Surrounded by a Drive of Frenzied Peccaries—Thirty-Nine of the Whites Slain—Before the East, Give Up the Fight

In the fall of 1887 a party of surveyors left Fort Yuma, Cal., on duty in connection with the railroads and other landmarks.

The officer related a startling story of having encountered four large Mexican lions not two hours previous to their capture.

Rain or no rain, this was an opportunity not to be lost, and three of the surveying party accompanied by one of the Mexicans at once set out for the hills where the game was said to be.

"I was with the Mexican sergeant," said Mr. Gaillard, one of the surveyors, "and we climbed to a ridge where, peeping over, I scanned the country for half a mile.

"After dressing and quartering the game each of us shouldered a moiety and started off down the canyon to the left to find our comrades.

"Here we in turn became prisoners, and amused ourselves by picking off our assailants, who had formed a circle around our mound.

"We had now about run out of ammunition, but just then a shot rang out of the timber, and then another and another, in quick succession.

"Each shot told, and finally we counted thirty-nine jabalis lying dead at our feet. The remaining survivors, six in number, now gave up the fight in disgust, and with a last savage angry snarl, trotted away and were soon lost to view in the thick chaparral and stunted brush oak lining the timber.

"The copse where they had been picked up was found without much difficulty, but here a second and awful surprise was awaiting us.

"The woman in the case—the photograph in the locket.

"Dr. Lapkester has been searching the old newspapers and quotes the following curious advertisement: 'Wanted—A woman, middle-aged, to wait upon a young lady of great fashion and fortune; the woman must be of the church of England, have had the small-pox in the natural way, very sober, steady and well-behaved, and understand dress, getting up lace and fine linen, and doing all things necessary for a young lady that goes into all public places and keeps the best company. Inquire of the printer of this paper.—October 1, 1774.'

CODFISH has been popularly believed to be about as economical a class of food as it was possible to buy, considering the price of it and the amount of nourishment it is known to contain. To adulterate it therefore, or to palm off some spurious article as genuine codfish is an imposition for which there can be no possible charity. But this is precisely what Eastern dealers are now guilty of. A quintal of cod, that is 112 pounds, costs from $6 to $7, and instead of supplying the genuine article the dealers have been caught substituting a quintal of what is known as hush, a kind of fish resembling the cod, but not half so valuable as an article of food and worth only half so much. Hush is being sold now for codfish. The difference between the cod and the hush at the former has a split fall of the latter is square.

Innovation has been the faculty of the girls' school in Philadelphia. A pupil shall be given a copy of the book. According to the pupils for the world as set forth in a program of the school.

In an account of a Sunday dinner given at the house of ex-President John Adams, as late as 1817, the first course was a pudding of Indian corn, with molasses and butter; the second course consisted of veal, ham, neck of mutton and vegetables. There is, however, some reason to believe that New England tables were less lavishly set forth in the latter part of this century than in the good old colony times, when they lived under the king.

PLEASURE DENIED HIM.

The full enjoyment of the skillful Clog-Dancer's Art.

"I should consider myself," said a citizen to a New York Sun man, "a man of fairly good all-around apprehension. I enjoy life. I feel at home wherever I go. I like all sorts of food, and I find enjoyment in all sorts of entertainment; but there appears to be one form of entertainment, the enjoyment of which is denied me, and that is clog dancing. I don't know how many times I have seen clog dancing on the stage, and if the dancing is good it seems always to produce upon the audience substantially the same effect. When the dancing begins there may be in the auditorium the usual slight rattle that might be heard about any considerable audience, and which in no way indicates inattention or indifference; but even this subsides as the dancer proceeds, and by the time he has reached the rear center of the stage, preparatory to executing the many difficult steps that will bring him on a straight line down to the footlights, the audience is perfectly still.

There is a current impression that the diet of our New England forefathers was, for the most part, restricted to corn meal, pork and beans and pumpkin pies. As a matter of fact, in 1684, a French-refugee bore witness that beef and mutton, as well as pork, were but twopence a pound in Boston, and Josselyn, writing in 1671, recorded that he had bought in Boston, a dozen pigeons, all dressed, for three pence. Johnson, in his "Wonder Working Providence," says that New Englanders then had apples, pear and quince tarts, instead of the former pumpkin pies.

They had also apple mose, apple slump, buttered apple pies and apple crowdy. Josselyn says that the quinces, cherries and damsons set the dames a-work. Marmalade and preserved damsons are to be met with in every house.

The New England women had not forgot the lessons learned in their English homes. They made not only preserves and conserves, marmalades and "quiddonies," but also hyppocras and household wines, squelbars and cordials. They candied fruits and made syrups.

They preserved everything that would bear preserving, including, besides the things mentioned, plums, peaches, oranges, lemons, artichokes, green walnuts, elecampus roots, eringo roots, and barberries. One finds receipts for conserves of roses, of violets, of borage flowers, rosemary, mint, lavender and marjoram, rules for making poppy water, cherry water, thyme water, angelica water, etc.

The pages of Judge Sewall's diary gave many items of his daily fare. He speaks not only of boiled pork, boiled bacon and pork and beans, but of boiled pigeons, boiled venison, roast beef, roast lamb, roast swill, roast turkey, fricassee of fowls, "jell of salmon," oysters, fish and oil, pastry, bread and butter, mince pie, apple pie, gingerbread, sugared almonds, glazed almonds, honey, curds and cream, sage cheese, green cheese, barley, chocolate, eggs, oranges and shaducks, besides the fruits and berries grown in New England.

An English traveler named Bengt, who visited Boston in 1740, was enthusiastic about the markets. He says: "Their poultry of all sorts is as fine as can be desired, and they have plenty of fine fish of various kinds, all of which are very cheap. Take the butchers' meat altogether, in every season of the year, I believe it is about two pence per pound sterling.

"As good a turkey may be bought for about two shillings sterling as we can buy in London for six or seven; and as fine a goose for ten pence as would cost three shillings, and sixpence or four shillings in London. They sell a fine fresh cod that will weigh a dozen pounds or more, just taken out of the sea, for about twopence sterling.

"They have smelts, too, which they sell as cheap as sprats are in London.

"The salmon, which they sell for about a shilling apiece, will weigh fourteen or fifteen pounds. They will sell as fine a haunch of venison for half a crown as would cost full thirty shillings in England. Bread is much cheaper than in England, but not nearly so good. Butter is very fine, and cheaper than I ever bought any in London; the best is sold all summer for three pence a pound."

For many years the colonists dined exactly at noon, and on farms half an hour earlier. On Saturday all ate fish for dinner. Judge Sewall often speaks of his Saturday dinner of fish. Fish days had been prescribed by the king in England, in order that the fisheries might not fail of support, owing to the increased consumption in meat induced by the reformation in religion.

New Englanders obeyed the mandate, but ate codfish on Saturdays because the Papists ate fish on Fridays. As regards the method of serving a meal in colonial times, all we know is that the basty pudding came first, for the purpose, perhaps, of breaking the force of the boys' appetites.

In an account of a Sunday dinner given at the house of ex-President John Adams, as late as 1817, the first course was a pudding of Indian corn, with molasses and butter; the second course consisted of veal, ham, neck of mutton and vegetables. There is, however, some reason to believe that New England tables were less lavishly set forth in the latter part of this century than in the good old colony times, when they lived under the king.

A terrible drink is said to have been popular in Salem; at least the name was terrible, for it was called "mistle-belly vengeance." It consisted of sour household beer simmered in a kettle, sweetened with molasses and thickened with brown bread crumbs, and was drunk piping hot.

"Stonewall" was a most intoxicating mixture of cider and rum. "Callaguns," or "bogus," was cold rum and water, unsweetened. "Black strap" was a mixture of rum and molasses, and was used to stand in every

the result of thought. In talking, the speaker paid a fitting tribute to Mr. Gardner and his philanthropy.

The singing by the quartette, which followed Dr. Swift's remarks, Mrs. Taft, Mrs. Long, Mrs. Barnhart, and Miss Rutledge, was simply grand. It ought to have been grand. What less could one expect of four charming ladies each with a voice second to but few in the state. The audience expected a treat and they were not disappointed.

In the "five minute talks," Frank N. Clark responded to "Our Village, the gem among the hills." Mr. Clark thought that besides what nature had done to beautify our village the people were mainly responsible for "Our citizens," said Mr. Clark, "pull together and work in harmony for improvement."

and that is what has made our gem among the hills. "When you are away from home talk about your town and let people know you are proud of it." "Were I worth a million," said Mr. Clark, "Northville should be my home. There is no pleasanter spot in all this world."

"Our Citizens" was ably taken care of by Rev. J. M. Belding. He said he was proud of Northville and Northvillians. "Mr. Gardner," he said "in the presentation of the clock had made the best strike of his life and brought the citizens to time." The plan was so good and everybody felt so joyfully that Mr. Belding was allowed to proceed. He suggested that such munificence as this, was an example worthy to be followed by more of our citizens. "No more beautiful monument could be erected to their memory and it would be much better than leaving thousands of dollars to be squandered among quarreling relatives and lawyers."

Prof. Don C. Bliss responded to the toast of "Our Schools" and did it well. "Education," he said, "is the chief element of success in any kind of business. In the successful carrying on of our public schools we need the co-operation of all, without it we cannot succeed."

Rev. P. R. Parrish, who was down for "Our Churches," was also down for the grip at home, but he had reduced his reply to manuscript and Rev. Arnold read it. It was an elegant address and all were sorry the pastor was not able to personally participate in the exercises. "Our churches," said the writer, "are the guardians of the home, the saving salt of municipality and general government, the ally of all our schools and legitimate business."

Elizabeth L. Rutledge of Bay City followed with a very pretty solo. She has a very sweet and cultivated voice and her singing on this was superb. Miss Rutledge is the successful instructor of the Bay City schools for a number of years.

Manufacturing Industries" was given by J. A. Duonar. This was given to Mr. Duonar evangelical church. These men represent the material interest and prosperity of our village and as far as business morality and integrity is concerned none better can be found in our union."

Mr. Harton's remarks were sound and logical and though he had been interrupted by many leaving the church at the clock was started still the large crowd remaining listened to the closing remarks with close attention.

The striking of the clock was intended for the grand finale but Mr. Gardner who has been in ill health so long began to get uneasy and it was thought best to perform that part of the program after Mr. Tubnar's remarks.

[M.E. CHURCH, WITH CLOCK IN TOWER] marks. Walter J. Buckley, the clock company's expert who placed the clock in the tower here, had systematically provided pulleys from the pendulum to the church vestibule and after being escorted to that place by President Duonar the ropes were placed in Mr. Gardner's hands and with a pull the magnificent gift was set in motion.

The singing of "America" by the audience and another beautiful organ voluntary by Mrs. Long closed the exercises.

The occasion was one to be long remembered by both giver and recipients. The souvenir programs, which had been especially, though hastily, prepared for the occasion were quickly gathered up.

The exercises lasted two hours and though it was longer than they intended, the interest manifest showed no abatement till the last. It was a perfect success, all uniting with one accord to do honor to John Gardner, and of the honor shown and the good words said he may well be proud. It will be a golden spot in his memory to comfort his declining years.

NORTHVILLE RECORD.

Fruit Tree Agents.

Are you interested in fruit culture? Yes, of course you are; and so is every one, in one way or another. Farmers, no more than any other class, take special interest in growing good fruit, but there is no question they have to deal with of which they know so little. A successful fruit-grower can always depend on good returns for his efforts, but he must understand several things to insure success. He must know (1) what kinds are adapted to his climate, soil and location, and (2) how to plant, prune, and (3) when to prune and cultivate them.

A very large sum of money is spent yearly by farmers for fruit trees, vines and plants which prove of little or no account. A much larger amount would be spent by them were they sure of success, or even partial success. Not understanding fruit culture himself the farmer depends on the man from whom he buys his trees to give him the necessary knowledge along with the fruit-trees. This usually is a hope, for fruit tree agents as a rule, like the patent-right man, and the gift-selling agitator, are noted for their "gift of gab," and are much better students of human nature than of any other thing. Of course they pretend to know all about their business, and the farmer thinking they do, follows instructions which lead him to the usual results, indifferent success or complete failure.

A fruit-tree agent who understands his business should be able to walk over a man's farm and tell him much of his fruit, the good fruiters and what roots they are growing on. He should be as able to do this as an expert live-stock dealer is to pick out good cattle, sheep and hogs. Give the fruit-tree agent this test before giving him your order, and you will meet with much better success.

Learn to understand fruit culture thoroughly, and if every fruit-tree man did the same, he would be a most welcome visitor to the farmer. This would do away with selling the farmer one thing and delivering another. I have located myself in Northville for the winter, and shall deliver several free lectures at different points, the notice of which will be given, on the "cultivation of fruit and ornamental trees." A great deal of valuable information can be gained at these lectures and all are urged to attend them. Since the extensive clearing away of our forests, it has become necessary to plant our orchards so they will furnish their own protection from the cold blasts of winter. It becomes necessary to intermingle the different varieties and also plant the trees much closer together than formerly. I have found in looking around this section of Michigan that you need to have more pear trees grown on French imported pear roots, instead of the native pear roots. Nearly all the best fruiting pears I find here, I see are on the French root. I find the plum budded on the imported Myroblin root, much the better fruit. Also I notice all the best fruiting cherries are invariably budded on the Mahaleb root which will not sprout. I find peach trees here that had fruited more than twenty times (these are the ones to buy). I saw thousands that came from New Jersey and other down east points that were rotting at five years and none last much longer than nine years. Peaches are not much good here, gotten from those parts. Farmers who are having such bad success in making peaches here should plant none but the hardy kinds and nearly all late varieties. These are sure to fruit.

I will go to any man's place if requested and show him where his best location is for an orchard and give him instructions about planting and pruning (and now is the best time to prune), and if he wishes to purchase trees for an orchard, or only one, I am confident I can furnish him trees which will grow and fruit. I make no charge for visiting your place nor do I require you to give me an order for trees.

Near my home are hundreds of acres of nurseries. I there carefully select my stock, choosing only young and thrifty trees. I sell the best, and when I deliver if they are not as good as represented, I don't ask a cent to accept them. I also oversee the packing of all my stock, using sawdust, moss instead of straw, thus keeping them moist and fresh.

Persons wishing me to visit their place can drop a postal addressed to box 484, Northville, Mich., and I will be pleased to call.

I furnish all kinds of Hybrid Perpetual Roses; the Climbing or any kind wished, all on their own roots. Any kind of ornamental trees or shrubs can be had of me. Landscape gardening a specialty. The most appropriate trees can be had of me for street planting and any suitable size. Directions can be had of me how to plant such trees, also the distance to place them apart. No two trees of the same kind should be planted either. A beautiful contrast can be had in front of a house if the right trees are set. My trees cost you but a trifle more than the forest trees and are a thousand times prettier. On a place once, I can show the proprietor what a contrast can be had in just the trees planted in front of his residence.

Can be found any day at Beech Northrop's.

Everybody needs them! Our goods are all of the best and latest styles. This is why we can recommend them, and this is why our customers stay with us. They know we don't disappoint them. Although our goods are of the best, we sell them as low as others do inferior goods. We are not selling goods below cost, but you might think so from our prices compared with others. We are here to stay, while "closing out," "quarter off" and other fake sales are placed before you. We are still holding our own and have never yet tried any "hoodwinking" schemes; but continue right along and give our customers honest goods at honest prices for their honest dollars; and will use every fair effort to keep up the enviable reputation of the past, that of doing just as we advertise and giving a square deal to all, combined with courteous treatment.

NOVI.

We feel now as though some of our open winter prophets might be mistaken.

Mrs. Bathrick entertained her friends Mr. and Mrs. Chaffee, of Commerce last week.

Mrs. James Palmer is at Walled Lake taking care of her mother who is quite ill.

Several of the lady "bees" from Novi attended the public installation of officers at Wixom Tuesday evening.

Mark Hance of Detroit was in town Tuesday making arrangements to set a five ton monument on his lot in the cemetery.

W. E. Hegie has secured the agency for an Elkhart, Ind., firm and is shipping here a lot of buggies, road wagons, cars, etc. Success to the new business.

Novi-possesses a genuine artist. If any one should doubt this statement let them go to C. E. Goodell's store where his latest work is now on exhibition.

Prosecuting Attorney Smith did not send a boy to tussel with Lawyer Bissell, but came himself last Saturday and attended the liquor suit here which resulted in the defendant being bound over to the Circuit Court on five hundred dollars bonds. Let all the peoplesay "amen."

Mrs. Carlton Gage is very sick.

Mrs. E. T. Hazen has gone to Detroit for a week's visit.

Clark Rice still continues seriously ill with but little hopes of recovery.

Miss Jessie Boyden of Howell is visiting friends at and near Novi.

Arthur Johns has sold his farm to Edwin Green. Much regret is expressed on all sides that Novi is to lose Mr. and Mrs. Johns.

Mrs. Betsy Hill's eighty-fifth birthday was observed at Mrs. Lottie Hill's by a gathering of the relatives as a surprise to the aged lady.

Novi's centenarian, Mrs. Bush, is reported to be in very poor health. Mrs. Bush is probably one of the oldest persons in the United States being 107 or 108 years of age.

The friends of Mr. Brundage were agreeably surprised Tuesday evening to find that the donation funds footed up to something over sixty dollars with more promised. The evening was very stormy and there was a gathering of the E. O. T. M's. at Wixom and a party at Bert Cogdill's on that evening, notwithstanding which the donation was a success socially and financially as well as in the ordinary line in which latter there was a large surplus.

Considering the state of the roads and the threatening aspect of the weather it would have seemed to be a natural inference that the attendance at the W. N. D. C. would be small last Saturday night but contrary to expectations the house was well filled and the general verdict at the close of the meeting was, it had been a very enjoyable evening. As only two of the disputants were present, the question was laid aside and with it the dignity of the society, and every body went in for fun. Some very amusing motions were made which presumably were not expected to appear in the society records. One after another was called upon for song, recitation, story or instrumental music and nearly all entered into the spirit of the occasion and responded with readiness. Mr. David Wilson, who has been prevented from attending the meetings for some time, responded to calls again and again repeated until it seemed as if his good nature would be exhausted, but he is so used to the encores which his inimitable manner of recitating always brings forth, that he seems to have an exhaustless stock of patience as well as selections on hand. Mrs. Richardson's well known talent as an elocutionist was also attested to by the enthusiasm with which her fine recitations were received. The following program was submitted for Jan. 27:

- 1 Instrumental music—Mr. and Mrs. Kimmis.
- 2 Reading—Mrs. Jas. Donham.
- 3 Declamation—Harry Bogart.
- 4 Talk, Iron Mines of Michigan—D. Gage.
- 5 Vocal duet—Miss Congdon and Mrs. Miles.
- 6 Recitation—Mrs. Cora Power.
- 7 Answer to queries.
- 8 Recitation—Bentley Wade.
- 9 Collection and distribution of queries.
- 10 Impromptu—J. Clapp.
- 11 Discussion—Resolved that, "The world's fair has been one of the causes of the present financial depression." Affirmative, J. B. Leavenworth, D. Gage, D. Johnson Negative, A. N. Kimmis, D. C. Dunham, R. F. Courier.
- 12 Instrumental music—Mr. and Mrs. Kimmis.
- 13 Recitation—Mrs. Della Harmon.
- 14 Critic's report—D. Gage.
- 15 Music of recitation by any visitor who will favor us.
- Critic—Mrs. Fannie Kimmis.

Since the shutting down of the South Lyon saw mill Silas Parker is cutting wood here for Mr. Sibley. Mr. Wixom also has a number of men cutting for him.

The revival meetings are drawing large crowds and receiving many converts. Elder Cure of Detroit is assisting in the work and Mr. Johns and wife are ably leading the singing.
