FOR STATE SENATOR.

Northville May Present a Candidate.

HONORABLE JOHN M SWIFT

Would Do Honor to the Office, His State, County and Town.

The many friends and admirers of our worthy townsman, Dr. Swift, have for the past week or two been trying to persuade him to allow his name to be presented at the coming senatorial convention for this first district. The doctor is a trifle shy about engaging so deeply in politics again, but if there was no particular great opposition in the convention it is thought he might allow his name to be presented.

He is by no means an unheard of man in the county of Wayne or the state of Michigan. His well known republicanism, his brilliant oratory power, his honorable career, and his enviable record in our state legislature of 1865 has made his name familiar in nearly every home in Michigan.

[HON. J. M SWIFT.] This section of Michigan.

There would be one possible chance against his election if nominated and that is he would never stoop to a single thing low or dishonorable in any way influence votes in his favor. He is not a man to stand in with the dum and slum element for favors but if the electors and delegates of the first senatorial district of Wayne county are looking for a candidate who would be an honor to the district a man whom money could not bribe or cause the change of a single opinion a man who has the ability and will to express, without fear or favor, his convictions of right and wrong, and a man who could not be run by a y check or machine, then we present for their consideration the name of Hon John M Swift of Northville.

Around the Country

Several Fenton saloonkeepers are up or illegal selling of liquor.

The Plymouth air rifle factories commenced work Monday.

A court of Ancient Forresters has been organized at Clarkston.

The Pontiac Gazette will show its enterprise by publishing a daily paper during the fair, Oct. 2-5.

The Plymouth Mail celebrates its 7th anniversary by expanding its forms to a 6 column paper.

Between the wind and worms all the apples around Wayne will be made up into cider this fall.

The Holly vinegar works has got out of its recent pickle, changed hands and again commenced to sour cider.

Milford will hold a special election next Monday to see whether the bath tub factory gets a $5,000 bonus or not.

Another Plymouth man has been burglarized of his pants and $16 in money. Fred Teesman was the victim this time.

Holly business houses will close at 8 o'clock evenings during the coming fall and winter. Northville's will do the same act.

The Farmington Enterprise is nothing if not progressive. Last week it held a man's funeral Aug. 18 who died on Aug. 25.

Joe Hetley has sold his interest in the South Lyon furniture company plant—and may move to Saginaw to engage in the lumber business.

Rochester will have water works and Trenton will not. All because the votes counted up that way at a special election held last week.

A Monroe county farmer named Sexten Flint holds up a cancer producer weighing 23 ounces and yells "How's that for a tomato?"

Frank Tucker the well known theatrical man sustained a broken leg at Howard City last week and it may be necessary to amputate it.

Eloise is the name of the new post-office at the Wayne county house—named in honor of the wife of the superintendent of the place of refuge.

The Fenton Independent says that "dampened baking powder is a sure cure for snake bites." We never thought the Independent would do this.

The great game of ball between the editors of the Northville Record and the Plymouth Mail has been fought. The battle raged terrific for seven innings, and then merciful night sent down her black mantle of smoke and darkness and hid the frightful field, slippery with the sweat of more than one brave fellow. The score stood, at the call, 22 for Northville to 18 for Plymouth. The editors of the Record and Mail did the umpiring, each wearing a coat of mail, double-soled at the backguard and defended like a black thorn, with long, sharp spikes.—Ann Arbor Argus.

A number of our exchanges who are running a lot of semi-obscene medical advertisements, must be hard up for advertising, or money—or both. When the time comes that we are obliged to accept a class of advertising wholly unfit for any lady or child to read we will quit the newspaper business.

Congress has failed to pass senator Hill's very just and proper bill for the exclusion and deportation of anarchists. The country stands in greater need of such a measure than of any other one thing today, and the failure to enact it illustrates how little congress cares for the vital interests of the nation.

The Ann Arbor Argus says "The Record must quit copying from the Argus and crediting to the Adrian Press as Stearns can't stand everything." We decline to apologize! The Argus referred to Northville in three different items last week as "Northfield," to say nothing of referring to the Record one or more times as the "Review."

In speaking of Wayne county's part in nominating a congressman the Ann Arbor Courier says: "Now supposing the case. Supposing the man was nominated before Wayne was reached, then what? Washtenaw has been caught in that trap several times." Don't see what difference it would make. Wayne would still be in the swim.

The Wayne Tidings offers to trade a year's subscription for two cords of "good hard stove wood." Has the Tidings got the price of wood and wheat mixed?

Sanford T. Crapo has been appointed general manager of the Flint & Pere Marquette Railroad. Since the resignation of W. H. Baldwin, Jr., Mr. Crapo has been acting as manager.

A valuable vein of white sand has been struck at Brighton. It is the kind used for manufacturing the finest quality of glass and the Express thinks Brighton has unearthed another boom.

If Washtenaw county democrats elect anyone this year it is sure to be an Ann Arbor man. In fact with the exception of a coroner from Ypsilanti no one else was allowed on the ticket.

The unusual bright appearance of the Ann Arbor Courier last week may be attributed to the fact of the arrival of a bouncing nine pound, (all babies weigh nine pounds, don't they?) boy at the Beal mansion.

Among the prizes offered at the coming Washtenaw county fair we note the following "Best jackass, three years old or older, who never run a newspaper but can tell the editor how, premium, $17 spittoon."

Fred M. Warner, Farmington's hustling young business man and well known cheese manufacturer, was nominated by acclamation for state senator from the 12th district, Oakland and Macomb counties.

Dr. Mackinnon's residence at Orion was tapped one night last week for the doctor's gold ticker and fifty dollars in money. The Review's senior editor having now returned from his vacation will probably in the next issue prove it to have been the work of the sea serpent.

Northville has 171 water takers who pay the village 1,000 for rentals. They have about twice that number of "water takers" who get their water free, to wash down the other drink.—Adrian Press.

Not so! This is a gold cure town with the nearest saloon located four miles away.

The Plymouth ball club, lately won a game from Northville, by a score of 9 to 5. The pitcher for Plymouth was Rutter. Seems to us we've heard the name before. Ah! we have it. The Lotus club of Monroe has a pitcher with the same name. Remarkable coincidence. "Shingler shirkum-stanch."—Adrian Press.

A number of our exchanges who are running a lot of semi-obscene medical advertisements, must be hard up for advertising, or money—or both.

To cure round shoulders, sleep perfectly horizontal—that is without any bolster or pillow. The habit can easily be acquired of sleeping thus, and the round shoulders will soon be straightened.—Dundee Ledger.

We object to the Ledger man sleeping on his back in this manner for the reason he snores like one of "Bill" French's Poland-China hogs. Turn over on your side again Bro. Munger, and never mind a round shoulder more or less.

A new applicant for favor. The Noyi Record, comes to our table this week, but its close resemblance to the Northville Record, suggests the possibility of Brother Neal's having reached that stage of the disease where a fellow inquires, "Where am I at?" How is it, brother?—Ypsilantian.

Not at all. Although the Novi Record has been in existence for several months, the fact that a copy jumped out of the Novi bundle and climbed into the Ypsilantian "X" was accidental.

SCALDED TO DEATH.

Sad Fate of Mr Quinn's Little Child.

About three o'clock last week Friday afternoon Johnnie, the eighteen months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Thos Quinn who live on the Harmon farm at the U.S. fish hatchery, tipped a tub of hot water which was resting on a chair, over on himself and was so badly scalded that he died Sunday. The funeral occurred Tuesday Rev. Mr. Arnold officiating.

ALDERMAN crookedness seems to be both sporadic and epidemic this year. The grand jury has hardly got through indicting members of the New Orleans council, and now there is a new outbreak in the Louisville council. Five members were recently impeached for bribery and proceedings are taken against others: Fame and a nation's gratitude await the philanthropist who shall invent a good plan of municipal government with the city council omitted.

THERE have been at various times loud cries for wives heard coming from various parts of the country, and to the credit of the women it may be said that these appeals have never failed to receive prompt attention. It was a meteorological expression, the area of high pressure for wives has now moved to West Australia. The discovery of rich deposits of gold there has caused an influx of miners from other Australian colonies, and the matrimonial market is quite bare.

THE loss of the Miranda following that of the Ragvald Jarl, suggests that would-be Arctic explorers have forgotten the manner of vessel needed to penetrate the Arctic ice. No cork shell is fit for that business, a fact that everybody ought to have known by this time. The wisdom of further attempts to find the pole or the open polar sea, if it exists, is greatly doubted, and the policy of pushing to the northward in vessels which are crushed in the first nip of the ice, is certainly an expensive folly.

It is proposed to widen and deepen the St. Lawrence canal, so that ocean-going steamships can pass through them, carrying their cargoes unbroken from the lake ports to their European destination. Some of the Canadians think it would be a good notion to have the United States share the cost of the enlargement and possess a joint ownership in them when they are completed. Others of their countrymen favor the plan of keeping these channels exclusively in Canadian possession, paying their own bills for enlargement and taking it out of the American ships which pass through them in the shape of tolls.

THE extravagant claims which are being made for Dr. Koch's alleged cure for diphtheria are not likely to be accepted without definite proof of their truth. Equally marvelous assertions were made as to his consumption lymph and his cholera inoculation cure, but they were never fulfilled. It would be better for him if his disciples would restrain their enthusiasm. We can all honor those patient students and explorers who search into the mysteries of life and seek to benefit humanity. But when expectation has been raised too high and disappointment follows, people are too apt to think that these much-heralded discoveries belong to the region of empirics and not to the field of scientific inquiry.

THERE is no accounting for tastes! A dentist died in a rural town in England a few days ago, after spending over fifty years in pulling the molars of his fellow-citizens. He had made it a hobby to keep all the teeth which he had drawn in the course of his professional career, and took great pride in the collection. When his will was opened it was found that he had ordered the collection of teeth to be placed with him in his coffin for burial. His heirs fulfilled his command, and almost 30,000 teeth were put into the coffin with the dead dentist. If some archaeologist of a future century shall happen to open that grave he will have "food for thought" and some difficulty perhaps in explaining the presence of so many teeth.

COTTONWOOD bearing different names in different regions is widely scattered over the globe within defined lines of latitude and temperature, but nowhere grows more abundantly than in the rich deltas of the Mississippi, Missouri, Red, Ouachita, Arkansas and other intercontinental American rivers. For the last four or five years it has come into use as lumber, having before that time been regarded as fit only for firewood. The lumberman does not touch the small timber, but guards it and nurtures it: the wood-pulping dragon, with ravenous and engulfing maw, eats up all, leaving a treeless waste behind him, destroying entire Linnaean orders as calmly as a Catalonian jackass denudes the way-side of thistles. He needs looking to wherever he operates, and especially amid the cottonwood groves which have just brought so generous and unexpected a tribute to our national commerce, and been found of such wide and diversified utility.

THERE was a big tennis tournament in Milan not long ago. And it was considered by old-fashioned Milanese mere anglomania when their modern and progressive friends said that the Italian players were beaten because they took champagne, while their opponents from England played all the afternoon on tea.

A SENTRY'S LOVE.

Said the president of the military court to Trofim Stoyan, "You have been found guilty of the crime of aiding the escape of prisoner No. 279 from the mine of Gorkaya-Balka. Before sentence is passed the court desires to hear from you your version of the circumstances of the prisoner's escape, and the motives which induced you to be false to the trust imposed on you. We understand that you dispute the correctness of some of the witnesses' statements. We warn you to speak the strict truth. Stand at attention."

As the president finished, a slim young fellow, standing between two glittering bayonets, drew himself up to "attention," glanced at the spectators and faced the court.

"Go on," said the president. "Your Excellency," began the soldier. "I don't want to say and I don't expect it, but you have asked me to tell the truth, and I will tell it. It was on a Saturday night, snowing hard and bitterly cold. Sergeant Petroff marched me up to the entrance of Gorkaya-Balka mine and I delivered the sentry on duty there. I wish to remain until midnight, and I received the usual orders to stop anyone who tried to enter or leave the gallery, and to shoot them if they persisted. I was shivering with cold, and kept tramping about in front of the entrance to keep warm. After the barrack clock had struck 10, I noticed some one crouching in the shadow of the old tool-house—a woman. I thought, It seemed darker there than out in the open. The snow was driving in my face. I felt queer and timid that night. Turning sharply round at the end of my beat farthest from the house, I saw approaching me the figure of a woman in black. I got opposite the entrance into the gallery, and stood silent. I don't know why I felt scared. There was no one else about or nearer than the overseer's house. She came swiftly over the snow, and her face was covered with a veil. I couldn't speak; it was as if my tongue was frozen. She put her hands on my shoulders, and looked up into my face."

"What was she like?" demanded the president. "Your excellency, I cannot describe her. I only saw her eyes, then, and they were on fire and went right straight through me. She told me much that I can't recall, for I was looking, not listening. But at last I understood her to be talking of her brother in the mine. She said she had had come all the way from Russia to see him, and that he was dying."

"She said that if I would let her into the mine for a few minutes she would always pay for me, and devote her whole life to make me happy."

"Her great black eyes bewitched me, and I believed her. I said nothing, but pointed to the mine, and in a moment she had fled into the dark opening to the gallery. I never thought of what I was doing. I was dazed and stood stock still, and the snow kept falling all the time, and the night was growing darker. I had my eyes fixed on the entrance, and saw the figure emerge and run toward me."

"Soldier," she said, "you have made me happy for life. Make yourself happy and fit with us. Let my brother pass. I will lead you and him to a place where we will be happy together. Be good to me, soldier, and I will give you all you ask from me. I will be yours, I will live for you and die for you."

"Don't smile, Excellency. I was intoxicated with her words. I believed her. Her arms were around my neck, and her face was lovely as the Madonna's. I seized my rifle and flung it with all my strength out into the snow. She put a file into my hands and I followed her to the gallery. There the darkness was thicker still, but we groped our way to where a man stood chained to a thick wooden stanchion. I knew what I had to do. The man said nothing, but the woman kissed me—kissed me. Excellency. So I worked like a madman. Her Excellency. We reached the entrance as the barrack clock was striking 11. There was a whole hour yet before the guard would be changed. We ran through the little wood and crossed the frozen river, and away beyond a wide, open space, where the snow was very deep, we entered the pine woods."

"The woman knew where she was leading us, for we came to a hut where we found clothes and food. I buried my uniform in the snow. All that night we moved rapidly through the woods, hardly speaking to one another at first. But the man and woman went on in front, walking arm in arm, and often they kissed one another, laughing and crying in turns. When I was close to them they sometimes spoke French. As soon as it was light I never let my eyes leave her face. Her eyes were large and dark, but her hair was like gold, and hung down her back wet on her black cloak."

"Stand at attention," said the president, sharply. "The prisoner stood erect again and resumed his story."

"The morning was clear and frosty. The man had fallen several times during the night. His strength was gone, and he was pale as death, and blood oozed from his mouth. The woman grew frantic with fear that he would be caught. The man, however, could go no further. He lay down on the snow just as we were leaving the woods and coming out on the steppe. I thought he would have died. I took him in my arms, and carried him rest after rest until my strength was gone, and I felt fever coming over me. But the woman never noticed me, and once or twice, when I turned to look at her from under my burden, I saw that her eyes were fixed on the face of the man I carried. I could hold out no longer. I fell on the snow and fainted. How long I lay there I cannot say. Whether or not I dreamed I am unable to tell the court. I don't think it could have been a dream. I thought I saw a troika come noiselessly over the snow and heard the breathing of horses."

"Do you mean to tell the court this was a dream? Can you give no further particulars about the troika or its driver?" interrupted the president. "No; your Excellency; the horses were black, I thought, and I know their eyes shone brightly; the sledges also seemed to be black. It came silently,

It went away with gently ringing bells, like silver bells. When I came to my senses it was snowing hard. The wet flakes awoke me, I think. I gazed around me on all sides. I was alone. I thought of my dream. There was no hoof-marks, no traces of sledge-runners, nothing but the level, trackless snow. Perhaps the snow had filled up the track, perhaps—perhaps there was some other reason. Your Excellency, I felt myself forsaken. I could not understand it. I was mad and cried aloud. Suddenly I noticed pinned to my coat, a scrap of paper with pencil writing on it. It was taken from me when I gave myself up, but I'll never forget the words—"We can not take you with us further. Save yourself as best you can. My husband and I will always pray for you." Oh, Excellency, I saw it all then, and sat down in the snow and wept and cursed. I loved that woman. Yes, I was a fool."

"And a traitor," interpolated the president, scowling. "And a traitor, if Your Excellency says so, but I did not think of that then. I thought only of my love, of how I had been betrayed, of my hurt pride. Your Excellency knows the rest."

Three years later a man and a woman on Ellis Island suddenly encounter each other. She starts and gasps; "The soldier!" While he exclaims: "The woman!" There is no time for more. She has passed the spectators and hurried to the little steamer that is to convey her to New York. He is pushed back, for the inspectors may not reach his case for a day or two.

But he lands at last. Where shall he find her? He finds employment, and then for six months spends all his leisure time in the quest. At last he meets her. She is coming out of a theater. He touches her sleeve. No word is spoken then, but as if by mutual instinct, they enter the nearest cafe. Five minutes later he has said: "I have always loved you. You belong to me. Since you say your husband is dead, you are mine."

"But you have no money," glancing at his shabby clothes. "I can earn it," he pleads. "A man who loves as I do can fail in nothing." The next day they were married by a priest of the Greek Church. Was it love or stardust that prompted the woman, upon her third brief meeting, to grant so much?

The priest, gazing after them as they departed, murmured "I have united a goddess and a hero." —New York Journal.

GOT A BIG BITE. And the Fish Took the Bad Boy and All to the Bottom. Fishing is an interesting pastime at present for a large number of small fry. Even gray-haired gills fellows armed with rods and lines, are to be seen on fair days at points of vantage along the docks. Ten cod and sea eels are caught in great numbers, while once in a while a horrible-appearing rat-fish is hauled in. These ratfish look like a cross between a Chinaman and the devil, and are armed with two sword-like fins which protrude from the sides of the head like a French dude's mustache. The swords are from two to five inches in length, according to the size of the fish, and are very strong, having a point as sharp as a needle. Voe to the unlucky fisherman who is struck by a Ratfish. To the wound swirls and pains dreadfully.

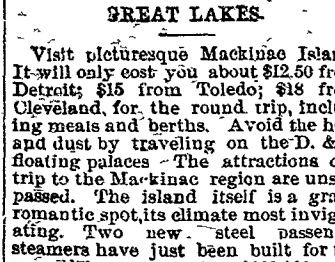

Yesterday a gang of tough-looking street Arabs were fishing off the embankment in the Northern Pacific switching yard, and an old gentleman with a benevolent countenance and long gray whiskers was much interested in the sport. Not seeing any fish landed, the old man asked one of the urchins, Gus Sampson. "What are you fishing for, my boy?" "Bites," answered the kid, with a fiendish grin.

At the same instant, as if by Divine Providence, the old man was avenged, for there was such a gigantic bite on that boy's line that boy, pole, line and all were yanked off the dock and pulled out of sight into the water. In a few moments Gus rose to the surface with his mouth criss, criss and nose full of mud. He struck out for shore, while the pole, which still floated on the surface, darted off at a lively speed in an opposite direction.

Two Indians happened along in a canoe and they gave chase to the pole. They finally overtook it, and after half an hour's tedious work succeeded in landing an immense rock, cod, which had in some mysterious manner been hooked in the tail. The cod weighed twelve pounds and three ounces, and was bought by the benevolent old gentleman with the long gray whiskers—Tacoma Leader.

Insympathetic. The knight of rest slipped into the back yard as if he had been guilty of some offense, and putting an empty tomato can out of sight under his tarted coat, he approached the port-curtains of the kitchen and tapped on it with his halldom. In response a wary-eyed girl, with a towel tied around her head, made her appearance. "Well," she said interrogatively, as she took his measure with her eagle eye. "I just thought I'd strike you for breakfast," he answered, apologetically. "We don't believe in strikes in this neighborhood," she said, emphatically, and slammed the door with a bang that knocked the dust out of his toga.—Detroit Free Press.

1000 Meals for Five Cents. Each person eats on the average over 1,000 meals per year. To properly flavor these would require 1000 cents worth of Diamond Crystal Salt. This is a trade greater outlay than if the other kinds were used, but 5 cents would more than cover the difference, and pay for the luxury of having Diamond Crystal Salt. Instead of the other kinds. But the important thing about it is the finer flavor your food will have and the greater protection your health will receive when you use the salt that's all salt. Ask your Grocer for DIAMOND CRYSTAL. If he has not got it, write to us. If you make butter, investigate our Dairy Salt, there's money in it. Address Diamond Crystal Salt Co., ST. CLAIR, MICH.

"HOLY COMPULSION" AS A SERMON TEXT.

Dr. Talmage Relates Some of His Personal Experiences—Lights and Shadows of a Christian's Life—Luxuries of the Plain People of To-Day.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 16.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, who is still absent on his round-the-world tour, has selected for his sermon through the press for to-day, "Holy Compulsion," the text being Luke 11: 23: "And compel them to come in."

The plainest people in our day have luxuries which the kings and queens of olden times never imagined. I walked up and down the stairs of Holyrod palace—a palace that was considered one of the wonders of the world—and I said, Can it be possible that this is all there is of this reputed wonderful place? And this is the case in many other instances.

Well, these people invited to this great banquet of the text made most frivolous excuses. The fact was, I suppose, that some of them were offended that this man had succeeded so much better in the world than they had. There are people in all occupations and professions who consider it a wrong to them that any body else is advanced. I suppose these people invited to the feast said among themselves, "We are not going to administer to that man's vanity, he is proud enough now, we want to give beside that, we could all give parties if we made our money the way that man makes his."

So when the messengers went out with the invitations there was a unanimous refusal. One man said, "Oh, I have bought a farm, and I must go and look at it." He was a land speculator, and had no business to buy land until he knew about it. Another man said, "I have bought five yoke of oxen." The probability is he was a speculator in live stock. He ought to have known about the oxen before he bought them.

Now, said the great man of the feast, "I will not be defeated in this matter. I have with an honest purpose provided a banquet, and there are scores of people who would like to come if they were only invited. Here, my man, here, go out, and when you find a blind man give him your arm and fetch him in; and when you find a lame man, give him a crutch and fetch him in; and when you find a poor man, tell him that there is a plate for him in my mansion; and when you find some one who is so ragged and wretched that he has never been invited anywhere, then, by the kindest tenderness, and the most loving invitation any one ever had, compel him to come in."

Oh, my friends, it requires no acuteness, on my part, or on your part, to see in all this affair that religion is a banquet. The table was set in Palestine a good many years ago, and the disciples gathered around it, and they thought they would have a good time all by themselves, but while they sat by the table the leaves began to grow and spread, and one leaf went to the east and another leaf went to the west, until the whole earth was covered up with them, and the clusters from the heavenly vineyard were piled up on the board, and the trumpets and harps of eternity roared up the orchestra, and as the wine of God is pressed to the lips of a sinning being, suffering, dying, groaning world, a voice breaks from the heavens, saying, "Drink, O friends, yea, drink, O beloved." O blessed Lord Jesus, the best friend I ever had, the best friend any man ever had, was there ever such a table? Was there ever such a banquet?

From the cross uplifted high. Where the Saviour designs to die, What melodious sounds I hear Bursting on the ravished ear! Heaven's redeeming work is done. Come, and welcome; sinner, come Religion is a joyous thing, I do not want to hear anybody talk about religion as though it were a funeral. I do not want anybody to whine in the prayer meeting about the kingdom of God. I do not want any man to roll up his eyes, giving in that way evidence of his sanctity. The men and women of God whom I happen to know, for the most part, find religion a great joy. It is exhilaration to the body. It is invigoration to the mind. It is rapture to the soul. It is balm for all wounds. It is light for all darkness. It is a harbor from all storms, and though God knows that some of them have trouble enough now, they rejoice because they are on the way to the congratulations eternal.

I stopped one nightfall, years ago, at Freyburg, Switzerland, to hear the organ of world-wide celebrity in that place. I went into the cathedral at nightfall. All the accessories were favorable. There was only one light in all the cathedral, and that a faint taper on the altar. I looked up into the venerable arches and saw the shadows of centuries, and when the organ awoke, the cathedral awoke, and all the arches seemed to lift and quiver as the music came under them. That instrument did not seem to be made out of wood and metal, but out of human hearts, so wonderfully did it pulsate with every motion; now laughing like a child, now sobbing like a tempest. At one moment the music would die away, until you could hear the cricket chirp outside the wall, and then it would roll up until it seemed as if the surge of the sea and the crash of an avalanche had struck the organ pipes at the same moment. At one time that night it seemed as if a squadron of spirits weeping up from earth had met a squadron of descending angels, whose glory beat back the woe. Standing there and looking at the dim taper on the altar of the cathedral, I said: "How much like many a Christian's life shadows hover, and sometimes his hope is dim, and faint, and flickering, like a taper on the altar. But at what time God will, the heavens break forth with music upon his soul, and the air becomes resonant as the angels of God beat it with their shining sceptres."

Oh, the Lord God has many fair and beautiful daughters; but the fairest of them all is she whose ways are pleasantness and whose paths are peace! Now, my brothers and sisters—for I have a right to call you also—I know some people look back on their ancestral line, and they see they are descended from the Puritans or Huguenots, and they rejoice in that; but I look back on my ancestral line, and I see therein such a mingling and mixture of the blood of all nationalities that I feel akin to all the world, and by the blood of the Son of God, who died for all people, I address you in the bonds of universal brotherhood. I come out as only a servant, bringing an invitation to a party, and I put it into your hand, saying, "Come, for all things are now ready," and I urge it upon you and continue to urge it, and, before I get through, I hope, by the blessing of God, to compel you to come in.

We must take care how we give the invitation. My Christian friends, I think some times we have just gone opposite to Christ's command, and we have compelled people to stay out. Some times our elaborated instructions have been the hindrance. We graduate from our theological seminaries on stilt, and it takes five or six years before we can come down and stand right beside the great masses of the people, learning their joys, sorrows, victories, defeats. We get our heads so brimful of theological wisdom that we have to stand very straight lest they spill over. Now, what do the great masses of the people care about the technicalities of religion? What do they care about the hypostatic union or the difference between sub-lapsarian and supra-lapsarian? What do they care for your profound explanations, clear as a London fog? When a man is drowning he does not want you to stand by the dock and describe the nature of the water into which he has fallen and tell him there are two parts hydrogen gas and one of oxygen gas, within common density of thirty-nine Fahrenheit, turning to steam under a common atmospheric pressure of two hundred and twelve. He does not want a chemical lecture on water; he wants a rope.

Oh, my friends, the curse of God on the church, it seems to me, in this day, is metaphysical. We speak in an unknown tongue in our Sabbath schools, and in our religious assemblages, and in our pulpits, and how can people be saved unless they understand us? We put on our official gowns, and we think the two silk balloons flapping at the elbows of a preacher give him great sanctity. The river of God's truth flows down before us pure and clear as crystal; but we take our theological stick and stir it up, and stir it up, until we can not see the bottom. Oh, for the simplicity of Christ in all our instructions—the simplicity he practiced when standing among the people, he took a lily, and said, "There is a lesson of the way I will clothe you," and, pointing to a raven, said, "There is a lesson of the way I will feed you; consider the lilies—behold the fowls."

I think often in our religious instructions we compel people to stay out by our church architecture. People come in and they find things angular, and cold, and stiff, and they go away never again to come; when the church ought to be a great home circle, everybody having a hymn book, giving half of it to the one next to him, every one who has a hand to shake hands, shaking hands—the church architecture and the church surroundings saying to the people, "Come in and be at home." Instead of that, I think all these surroundings often compel the people to stay out. Now, let us all repeat of our sins and begin on the other track, and by our heartiness of affection and warmth of manner, and imploration of the Spirit of God, compel the people to come in. How shall we lead sinners to accept the Lord's invitation? I think we must certainly begin by a holy life. We must be better men, better women, before we can compel the people to come into the kingdom of Jesus Christ. There are fine essays being written in this day about science and religion. I shall you the best argument in behalf of our holy Christianity: it is a good man, a good woman, a life all consecrated to Christ. No infidel can answer it. Oh, let us by a holy example compel the people to come in.

I read of a minister of the gospel who was very fond of climbing among the Swiss mountains. One day he was climbing among very dangerous places, and thought himself all alone, when he heard a voice beneath him say, "Father, look out for the safe path, I am following." and he looked back and he saw that he was climbing not only for himself, but climbing for his boy. "O, let us be sure and take the safe path! Our children are following, our partners in business are following, our neighbors are following, our great multitude stepping right on in our steps. O, be sure and take the right path! Exhibit a Christian example, and so by your godly walk compel the people to come in."

I think there is also work in the way of kindly admonition. I do not believe there is a person in this house who, if approached in a kindly and brotherly manner, would refuse to listen. If you are rebuffed, it is because you lack in tact and common-sense. But oh, how much effective work there is in the way of kindly admonition! There are thousands of men all round about you who have never had one personal invitation to the cross. Give that one invitation, and you would be surprised at the alacrity with which they would accept it.

I tell you to-day, my friends, of a great salvation. Do you understand what it is to have a Saviour? He took your place. He bore your sins. He wept your sorrows. He is here now to save your soul. A soldier, worn out in his country's service, took to the violin as a mode of earning his living. He was found in the streets of Vienna, playing his violin, but after a while his hand became feeble and tremulous, and he could no more make music. One day, while he sat there weeping, a man passed along and said, "My friend, you are too old and too feeble; give me your violin," and he took the man's violin, and began to discourse most exquisite music, and the people gathered around in larger and larger multitudes, and the aged man held his hat, and the coin poured in and poured in until the hat was full. "Now," said the man who played the violin, "put that coin in your pocket." The coin was put in the old man's pocket. Then he held his hat again, and the violinist played more sweetly than ever, and played until some of the people wept and some shouted. And again the hat was filled with coin. Then the violinist dropped the instrument and passed off, and the whisper went, "Who is it? Who is it?" and some one just entering the crowd said, "Why, that is Bucher, the great violinist, known all through the realm; yes, that is the great violinist." The fact was, he had just taken that man's place and assumed his poverty, and borne his burden, and played his music, and earned his livelihood, and made sacrifice for the poor old man. So the Lord Jesus Christ comes down, and he finds us in our spiritual poverty, and across the strings of his own broken heart he strikes a strain of infinite music, which wins the attention of earth and heaven. He takes our poverty. He plays our music. He weeps our sorrow. He dies our death. A sacrifice for you. A sacrifice for me.

Oh, will you accept this sacrifice now? I do not single out this and that man, and this and that woman. But I say all may come. The sacrifice is so great, all may be saved. Does it not seem to you as if heaven was very near? I can feel its breath on my cheek. God is near, Christ is near. The Holy Spirit is near. Ministering angels are near. Your glorified kindred in heaven near. Your glorified mother near. Your departed children near. Your redemption is near.

PAPER POLES. They Are Lighter, Stronger and Stronger Than Wooden Ones. One of the latest uses to which paper has been turned is the making of telegraph poles. The paper pulp employed is saturated with a mixture of borax, tallow and other substances. The mass is cast in a mold with a cone in the center, forming a hollow rod of any desired length, the cross pieces being held by wooden keys driven in on either side of the pole. The paper poles are said to be lighter and stronger than those of wood and to be unaffected by the many weather influences which shorten the life of a wooden pole.

It is doubtful, however, whether the paper pole will come to be anything like a rival to the iron pole, which is now high in favor for the carrying of all kinds of wire lines. The value of iron telegraph poles has been well tested under the most trying conditions on the lines between Europe and India, and again across and stretches of country in Australia. Insects that eat out the core of everything in the shape of wood, leaving the shell only, and bird bores that drill holes in the toughest of trees, let the iron poles pass, and even wandering tribes cannot chop it up for fire-wood, although down in Australia they have not yet quite got over their trick of making arrow heads of the insulators it carries.

POLLY'S REVELLIE.

Some years ago, when stationed on the coast of West Africa, I bought a gray parrot, which in appearance greatly surpassed the general run of these birds both in size and beauty of plumage, and which, though I paid little or no attention to his education, turned out to be a remarkably apt scholar.

The indication of his powers was a perfectly successful attempt to whistle the reveille, which, of course, he had heard every morning since his introduction to the barracks, and before long he had mastered nearly every bugle call known in the British army. One morning I was awakened by his calling in a loud tone, and in an exact imitation of my own voice: "Coffee, Coffee! You imp of darkness, where are you? Hurry up and bring my coffee," "Coffee being" a little native, as black as your boot, whom I employed to work for me. The incident naturally tickled my risibilities, and I laughed immoderately, the bird joining in the "cachination, and again imitating my tones exactly.

From that time on he was liable to pick up anything heard and repeat it at inopportune moments, which was all very well in its way, but was apt to grow monotonous. Regularly at 5 a. m. he would start a monologue, interspersed with bugle calls and diabolical peals of laughter, which woke me. I never am very amiable under circumstances of that kind, and would heave my shoes or the first missile that came handy at him. If I happened to go anywhere near the mark he would ejaculate: "Poor Polly! Poor, poor Polly!" in such doleful accents that my wrath was invariably converted into laughter, in which the bird joined with great gusto. Sometimes I would yell to the boy and say: "Coffee, take this infernal bird away!" and all down the corridor, like the very echo of my voice, would come: "Take this infernal bird away by bird away!" "Polly" after a while became quite a character, and I was offered considerable sums for him, but I decided to take him home and make him a present to the "governor." Of course, on shipboard he was among the sailors, and equally, of course, he earned quite a number of commands incidental to their calling, together with a less desirable accompaniment of bad language. When I got him home to an imaginary crew to "square away the main brace," and various other nautical feats was a caution to snakes, accompanying his commands with a string of profanity that would make the toughest old salt hide his head with shame or envy, and invariably indulge in these tricks when we had lady callers.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EMPEROR AS LEADER.

William II. of Germany Once Violated the Leader's Baton. Emperor William II. of Germany was reported in recent dispatches to have turned his head to composing music. In doing this, he is imitating his grandfather, the late William I., who once assumed the duties of an orchestra conductor. He had gone to Coblenz one day to meet Empress Augusta, and was serenaded by the band of a regiment. The emperor thanked the orchestra leader, but said to him that the movement of a certain ballet had been played in too quick a time. The same piece was, by his order, to be executed during the evening banquet. William I. rose from the table a few moments before it was to be played and suddenly took the place of the conductor. Seizing the baton, he gave the signal to begin to play, saying to the musicians: "Well, gentlemen, very slow, please," and, as the music went on, often repeating, "Still slower!" When the piece was ended he said, "It is superb, in this way," thanked the musicians, and graciously returned to his seat at the table.

Editor Sienna and Postmaster Wilson of Holly arrived in town Wednesday evening, having biked it the entire distance. They made the run in from Wixom, nine miles, in 171 minutes—so Jim said. They were feasted and shown about town in the proper style usually meted out to visitors of prominence.

Communication.

Mr. Editor—In your last issue in a few lines from "The Man About Town" in regard to the lower mill-pond. Why is nothing said about the upper one? For the last six weeks anyone crossing the railroad bridge could have seen a green scum thick enough to have been scraped off with a hoe. This is just as much an eyesore to those living on the Northside and just as dangerous to health as the other. Surely our City Fathers (if anything is done) should endeavor to remove the entire nuisance, this being within corporate limits. No doubt but they will yet find a way.

"Another Man About Town."

S'more Kind Words.

The Northville Record is 26 years old. It has the wisdom of 70 and the agility of 20. We need to say that it has few equals in the inland towns of the state.—Ann Arbor Courier.

The Northville Record, that bright and lively paper, has entered upon the 26th year of its existence. The Record is a hustler. Long life and much prosperity to the Record.—Dundee Ledger.

How did we miss it? The Northville Record has just entered its 26th volume. It is one of our most valued exchanges and continually improves. It is very evidently appreciated in Northville as it is full of "good news from business men" each week.—Plymouth Mail.

The Northville Record was 25 years old last week, and as frisky and bright as a kitten. It is remarkably well supported as it ought to be. To realize that Northville is a prosperous, growing village, one has only to scan the well-filled advertising columns and read the sprightly editorials of the Record. Here's health and prosperity to thee, Bro. Neal, forever.—Brighton Express.

If the Argus has not already said so, it meant to remark on the quarter century of life recently reached by the Northville Record. It is one of the Argus exchanges that always get opened and the good things perused and often copied. Editor Neal is a man on whom no winged insects collect—not even baseball "flies." But he must quit copying from the Argus and credit to the Adrian Press. Stearns can't stand everything.—Ann Arbor Argus.

By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure has proven itself unequalled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure and get Dullam's. All druggists keep it.

T. G. Richardson had on exhibit at the state fair last week a single hill of corn which contained five stalks ten feet seven in height and each stalk contained an elegant big ear of corn. The dry weather seems to not have effected the corn crop in this section so much as was feared.

The factory shut down last week Saturday to give the employees an opportunity to attend the state fair. Over 100 tickets were sold. The fair people did not do the fair thing by admitting Detroit people for 25 cents and compelling the railroad companies to charge others 50 cents.

Passengers are going and have the largest and most enthusiastic crowd at the depot tonight ever seen in the village. The agent and the railroad company will excuse us for once if we are all there and make a little extra noise. It occurs but once in a life time. The state fair band is coming home.

Dr. J. J. Attridge, Northville's well known veterinary surgeon, has just been called to the chair of Materia Medica of the veterinary department of the Detroit college of medicine. There were 187 members of the 5th Mich. Cavalry present at the reunion at Detroit Tuesday. So far as can be ascertained there are 260 members of the regiment still alive. J. K. Lowden of this place was re-elected historian.

It is a mistake to throw loose paper into the street. They not only frighten horses and frequently cause expensive runaways, but they also give the public streets a very untidy appearance. This village is just a little bit afflicted with this nuisance. In fact some of the village streets seem to be a general dumping ground for every kind of garbage and refuse.

Among the greatest nuisances on many of our highways are the loose stones. There is a law making it the duty of the pathmaster to go over his district once a month and clear away such stones, which in many places, and especially on the hills, are so thick that a horse can hardly step and miss them. Some pathmasters seem to forget that the picking up of loose stones is a part of their duty.

The new Owen residence, 133 Main street, is nearly completed and will be ready for occupancy next week. The home has an exceptionally elaborate and complete interior finish, the wood work being entirely of butternut, highly polished. Each room is supplied with hot water heaters and gas lights, and the house is equipped throughout with electric call bells and other modern improvements. The building was done by Smith & Bovee and the painting and varnish work by Nixon & Clarkston.

The band will arrive home from the state fair on the 7:05 train tonight. They have covered themselves and the town they represent with glory. Let every Northville man, woman and child be at the train tonight to bid them welcome. Let there be such a demonstration of people as was never seen before, and if anyone and every one wants to yell—why let them yell. For once let us have a good big time and give people to understand that Northville folks are a part of their band as well as the state fair folks and its thousands of visitors for the past ten days.

We had every reason to expect a more magnanimous report of both business men's ball games in the Mail. However if it is any satisfaction to say that "the visitors asked too much when they asserted the understanding was for a 7 inning game," or "that no arrangements had been made to that effect," or that "sure defeat then stared them in the face and they were bound to quit," or "that the game was declared forfeited 9 to 0 in favor of Plymouth" etc., if this is any satisfaction we say, all right have it so. We are still as determined that there shall be no quarrel.

If there is one subject that has been talked about more than another it is that in reference to cleaning out the mill pond at the depot. That it should be and can be done is never disputed. Every man, woman and child in the town will agree thus far. The only question is when and how. Our physicians and health board say it can only be done, with safety to health, after the fall and winter's frosts are upon us. The time is now rapidly approaching and 1895 should not be ushered in until this eyesore is forever removed. Many plans have been advanced as to how the pond can be best cleaned out and beautified at the least expense. The most feasible one so far seems to be to get a civil engineer here and measure the refuse up and see just how many loads of stuff there is to remove and make a complete plan of how the work shall be finished up. Then agree that the village shall load the fertilizer, for it can be called nothing else, into the farmer's wagons if they will draw it on their farms. A number of farmers hereabouts have expressed to the Record their anxiety to do this and there seems to be no question but what this scheme is both practical and cheap.

Look for Miss Bovee's millinery "ad" next week.

A Trip to Mackinaw and the "Soo." (By a NORTHVILLE FARMER.)

To begin with, I will endeavor to be as brief as possible. Starting from Detroit by train I had but a birds eye-view from the cars. It is about 250 miles from Detroit to Mackinaw, about 150 miles is through quite a good agricultural country. About 140 miles of it is a jack pine country, the timber about all cut off, leaving a worthless tract of land and at this time all on fire. On the Michigan Central the passengers suffered much with the smoke and were disgusted with the country. Sometimes we could only see 10 or 15 feet from the cars.

With our eyes still smarting from the effects of the fire and smoke, we reached Mackinaw Island. This is a military point, and a great place of resort for tourists from both Europe and America during the summer. It is a grand site with some great natural curiosities. The principal ones are "Arch Rock," 147 feet high; "Robertson's Folly," and "Lover's Leap," 100 feet high. The history of the last is that in 1782 during a battle with the Indians a lover and companion of the chiefs daughter was among the slain. The maiden crazed by grief made a fatal leap from the rock which has since been called "Lover's Leap."

The "Soo" is located just below the rapids and is a lively, thrifty city of 8,000 inhabitants, besides 200 or more tourists during the summer months. There seems to be quite a good agricultural country around here. Beautiful green pastures and meadows, and many other farm crops, such as peas, oats and barley, potatoes and vegetables were to be seen. There are about 100 or more men working on the new lock, which is to be much larger than the old one now in use, which is the largest in the world. They will also improve the old one. The Canadians have nearly finished theirs and the new one will be completed July 4, 1896, by contract. J. J. T.

He resisted every effort to save him, but was finally landed on the dock and the surplus water emptied out of him. At a meeting of the Liquor Dealers' association, of Saginaw, it was decided in favor of closing on Sunday and of seeing to it that all other saloonkeepers keep closed. They came to no decision with regard to the matter of trying to enforce the blue Sunday law.

The will of Deacon James W. Converse, of Boston, has been filed at Grand Rapids. He leaves a cool $2,000,000 in Boston and about $1,000,000 in Grand Rapids. The money all goes to relatives the deacon declaring that he gave the churches all he intended to in his lifetime. Warden Van Erema, of the Marquette prison, sent a deputy and two other prison officials to An Train to search for the fugitive convict, Alfred Kaufman. The deputy was drunk when he arrived, and instead of following Kaufman, hung around the back door of a saloon, and all three made a 'holy show' of themselves.

He took a bath by himself, jumped into the water and was being towed by the boat when he let go and sank before his companions could rescue him. While out hunting his gun was discharged, terribly mangleing one arm and hand resulting in death from lockjaw caused by the wound. The Michigan State Pharmaceutical association met at the Hotel Cadillac, Detroit, in a four days' session. President B. Stevens and Ann Arbor called the assembly to order. Judge Dohovan delivered an address of welcome. The wood alcohol factory at Newberry is not running now, and it is said it will not start up again because the new tariff has caused a decline in price from $1 a gallon to 67 cents. The alcohol factory at Manelona is also closed down. Robert Wierenga, aged 1 year, wandered away from home at Grand Rapids. A search was instituted. The lad was found in a street excavation in a lifeless condition. A large chunk of earth had fall on him and he had been smothered to death. Stephen Maddock was arrested at St. Joseph on a warrant sworn out by his wife, charging him with bigamy. He is charged with having three wives who are all living, and will be on hand for the trial. Alleged wife No 3 swore out the warrant.

E. P. Lott who sent an express package to Rush Culver at Marquette purporting to contain $41, but in reality containing only slips of paper, says he will mortgage his property and replace the lost money, although he protests that he really sent the money and it must have been stolen on the way. Rev. W. A. Welsher, a Baptist minister, residing in Niles, has brought suit against Prof. L. H. Stewart, formerly principal in the high school, for $5,000 charging slander. Several other prominent citizens are also named. The trouble all grew out of Mr. Welsher being turned out of the First Baptist church pulpit some time ago. Breakthrough Knocked Out. Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of the Seventh district, of Kentucky, is dead politically. In the hottest primary election ever held in this country he lost to W. C. Owens by a plurality of some 10,000 in the neighborhood of 1,000 votes. No election or other occasion ever caused such a general suspension of business and daily duties as the contest between W. C. Owens, W. C. Breckinridge and E. E. Settle for the Democratic nomination for congress from the Seventh, better known as the Ashland district. For months the district was agitated in the most bitter personal agitation. It was not a political, not even a factional fight. It was a moral contest for weeks and months, and it became intensely personal, so much so that the nomination was not the only issue.

A freight on the C. S. P. M. & O. railroad was derailed near Hammond, Wis. The train carried ten oil cars. One of the oil tanks took fire and exploded. A car of coal and the caboose also burst. Almost 12 hours later a passenger train from Minneapolis was waiting west of the scene of the accident and the whole train load of passengers were passing around the wreck to take a train on the other side, when the other oil tank in the wreck exploded. The fragments whizzed through the air with a noise like bomb shells, and a shower of burning oil fell upon the people, seriously burning 14 of them. Three Negroes, two men and a woman, called at the house of Saloonist George Woehlhueter, in the heart of Akron, O., and demanded breakfast. Mrs. Woehlhueter was alone. Paddy frightened, she prepared the meal. Later the man returned to the house, broke in the street door and going to Mrs. Woehlhueter's room, beat her in a senseless and unprovoked manner. She was bound and gagged and thrown into the cellar. Carpets and bed-clothing were saturated with oil and the house fired. Except for timely discovery of the flames all trace of the crime would have been obliterated. Mrs. Woehlhueter's condition is critical.

CHINESE DEFEATED.

CHINESE IN KOREA LOSE OVER 16,000 MEN.

The Japanese Practically Annihilated an Army of 20,000 Men and Lost Only 30 Men With 270 Wounded—Japs Now Control Korea.

London: Dispatches from Seoul, the capital of Korea, tell of the total defeat of the Chinese army, entrenched at Ping Yang, by the Japanese. For two days the Japanese had been making a careful reconnaissance in force to ascertain the position of the Chinese army. On the third day the Gen. Sams-column faced the Chinese left flank. The Pong San column the center and the Hwang Zu column the right. The Chinese defenses had been greatly strengthened. The battle opened at daybreak both sides cannonading heavily. The Pong San column did the hardest of the fighting for the Japanese while the Hwang Zu and Hwang Su columns were in positions, but at night the situation was practically unchanged. Firing was continued all night and meantime the Japanese right and left closed in upon the Chinese position, and at 3 a. m. the Japanese attack was delivered simultaneously. The Chinese lines, which were strong in front, were found to be weak in the rear and the Chinese were taken completely by surprise, became panic stricken and were cut down and bayoneted by the hundreds. So well was the Japanese attack directed that the Chinese were surrounded at every point and eventually sought safety in flight. The Pong San column, swarming over the damaged defenses of the Chinese front, completed the rout of the Chinese.

Some idea of the manner in which the Japanese attack was delivered may be judged from the fact that one-half an hour after the early morning attack commenced the strongly defended position of Ping Yang was in the hands of the Japanese troops. It is believed that the Chinese position was defended by 20,000 Chinese, of whom only a few succeeded in escaping.

The Japanese victory was brilliant and complete. An immense amount of provisions, arms, ammunition and other stores, in addition to hundreds of Japanese captured and 10,000 of the Chinese soldiers killed, wounded or taken prisoner. Among the latter were Gen. Tso Luok and the commander-in-chief of the Manchurian army, and several other prominent Chinese officers. The Japanese loss was trifling, only 30 being killed and 270 wounded, eleven officers being among the number.

So far as the active operations of the Chinese in Korea are concerned, the war is practically at an end for a long time to come, and the mainland of Korea may be said to be completely in the hands of the Japanese. Later advices say that 6,000 Chinese soldiers were killed at Ping Yang and nearly 12,000 captured. The latter will be taken to Japan in parties of 1,000.

A naval engagement has taken place off Yalu, where a Chinese squadron was covering the landing of a large force. A Japanese fleet attacked the assailants. In the fighting that followed two Chinese and two Japanese vessels were sunk. Admiral Ting and Major Hanmkin China's best naval officers, are reported having been killed during the attack. No estimates are made of losses by either side.

A dispatch from Shanghai says that an imperial edict has been issued depriving Viceroy Li Hung Chang of two of his decorations because of his mismanagement of the Korean campaign (Kookai Shang) as reported, instigating against Li Hung Chang through the emperor's favorite teachers. Another correspondent says the Japanese are rapidly advancing upon Monkden.

Washington: The new treaties which Japan is effecting with the great powers, including the United States are regarded in diplomatic circles as an event in international affairs quite as important as the Chinese-Japanese war as the treaties will for the first time give official recognition to Japan as one of the sisterhood of civilized nations. The terms of the treaty with Great Britain have just been made public. A similar treaty is now being negotiated with this country and it is expected to be the second of new treaties to be signed. Then will come a like treaty with Germany and other powers.

Japs to March Upon Pekin. London: A dispatch from Shanghai says that a fleet of 21 Japanese transports, conveying 10,000 troops, sailed from a Japanese port. It is supposed that it is the intention of the Japanese commander to land his forces at some point on the Chinese coast. The Chinese fleet, under the command of Admiral Ting, has sailed south for the purpose of intercepting the Japanese. The correspondent of the Times at Yokohama says: Large reinforcements of Japanese troops have gone to Korea. Wagers are being made in Tokio that the Japanese army will occupy Pekin, the capital of China, or Mukden, the capital of the province of Lea Tong Manchouria, on November 3.

NEWS IN BRIEF. A premature blast occurred at Honey Brook colliery, near Hazelton, Pa. by which one man was killed and three injured. The men were working on a coal stipping at the time. An old man was found lying dead on the B. & O. railway on the platform at Fritchton, Ind. Papers found on his person proved him to be Andrew N. McGinniss, of Cedarville, O. A dispatch received from Seoul, Korea, dated September 10, says that the Japanese force moving from Gensam has completely routed the Chinese at Sing Chuen. Both sides are reported to have lost heavily. Peter McArdle, of Brooklyn, while intoxicated threw his 5-year-old niece, Mamie McArdle, out of the second-story back window to the ground. He then jumped after her. The child is dead, but the brute was unhurt. Ten persons were killed and 20 injured by the wreck of the Paris and Cologne express train. The accident happened at Apply, near Brussels, and was caused by a collision of the express train with a freight train.

THE VETS AT PITTSBURG.

The Annual Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The decreasing ranks of the G. A. R.—the veterans who saved the nation—gathered once more in annual encampment as is the custom, this time at Pittsburg.

As is usually the case the parade of veterans was the big event of the encampment. Over 40,000 of the nation's heroes marched through the streets of Pittsburg and Allegheny in time with music such as carried them away on the lofty flights of patriotism in their younger days. Between 500,000 and 600,000 people witnessed the spectacle and cheered the veterans.

The business sessions of the encampment were of all of interest. Commander-in-Chief Adams, in his farewell address gave the following figures to show the condition of the G. A. R.: "One year ago there were in good standing 397,234. There have been gained during the year, by muster-in, 16,732; by transfer, 6,331; by reinstatement, 11,043; by reinstatement from delinquent reports, 2,519; total gain, 46,615. Aggregate, 436,854. There have been lost: By death, 7,233; by honorable discharge, 1,739; by transfer, 7,122; by suspension, 31,595; by dishonorable discharge, 151; by delinquent reports, 16,671; total loss, 57,801. Number remaining in good standing June 30, 1894, 399,083." To which he added these figures showing that the Grand Army of the Republic has reached the beginning of the end, and each succeeding year will show a gradual decrease in our membership.

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, presented the claims of his city for the encampment in 1895 and that place was the unanimous choice of the delegates.

Of course the real interest of the business session centered in the selection of a new commander-in-chief. Judge Long, of Michigan, having withdrawn from the race there were only two candidates—Col. Thomas G. Lawler, Rockford, Ill. and Col. J. A. Walker, Indianapolis, Ind. The closeness of the result was a surprise to both victor and defeated. It took 45 minutes to cast and count the ballots of the 619 delegates. Then Commander Adams announced that the vote stood Lawler, 330; Walker, 319. The Illinois man winning by the narrow margin of eleven votes. Col. Walker then withdrew and the vote was made unanimous. The other officers were chosen as follows: Senior vice-commander Maj. A. H. Purcell, of Pittsburg; junior vice-commander Chas. Shute, of Louisiana, surgeon-general O. Weeks, Marion, O. chaplain-in-chief T. H. Haggerty, St. Louis. The new commander-in-chief appointed Comrade C. C. Jones of Rockford, Ill. adjutant-general, and Comrade J. N. Barst, of Syracuse, Ill. quartermaster-general, and established headquarters at Rockford, Ill.

Col. Lawler was born in England on April 7, 1818, and came to the United States in 1841. At the age of 17 he enlisted as a private in Company E, Nineteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He accompanied his company for 18 months during the Atlanta campaign and was elected captain by his company and placed on the roll of honor of the 184th Regiment of the Army of the Cumberland. He organized the Rockford Rifles in 1876 and was elected colonel and commanded the Third Regiment, U. S. C., for seven years, after he resigned. He was postmaster at Rockford under the Hayes and Garfield administrations and is on the lumber and coal business. Col. Lawler has been commander of G. A. R. Post of Rockford for 23 consecutive years. He has also served as a member of the department of the Grand Army of the Republic, junior and senior vice-department commander.

Mrs. Sarah C. Mink, national president of the W. K. C. in her report said that the movement to obtain pensions for army nurses had been pushed. The other official reports showed that there are 2,676 corps and that $170,534.26 was expended during the year in relief work.

The Women's Relief Corps elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Emma R. Wallace, Chicago; senior vice-president Mrs. Helen E. Morrison, Smithport, Pa.; junior vice-president Mrs. Lizzie R. Herrick, Seattle, Wash.; treasurer, Mrs. Anna A. Cheney, Detroit; chaplain, Mrs. S. Agnes Parker, Massachusetts.

The Ladies of the G. A. R. chose officers as follows: President Mrs. Nettie E. Ganlock, Chicago; senior vice-president Mrs. Etta Toby Indiana; junior vice-president Mrs. Anna M. Hall, West Virginia; treasurer Mrs. J. C. George, Washington, D. C.; chaplain Mrs. Mary Reynolds, Wisconsin.

The Daughters of Veterans officers were elected. President, Mrs. Ellen M. Walker, Worcester, Mass.; senior vice-president Miss Anna Schmid, St. Louis; junior vice president, Miss Gladys Foster, Kansas; chaplain, Miss Lena Stevens, Mass.; treasurer, Mrs. Ida J. Allen, Newtonville, Mass.; inspector, Miss Addie York, Somerville, Mass.

Alexander III, has not completed his 50th year. He has been 11 years on the throne. His heir, Nicholas, is 26 and unmarried. He is betrothed to Princess Alix of Hesse, but the match is known to be distasteful to him and not over agreeable to her, involving, as it does abandonment of her Protestant faith for that of the Greek church. The marriage is set for next January but it is freely asserted that the wedding will never take place. He is declared to be opposed to matrimony, a fatalist who believes that he will perish by violence while young and that the dynasty will go out with this generation.

Four bodies were taken to the morgue charred and crushed beyond recognition, one is dead at the hospital; three injured men are at the hospital, and four are burning. Later reports say that six buried bodies have been found.

Robert J. Does a Mile in 2:01.1-4.

World's records went glimmering over the Terre Haute, Ind. track, which holds all but two—the fastest three heats pace and the fastest 3-year-old pacing record. There is hung up the fastest mile ever gone by a horse in harness, Robert J., 2:01.4; the miles of Nancy Hanke and Alex, each in 2:04; the world's record for 4-year-old trotters made by Fantasy in 2:26; the fastest six-heat race ever gone by a 3-year-old, Expressive's great race three weeks ago; the fastest 2-year-old trotting race record, Oakland Baron's mile in 2:16; Whirligig's 3-year-old pacing record of 2:03.7 by John R. Gentry, and the stallion record of 2:10 by Joe Fatchen; the marvelous mile by a 2-year-old pacer, done by Carbone in 2:09 and his previous record of 2:10 tied by Directly.

Robert J. by his latest performance not only broke his remarkable time of two weeks previous, but leaves all other racers far in the rear.

Train Robbers Killed. The Colorado & Utah express on the Santa Fe was held up by robbers at Gerin, Mo. But the railroad and express officials had a spy on the trail of the bandits, and when they stopped the train they met a hail of bullets and a bullet. It is said that at least two of the dead-in-the-woods while three others rode away, filled with leaden pellets. They were novices in the art of train robbery and brutal ones at that, for they shot 'Dad' Prescott, the engineer, before they even gave him a chance to hold up his hands. His wound will not prove fatal. The raid was planned three weeks ago.

Keokuk, Ia. Five farmers living three miles north of Arabella Mo. are the men who held up the Santa Fe at Gorm, Mo. Two of them, Charles Abrams and Lincoln Overfield, were captured at Memphis Mo., Abrams being shot six times with a Winchester. He cannot live.

Train Carried Away by a Cyclone. Two men were killed and a score of people injured, half of them fatally, in a cyclone at Charleston Mo., during which a train was blown from the track. A west-bound train on the Iron Mountain road had just reached the limits of the city when passengers and crew noticed the approach of a funnel-shaped cloud that was uprooting large trees and hurling everything before it. The train and the cyclone met, and the wind lifted the entire line of coaches and fanned them at a distance of 20 feet from the track turning them completely over. Aside from the train and its passengers the damage done by the cyclone which seems to have been purely local was slight. Its path was not over 1/2 mile wide and did not extend more than a mile.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF TRADE. New York—R. G. Dun & Co's review of trade says. Business has not so far continued larger than last month and larger than a year ago directly after the panic.

The country has now passed three weeks under the new tariff and all admit that changes have been of less importance as yet than was expected. If in some branches business has materially increased it has not to the extent of fallen off in others. Loss in some directions is explained by crop reports, for the most favorable estimate of exports put the loss of corn at about 40,000,000 bu. whereas the government report is by some interpreted as meaning a loss of 1,000,000,000 bu. The opinion of the trade does not favor the former estimate, and the price has not risen, though receipts have been very small and exports have materially increased and all realize that the shrinkage of 400,000,000 bu. is serious. It is probable, however, that it must affect prices of meats for a year or more. Pork is unchanged, but it had risen before official reports encouraging us to expect the price to rise, and the new product, which was noted as follows: the removal of some difficulties is measured by the capacity of futures in wheat. Less wheat is being sent abroad the rust of a stopped business having delayed and there is more disposition to defer purchases. The futures have been 30t in the United States, against the 42c which was last year and 44t in Canada against 27t last year.

New York—Broadstreet review says. All the features of employment in general trade reported a week ago are retained, and from a number of the more important business centers still further gains are reported. At various northern centers, where the weather has retarded the sales in dry goods, clothing and shoes. The showing of the various groups of railroad presents an irregular distribution of business. The most favorable change being in the southern lines. Woolen dress goods are not sold so actively as in previous weeks. Jobbers of carrying supplies by rail are not so busy, the public are likely to take January. The Erie railroad earnings for August, covering returns for 12 roads, having a mileage of 160,000 of 1st line, aggregated $21,461,000, against $21,663,886 in August, 1893.

Mrs. Ann Rogers, of the late Gen. John A. Logan, took morphine with suicidal intent. Despondency is supposed to be the cause.

Early in April last Jay Leavenworth sowed sixteen acres of oats. After they came up a cold snowstorm came on and the ground was covered with snow and many thought his time and seed were lost. Jay's faith however failed not and last week he threshed them and off the sixteen acres had 1,105 bushels as taken from the machine. We think this is a pretty good argument for farmers to sow oats as early as possible.

Over twelve years I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help.
