be deemed necessary to meet the emergency.

EVENTS OF MORE OR LESS INTEREST TO WOLVERINES.

An Aged Farmer Murdered by His Wife's Paramour.—Two Miles From Ovid.—Forest Fires About Alpena Destroy a Number of Farm Homes.—Briefs.

An Atrocious Murder. Henry Lyvere, aged 63 years, was found dead near his house two miles from Ovid with a bullet hole in his back. The discovery was made by Lyvere's wife and her half-brother, John Lape, who is now under arrest charged with the murder. The affair is shrouded in mystery. Lyvere was a piece of land in that section and owned 80 acres of land. The wife and brother-in-law insist that it was a case of suicide, while neighbors are equally certain that he met his death at the hands of an assassin.

The statements of his wife and her brother, who first found the body in the farm lane 20 rods from the house, with a revolver in one hand and an ax in the other, are conflicting in several important details. The effect of the confession from Lape. He said he had been drinking at Ovid when he had returned to the Lyvere farm, which he made his home. The couple were having a quarrel, and he interfered. Lyvere vowed vengeance, and taking his ax in hand started for the barn to saddle a horse and ride to Ovid for an officer to arrest Lape. He frightened the latter and he fired a shot at Lyvere, but he missed his horse. The former fell to the ground. Lape dragged him up the lane a short distance, placed the pistol and ax in the dead man's hands and then notified Mrs. Lyvere of his bloody work. They then gave the alarm among the neighbors.

Since this confession it has been learned that Lyvere was the fourth husband of Mrs. Lyvere; John J. Lape was one of the four, two others are also living, and Mrs. Lyvere has separated from three of the four without the formality of a divorce. It is now known that Lape is no relation to the woman other than her paramour, and their illicit relations have been carried on constantly, a child of 2 years being one of the fruits of this horrible connection.

LATER.—Daniel McMillan, a resident of Saginaw, who is in the train series of the Michigan Central, says he knows John J. Lape, the murderer of Henry Lyvere, at Ovid, well. About 25 years ago, he says, Lape murdered a Dr. Wheaton, near Lyon, N. Y. Wheaton was attending a young lady of whom Lape was in love. Lape lay in ambush at his father's farm, and when Wheaton was near the young lady's home he shot the doctor dead.

FOREST FIRES.—One Hundred Families Homeless in Alpena County.—St. H. Lansing. For several days, forest fires have been burning in the vicinity of Ossineke, Alpena county. In spite of every effort the flames continued to creep up toward the clearings, and finally it swept over about twenty farms, burning houses, barns and crops. The fire left nothing but blackened soil in its tracks. The people were driven into Ossineke village, and almost one hundred persons have been rendered homeless. No lives were lost, but it is feared that much stock is destroyed. Ben Kern's saw mill, planing mill and camps were destroyed.

The farmers burned out lose everything—houses, furniture, barns, hay, grain, etc., and their growing crops will be greatly damaged. Fires are also blazing in the woods south of Alpena, and grave fears are entertained that the southwest portion of the city will be burned.

Christian Workers' Conference. Arrangements have been made for holding a Christian Workers' conference at Flushing, August 23 to 24. Its object is to increase the interest in the study of the Bible as the word of God, and all who hold to the doctrine of the inerrancy of the scriptures are especially invited. The studies will be conducted by a number of prominent Bible teachers. Some of the topics to be taken up are: Inspiration of the Scriptures; higher criticism; redemption; the Holy Spirit; the World's evangelization; the second coming of Christ, etc. The instruction will be free and the people of Flushing will open their homes to accommodate all who attend. Further information will be given on application to Dr. E. D. Brooks, chairman of the local committee, Flushing.

The Prisoners Escape from an Hour. Three more convicts emulated Hanley and Justice and enjoyed an hour's liberty outside of Jackson prison walls. They were Alexander McKinzie, a 19-year-old man from Grand Rapids, Jan. 29, 1890; Ed. Preston, a 25-year man from Detroit, sent up for highway robbery, March 13, 1888, and Fred Palmer, a four-year prisoner, sent up from St. Joseph for larceny. The three men cut the bars off the west hospital window, jumped to the roof and then slid down the water pipe. They were all recaptured within an hour. A hater named Russell was hidden in the shop. It is thought that he wanted to get out also.

Fire at Vassar. The Vassar Milling Co.'s flour mill and the Flint & Pere Marquette elevator at Vassar have burned. The loss will approach $200,000, insurance $200,000. The fire started in the third story of the mill, but its origin is not known. The mill was run by water power.

Boy Killed by Whisky. A young boy named Stokley, whose father is an officer of a chair factory at Grand Rapids, got hold of a bottle of whisky and drank half a pint. Brain fever resulted and he died. The liquor had been obtained for some domestic use and was placed on a dresser.

Michigan Creep Crop.

The estimates and statements in this report are based on more than 1,200 returns. The average yield of wheat per acre as estimated on the first of this month is, in the southern counties 14.08 bushels; in the central counties 13.09 bushels and in the northern counties 13.77 bushels. These figures are the averages of all the estimates from each section, and the estimates are based on the total acreage sowed, as returned by supervisors, and on examinations made when harvesting and stacking. Wheat is of excellent quality—only an occasional report mentions damage from any cause. Oats are estimated to yield 20 bushels per acre in the southern and central counties, and 27 bushels in the northern counties. Compared with vitality and growth of average years, the average condition of corn is 91 in the southern and central counties, and 101 in the northern counties, and the average condition of potatoes in the southern counties 80, in the central 80 and in the northern 75. These figures indicate that both crops are in such better condition than last year. Corn and potatoes are in great need of rain, and have quite generally been greatly injured. The hay crop of the state has been secured in excellent condition and is a full average in quantity. The apple crop of the state will be very light. The figures for this month are 21 per cent in the southern counties, 35 per cent in the central, and 61 per cent in the northern, comparison being with an average crop. These figures by regular correspondents are fully confirmed by letters from a large number of fruit specialists.

Escaped Prison Birds Caught. Frederick Hanley, the escaping Jackson prison convict, was captured in the woods near Ovid, Michigan, by a crowd of farmers and prison officials. The farmer's claim the reward of $125 offered by the warden. Hanley was a sorry sight. His prison garb was torn and his feet blistered. He looked like a man who had been on a long march in the enemy's country. He said that no one assisted him and Justice to get out. Three farmers living near Pleasant Lake drove to the Jackson with Charles Justice, Hanley's companion. Justice was walking along the road and made no resistance whatever. It seems that the men, after leaving the prison lost their bearings and thus failed to get very far away from Jackson.

Burned to Death With Kerosene. Mrs. D. Vanderhoof died at Lansing from the effects of burns. About midnight she filled a lamp with kerosene. The oil can had a leak, and some of the kerosene ran over the woman's dress. She struck a match and threw it on the floor after lighting the lamp. The match evidently was still burning, as the woman was immediately enveloped in flames. All the clothing was burned off her body. She was 28 years old.

Rusty Nail Is a Well-Known Farmer. Peter Scherer, a rich pioneer farmer in the vicinity of Ovid, Michigan, stepped on a rusty nail about three weeks ago. The wound healed but broke out again, and lockjaw set in, and he died from the effects of it, leaving 11 children, all grown up. He was the most widely known German farmer in that section.

AROUND THE STATE. The dog poisoner is getting in his good work at Opequish. Austin Pease, of Kalamazoo county, recently lost forty-seven sheep by lightning. Mrs. Arthur Crawford, who was burned at Ann Arbor by gasoline while lighting a fire, is dead. Mrs. John Oglethorpe, of Manistee, lost her baby and fell into the cellar and broke three of her ribs. Diptheria continues its deadly work in West Bay City and the quarantine measures result very unsatisfactory.

The Union Veterans' Union, of Jackson is endeavoring to raise funds with which to erect a soldiers' monument. A project is under way to drain Mattison Lake, Branch county, whereby 10,000 acres of land will be reclaimed. A four-year-old son of Henry Marks, of Michigan, was burned to death by his clothes catching fire from a stove.

A stock company with a capital of $50,000 has been organized for the purpose of manufacturing a metallic refrigerator. Prof. O. Hoyer, of New Ulm, Minn., has been called to directorship of the Lutheran seminary at Saginaw. He has accepted. Ionia sportsmen decided to hold a three-days trotting meeting, to follow the Lansing races. They will hang up $1,000 in purses. Daniel House, of An Gres, mistook William Wisner, of Whittemore, for a bear, and blazed away. Wisner is badly hurt, but may recover.

George Skutt wants the township of Hinton, Mecosta county, to pay him $10,000 for being jolted out of his wagon owing to the bad conditions of the roads. Diptheria continues unabated at Menominee, and though everything possible is being done to prevent its spread, two deaths and several new cases are reported. The residence of Nathan Lasbush, together with its contents, was destroyed by fire at Waies. The family were at a picnic at the time. Loss $8,000, no insurance.

The family of August Hariman, of Gageton, is sorely afflicted with diptheria. Three children have already died, and the fourth and last one is ill with the dread disease. Roundsman D. P. Barron, a prominent Saginaw police officer brought charges of intoxication against Officer Ruggs and not being able to substantiate them was himself discharged from the force.

The tag Lew Wallace, Capt. Dan Padden owner, burned to her death's edge at her dock in Onckenia. The crew were awakened by the fire, but had not time to get their clothing. The tag was insured for $2,500. The damage by fire, smoke and water in the Gabriel and Roach blocks, at Sault Ste Marie, the upper stores of which were gutted, will reach from $30,000 to $35,000. The loss is covered by insurance to about half the amount.

CONGRESS IN SESSION

SPECIAL SESSION OF CONGRESS NOW AT WORK.

Democrats Control the Whole Machine for the First Time in Decades.—The President's Message now Made Public.—Summary of Proceedings.

(International Press Washington Special.) The first Democrat congress that has assembled under a Democrat administration since the anti-bellum days of slavery met in extra session at the national capitol. The occasion was an impressive one, recalling as it did the political situation that has not existed for over a third of a century and a deep solemnity was added to the scene by a general appreciation that the problem to be met and solved is a graver one than has agitated the public mind since the political forums rang with the discussion of the slavery question in the great days of the '50s. An intensity of feeling unprecedented for details has suddenly sprung up over the financial problem, but the bitterness of the situation is greatly relieved by the reflection that now seems to be in every one's mind that while the silver question may be to some extent a sectional one, it is not a political one, that parties are divided on it, and not by it, that it is a subject which is common to the Democrat and the Republican ranks alike.

Short Session. The Senate, on the first day of the special session of the Fifty-third Congress, was in session just half an hour. There were 76 Senators present. Vice President Stevenson's call for the Senate to come to order was followed by prayer by Rev. Butler. The President's proclamation conveying Congress into extra session was read. Senator Quay of Pennsylvania, and Pasco of Florida, respectively, took the oath of office; the resignation of Senator Beckwith, of Wyoming, was received; oath of office was administered to the new secretary, Mr. Cox. A committee was appointed to notify the President that the Senate was in session and ready to receive any communication, but before the committee returned, a resolution was introduced to adjourn as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Senator Leiland Stanford, of California.

In the House. Clerk Ker, of Pennsylvania, rapped for order and called the roll after which he announced that the election of speaker was in order. Rep. Holman, of Indiana, named Hon. Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, for the Democrats; Rep. Henderson, of Illinois, named Charles F. Crisp, of Georgia, for the Republicans; and Rep. Kern of Nebraska, named Hon. Jeremiah Simpson, of Kansas, for the People's Party. The roll call showed 321 members, voting: Crisp, 24; Reed, 100; Simpson, 100.

Messrs. Holman, Reed and Simpson escorted Mr. Crisp to the chair and the oath was administered by Rep. O'Neill, of Massachusetts. The case went over. House officers, all sworn in as representative from the fifth district of Michigan. Mr. Burrows offered as a substitute a resolution to seat Charles E. Belknap on the grounds that Mr. Richardson's right to the seat had been controverted by the Michigan supreme court and Mr. Belknap had been given a certificate of election by the state election board. The case went over. House officers, all Democrats, were elected as follows: Clerk, James Ker, of Pennsylvania; sergeant-at-arms, Herman Snow, of Illinois; doorkeeper, A. B. Hurt, of Tennessee; postmaster, Lycurgus Dalton, of Indiana; chaplain, S. W. Hadaway, of Maryland. A committee was appointed to inform the President that the house was ready to receive any communication he might have to offer. After the drawing of seats the House adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the late Representative Knocks, of Ohio.

Labor and Capital Notes. The Lawrence mills at Lowell, Mass., are running at less than half capacity. The Lowell Ingrain Company's mills at the same place have shut down, 2,000 men out of employment. In addition to Bennett Mill No. 1 and Potomack mill No. 1, one mill of the Howland corporation and all of the Howland mills at New Bedford, Mass., will suspend operations for an indefinite time.

The Pacific, Everett, Washington, Atlantic, Arlington and Pemberton mills at Lawrence, Mass., have shut down for from two to four weeks. The Pacific employs 3,000 persons, the others as many more and the enforced vacation means a loss to them of $150,000.

The New Bedford, Mass., Clearing House association has notified the national banks of New Bedford, that no assurance can be given that money can be furnished by pay rolls after August 12.

The North German Lloyd steamer Speed carried $250,000 in gold from Liverpool to New York. The Majestic also brings $250,000.

Attorney-General Ellis has issued an opinion to the effect that the insurance laws passed by the last legislature are invalid, and that all insurance companies doing business in Michigan, must make a deposit with the state treasurer.

Charles E. Belknap, of Grand Rapids, and George F. Richardson, have both left for Washington, and both will try to represent their district in congress. Richardson feels confident that he will be seated, and Belknap feels just as confident that he won't.

The local party of the Valley Falls company at Woonsocket, R. I., engaged in the manufacture of colored cotton dress goods, with 155 hands and a weekly pay roll of $1,000, shut down for an indefinite period, owing to a lack of market for the goods. The same company's mills at Valley Falls, employing 600 hands, also shut down.

HERMAN WEST

People often wondered and asked from whom Maggie Waldron had inherited her beautiful face.

CHAPTER VI. People often wondered and asked from whom Maggie Waldron had inherited her beautiful face.

He never alluded to it, and when people spoke of the wonderful loveliness of his daughter he thought of that one year which had been like heaven on earth to him and said nothing.

John Waldron had made no attempt at bringing up his daughter himself. He had entrusted her while she was quite young to the care of his sister who had brought her up, educated her, and kept her until her death.

When his sister died John Waldron's daughter came home, and no one was so astonished as he himself at her wonderful beauty.

The girl had been in some measure ruined by her education which had been conducted on the "gentle" principle. She had not been taught so much the difference between right and wrong as between what the mistress of the school she attended considered genteel or the reverse.

John Waldron was never quite at ease with his beautiful daughter. If she had lived with him from her childhood it would have been different; but she did not come to him until she was nearly seventeen and he was not one of those men who gave to a child the idolatrous love lavished on a wife.

It seemed strange to him at first to see the graceful figure sitting about his house, to hear the bright snatches of songs and the trills of silvery laughter, to see little feminine ornament lying here and there.

He never attempted in any way to direct or shape her life she would marry some day, he supposed, and in the meantime she could keep house for him. He wanted his breakfast ready at seven in the morning and his supper at nine at night; he exacted no more. She could spend the intervening hours as she pleased. He did hope or one thing, and it was that when the time came for love and marriage she would say nothing to him, nor give him any trouble in any way about it.

John Waldron lived in a small house belonging to Lord Stanleigh, which was situated to the south from the county town of Armystre. Lord Stanleigh had not as yet seen his steward's beautiful daughter; but Lord Stanleigh's valet had seen and fallen in love with her.

"It was no great conquest," thought Maggie, "the heart of a valet," and she tossed her pretty head in disdain.

If she had learned nothing else during the course of a genteel education she had at least learned the value of a beautiful face, and she knew that there were few more beautiful than hers.

Herman West, Lord Stanleigh's valet, never spoke to any one of the treasure he had found in the small house near the woods; but he told the girl with a face that was almost terrible in its force and strength. He knew that John Waldron was generally from home, and that Maggie was there alone with the old servant, Jeanette; so there were few days on which he did not contrive to pass by the house to leave presents of fruits or flowers for Maggie. If she were lingering in the garden he stopped and talked to her. Dainty, beautiful Maggie laughed at him; still the heart of a valet, she reflected, was better than nothing, the homage of a valet better than no homage at all.

She never deceived him—never pretended to be even in the least degree, touched by his affection; but the man loved her with a grim, determined, obstinate love that could never change—a love that from its intensity, its stern, bitter jealousy, would have frightened any girl who understood human nature.

Like No Other Love.

By Charlotte M. Braeme. CHAPTER VI.

People often wondered and asked from whom Maggie Waldron had inherited her beautiful face.

John Waldron was never quite at ease with his beautiful daughter. If she had lived with him from her childhood it would have been different; but she did not come to him until she was nearly seventeen and he was not one of those men who gave to a child the idolatrous love lavished on a wife.

It seemed strange to him at first to see the graceful figure sitting about his house, to hear the bright snatches of songs and the trills of silvery laughter, to see little feminine ornament lying here and there.

He never attempted in any way to direct or shape her life she would marry some day, he supposed, and in the meantime she could keep house for him. He wanted his breakfast ready at seven in the morning and his supper at nine at night; he exacted no more. She could spend the intervening hours as she pleased. He did hope or one thing, and it was that when the time came for love and marriage she would say nothing to him, nor give him any trouble in any way about it.

John Waldron lived in a small house belonging to Lord Stanleigh, which was situated to the south from the county town of Armystre. Lord Stanleigh had not as yet seen his steward's beautiful daughter; but Lord Stanleigh's valet had seen and fallen in love with her.

"It was no great conquest," thought Maggie, "the heart of a valet," and she tossed her pretty head in disdain.

If she had learned nothing else during the course of a genteel education she had at least learned the value of a beautiful face, and she knew that there were few more beautiful than hers.

Herman West, Lord Stanleigh's valet, never spoke to any one of the treasure he had found in the small house near the woods; but he told the girl with a face that was almost terrible in its force and strength. He knew that John Waldron was generally from home, and that Maggie was there alone with the old servant, Jeanette; so there were few days on which he did not contrive to pass by the house to leave presents of fruits or flowers for Maggie. If she were lingering in the garden he stopped and talked to her. Dainty, beautiful Maggie laughed at him; still the heart of a valet, she reflected, was better than nothing, the homage of a valet better than no homage at all.

She never deceived him—never pretended to be even in the least degree, touched by his affection; but the man loved her with a grim, determined, obstinate love that could never change—a love that from its intensity, its stern, bitter jealousy, would have frightened any girl who understood human nature.

In Maggie there was a certain amount of ambition and passion; but all her finer impulses had been smothered by the genteel element in which she had been educated.

Maggie Waldron woke one July morning—a morning on which the dawn of a tragedy broke feeling more light-hearted than usual. She loved the early morning hours, and liked to open the windows and doors to let the fresh fragrant air fall and before it was not much after 7, and before her lay the whole of a long July day. There was nothing to do, and no one to see; she must amuse herself in the best way she could.

"I wish," said the girl to herself, "that I had a kitten, or a little dog, or anything to love or talk to, or amuse myself with."

By and by Maggie went out. There was more companionship in the woods where the birds were singing than in the lonely house where the servant was at work. She wore a dress of pale pink print and a broad-brimmed hat with a wreath of pink roses. She knew she was beautiful, but she did not know what a lovely picture she made as she went singing merrily along the path that led to the woods.

After walking some distance she felt tired, and sat down to rest in the very heart of the woods. She took off her hat to let the cool wind play in the masses of her dark glossy hair. Near where she sat grew some poppies; the pink roses in her hat looked faded and insignificant beside the crimson flowers so she wreathed the poppies in their place laughing gaily as she did so.

Suddenly a shadow fell across the grass. The girl did not notice it at first for the great boughs as they stirred in the breeze often made such shadows; but it grew larger. Then she raised her eyes and saw standing before her a handsome young man, hat in hand.

"I have lost my way," he said. "Could you tell me how to find the nearest path to the highroad?"

In one moment the whole course of the young heir's life was changed. A poet says: "Love is no love unless it comes at once." As he stood there with the commonplace words upon his lips the swift arrow of first love pierced his heart.

Only a minute had elapsed since he had entered this glade where the shade was so cool and the wind so sweet, and already his life lay far behind him. He had never been refused any wish or desire in his life; why should he begin to practice self-denial now? He ought to have listened to Maggie's answer and have passed on. As it was, he stood still, feeling that he could not move away.

The nearest path that leads to Armystre? It is certainly not this way. It is quite half a mile from here."

In that case," he said, "I will rest for a few minutes before I try to reach it. I have been walking for some hours and I am tired."

He sat down opposite her. "I think," he said slowly, looking at her, "that this is the loveliest day of a lovely year. One ought to have nothing to do in the summer but lie under the trees and dream."

"Bees make honey in the summer-time to last through the winter's cold," he replied.

"I am glad I am not a bee," said Sir Carlos, watching the dark fashes as they lay like silver fringes on the cheek that was like the fairest leaf of a tree.

To Sir Carlos Carew, whose life had known no greater charm or interest than sport, this wonderful passion of love came like a revelation on Maggie's easy, careless, manner had a wonderful charm for him. As a rule, when he was in the society of girls, he did their best to entertain him. Maggie leaned her dark, beautiful head against the trunk of a tree and listened to him, wearing the poppies into all kinds of fantastic forms and seeming much more interested in them than in him, but secretly delighted as she noted the looks of admiration he cast on her.

When he could stop no longer he told her that he could not endure the thought of leaving her unless she promised to see him again. She did promise, and went home with her heart and mind full of him; he had told her all about himself, and she had given him the outline of her simple life.

"You have never seen Lord Stanleigh, I suppose," he said; and Maggie answered, "No," but that she knew Herman West, his lordship's valet. He resolved that he would not mention Maggie to Lord Stanleigh, lest he should try to win her himself. He told him that she had nothing to do in the day-time, and he asked her to meet him in the woods on the morrow.

Had Maggie been ever so inclined to talk about her adventure, there was no one who would care to hear her. Jeanette detested all men, young or old, so she would not expect sympathy from her. The girl had a shrewd suspicion that even if her father was disposed to listen, it would be wiser not to tell him.

So day after day Sir Carlos and Maggie met in the woods and every day Sir Carlos grew more deeply in love. He was a changed man. The valet had predicted that it would be a hopeless case when he did fall in love and he was right.

Sir Carlos had no thought but for Maggie. To him everything was centered in that girlish graceful figure. Where she was not, all was desolation and gloom. They teased him at Hatton—the ladies especially declared they knew the symptoms; but no one teased him a second time; there was something in his face that forbade it.

Lord Stanleigh thought that if the young fellow had made a romance of himself, it was quite time, and that it was nobody's business but his own. As he did not care of the existence of Maggie Waldron no suspicion pointed it at way.

Sir Carlos had known Maggie a fortnight, spending two or three hours with her every day, when he resolved to marry her. She and no other should be his wife. The girl was delighted with her conquest; and she laughed more than ever at Herman West. What presumption it was of him to think of her! She laughed more scornfully when he came to her one day and asked her to be his wife. He had saved a few hundred pounds he said, and had the opportunity of buying a small hotel at the seaside. Would she consent to be the mistress of it? If she, she had told him in a few kindly words that she was sorry for him, but that she could not marry him, all might have been well; but she laughed at him.

"No," she told him, "I am not going to be mistress of the 'Travelers Rest' or the 'Ship Ashore' or any seaside hotel; my lot in life will be quite different."

"Maggie," he said, gently, "do not throw away the substance for the shadow. No man living can ever love you as much as I do."

"I know one who loves me better," she replied.

He bent his dark face over her. "You are like a beautiful, fluttering bird," he said, "and you will be caught unless you are careful, just like a bird in a net. I—I have seen you once with Sir Carlos—you are not so foolish as to think that he will marry you? Oh, Maggie, much as I love you, I would sooner see you dead than that he should sponser you."

"He will not mislead me," she replied, with a scornful toss of her head.

Hiram West trembled with emotion. "I know them, my dear, those idle young aristocrats, far better than you do. Watch one of them as he walks through the fields; wantonly, idly, without reason, he will with a stroke of his cane cut down the fairest, sweetest flowers as he passes by, and my dear the life, the soul of a young girl like you is no more to such as he than the wild flowers."

She laughed again. "I do not believe it," she replied, and her face darkened with anger.

"So the young and foolish have spoken from time immemorial," he said; "so they will speak until they die!" he cried, wrathfully. "You laugh at me at my love, at my warning, but I shall see, but remember this, if ever he injures one hair of your head, if ever he gives you one hour's heartache, I will have his life!"

She shuddered as she listened. "I shall never lose sight of you," he said, "and if he injures you, his life shall pay the forfeit. Have you, he added in a gentler tone, "no kinder word to say to me before I go?"

"No, not one," was the hasty reply. Her pride and vanity alike were wounded. Did he think so little of her beauty as to fancy she could not win what she liked with it? She little knew that for the man she loved she had made that day a dangerous enemy.

MARY WASHINGTON

When Her Son Came to See Her She Did Not Speak of His Fame.

When the tidings of the splendid success at Yorktown were brought direct from the general to his mother, she was moved to an exclamation of fervent thanksgiving: "Praise God! the war is ended, and we shall be blessed with peace, happiness, and independence for at last our country is free."

Shortly after the surrender of Cornwallis, Washington left New York with a brilliant suite of French and American officers and started upon his journey to Philadelphia, stopping on the way at Fredericksburg to visit his mother. It was nearly seven years since he had last seen her face; he left Mount Vernon in May, 1775, and did not return till the autumn of 1781. Now that the time of meeting drew near, his mother was serene but very quiet. But it was not the hero crowned that filled her thoughts, but the son who after years of absence and danger, was coming back to her. On the 11th of November 1781, the town of Fredericksburg was all aglow with joy and revelry. Washington, in the midst of his numerous and brilliant suite, wrote Mr. Custis "sent to apprise her his mother, of his arrival, and to know when it would be her pleasure to receive him. Alone and on foot, the general-in-chief of the combined armies of France and America, he goes on to say in the grandiloquent style of the day, "the deliverer of his country, the hero of the hour, repaired to pay his humble tribute of duty to her whom he venerated as the author of his being."

When the warm embrace of greeting was over, looking into his face with earnest, close observation, her eyes kindled with maternal love, she said tenderly, "You are growing old, George; care and I have been making marks in your face since I saw you last." Her voice seemed to have been singularly sweet, writes Mrs. Eliza Washington in the "Centinel," and he loved his audience as she called him by name. She inquired as to his health, and she spoke much of old times and old friends, but of his glory not a word.

Secretary Knowledge.

A little 3-year old, whose father, two grandfathers and a great-grandfather are physicians, was entertaining herself one day by playing doctor to her dolls. The nurse kept the young physician going on a round of calls from doll to doll and writing prescriptions in her babyish hieroglyphics.

At last the weary little body climbed into an arm chair and lay back for a moment's rest. The nurse fearing lest the slightest diversion should turn the active little brain toward something that would demand more of her attention, sought to reawaken interest in the dolls by a very urgent telephonic summons.

The little doctor straightened up at the tling-ling of the imaginary bell, and resting her elbow on the arm of the chair and making a receiver of her dimpled hand, asked what was wanted.

She was informed that Jenny Purdy needed her services at once. With a sigh of impatience she gathered her little body together as if for a plunge out of the big chair; then a look of intelligence passed over her face, and she settled back with this pithy message.

"Tell Miss Purdy de doctor tain't come; he's busy sittin' in his office."

"What will the harvest be?" Our every act is being recorded. Shall it be found wanting?

We have many ways of doing good to our fellow creatures but none is so effective as leading a virtuous, upright, well ordered life. Such a life is more powerful in its influence than the best efforts of the orator's genius.

Sunday's meeting was splendid. Rev. Arnold unfolded the subject of "Personal Service" to the helping of every man present. The attendance was sixty-five.

As a sample of what has been done since our meeting was commenced we give you the following: The total attendance up to date has been 1,144, an average of 39 per Sunday. 5,500 dodgers have been distributed that have returned an hundred fold for the expense. Twenty-four speakers have given talks, six of whom were from out of town. Reader will you help us make it better?

Board of Health's Favorable Report.

The Board of Health reports to the Times of Chicago, that through the City Physician Holland, that each of the eleven third stage consumptives placed under the treatment obtained from Dr. Amick, of Cincinnati, by the city authorities several weeks ago, have improved to a degree almost miraculous. The results as given to the press by Ward's Island Hospital, New York, while equally sensational, were not so comprehensive, and local medical men claim that this is the most complete demonstration that consumption is curable, thus far made. The Times says the eleven patients to whom were administered Dr. Amick's medicines are so far improved that their appetites have returned. They sleep well at night, have no night sweats, the irritating cough has disappeared, and they feel much stronger every day.

Nearly 400 operatives were thrown out of employment by the suspension of the Scranton Lace Co., Scranton, Pa. The strike between the red and the blue acts of the British navy, is being carried on in the Irish Sea. Combats between sections of the fleets are of daily occurrence, but nothing specially noteworthy was occurred.

The house of Hattie Rogers, at Hillsboro, Tex., was burned down. Maude Webb, an inmate, was roasted to death, and the proprietress, Hattie Rogers and her companion, Joe Chenab, were fatally burned. Five other inmates were seriously burned.

Dr. W. C. Peaslee, of Salt Lake City, who it was feared would die on his way to Cincinnati, O., to place himself under the Amick treatment for consumption at the Cincinnati hospital, reached there almost too weak to speak, but confident of being cured.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE.

New York, Aug. 7.—It is G. Dunn & Co.'s weekly review of trade conditions in the various markets has been followed by a more healthy tone in money markets than has been observed for some time. Notwithstanding actual increase in present commitments almost amounting to a parity of exchange, the market is not so much depressed as it was a few days ago. The market is not so much depressed as it was a few days ago. The market is not so much depressed as it was a few days ago.

A NORTH WOODS CRIME.

Man and Wife Accused of Horribly Murdering Their Babe for Blackmail. A frightful story comes from Trout Creek, half way between Trout Creek and Canton in an old abandoned homesteaders' shanty, near the South Shore track, there lived a family, by the name of Gibbs, consisting of husband, wife and 17-months-old girl. The girl is now dead. On the night of July 20 a man named Elliott came to the house of a neighbor, carrying the Gibbs child in his arms. The girl's legs were both broken, and Elliott said he found her along the railroad track. It was supposed that the special train which took all the section hands to Ewen to fight the fire had struck the girl, but no bruises could be found on her person. Two days after a railroad surgeon went to see the girl, and Gibbs' wife showed the surgeon a wound in the top of the girl's mouth. The wound was made by a sharp instrument which had been driven into the brain. The little girl died on July 24. A post-mortem examination was held and the coroner's jury decided that death was due to the wound in the mouth. There were no wounds which could have been made by a train. Both legs were broken, but they seemed to have been snapped by somebody's strong hands.

It is said that Gibbs and his wife boasted that they had the railroad company "dead to rights" and would get $5,000 damages, with which they proposed to start a saloon.

Congressional Caucuses. The hall of the House of Representatives was well filled with Democrat members of the Fifty-third congress in caucus for the nomination of officers of the House of Representatives. There were no contests of special and the nominations were as follows: Speaker, Crisp for re-election; Clerk, Ker of Pennsylvania, for re-election; Herman W. Snow, of Illinois, for sergeant-at-arms; Lycurgus Dalton, of Indiana, for postmaster; Rev. S. W. Hadaway, of Maryland, for chaplain.

One Dead, Three Injured. Mrs. Nellie Carter and daughter, Miss Mary Carter, Miss Adda Sherwood and Miss Nellie Bryant, were riding in an Irish jaunting cart at Jackson. The horse became unmanageable and ran away, overturning the cart and seriously injuring all of them. Mrs. Carter's leg was fatally injured. Her head was also injured. Miss Nellie Bryant was also injured in the head, and was unconscious several hours. Miss Mary Carter's forehead was cut open, but it is not a serious wound. Miss Sherwood was badly bruised, but was the least injured of the party.

Mrs. Carter never regained consciousness and died within a few hours from internal injuries.

Eight Drowned on Lake George, N. Y. The steamer Rachel Sherman left Fourteen Mile Island, in Lake George, for Pearl Point. On board the steamer were an excursion party of 29 persons. Near Pearl Point the steamer struck a rock and sank. The following persons were drowned: Miss Bennett, Miss Oratt, Miss Burke, Miss Hall, Miss Worden, Mrs. Mitchell and son and an unknown woman. They were all from Troy, Brooklyn and Hoboken, N. Y. Twenty-one persons were landed at the point. It is reported that four others were drowned, but their names cannot be obtained.

Michigan's Criminal Record.

The report of Attorney-General Ellis will show that during the year ending June 30 last, a total of 18,974 criminal prosecutions were commenced in Michigan. Of the persons accused, 14,230 were convicted, 2,900 acquitted, 989 discharged on payment of costs, 1,013 were settled, and 395 persons were discharged on examination. The murder record shows 34 cases, 23 convictions, 8 acquittals and 4 dismissals. The percentage of convictions was greater than for the previous year.

Because Miners Want Their Money.

The miners of the Buffalo Mining Co. at Negamie met and decided to give the company seven days grace before taking legal measures to obtain their back pay by means of attaching the stock-piles. A Marquette attorney demanded 10 per cent of the miners' wages as fees, should he undertake to start a suit. As about $75,000 is due, the men thought he wanted a little too much. Speeches were made in English, Finnish and Italian. Deputy sheriffs are still guarding the mines of the company.

Aged Lady Attempts Suicide.

Mrs. Sarah Smith, aged 81 years, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Aaron P. Emory at Grand Rapids, attempted suicide by hanging. Mrs. Emory had been to call on a neighbor, and on returning found her mother hanging to a bedpost. Mrs. Smith was still breathing, but owing to her age and feebleness her recovery is not considered probable. The old lady has been somewhat deranged of late.

Nine Sailors Killed.

Berlin cable: An explosion occurred on board the German armor clod steamer Baden, at Kiel. Lieutenants Oelsner and Zembach and seven seamen were killed and 17 persons were wounded. Some of the men had just returned from the magazine a grenade containing five centimeters in diameter. The grenade exploded, killing or wounding nearly every person in the immediate vicinity.

Walter E. Shaw, for killing his mother and aunt, was hanged at Houston, Tex.

James Howell was hanged at Trenton, Mo., for the murder of Mrs. Nettie Hall and four children.

Col. Wm. Frisnath, aged 70, a prominent inventor and a veteran soldier, suicided at Philadelphia.

The First National bank, a hotel and six stores, destroyed by fire at Princeton, Minn. Loss $50,000.

Ex-Gov. Campbell, of Ohio, will decline a nomination for governor at the hands of the Democratic convention.

THE BI-METALLISTS.

SILVERITES HAVE A VERY HOT TIME IN CHICAGO.

They Discuss Their Favorite Theme and Pass a Lot of Very Decided Resolutions—The Convention Very Enthusiastic and Many Prominent Men Attend.

The second day of the convention was very warm and interesting. The preliminary speakers were ex-U. S. Senator N. P. Hill, of Colorado; ex-U. S. Senator J. P. Doolittle, of Missouri; Congressman E. G. Newlands, of Nevada; U. S. Senator Allen, of Nevada—who pledged the People's Party to silver; Hon. C. S. Thomas, of Colorado; John B. Lemon, of New York—who read a telegram authorizing him to express the sentiments of trades unionists of the American Federation of Labor in favor of free silver.

Gov. Waite, of Colorado, then took the platform, and was greeted with great enthusiasm. In closing the governor said: "If the money power shall attempt to sustain its usurpation of our rights by strong hands as in other lands, we will meet that issue if it is forced upon us. For it is better, infinitely better, rather than to see our country be destroyed by tyranny that is oppressing mankind all over the world, that we should wade through seas of blood—yea, blood to the horses' bridles." (Tremendous applause.)

Ex-Congressman Rice Pierce, of Tennessee, wrought the excitement up to fever pitch by his arraignment of President Cleveland for having broken faith with his adherents in the south and west on the silver question.

The report of the resolutions committee was read by Hon. Ignatius Donnelly. The preamble to the platform quoted speeches of several famous statesmen as against a gold standard of value. Daniel Webster said "gold and silver were the legal standard of value and neither Congress nor any state had the authority to fix any other. Hon. James G. Blaine said the destruction of silver as money and establishing gold as the sole rate of value, must have ruinous effects upon all forms of property except those investments which yield a fixed return in money. These would be enormously enhanced in value and would give a disproportionate and unfair advantage over other species of property."

No power was conferred on congress to declare either metal should not be money. Congress has therefore, in my judgment, no power to demonetize. Hon. J. G. Carlisle, secretary of the treasury, while a member of congress in 1875, said: "According to my views of the subject, the coinage which seems to have been formed here and in Europe to destroy by legislation and otherwise from three-sevenths to one-half of the metallic money of the world (by demonetizing silver) is the most gigantic crime of this or any other age. The consummation of such a scheme would ultimately entail misery upon the human race, and all the wars, pestilences and famines that every year occur in the history of the world." Senator John Sherman is quoted as saying in the senate in 1891: "The contraction of the currency is a far more distressing operation than senators suppose. To every person except a capitalist out of debt or a married officer or an amateur in a period of less or a lassitude of trade, fall of wages, suspension of enterprise, bankruptcy and disaster. It means ruin of all dealers whose debts are twice their business capital, though one-third less than their actual property. It means the fall of agricultural production without any great reduction of taxifera proper was a very scorching document. The main features are here given:

1. That their must be no compromise of the silver question. All legislation demonetizing silver and restricting the coinage of gold must be immediately and completely repealed by an act rescinding the contract of the coinage of the nation; we protest against the financial policy of the United States being made dependent upon the whims and caprices of any foreign government and as the power of this nation to stand on its feet and legislate for the good of all subjects.

2. We assert that the only remedy for the metallic money of the nation is the old ratio of sixteen of silver to one of gold. While this ratio is maintained, the metal will be valued at the price of silver and it is sufficient for us to know that a similar case would be made in the case of a country which had a large quantity of gold and credit in the form of world's goods, which would be sold for the price of gold, and the value of the goods would be maintained at the price of gold, and the value of the goods would be maintained at the price of gold.
