

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

Vol. XXV, No. 43.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1894.

$1.00 per year, in advance.

Around the Country.

Prize dog fights is the newest sport at Pontiac.

Dundee, South Lyon, Detroit and Milford will celebrate.

Wayne is all torn up over the fact that the school board have declined to re-hire Miss Curtis, a catholic teacher.

A permanent dramatic company has been organized at Wayne. They style themselves the "Wayne Theatians."

Some of the Pontiac councilmen are likely to get in trouble for accepting liquor bonds when the law had not been complied with.

The life of the country printer is full of horrors. Did you ever try it, brother? Dearborn Advance.

Not for thorns. Tried it once or twice for snake-bites (ho).

When a fellow wants to get locked up at Holly he has to notify the officials a day or two previous. There is only one set of keys to the prison and unless he does this he can't get in without a tedious wait.

In speaking of the recent Dearborn vs. Ypsilanti ball game at Ypsilanti when our Harry German pitched for the Dearborn's the Advance says: "The feature of the game was German's pitching, by which he struck out 12."

The Michigan Women's Press Association held its fifth annual meeting at Ann Arbor this week. There are fifty of the dear girls in the association and at least forty-nine of them feasted on the hospitality and provenance of the university city.

During the recent races at Renton, cocaine was injected into a horse's leg that went lame. It worked like whisky on an Irishman and the animal ran away, stepped in a hole and damaged one of its legs to such an extent as to ruin it as a racer. The owner, we regret to say, was uninjured.

The fire hydrants throughout the city have been painted red. This will enable the firemen to locate the hydrants quickly and accurately, and thus save precious time. Ann Arbor Courier.

If that's what they were painted for why didn't they paint 'em white. How does the Courier think a red hydrant would look at night.

An exchange poetically speaks of the "gentle cow patiently awaiting the smiling milkmaid with shining pail." Yes, and then the gentle bossy drops the paint brush on the end of her tail into the milk and swats that smiling face till the milkmaid thinks thoughts that would turn the milk sour in a minute.

The Wayne tidings thinks it is laughable to imagine the Northville ball club will ever do up the Wayne sluggers and insinuates that even their amateurs could demoralize our boys. That's right, keep that feeling up. Northville's victory will be so much the greater and Wayne's defeat so much the sadder. Remember that "German," the Dearborn puzzle pitcher is none other than German, the Northville twirler.

While Editor Neel of the Record was engaged in chipping in a nickel for the heathen at the Methodist church, Northville, the other evening someone swapped a cheap umbrella for that elegant gold beader recently presented to him by admiring friends. So it goes! Virtue loses more reward than it gains in this world. Today we give our old clothes to be packed for the destitute Hotelots in the frigid climate of Africa, and tomorrow discover that the motus have eaten away the Columbian guard of our full dress pantaloon!—Adrian Press.

The moralizing is all right, but in this case it didn't happen to be our "gold beader." The rain protector belonged to one of the office force and it was honestly returned the next Sabbath.

The Wyandotte Herald is out with a lengthy editorial on the matter of dividing the county and making Detroit a county by itself. After showing that Wyandotte could not hope to win the county seat in any event the Herald explains the impracticability of placing it at Wayne or any other village because of not only the inconvenience in getting to and from such towns but in addition none of them could stand the expense of new buildings etc. After all the Herald is about right.

We do not for a moment think the people outside of Detroit will submit to any such a thing as some Detroiters propose, and until they do agree to it Detroit can hardly have things all her own way.

A VERY QUIET TIME

At the Council's First Meeting in June.

The council held their regular meeting Monday night and it was one of the most quiet "regulars" of the year. For the first time since Ald. Clark reported the new fire chief had not yet qualified, but now that business was not likely to confine him so closely he would attend to it as best he could. The council all agreed that something should be done and a fire department fully organized.

Wm. Taft asked to be heard relative to his water works claim. He said he had a $90 order from Lansing folks on a village for which the board would only give him $50. He said they paid the Gillespie estate $80 for their $90 claim and he didn't see why he should not get as much as they did. Ald. Clark said the matter had been left entirely with the water board and the council couldn't set it. Ald. Burgess said he didn't want to interfere with water board but would like a little information. He would like to know why they wished to get Mr. Taft's claim more than others. On motion the water board was asked to explain.

D. J. Wick gets the contract for painting street signs. His price was the same as the others, 10 cents, but his specifications called for one more coat of paint and the council seemed to like the lettering better.

Ald. Sessions spring the only real sensation of the evening by moving to reconsider the matter of putting in a sewer on South Wing street. Ald. Clark said he would like to know why this new deal. He thought the matter had been all settled. Ald. Wheeler also wanted to know why the wherefore. "Justice," replied Ald. Sessions.

Ald. Wheeler—I do not see what benefit it can be to the village to drain out.

Ald. Sessions—Now that's an old chestnut about draining cellars.

Ald. Wheeler—Mr. President, who has the floor, Mr. Sessions or myself?

President—Mr. Wheeler has the floor.

Then Ald. Wheeler went on to state that no sewerage should be put down here until it could be done right and a general system be planned all over the village. Ald. Sessions said this street was in the worst condition of any in the village. He said water stood all along the street half the time or more. During a rain it would run across the street in front of Britton's and Clarkson's places. Ald. Rayson said he had put in one and one-half days trying to clean out the ditches but it was so low they had to soon give it up. Ald. Burgess wanted to know probable cost. Ald. Sessions said their was about 50 rods and it could be let same as a tile drain. When the vote was taken the president broke the tie by voting yes and by a similar vote the prayer of the petitioners was granted and Wing street gets the sewer.

Ald. Wheeler questioned the right of Ald. Sessions to move a reconsideration of a question upon which he had previously voted with the minority, but the president ruled it as proper.

Ald. Wheeler said he had some plain talk with Mr. Slater about establishing a grade in front of his place. He said if Mr. Slater had spoken about it when the surveyor was here a week or so ago it could have been fixed at a very small expense, but now it would cost the village some $9. There was a grade map somewhere but there seemed to be no starting place and consequently it was useless.

The council reported the barbed wire fence along the Lapham property, Wing street, as being dangerous, and said it should be fixed in some way.

The town clock just then striking 10:00 a motion to adjourn was quickly carried.

Patrons of the Northville City laundry can secure baths at the rate of 50 cents per month. Gold cure patients included.

SECOND REUNION

The Yarnall Gold Cure Club's Big Meet.

AGRAND ROUND OF PLEASURE

Northville Entertains the Boys to the "Queen's Taste."

The second annual reunion of the Yarnall Gold Cure club occurred here Wednesday and it was a great big success. There were something like 100 of the members present, each looking hale, hearty and robust and each with a good word for Northville and the Yarnall Gold cure. The boys commenced to arrive Tuesday night and kept coming until 3 p.m. Wednesday. Northville entertained them in royal good style. The forenoon was devoted to general handshaking, distributing badges, programs, etc. At noon they were all taken to the homes about town where preparations had been made to satisfy the inner-man. At 1:00 Messrs Slater and Perrin & Taft sent up their livery carriages, a dozen or more, to drive the boys about the village, finally leaving them at 2:30 at the opera house where the regular business meeting was held. At 4:00 the carriages again called and conveyed them to the ball ground to witness the Plymouth vs Northville ball game. At 6:00 a banquet was given at the institute for which the band furnished the music. At 7:00 the evening program, consisting of music and readings was given followed by a general good-bye.

Everything was free to the club and nothing was too good for them. The programs were donated by the laundries and barber shops; the badges by the millinery and dry goods stores; the carriages by the two livery stables; the piano by Mr. Springer; nearly all the printing by the Record office, and badges passed the boys into the ball grounds.

Altogether it was a great day for the Yarnall people, the Gold club and Northville.

ACFOR THOMAS HAYDEN, of Brooklyn, is said to go through his parts without a flaw, though totally blind. It might be a good thing to punch out the eyes of some more of our actors.

The California "Midwinter" fair lasts till the fourth of July. To make the paradox complete there should be an exhibition when the midwinter gets the hottest an assortment of round squares all handsomely decorated with white lamp-black.

THE farm calls for fowls and the farmer must have them. He may have corn and wheat, cattle and horses, sheep and hogs, but if he hasn't a flock of poultry, to lay him eggs and to breed him early broilers, he is not farming for all it is worth and can afford to stop a little and ask why.

There is a regular boom on in Palestine. Suburbs of Jerusalem are being built out up into streets and avenues; there is talk of a line of tow-boats on the Dead sea to bring the products of the land of Moab directly to the city and save the long haul around the shores; and cannot have to limp themselves to compete with the Jaffa-Jerusalem railroad.

What is the fastest globe trotting record, anyway? It was stated awhile ago that George Francis Train made the trip around the world in sixty-four days; later it was changed to sixty-eight. And now the morning papers have it that George Griffiths, the London journalist, has just beaten the world's record of seventy-four days held by "Nelly Bly" of New York.

AN intelligent Chinaman explains that his countrymen do not worship their ancestors. "It is in this way," he says, "I have a prayer to make to our god and I make it to my father. He sends it on to his father, and so on until it reaches the first man who was made. He is naturally best acquainted with his maker, and is the best one to communicate with. This is all there is in our worship of ancestors."

No CHILDREN, it is happily proved, were burned in the great Boston fire. But half a dozen young rascals who started the conflagration by making a bonfire under the grand stand ought to be disqualified from sitting on school benches without consciousness of something wrong for a week to come. The boy in Boston is every bit as bad as his congeners in other parts of the country, and stands in as much need of acquaintance with King Solomon's text-book.

While riding a bicycle in Hartford the other day one of the most respected citizens of that town was thrown from his seat and fatally injured under the wheels of a car. The cry was, of course, gone up that the bicycle is a dangerous possession and that people would be better off without it. The fact is that the rider was rushing over the ground at a frightful rate of speed and could not stop when he found himself suddenly in the presence of danger. The wheel can't do the thinking, nor take sensible precautions, for its rider.

A FRENCH chemist, M. Barthelot, is making experiments in getting the world's food supply from the carbon and nitrogen of the atmosphere. He thinks he has discovered the process by which this may be done. Without question the air contains all but the mineral elements of human nutrition. These can hardly be got without recourse to the soil. Therefore, so long as we have bodies there must be bony frames that cannot come from the air as they will not return to air when men die. The work of the farmer is therefore not likely to be dispensed with for awhile yet. Living on air seems more suggestive of the purely spiritual existence than can human life be in the world as it exists now.

The monument to the mother of Washington unveiled at Fredericksburg, Va., is not the gift of the nation, the funds for building it and putting it in place having been raised by the exertion of a few patriotic women who interested others in the project. That the grave should go so long unmarked is no reflection on Washington himself. When Washington's mother died there were so many expressions of public sympathy with them and of respect for her that it was not strange that congress should have given ground for the belief that her monument would be erected by the nation. It has been assumed because Mrs. Washington preferred a quiet life that she was in reduced circumstances at the time of her death. Such was not the fact, as she disposed of considerable property by her will.

From the recent interviews which London papers have held with Mr. Rudyard Kipling the impression is gained that Mr. Kipling's impression of the American social, political and economic system is derived from a fruitless study of cheeky cabmen and New England pie.

The manager of a comic opera prima donna who has lately gained much prominence by her matrimonial troubles says that she has just passed her 38th birthday. She is now going on toward 32.

A PANE OF GLASS.

"I am very sorry, Fred. I had got to like the girl very much, and she had been very faithful to her duties and a good saleswoman, and all that—but I cannot permit this pilfering to go on. It will lead to something worse before long. I think the best way to save her feelings will be just to tell her at the end of the week that we don't require her services any longer, and in that way get quietly rid of her without any direct accusation. You know we took her solely upon her own recommendation, without asking for any references—in fact, I'll do her the justice to admit that she frankly told us she could not furnish any, being a stranger in the place. But this stealing has been going on for a month now, and as we are now or can find out, she is the first one here in the morning, and is here alone long enough to give her an opportunity to help herself. Another thing I have noticed, and that is that she has had several little trunks lately, which seem to me decidedly more extravagant than a girl with her means could afford to indulge in, unless she has come by them through such means as I begin to fear she is guilty of."

Fred bit his lip and was silent. It would not have helped the case at all for him to have told his father just then that he knew the source from whence she had derived those little trunks, which he had contrived to come by so far in such a way that she would not be able to detect it. He had not the courage to do this, and so he had decided to let her go, and which it had afforded him such delight to see her wear little dresses in the time that they should only serve as an additional means of strengthening suspicion against her.

He had been only waiting a favorable opportunity to speak to her of his feelings, and assure himself of her sentiments, before telling his father of the hopes he had been cherishing; but he feared that opportunity arrived this unexpected trouble and threatened disclosure had cast a shadow over the fair name of the girl he secretly loved.

"I'll stake my life, father, that she has not a trinket about her but what is honestly come by," he exclaimed, after a moment's embarrassed silence. "And she is a thoroughly honest and trustworthy girl. Don't discharge her this week, father. Give her—give her one week more and let me see if I cannot discover the thief. I promise that if I find it is indeed she, I will not try to shield her. But let me have that much time to try and discover the real culprit."

"I don't see how you are going to do it," replied Mr. Adams, looking around the apartment. "There is no way that I can see but of getting her ahead of the thief, whoever it is—and, of course, the money will not be taken with you looking on, and there is no way for you to conceal yourself in the room here. You know I have been accustomed to leave money in that drawer, for the convenience of getting change if it should be needed, before I get down in the morning, and nobody knows but you that I am in the habit of coming in every night before leaving, and that for the last month it has not balanced with the cashier's account, but constantly shows a deficiency. It must be taken in the morning, before we get here, and Miss Allen is, as she has said herself, the first one here—indeed, she has a key of her own, so that she can get in as early as she pleases."

Fred's eyes had been roving round the room while his father was speaking. There was, as he said, no possible chance for his concealing himself anywhere in the room without making the fact of that concealment evident, and thus defeating his purpose; but as he glanced over at the desk, which stood at the opposite side of the room, near the window, and in one drawer of which was kept the money for such miscellaneous expenses as postage, telegrams, and other incidental small expenditures, and from which sums that could not be accounted for had been missing for a month past, his face lightened. The window faced another window of a large building, the side of which was separated only by a narrow court, and which was for the time vacant, and a suggestion occurred to him, which he seized upon at once.

"I'll admit it does look black against her, father," he said. "But I believe I can find a way in a week's time either to vindicate her or prove that your suspicions are just, though I believe that it will vindicate her. Just let me have one more week, and if I don't discover the culprit by that time I will make no further plea."

"All right, my boy," said Mr. Adams, smiling, and perhaps not altogether without an intuition as to the cause of his son's earnestness. "I can stand the loss of a few pounds more, I guess. Find the culprit and you may name your own reward."

"I don't desire any reward," replied Fred.

and his son entered the establishment.

Both gentlemen looked serious; but on Fred's face was also clearly manifest a look of triumphant satisfaction.

"Young ladies," said Mr. Adams, addressing his employees: "I have rather an unpleasant subject to introduce this morning, but it is not of my choosing, and I would prefer to give you an opportunity to acknowledge your action to me before I charge you with it. Which of you is first here in the morning?"

"I believe I am, sir," answered Margery, to which the others assented.

"Well, I am sorry to report that for some time past I have been missing small sums of money from the drawer where I keep the change for incidental expenses, and to which you all have access as occasion requires," continued Mr. Adams. "Now, I will put it to you, Miss Allen, do you know anything in regard to the missing money?"

"I do not, sir," she replied, lifting her eyes to his face, with a look of perfect innocence and truthfulness, while Fred, in his delight and joy, could scarcely restrain himself from hugging her on the spot.

"Miss Wilson, do you—of you, Miss Douglas—or you, Miss Perry?"

A most emphatic denial was the unanimous response.

"Well," said Mr. Adams, "it seems that we must resort to some other means to ascertain the culprit. What have you to say, Fred?"

"Merely to ask the young ladies if any of them recognize any one they know in this," responded Fred, drawing out a small plate and laying it before them. There was an excellent photograph of the interior of the room, and handing over the open drawer of the desk, in the act of taking some sheet from it was the unmistakable pale, face and figure of Lottie Wilson.

With a startled cry she drew back, covering her burning face with her hands.

"If you will tell me the whole story I will let you off with no greater punishment than being discharged from my service," said Mr. Adams, sternly. "Otherwise, I shall call an officer and hand you over to him forthwith."

Overcome with terror at this threat, Lottie sobbingly confessed that she had been the thief, having coaxed the housekeeper to let her in on the plea that she wanted to get to work early, and then slipping out again, and not returning until after Margery had arrived, so that if the theft was discovered, suspicion would fall on her. Mr. Adams heard her to the end, then, quietly requesting her to get her hat and cloak, attended her to the door and bowed her out, then returning to Margery, who was standing apart from the rest, he said, in a tone of more than wondrous kindness:

"There is a little story connected with this discovery, which there is not a fitting opportunity to tell here; but if you will allow me to escort you to our house this evening to dinner, I will be happy to make you acquainted with my wife, and you can hear the sequel of this affair."

Margery bowed too happy to speak after she glanced back from Fred's eyes, and went back to her duties with a heart bounding high. At the appointed hour Fred accompanied her to his home, where, after being introduced to his mother, who took the orphan girl to her heart and embrace, at once they told her the story.

The moment I looked at that window of the building opposite," Fred said in conclusion, "it occurred to me that I might make use of it as a point, not only of observation, but from which I could obtain a view of the place and the culprit. By investigation and experimenting I found that I could place myself in the room accurately. And I had a glass put up—leaving only one pane of glass exposed, in front of which I could place my machine, and do the work without being seen. I returned. I was there this morning by daylight, arranged my apparatus, and, about half an hour before your time of coming, the door opened and Lottie Wilson came in. I waited until she was in the very act of taking the money, as you see, and then secured my snap-shot that vindicated your suspicions, and has made me the happiest man alive—all by the aid of that blessed pane of glass."

He had not intended to make his avowal of love in such a fashion, but his joy and affection burst from him simultaneously, and the next moment he had her in his rapturous embrace, from which she made no effort to disengage herself.

SPEND YOUR OUTING ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Visit picturesque Mackinac Island. It will only cost you about $12.50 from Detroit; $15 from Toledo; $18 from Cleveland, for the round trip, including meals and berths. Avoid the heat and dust by traveling on the D. & C. floating palaces. The attractions of a trip to the Mackinac region are unsurpassed. The island itself is a grand romantic spot, its climate most invigorating. Two new steel passenger steamers have just been built for the upper lake route, costing $300,000 each. They are equipped with every modern convenience, announcements, bath-rooms, etc., illuminated throughout by electricity, and are guaranteed to be the grandest, largest and safest steamers on the fresh water. These steamers favorably compare with the great ocean liners in construction and speed. Four trips per week between Toledo, Detroit, Alpena, Mackinac, St. Ignace, Petoskey, Chicago, "Soer," Marquette and Duluth. Daily between Cleveland and Put-in-Bay. The cabins, parlors and staterooms of these steamers are designed for the complete entertainment of humanity under home conditions; the palatial equipment, the luxury of the appointments, makes traveling on these steamers thoroughly enjoyable. ADULTERATED WINE is injurious, but nothing gives strength and tones up the stomach like a pure old port wine. "Royal Ruby Port," so called for its royal taste and ruby color, is on account of its purity, age and strength, particularly adapted for invalids, convalescents and the aged. Sold only in bottles (never in bulk) while cheap wine is sold by the gallon and gives a larger profit to the seller but less to the user. This wine is absolutely pure, and has the age without which no wine is fit to use. Be sure you get "Royal Ruby," quart bottles $1, pints 60 cts. Sold by C. R. STEVENS.

One of Chandler's multi-chromes prettily framed is in Purdy's window. It's the reward for the best guesser.

The Northville band has received an invitation to enter the tournament contest at Ovid in August. Our band was probably never in better condition than today. They are sixteen of the boys all newly uniformed; they have one of the best leaders in the state and the drum major is a hummer. If they go to Ovid, they may be expected to bring home one or more prizes.

Another big improvement is going up on Main street. Jas. Slater has commenced the erection of a large two-story high, running forty-eight feet back with a frontage of nearly fifty feet. Mr. Slater expects to have the building complete by July 10. It will cost something like $1,000 and be furnished with modern equipments.

Novi people are very much put out about the Northville marshal hauling up their Mr. Palmer's meat wagon and demanding a $2 license last week for peddling meat in the village. They claim the Northville meat wagons work their town for all it's worth and it's hardly fair play they think, though the ordinance says it's proper. First thing we know all of Novi will boycott Northville merchants.

After a thorough renovation, the Methodist church will be re-opened next Sunday. The service at 10:30 a. m. will be devoted to receiving the probationers into full connection in the church and will be a time of interest. All the other services as usual. Let it be a genuine rally day by all who claim to be Methodists to all the services. A special thank offering toward the expense of renovation can be made by any who are willing to help.

We acknowledge receipt of twenty-five cents from L. Charter towards the band benefit. The amount has now reached $38.10. Those having the matter in charge have scored another hit by contracting with B. Freydl, Northville's popular merchant tailor, to make fifteen pair of pants. With the exception of what the cloth costs the whole amount will again be turned back into Northville business again. The pants will be ready for the band boys by June 23.

The sad news was received here Monday of the death of Mrs. Horace W. Bennett at Denver, Colorado. Mrs. Bennett was formerly Eva Thompson, daughter of John J. Thompson of this village. She was thirty-four years of age and had been married about twelve years. Mr. Bennett formerly lived at Brighton and Milford until his marriage some twelve years ago, since when they have resided in Denver. Two children, a boy of nine and a girl of six are left to the care of the sorrowing husband.

One of our local pastors has received the very tempting offer of $2,000 a year to fill a pulpit in one of our well-known cities.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Power died in Detroit yesterday morning. Undertaker Porter went in to care for the remains, and the funeral will be held here tomorrow.

Still another Arrangements are being made for another band benefit entertainment at the opera house next week Friday night. The services of "Billy" Baier, Michigan's celebrated ballad singer, and his daughter Lottie A. Baier, one of the best soloists in the country, have been secured for the occasion, as has also a well-known reader. This entertainment will be in keeping with the two previous ones and besides helping for a good cause our people will enjoy another treat.

In talking with the farmers in this section we find they have as a rule soured on Gov. Rich to a great extent. Especially was this apparent when Lawyer Patten (instead of Luce) was appointed to succeed Senator Stockbridge. The farmers, the soldier boys and workmen generally would like to see Mayor Pingree nominated. A man who can run the affairs of a great city like Detroit in the wise manner that Pingree has done will make a good candidate for governor of Michigan.

J. Nett Huyette who will assist Mrs. Blodgett in the piano recital given by her pupils June 12th has been almost totally blind from his birth. In his earliest youth he showed such remarkable talent for music and had such a passionate longing to become a musician that his mother determined to devote herself to his education and to supply the lack which threatened to ruin his life. With tireless patience she read his notes for him, sounding them upon the piano for him to feel out upon the strings of his violin, and at nine years of age—since the gift of tone and pitch were his by birthright—he had acquired what many must needs devote years to obtain. Later on, skillful oculists succeeded in restoring partially his sight, but still he is alone in semi-darkness, with his notes for companions, and he lives with them, as individuals or groups, knowing them by ear, by heart and by nature. The following is taken from the Free Press of Dec. 19: "Mr. Huyette is a violinist of great talent. He is essentially progressive. His bowing is admirable and the young man never tires of playing. The fact that Mr. Huyette played most acceptably the first movement of the great Joachim concert (never before given in this city) is sufficient testimony of his technical proficiency."

The Editorial Pilgrimage.

A rare treat is offered to members of the Michigan Press Association this year in their annual outing, the third week in July. The excursion is to cover a ten-days trip, and in that brief time the excursionists will have a look at the St. Clair tunnel, spend several hours at Toronto, go down the St. Lawrence, through the rapids and past the far-famed Thousand Islands, visit Montreal and Quebec, and the White Mountains, spend one day at Portland, Maine, view the Atlantic from Old Orchard Beach, and see the sights of Boston. The privilege of participating in the excursion is limited to members of the Association and their families, and it is probable that a large number will avail themselves of it.

A DOMESTIC EPISODE

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Amsterdam are a young married couple living up in Harlem. They live in a large flat house in which there are a number of other families. One evening, not long ago, Mr. Pete Amsterdam was in the sitting room awaiting the return of his wife, who had gone to visit a friend in the neighborhood. She returned about nine o'clock, and apparently in the best of humor, for she was laughing when she entered the room.

"He—You must have had a jolly time of it, Eliza."

She (still laughing)—"I'll bet anything in the world you can guess what I am laughing about. O, it was too funny for anything! And before removing her hat and cloak she sat down in a chair and took another hearty laugh."

"I haven't the slightest idea what you are laughing about."

"Well, I'll tell you at once, and release your curiosity. Mr. Van Duzen boxed his wife's ears."

"It's not possible—not before everybody?"

"Yes, he did. He gave her such a box on the ear at the supper table that some of the company covered up their heads with the napkins for fear of being hit by the flying splinters. It sounded like hitting a beefsteak with the flat side of an ax, or blowing open a safe. He wanted the lamp on the right side of the table on account of his weak eyes. She wanted to put it on the left side of the table so she could the better show off her diamonds. He pulled the lamp over to the right and she pulled it back to the left. They did that half a dozen times until I was afraid the lamp would explode. At last, once she grabbed up the lamp and set it down in the middle of a big dish of spinach; then she caught it fair and square on the left cheek. I had to laugh at her stupid look when she switched her face. But I was not angry at him, for I think that the man who strikes a woman is a miserable coward."

"O, yes, very often he is."

"Very often. No, sir, the man who strikes a woman is always a wretched coward."

"But suppose she expiates him beyond endurance? There are such women."

"Have you got the hardihood to defend that brute, Van Duzen, for brutally assaulting his wife?"

"By no means. All I say is, that there are cases where a woman ought to be flogged against the wall until she adheres to it."

"By saying that there are such cases, do you wish to bring about that sort of a crisis in this family, eh?"

"Great heavens! no, not even in a dream do I want to put such a cataclysm in motion."

"What do you mean by laughing in that hideous manner?"

"I am laughing at the idea of Van Duzen cuffing his wife's ears."

"He's a brute, and you are no better. You men are always upholding each other in your devilish falsity. I suppose you would like to follow his example and box my ears."

"No, I would not proceed to such extreme measures, although you do love to quarrel sometimes."

"Do you dare to intimate that under any circumstances you would box my ears?"

"Oh, no, I'd be afraid to take any such risks, although you are very provoking at times."

"Do you say that I—I am provoking?"

"That I like to dispute."

"My dear, be calm; don't you remember how you teased this morning that Southern actor, is blond?"

"And so he is."

"But I tell you he has dark hair and dark eyes."

"And I tell you that he is blond," she screamed.

"All right; it's just as you say; but please don't box my ears," he retorted.

"You needn't try any of your feeble mimicry on me."

"Once more I say you are right. His dark hair has turned into a beautiful old gold, just because you say so. You could be bottled up and sold for hair dye; you would be a source of revenue."

"If you were a gentleman, which you are not—never was, and never will be—you would have admitted your mistake and asked my pardon; but that is more than can be expected of you. Nobody can make a silk purse out of a pig's ear."

"Thank you, dear. Now, if you have no objection, we will close the debate."

"I'd like to know how you come to know so much about that actor, Southern. I wonder if you are not in the habit of going behind the scenes and associating with actors and actresses, instead of spending your time with your family?"

Mr. Amsterdam sighed heavily, and turned his eyes up to the ceiling.

"That's right. Keep your mouth shut. Don't give yourself away. Don't answer any of my questions. You believe in the motto: 'Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no lies.'"

"I am not feeling well, and if you would only give me a partial rest I would regard it in the light of a price-less boon."

"I think you might make a feeble effort to act the part of a gentleman."

"You said a while ago that it was impossible for me to do so. What is the use of trying? What would you think of the if I were to expect you to quit quarreling for a whole day?"

"He raised into the next room with a gesture of despair. She followed him up, and said laughingly:

"Oh, yes; you thought it was something grand and noble for Van Duzen to box his wife's ears. Now, let me warn you, here, don't let yourself be tempted to ever raise your hand to me, or I'll—"

"He said nothing, but he walked out into the kitchen and glanced out into the darkness."

"Oh, yes, gnash your teeth as much as you please, and shrug your shoulders if you feel like it, but don't you ever lay your hands on me or I'll—"

He turned to walk into the next room. She got in front of him, and shaking her finger under his nose, she said:

"Just touch me, you dare, you pitiful brute! You think because I am a poor, weak, feeble woman, who never says anything to anybody, that you can trample me underfoot; but I tell you Pete, beware! Beware! Even the worm that is tread on will turn."

"Please don't goggle my eye out. You have been holding your finger in my eye for the last two minutes," he said, pushing away her hand.

"I tell you that Southern is blond. You can murder me if you want to, but he is blond, blond, blond. Do you hear, you sneak?"

"He went into the hall and began to go up the steps to get out on the roof. She followed him up the steps, saying to him:

"I suppose you are going to pay a visit to those other brutes who beat their wives. Beat me, I just dare you to beat me, you cowardly brute!"

He did not reply, but kept on up the stairs. She followed him and crying:

"He is a blond; now box my ears if you dare."

He had reached the top floor and was gasping for fresh air. She said:

"Yes; now that you have lured me up to the top floor, where there are no witnesses, touch me if you dare."

"You will drive me crazy, Eliza. Will you keep your mouth shut for a little while?"

"He is a blond, I say."

"Don't say that again."

"He is a blond, blond, blond."

"For the third and last time, shut up," he roared, angrily.

"He is a blond."

"Bang! There was a sudden explosive sound like the abrupt shutting of a door. He had given her a boxed ear that deserved to be printed in big capitals. She burst into tears and covered her face with her hands. The sudden shock had beneficial effect on her nerves."

"I beg your pardon ten thousand times. I did it before I thought. Forgive me," said Pete.

"No," she sobbed; "it was all my fault. I will never do it again. Besides I was mistaken. I mistook the actor Southern with Nat Goodwin."

P. S.—The noise of the boxed ear was so loud that the people living on the top floor came out into the hallway, where they saw the husband and wife busily engaged in kissing each other.

Next day the lady living on the third floor remarked:

"That Mrs. Amsterdam is the most affectionate woman I ever saw. He can't go up to the roof at night to shut down the trap-door without her following him and sobbing over him. I should think it would sicken him."

REVIVED JUST IN TIME.

An Alabama Doctor's Narrow Escape From Being Buried Alive.

From Thomasville, a thriving little town on the Mobile & Birmingham road, 102 miles north of this place, says the Mobile Register, comes a story that is heard but seldom and then too much credence cannot be placed therefor, for nine times out of ten there is a certain prerogative or a knack of distorting and stretching the facts that knocks the truth out of the tale. But here is a true story. Last Sunday morning there died, of an apparent apoplexy, at Thomasville, a well known physician of that place—Dr. John W. Brand. He had lately returned from Randolph county, and was about sixty-five years of age. He suffered several weeks from various complications, and finally the watchers at his bedside, one of whom was his son, saw him draw, apparently, his last breath and sink into the unconsciousness of death. The body was taken charge of by his friends, washed and dressed in the customary shroud, and laid out in the parlor. An hour or two later the few friends seated in the room with the corpse noticed a slight twitching of the fingers of the deceased. They were somewhat startled, but did not lose their self-possession and did not from the room, as is ordinary under such circumstances. Instead they remained to the side of the doctor and watched him closely. Then a movement of almost the entire body was noticed—a slight convulsion, in fact. Then two pieces of money that had been placed over the eyes of the dead man fell off, and he made an effort to open his eyes. This satisfied those gathered around him that life was still within the remains and the body was tenderly carried back to the bed from which he had been removed a short while before, a supposed corpse. Dr. Brand received every care and he slowly revived. His first words, when apprised of his condition, were:

"How long was I dead?"

All preparations for the removal of the body to his home in Randolph county had been made by the son of Dr. Brand, and it was arranged to ship the remains by the Mobile & Birmingham train that passed Thomasville Sunday night. Dr. Brand's daughter was at the Selma depot to receive the body of her father, but instead was rejoiced to receive the welcome news that her parent was still alive.

Machine Equestrian Exercise.

An apparatus by which both the expense and difficulty of riding on a live horse are avoided has been on view for some days past to the medical profession. This invention consists of a saddle mounted on a stand, the interior works of which are so arranged that with a minimum of exertion on the part of the rider he may reproduce the trotting and galloping motions of a horse. Mounting astride of the horse, the rider places his feet on supports at the sides, which can be raised to any level and which correspond to stirrups in ordinary riding. In front of him are two handles which can be also raised or lowered, thus bringing the muscles of the arms and chest into action. The whole saddle can be also raised or lowered, thus giving an easy trot or gallop at the will of the "horseman." The rider puts the horse into motion by his movements up and down. Thus the apparatus is different from the mechanical horse exhibited some years back, in which the horse was moved by a piston in the center of its body, which was worked by a steam engine beneath the floor. The experiment is very ingenious, but it will remain to be seen if the public will prefer the invention to genuine horse exercise in the open air.—London Lancet.

A WOMAN'S TROUBLE.

A WISCONSIN LADY WRITES TO THE PRESS.

Tells About Trials That Afflicted Her For Years and of Her Release From Terrible Sufferings—Death Seemed Inevitable.

The following letter has been forwarded by its writer, Mrs. George Reany, to the press for publication.

AMARANT, Wis., May 24, 1894.

To Mrs. Burton—Dear Sir: I have read several accounts of wonderful cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills. I have been in poor health for seventeen years—suffering all the time. Have taken medicine for lung disease, liver and stomach trouble, heart disease and female complaint. Every physician had some different name for my disease. Did they cure me? No, I was getting worse all the time. I began taking patent medicines of every kind that was recommended for those troubles the doctors claimed I had. I sent to Buffalo, New York, Brooklyn, etc., for electric belts, stomach pads, and medicines, and everything was a failure. I was bloated all the time and so short of breath and weak that I could not safely leave home. If I went to visit a neighbor I would be certain to take a weak spell and sometimes had great difficulty to get home. I would be so bloated that I could not bear my clothes on, and my nerves were in a dreadful state all the time. My eyesight almost failed me and I could get no relief except when I would refrain from eating or drinking. I was starving myself all summer. If I ate the least thing or took a drink of water, I would suffer for days. Could not sleep at night; even on hot nights in summer I had to have a fire on and sit with my feet in hot mustard water to keep me from freezing. I had terrible painful spells and nervous hysteria until I would think I could die no longer. My sufferings were dreadful and I was weak and almost starved to death when I read in the Shelburne Free Press of the wonderful cures made by Dodd's Kidney Pills. I sent to Toronto for two boxes. The first box I took relieved me of all the bloating and full feeling in my stomach, and I began to eat and sleep. I sent for more pills, and have now taken six boxes and I can say that I feel like living once more. Am able to visit my neighbors, and can walk quite a distance. It is just one month since I began to go out, and I feel satisfied if I had not taken Dodd's Kidney Pills I could have lived but a short time longer. My back and kidneys were sore all the time and my head felt so I thought I would go crazy. I thank God for the relief given me, and I also thank the maker of Dodd's Kidney Pills, as I owe my life to them. During the seventeen years I was ill I was never told by any doctor, either in Canada or this country, that I had kidney trouble—now I know by experience that that was the cause of all my suffering. I send you this information that it may benefit others. Dodd's Kidney Pills are, in my estimation, worth their weight in gold.

Yours respectfully,
Mrs. GEORGE REANY,
2111 East Third street,
Ashland, Wis.

Any one who can not procure these pills from his local druggist may obtain them by writing the Dodd's Medicine Company, Ltd., Buffalo, N. Y., or Toronto, Canada. (Buyers should be careful to see that they get the genuine Dodd's Kidney Pills—there are unfortunately some imitations on the market.) Sent postpaid on receipt of price: 50 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50.

SPLENDID HORSEMEN.

Magyar Caiskos Equally Accomplished With the American Cowboy.

Picturesquely arrayed in a white linen, wide-sleeved smock or shirt, embroidered in vivid colors; in loose white zouave pantaloons, tucked into high boots, and with a bunch of puszta grass and a peacock's or baron's feather in the band of his white-brimmed hat, the Magyar Caiskos presents the European counterpart of the North American cowboy, or the South American gaucho and of the African Bedaween. His life, says a writer in the New York Tribune, is spent on the vast "pusztas," or prairies of Hungary in tending the great herds of semi-wild horses, the breeding of which constitutes one of the most profitable and staple features of Magyar industry. While the summer lasts he often suffers thirst—that thirst which is one of the terrors of prairie and desert life—while his food, which he carries about with him in the little two-wheeled canvas-covered cart, which is his only dwelling place, frequently gives out, and he has to wait for many days sometimes before the purveyor of the Caiskos comes on his round to replenish the stock of all the scattered members of this strange brotherhood. Courageous, robust, indifferent to both extreme cold and overpowering heat, the Caiskos is as a rule of middle height, with well-outlined features, a dark skin, bright and intelligent black eyes and the long-pointed mustache known throughout all Europe as "la moustache Hongroise."

He wields the lasso with just as much mastery as does the gaucho, and, to my mind, surpasses both the latter and the Western cowboy in horsemanship. A perfect rider, he breaks in the colts belonging to his herd without the assistance of either curb, saddle, rein, bit or whip, simply slinging a rope halter over the young animal's head, he conquers him by the iron pressure of his muscular legs and the magical skill with which he polices his body on the back of the fretting, curvetting steed. The employers of the Caiskos are the emperor and the great nobles. One of the favorite pastimes of the Austrian, and especially of the Hungarian, aristocracy, is horsebreeding on a most extensive scale. About four-fifths of the horses of the imperial cavalry come from Hungary, and it is estimated that with the present breeding stock that country could export from 50,000 to 60,000 horses annually. These Hungarian horses are very strong, with great stamina, and can stand fatigue combined with short rations better than most horses bred elsewhere, while as cavalry mounts they are unsurpassed. The oldest and largest stud farm in Hungary is Mezőhegyes, which comprises 40,000 acres. It was founded as a royal stud in 1785, and here for more than a century various well established types of horses have been formed by crossing different breeds, by the effect of climatic conditions, food, etc. In Hungary alone there are in all 150 private stud farms—a very good proof indeed that the government horse-breeding establishments by no means interfere with individual enterprise.

A Bridge Built by the Devil.

Near Aberystwyth, on the west coast of Wales, where the Monk river flows through a black, yawning abyss, there is a single arch bridge of unknown antiquity. The popular legend says that it was built by the devil, and far and near it is known as "The Bridge of Devils" or "The Bridge of the Evil Man." British antiquarians are united in the belief that it was built by the early monks, but that fact does not affect the popular legend in the least. "Old Harry's" part in its erection being never questioned by the inhabitants of Cardiganshire. Grose says that "the bridge is an honor to the hand that built it, whether that hand be Satan's or that of some monk."—St. Louis Republic.

Now It Is the Telephone That Is Old.

It is reported that an English officer named Harrington has discovered in India a working telephone between the two temples of Panj about a mile apart. The system is said to have been in operation at Panj for over 2,000 years. Egyptologists have found unmistakable evidence of wire communications between some of the temples of the earlier Egyptian dynasties, but whether these served a telegraphic, telephonic or other purpose is not stated.

Tea That Is Tea.

The ordinary Oolong tea, costing 60 or 70 cents a pound, has a capacity of about 110 half-pint cups to the pound, while the same amount of Ceylon, silver-tipped tea, costing $32, will supply over 1,500 half-pint cups, and in addition the beverage is vastly superior to that of common brands. The intrinsic value of imported teas rarely exceeds that of figure, but in certain instances, where the tea market has been cornered, as high as $175 for a pound has been paid in London.

Buddhists and Christians.

It is said that the Buddhists of Japan are awaking to the fact that they must have a statement of the elements of the Buddhist faith to set over against the definite and compact creed of the Christian teachers, and are debating what they will put into this statement.

The Russians' Sacred Icons.

The manufacture of icons, the sacred images so universally venerated by orthodox Russians, is one of the largest household industries of Central Russia, where 2,000,000 are turned out every year.

LINCOLN'S FEE.

Illustrates the Scrupulous Honesty of the Martyr President.

An interesting anecdote of Lincoln's scrupulous honesty as a lawyer is related in a recent number of the Century.

Two men had been accused of murder, and the trial was being conducted before Judge David Davis, one man being defended by Lincoln and the other by Leonard Swett, a prominent lawyer of that day. The judge and the two lawyers were personal friends, and meeting one evening in the rooms of the former, Lincoln was moved to speak his opinion frankly of the case in hand.

"We have been engaged in this trial for two days," he said, "and I am satisfied that our clients are guilty, and that the witnesses for the state have told the truth. It is my opinion that the best thing we can do for our clients is to have them come in to-morrow morning and plead guilty to man slaughter, and let Davis give them the lowest punishment."

But Mr. Swett did not concur in this opinion, and declared his intention to continue fighting the case to the last, adding that he had evidence in reserve of which Lincoln did not know, which would counteract the effect of that of the state's witnesses.

"I don't care what evidence you have got, Swett," was the reply, "the witnesses for the state have told the truth, and the jury will believe them."

However, as Swett would not consent to a plea of guilty the trial went on, but when the time came for arguments, Lincoln turned to him, saying:

"Now, Swett, I cannot argue this case because our witnesses have been lying, and I don't believe them. You go on and make an argument."

Swett did so, and when the case went to the jury, that body were of his opinion, not Lincoln's, and the accused were triumphantly acquitted. But the next day Lincoln came to his friend with a check in his hand, and said to him quietly:

"Swett, here is the five hundred dollars which I have received for defending one of these men. It all belongs to you; take it."

Five hundred dollars was an important sum to Lincoln at that period of his life, but feeling that his advice upon followed his client would have suffered, he wished immediately to pay over the money to the man whose persistence in an opposite course had saved him.

Whether the decision of the jury had shaken his faith in the man's faith in the man's guilt—of which, beyond his personal instinct, he had of course no further evidence than was laid before the court—does not directly appear; but at any rate, on Mr. Swett's determined refusal to accept the money it finally remained in his hands.

In the Beerest City in Germany.

There has been organized, in Munich, which is known as the beerest city in Germany, a branch of the National association against the abuse of alcoholic drinks. Privy Councillor von Petteikofer has been elected its president and Professor Dr. Voit and Bollinger are the vice presidents. Noted ecclesiastics, including the Archbishop von Thoma and high military officers are among the promoters. The leaders of the movement emphasize the fact that the use of beer when it reaches a point such as it has in Bavaria gradually undermines the resistibility of the body and the mental energy, and that therefore both from an economical and humanitarian point of view the consumption of beer ought to be restricted.

Our Friends, the Birds.

Those who have made a study of bird habits say that birds of almost all sorts are rather the friends than the enemies of farmers and gardeners. Not only do the song birds by destroying insects earn their right to eat a few berries, but even the crow that generations of farmers have scared and killed, is said to prefer insects to corn, and often to be in the very act of destroying pests when farmers suppose him to be maliciously bent on undoing the work of the sower.

And Snider Is Out.

The assistance of a Louisville alderman was invoked by Miguel Snider in the collection of a claim of $10 against Meyer Bans. The latter's brother courted Sarah Annis in vain. Meyer loved her, too, and engaged Snider to court her for him. Miguel says he spent three full days in the effort before he obtained her consent to sign a license application with Bans. Now the latter refuses to pay and the alderman declines to compel him to do so.

Japan Forging Ahead.

It is a matter of singular interest that Japan is now manufacturing modern war material for the use of Western nations. Six guns manufactured at the Japanese arsenal at Osaka have been supplied to the Portuguese government. A month or so since a British firm took the first steps in the establishment of a watchmaking concern in Japan for the manufacture by Japanese workmen of watches for Western markets.

Cured Instantly.

The quickest cure on record in the Bellevue hospital, New York, was that of Jennie Kievanaky, who was suffering with hysterical hiccoughs. On her way to the alcohol ward in charge of an attendant, a nurse encountered with a straight-jacket. The woman shrieked and declared that she was cured. She had stopped hiccoughing and was immediately discharged.

FAILURE.

THE OLD MEANS FAIL, BUT NOT THE NEW.

SUCCESSFUL.

The Physician Replaced by the Specific, and the Latter has Always Proven a Friend in Need.

Mr. Stewart Vaughan, of Cottam, Ontario, like all wise persons who are taken suddenly ill and know of no remedy to help and assist them to return to health, consults his physician. The doctor prescribes (as all doctors do), but like the thousands of cases of kidney troubles the physician fails to give relief; the advice of the physician failing, Mr. Vaughan accepts the counsel of his friends, and now in his gratitude he wants the world to know of the remedy which has given him a new lease of life. These are his own words: "About fifteen years ago I severely strained myself, which brought on an attack of kidney trouble. I could do nothing in the shape of work. I tried my family physician, and numerous remedies, but I heard about the all without any permanent effect. I commenced to think that I would always have to suffer, as nothing seemed to give me any lasting relief. In conversation with a friend who had been troubled similarly, he told me that Dodd's Kidney Pills had cured him. I got some and commenced their use. They relieved me immediately, and the trouble did not come back. This was about eight years ago, and I have only felt the old symptoms once or twice since that time, which a few doses of the pills instantly dispelled. Since using them myself, I have heard of other cases where they were not successful as in my case. Dodd's Kidney Pills are sold for 25 cents per box, or six boxes for $2.50. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y., Sole Agents for the United States. Sent by mail on receipt of price. Free sent by all dealers."

New York, with an assessed valuation of $5,500,000,000, is the richest state in the union. Pennsylvania is next with a valuation of $5,000,000,000. The Chinese policemen in Hongkong "struck" against certain restrictions. They smashed furniture and tore down sign boards before they were pacified.

That Tired Feeling.

"I was troubled with diabetes and tried several doctors and different medicines without avail. After taking three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I had a good appetite, and was free from that tired feeling. I honestly believe if it had not been for Hood's Sarsaparilla I would have been dead some time since."

Hood's Sarsaparilla is purely vegetable, and does not purge, pain or gripe. Sold by all druggists.

Novi actually had a show the other day. A real show. fat woman, snake charmer, punch and judy and all the whole business to be seen for ten cents. A good many went and returned home disgusted.

Miss Lillian Tingle went up to J. A. Smith's Monday where she will spend most of the week and left us two orphans to shift for ourselves, but we know how to get there (we are one of the orphans, A. A. K.).

The ice cream and strawberry social at O. M. Whipple's last week Friday evening was, in the words of one of the participants, "a howling success." The gross receipts were about $14 to say nothing of the good time enjoyed.

Dogs are very intelligent animals when properly trained and when sent on an errand will return very quickly, so says Jim. One called there and he making a mistake tied a parcel on the wrong end of the dog, but he never came back.

Again the time for snake stories has appeared. We notice at Wayne that some of the inhabitants indulge in that pleasure (?) a great deal. We are glad to say our editor has not told a single snake story yet, though should he, we know he will tell the "exact" number killed. (Sure thing. If there's one thing we are particular about getting correct it's snake stories.)

Children's day services will be held next Sunday morning at the Baptist church and at the Methodist church in the evening. If the decorations and exercises are as pretty as they were last year at both churches they will be well worth taking in.

Hustle up with your lightning railroad, Farmington. Novi is anxious to have it "strike" your town, for then we'll begin proceedings to have it "go west" about five miles farther. Lots of Novi folks who want to go to Detroit once in a while are just aching for a chance to be independent of the F. & P. M. with its aggravating "through" trains.

Some of them measure two and one-half inches across. They attract a great deal of attention from passers by and several persons have tried to induce the owner to sell them. She raises them from the seed.

The photographic concert given last Friday night by B. B. Bennett was quite well attended. Owing to an accident the bills were delayed almost a week so that they were not out until the day before the concert when they should have been out the week before. Nevertheless the entertainment "was fine and will be repeated in the Methodist church in the course of the summer, or as soon as Mr. B. returns from a trip through northern Michigan. When he comes again the church should be well filled for all certainly will be repaid for going.

Following unions were represented: Plymouth, Northville, South Lyon, Redford, Milford, Highland, Salem and Summit. A number of pastors were present, some of them from other denominations. Both sessions were well attended. W. B. Mosier the president presiding. The afternoon program consisted of devotional exercises in charge of Rev. A. L. Lockert of Milford. The church was crowded in the evening the chief attraction being an address by Rev. Caldwell of Detroit. Short addresses were also given by Rev. Lockert and Lobb. The proceedings were enlivened by excellent selections from the choir.

The Union Sabbath school concert was held at Lapham's Corners church last Sabbath afternoon with a good attendance and interesting program.

A recent statement in the Detroit Courier concerning the case of Solon Goodell against the O. A. Sober estate is misleading and unjust to the memory of Mr. Sober. Mr. Sober, about twenty-seven years ago, loaned Mr. Goodell about five thousand dollars and took as security a deed of Goodell's farm with the condition that upon his paying a certain amount he would re-deed the premises to Goodell. Subsequently Sober paid claims against the land until he had invested a little more than thirteen thousand dollars in the property. Since that time Goodell has been occupying the premises under a written lease at a specified annual rental, which he has failed to pay in full many seasons and the executor finds among the assets of Sober a note of several thousand dollars for arrearages of rent given by Goodell. To any one familiar with the facts the claim set up by Goodell in his bill of complaint recently filed, is preposterous beyond the power of words to tell. Not only has he not paid any of the original debt, but it has been steadily growing as is confessed by the note referred to. The imputation that Mr. Sober was a shlylock is heartless and cruel.
