THEY NEEDED CLOTHING.

Richardson's Furnishing Store Burglarized by a Trio.

T. G. Richardson says he thought he was selling goods so cheap that there was no inducement left whatever for anyone to steal anything. But three young men who had not read T. G.'s ad in the Record, probably from some distance away, forced an entrance into his store, via basement window and trap-door, late Friday night or early Saturday morning of last week. The bargain seekers evidently knew just what they were after, and of what they sought they were novices as regards judgement of quality. In one respect at least they were kind. They left their apparel in each case for what they took from the store, or so far as it would go, and Mr. Richardson now has enough cast-off wearing material to start a second-hand clothing store. So far as discovered Mr. Richardson cannot invoice or show cash for three pair of shoes, three ulster over coats, a trio suits of underclothes, one-fourth dozen pairs of pants, a triplet of jackets and as many hats. In fact they took three and left three right through. They tapped one money-bag and for this trouble they probably had twenty-five to forty coppers to jingle in their inside pocket of that new suit.

The gentlemen, for their appearance at their departure would so denote them; were tracked to Plymouth Junction where it is presumed they boarded a passing train for the metropolis. Detectives are on the scent and it is expected the culprits will yet be captured. The loss will probably foot up in the neighborhood of $100. Two of the ulsters were found under Jolliffe Bros. cheese factory at Plymouth Sunday morning which were returned to Mr. Richardson Tuesday. Three men answering the description, one wearing a long gray ulster, took the four o'clock Detroit train from Plymouth Sunday morning.

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION.

The W. C. T. U. Hold Their's Here "The Last of the Month."

The W. C. T. U. district convention will be held in this village October 25, 26 and 27 instead of 14, 15 and 16 as previously announced. The convention will be held in the Presbyterian church and a large delegation is expected to be present.

The L. T. L.'s are to have an hour on the program, which will be of much interest and include a song of welcome a wind mill and a marching song with three or four recitations. Mrs. McCutcheon will drill the children for the singing exercises and Miss Eva Little will instruct an older class in a dumb bell drill.

The session will be held morning, afternoon and evening and many speakers of note will be present.

"Our Men's Meeting."

September's report shows a decided advance. We have held four meetings with a total attendance of 278 making an average of 69 at each session. Can we not better this in our next?

We appreciate the work of the boys who furnish the instrumental music. This feature of our work is very valuable and we cannot afford to be without them.

What is most needed at this stage of the work is earnest personal work. Apply what has been termed the golden rule of effort, that is, "talk it up," in season and out of season. Come often and bring others with you.

We are indebted to James McGee of Detroit for a very fine talk Sunday on "Decision." Every one who attended was helped by the words spoken. The attendance was 108.

The state convention of the Y. M. C. A. commences next Thursday, Oct. 12, at Battle Creek. Can you go? Get credentials of the president.

ONE OF THE MEN.

Nearing the End of the One Fare Rates to Chicago.

Oct. 9, 11, 13, 17, 19, 21, 23, 25 and 27 the D. L. & N. R. R. will sell tickets to Chicago and return at one fare for round trip, good ten days. For stations east of Grand Ledge tickets will be sold only via St. Joe and boat. From all other stations they will be sold via St. Joe and via New Buffalo (all rail). These tickets are not good in Wagner parlor and sleeping cars. GEO. DEHAVEN, G. P. A.

The Review says all that Wayne now lacks is a "Jag-cure." What's the matter with coming to Northville?

When a man steps up to the bar at Milford and calls for something "soft" the bartender hands him out a sponge.

Wayne must be rather a dead town. A tombstone and monument advertisement is the only local ad appearing in the village paper.

It is said that the marshal at South Lyon caught a citizen of that village taking a bath one-day last week and made him return it to avoid arrest.

A company has just begun at Ann Arbor, the manufacture of water-gas. It will not be a competitor of the newspapers there, as it is for illuminating purposes. Adrian Press. That's quite brilliant, too. Courier.

We call it very light talk.

Will the editor of the Sentinel be kind enough to tell just where that particular display of Canadian clothing is, at the world's fair, that is so remarkable? We can not find anyone who saw it. Ann Arbor Courier.

Don't you remember, Beal, the handsome Canadian girl in the palace of forty beauties down the Midway?

This story is now going the rounds of the papers: "A Ypsilanti hen happened to come in when the blacksmith was making horse shoe nails. In cutting off the red hot heads of the nails, one of them flew and struck the floor near where the hen was pecking. Thinking that it was a kernel of corn, she swallowed it, and immediately keeled over dead." It seems evident that the hen lived long enough to tell the blacksmith that she thought the piece of hot iron was a kernel of corn.

No experienced business man asks nowadays: "Does advertising pay?" He asks instead: "How can I make my advertising pay me best?"

An eminent physiologist computes that a man can think 180 thoughts in a minute, but does not intimate how many of them will probably be worth saving.

The conduct of people in a panic is very like that of the thriving French community which voted a hoghead of wine to the village priest, but when the wine was broached, only water was found in the cask, each person having relied upon the public spirit of his neighbor to furnish the unadulterated product of the vineyard.

The comparatively small number of college bred men in congress has already been noted. A further perusal of the congressional directory, where the careers of all the members are described, shows where Congressman Barthold of St. Louis, makes a note of the fact that he received a classical education from which he regrets that he has not yet fully recovered.

The story is told that Christine Neilson's bedroom in her palace at Madrid "is papered with sheets of music from the scores of the various operas that she has interpreted, whilst the walls of the dining room are covered with a collection of bills, the result of the diva's many professional travels in both hemispheres." Fatti's whole castle might be papered with newspaper announcements of her annual tours of farewell.

There seems to be a decided difference of opinion with regard to the working of a plan which provides that under certain circumstances a state prisoner convicted may be released on parole. This being so, why should not the experiment be tried? It is certain that many a prisoner who has been set free abroad on a "ticket-of-leave" has more than justified the confidence placed by the authorities in his purpose to lead an honest life.

BRIGANDS, footpads and highway-men will spring up in any land where an efficient police is absent. They swarmed over England a century and a century and a half ago, they were frequent in France a little earlier, and they were to be found over most of Europe in the last century. They are certain to appear in this country and become a widespread pest unless there is a radical change in the American habit of keeping the people's peace.

Our old land system has come to an end. We have no more farms to throw away. Whatever settlements we plant after this will be on the deserts, where ranches are not found, but are painfully created by the joint efforts of capital and labor. There the government may find an opportunity to retrieve its past mistakes, and by instituting and retaining in its own hands a vast system of irrigation, to regain some of the landed wealth it has squandered.

Mrs. LELAND STANFORD is personally supervising extensive changes in her husband's great ranch at Vina, Cal., held by her in trust for Stanford University, to increase the productivity and thereby enlarge the income of the university. The senator spent much money on the ranch and carried it on more like a park than a farm. Mrs. Stanford has gone to work resolutely to put it on a revenue basis, and relieve the university's temporary embarrassment for funds.

The wisest charity is the kind that discriminates. The folly of giving indiscriminately was fairly illustrated in Chicago recently, where a Bohemian woman, in the crowd of those who were seeking bread from the city, was robbed of $6,000 which she carried in her pocket. Another case was that of a Pole, who, by mistake, handed the city baker a check for $90 instead of one of the bread tickets distributed by the relief committee. There is too much method in this sort of starving.

It seems that as early as 413 B. C. a prisoner in Egypt astonished the natives by jumping safely from a high tower, impeding his downward progress and "landing" without too violent a jar by holding a blanket over his head. The parachute, as we know it now, is said to have been invented by an adventurous Frenchman who exhibited it in Paris in 1796, and early in this century an English aeronaut named Green pre-empted himself, with a parachute's restraining aid, from the ample ether to terra firma in Fairmount park, in Philadelphia, thus making the first recorded descent in America.

The young man who committed suicide and left instructions providing for the cremation of his body and bequeathed his ashes to three Chicago ballet girls would probably have obliged the young women infinitely more if he had simply left them his "dust."

There are more students—and would-be students at the women's colleges this year than ever before, but that is no reason why the movement for coeducation should languish.

ANTIPODEAN RELICS.

AUSTRALIAN WEAPONS IN ANTHROPOLOGICAL BUILDING.

An Interesting Part of the Great World's Exposition Which Is Now Getting Its Portion of Visitors—Casting the Boomerang.

(World's Fair Letter.)

HE DEPARTMENT of anthropology and ethnology is bewildering in its vastness and the infinite variety of its exhibits. Here one may study the crude beginning of human industry—the first implements roughly wrought in stone and flint and iron; cloth made from the fiber of plants—and a little later in the list of progress from wool and silk. There are the clumsy weapons preceding the invention of gunpowder by many ages, not so swift and sure, but still capable of inflicting wounds and death in the hands of a savage enemy.

The sciences of invention and decoration impress me strongly: the rude figures, the more satisfactory attempts at conventionalization—are strikingly alike, whether it be the Egyptian, the product of the Nile basin—which Draper terms the real cradle of civilization—or his brother the Estec on the opposite side of the globe. Of course, this similarity is apparent only to the untrained eye; the student sees a thousand differences, all of weight and import, establishing his theories by indisputable proofs.

There are the arrows and spears and war clubs of countless tribes of American Indians, of Asiatic and African, South Sea Islands and the people of the arctic zone. They mean not only defense and conquest, but food, strength and life.

Of all the varieties none exceed those of Australia and the neighboring islands in interest or workmanship. In the Australian exhibit the spears are arranged in a fan-shaped pattern upon the walls, and beneath them are grouped specimens of that unique weapon, the boomerang. With these implements of war there are a number of striking portraits, giving one a very comprehensive idea of the aborigines. Some of the spears are ten feet in length. They are made of the hard woods of that country, of which there are many varieties. The native's ideal of deadliness—and not without reason—was the teeth of a shark. The spears, in conformity to this idea, have flattened heads, along which have been arranged two rows of pointed spikes, as nearly resembling shark's teeth as possible.

The spikes are glued to the wood with a tenacious gum obtained from a tree called "black boy." The tree has a short rough trunk, with a cluster of fern-like leaves at the top, from the center of which springs a peculiar blossom spike. The gum of the "black boy" is used by the aborigines for many purposes, or was formerly, before the forests were so wantonly destroyed in clearing the land for sheep stations. The skill of the people in throwing these spears, a skill which the women acquired as well as the men, was almost phenomenal. And they used them indiscriminately, upon an impulse, without a moment's warning. Lady Broome, whose husband was governor of West Australia some years ago, relates two characteristic incidents.

"A ranchman who had been extremely kind to the natives was walking along a trail with several armed natives following him. One of them was a powerful fellow, an expert in throwing his spear, and he came immediately behind the Englishman. Suddenly he asked permission to walk in front, and when it was given and he was pressed for his reason he said: 'I am afraid I will kill you; I have such a desire to throw my spear at your back, but the ranchman kept an eye on him for the remainder of the journey."

On another occasion Lady Broome found a particularly amiable man among the prisoners upon the island opposite Perth, where convicts in that part of the continent are sent. He was especially efficient when his services were required by the sportsmen of the party, among whom his good nature made him a favorite. When she inquired into the nature of his offense, she found that he had killed a woman who was quarreling with his wife. "But I did not mean to do it," he said. "I only meant to wound her. I aimed at her leg, and the spear danced and struck her in the throat." An explanation that was received with some incredulity.

The boomerangs are thin pieces of wood—some of them worn and polished from long use. They are used both in hunting and in battle, and in the hands of an expert thrower can inflict dangerous and fatal injuries. They are slightly curved and about twenty-four inches in length. A boomerang or kylie thrower used to be one of the most interesting entertainments provided English and American tourists. Owing to its peculiar form, the boomerang when thrown strikes the object at which it is aimed, then circles and returns and falls at the feet of the thrower, or behind him. This is merely as it is ordinarily used. The artist can use it with a skill that surpasses that of the tyro as much as the crack shot of a rifle corps surpasses the feats of a militia marksman. Several exhibitions were given in honor of Lady Broome and the governor, which were described as something almost beyond belief. The boomerang was thrown into the air with such force that it disappeared for a few seconds, then reappeared, circling, descending, poising and rising and again descending until it dropped upon the ground in front of the "boy" who had thrown it.

The portraits of natives, which have been sent with the collection by the ethnological societies of Australia are most interesting. They give one an impression of the aborigines before they were vitiated and enfeebled by their contact with the white race, as seems always to occur. They were of immense height, six feet and a half being a common stature, and eight feet being not unusual. They were muscular—not fat—erect and physically powerful, but treacherous and cruel. Cannibalism was practiced, the belief existing, as among other savage races, that in eating the flesh of a valiant enemy his courage and endurance were transmitted to the eater.

Men were killed and eaten during a certain religious rite which was kept profoundly secret, and upon the eve of a battle where the forces were equally matched and the result a matter of doubt.

The favorite food of the natives, with the fruit of the baia-bunya tree and other fruits, was the iguana. Trollope describes it as "a lizard with a huge body and a very fat tail." He saw one shot which was five feet in length and weighed twenty pounds.

The white people, of course, do not eat them, but the natives declare that the flesh resembles that of chicken. As these portraits sufficiently prove, the aborigines have bushy, black hair, dark skin and eyes, and the thick noses and lips of the negroid races, peculiarities that are common to most of the natives of New Zealand, and of all the South Sea islands as well.

The presiding genius of the exhibit is the kangaroo—that chief of marsupials of a continent where even the mice are constructed upon the most ancient surviving plan of animal life.

TWO IRISH MISERS.

How They Both Overreached Themselves.

by Their Selfish Canning.

An old miser lived in Connaught and seemed to be an utterly forlorn creature, without "chick or child" belonging to him. It was rather fortunate for the miser that such a creature should have existed, for if it had not an existence it would surely have lacked the means to support it. This old miser was so mean that he denied himself bread, and only kept his miserable life in its tenement by gifts of food from charitable neighbors.

But he was known to have plenty of money hidden away in his wretched shanty, and the neighbors at last got tired of giving to one so unworthy. For some days no one went near the old man, and the cabin stood desolate. No one was seen to go in or out, and at last the constable determined to take the obstinate old creature to jail. The door was broken open, and the old miser was found dead. In his wretchedly starved condition, and frantic at the thought of leaving his loved money behind him, he had died trying to swallow some of his own banknotes. Pieces of them were clutched in his hands and pieces of them in his throat had choked what little breath remained in his body.

The other miser displayed an equal amount of cunning, yet was overreached as completely. This second old miser was blind, and lived with a half-witted son, near the seashore. Together they managed to do a little work, which supported them. But everybody knew the old man had a "bag of money" stowed away on which he could have lived if he wished.

What to do with this bag of money troubled the old man greatly. He was growing feeble, and felt he had not long to live. He resolved to take the bag out and drop it into the sea, where no one but the fishes would ever have a chance to benefit by it. But his son had sense enough to suspect what the old man was trying to do, and determined to outwit him.

The old man, with the money hidden under his coat, asked the son to row him out to sea. So they started, but the son took care to keep only in the shallow water by the shore.

"Are we far out now?" asked the old man.

"Oh yes, father," answered the boy. "Sure there's water far about us."

So the old blind miser, with a sly smile, dropped his bag of money overboard, and the son, reaching out his hand, had nothing to do but to lift it out of the shallow water, and carry it home under his own coat. And this old miser died peacefully in his bed, content that his artful scheme had been such a success!

AN HONEST INVENTOR.

His Discovery Was Likely to Stimulate Fraud, and He Destroyed It.

Dr. J. P. Barnum, the well-known chemist of Louisville, is in the city on a business trip. Dr. Barnum is the man who invented the celebrated ink-eraser which caused so much talk several years ago. In an interview he gave the following interesting facts:

"When I first got my ink eraser complete I thought my fortune was made but I soon discovered that it was so conducive to crime that I suppressed its sale and have always kept the secret to myself. I suppose it will die with me. This eraser could positively remove all traces of ink from any kind of paper. I remember the man who wrote a letter to the Courier-Journal, telling them that he did not believe the account which they had published of the eraser. Some of the men in the Courier-Journal office took some of my erasing fluid and wiped all the ink out of his letter, excepting the signature. A check for $100 was then written above the signature, and they went to the bank and got the money. In a short time after its introduction several criminals in Louisville as well as elsewhere, had been committed by the aid of the eraser, and where a well-known young man in Louisville perpetrated a fraud upon his firm by its use and went to California. I then determined never to allow any more of the fluid to be manufactured."

"I have, however, since done some work with it myself. At one time a number of securities of the Falls City bank of Louisville had been stolen, and the holders of bonds in the community got in the habit of writing their names across the face of their bonds, and also a statement that the bonds were not good unless indorsed. But when they wanted to dispose of these bonds they found that nobody would buy them with the writing across the face. They came to me with a rush and wanted me to remove the writing. I had at one time $100,000 worth of these bonds, with the agreement that if any traces of ink or the fluid were left I was to buy each bond so defaced at its face value, but I didn't have to buy any of them. The act of forgery itself is very easy to accomplish, but the perpetrator nearly always gets caught in the end. This so-called safety paper which is now being extensively manufactured is no protection. The ink lives on this safety paper, which fades away as soon as they are touched by any chemical, can be put back very easily. A stone for this purpose can be engraved for $10."

HANDY WITH THE GUN.

A Young Hoosier Marksman Who Recently Distinguished Himself.

A feature of the recent Columbian prize shooting tourney at West Pullman, Ill., was the performance of Master Clarence E. Long, the youngest sharpshooter in the world. He is 10 years old and weighs sixty-five pounds. He subsequently carried away one of the Columbian souvenir medals on the fourth and seventh shot, and in seven-five shots did not make a single miss or zero score.

The crowd was enthusiastic in admiration for his pluck and skill, and carried him off the field on their shoulders. In CLARENCE E. LONG, five shots at the main target at 200 yards he hit four times. Master Clarence, who is father is Conductor John E. Long of the Moon road, living at Lafayette, Ind., began to develop his talent with a rifle about a year ago, learning it from his father, who is a crack shot. At short-range gallery shooting he has no equal for his age.

He indulges in fancy shooting of all kinds, such as nipping small disks from his father's fingers, lighting paper matches and cutting cards held edgewise toward him. He even shoots the ashes from his father's cigar.

Parson Black's Favorite Hymn.

A story is told of a certain Parson Black who had a hymn of which he was especially fond, and which so accurately expressed his sentiments that he made use of it on all possible occasions. One of these was the funeral of his most prominent deacon, who, though active in the affairs of the church, had in the business world, a reputation for sharpness and closeness that was not wholly enviable. The services were drawing to a close, Parson Black rose slowly from his chair and, in a voice of sepulchral sadness, said:

"Friends: Before removing the remains of our dearly beloved brother from this house to the house appointed for all the living, let us join in singing the two hundred and seventy-fourth hymn—

"Believe, we rejoice to see the case removed."

A Ministerial Unruly Cat.

A Springfield young man, who offered to guard his pastor's house during the vacation absence of the family, was solemnly enjoined never to "loose up" until the cat was indoors. He agreed, and thought that it was easy. But a week's experience has convinced him that the ministerial family cat deserves no better reputation than ministers' sons unjustly bear, and he has resolved, in order to get the proper amount of sleep himself, to keep that particular cat in close confinement from this time forth.

It is reported that over 300,000 olive trees have already been planted in the vicinity of Pomona, Cal. Olive growing is increasing with great rapidity.

BALD HEADS!

What is the condition of yours? Is your hair dry, harsh, brittle? Does it split at the ends? Has it a lifeless appearance? Does it fall out when combed or brushed? Is it full of dandruff? Does your scalp itch? Is it dry or in a heated condition? If these are some of your symptoms be warned in time or you will become bald.

Skookum Root Hair Grower

Skookum Root Hair Grower is not a secret, but the result of scientific research. It does not contain any of the hair-splitting ingredients of "how to grow hair" preparations. "Skookum" contains neither minerals nor dyes. It is not a dye, but a scientifically cooling and refreshing tonic by stimulating the follicles of the scalp, forcing hair growth and promoting its health.

Keep the scalp clean, healthy, and free from irritating eruptions by the use of Skookum Root Hair Grower. It destroys parasitic insects, cures dandruff, and keeps the hair soft and healthy.

If you do not want to supply your own direct to us, and we will forward agents, on receipt of price. Grower, $1.00 per bottle; 6 for $5.00. Soap, 50c per jar; 6 for $2.50.

IMPERIL.

ABOUT ten years ago I came across, at Baltimore, a German lad, whose parents had died of fever on the voyage out. The lad pleased me, for he had an honest face, and seemed respectable. At first I employed him for light work—carrying out bills and so on; but as he possessed an unassuming temper and subduing eyes, I instructed him, and ere long he made the wolves spring through the hoop, so that it was a pleasure to see him.

George, that was his name, promised to grow into a most athletic man; at the same time he was true as steel, and did his teacher's honor in every respect, so that I felt a real friendship for him.

At this time I had an assistant, an Irishman, called Mike, a brutal fellow, whom I was obliged to reduce to the post of butcher of the menagerie, because he was given to drink, and in a drunken fit savagely put out the eye of a perfectly tame cheetah.

This fellow had a secret malice against George, because the latter, from this time, took his place with great applause as second performer. Had I known what an utter villain this Mike was, I would have dismissed him on the spot; but as it was, I could not well do without him, because he was well versed in the management of the animals, and an inexperienced man might have done them great injury.

At this period we had a Bengal tigeress of the name of Flora, whose training had cost me much time and trouble. Of course we are unable to use several methods, which we employ with males. Hence I did not like to see George enter her cage, for I really considered her the most dangerous beast in the whole menagerie.

He was ambitious, however, and earnestly implored me to let him have the entire training of her, probably, too, the brave young fellow would have met with no misfortune had not Mike thrust his infernal hand into the affair. Yes, this hand was blood-stained too, and I unhappily experienced this in my own case, when it was almost too late for me.

We were at Charleston, when George, at the close of the performance, entered the cage of the tigress to make her go through the leas taught her, while I was accidentally employed in a distant part of the menagerie.

I struck her with the life-preserver. All at once I heard a roar, which I recognized as Flora's but so different from the usual guttural tone that my hair stood on end, and I saw with horror that George was lying on the ground, and the tigress standing over him. She had thoroughly scalped him with one blow of her forepaw, and broken his neck.

All my men were shrieking and running about frantically, while Mike, at my shout, brought me a rifle. I pulled the trigger, but the gun missed fire; what was to be done? No one could help the young fellow, for it was evident that he was dead; but it was my duty to save his corpse from further laceration.

The brute, who was intimidated by my voice and glance, did not dare to continue her murderous work, but withdrew, gnashing her teeth, into the furthest corner of the cage, where she licked her bloody paw, and took greedy glances at the body.

When Mike brought up another gun, I ordered him to shoot the tigress. At the first movement she made, and then ran round the long row of vans to enter her cage from behind.

Unarmed as I was, I opened the gate and stepped in, and seized the still warm body of my friend, which I removed without further laceration. My first thought then was to kill Flora, but I soon altered my mind, and resolved, although the beast would now be doubly dangerous, to show her that I was her lord and master. I intended to treat her in such a way that she should forget insubordination forever and a day.

After burying my friend respectfully, I sailed with the menagerie to Havana, where the authorities granted me the use of an unoccupied circus, no great distance from the Jaco theatre.

Soon after my arrival the captain-general sent to tell me that he intended to be present at my first performance with the whole of his staff. As you know, the dons are fond of such sights, for they are the most eager friends of bull-fights.

As the other animals were perfectly trained, I resolved to take Flora in hand, and convert her cunning treachery into blind obedience.

It was in the evening, after feeding time, that I intended to give her the final lesson, so as to show her as a perfectly docile animal on the next day.

There was no one about the menagerie except Mike, who had given the beasts their ration of meat in the afternoon, as was his duty. I asked him if all was right, and whether the tigress had eaten heartily. The Irishman replied:

"I have never known Flora to have so good an appetite as to-day," which satisfied me, as I did not catch his equivocal meaning.

I stepped into the cage, and saw that she had a clean-scrapped bone between her forepaws; still there was something in her look and growling that struck me, and hence I took up my heavy whip, the handle of which is a life-preserver. I went in and had some difficulty in getting the beast out of the corner and on to her legs. By threats and blows I at length brought matters so far that she sprang through the hoop, but she constantly tried to get back to the corner, while giving me savage looks.

I forced her to repeat the leap a dozen times, after which I seized her by the ear, and made her stand on her hind legs in front of me, while I had her head right opposite me. I remarked that she was meditating some roguery. I felt that her eyes tried to rove away, and noticed that the pupils were contracted in an extraordinary way. At the same moment I remarked that there were blood-stains on my left sleeve, and the thought that Mike had purposely laid his bloody hand upon me shot across my brain. I had, however, no time to dwell on it, for I saw that the tigress had already drawn in her claws in readiness to strike. With lightning speed, and ere the beast could properly grasp me, I struck her with the life-preserver, such a blow between her false eyes that she fell and did not move again. Had she been granted more time she would certainly have amputated my arm, but as it was, I escaped with a frightful flesh wound, which was a long time in getting well.

Bleeding, I rushed out of the cage, in order to slake my revenge on Mike, but he, seeing that I had not fallen, a victim to the beast, which he had purposely neglected to feed, and had roused, to assail me by the sight of blood, drew a revolver, and before I could reach him lay dead by his own hand.

AWED BY THE JANITOR.
The King of Harlem Rules His Flats With an Iron Hand.

"The janitor has had to stand a lot of joking about his position, but he is the man who can laugh the heartiest, as he is a winner," said a dweller in an up-town flat to a New York Morning Journal man.

"Now, take our janitor," he continued, "he gets $100 a month, free rent and fuel. But that represents only a portion of his earnings. He is the king of the apartment house, and the butcher, the grocer, the coal man and all the other tradesmen take off their hats to him. He gets presents not only at Christmas, but all the year round. He demands a percentage on the repairs and does nothing for nothing."

"Even the tenants are careful to keep him in good humor, for he can make lots of trouble for them. He will not have a stingy man in the place, because he reasons that it takes so much from his income. If he finds a tenant is falling behind in his gratuities, he looks around for another tenant, and the first No. 1 knows he receives a polite note from the landlord informing him that his flat is needed."

"Yes, sir, the janitor is the jolliest man alive when all is going well—when the coal bins are full and the thrifty tenants' cellar closets are full of vegetables and preserves. Of course he has the keys to all these closets. He has been known even to heap coals upon his good tenants' bin from the bin of the tenant who had more coal but less generosity."

"This little failing, however, is regarded by the janitor as a white mark on his record, although he is too proud to speak of it in summing up his virtues and the duties of his position."

At this moment an elegantly dressed gentleman passed the flat dweller and the newspaper man, and the latter was surprised to see the former take of his hat, although the passer-by was not accompanied by a lady.

When the stranger had gone out of hearing the man who had been talking continued in a whisper:

"That's he!"
"Who is he?"
"The janitor. Sh-h-h, he is looking back at us? I wonder if he heard what I said to you? If he did I might as well move out in the morning."

"I should think you would move, anyway," replied the reporter, "if you are afraid of the man."

"What good would it do? I might get into a worse place. At some flats the janitor doesn't speak to all the tenants. If my janitor didn't speak to me I should fear the worst. Excuse me, he seems to be beckoning to me."

And the slave ran off to see what his master wanted.

Decline of Profanity.
The habit of swearing is dying out. It was, within the memory of those who do not like to think themselves old, very common. I have heard, on what I am sure is trustworthy authority, of a clergyman of the last generation, who, summoned to breakfast while at his morning devotions, turned upon the unfortunate messenger with the exclamation: "You! How dare you interrupt my prayers!"

Much less extreme instances are known to many of us which would now be simply impossible. Are we becoming more pious? That is not the general impression. Is the fiber of the race softening? That is often maintained, but I do not think successfully. The civil war is there to disprove it for Americans, at least. Or are we, as French men and women did long ago, learning more adequately to master the resources of our own tongue, and becoming independent of this crude and rather stupid—to call it nothing worse—device?

Sheer Vanity.
"How did Fred come to get so horribly round-shouldered?"
"He isn't. He humps himself that way because he likes to look like an athletic bicyclist."

A Matter of Health.
Housekeepers faintly realize the danger of an indiscriminate use of the numerous baking powders nowadays found upon every hand, and which are urged upon consumers with such persistence by peddlers and many grocers on account of the big profits made in their sale. Most of these powders are made from sharp and caustic acids and alkalis which burn and inflame the alimentary organs and cause indigestion, heartburn, diarrhoeal diseases, etc. Sulphuric acid, caustic potash, burnt alum, all are used as gas-producing agents in such baking powders. Most housekeepers are aware of the painful effects produced when these chemicals are applied to the external flesh. How much more acute must be their action upon the delicate internal membranes! Yet unscrupulous manufacturers do not hesitate to use them, because they make a very low-cost powder, not to urge the use of their powders so made, by all kinds of alluring advertisements and false representations. All the low-priced or so-called cheap baking powders, and all powders sold with a gift or prize, belong to this class.

Baking powders made from chemically pure cream of tartar and bicarbonate of soda are among the most useful of modern culinary devices. They not only make the preparation of food more delicious, but they are digestible, but they have added to the digestibility and wholesomeness of our food. But baking powders must be composed of such pure and wholesome ingredients or they must be tabooed entirely.

Dr. Edison, Commissioner of Health of New York, in an article in the "Doctor of Hygiene," indicates that the advantages of a good baking powder and the exemption from the dangers of bad ones in which the harsh and caustic chemicals are used, are to be secured by the use of Royal Baking Powder exclusively, and he recommends this to all consumers. "The Royal," he says, "contains nothing but cream of tartar and soda refined to a chemical purity, which when combined under the influence of heat and moisture produce pure carbonic acid gas. The two materials used, cream of tartar and soda, are perfectly harmless even when eaten, but in this preparation they are combined in exact compensating weights, so that when chemical action begins between them in the dough they practically disappear, the substance of both having been taken to form carbonic acid gas." Hence it is, he says, that the Royal Baking Powder is the most perfect of all conceivable agents for leavening purposes.

It seems almost incredible that any manufacturer or dealer should urge the sale of baking powders containing injurious chemicals in place of those of a well-known, pure and wholesome character simply for the sake of a few cents a pound greater profit; but since they do, a few words of warning seem to be necessary.

Frederick Douglass has in view the founding of a colony of colored people on the James river in Virginia. The central point of the colony is to be a city. Mr. Douglass believes that this idea will take with the people of his race, that thousands of them will cast their lots with this colony for the purpose of showing what colored men and women can do for themselves.

Though Victor Hugo has been dead eight years every succeeding publishing season has seen the production of a fresh volume of poems by the master, so that the matter has now become a joke in literary circles in Paris. The explanation given of this remarkable post-mortem fecundity is that Hugo stored away in a cupboard many of the almost innumerable poems he used to improvise while out walking in Guernsey, and his heirs, discovering this treasure-trove, have drawn on it in a way to yield good financial returns.

Old Dr. Sanders, who died in New York some time ago, was known to the school children as the author of various "readers." Because of their financial success it is interesting to recall the fact that when he offered the manuscript of the first volume of the series to Messrs. Harper he asked for it the modest remuneration of $5. The offer was rejected, and the diffident author returned to school teaching; but eventually the Harpers reconsidered their decision, and the book turned out to be one of their most profitable publications.

Like No Other Love.

By Charlotte M. Bracemore.

When the water was nearly drained away, the workmen had found her lying among the reeds, and with reverent hands had laid her on the bank—a woman beautiful and young.

Although Sir Carlos thought he was running faster than ever man ran before, his steps were faltering; and now his mother was by his side.

"Carlos, Carlos," she cried in unutterable anguish, "what is wrong?"

"A woman drowned!" seemed to rise from a hundred throats; and then Mr. Gygerson, the surveyor, stood before them.

Sir Carlos could neither run nor walk now; he stood quite still, his face ghastly pale.

"This is a sad thing, Sir Carlos," said Mr. Gygerson.

"What is it?" asked Lady Carew, her face quivering with pain. "What are the men whispering and the women crying for?"

"A sad thing, my lady—a terrible thing," replied the surveyor. "A woman has been found drowned in the mere."

"Drowned in the mere!" she repeated, again.

Her eyes sought those of Sir Carlos. What did she expect to find there? Mother and son looked at each other, but did not speak.

"A young and beautiful woman," continued the surveyor, pleased at the awful impression he was making. "Young and beautiful!" repeated Lady Carew; and again her eyes, with a look of horror in them, sought those of her son.

"She must have been there eight or ten days at least," Mr. Gygerson went on. "We found her among the reeds. They have laid her on the bank and covered her face."

"Poor creature!" murmured Lady Carew, her eyes filling with tears; and she turned to the nearest path to the mere.

Sir Carlos clutched the surveyor's arm, and said in a husky voice:

"Do not let her see; she is so delicate, she—the shock will kill her!"

Mr. Gygerson ran after Lady Carew, and begged her to turn back.

"Do not go near my lady," he said; "it is not a fit sight for you."

Sir Carlos walked unsteadily toward the fatal mere. The water was now so low that the thick, dark ooze at the bottom was visible. He could see the small crowd gathered round something on the bank, and involuntarily he drew nearer and nearer. They were bending over the silent dripping figure, and a new horror seized him.

He saw one of the men-servants who had just been speaking to his valet, who formed one of the crowd. He went up to the man and clutched his arm.

"I will give you a thousand pounds," he said, in a hoarse voice, "if you will go to that dead woman and take from her what she holds in her hand."

The man looked up at him, scared and bewildered.

"A thousand pounds!" he repeated. "Yes, immediately," gasped Sir Carlos. "If you will go and get for me what she holds in her hand!"

"I will try. What is it?"

"A cuff—a torn white linen cuff with a diamond solitaire" was the reply. "I will give you a thousand pounds for them."

"And I swear," cried a harsh voice on the other side of the servant, "if you touch that dead woman, or take from her the evidence which tells the story of her death, you shall answer first to the law and then to me."

Sir Carlos stood face to face with Hiram West, his valet, the man who had watched so long and now had captured his prey. They had reached the crowd, and the people made way for Sir Carlos, Hiram West and Lady Carew.

What was it that was lying there on the grass, so stiff and stark, the face covered, the black hair dripping, one hand clutching something in a death grip. Sir Carlos reeled and fell to the ground like one dead.

droes. Here is my key. I gave it to you days ago, when the old home was full of visitors, my mother's guests. I handed it to you, fastened diamond solitaires in the linen cuffs. Later on in the night he rang the bell of his dressing room and I answered it. I found him there, trembling in every limb. He asked me for brandy and I gave it to him. Then I saw that his coat had a rent in it, and that the white linen cuff, cut from a torn cuff, was fastened to the shirt-sleeve—had been torn right across, and was gone with the solitaire. He told me that he had been for a stroll in the park that he had met a poacher and had had a struggle with him. But he would not listen when I offered to go and find the solitaire."

Hiram West unrolled the shapeless bundle and held up, so that everyone could see it, a black cuff with a rent in it. Then he held up a white sleeve from which a cuff had been torn.

"That is my evidence," he said. "Superintendent Chapman," he added, "force open the dead woman's hand and take from it what you find there."

The superintendent knelt down in the grass by the dead woman's side, and amidst the breathless suspense of the bystanders opened the cold hand and drew from it a torn cuff fastened with a diamond solitaire. Hiram West took it from him.

"You shall see," he said, how thread fits thread."

He put the cuff in its place. It fitted exactly. A groan rose from the crowd.

"Every one who knows Sir Carlos Carew will recognize the solitaire found in the dead woman's hand; and if there should be any doubt it, look at the initials on the gold at the back—'C. C.' The same letters are on each diamond of the set."

No one spoke; but all eyes were turned upon the tall, pale-faced man who held the drooping figure of a woman in his arms.

Now, when the necessity arose for it, the spirit of the Carews came back to Carlos. He raised his head proudly, and the color rushed back to his face.

"Have you any more to say?" he asked Hiram West; and his tone was so full of contempt that many who had pronounced him guilty in their hearts wavered.

"I say this—give Sir Carlos Carew in charge for willful murder," was the reply. "I see a wedding ring on the poor girl's finger. Heaven only knows whether she was a wife or whose wife she was. Never mind; I have sworn to avenge her. Superintendent, will you replace in her hand what you took from it, and there let it remain until the jury has seen it? And now remove the body—that murderer! I will appear against him. I will bring him to his death as surely as he brought about hers."

Two policemen went up to Sir Carlos and stood one on either side. Then the little crowd swayed and opened, and a beautiful girl passed through it looking neither to the right nor to the left, and laid her hand on Sir Carlos's arm.

"It is false, Carlos," she said passionately. "You have loved me and I love you. Nothing will ever make me believe that you are guilty. I am proud to proclaim my love for you, and my firm belief in your innocence." And the two fair women clung to him lovingly.

"I must do my duty, Sir Carlos," said the superintendent. "I must take you in charge."

"I am quite willing to go with you," replied the baronet. "You need no force. But let me speak to my mother for a few moments before I go."

"I do not know whether I can let you do that," said the superintendent doubtfully.

"I shall not keep you long. You can stand at the door of the room. Do not think I have any fanciful notions of making my escape. I pledge you my word as a gentleman to go with you wherever you wish me to go; but let me see her for five minutes first."

After a few moments' hesitation the superintendent gave his consent. Men were raising the stiff silent figure reverently; it was to be carried to Lynn Mavis to await the coroner's inquest. The crowd were slowly dispersing but groups of weeping women and horror-stricken men still stood about. The baronet had gone back to the house in unutterable dismay, but Lady Gladys kept near to Sir Carlos. The sighs and tears became loud bitter sobs and cries as the mournful procession, consisting of the master of Firtholme with his three stern guardians, his mother and the girl who loved him passed within the portals of the house.

Chances of Life and Death.
The following table is one that is used by the London assurance companies, showing the prospect of life at various ages. It is the result of several years of careful calculation, and is said to seldom prove misleading or incorrect. Of course sudden and premature deaths as well as lives unusually extended, occasionally occur, but this is a table of average expectancy of life of the ordinary man or woman: A person 1 year old may expect to live thirty-nine years longer; of 10 years fifty-one; of 20, forty-one; of 30 years, thirty-four longer; of 40 years, twenty-eight; of 50, twenty-one; of 60 years, fourteen more; of 70 years, nine; of 80 years, four.

Amendment to Ordinance No. 31.

Sec. 20 of ordinance No. 31 of ordinances of the village of Northville was amended by inserting after the word limited: "That is to say for sprinkling lawns, yards and gardens the water may be used only between the hours of five and nine in the morning and five and nine in the afternoon, and its use for these purposes at other times of the night for day is prohibited," and between the word
"when" occurring in the sixth line so that the section shall read as follows:

Sec. 20. The use of the hand hose is permitted at all hours in the day for any of the purposes named in the permit to wit:
Sprinkling streets, yards and gardens, washing side walks, steps, windows and fronts except as herein limited. That is to say, for sprinkling lawns, yards and gardens, the water may be used only between the hours of five and nine in the morning and five and nine in the afternoon and its use for these ar-other times of the night or day is prohibited.
When there is an alarm of fire the use of the hand hose is prohibited for any of the purposes mentioned in this section. The water shall be turned off from premises where the provisions of this section have been or are being violated, and the same shall not be turned on again until the sum of one dollar has been paid to the Water Board to be placed to the credit of the water works fund.

PROCLAMATION!

To the People of Northville and Vicinity.

We are pleased to announce that on Saturday, Oct. 7th

We shall be prepared to show a finer line of

Clothing and Gents' Furnishing Goods

Than has ever been displayed in Northville. It shall be our earnest endeavor to furnish the trade the very best goods possible for just as small a margin as is consistent with sound business principles.

OUR LINES ARE COMPLETE!

And we are anxious to do business.

Although of rather limited experience we have confidence in the assurance that by honest and upright dealing we may gain a share of your patronage. In selecting our stock we remembered all. We have

Bargains for the Child, Young Man, Middle Aged and the Old.

Having purchased our goods for cash, and the fact of our selling for cash enables us to make prices as low as the lowest--"quality considered". We most cordially invite each and every person in Northville and the surrounding country to Call and Examine Our Stock!

And become acquainted at the neatest and best equipped clothing and Gents' Furnishing establishment in Northville.

Hoping to meet all our old friends and many new ones

OFFICE IN OPERA HOUSE BLOCK.

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 6, 1893.

NORTHVILLE LOCALS.

Wm. Gardner will open up a laundry in this village October 23.

Robinson's new furniture store make their announcement in this issue.

The first quarter's water works revenue will amount to about $160.

Hereafter the post office will close evenings promptly at eight o'clock.

Abe Huff takes Rob. Waterman's place as head grocery clerk in C. R. Smith's store.

Jas. Charlesworth & Co. are doing the interior decorating in L. W. Simmons' new residence.

We have a few more copies of last week's RECORD if our friends desire more to send abroad.

The Geo. Newman property just south of the hotel has been sold to Shafer & Butler for $600.

The Lady Macabees are all requested to be present at the next regular meeting Tuesday, Oct. 10.

The conference year opened auspiciously at the Methodist church with a full house last Sabbath morning.

A young lady who would like to learn type setting can find such an opportunity at this office. No wages while learning.

S. E. Cranston will engage in the harness business with his father-in-law, V. O. Whipple, soon as the new store is in shape for their occupancy.

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Wm. Shafer and Miss Cora Ingalls for October 10 and Wm. Green of Hillsdale to Miss Lottie Lake October 11.

If we were to go "cooning" peaches it would be up in Charley Blair's orchard. We base our calculation on the size and taste of the sample sack left at our office.

Milo W. Reed of Denver, sends us $1 towards the clock tower fund. Milo says nothing but the illness of Fred keeps them from returning to their old home, Northville.

Dan Shafer, our jolly village carpenter, informs us that some houses have wings and he has often seen a house fly. We thought no part of a house save a chimney flue.

If the lady who took the oxidized handled silk umbrella from the opera house just as the play was over Friday night will return same to RECORD office she will save further trouble.

"They're watching us" said thirty-six E. & P. M. engineers and three dozen firemen as they were laid off a week ago for not complying with the have your-time-piece-inspected rule.

Robert Waterman who has been Teichner & Co's and C. R. Smith's efficient grocery clerk for some time past, will enter the employ of M. N. Johnson & Co. in their new clothing store.

Mrs. S. M. Reed, cor. sec'y of the local W. C. T. U., requests all those who can and will entertain delegates to the district convention to be held here Oct. 25, 26 and 27 to send or leave their names at A. W. Reed's store.

The Times had lots of good things to say about the Milford fair last week but of a word as to the date. The RECORD has repeatedly been asked the question as to the dates but so far we have not noticed its mention. We understand however that it is booked for next week.

We are told of a young woman who waved her handkerchief at a young man and in three days married him. As a natural sequence it is also stated that three days later she waved a flat iron at her husband's head and at the end of another three days he waved the first papers in a divorce proceeding at her.

Subscribers, except Globe employees, to the clock tower fund who have not already paid will please remember that the subscriptions are due and payable at the Savings bank on or before Oct. 10. The amounts are all small and should be paid promptly. Bear in mind the time is up next Tuesday.

The Men's Meeting last Sunday afternoon was one of the largest ever held since the organization of the association. The speaker was James McGee of Detroit who gave one of the best addresses the association has yet listened to. Mr. McGee is a young man of more than ordinary ability and we bespeak for him a bright future. Here's hoping he may come again.

Judging from a card just received Bro. Belding must be having a great big time down at the fair. We even think he had just returned from the Midway when he wrote it:

"Your case of 1111 without? would come in splendid play at this of the game. The White City is vastness complete and completeness vast. Am daily meeting with friends from all parts of the world. Weary, foot sore and eyes crying for rest, (also pocket book.)"

To the G. A. R. boys who rather expected to see a mention of their surprise party on Comrade Lunt, in last week's RECORD, we wish to say that the item was apparently purposely kept from us and not until we had seen it in neighboring papers was we aware of the event.

A local newspaper is often accused of bias in giving personal notices of mentioning the coming and going of some and omitting others. The fault is with the people and not the editor. He is willing and even anxious to tell who goes and who comes if he can find out. Therefore if you know anything—go away or have company—kindly whisper the facts in our ear or drop us a line.

We are in receipt of a very beautifully bound poem of striking uniqueness and originality entitled, "St. Peter at the Gate." The production is from the pen of J. B. Smiley publisher of the Galesburg Enterprise. Smiley is a second Carleton and we predict will yet one day become as famous as he. The above poem handsomely bound costs 50 cents post-paid. Here's a smile to Smiley's future success.

The first quarterly meeting will occur at the Methodist church next Sabbath. Sacramental service at 10:30 a. m.; love-feast at 6:00 p. m. These are rare occasions and all are cordially invited. At 7:00 p. m. Rev. C. T. Allen, D. D., the newly appointed presiding elder of Detroit district, will preach and it is safe to predict a full house. Both services are a half hour earlier than usual. A social reunion is under advisement for Monday evening.

The "Real Irish Neighbors" play at the opera house here last week was first-class in every way. The band was fine; the orchestra good and the players handled their parts in a way that was extremely pleasing to the crowded house. Manager Davis is a pleasant gentleman to meet and do business with and he has a company to be proud of both on and off the stage. A return engagement is promised if the company come this way again.

One of the village aldermen, judging by his talk at least, seems to have an idea that his duty is to oppose everything that the RECORD advocates. No matter whether it be water works, cleaning the mill pond, free express delivery, a fire alarm or a drinking fountain. It should be understood that the RECORD advocates only those improvements which are to the best interests of Northville and which are in every case approved by the best people of the village.

The Fair! The Fair!! The Fair!!! The Fair!!!! The Fair!!!!! Will be Rev. J. M. Belding's topic Sunday in the Presbyterian church. The two topics of interest will be morning: "The White City, the fair from within;" evening, topic "The Black City," the fair from the outside. These two sermons will be of deep interest and every young man in Northville should hear them. Those who have been to the fair and those who would like to go will profit by the two discourses.

The funeral of Miss Newman as announced in last week's issue occurred last week Friday afternoon from the home of the deceased's grandfather, Dexter White. Rev. P. Ross Parrish officiated at the services and paid a most worthy tribute to the many endearing qualities of the silent sleeper. The flowers, consisting of some nineteen set pieces, which in their profusion nearly covered the casket and filled the room, were the most beautiful ever seen here on a similar occasion and were in keeping with the high esteem in which Miss Newman was held both in this village, in Philadelphia and Detroit. The interment was in Rural Hill.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable report of the street committee at the at the council meeting Monday night, relative to a public drinking fountain, wiser council prevailed and after a few well chosen and decidedly pointed remarks by Councilmen Wheeler, Swift and Clark, the water board were instructed to procure and erect a fountain on the east side of Center street near Main. A pretty drinking fountain from which flows a stream of pure cool spring water set conveniently along our busy streets will be an ornament to the village, a public benefit and an inviting piece of hospitality to our visitors. The action of the council will receive the approbation of every taxpayer, (with a possible exception or two) and resident of the village. Northville has the best water works system in the world and the public fountain will be an invitation to "if you don't believe try it."

A load of Northville people attended the Wayne county Baptist young people's convention at Plymouth Wednesday night.

M. N. Johnson & Co. invite every body to their opening Saturday, Oct. 7. Their proclamation will readily be found in another column.

There will be a "bee" to build the kitchen and wood shed on the W. C. T. U. hall, tomorrow. Everybody is invited to help. Come early and stay late.

Anyone who fails to read every advertisement in this week's issue loses money. There are enough bargains offered to supply everything a man can possibly want from the cradle to the grave.

We clip the following from the Little Rock, (Ark.) Commonwealth of which William A. Morton Jr. is the editor:

"From Detroit the editor's family journeyed up the F. & P. M. road to Northville, a handsome little village of 2,000 inhabitants, which has the best waterworks for the money invested of any city in the union. Springs furnish the water which is brought in pipes to a reservoir which overlooks the village. No artificial power is employed to place the water in the reservoir. Northville has several extensive industries, the principle ones of which are the school desk and church seating manufactures and foundries. It has also a government fishery and a milk condensing factory. While there the editor's family were entertained pleasantly by E. S. Woodman and wife. Mr. Woodman is a prominent lawyer and distant kinsman to the writer. He was several years a member of the State democratic committee. Now he is a pronounced prohibitionist. He was a member of the State constitutional convention."

28 MINERS DROWNED.

MANSFIELD MINE AT CRYSTAL FALLS CAVES IN.

The mine was under the Michigan River which flooded the mine in a short time—Of 46 miners 18 escape with their lives.

Special from Marquette: Reports from Crystal Falls state that a cave-in at the Mansfield mine, seven miles east of that village, resulted in the entombment and death of 28 miners. The main shaft of the mine extends under the Michigan river, and the subsiding of ground turned the stream into the mine, flooding it almost instantly. Forty-six men were in the mine, but 18 escaped.

J. M. Longyear, of this city, is the principal fee owner of the Mansfield iron mine. The mine was the only active one in the Crystal Falls district. It produced a high grade Bessemer ore and its producing capacity about 60,000 tons per annum. The mine gave employment to about 100 men.

The mine inspector of Iron county is making a rigid investigation to ascertain the cause of the disaster at the Mansfield mine. The vein of ore is only 16 feet wide, and the nature of the ground is such that experts say it is easy to get adequate support to the hanging wall of the mine. Some believe the operators were "robbing" the line; that is, taking out pillars of ore, usually left to support a hanging wall.

Later dispatches: The number of victims of the Mansfield accident is given as 28. The swift running waters of the Michigan must have carried them in an instant of time. The Michigan is a small river that curves around toward the south in the shape of a horseshoe. The mine is located very near the stream, so near, in fact, that one of the shafts of the mine extends far under its waters. A well-gauged way, and the water came pouring into the mine, entrapping the men like a lot of rats.

The mine has always been considered a dangerous one for men to work in, and the disaster has often been predicted, but the predictions gained little credence. Most of the men lost are Cornishmen. It is safe to say that nine-tenths of the victims are men with large families, which lends additional horror to what is the worst disaster in the history of upper peninsula mining.

Mansfield is an isolated station on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad.

THE REVOLVER FAILED.

Robbers Nearly Met Their Death While Holding up a St. Joseph Lady.

Mrs. W. H. Wells, living three miles south of St. Joseph, was held up in her own house and robbed of nearly $2,000 worth of diamonds and other jewelry by two masked men. Mrs. Wells and the hired girl were alone when the men entered. They leveled their revolvers at the women and commanded Mrs. Wells to take off her diamond earrings and get her diamond ring. She took off the jewels from her ears and produced the earring containing the ring, in which were also several other rings. While the men were going through the earring Mrs. Wells secured her revolver, and placing it against the back of one of the robbers, she pulled the trigger, but the gun did not fire. This enraged the robber and he placed revolver to her head, declaring that he would kill her. At this instant the girl escaped from the house, and, fearing she would give an alarm, the men left.

Senator Stockbridge Injured.

Senator Stockbridge, of Michigan, while crossing the street in the business part of Chicago got in the way of a cable train. He was knocked down and before he could get out of the way was very painfully cut and bruised. It is not thought, however, that his injuries will be serious. The car was not traveling rapidly at the time of the accident, else it would probably have proved fatal.

A later report says that the senator attempted to board a north-bound grip on Wabash avenue at Peck Court. He was on the wrong side and was struck by a south-bound car and dragged a distance of twenty feet over the rails and rough stones. When picked up Mr. Stockbridge was unconscious and bleeding profusely from a wound on the back of his head. His injuries are serious, but will not prove fatal.

Important Health Regulations.

The state board of health has added consumption to the list of dangerous communicable diseases required by law to be reported by physicians and health officers. The quarantine regulations were amended so as to make an immigrant criminally liable for coming into the state until authorized to do so by a state inspector. It was also resolved to continue to enforce the state quarantine regulations at the border and within the state, and compel all railroad companies to obey the state laws and regulations of the board.

Kalamazoo Man's Exhibit Stolen.

A. W. Todd, of Kalamazoo, received word that his exhibit of essential oil at the World's Fair had been "fired," the cases being smashed. The private desk of Hon. J. J. Woodman, who was in charge of the exhibit, was also broken into and the packages of samples which Mr. Todd had left for the international jury of awards were stolen. Detectives believe it was the work of persons employed by competitors, as none of the other exhibits were disturbed.

CROP REPORT.

The condition of Michigan's Agriculture—Fall Work Progressing.

The state agricultural bureau issues the following crop report: Northern section—The weather has been dry and cold with frosty nights. Farmers have been mostly busy with fall work. Considerable seeding has been done. Frosts damaged tender vines and plants, and in some counties damaged potatoes. Pastures are improving steadily. A fair crop of potatoes.

Central section—The ground in many localities has been too hard to plow, and as a result but little seeding of fall wheat has been done. Potatoes, corn and buckwheat are reported: A light yield, while celery and fruits were largely in excess of an average crop. The pastures have improved in some places. A few nights did some damage to late potatoes, tomatoes and garden truck.

Southern section—Most of the fall work is backward in the eastern counties, and the indications are that the area sown to wheat will be small, as compared with other years. In the western counties the conditions have been somewhat more favorable. Most of the fall plowing and seeding has been done. Corn and potatoes are light crops.

Summary—Reports indicate that potatoes, corn, buckwheat and beans will be short. The area sown to wheat is small on account of the drought and hardness of the ground. All kinds of fruits, except apples, have had a good season, and the yield is largely in excess of an average crop.

Cable from Madrid: A desperate battle took place between the Moors and the Spanish garrison at Melilla, a town on the northern coast of Morocco. The government had ordered new fortifications built at Qurath, near Melilla, and 300 troops were guarding the workmen. This incensed the Moors, and a body of 6,000 natives (religious fanatics) attacked the troops. The battle lasted from dawn until night, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the troops managed to keep the town completely safe, with them the laborers they were commissioned to guard. The Moors were armed with Winchester repeating rifles, and during the battle 18 of the Spaniards were killed and 35 wounded, including three officers.

The Cruiser Detroit Tested.

The report of the board on the 45-hour trial of the little cruiser Detroit has been submitted at the navy department and is found to contain some important recommendations. Her previous acquired reputation as to speed was maintained during the trial, but it was found that even her present rather limited capacity as a high speed vessel to be reduced. The board found that she is not a big enough boat for her armament, and the way she pitched into the seas caused them to recommend that the size of the guns aboard the boat be reduced from 6-inch and 5-inch to 5-inch and 4-inch. Action on the board's report will be postponed until the Detroit with her present armament has been ordered to sail for Brazil.

OVER 200 KILLED.

TERRIBLE RESULTS OF A STORM IN THE SOUTH.

New Orleans and vicinity the scene of Awful Devastation—Mobile, Ala., Also Visited and Immense Damage Done to Property and Life.

New Orleans: A cyclone passed over this city and the surrounding country doing many hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of damage and as far as reported killed no less than 24 people in the immediate vicinity. In the city but two are known to have been killed: Ulrich Bauer, a policeman, killed by a falling building. Pilot Rhodes, of Canal street ferry, dropped dead at the wheel of his launch. The latter was wounded; R. Baudier, an iron worker while blinded by rain; Betz, probably fatally injured by electric wire, which killed two horses.

The crash of sheds and buildings blown down, trees torn up and houses unroofed, caused intense alarm and most of the population of the city stayed up all night, expecting their houses to be blown down.

In Plaquemine parish the wind reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour. The loss to the orange industry and other crops will be simply terrific. Later reports from neighboring settlements only confirm the worst fears. The most serious news is from Bayou Cook, midway between Barataria Bay and the mouth of the Mississippi. There a colony of oyster fishermen, numbering a hundred and twenty, reported to be completely annihilated, with nearly the entire population killed or drowned. The following is a summary of the number of lives lost so far as known: Below Barataria Bay, 150; at Pointe a la Hache, 7; Empire Mill, 3; Hingles; 2; Daisy postoffice, 5; Point Pleasant; 2; Fort St. Phillip, 4; Gaspar Smith; 1; Nicholls postoffice, 1; Grand Bay and Bayou St. James; 1; Paganola; 1; Grand Prairie, 4. Total, 200.

Mobile, Ala.: A storm of the character of a cyclone swept in from the Gulf carrying huge waves up into the city streets as far as four blocks from the river and 15 feet above the main water height. Street car traffic was forced to suspend and the electric houses were blown down. All the wholesale and a great portion of the retail district of the city was some four feet under water and many thousands of dollars worth of goods were damaged. The business thoroughfares of the city are navigable in boats and parties waded up to their armpits in an effort to save goods.

The pilot boat Ida Low was driven on the wharf by the heavy boat Hennes was driven on the Mobile & Ohio wharf and almost totally wrecked. The Crescent City, another bay boat, left Point Clear for the city and had not since been heard from. Three dredges working on the channel have been lost. It is reported that some 50 miles of the L. & N. track along the coast are under water and that the Bilboa bridge has been swept away by the waves. Several other bridges, the lighthouse and three men were thrown into the angry waves. The crew of the tug Captain Sam saved two of the men, the other being lost. An unknown man lost his footing while wading from the Union depot and was drowned.

In the gardeners' district across the river 22 families. Only one of the homes can be seen standing and 33 go now has as yet been received. It is considered that many lives have been lost. The home of Stephen Walter was swept away with his wife and his niece.

A rowboat trip of the marshes made by a reporter reveals a state of desolation and death that will almost equal that of a month ago at Savannah and the Sea Islands. At every point touched by the waves complete desolation was observed. The native report only death and destruction. For miles inland the trees are laid low and much loss of life is reported all along the shore. The rumors over there would place the loss of life at 50, but possibly more than that has been perished. The Bay Blakely, in the marshes, whose families have been swept away, and the actual loss of life will probably never be known. The reporter who made the trip rescued several children and tied up two unknown bodies, one of a girl aged 17, the other of a man aged about 35.

A YOUNG PREACHER SUICIDES.

The Pastor of the Station Baptist Church Sends a Bullet Through His Heart.

Rev. J. B. Rowell, pastor of the Baptist church at Stanton, shot himself in the left breast just below the heart, with a family revolver, when he boarded was absent at the time the fatal act was committed. Mrs. Smith, the landlady, returning a half hour after the shooting was startled by hearing groans which came from Mr. Rowell's room. On entering she found him lying unconscious on the floor in front of his bed. Physicians were summoned, but there are no hopes for his recovery. Mr. Rowell was only 24 years of age and of pleasant address. He has served the Baptist church with great acceptability for the past year and a half.

The act was evidently premeditated as he had removed his coat, opened his vest and placed the revolver, a 22-caliber, over the heart. No reason for the act is known. A note was found in his coat pocket which reads: "God bless mother and all, and Beulah and save me. J. B. R."

CONGRESSIONAL NEWS.

SENATE—Forty-sixth day.—The repeal bill was discussed by Senator Foster, Populist, and the day was very successful. The House was in contrast with the bitter threats and heated arguments of the previous day. House. There was a heavy vote in the House as an outgrowth of the filibustering of Mr. Morse the previous day. He said that Mr. Elihan, of Illinois, was responsible for the refusal of the House to allow the publication in the Congressional Record of the editorials Mr. Morse desired. Mr. Elihan said that as Mr. Morse had seen fit to criticize him he would call the attention of the House to a rather dubious proposition made by Mr. Morse when he (Elihan) objected to the leave to print Mr. Morse came to him saying that he was a member of the committee on public buildings and intimated that if he (Elihan) had a public building bill he (Morse) might be able to render aid if Mr. Elihan would withdraw his objection. "That is absolutely false," shouted Mr. Morse as he advanced. Mr. Elihan and the latter called upon his colleague, Mr. Goldsboro, who heard the conversation for profit. Mr. Elihan said that as Mr. Morse had seen fit to withdraw his statement, "I will willingly deny myself." In a minute the House was in an uproar. The speaker called the attention of the House to the bloodshed by pounding his desk vigorously with the gavel and declaring both gentlemen out of order. Gen. John C. Black, of Illinois, then made his maiden speech in the House in advocacy of the Tucker electioneering bill. He was followed by Mr. Johnson, Rep. Ind., the freedman from Indiana, who made a speech in support of the bill. Mr. Johnson followed in opposition to the bill. Mr. Breckinridge of Kentucky, supported the bill speaking on its constitutional phases.

SENATE—Forty-seventh day.—Mr. Cameron, Rep. Pa., presented a memorial signed by 35,000 manufacturers of Philadelphia, requesting $5,000,000 capital, employing 100,000 men, with a yearly product of $50,000,000. In favor of establishing a great manufacturing character of the tariff and the industry of silver as a money metal. The petition favors the admission of a tariff bill to the Congress upon the payment by the owner of a postage stamp absorbing the cost of the bill. The bill was introduced by Mr. Harris, of Tenn., and addressed to the Senate. It would practically eliminate silver. He favored the coinage of the American product of silver. Mr. Morgan, of Ala., also spoke in opposition to the bill and took occasion to express his opinion that an increase in the amount was an impossibility. It is an idle dream. He then spoke of the constitutional right of the people to coin money. Mr. Elihan, of Mass., also spoke in support of the bill. Mr. Elihan, of Mass., also spoke in support of the bill. Mr. Elihan, of Mass., also spoke in support of the bill.

SENATE—Forty-eighth day.—Five weeks have been spent on the bill to repeal the Sherman silver law, by the Senate. Five weeks of wind and still more to follow. The House has been in session for a week. Senator Camden, of West Virginia, for repeal and Senator Foster, of Kansas, against repeal and favoring free coinage of silver. The resolution offered by Mr. Camden, Rep. N. H., calling for information as to the commission now in investigation of the gold custom house, was laid before the Senate, and Mr. Chandler spoke in support of the resolution. The resolution was agreed to. The resolution was agreed to. The resolution was agreed to.

SENATE—Forty-ninth day.—Mr. Dubois, of Idaho, again spoke on the injustice of the enactment of important laws while the states of Washington, Wyoming and Montana were only partially represented. Mr. Washington, of Indiana, made a sensation by asserting that a square of territory between Mr. Carey, of Wyoming, were in favor of unconditional repeal. Mr. Kyle, of South Dakota, spoke in support of the bill and Mr. Elihan, of Illinois, addressed the Senate in opposition to free silver coinage. House. The daily attendance of the House grows smaller. It proposes the redemption of the free coinage of silver and the remission of 20 per cent of the tariff duties to the countries which receive American standard dollars of the present weight and fineness at par as legal tender money. The debate on the repeal bill was continued by Mr. Elihan, of Mass., in speaking in opposition to the elections law repeal bill, said that the "states rights" doctrine was a "states rights" doctrine.

TERRIBLE DYNAMITE PLOT.

Anarchists of Vienna to Blow Up the Austrian Parliament and Public Buildings.

Vienna cables: By the recent arrest of a number of anarchists in Vienna and the search of their houses the police have unearthed the most atrocious conspiracy of recent years. In the house were found cases of revolvers, bombs ready for loading, explosives at hand with which to load the bombs and coats with leather linings, to which hooks for carrying bombs were attached; also discovered in the walls and furniture were found documents of a most important nature, which reveal a hellish conspiracy against the entire city of Vienna.

The papers show that the anarchists intended to smuggle a quantity of dynamite into the underground portion of the reichsrath, and when that body met, on October 10, to blow the reichsrath sky-high and strike terror into the hearts of the enemies of the independent group of socialists, to which the anarchists belong.

The reichsrath consists of the upper and lower houses; the upper house is formed of the princes of the imperial family, who are of age and secondly of 65 nobles in whose families by nomination of the emperor the dignity is hereditary; third, of the archbishops, 10 in all; and fourth, of any other life members nominated by the emperor, on account of being distinguished in art, science, or in the church or state, about 113. The lower house consists of about 385 members elected partly directly by the votes of citizens. These 600 people would have been buried into eternity there in a second.

The anarchists had their plans also fully prepared to blow up the town hall. In this building over a thousand people would have been destroyed. A number of other important buildings on the Ring strasse, one of the finest streets in Europe, were doomed to destruction and the same day, on the day appointed for the anarchist outbreak. The university, another building was also to be undermined with dynamite, as was the famous historical museum of Vienna, the Hofburg theatre and other fine buildings of a similar nature.

Correspondence was found which showed that the anarchists were in league with and received support from anarchists in New York and Chicago.

THOSE NAUGHTY BURGLARS!

Yes, this store was burglarized a few nights ago, but the burglars were kind enough to take nothing except what they needed for their own use, but for fear that they may think that they need some more we are going to sell them before they return. The following are the goods we don't want them to have, and would much rather our friends and customers would get, and thus you see that to obtain at the following prices would be cheaper than to steal them:

1 case of 10-4 White fancy bordered Bed Blankets at 62½c per pair. 1 case of 10-4 Grey fancy bordered Bed Blankets at 62 1-2c per pr. 700 yds. Cream White Domet Flannel at 4 1-2c per yd. 1 lot of Standard Prints at 5c per yd. 1 case Men's Heavy Duck Coats with heavy fleeced lining and patent buttons, just the right thing for Fall wear, at $1.49 each. Entire line of Men's and Boy's Underwear at 1-4 off from the regular price. 1 lot Men's Jersey Overshirts at 42c. 33 Boys' two piece Suits at 1-2 price.

Watch this space all along. It will pay you, if it dont me.

T. G. Richardson, THE CASH-OUTFITTER.

The latest style in Derby Hats at Rauch's

R. Root has purchased the property recently owned by Geo. Kellogg on Ann Arbor street where Mr. Root and sister from Leslie will keep house. Mr. Kellogg has purchased a lot near Al. Chaffee's new house where he will erect a fine new house.

The people at Chicago this week from this place, place are as follows: J. R. Rauch, Henry Baker, Geo. Hall, Wm. Bassett, Jas. McKeever, Daniel Jolliffe and wife, Lewis Bennett and wife, Wm. Hoyt and wife, R. G. Hall and wife and Mrs. Sly.

The entertainments given by our young people under the management of Misses Nettie and Cora Pelham last Thursday and Friday evening was very nice and the selections all showed very much practice and study. The attendance was rather slim.

The quarterly conference will be held Saturday at 3:45, presided over by the new presiding elder, Rev. C. Allen, D. D., who will also preach Sabbath morning at 10:30. Love-feast at 9:45 a. m. Sacramental services at the close of morning preaching. Evening meeting at 7:00. All are invited to attend.

If you want the latest style in a Derby Hat go to Rauch's.

M. Connor has purchased the new house recently erected by Miss Kate Penniman on Sutton street where he will soon take possession. We hear that a hotel is to be built where Mr. Connor is at present living. A hotel is something that is needed very much in this place and we trust we shall have the pleasure of seeing a fine new building erected in the near future for this purpose.

A large line of Overcoats at Rauch's selling from three to four dollars less than last winter.

David Gilson died at his home in Canton last Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock, after a four months illness. Mr. Gilson was born in Wayne county N. Y., April 22, 1819. He settled in Michigan, which was at that time a territory, April, 1837, at Newburg corners. Here he purchased a small piece of land and worked at the cooper trade. In September 1840 he was united in marriage to Mrs. Sarah Hall. The happy union was severed in 1891, after some fifty years of married life.

In 1842 he moved to Lawton, Van Buren county, where he was converted and joined the Methodist church and also aided much in church building in that new county. In 1864 he returned to Plymouth where he joined the Methodist church and became one of its most active workers. As class leader he had the spirited interest of the church. As steward he worked to see that the pastor and his family were made comfortable and as trustee it is understood that at one time by personal gift he and one other brother saved the church from being sold for debt. We are all under obligation to him for his most generous deeds and work. Mr. Gilson was the youngest son of a family of twelve children nearly all of whom have passed on before him. Mrs. Luther Cable and Mrs. John Bradner are the last two sisters living at the present day. He has no children of his own but adopted Geo. Gilson when four months of age and Mrs. Eva Hall when about three years old, both being very grateful for the fatherly care bestowed upon them. The funeral services were held at the Methodist church at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Clark officiating. Interment in the Riverside cemetery.

NOVI.

Mrs. Thompson is the guest of her brother C. M. Wigle.

Mrs. Jas. Deveraux and Mrs. Chas. Rice are visiting the White City this week.

Delos Leavenworth attended the county fair at Pontiac last week taking a number of exhibits with him. They must have been fine for we hear that his premiums amounted to about $40.

The lecture given at the Methodist church last week by Mrs. Jas. Porter, field on "Catholism" was not as largely attended as was expected but those that were there say it was fine.

Miss Lulu Becker is attending school at Pontiac. The entertainment at the Baptist church last Friday evening netted $4.45.

Very few persons from this vicinity are attending the town or county fairs this year.

Mrs. Libbie Hazen and daughter of Ypsilanti have been visiting friends in this vicinity.

The "young idea" at Novi and West Novi are having a vacation while the teachers of those schools are taking in the fair at Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee West and Mrs. West's mother, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Bogart, Misses Maud Flint, Mame Johnson, Nettie Marshall and Mr. and Mrs. Amos Bentley left for "the metropolis of America" Monday morning.

A charivari was Novi's sensation last week and it distanced the usual run of such celebrations. Besides the customary amount of the most unearthly racket that could be devised, there was a "fatted calf" barbecued and a barrel of crackers distributed, served up with any amount of "sass." It seems to be the general opinion that the ringleaders took a whole lot of pains to make fools of themselves. The outcome of the affair is "enmity among neighbors and church brethren and no discoverable benefit to any body. Wouldn't it have been better to have given the money to the poor and let people's personal affairs alone? It looks that way from an entirely unprejudiced standpoint at least.

FARMINGTON.

Wm. Harlan is at the world's fair this week.

MEAD'S HILLS.

Eva Atchison is on the sick list this week.

Mrs. Downey's daughter of Detroit Sunday with her.

SALEM.

The next meeting of the C. S. L. C. will be held at Mrs. Frederick's.

Mrs. N. E. Rider has been spending this week with Mrs. Jas. Clark of Novi. The North Methodist church held a social at Mr. Perry's last Friday evening.

The potato crop is not up to the average this year. The tubers are fetching 50c a bushel at present.

A box social was held last Friday evening at the residence of Geo. Nelson in the interest of Lapham's church Sunday school.

Rev. D. H. Conrad and other Baptist's attended the Wayne district Baptist association at Plymouth Wednesday and Thursday.

Rev. H. F. Schier preached last Sunday at his new station, Whitmore Lake and Hamburg. Rev. W. H. Benton, Salem's new Methodist pastor also occupied his pulpit here.

Miss Lizzie, daughter of H. Dennis, is spending her vacation among relatives here. She is engaged in city missionary work at Cleveland under the W. C. T. U. and Society of Friends.

A load from Salem drove to South Lyon to hear the Whitney's Monday. The entertainment was broken up by an alarm of fire and everybody turned out to help save the flour mill. The grain elevator at the depot however was destroyed.

Rev. Mr. Conrad received a telegram on Wednesday from his brother, pastor of the Baptist church at Sand Beach, announcing the death of their little baby boy. Mr. Conrad went to Detroit to meet the remains which were en route for Quincy.

A party from Salem left on the News excursion via Ann Arbor on Tuesday for the world's fair. The party comprised Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Coldron and daughter, Peter Coldron, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rider, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Van Sickle and son, Mrs. Shannon, Miss Westfall, Miss Ada Roe, Miss Jessie Roe and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rider.

Will Frederick left for Sault Ste. Marie last Thursday at which place he has secured the position of baggage master at the C. P. R. station, through his uncle Wm. Sutherland ticket agent at that place. Will's many friends will be glad to learn of his success as he is a worthy young man but he will be greatly missed in the cornet band of which he is one of the most efficient members and also as sec'y of the Congregational church Y. P. S. C. E.

THAYER'S CORNERS.

Mr. and Mrs. Levitt Austin are now doing the Columbian exposition.

David Foreman who has been rail-roading in the west for three years past is now home for a visit with his parents and other friends.

Mrs. Rufus Thayer's condition is without change for several weeks past. She is practically helpless and requires the attention of an infant.

The ride overland to Ann Arbor of our twenty-three world's fair excursionists in open carriages on Tuesdays they ring was not such a dry affair as it would have been almost any other morning in the past three months.

Oscar Seber of Superior township, who has been in delicate health since his prostration with typhoid fever last spring, is said to be now suffering from a relapse and in a critical condition which his many friends will be sorry to know.

Miss Nettie Dennis, who has been spending her vacation here with her mother and sister, left on Tuesday for her work among the mountains at Blowing Rock, North Carolina. She returns for her fourth year's service in this work—employed by the American Missionary association. Her continued employment would seem to be conclusive evidence of her effective work.

Cookers may now restrain their fault finding about the drought for a time at least. The rain on Tuesday was continuous from morning till evening, with but slight intermission. Much of the time it came down copiously. All are rejoicing that the drought is interrupted and the hope is general that the blessing of timely showers may be granted the remainder of the season.

The levy of the tax for the construction of the county ditch in the vicinity south east of here is causing a good amount of irritation. Perhaps it would be prudent for the commissioner to make himself scarce in that locality until the tax is partly paid and the benefits of the drain are demonstrated by a few months time. Time is a great healer. Many and ghastly wounds are completely cicatrized by being left to the undisturbed action of time. These tax wounds will no doubt show no scars after the action of a few months time and the benefits of the ditch have been made apparent.
