

The Northville Record.

Vol. XXV, No. 4.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 8, 1893.

$1.00 per year, in advance.

$98,550.

That Is the Amount of Northville's Improvements So Far This Year.

THIRTY-ONE NEW RESIDENCES.

A New Brick Block and Many Other Business Improvements.

It is safe to say that in no village in the state has there been such a show of enterprise; such an advancement or such an amount of building and improvements as there has in Northville this year. So far thirteen new residences have been completed and eighteen others are now under course of construction, with several more contemplated in sight. In addition to this four new stores have been built—Union block; a brick addition and veneered front on the Globe furniture works; a second story and tower on the city hall; Ambler Mercantile Co.'s ice house and lumber sheds; C. L. Dubuar's lumber sheds; Dubuar Mfg. Co.'s bending and store room, to say nothing of Joy's new bakery and Carmer's new shoe shop. The building improvements so far known, in addition to the water works system, will foot up in round numbers about $98,550, as follows:

RESIDENCES.
B. E. Carrington,	$ 2,000
Archie Morris,	1,200
G. I. Bradley,	900
Alfred Ely,	1,200
Peter Ely,	800
C. C. Pardee,	1,000

W. H. Yerkes,	750
Total,	$41,000

BUSINESS PLACES.
Carmer's shoe shop,	$ 100
Joy's bakery,	150
Ambler Merc. Co., sheds and ice house,	2,000
Dubuar Mfg. Co. store room,	400
Dubuar Lumber Co. sheds,	800
City hall addition,	1,100
Globe Fur. Co. addition,	3,000
Union block,	10,000
Total,	$17,550

To the above might be added our elegant water works system which was completed this year, costing some $40,000, and could not be bought today for $100,000.

The beauty of Northville's enterprise and growth now, as it always has been, is that in nowise has it been the outcome of any soap-bubble boom. The advancement has all been brought about by natural, healthy causes—the direct result of the successful management of our manufacturing industries and the constant increase of their business. In this connection the Hamrahan refrigerator works has played an important part this year.

Old People's Day.

Our seniors in general, and all over sixty years in particular, are cordially invited to attend the old people's service at the Methodist church at 10:30 a. m., Sunday Sept. 10th. The invocation is meant to include the aged in the country, far and wide. Let all our friends stand ready to volunteer carriages and help even the feeblest to the house of God. Come, fathers and mothers, a hundred strong, and bless our altars by your presence. A cordial committee will receive you, a happy congregation will welcome you, a sympathetic pastor will do his best to cheer and comfort you and God will richly bless you every one. Come one and all and let this day be a worthy tribute to our pioneers while we commune together regarding "The Indian Summer of Human Life." PASTER.

Half Rates to Grand Rapids.

The C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. lines will sell tickets to Grand Rapids and return from all stations, at one fare rate for the K. O. T. M. encampment, Sept. 11th and 12th, good to return until Sept. 16; and for the Western Michigan fair, Sept. 18 to 22; good to return until Sept. 23d. For the Kent County fair tickets will be sold Sept. 16, from all stations White Cloud to Holland and Grand Rapids to Lansing. Ask ticket agents for full particulars. GEO. DEHAVEN, G. P. A.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING.

Ten Months School—Water Works—Officers Elected.

All interest at the annual school meeting Monday night centered on the question of whether the recommendation of the board for a nine month's term of school instead of ten as at present, should be adopted or not. When it came to a vote it was decided by a voice of 35 to 15 that ten months was the proper thing.

It was voted to raise $1,250 for the following purposes: Fuel, $250; janitor $300; incidentals, $500; library, $100; new floors, $100. From the incidental fund will be used enough to put water from the water works system into the two main halls of the building.

When it came to the election of new officers, C. L. Dubuar was elected to fill Dr. Burgess' place and Dr. J. M. Swift to succeed himself.

SOLD ONCE MORE.

The Park Hotel and Opera House Again Change Hands.

Tuesday, Wm. Thurtle sold the Park House and the opera house building to Butler & Shaffer; Frank D. Butler and Ed. Shaffer. The new firm took possession at once and they assure the public of the continuance of a first-class hotel.

Mr. Thurtle has moved to Boyne City where he contemplates engaging in the lumber business. During their stay here they had won many friends and we are sorry to lose them from our midst.

Plymouth is about the liveliest place on the line of the F. & P. M. R. R. these days.—Ann Arbor Courier. What does Northville think of that?—Wayne Review.

Don't the Review man see that word "about" in that clipping? The item is alright.

The Northville Record is 25 years old. Under its present ownership it is a "gandy and F. S. Neal is entitled to much credit for placing it on a sound basis. For it was the "rattiest" paper ever published. It was a disgrace to the town and its name. The people of Northville were entitled to relief and they have it.—Highly Advertiser.

Northville had a $6,000 fire last week, but its new water works, which was tested for the first time in this fire, could not quench the flames until the limit of the fire insurance was reached in damages.—Wayne Review.

Supposing this to be a fact, which it is not, we didn't let the whole town burn up, and even if only the "limit of the fire insurance was reached," what's the dif? only so much the more money paid into the hands of Northville workmen for labor in rebuilding. The facts are the insurance was $6,500 and the damage settled for $4,500, which wholly covered the loss. There is no better water works system or fire protection in the world than Northville's, and there is plenty of money here that says so, too.

In these latter days South Lyon is getting to be renowned for ball players. There has got to be a first time yet this season for our regular nine to be done up. The ones noted Northvillites have met their second defeat here, the last time sent them home with a record of Northville 3, South Lyon 22.—Not in it any more, Bro. Neil.—Excelsior.

Nearly every neighboring village is crowing this year about pounding out the Northville ball club. They ought to know that Northville has not had a ball club since 1892. What they have played with this season has been a "picked up" nine with no pitcher at all and our exchanges are welcome to all the satisfaction they can obtain in the fact of their defeat. What we do object to though is spelling our name with an "I".

Card of Thanks.

We wish to return thanks to the neighbors who so kindly assisted during the illness and death of our little Earl.

ABOUT THE CLOCK.

The Council Will Deny Their Hearty Co-operation.

The council are heartily in favor of a town clock and at their meeting Wednesday night they agreed to make an appropriation sufficient to illuminate the dials as proposed and instructed President Dubuar to appoint a committee to go ahead with the matter. Following communication from our village president explains itself.

NORTHVILLE, Sept. 7, 1893. EDITOR RECORD:

Will you kindly mention in your paper that carrying out instructions of the common council of this village I have appointed the following committee to take in hand and have charge of the matter of raising funds by popular subscription for the purpose of fulfilling the conditions imposed in the liberal offer made through Mr. F. R. Beal relative to a donation to the village of a town clock. Dr. J. M. Burgess, L. A. Babbitt, W. T. Gurr, F. S. Neal, C. L. DUBUAR, President.

Michigan Days at the World's Fair.

Sept. 13 and 14. Half-fare to Chicago Grand Celebration. On Sept. 11 and 12 the C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. lines will sell tickets to Chicago and return at one way fare for the round trip, good ten days, including date of sale, via both St. Joseph and boat and via New Buffalo, all rail.

"Michigan Days" will be celebrated in grand style, with splendid illuminations, fireworks, electric fountains, etc., during the evening. Every patriotic Michigander should make it a point to be there, if possible, to help in the celebration, and make it the greatest of the year, for "Michigan is a Great State." Other celebrations during the week will be: Sept. 13, Athletic Union; 14th, Ohio and Veteran's day; 15th and 16th, Kansas, Costa Rica, Mexico, New Mexico and Vermont days.

Ask C. & W. M. or D. L. & N. ticket agents about rates, train time, etc., for all above dates, and arrange to go and help celebrate.

At last there is some hope that the nefarious traffic in labor of the Solomon islands savages will be broken up. Their chiefs have been in the habit of selling the captives taken in war, and their own subjects also, into practical slavery of the most horrible kind.

ANDERSEN AND THORWALDSEN AT THE FAIR.

Relics of Her Noblest Sons in the Liberal Arts Building—Thorwaldsen's Bust in Marble—Original Manuscripts of Famous Stories.

[World's Fair Correspondence.] CHRISTIAN. A N D E R S E N, known throughout the world as a poet and writer of stories, and Bertel Thorwaldsen, the sculptor, are awarded equal honors by the fair.

The latter followed the classical traditions, and because of the direct appeal of art and literature the land has produced reached its point of culmination in these two men only, the outer world, not prone to rate at their true value race characteristics, so considers it Andersen, in many respects, was more national in his thought and feeling than Thorwaldsen.

On the right side of the main entrance to the Danish section stands the statue of Andersen. The face, of noble lines, but simple, kindly expression, finds its way to the heart of every visitor.

His hat, his spectacles, his watch and seal and even his will are shown. The latter disposes of property worth but $1,000. He had no need of money. He was a welcome guest at every household in the land, and so, as the poor were not so well received.

He is a man of extraordinary energy and determination and has had long and valuable experience in police work. M. Lepine made his administrative debut in 1877 as sub-prefect at La Palisse, then he was at Montpion, Langres, and Fontainebleau, whence he was transferred to the Chateauroux as prefect of the department L'Indre.

His life throughout was like a wonderful fairy tale. He was born of a very poor family in the little market-town of Odense in 1805. Being possessed neither of money nor of knowledge he came to the metropolis, presently procured powerful friends, and died as the venerated idol of his nation at Copenhagen in 1875.

History presents no figure parallel to that of Hans Christian Andersen. Unaided and without family ties he adopted as his own all the land itself.

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative, effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers, and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 5c and 25c bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

WORLD'S Columbian Exposition

OFFICIAL SOUVENIR—1893
In beautiful and bright colors, and the designs have been etched on silk, taken from Oil Paintings and the celebrated world-famous models now on exhibition at the World's Fair. On the top of the box is the famous portrait, after the design of the artist, of Christopher Columbus, in the center is an exact reproduction of the Santa Maria in full sail, showing the brave crew that assisted in discovering AMERICA on the bottom is a design showing the first landing on our shores, and on the other a complete bird's eye view of the World's Fair. Is pronounced one of the handsomest and most attractive souvenirs yet issued as a Souvenir of the great Exposition. Can be used as a Badge, Book-Mark, or as an ornament for the parlor.

SWEET PEAS.

A host of dainty, wing-like flowers, A bowl of Dresden china, Beguile to-day some lonely hours With potency far finer Than all the roses, wondrous fair, Which languish in their glory In stately vase of pattern rare, Breathing the summer's story.

ANOTHER MAN'S SISTER.

I occupied (and still do occupy) chambers which consist of two rooms connected by a tiny hallway giving on to the landing by one door. Therefore it will be plain to the meagrest mind that once the hall door is occupied by the enemy the only other exit is from the window by way of the gutter-pipe—a vertical distance of three stories. There should always be two ways, not including the window, out of every set of chambers.

This need had never presented itself to me until one memorable afternoon when, without knock, word, or warning, a round-faced, golden-haired, blue-eyed maiden, in an astrakhan-faced jacket, a gray skirt and a black velvet hat, charged into my room after the most approved fashion of all the comedies, crying: "Dear old Joe!" My name was not, and never will be, Joe. There was no need for explanations. Sister, and only sister, was stamped all over the face of the maiden. Everybody who has been possessed of an only sister understands the manner in which one of the tribe enters a brother's rooms.

The maiden gave a little scream as I turned. She apologized. Could I tell her whereabouts Mr. Joseph Rupard's chambers were? I could not; for you may live seven years in chambers without knowing the face, life, or occupation of any one of your fellow-convicts. I suggested that she should speak to the housekeeper, and escorted her to the tiny hall aforesaid.

You will observe that there was nothing whatever in these proceedings to bring a blush to the thinnest cheek. The imp of perversity, who is generally philling about on the landing for six shillings a week, met me in the hallway, saying: "Lady and gentleman to see you, sir."

Behind him stood two figures that I knew, and at any other time would have received with joy. The maiden at my heels lost her singularly pretty head, and, whispering "What shall I do?" bobbed back into the sitting-room.

All this was strictly in accordance with the rules of the stage; but why it should have taken place in my chambers I could never understand. And yet I was deeply thankful that she had not gone forth, like Una, under the noses of my visitors. Uncle John—yes, it was an uncle, even as is the case in a comedy—would have laughed, and, since she was another man's sister, that would have been even worse than Aunt Alice's hawk-eyed inspection of the maiden, and subsequent description of her face, figure, and dress to all her righteous world.

I received my people in the hallway. An inspiration told me to get rid of my coal and rumple my hair. Desperate fear made me very wise, most courteous, and genial to excess. "Oh, so glad to see you," said I; "but I'm afraid you've come to a regular camp in the wilderness. Fact is, my sitting-room is upside down—that fool of a housemaid has been doing something to the fire that has filled the place with smuts; and I've made her dust everything out again. But come into the bedroom, since you've taken the trouble to climb all these stairs." Even as I spoke in the hall, I heard the heavy arm-chair wheeled up against my sitting-room door, and there was a sound of emphatic dusting. I thanked heaven that was pleased to afflict me that it had sent at least "one heart still ready to play out the play."

Into my humble bedroom I led those relatives; and my aunt, after the manner of women, made searching inventories with her eye, and inquired as to whether I was well looked after. But it was the anti-pathetic kiss and the remark that followed—"My boy, how hot you are! Aren't you well?"—that seared my perfectly innocent soul like hot iron. Perfected crime must bring with it a sense of ease and rest. It is the unmerited imputation of evil that strains the nerves. My aunt would fain have had tea, "when that girl had finished cleaning your rooms." The bedroom door was of course open. I assured my aunt that the folly of that housemaid prevented her from finishing anything this side of doomsday, and that the dust would not settle down till twenty minutes after that.

There was a crowing, choking noise, that might have been a smothered chuckle, from the sitting-room, whereof the faint light above the door was open.

"What a very superior voice she has!" said Aunt Alice. "Quite a lady's. Is she pretty?" "Come and see," quoth I, with that icy innocence that only cunning can bestow. I half-opened the sitting-room door, coughed vehemently, and drew back as one choked with the dust.

"Impossible," I said. "She's not in a sweet temper to-day, because I made her do the rooms twice. We'd better not disturb her, or she'll break my ornaments."

My aunt left very slowly and deliberately, mourning for the loss of her tea. I escorted her and Uncle John down to the first floor. How could I tell that her housewifely zeal for her nephew would have led her to bestow upon the housemaid, who was Fan of the Teeth, a few hints on the best management of fires and the proper care of the room, which the fellow-servant was even then supposed to be cleaning?

"You see, it all means more work for you in the end," said my aunt. I dashed into the sitting-room to find, helpless with suppressed laughter, the maiden with the black velvet hat. I was coatless, as has been recounted (people never stay long with a man who lacks a coat), my hair was on end, and I was flushed. But there was no resisting that infection of mirth. I laughed aloud. The air was dense with dust and all the furniture was out of place. That fool of a housemaid had lived up to her reputation.

"Haven't I done the room beautifully?" she said, with a wicked giggle; "thank you—thank you, oh, so much, for helping me!" "Not in the least," said I. "I've got a sister of my own. But had'n't you better—"

"I'm gone," she said, and vanished at the word, to hunt for her brother's chambers. Entered her cap over one eye, Fan of the Teeth, boiling with rage. She was an austere woman of thirty-five, not to be trifled with.

"And I'm sure Mr. and Mrs. Joe, too, we takes all the trouble that we can with seventeen sets of chambers to be gone through, and the bells ringing on every landing all day long. 'Isn't as if I was afraid of my work, for I've kept myself ever since I was a little girl of thirteen—nor Lucy, neither. But when that lady on the staircase spoke to me, an' told me that I was inattentive an' Lucy, too, an' smuts all about your room, sayin' that I was to take extra care of you, sir, I was put out. Do as you would be done by. I thinks, an' show no favor to any chambers more than another, for some one must lose by it; and if it isn't you, it will be some other gentleman. An' there aren't no smuts in your room not to be seen, an' Lucy, I knows, she's been on the fourth floor since I come down with the slops; but I didn't say nothink to that lady when she said what she said, an' Lor, sir, what are you bin doin' to the furnichure—al pulled across the room?" Lucy hasn't been 'ere no more than the cat. An' you arvin to see your friends in your bedroom—as if it was our fault!"

"Fanny," said I, "if there has been any fault, that fault is mine. Take, oh, take those lips away, and—here's a half-sovereign!"

It was a damning confession of guilt, received as such. Fan removed herself with an unholy light in her eye. Reentered Fan, the half-sovereign in her hand, and placed it on my table.

"I've took them in their teas," she said, oracularly; "an' she was tellin' 'im all about it. She is a real nice little lady, she is, an' I don't want no art-suffering for that."

No comedy that I could think of had any mention of the subterfuge to be sure, Fan was rather too angular for the subterfuge—refusing a tip.

"And you're a lady, too, Fan," said I. "Keep it. Few people return money. Still fewer dismiss preconceived suspicions."

She withdrew slightly alarmed. I stepped into the hallway to set down the empty soda-water syphon in the place appointed. The door leading to the landing was half-open. I heard voices descending the stairs.

"He was really very nice," Joe, about it. Said he had a sister of his own and laughed.

"Hi-mp. Them I'm sorry for his sister, that's all. He drinks like a fish. Why, only last night I found him on his hands and knees on the second floor, and had to help him to bed."

The next chambers? An I hope to clear my character before all judges, it was the man in the next chambers! I had heard the infernal din of that episode at 2 o'clock in the morning, and a few of Joe's comments as he left the drunkard. How should the maiden know exactly into whose rooms she had penetrated? and here was Joe saddling me with my neighbor's booted slumbers.

I gripped the syphon-head in an agony of wrath. The steps were almost opposite my landing. There was more soda-water than I had thought for in the tube, and the infernal concoction exhausted itself with a fizzie, spit, and grunt. It seemed to roar through the house.

"There!" said Joe. "You hear, Milly? That's a soda-water syphon. He's at it again—so early!" "But he didn't look as if he took—" The sweet voice died away, and I was alone with my sorrow and my syphon.

To-day I know something of plot and construction; and, as I said, I understand the verisimilitude of the modern French farce. Yet would I sell all my insight for the single privilege of explaining to Milly (my Milly—she has dusted my room) that I am not—indeed, I am not—the villain that Joe painted me.—St. James' Gazette.

Vanity of Looking. The annual manufacture of looking glass in Europe at the present time, according to the latest statistics, is something like 7,854,000 square yards. In the mirrors of to-day the light is reflected by a layer of silver or an amalgam of tin, but a proportion of light is lost in the process of reflection, and the image is less luminous than the original. The value of a looking glass is estimated by the thickness of the glass, because the thicker they are the stronger they must be; but, speaking scientifically, thick glasses are defective, because the outlines of the image reflected are less clearly defined.

Like No Other Love.

"Carlos!"—and she laid her shapely arms round his neck and her beautiful face on his—she knew that he could never resist her caresses—"if I am to learn anything you must teach me. I should never forget anything you said. I should learn from you in half the time I should learn from anyone else. Take your mother at her word—let me be educated," as she calls it, but you educate me."

"That is a glorious idea, Maggie," he replied. "I will. You are so quick and clever, you are sure to make rapid progress. But where shall I see you? I cannot stay at Hatton after Lord Stanleigh is gone."

Her beautiful eyes were looking into his, her lovely rose-flushed face nestled nearer to him, her hands met round his neck.

"Carlos," she whispered, "do not leave me again. I love you so much that if anything parted us now I should die. Do not leave me. I have a presentiment that if you do your mother will part us. Oh, Carlos, do not leave me, now that I have learned to love you with all my heart!"

"Do you love me with all your heart, Maggie?" he asked.

"Do I?" she echoed, and she was by no means reticent in her expressions of affection for him.

He was young, open to flattery and madly in love. He forgot everything except that he loved this beautiful girl who clung to him with such passionate prayers and tears. He promised that he would never leave her again.

"Maggie, I have thought of a plan," he said. "It is perhaps stealing a march on dear mother; but all is fair in love. I will go away for six months; but I will marry you and take you with me. We will spend six months abroad, and during that time I will finish your education. I will teach you all these little niceties which I suppose my mother considers a part of a woman's high training. At the end of six months I will take you to her and when she sees the improvement she will be anxious for me to marry you. Then we can show her how true our love was how well it has stood the test, and she will enjoy the surprise."

Maggie entered heart and soul into the plot.

Nothing could be better. She will see that you were right and she was wrong. She will see, too, that she has been mistaken about me."

No difficulty stood in the way. Lord Stanleigh would be in Spain, and Lady Carew would never dream of such a thing as a secret marriage while as for John Waldron if he thought his daughter safe, he would not bestir himself. There was indeed, thought Sir Carlos, nothing to fear.

"Tell your father that you do not like country life," he said, "and that you will try to get a situation in London. I can arrange for letters to be forwarded to him at intervals, and he will not know but that you are there. We will be married in London by special license, Maggie, and I will take you to Paris. No, not to Paris; we should meet so many English there. We will go to Italy. We will have a beautiful little villa beside one of the lakes, and for six months we will be happy as no other couple has ever been. What do you think of the plan?"

In ecstasy she threw herself into his arms. They talked for hours of the surprise it would be to Lady Carew when in the graceful, accomplished daughter-in-law presented to her she should recognize Maggie.

They not only talked of the scheme, but they carried it out. Maggie told her father that she was tired of a country life and that she should get a situation in London. He was unsuspecting and easily deceived. Sir Carlos went home and told his mother that he intended to spend the next six months in Italy, and that then he should have a surprise for her. Everything favored Sir Carlos and Maggie's plan. They were married in London and started for Italy without a misgiving as to their future happiness.

CHAPTER XI.
Sir Carlos and Maggie had been married three days, and as yet there had not been the faintest shadow of a cloud to mar their happiness. A thousand times each day Sir Carlos thanked Heaven that he had followed his own inclination. It was so sweet to teach his beautiful girl wife so delightfully to watch her rosy mouth with its graceful curves so blissful to be loved with such passionate devotion. Ah, if he had done as his mother said, if he had spent six months away from Maggie he would have lost the very happiest time of his life.

"If you want a woman to be trained in any particular way, train her yourself," thought Sir Carlos. He spent a week of perfect bliss. He had bought Maggie a magnificent trousseau as they passed through Paris. Every requisite and every luxury that was needed for a lady was there; and Maggie's delight had been boundless. However, it did rather jar upon him when, every time she put on a fresh dress, she said: "I wish Lady Carew could see me now."

It annoyed Sir Carlos, but he did not like to tell her so. He began to find that his beautiful Maggie had a temper, and that she did not like to be found fault with. He had taken a luxuriously furnished villa on the shores of the Lake of Como—the Villa Molteni, belonging to the duke of that name, who had gone to the East. Sir Carlos had no trouble as to servants, for they had all been there for some years; and his time was all his own for making love and teaching. He could not help smiling at the array of books he had brought with him; but Maggie rarely opened one of them.

Sir Carlos was perfectly happy for some few days. He never wearied of watching Maggie and the more he watched her the more beautiful he thought her. How right he had been after all he reflected! A few little eccentricities were less than nothing when compared with her wonderful beauty.

One day Sir Carlos drove his wife to the city of Como, as she had expressed a wish to see it. He ordered a recherche dinner at the hotel where they alighted; and it happened that among other things a dish of green peas was served.

"Peas!" cried Maggie when she saw the dish. "I am very fond of them. My aunt always said I could never have enough of them."

The continual mentioning of her aunt as the highest earthly authority began to annoy him. He was fastidious, too, and did not like to hear a lady speak with enthusiasm of eating. This was the least part of the shock he was destined to suffer. Maggie helped herself most liberally to the green peas; and presently her husband looking up suddenly, saw his beautiful wife using her knife instead of her fork.

"Maggie," he cried angrily, "what are you doing?" Her face flushed, but she looked defiantly at him.

"I know," she said. "But I must use my knife; I cannot help it. I am sure Miss Pierson was very particular in teaching us never to use a knife when eating peas; but look at this fork—I cannot eat peas with it!"

"Then go without them. It is unbecoming of vulgar. Never do that again, Maggie; it has horrified me."

"And I am so fond of them," she answered patiently. "What can it matter? There is no one here to see me."

"I am here," he said, "and you are here. You must respect my presence and your own; you should never do when you are alone what you would not do if any one was with you. The laws of good breeding are always the same whether we are alone or with others."

"That is all nonsense!" cried Maggie. Her husband looked at her in dismay.

"Nonsense or not, when you dine with me I shall expect you to observe the same etiquette at table that I observe myself."

"You do not love me, if you did you would not find fault with me," said Maggie.

"I have proved my love," he retorted, and she finished her dinner in sulky silence. This was the first disagreement.

The second arose from a similar cause. Maggie had never been accustomed to wine, and she liked it perhaps a little too much. She would drink glass after glass—quite unconscious certainly, of the effect it would have—until she grew sleepy and stupid. Her husband spoke to her about it kindly enough, but firmly; and she bitterly resented his interference.

He found too that he could not correct her inaccuracies of speech, her mistakes in pronunciation. If there was an improvement one day she was worse the next; that which the glamour of love had hidden from him was glaringly apparent now.

He had not been three days in falling in love; he had not been married three weeks before he discovered that his mother's verdict was a true one. His love had been a young man's fancy. Time would have proved it to be so; but he had not waited for time.

It was not many weeks before, the unhappy Sir Carlos saw that in the wife he had chosen there was no charm save that of her beautiful face. He had thought he would be able to form her mind; it was already formed. He fancied he could educate her; she was already educated. He had believed she could train her; she was already trained. The conviction came to him at last that his hasty, ill-considered marriage had been a fatal mistake; and he had to go through all the horrors of his disillusion.

When Maggie perceived that he grew weary of her society she went through every phase of jealous fury. Nothing could have been more unfortunate for them than their isolation and solitude; for if they had been surrounded by friends and acquaintances they would have seen much less of each other.

Maggie was no companion for him; she never read, never opened either book or paper. She had no experience of life, save such as she had met with in her aunt's shop. If she told an anecdote, its coarseness and vulgarity disturbed him. When she had talked to him about her new dresses, about the impression she intended to make on Lady Carew, and her plans when she could live at Firholme, she had no more to say.

teaching her Dad died off. She would not even listen to him.

Miss Pierson told me that years ago," she would say to him when he corrected any glaring inaccuracy, until he was ready to anathematize Miss Pierson.

Perhaps his greatest horror was the continual "use she" made of the word "genteel," and gave to some words a peculiar accent for the same reason. Sir Carlos began to detest the very sound of the word. She could be good-tempered when she chose; but when she preferred to be sulky or silent, she could be equally disagreeable.

Sir Carlos now recognized the fact that, although his wife was beautiful enough, she was coarse and vulgar. He had not believed that such a contradiction could exist.

They went from bad to worse when Maggie found that his love was waning. She became jealous; she was sure, she told him, that he loved some one else; either he cared for some one he had left in England or he had met some Italian girl. He never praised her now, never called her beautiful; never said he loved her.

What had she done? What did he mean by it?—while he cursed the obstinate folly which had ruined his life. "The Curse of the Carews" was upon him. He had obeyed the promptings of his own self will, and it had brought him to such a pass that he was tired of his life. He dared not go to Firholme. How could he take that sulky, vulgar, uneducated woman home to Lady Carew?

FEATHERS ON THE FARM.

Possible Profit in Saving and Carefully Curing Them.

If the feathers from all sources on the farm should be carefully cared for and sold, suggests the Breeder and Horseman, they would amount to a neat little sum in the course of a year. While geese and duck feathers are preferable, yet there is a demand for chicken feathers when properly assorted. In doing this the shorter and softer feathers should be put by themselves and cured either in the sun and air or by artificial heat. It is very necessary to cure the green feathers in order to keep them from spoiling as the quills and yielding a bad odor that might ruin the whole lot.

We priced some pillows recently, in a furnishing house, and were considerably set back at the price asked for them. Three dollars for a couple of pillows that weighed only four pounds, and the feathers were only second-class at that. The best quality of home-grown, put up at a factory at Nashville, were quoted much higher.

The first quotation was on pillows made in Chicago, and simply guaranteed to emit no unpleasant odor. The feathers in them felt bunched and harsh. Prime good feathers bring fifty to seventy cents a pound. White or Pekin duck feathers sell higher as high as geese feathers.

It strikes us that in a state as well watered as the State of California, where water fowl may have the advantages of the very best and most natural surroundings, it would pay well to raise ducks and geese for their feathers and meat. The latter can certainly be sold at cost of production, which would leave the feathers produced as clear profit.

Wigs and Christianity.

A century and a half ago wig-wearing was at its height, and little boys 4 or 5 years of age submitted to having their heads shaved preparatory to donning their false head-dresses. A Leydon professor—Bivers by name—shocked all churches by declaring that a Christian must necessarily wear a wig or be eternally lost. On the other hand, Dr. Thiers, a celebrated Catholic, assailed the wig-wearing priests in a good-sized volume. The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians from A. D. 427 to A. D. 517 considered a false head-covering a badge of distinction. This too, in direct opposition to Tertullian who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil, and Clement of Alexandria, who warned his hearers that when the sacred hands of the clergy were laid on their heads the blessing would not penetrate through the false hair.

Neither Written nor Printed.

The most wonderful book in the world is one which is neither written nor printed. Every letter is cut into the leaf, and as the alternate leaves are of blue paper it is as easily read as the best printing. The labor required and the patience necessary to cut each letter may be imagined; the work is so perfect that it seems as though done by machinery, yet every character was made by hand. The book is entitled "The Passion of Christ." It is a very old volume, and was a curiosity as long ago as 1540. It belongs to the family of the Prince de Ligne and is now in France. Rudolph II. of Germany ordered for it 11,000 ducats.

Intense excitement was created here for a short period, about 7 o'clock Monday evening, by the city of fire. Upon locating the spot it was found to be on the roof of Oscar Panches' old bakery. With prompt assistance the blaze was soon extinguished with but slight damage to the roof. The fire caught from a spark from the chimney.

The fourth and last quarterly conference meeting was held at the Plymouth Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday, Rev. J. L. Hudson, presiding elder of the Detroit district being present. The following trustees were elected for this place and the Newburg church: Plymouth—T. C. Sherwood, E. P. Lombard, W. J. Stewart, C. G. Curtiss, Jr. and J. R. Rauch; Newburg—E. J. Norris, Wm. Smith, James King, Benj. Passage and Clarence W. Rätler.

The Methodist quarterly conference made a unanimous vote to the presiding elder requesting that Rev. N. N. Clark be returned to this charge another year. Mr. Clark has been a hard working and well loved pastor and it is hoped by all that we will see his face among us the coming year. The labor of our presiding elder Rev. J. L. Hudson will cease when the annual conference meets at Detroit the 20th of this month. Probationers will be taken into full membership of the church, both here and at Newburg next Sabbath.

All the money issued by the government is owned by the people, in one capacity or another. If everybody locks up his share there is a currency famine, though there is as much of the medium of exchange in the country as ever. The thing to do to break the money stringency is for everybody to pay his bills, and let the banks have the surplus as usual. Hardly a bank has suspended since the first of January from insolvency. The trouble is the locking up of currency in small quantities. It is aggravated by putting off the payment of little accounts.

The exercises given by the ladies foreign missionary society last Sunday evening was listened to by a very large audience. There were some fine selections in reading, rendered by Mrs. N. N. Clark and Miss Helena Chilson; also some recitations by the younger people. Miss Dean, a former missionary to Persia, exhibited the different customs worn by the ladies of that country, after which she gave a lecture on the ways and doings of the people of Persia in general. It was very interesting and much enjoyed by all. The singing was by the Plymouth Glee Club.

The school meeting was held in the school building Monday evening with a good number in attendance, including a number of lady voters. Nathan Shy not being present L. C. Hough was chosen chairman. The terms of C. A. Frisbee and Crawford Safford, trustees, had expired and they were re-elected for the coming year. There is $1,600 to be raised by tax for teachers salaries this year, $1,200 for the contingent fund and $200 for insurance. The committee on investigation for purchasing three acres of land back of school house was called upon and reported that on pricing the land they found that the owner of said property asked $700 per acre. It was thought that $2,100 was too much to put into a play-ground at the present day and the idea was abandoned and the committee discharged.

The following are the teachers for this year: Geo. Curtice, principal; Lina Durfee, preceptress; Delia Entrican, grammar dept; Gertrude Taff, 2d intermediate; Minnie McGrann, 1st intermediate; Anna Smith, 2d primary; Nellie Church, 1st primary. The attendance at the school last year was 385; this year the attendance is 402.

Young man, where do you spend your evenings? "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." You cannot gather grapes from thistles. The harvest time is coming; what does it signify to you?

Sunday's meeting was the best one yet. Secretary Parker was present and conducted the service. The words spoken were full of power and came home to the hearer's in a convincing way and we trust with profit. In points of attendance we went beyond any other record, there being 105 present. Ed. A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN.

Elkhart, Ind., July 1st, 1890: Dullam's Great German Medicine Co. My daughter has been afflicted with Female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. A lady friend advised me to secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and she has been completely cured by it. We gave it a fair trial and the results were wonderful. We cannot recommend it too highly to all ladies who are afflicted.

THY ALL SAY SO.

Isaiah told Jeremiah that Benjamin said he heard Frank say that John often asserted without any fear of contradiction that the R. & F. Wayne's Perfectos and Record Taker Se cigars are the finest and most aromatic cigars ever sold in Northville and many more smokers most emphatically pronounce them so. Try one and be convinced. Manufactured by G. A. & T. M. Fletcher.

BUCKLIN'S ARNICA SALVE.

The best salve in the world for cuts, bruises, sores, ulcers, salt rheum, fever sores, tetter, chapped hands, chilblains, corns, and all skin eruptions, and positively cures piles or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25c per box. For sale by A. M. Randolph, the druggist.

DON'T GET IMPOSED UPON.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished. Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure has proven itself unequalled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure and get Dullam's. All druggists keep it.

NORTHVILLE LOCALS.

The man who thinks to please the world is the dearest of his kind. For turn which ever way he will. One half is yet behind. Judge Purd Yerkes is on the sick list.

Remember the entertainment at the W. C. T. U. hall. Pocket book containing small amount of money awaits an owner at this office. The Presbyterian and Methodist pastors are planning for the world's fair.

There is only one advertised letter at the postoffice this week—Mr. George Cooper. W. F. Stapleton was called to Cassopolis yesterday, by the death of his mother.

The "Irish Neighbors" opera company with a full brass band will play here Sept. 29. The insurance adjusters have allowed the Ely Dowel Mfg. Co. $4,500 damages as a result of their recent fire.

A form tipped over on Will Hahn at the Globe factory Monday, severely bruising his leg below the knee. Next Sunday evening Rev. J. M. Belding preaches on "Our Public Schools." The topic is a timely one.

Messrs Brown & Shafer open up with an ad in our columns this week, to which the attention of our readers is called. The local social world will soon be in the whirl of expectation as a most delightful wedding is about to be announced.

A barrel of lime slipped down on one of Henry Piskle's left fingers Tuesday, scraping the flesh off clean to the bone nearly the entire length. According to recent rulings of the postoffice department at Washington, Postmaster Horton is quite sure of holding over until the expiration of his term, next January.

It is said that some of our local fruit growers have shot guns loaded with salt in wait for those boys who are making such havoc "booning" their fruit. A word to the wise should be sufficient.

The L. T. L.'s elected the following officers last Sunday afternoon for the ensuing year: Clara Reed, president; Argie Smith, vice-president; Etoll Springer, secretary; Mrs. Myrta Simonds, treasurer. Regular meeting every Sunday afternoon at 4:30.

An agitation is beginning to agitate relative to closing of stores at 8 p. m. after October 1st. A number of the business men have signified their willingness to do so and it should be an unanimous go. Every store to close at the stroke of eight by the new town clock.

Secretary Parker of the Detroit Y. M. C. A., assisted at the evening service at the Presbyterian church Sunday. The music and addresses were highly spoken of. In the morning at the communion service three were taken on profession into church membership, all of them first receiving the sacrament of baptism.

Mrs. F. E. Preston of Detroit, a fine colored elocutionist, will give an entertainment on next Monday evening at the W. C. T. U. hall, under the auspices of the L. T. L. Mrs. Preston comes with the best of recommendations, and none should miss this opportunity of hearing her. Admission ten cents. Entertainment commences at 7:30 prompt.

The boys and girls of the Junior league expect to fill the Methodist church at their stereopticon entertainment on Saturday evening, Sept. 16th. "Yellowstone Park" is the subject and it will be fine. It will enable you to see it and help the juniors toward the new organ. They will drill and sing just before the program proper. Admission for children 10 cents.

Will Long a Globe furniture employe promised to marry Sarah Hake of Novi. They went to Pontiac and obtained a license to that effect last week. The minister to tie the nuptial knot was selected, and then Will persuaded Sarah to delay the eventful occasion for a brief period. Will returned to Northville the next day and soon after left for his native country, Canada, and since that naught has been heard from him.

In reply to the question as to whether or not they would rebuild Mr. Ely of the Ely Dowel works, says it will depend something on how bad Northville wants the factory. They have received offers of a bonus from several other towns if they will locate there. Mr. Ely says that for the six months ending July 1st they have given steady employment to 12 men, and paid out for wages $2,500. The firm think a new building, just adapted to their use can be built for $1,500, and they will ask Northville to put up one-half that amount.

DR. PRICE'S Cream Baking Powder. The only Pure Cream of Tartar Powder.—No Ammonia; No Alum. Used in Millions of Homes—40 Years the Standard.

A new furniture store is to open up here Sept. 20. A Milford horse trotted in 2:26 at Plymouth yesterday. Geo. Pickle now has charge of the Park house bus line. John Sipio's dog went a half mile in two minutes on the Plymouth track, Wednesday.

The Salem ball club will play the Northville club here to-morrow (Saturday) after noon. There will be a regular meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary Monday eve, Sept. 11. All members are requested to be present.

Cards are out announcing the wedding of Miss Jennie Blair, of Danlap street, to Mr. A. L. Rich of Lansing, for next Tuesday evening. S. D. Goldsmith of Wayne has purchased F. D. Butler's dray business. Mr. Goldsmith has been in the business at Waayne for a number of years. He will move his family here at once.

John Pinkerton has rented the Wm. Johnson residence near the Condensery and will soon occupy the same. Mr. Root will move into the government residence very soon so it is understood. In speaking of the recent visit of the Milford gun club here, the Times says: "The visitors were royally entertained, their hosts sparing neither trouble or expense in providing for their pleasure and comfort."

Every citizen in Northville should be interested and should consider it a privilege to be able to pay something toward the expense of putting in the new tower clock. Any amount from 50 cents to $1 will be received. Mr. Austin's (of Plymouth) team made things lively along Wing street Monday. They started while a cistern was being loaded into the wagon at P. B. Barley's shop and stopped in A. W. Reed's yard, corner Randolph and Center street, because they couldn't take a big tree along with them.

The council has ordered the fire committee to see about procuring a fire-alarm. Dr. Burgess is chairman of that committee and as he is enthusiastic in the matter there is every reason to expect that ere many weeks Northville will have what she may hope never to have practical use for—a complete fire-alarm system.

Those who claim to know say that many people who sprinkle their lawns wonder why the grass dies. Any lawn will die which receives water in the middle of the day. Turn the water on to a lawn and let a hot sun pour down on it. Then turn the water off and the grass will die in ten minutes. If people want a good lawn let them wet it after the sun goes down.

There were 501 tickets sold here last week Friday morning for the Sunday school rally at Detroit, and it is estimated that thirty or forty went without securing tickets. The coaches were completely filled, including all the standing room. Northville was represented by nearly one-third its entire population, and it is safe to say no other village sent such a delegation.

A regular meeting of the Ladies' library association will be held at the library rooms next week Friday evening, Sept. 15, 7 o'clock sharp. Every lady member of the library is a member of the association, and is earnestly requested, not only requested, but is really expected to be present. The officers of the association wish to fully impress upon each lady member that not only is their presence needed at these quarterly meetings, but they are in duty bound to be there.

One of our Northville merchants who was at Holly this week tells us of the bruised and battered condition of the face of the Advertiser's editor. Slooem was riding his elegant safety bicycle along the walks the other day, carrying in one hand another wheel when in some mysterious manner the walk shifted one side and then straight up until it had mowed the cuticle off from one side of his face in a terrible manner. Jim is now trying to figure out whether he really had that other wheel in his hand or in his head.

C. A. Hutton is just in receipt of a letter from J. M. VanAvery of Oakland Cal. Mr. VanAvery, it will be remembered, was once a preacher in the Methodist church here, but finally was obliged to leave the ministry on account of ill health. For some years he has been in the general offices of the Southern Pacific railway at Oakland. He says he yet frequently preaches on a Sunday, having delivered twelve sermons during the last quarter. He sends kindest regards to all Northville people. Mr. Van Avery has many warm friends and admirers in this village.
