

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

Vol. XXV, No. 40.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, MAY 18, 1894.

$1.00 per year, in advance.

THE BAND BENEFIT.

Largely Attended and Highly Pleased Entertainment.

The band benefit at the opera house Monday evening was a double success financially and otherwise. Everyone was more than pleased with the entertainment. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity as far as seating room was concerned, but many returned home rather than stand.

The solos by Mrs. Randolph-Long were especially pleasing as they always are, and the audience showed their appreciation.

The readings by Miss Buhl were highly enjoyable and the young lady showed that she certainly possesses a rare accomplishment. Miss Buhl has just graduated at Mrs. Noble's Detroit training school and we judge by her work that she has a bright future before her.

Charley Gardner's song was a hummer and took the house. We shall hear from Mr. Gardner again.

The violin solos by Miss McKeand were excellent. The management was fortunate in securing the assistance of this young lady as a pleasing addition to the program.

The one act farce was a mirth provoker and the characters were all well taken. W. H. Hutton as the bachelor was first class. B. G. Filkins as the colored servant was perfect as usual. H. F. Brown as the newly married gent was immense. E. B. Thompson as Major Pepper, USA, was just right. As an excited bride Miss Alexandre handled her part perfectly. Mrs. Waterman as the "maiden lady" was a whole show by herself and Miss Babbitt as the waiting maid was all that could be asked. In fact each seemed perfectly adapted to his or her particular part.

Another entertainment of equal merit for the same purpose will be given at the opera house next Monday night. The admission will be ten cents to all parts of the house. Reserved seats will be on sale at the Record office Monday till six o'clock at five cents extra. Chairs only will be reserved.

"They're All Right!"

Following from the Ypsilantian will be of interest to our people:

"The group of townships which the democrat gerrymander set off from Wayne county into the 2nd Congressional district, have thus far been very modest and no candidate for Congress, so far as we have seen, have been named from that locality. It is not to be taken for granted, however, that there is no Congressional timber in that neck of woods, for there's lots of it and of first quality too. What's the matter with Hon. J. M. Swift of Northville? He has been for thirty years a veritable wheelhorse of the republican party in Wayne county, has represented with credit his district in the Legislature and by his able advocacy of party principles, has kept a phenomenal republican majority constant in his township through all the changes of party sentiment. He is a man of great intellectual strength and broad intelligence, and would reflect honor on his district.

F. R. Beal of the same place is another strong man who would make a most admirable Congressman. No interest entrusted to his care has ever suffered from neglect, or for want of able championship. Both of these gentlemen have strong claims upon their party, but whether either of them would accept the nomination is unknown to the writer, but no mistake would be made, should the choice fall to either of them. Those who are so anxious about these matters would do well not to overlook Wayne county.

In reply to the Ypsilantian's question we say there's nothing the matter with these gentlemen. "They're all right." The trouble is Northville is entirely too modest. Although it is the back-bone of the republican party of the town, it sits quietly back and helps elect some other fellow and rarely ever has a candidate of its own. The matter is worth looking into. Why can't the township of Plymouth, the village of Northville, have a candidate for congress. As the Ypsilantian says here are two good men tried and true. They are either the peer of any of our congressmen at Washington.

Plymouth's water works are all in good shape again.

Carleton merchants have organized a protective association against dead-beats.

The So. Lyon Excelsior rises up and says, "Say! boys, let's celebrate the ever glorious Fourth, six weeks from next Wednesday. Hip, hip—!"

Twist crows on the streets, bicycles on the walks, boys in swimming and measles in the families the village of Newaygo is kept busier than a bed-bug.

Some one threw a forty pound stone through the window of Chas. Compton's store at Rochester.—Orion Review.

Another proof that the strength of Samson is simply a "lost art."

The Spiritualists of Michigan will hold their 12th annual camp meeting at Orion Lake June 9-17. For further particulars, program, etc., address Mrs. A. Edgerton, secretary, Orion.

We want a Sunday-school at the Corners and we want it bad.—Town Corners in Orion Review.

There's not much doubt but what it will be bad enough. The hard labor will be to make it good.

A Dundee man named Dunmore has probably done more to protect himself and family against cyclones than any other Michigander. He has built an underground secret passage into which all the Dunmores will find safety on windy days.

Now, even Milford and Fowlerville are added to the would-be fourth of July celebrators. Go ahead gentlemen but in 1895 we want you all to keep quiet. Northville will celebrate at that time. As in the days of great Rome all roads will then lead to Northville.

The South Lyon church furniture company's case which has been in litigation since its failure in 1891 is settled at last. Judge Moore at Pontiac handed down a decision last week which will doubtless be final. He first allows Arouckle, Ryan & Co., who held a mortgage on the machinery when the concern failed, $785.25. All the labor claims are allowed as preferred claims and also the four judgments represented by Attorney Russell on the same footing as the labor claims. He allows the account of the assignees Ed. I. Arns and the receiver, Geo. B. Sheehy, but cuts down the charges of the attorneys in these cases. The above accounts are to be paid in preference to all creditors. The general creditors will probably receive nothing.

Nelson's World Show Coming.

This place will soon be the centre for the crowds to assemble to celebrate "circus day." On this occasion more than any other do the families from all the surroundings come in to spend the day, do their miscellaneous trading, call on friends and then visit the circus. There is a magnet connected with the name circus that draws from far and wide, in fact we all feel like putting on our best and joining the crowd bound for the circus lot, where all the sights are to be seen. The visit of the traditional circus show, likewise brushes up business for our merchants, as their extra trade from the country compels extra clerical help brought in requisition to attend the buying throngs, and everybody wears a 4th of July smile. Such will be the case on Friday May 25th when Nelson's World Show visits Northville and shows on the base ball grounds. The parade, the music, the clattering of horse feet, the jingling of armor, the gay colors spangled in the sunlight, the flying flags, the merry laugh, all cause enthusiasm and bring "halo" to the ears, and enjoyment for a day to the thousands. Gala is circus day, grand the respite from labor and work, let all be amused; we have one life to live and the circus comes only seldom, while 25 cents is a diminutive charge for so much. The press and public speak highly of the Nelson establishment. Every set in the One Ring is a gem, and plenty is offered for the small sum you pay.

THE BALL GAME.

Lost in the Last Inning When It Seemed Surely Won.

There was a large crowd at the ball game here Saturday afternoon and until the last half of the ninth inning enthusiasm ran high. The Northville club had it all their own way up to that time the score stood 4 to 8 in favor of the home club. Then the soldier boys from Orchard Lake went in and pounded out five nice runs leaving the score 8 to 9 in their favor.

Yerkes-Bainbridge.

Following from the Seattle, Wash., Telegraph of April 29, refers to "Gardie" Yerkes, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Yerkes of this place and will be of interest to many of our readers:

"Yerkes-Bainbridge.—The marriage nuptials were celebrated on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Portland, which unite for life a couple who are known in the several cities on the coast for their many good qualities. The young man who had the courage to cut asunder the many ties of good fellowship which bound him to single blessedness is Mr. S. Gardner Yerkes, recently of Port Townsend, but at present the Seattle manager of the Puget Sound & Alaska steamship company and also holds an important position with the Northern Pacific railway company. He is a jovial, whole-souled fellow, whose friends are legion. His usual and deserved good fortune followed him in his wooing when Miss Helen L. Bainbridge one of the brightest and fairest of lovely womankind consented to make him the happiest of men. She is the daughter of Major Bainbridge of Chicago, but has been spending some time at the home of her relatives, Lieutenant and Mrs. W. A. Kimball, Portland Heights, where the marriage was solemnized. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Brown of the First Presbyterian church. The groomsmen was Mr. Walter H. Cline of Seattle and the bridesmaid was Miss Mabel Bainbridge of Portland a cousin of the bride. The maids of honor were Miss Bessie Wilson and Miss Tott Kimball. The Kimball residence was a bower of flowers, and besides the friends of the contracting parties there were also present the army officers with their wives from Vancouver barracks. After the ceremony a banquet was served and Mr. and Mrs. Yerkes left on the afternoon train, coming as far north as Tacoma. On Thursday morning they left on the steamer City of Seattle for Victoria and after enjoying a few days in British Columbia will return Tuesday morning to receive the congratulations and well wishes of Seattle friends. They will take up their residence at 606 Fourth street.

Dr. Bennett,

Michigan's successful specialist, will be at the Macomber House Wednesday May 23.

Such cases as have failed to receive any more benefit from other sources are invited to call and get his new ideas in their cause and cure.

A Fact Not Generally Known.

When a fruit tree is dug at the proper time in spring and healed in the ground twenty inches, that stops the fibers growing forty to fifty-nine days, although the leaves and limbs may grow, until those features start it is safe to take the tree from the trench and plant it. I now have three or four hundred fruit trees, all kinds, early and late, back of the Park house for sale and will exchange for a light new or second hand carriage and harness or a good sound young horse or colt. I shall be here for some days in and about the hotel.

Come and see my trees. Don't believe it is too late to plant trees dug twenty-eight days ago. It's not.

VERY MUCH SURPRISED

I have been afflicted with neuralgia for nearly two years, have tried physicians and all known remedies, but found no permanent relief until I tried a bottle of Dullam's Great German Liniment and it gave me instant and permanent relief. 25 cents per bottle. A. B. SNELL, Hamilton, Mich. April 11, 1890. For sale by C. R. Stevens

A CONTRACTOR'S ADVICE.

Dullam's German Medicine Co. Gents: I take great pleasure in testifying in behalf of Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure. I can safely say that I never took such medicine as that to cleanse the liver, stomach and kidneys. I was suffering for years with biliousness, indigestion and loss of appetite and sleep. One bottle did for me more good than six months' other treatment and I feel it my duty to testify in its behalf, so others may try it and get cured. Warren E. Russell, Flint, Mich. For sale by C. R. Stevens, druggist. 3

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Over twelve years I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help. One of my friends persuaded me to try a bottle of Dullam's Great German Tonic, and after taking three bottles, can say I am in better health than I have been for 20 years and am now sixty years old, but feel as young as at 40. June 2, 1890. Mrs. H. E. Carpenter, Lapeer, Mich. For sale by C. R. Stevens, druggist. 4

A Fact Not Generally Known.

When a fruit tree is dug at the proper time in spring and beeled in the ground twenty inches, that stops the fibers growing forty to fifty-nine days, although the leaves and limbs may grow, until those features start it is safe to take the tree from the trench and plant it. I now have three or four hundred fruit trees, all kinds, early and late, back of the Park house for sale and will exchange for a light new or second hand carriage and harness or a good sound young horse or colt. I shall be here for some days in and about the hotel. Come and see my trees. Don't believe it is too late to plant trees dug twenty-eight days ago. It's not. H. R. SARGENT.

It is said the following is a recipe for a paste that "will hold anything." Take 3 parts sugar of lead, 3 of alum, 5 of gum arabic, and 16 of good wheat flour. Dissolve the gum arabic in two quarts of warm water; when cool stir in the flour and add the sugar of lead and alum, which must have been previously dissolved in water. Cook until it shows signs of boiling, and then let cool.

Probably one of the most unique ventures ever made in the newspaper line was that at Grand Rapids, May 5, when the Evening Press was taken in charge by the St. Cecilia Society. These ladies published the whole paper from start to finish. The paper was a hummer and the venture a great financial success. Mrs. Prof. Barnhart, daughter of A. M. Randolph of this place, is an active member of the society and was one of the proof-readers on this edition.

The council have named the street running south from Beal avenue by Pitt Johnson and John Sewell's place, Gardner avenue, in honor of the late John Gardner. The last street running from this avenue east to Plymouth avenue, Crandall street, from the first resident on that street. The street from the bridge near the depot to the corner at Mr. VanZile's place they named Park Place. The council also approved the Record's new directory which is now under way.

Verily, he that ruleth his temper while his neighbor's hens dig up his young rose bushes and do other work of destruction, is mightier than he that hurleth clubs and vile words at the hens and their owners. People who keep hens should remember that it is time they were placed in durance vile, if they have any regard for the rights of others. It is said; the difference between an umbrella and a woman is you can shut up an umbrella. So also can you shut up your hens.

Following from an unknown exchange is quite correct: "Editors are guilty of many sins of omission and commission and they murder the English language and butcher and maim the grammar and orthography, painstaking as they may be. And perhaps no one is so sensible of it and so sensitive as the editor. When he looks over the paper after the edition is out and sees glaring blunders in grammar and spelling, he feels like dropping the pen and taking up the wood saw or sledge hammer.

Prices are what tell. Four gold watches were the result of last week's reduced price sale at Rockwell's.

NORTHVILLE, MICH.

HEY were two jolly girls, both of them, who had worked together, dined and breakfasted together, shared one another's secrets and been inseparable companions. Men who knew them called them ideal women. When one felt sad and heart-sick and given over to the little moods that make a girl wretchedly, miserably woe-begone, the other was always there to comfort or laugh the tears away.

Flat Cozy, with its tiny corners filled with downy sofa cushions; was the resting place for more than one weary friend, who would drop in during the evening for a cup of fragrant tea and a comfortable chat. The little brass tea-kettle would hum a busy roundelay and join in the arguments as sturdily as if its fat little body contained a fairly good pair of lungs. Margaret was the elder of the two girls. She was always the same good natured, laughing Margaret, but was, nevertheless, a young woman with ideas of her own and any amount of willful determination. Their men friends raved over Margaret's pretty face, but she sadly lacked the graceful, pretty ways that soon disappear when a girl enters the busy world of business. As to Dorothy, the other girl—well, she wasn't what one would call a pretty girl. Her nose was a trifle too saucy and her mouth could have been smaller. But she had wonderfully soft and fluffy hair that curled around her ears and then piled itself in a silky knot on the top of her head. Her eyes were always bright and were of that tender brown that one so seldom sees. And she would wander through Flat Cozy as softly as a butterfly moves among a garden of daisies. During her working hours she was modestly demure and would never have been noticed at all, but for the reason that she wore such plain and unassuming gowns. But at home, in the Flat Cozy, she would dress herself in marvelous costumes of white material, with ever so many ruffles of filmy lace and knots of pale-tinted ribbons.

"We must be nice old spinners, Margaret dear," Dorothy used to say. "Or cross old maids, with corkscrew curls and plenty of cats and parrots, you know, because if you were to marry and leave me I'd die from loneliness and I'm sure you couldn't live without me."

"Indeed, I could not," Margaret would answer. "But I feel sure that you will be the first one to desert our little nest."

"How can you say such dreadful things?" and Dorothy's mouth would pucker up in most melancholy manner.

Jack Ryerson was an artist. Now at all times the fascinating fellow in the story books who wears velvet coats and lives on cushions and ale in a dainty and romantic studio but a well-built man was employed in the art department of a common place pubishing house. He recognized Margaret's stately carriage and her well-chested features, but his artist's soul was quite enraptured with Dorothy's quaint little figure and dainty manners.

"Sometimes I think that Dorothy isn't a real live girl at all," he once remarked to Margaret. "When she stood in the doorway a moment ago, with her head tilted to one side and her hair looking so pretty, I couldn't help wondering if I were not actually looking at some old painting."

Dorothy was very fond of Jack. They used to have jolly times when she posed for his pictures, and in fact Jack Ryerson's sketches of pretty girls were unrivaled and the envy of all his fellow-workers. After each of their little sketching sessions Dorothy would tell Margaret all about what Jack said and how he said it and what she said back. But one evening after Jack had gathered up his crayons and departed, Dorothy marched off to her own room without the customary chat. Margaret was alarmed. She brought out the mandolin and sang several street ditties in the hope that Dorothy would emerge from her den to have her ruffled spirits smoothed down. But no Dorothy appeared. It was after midnight and Margaret had been asleep for some time when she is aroused by a white-robed figure that glided silently by her side, slid two very cold arms around her, and with a dismal little tremble sobbed: "Maggie, darling, I'm so wretched and unhappy!"

"Dorothy," Margaret gasped, "you'll catch your death; go right back to bed and go to sleep. Do now, there's a dear."

"Sleep?" queried Dorothy. "I can't sleep. I haven't slept for a week. I got some powders from Dr. Hall today and he said that I was just nervous and tired out and needed rest, but he doesn't know anything, anyway. He—"

"Is it Jack, Dorothy?" and Margaret doubtfully replied, "But I presume it is. I feel as if I hadn't a friend in the world when he's not with me, and I'm too happy to breathe when he is here (Margaret smiled just then), and that is what makes me wild and that is what makes me hate myself so." And then, with her heart unbearably and her face all damp, she buried her head on Margaret's shoulder.

Things were never quite the same after that. Somehow Margaret seemed less sympathetic and Dorothy felt that she was no longer interested in her foolish affairs. Jack and Dorothy began to find comfort in the silly little quarrels that only those who are in love indulge in.

At last, one day their argument ended most unfortunately, and though Jack wasn't really serious, Dorothy felt sure he was and was quite broken-hearted.

"You do make me so unhappy," she pouted. "I almost wish that you'd go down yourself or hang yourself—or do anything so that I'll never see you again. You keep me perfectly miserable all the time."

"Dolly! Sweetheart!" Jack pleaded. "Forgive me. I was only teasing you. I love you with all my heart." Then noticing her sneering smile, he said desperately, "But you don't believe it?"

"No, I don't," Dorothy answered pettishly. "How many girls have you said that to? How far down on the list do I come? Really, now, but doesn't your conscience trouble you when you think of all the feminine hearts that you have broken? But I presume you have become hardened to it, and then Dorothy started up a series of hysterical bursts of merriment.

"Dorothy, I can't understand you," was all Jack said, and he slowly gathered together his scattered pencils put them in his pockets, and departed without another word.

As he went out into the shadows of the street he was half inclined to rush back and entreat her to believe him. He did love her. To be sure, he had told other girls that he loved them, but his regard for them had never been just like the affection he had for Dorothy. He would give his life for that moody, fearful bit of femininity that he had left curled up in a big arm chair. He kept saying to himself in an insane sort of fashion, "I love you, Dorothy. I love you! Then when he found that he had wandered for blocks with the child and cut off his face and making his ears tingle he laughed silently and said, "But I'll tease her. I'll pretend to make love to Margaret. By jove, why didn't I think of that before?"

A few days after that Dorothy was missed from her desk at the office and for the first time since the beginning of their friendship Margaret laughed alone. During the long hours Dorothy wandered around the Flat Cozy now making leaves from the geraniums in the window box standing before the large mirror in the dressing case. She would smile pityingly as she looked at a laughingly whispered to the image that mocked her every movement. "He doesn't love you, how could he? He doesn't. He says that he does but he really doesn't!" And then she would wander back to the little desk and turn over and over the envelope addressed to Margaret in the writing that she knew quite as well as her own.

But when Margaret went home that night Dorothy was quite like her old self. There was a bright spot on either cheek and Margaret thought she had never seen Dorothy look sweeter. After dinner they sat before the grate fire, Dorothy with her head in Margaret's lap and Margaret's arms around her. They talked over every happy hour they had spent together. They laughed and even played childish games as they snatched chocolates that Margaret said grew in her jacket pockets. And when the time came to say good-night, and Dorothy had kissed Margaret as was her custom, Margaret puzzled over the tear that had fallen on her hand.

Dorothy had planned it all that afternoon. Three powders Dr. Hall had said would cause the death of a ten-year-old child, and she had all the powders that he had left with her—there were ten at least. He had cautioned her so carefully, for the medicine was very strong, and an overdose would surely prove fatal. Yes, she felt that she was wicked. Jack loved Margaret. He didn't love her, with her plain face and moody ways. It was Margaret. How could she have been so blind? He knew that she, Dorothy, loved him, so he said all those pretty things to comfort her.

She slipped into the pink eiderdown gown that Jack so admired. She fixed her hair after the fashion that he professed to have liked best. Mechanically she folded and put away all the stray garments that were lying around the room. From her glove box she took a package that contained several folded bits of paper. Her gloves! they had never looked so pretty before. Her fan, but—then Margaret could see it. How her temples throbbed! What made her choke so? Her hands were damp and her heart seemed bursting with grief. Oh, yes, she had almost forgotten. She must say her prayers—she had never neglected them—so she knelt down beside the white bed. For some reason she couldn't frame the words. She would get as far as "Thy kingdom come," and she would seem to forget and would mutter: "Dear old Jack! When I am dead you can marry Margaret and forget all about silly Dorothy. I would not love you if I could help it and I don't want you to love me because you are sorry for me."

At last she arose. How cramped her limbs were! There were the powders. Taking the cover of her porcelain powder box, she emptied the contents of all the white papers in it. Her hands trembled when she raised it to her lips, but she grew strong and in a moment was staring vacantly at the little cover with its feathery coating of powder. The bed seemed so far away. She tottered toward it. How soft the pillows felt! She was so sleepy, too. What sweet music she heard, and who had brought all the flowers that were floating through the air? There was an odor of jasmine. Jack was so fond of jasmine. Jack! Why, there was Jack! Dear Jack! He did love her, after all. It wasn't Margaret at all. If she could only run her fingers through his hair, but somehow she couldn't move her hands. Ah! Jack came closer then. Yes, yes, it was really Jack. She felt his warm breath against her cheeks, but she couldn't see him any more. Everything was so black and dark. Jack's lips met hers. With a happy smile she drifted into the mysterious "valley of the shadow."

THE VAMPIRE BAT PEST.

One of the Chief Drawbacks to Cattle-Raising in Central America.

There are some drawbacks to the Isthmian cattle business, that would rather astonish the American cowboy were he to go there. The chief of these is the vampire bat, says a Sun correspondent writing from Panama. One reads stories of the vampire bat sucking the blood of human beings, and at least two books by naturalists of repute say that these bats do suck human blood. Vampire bats are found by the thousands in Venezuela and Ciriagua. I asked at every place for a person whose blood had been sucked by vampires, but could not find a soul. And yet people sleep out of doors without even a blanket to protect them—sleep bare-headed and barefooted. The vampire had every chance to alight on the human big toe, as he is said to do, and while soothing the foot with his fanning wings, to suck out the life blood. I could not find any such case, however, nor had that observant Englishman, C. Freedy, who lived twenty years in David, ever found any. But the vampire is the pest of the cattleman. He is particularly fond of veal blood, but older stock and horses, colts, mules and burros all suffer. I did not catch a vampire at his work, though I saw hundreds of them, but the cattleman all tell the same story. The vampire settles somewhere on the back of the beast in the pasture at night, and then, while slowly fanning its wings to and fro, cuts a circular piece of skin one-quarter of an inch in diameter. Through this hole he sucks the blood till satisfied. One wound would be of little consequence, nor would the loss of blood do much damage were that all, but a half dozen vampires may feast on one poor calf or on the back of a saddle horse in one night. The calf is badly weakened by the loss of blood, while a saddle horse so served is worthless until the wounds are entirely healed. But this is not the worst result of the bite. The region swarms with a pestiferous fly that soon after daylight finds the wound and lays eggs in it. Unless the wound is properly cleaned and dressed with a waxy salve within forty-eight hours after the vampire's attack the animal will be destroyed by the progeny of the fly. The percentage of calves thus killed is large, in spite of the watchfulness of the cow herders.

His Backsiding Still in Evidence.

Among the manuscripts unearthed at Fayoum, in Egypt, and now under examination at the British museum, one has lately been deciphered which possesses a peculiar interest for students of early Christian history. It is a certificate issued during the Decian persecution in the third century to some faint-hearted Christian that he has fulfilled the requirements of sacrificing to the gods. The subject in this case is an old man of 72 years, a scar over right eyebrow. The document is made out in regular official form, duly signed and attested. This is the only specimen of its kind that has yet been discovered.

Not Much on Distance.

"Friend," said the candidate to the fellow at the gate, "now far is it to the next settlement?" "About half a acre," "And how far is that?" "Well, his is a right smart ways." "I mean how many yards?" "Well, that ain't an yards 'tall tell you get that, an' then you'll strike Lill Spruh's yard an' six yard dogs, all loose an' a-hungry."

No Dis-union 'n' Pack-land.

Hicks—Mr. X. Horter, the evangelist, is doing a good work. They say he has made a hundred converts in his two meetings.

Wicks—And how many of them will stick?

Hicks—Oh, that doesn't make any difference. Horter, you know, gets $50 a night and there's no discount for backsliding.

A Substitute for Glass.

A translucent waterproof pliable material called duraline is being used in some parts of Europe and Australia as a substitute for glass for roofing large buildings. It is easily bent, can be cut with strong scissors and is said to be weather and heat proof.

SOME IRISH FOLK-LORE.

POPULAR TALES WELL KNOWN ON THE GREEN SOD.

O'Hara and the Leprechaun—How the Little Man Gave Shaun the Promise of a Shilling With Every Spade of Sod—Banishes the Darcys.

The emotional, imaginative temperament of the Celtic Irishman is fitly illustrated by his traditions and superstitions, and his belief in them separates him widely from his practical and hard-headed, northern brother. Throughout Ulster certain mounds of earth enclosing a space—and no doubt Celtic forts—are spoken of as Rath; but no romance about fairy meetings or the Golgotha of dead heroes move the minds of the shrewd Presbyterians to speculate on the past. In the South and West it is different. Every glen has its colony of airy beings, whose capricious influence on the fortunes of mortals is the subject of countless stories, and these are distinctly national in treatment.

Prominent in all the Irish fairy stories is this "Leprechaun," who appears as a little, wizened, old man, in coat and breeches like one of the countrymen. He is the fairies' lawyer, an adept at deception, but, once having given a promise, will keep it if seized and held, but the trouble is to catch him. Shaun O'Hara was a well-doing farmer on the Shannon, who might have been happy but for his greed and avarice. He wasted his time wandering about looking for buried treasures and fairy gold. Coming home one night he stopped at a Rath that was lit up by the beams of the harvest moon. He heard a noise of tiny bells, and peeping over the bank saw the green inside alive with tiny figures dancing. Each one had a partner and Shaun forgot himself in the excitement and exclaimed: "Má, the Lord be good to us!" In an instant the dancers were gone, but something was left glistening on the dewy sward and this Shaun seized. It was a little shoe not more than two inches long, with a gold buckle. Hugging this to his bosom he started for home. Strange shapes crossed his path and little pulls at his coat told him that he had company, but home was reached and Shaun passed the night in a dream of sudden wealth.

Next morning by day-break he was at the Rath, and mounting the bank called out:

Hullo! Hullo! Hullo!
O'Hara of the Shannon's side—
He found a little shoe.

"Well," said a thin squeaking voice almost between his legs, "let O'Hara, like an honest man, give the little brogue to its owner. Sure ma toes is cowlid."

Shaun started. Right at his foot was a little dried-up old man about twenty inches high. He noided and grinned. But O'Hara holding the shoe over his head said:

"Na boclaid, my yellow gossow, you don't touch yer brogue until you promise that every time I put me spade in the turf I'll turn up a shillin'."

After some haggling a bargain was made and the Leprechaun got his shoe. O'Hara became very rich and miserly. His shillings were packed into barrels and buried. He worked day and night without rest and was found dead on the Rath one stormy night, his face horribly distorted. When the money barrels were dug out they were filled with pebbles.

No Irish superstition is better known than the banshee, harbinging of death, says the Philadelphia Times. Her presence was once supposed to be a guarantee of legitimacy; of birth and only attached to the old Celtic families, but, thanks to intercourse and intermarriage, this distinction is lost, and the only instances of a presumed authentic account of this airy being's appearance have come from the English.

In 1826 W. Darcy was entertaining a party of friends at his magnificent mansion in North Connemara. He was one of the largest landholders in the West of Ireland. After a day spent in fox hunting the party, composed of many of the leading men in Ireland, were sitting at their wine in the large hall still standing, that commands a magnificent view of Clew bay. They were full of mirth and song, when suddenly a wail, that was recognized as an old Irish song known as the "Trougha," was heard, and Lord Drogheda, pointing to the window called out:

"My God, Darcy—see, there she is!"

And it was the testimony of those present that plainly to be seen hovering in the air in front of the window was a small figure with long hair and a pale green robe, wringing her hands as she sang. All were familiar with the popu ar belief and each one asked, "Is it for me this summons comes?"

The apparition faded away, but above the roll of the waves on the shore below could still be heard the notes of the "Trougha."

An hour after this a crowd of people came down the road carrying the body of Maurice Darcy, the eldest son and heir. He had been thrown from his horse and killed and this led to the utter ruin of the family, as their estates were sold afterwards by creditors, and the entire race is extinct. They were the originals of Charles Lever's "Knights of Gwynne."

As original and convincing evidence the testimony of a lot of squires over their wine may not be of the highest order, but the attorney general of Ireland, afterward Lord Norbury, was present and with the rest joined in attesting what occurred.

Some Laughable Anecdotes of Lafayette's Welcome in 1824.

When Lafayette, in 1824, made his memorable tour through the United States, many amusing incidents occurred. Lafayette spoke but little English, and understood less. He had retained a few phrases, such as "Thanks!" "My dear friend!" "Great country!" "Happy man!" "Ah, I remember!" And though he usually uttered these in an effective manner, they were sometimes ludicrously malapropos. At Halifax the cortege was met by General Daniel, who had stationed a company of soldiers by the roadside, flanked by the ladies, who had assembled to do honor to the guest of the state. It had been arranged that the ladies should wave their handkerchiefs as soon as Lafayette came in sight, and when Daniel exclaimed, "Welcome, Lafayette!" the whole company was to repeat the words after him. Unluckily, the ladies misunderstood the program and waited too long, says Argonaut, only to be reminded of their duty by a stentorian command of "Eh! ladies, eh! I say!" from the general, as he walked down the line to meet the marquis. Equally misunderstanding their part, the soldiers, instead of shouting, "Welcome, Lafayette!" in unison at the close of the general's speech, repeated the sentence one by one in varying tones down the line. General Daniel, frantic at this burlesque of his order, vainly attempted to correct it; but as he unfortunately stammered when he was excited, his "Say it all together!" could not overtake the running fire of "Welcome, Lafayette!" which continued all along the line. "Great country! great country!" replied Lafayette, turning to General Polk, who was vainly trying not to smile. Recognizing an old acquaintance, Lafayette greeted him with great effusion. "Ah, my dear friend, so glad to see you once more! Hope you have prospered and had good fortune all these years!" "Yes, general, yes; but I have had the great misfortune to lose my wife since I saw you." Catching the word "wife," Lafayette guessed at the idea of a recent marriage, and, patting his old friend affectionately on the shoulder, he exclaimed, "Happy man! happy man!"

Query has been made as to the nationality of Mrs. Adelina Patti, who was recently referred to as a Spanish-American. She was born in Spain, of Italian extraction, came to America at the age of one year and had all her early musical training in this country, and at present pays taxes to England on a castle in Wales.

A Novi cat is in the habit of occupying a hen's nest for a resting place, and when the hen wishes to use the nest she calmly and dignifiedly sits on the cat. The arrangement is, if appearances are any indication, highly satisfactory to both parties.

Ed. Benjamin is improving the property that he recently fell heir to by making gravel walks, painting etc. He intends to rent it and it will make a nice home for someone. The people of Novi would like to have Mr. B. locate here but his business being in another city it is impossible.

When in town don't forget to do your trading with the new clerk especially when you want oil, as he can put two gallons in a one gallon can and when you call for figs be sure you don't get prunes. He would be all right in the nail department but not so good in the grocery department.

Last Tuesday was Geo. Whipple's birthday. Of course he was proud of it because now he can vote. In the evening a number of young people met at his home in honor of the occasion and the time was pleasantly spent with games. Ice cream and cake were furnished the guests by Mrs. Whipple.

Following letter from Mrs. Bathrick will interest our Novi readers: "As I have understood that our friends wished to know how Gay was getting along and whether I had visited him, I take this way to inform them. I returned from there a few weeks ago. I found him much improved in health. The physician spoke encouragingly of him. He is respected by all the officials, as told me. They said he was a good boy; they treat him well and I am thankful. We met with glad and yet sad hearts. He is a teacher in the Sabbath and also night school and continues his law studies through the kindness of Mr. Davis. His work is in taking care of plants in which I see he is interested. He wants to be remembered with kindness by all. He often speaks of his old home and people (they are dear to him) and of his school days at Four Towns. He spoke of throwing the ink at the school house. I well remember it. He came and told me of his thoughtless act and asked for paint to erase it. Before I could get it there came a hard rain and washed it off. May the storms of our lives erase these things as clean from our minds. As he said, the last day of school will be green in his memory forever. As they sang the parting song the thought that he, of all of them, with misery in heart and a shadow over him, that he alone could see, was never again to be among them in their plays and happiness broke him down. He cried, for he liked them all. I too remember that day with sadness. It is well that our sorrows are not always known. Burdens are oftentimes very heavy, but the all wise Being saw fit to permit deeper ones, but His all sufficient grace has carried us through for which I am thankful. We thank all for every kind word and deed.

Mrs. BATHRICK.

When an official gets inflated with the idea that he is the master instead of the servant he is, or should be, near the period of collapsing. Deluded officials need to be disabused of the thought that they are to rule instead of serve. While under despotic governments officers rule; under our form they are to serve. They are the servants, the people the masters. They are not to govern, but to be governed by the people. Using their positions of influence to gratify personal ambitions without regard to the wishes or interests of the people—officials deserve impeachment—need to be turned down squelched, snuffed out. What contempt is bitter enough to pour on the governor who makes an appointment with a view to building up his own political fortune instead of bestowing it when the interest of his people are best served and their wishes gratified. Measuring by strictly moral standard how is that better than to falsify election returns? December and was found by Sheriff Brenner at Chatham, Ont., several weeks later.

His excellency Gov. Rich has incurred the displeasure of the republicans of Salem by failing to give them their ideal candidate, Cyrus G. Luce, as United States senator. Himself a farmer, and former beneficiary, officially speaking, as rail road commissioner for four years under Gov. Luce. Knowing that rarely a farmer gets to the senate and having the power to make a senator that would have ably represented the agriculturists, and having the power to reciprocate personal favor he deliberately relegated the veteran republican, his personal benefactor, the tried and proud worthy servant of the people, a pioneer in the history of the state—to the retirement of unofficial life and puts to the front the ever present lawyer—one having no personal claim on his excellency, a carpet bagger in the state, untried in official life in fact having, to ordinary vision, no apparent title to any such claim to promotion. What considerations influenced his excellency in this matter, are certainly hidden to common mortal eyes. If the Governor was a candidate for re-election today this indiscretion would cause him the loss of many ardent republican votes. A few months of time may cool the anger that is now at fever heat.
