

THEY ARE GONE

The YMCA Convention a Thing of The Past.

BUT THEIR WORK STILL REMAINS.

Convention Details As Given by a Lady Reporter.

When the train from the south rolled into the station Friday evening about thirty-four of the "brightest, brightest and most enthusiastic young men that our village has ever had the good fortune to greet, descended to the platform with the cry of the Ann Arbor delegation.

Here we are, here we are today! Ann Arbor, Ann Arbor, Y.M.C.A. Then two abreast this enthusiastic crowd proceeded directly to Richardson's hall where a beautiful repast had been prepared for them by the Northville ladies at the request of the Y.M.C.A. of the village.

At the head of the main table sat toast master YouTay, the chairman of the state executive committee whose earnestness and deep interest in the welfare of young men has endeared him to the hearts of all. At his right sat Mr. C. A. Hutton who was to welcome the guests.

On this and on other like occasions the toast were by no means the least entertaining feature. After a brief introduction by Mr. C. A. Hutton, the toast master in a few apt sentences announced Mr. Hutton who gave the young men a royal welcome.

Mr. Hutton responded with "What we're here." After Rev. C. M. Brown of Tecumseh had satisfactorily explained "Who we are," the toast-master rose with an air of being about to make important disclosures.

Saturday morning work began in earnest. The program printed in last week's issue of the RECORD was carried out. The Bible talk given by Mr. Parker was a source of much inspiration to those present.

took part. The meeting closed with a graphic recital by Mr. Clark of the work accomplished in this state Saturday evening brought a crowded house and the address by Rev. Mr. Brown sent many home with new thoughts and renewed determination for the christian life and work.

UNITED STATES FISH HATCHERY.

Its Establishment, Growth and Present Condition.

I think I am fully justified in offering the reader a slight apology for the following article. At a very late hour I was asked to write an article about the United States Fish Hatchery of Northville.

The hatchery was established in 1874 by Mr. N. W. Clark, father of the present Sup't. E. N. Clark, the firm being known as N. W. Clark & Son. It was then carried on as a private enterprise until the fall of 1890, when the government bought it.

The hatchery is located about a half a mile from our pretty little city. Nestling in a slight ravine, so it were, the buildings and their surroundings are most interesting. On a bright sunny day when the heavens form a canopy of blue and the grass a velvet carpet beneath, the visitor wending his way along the avenues of the thirty ponds, drinking in the fragrance of the flowers which embroider the carpet, finds it indeed a beautiful, as well as an interesting sight.

About $100,000 have been expended for improvements, salaries, etc. During the entire year six men are employed but in November and December ten or twenty girls reinforce the usual number, making the pay-roll for those months amount to nearly $1,000.

A Humble Romance.

Onward bound, upon the ocean And far from the "Madding Crowd" A noble ship, "The Black Arrow" Laid behind a smoky cloud.

Not far from the musing maiden A Country Doctor stood "Doing His Best" to take the rest. "He" knew was for his good.

But to pass "From East to East" "Who Was She?" you inquire. What could it be but a glimpse Of our heroine, "Grace Byre"?

There is a "Little Minister" Down in the cabin here. "Who can't we two be married now, With none to interfere?"

There is probably not one reader of this week's edition of the RECORD who does not remember the national feeling of sympathy experienced upon the announcement that a cure for indigestion had been discovered.

It is just this part of the treatment in which Dr. Yarnall excels all others. Only the other day a well known physician who had been investigating the subject of "Wind Cures" said: "Dr. Yarnall has the pulse track of all of them. He has that knack of making new men of his patients which no other Gold-Cure physician has yet attained."

WHAT NEXT?

Northville's Needs from Her Citizens Point of View.

In reply to the question, "What does our village most need?" the following answers were received: C. A. Hutton—Good sewerage.

Ed. Merrill—First class base ball grounds. Geo. Hueston—More money. Dr. Swift—A higher moral status. T. G. Richardson—A nice big factory that would employ ladies, then you see they would have a little cash of their own.

ARRANGEMENTS have been made by the receiver of the Oregon railway and navigation company to establish a new line of steamers to China and Japan. It costs the postoffice department about $2,225,000 to carry the letter for whose transportation you pay 2 cents. That is the average expenditure of the government is $2,225,000 for every 2 cents of revenue received. This excess is not charged properly against the letter-carrying department, however. If the "dead-head" business done for publishers at a loss was deducted, the cost of carrying a letter would be much less than 2 cents.

A foreign man residing at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, has invented a submarine boat intended to make itself, entirely at home under water to the depth of 600 feet, and to be utilized either for warfare or scientific purposes. The air, enclosed in the boat is put through several processes, described as chemical and mechanical-chemical and mechanical. Power and light are supplied by storage batteries, and there are several other machines to render the boat movable in any direction. The navy department is reported to be taking an interest in the elaborate contrivance, which, if it accomplishes nothing else, will give the parachute-jumper a choice between a high fall and a long rise.

There are unmistakable signs that the giver of progressive eugenics parties is coming down from a lofty pedestal, so long and persistently occupied by her, and is taking a closer view of the necessities of mankind. The prizes are becoming more practical. The head gentleman's prize no longer consists of a hem-stitched handkerchief, with fringed edges and about the size of a postage stamp, a ladies' smelling bottle, some Dresden china designed only for holding a lady's puff and powder. The campaign has taken a more practical turn. At a progressive eugenics meeting recently the head gentleman's prize consisted of a pair of elaborately decorated suspenders. Now that is something like it. The prize winner found he had not labored in vain. He had something he knew what to do with, no matter whether he bearded, kept house or wanted to hang himself.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

HOW THE ALAMO MISSION WAS DEFENDED.

A Hundred of Heroic Texans Fought for Independence There. A Royal Lunch-son—How Arthur Took care of His-sail—A Boy's Dinner.

The Battle of the Alamo. It is a safe wager that nine out of every eleven boys who are present in the use of a bowie knife have not the slightest idea where the instru-ment got its name.

Colonel Bowie of Texas fame gave the knife its title. And when he writes of the Texas hero, he says: "I think of the Texas hero, and I think of the hero of the battle of Alamo, that heroic fight of which our American boys and girls seem to think so little, and half of them know nothing whatever."

They read how the brave soldiers fought and how the hero of the battle, the butcher seldom think of how a mere handful of men defended the Alamo mission. How they dropped fighting on their knees, and then died facing the foe.

If you should go to the historical city of San Antonio, in Texas, you will see the old mission building standing with battered, unbroken walls, a monument to the "Heroes of the Alamo." Behind these walls the most impor-tant battle in the war between Mexico and Texas was fought. This was when Santa Anna was president and the Texans were fighting for their in-dependence. Here it was that Col-onel Bowie ended his brave life, being with his boots on and fighting under the most terrible odds. This story is his and every American child should know it by heart; that is, they tell it with pride when other nations are talking of their great deeds.

One hundred and forty-two men under Captain Travis, a young man of twenty-eight, were holding the town of San Antonio against General Santa Anna and 4,000 men. They were the only defenders of the town and were encamped in the old mission of the Alamo. Davy Crockett was also with them, and Colonel Bowie, who was wounded and stretched out on his cot. Of artillery they had only four-teen pieces.

Santa Anna demanded surrender, but the little garrison held out for ten days, skirmishing secretly for food and water. Every shot sent out of the mission horns, told, but not one of the Alamo heroes was hurt. Pa-tience and strength, however, was being rapidly exhausted. Some of the little band were falling sick, others were desperate. Re-enforce-ments had been appealed for, but none had come. Colonel Linnain, with 300 men, and four pieces of ar-tillery, had started in answer to the appeal, but had put in somewhere for fresh water and food supplies.

At last Captain Smith joined the exhausted band with thirty-two men. Three days after General Santa Anna ceased the bombardment, and taking advantage of this, Captain Travis called his men into line and frankly owned that there was no earthly hope for them; that he had led them into this thinking that reinforcements were on the way. He does not utter one word against Linnain for failing him; he simply gives them their choice of deaths. They can surrender and be shot down, or be killed fighting out their revenge. The captain draws a line and says: "Every man who is determined to remain here and die with me come to me across that line." Every soldier but one crossed at once. When they finished Colonel Bowie looked up with his arm in a sling, and said: "Boys, don't leave me. Won't you carry me across?" And the only backward step they made was to go over the line and carry the captain to the young cap-tain's side. The man rose, who was a coward, dropped over the wall into a ditch and was really the only man who escaped to tell the tale. And then came the terrible day.

Santa Anna brought all his forces to bear on the fortress. The scaling ladders were again and again raised, but those who placed them were shot down like grain. Four thousand men charging into it seemed easy enough, but it soon reduced the four thousand. At last numbers conquered, and the Mexicans climbed over into the Alamo. The little band of defenders were trampled on and beaten, but they dropped to their knees and hacked and shot and pierced until the pile of the dead was awful. Colonel Bowie, too weak to rise from his cot, leans on his wall elbow, and marks his man every time he pulls the trig-ger. Cut, bleeding, he continues to kill until the pistol drops and the breath leaves his body. Davy Crockett, standing in a corner, fights like a panther, and the young captain, backed against the wall, surrounds only when run through and through.

The great battle is over. The Mex-icans have won. Out of the 173 Texans 173 are dead. No Spartans were braver or more tenacious, for they killed 521 of their enemies and wounded five hundred more. Texas, though, was guilty, freed, and when-ever great deeds thrill young boys' hearts, they should think of that splendid piece of American daring, and say, as Johnston said to his men: "Remember the Alamo."—Clare Claxton, in St. Louis Republic.

Emerison Was a Water in College. Emerson's father died before the boy was five years old, and thereafter the child had to help his mother, who took boarders and tried hard to give her sons an education such as their father's. In 1817 Emerson entered Harvard college, receiving help from various funds intended to aid poor students and sustaining the appoint-ment of "president's freshman," a student who received his lodgings

Some Pen and Ink Sketches of Popular Costumes—For a Widow—A Tea Gown—A What—The Pajama—Kitchen Recipes.

WOMAN HAS MADE another invasion in the province of dress heretofore ex-clusively monopolized by man and her great desire to avail herself of every op-portunity to appropri-ate each and every article of his wardrobe to her use is shown again in a feminine cap-tation of the men's pajama. To be sure, this negligé costume appears in a new guise, transformed into a thing of beauty, to gratify her more aesthetic taste, by the use of lace, rays of satin ribbon, and a blouse waist of the latest Parisian proportions, but it is a pajama still, with all the elements of comfort possessed by its more severe December Month. Arthur was not very tall, but he felt so, for he had just put on his best pair of trousers. He was going out that morning to a picnic. It was December, but he lived in Southern California, where summer lasts all the year. Mamma was dressing the baby. Papa was harnessing Meg. "You'll have a good time to-day, mamma," he said, "you will only have to take care of the baby. I can take care of myself." Mamma smiled. "I hope my little boy will be very good and enjoy him-self," she said.

When they came to a very steep road, Arthur, over in his breath quickly, but he only said: "Gress the bear's brand." When all the party had reached the canyon they had a nice lunch, and some of them went out to gather wild flowers. Papa went with them, but mamma stayed, with some other ladies and took care of baby.

After a time they came back with their hands full of beautiful flowers. "Where is Arthur?" asked mamma when they brought her a large bouquet. "Arthur? I thought he stayed with you," said papa.

"Hasn't you seen him since we left?" said papa. "He's been gone an hour, then. Oh, here, with all these gullies and steep banks." "And the mountain lions," cried mamma.

"And the rattlesnakes," said Aunt Sarah. Mamma laid the baby on the lap sofa and began to scramble up the mountain. Then she ran back and picked the baby up and tried to carry her. Papa was almost out of hearing one way and Aunt Sarah as far off in another. Every body ran and shouted and jogged up and down under the bushes and behind the rocks. After a long time they all came back but papa, tired, frightened, and with no Arthur.

"At last papa came, with Arthur asleep in his arms. He had found him a mile away at the foot of the canyon, in the signal house on the railroad. The colored man there was telling him stories and Arthur had on the man's old slouch hat.

Mamma kissed him and cried over him. That waked him. "I thought I was big and could take care of myself to-day, mamma," he said.—Chicago Times.

A Royal Luncheon. Now listen, my dear, what do you think? You will scarcely believe what I say. When I left you this wonderful table—did I know it? Well, it was a piece of good luck.

The place was laid in a archway white, and only a few feet square. And only one bread and butter cake, and jam. Were all the royal fare.

The letter was read in a archway white, and I have to a table could not but be four feet, and looked very much like our own old back to go.

The king was dressed in a gorgeous robe, and the queen's was exquisite. And the both had beautiful golden crowns that didn't exactly fit.

Their manners were dignified, grave and grand. Their appetites royal, too. Through the queen, or her pinatoro stained with jam, and his majesty choked himself twice.

And after the luncheon the king's state had stood her out, perhaps. The queen was exceedingly fat, and my top with her eyes, her head to my top.

For she is so little, you see, the king. The queen's crown was exquisite. And the both had beautiful golden crowns that didn't exactly fit.

Accept None of the Pretended Substitutes for Royal Baking Powder

BECAUSE inferior and cheaper made baking preparations are bought at wholesale at a price so much lower than ROYAL, some grocers are urging consumers to use them in place of the ROYAL at the same retail price.

If you desire to try any of the pretended substitutes for ROYAL BAKING POWDER bear in mind that they are all made from cheaper and inferior ingredients, and are not so great in leavening strength nor of equal money value. Pay the price of the ROYAL BAKING POWDER for the ROYAL only.

It is still more important, however, that ROYAL BAKING POWDER is purer and more wholesome, and makes better, finer, and more healthful food than any other baking powder or preparation.

Every woman in the opera house ought to be a widow in the morning.

BLACK SATIN AND WHITE CORDED SILK. ing" period when she saw that opera cloak. There was a yoke of black satin heavily embroidered in pearls and finished with a collar of ostrich feathers. Ostrich feathers also trimmed the bottom of the yoke. From this yoke a long, fell cloak of white corded silk fell to the ground. Two deep shoulder flounces of the white finished the cloak, one reaching the waist line, the other half as long. Both of these were outlined by a narrow band of jet embroidery. The cloak itself and the shoulder flounces were lined with pale lavender.—New York World.

WOMAN'S EDITION. SIXTEEN PAGES. NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN, MARCH 1, 1895.

Musical Notes

What woman has not done with music, more than she has given to music?

Max Heinrich, the most artistic singer on the American stage, sang in the Grand Opera, on the 18th he sang in Detroit with Prof. Mehan's new opera society.

The quartet choir of the Church of Our Father, Detroit (Rev. Les McColester) is one of the strongest in the city being composed of Mrs. Nellie Goodwin Moore, Mr. and Mrs. M. Pease and Dr. B. B. Spaulding.

The Fant St. Cecilia society is in a flourishing condition. The ladies recently followed the fashion of journalism and published a St. Cecilia bulletin, one of the local papers. They have also given several entertainments of a high order this winter.

A concert of sacred music was given in St. Mark's church, Grand Rapids, the 22nd, complimentary to Mrs. T. B. Church who for fifty years has served as organist. Mrs. Church has seldom been absent from her post, until about three months ago, when she sprained her wrist by a fall.

The St. Cecilia's women's edition of the Saginaw News of the 15th inst. was a dazzling success. The first paper printed on white silk presented an elegant appearance and sold for $1.00. The 10,000 extra 16 page copies went like wild-fire and the Saginaw Saints have proven their capability as editors and journalists.

Stavenshagen, the new pianist, bids fair to rival the adored Paderewski in the hearts of the fair ones who worship at the shrine of genius. He is regarded by some critics to be the greatest Liszt player ever heard in Detroit and his rendition of the death of "Loloda" is a refutation of the assertion that Wagner can be heard only with an orchestra. Liszt pronounced Stavenshagen his legacy to the musical world and it was a royal gift.

It is a fact worthy of note that the St. Cecilia building in Grand Rapids is the only one in the world devoted to music, built by women. Ten years ago the women will music in their souls, met in response to a call, in a private parlor to see what steps could be taken to organize a musical society. The object stated "to promote good fellowship, congeniality and mutual improvement among the lady music lovers of the city." From the first meeting there has been no question of the success of the society. The interest has never lagged, there has been a marked improvement in the work from year to year, and they have recently erected and dedicated a beautiful temple which shall stand as a lasting memorial to the intelligence, devotion and refinement of the women of Grand Rapids.

The progress of music in America in the past six or eight years has been remarkable. Less than a dozen choral and oratorio societies existed ten years ago, while now there are nearly 100 vocal societies in this country who during every year practice a number of oratorios and cantatas. Years ago one heard of only a stray performance of the "Messiah." This season there were about seventy-five societies who performed this oratorio, not to mention the churches in which selections from that great work of Handel are often heard during their Sunday services. Only a few years since, permanent orchestras were found in Boston and New York; now there are good organizations in Buffalo, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Chicago, San Francisco and Cincinnati. Artists who can do first class work have little trouble about getting numerous engagements during the season; on the contrary their services are in constant demand.

"Music is a delight to the heart, a rest to the brain, a comfort to the soul."—MRS. BELLE RANDOLPH LONG.

Church Notes

Presbyterian:

Rev. Chas. M. Brown of Tecumseh delivered a very able address at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning. A series of sermons on "The Reformation" will be delivered by Mr. Belding sometime in the near future. Topic next Sunday at the Presbyterian church morning, "Under other skies" evening: "Why is your business?"

Rev. Mr. Belding will spend a part of this week in Pinckney where he has been called to assist in conducting revival services. The King's Daughters have just completed several articles of clothing to be sent to the little ones in one of the founding's homes in Detroit.

Rev. J. M. Belding, district secretary of the Y.P.C.E. will assist in conducting the district convention to be held at Pontiac, Friday, March 7. Several members of his C. E. society of this place will attend.

Prof. Smith of Pontiac, one of the Y.M.C.A. delegates, led the Christian Endeavor concert service Sunday evening. The attendance was large and the meeting was of unusual interest. Mr. Smith is an earnest speaker and all felt that the society was fortunate in securing his aid.

Methodist

Next Sunday evening the Epworth League receive into fellowship several young people. It is said that only three of the Y. M. C. A. delegates in attendance at the convention used tobacco in any way.

At the Methodist church, next Sunday John 11:35 will be the morning text. The evening topic will be the Prodigal Son. The Epworth League is steadily on the up-hill move. Its devotional meetings are inspiring. About seventy five are in regular attendance. The Sunday school under the superintendency of Mr. E. P. Beal is growing both in numbers and interest. All young and old who do not attend the schools will find a most cordial welcome. The Junior Epworth League under the direction of Mrs. John Highland is a most prosperous society of little folks. They have in preparation a Mother Goose entertainment which will doubtless be as amusing to the older ones as to the children themselves. The sleigh-ride social at Mr. Maurice Ludington's Tuesday evening was done the less enjoyable because they rode either on wheels. The Ladies Guild deserves much credit for the successful issue of the undertaking. About one hundred were present and over five dollars the profits thereof. Half a dozen of the young people, nothing daunted by not being able to ride, walked all the way to the social and seemed none the worse for their pluck.

The young people are preparing for a novel and interesting affair in the shape of a poetry entertainment. The entertainment will be pleasing in the extreme, and the refreshments be such as will tend to satisfy the inner man. Do not miss it.

Its devotional meetings are inspiring. About seventy five are in regular attendance. The Sunday school under the superintendency of Mr. E. P. Beal is growing both in numbers and interest. All young and old who do not attend the schools will find a most cordial welcome. The Junior Epworth League under the direction of Mrs. John Highland is a most prosperous society of little folks. They have in preparation a Mother Goose entertainment which will doubtless be as amusing to the older ones as to the children themselves. The sleigh-ride social at Mr. Maurice Ludington's Tuesday evening was done the less enjoyable because they rode either on wheels. The Ladies Guild deserves much credit for the successful issue of the undertaking. About one hundred were present and over five dollars the profits thereof. Half a dozen of the young people, nothing daunted by not being able to ride, walked all the way to the social and seemed none the worse for their pluck.

Sunday morning will be the regular appointment of the church for the Lord's supper. The right hand of fellowship will also be given to several in the evening sermon suggested by the Sunday-school lesson. Topic—The Judgment.

We have been greatly blessed as a church and society the past few months by the additions made, the increased interest manifested. We would be untrue to our Savior if we did not frankly and gladly say that He has been the source of all the blessings. The other factors have been only the instruments in His hands. He has inspired the desires, directed the minds, warmed the heart and sealed the truth. To Him as the author and finisher of the blessing do we give all the praise.

"Whoever will may come." We come to the young people's prayer meetings and to all the services of our church.

A Short Tale.

Binks—Oh, yes, she carries herself like an empress, and bosses me around all she likes now; but wait until we get married, and see how she'll fawn and wriggle.

Winkers—Mean! Mean! Mean! No name for it. Why that fellow is mean enough to put his name on an umbrella.

First Burglar—Everything is fixed. You are to enter the house and bring out the things, and Bill and Jim will be on the outside, with four or five wagons to load 'em in.

Chinese Emperor (nervously)—What news? Official—Japan is now anxious for peace. Emperor (glumly)—Yes, but how big a piece?

Remembered Her Father. Clara—I never saw such a beautiful collection of Christmas presents. Did you give your father anything? Bora—Why, of course. You don't suppose I'd forget my own darling father, do you?

Emancipated Woman (1890)—My dear! Emancipated Husband (timidly)—Yes! Emancipated Woman (sternly)—Your debt bill is perfectly outrageous. The idea of paying $1 for that bit of shabby stiffened or black!

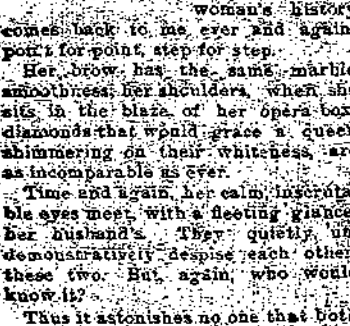

Not Unreasonable. You are advertising for an orchestra? Skinner (of Skinner & Co.)—Yes, we have a vacancy. "Hones band?" "You'll have to work sixteen hours a day."

The Problem Solved. Mrs. Rulien—Your husband is still as devoted as a lover. I don't see how you manage. Mrs. Kissin—It's very simple. When he comes home late, I always pretend to be asleep; when he has a headache in the morning, I tell him he's overworked; when he leaves his hat in the parlor, his overcoat in the dining room, and his overboots upstairs, I quietly gather them up and put them in the front hall; and when we go to the theater, I never forget to suggest that he should improve the shining hours between the acts by going out and talking business with his customers.

Good as a Coat of Arms. Little Ethel—Why is it women are always complainin' about the hired girl? Little Dot—Oh, that's just so folks will know they can afford to keep one.

A Business Woman. Pretty Girl—Are you Miss Backday's waiting maid? Maid—Yes'm. "Miss Backday is a great heiress from Boston, isn't she?" "She is."

A WOMAN'S HISTORY

WHEN I see her pass in her carriage in the park wrapped in her fur, opulent, haughty, cold, invulnerable, beautiful, the woman's history comes back to me, ever and again, point for point, step for step.

Her brow has the same marble smoothness, her shoulders, when she sits in the blaze of her opera box, diamonds that would grace a queen shimmering on their whiteness, are as incomparable as ever.

Time and again, her calm, inscrutable eyes meet with a fleeting glance, her husband's. They quietly, unobtrusively, despite each other, these two. But, again, who would know it?

Thus it astonishes no one that both go their several ways. As for Hammond, he does not wear as well as the beautiful Adrienne. Once, before his face took on that shadow of bloatedness, his neck that, boris character, he was handsome enough.

But that was ten years ago. The outward circumstances were different then. On a Monday, early afternoon in January, a lady with a keen, clear, determined countenance, and eyes brooding, calculating, scanning, combining as he went along the crowded city streets, was accosted by another man, of about the same age, who was hastening, though somewhat more leisurely, in the opposite direction.

"Hullo, Hammond!" Hammond half-wheeled round and stopped. "If you've nothing else on hand, come and make that call with me to-night," said Searle. Hammond was conscious of no special eagerness. But Searle was a rather good friend of his—the best he had. That was, perhaps, not saying much, for Hammond's friends were few. He had come from a rural district to the great city, resolved upon making his way. How he lived he himself best knew for a few years.

There were times when the struggle was fought at such close quarters that his board-bills often remained unpaid. But at the darkest the dogged determination in him never faltered. He used now and then to walk up the fashionable streets at night and loiter a moment lost in the crown of street Arabs, of small and large growth, at the house of a well-known prince of finance, over whose front steps an awning extended to the curb.

The noiselessly opening and shutting door at the head of the steps gave glimpses of an interior of light.

edge the beauty of Adrienne Eastlake was impossible. Hammond, pleading another appointment left early. Searle lingered behind half an hour later.

"What do you think of Hammond?" he asked, looking down at the girl as she sat before him in a low chair, her head thrown back.

"I have only seen him once," she said gravely. Her manner to the man she was going to marry was cool, calm, elusive. But unconsciously, blinded by his own engrossing passion, Searle invested it with a reflected terror.

"Oh, Hammond is bound to strike back some day. Let me tell you about him."

"And Searle discoursed for some minutes to which Adrienne listened languidly."

"Egad," he cried, with a sudden laugh, "if he had only a start, with a little capital—say $10,000. Something like the chance, one of two fellows I know would have it if they were aware of certain inside facts, I could communicate to them."

Searle was rather a weak man, and a somewhat indiscreet one. When Adrienne, with a few show of interest, asked what was the inside fact, he was not proof against the flattery of her freshly bestowed attention.

"Simply the fact that our bank—then he stopped short."

"Look here," he laughed unsteadily, "I ought not to be telling you this, but I only show what confidence I have in you, now, wouldn't you? Haven't you been better than any girl was worshipped before?"

"She laid her cheek against his shoulder. Her caresses at all times had been few. This one fired his blood."

"Tell me," he said, still in the presence of mind to ask.

"But why do you want to know?" "Simply a feminine curiosity. If you don't tell me, I shall know you don't love me."

"And Searle told her."

The following morning, a slight, girlish figure, with a certain majesty too, despite its girlishness, was admitted to the small office where Hammond was eagerly scanning some papers.

The lady's face was veiled. When she asked if she might see him alone on important business, Hammond, with a faintly puzzled brow, led the way to a still smaller inner room.

Then she removed her veil. "Miss Eastlake?" "Yes, you are surprised, of course. Yet a man such as I take you to be should be surprised at nothing. As a preamble to what I came here to say, however, I am going to tell you that, if you do not know me, I know you, for better than you think possible. Don't misunderstand me."

The girl had seated herself. She spoke in a quiet, collected, level voice. "I am not in love with you. But, from the things Oscar Searle has let drop inadvertently about you from time to time, I have formed a certain idea of your personality. And that personality interested me because it coincided with my own, with my own temper, with my mode of thought. As soon as I heard you speak last night—I had seen you before and studied your face, for Mr. Searle pointed you out to me on more than one occasion—I saw that I had not been mistaken in this view. I had conceived of the manner of man you were. Well, this being so, I have come to make a bargain. I think it quite to your advantage. I shall state it as briefly as possible. Few words are needed."

this woman were closed. When Hammond walked with his visitor to the door, the information had been given, the bargain struck.

Before him, Hammond's insatiable, inner eye saw stretching the feverish vision of success, no longer afar off and dimly uncertain, but near, close, within the grasp of his hand.

Yet in all the exultation of that moment, a thought, bringing with it a smile of confirmed cynicism, shot through his mind. Who was it that said that a woman, once given over to the luxury of this world could be more unscrupulous than any man?

Searle today is a poor man. For ten years past he has been an unsuccessful one. That tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, led Hammond and his beautiful wife on to fortune, has left him stranded. He lost his position in the bank, the same unenviable repute has hung about his name ever since. But Hammond, bulls and bears the market, and Adrienne has attained her end—enjoys the fullest fruition of her ambition.

To the general world she represents triumph incarnate, success. The few who know see her drive by, as I do, with wonder and a question as to the possible final end of an earthly triumph.

A WOMAN'S WIT. Searle, an Advertising Dodge That Sold Bull and Bear.

In answer to a newspaper's request for his advertisement a prominent merchant lately said: "Show me a new way to advertise and I'll consider it. His case proved the seemingly hopeless condition of conventional advertising."

To be unique or original is almost impossible. But the woman who suggested an idea recently to a real estate man is now making a respectable commission by her cleverness.

The owner was the unfortunate possessor of land in New Jersey, past which the train whizzed daily to well populated suburbs of New York. One day it was noticed that at the usually empty, forlorn-looking station, instead of a single farmer in his one-horse, rickety vehicle, there were smart English traps, with English-looking grooves and footmen, drawn by hot-tailed hackneys, a coach and tandem, and chic French bonnets with long exp. ribbons carrying very much belagard and to-ribbomed infants in their arms. There were stunning looking young women, too, with golf caps and skirts, chatting with equally well groomed young men in driving coats or corduroys. The whole scene suggested that the fashionable population of Newport or Leves had taken possession of a place formerly given up to the farmer and mosquito.

As the train stopped several fashionably dressed people entered the stipling coats and umbrellas recognized labels which seemed to be waiting for the up train to New York and, above all followed by the surprised looks of the people in the train.

For several weeks the little wayside station was teeming with life and filled with attractive looking people. Before this, this real estate man's and his wife's, had with marketing to be in touch with this fine society, and undeterred by the fact that the few buildings in sight were not in keeping with the representations at the station, purchased land and began building. Lots were rapidly sold, streets were laid out, and what had been a hopelessly unattractive way station, soon blossomed into a thriving New Jersey summer resort.

How long it took the investors to discover that the supposed population was simply a score of impetuous actors and actresses, who, owing to hard times and out of employment, were glad for a few dollars a day to be used as an advertisement, no one knows.

The real estate man and the clever woman who suggested the idea are reaping the benefits and receiving the hearty congratulations of the real estate agents. A prominent member of this profession says he is going to borrow her plan for use at some untenanted land he has near Saratoga.

The Shipkeeper. Some dozens of families are comfortably established in the ships lying idle about the port of New York. The shipkeeper, as the caretaker of a ship laid up, in winter quarters is called, gets house rent, provisions and some cash payment. He must be a trustworthy person, with some nautical skill and knowledge. He and his live cozily enough, and there is a good deal of fun aboard ships when there are neighbors to drop in, newspapers to be read and a bit of music to enliven the tedium.

The Secret of Barometer Making. "Eureka!" exclaimed the inventor of mechanical instruments. "I've got it at last! I've perfected a barometer which easily surpasses all others. I've got the index hand on the dial permanently fixed at change."

"But I don't see," said his listener, in a puzzled way, "how you see."

"Of course you don't," said the inventor with enthusiasm. "But my barometer's bound to be right in the long run all the time."—Chicago Record.

TALES RETOLD. Justice Hawkins, a noted English jurist, was once hearing a case, and while counsel was addressing him was more intent on giving instructions to the attendants to close a window and try to stop a draft than attending to the arguments put forth. At length, when his lordship was more composed, the learned Q. C. annoyed at his arguments going to the wind in such a manner, said: "I am not quite sure whether your lordship caught that point." The judge was all attention again. "I am not quite sure," said the counsel. "There's only one thing I'm sure I have caught and that is a cold."

Rev. Dr. Bancroft, the father of George Bancroft, the historian, was once pastor of the First Unitarian church of Worcester, Mass. A carpenter was commissioned to make two tablets, on which the Ten Commandments were to be painted. The carpenter made the tablets of knotty boards, perhaps not realizing their use. When Dr. Bancroft directed the painter not to let the knots show, the man painted the Ten Commandments and carefully left spaces where the knots ought to stand. Dr. Bancroft had a sense of humor, and he laughed and then said the painter he had misunderstood him, and had better restore the knots.

The late George W. Stearns, the Boston lawyer, was defending a young fellow for larceny, the evidence against whom was only circumstantial. Stearns urged that circumstantial evidence ought never to convict a man. "Why?" said the counsel. "When I was a boy I remember a playmate of mine who while his parents were absent, went to the pantry and nearly devoured a big custard pie before he thought of the paternal strap. When he did he looked around for some means of hiding the traces of his guilt. He saw the family cat in a corner and taking puss by the neck, he carefully smeared her paws with the custard, took the guilty cat out into the backyard and shot her. As the shotgun rang out the boy observed to me with a chuckle: 'There goes one more victim of circumstantial evidence.' The jury disagreed."

A Few of the Many "Why Matters" Which Occupy Her—The Old Trundle Bed—When Women Write—The Making of Soups—Children's Books.

Through Housewife.
There should be little sympathy for the mother of grown-up daughters who takes upon her own shoulders all the burdens of housekeeping, because she doesn't want to bother them with such "why matters." It is just because wives and daughters have looked upon housekeeping duties as uninteresting or trivial that so many homes are poorly managed to-day. The same abilities are required for the successful management of the large and prosperous home, as are needed in any business, and luckily some of the best educated women are beginning to realize this fact. It is said that even such a very wealthy woman as Mrs. George Harist keeps a careful account of every cent spent in her home. Marketing requires experience and knowledge of different kinds of meat, and to select for oneself is surely the most satisfactory and economical way of providing provisions for the family. This is only one of the cares of the housewife who believes in business methods. Her account books must be as carefully kept as her husband's business ledgers. She knows to a cent what it costs each person for board. She keeps a stamped envelope for each bed and bath, for she is fastidious and likes nice belongings and believes in taking care of the same. In poorly managed homes a certain per cent of the monthly allowance has to go regularly for replacing articles lost or broken. Think what other responsibilities are borne by the thorough housewife!

She must plan the menu and work for the day, and whatever she does not attend to do with her own hands she must fully explain to others. How many times it is said that women have no idea of time. Is it this trifling with time which helps bring about family discomfort and disorderliness? A time for everything and everything on time is as good a maxim for the home as it is for the big manufacturing establishment. The common belief that the home will run itself while the mistress fritters away the day helps fill the hotels with restless women and unhappy men, who found no peace in keeping home, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle. If there is a clever wife or daughter to quickly arrange the routine of household tasks on one thinks about any other plan of living. These are the "why matters" and the greatest harm is done by letting daughters shirk all household cares, as their future happiness depends either on their experience in these things or their willingness to learn.

The Making of Soups.
There are but two kinds of soup—cream or clear. In making the former half milk may be used, or the milk of an egg, instead of literal cream, except in making a bisque of clams. There is nothing but the genuine article will suffice. Don't scum soup. What rises to the surface is what you want in your stock. Get the foreleg of beef, never take a hind leg. Use one quart of cold, soft water to one pound of meat, and edibles, simmer one hour to each pound. Put the cracked bones in the bottom of the kettle, lay the meat out from them on top, add water, and simmer. For the last hour add the vegetables. Strain it and set in a cold place, but not in the refrigerator. The next day take the grease off the top, if it is winter weather in the summer leave it on, but, of course, only take the jellied stock from beneath it. This same grease may be fried off in boiling water and used for all purposes of soups. Never add the salt to soup till the last thing, as it will harden the water. Thicken cream soups with one tablespoonful of butter to two of flour, for one quart of liquid, rubbing it smooth, and adding it to scalded milk.

Nature Will Assert Herself.
One woman said of another recently: "She boasts that she is never idle. That every moment not spent in sleep is a busy one." When she does sit down for a short time she always has some fancy work ready and picks it up. She declares that she can rest as well if her hands are occupied as if they lie quiet in her lap. In fact, she says that she rests better for the trifling work, and imagine that she does, but it is because she is too overwrought and too nervous to rest perfectly still. I shall be much surprised if, some day, there is not a total collapse there. If nature has, as is alleged, a long memory and never forgets an injury, it does seem probable that this woman who, like her prototype in Mother Goose, "never is quiet," will some day discover that the few moments of refreshment and rest that she would not seize, as she went on with her daily work, have been forced upon her in the accumulation of their long arrears.

Women Who Save.
"It would be impossible to give the exact number of women who deposit money," said the receiving teller at a savings bank. "Half of our depositors are women. Domestic deposit the most money, and the most regularly. They save money against a rainy day, or to buy a wedding outfit, or to secure admission to some home when they are too old to work." Of course, we have all classes of depositors, but clerks and type-writers are more apt to have a sport of saving money. They deposit money in the bank, say $50 or $75, then they

He Is the Most Popular Man in the British Army—Brother of the Most Popular Man in England—Friend of France King.

When a man writes he wants position and circumstance and eternal space from which to draw. If he writes at home he needs a study or a library, and he wants the keys lost, and the keyhole pasted over, so that nobody can disturb him. His finished products are of much importance to him, and for a time he wonders why the planets have not changed their orbits or the sunbabe acquired a new brilliancy because he has written something by a cast-iron method. A woman picks up some scraps of a copy-book or the back of a pattern, sharpens her pencil with the scissors of genius and the sharper. She takes an old cigar stub, tucks her foot under her, sucks her pencil periodically, and produces literature.

She can write with Genevieve pounding out her exercises on the piano, with Mary buzzing over her history lesson for to-morrow, Tommy teasing the baby, and the baby pulling the cat's tail. The domestic goddess and goddess of directions and supplies, but the course of true love runs on, the lovers sit and wait, and the willow will and die among the latest commonplace paraphrases.

Go Shopping Alone.
It is almost always a mistake for two ladies to go shopping together, and invariably a mistake for more than that number to attempt to thread the mazes of the shops in company. Only very well, strong women are equal to the strain of it, for the inevitable cross-purposes are even more fatiguing than trying to keep together in the crowds of the shopping district. The things which interest one have no number of attraction for another. The woman with children stops to look at the little gowns and chucks, which would be so cunning for Nellie or Charlie, while her childless companion is impatient to get to the bargain counter of the India firm. In any case, if both have purchases to make one must push through the crowds and wait while her companion selects and purchases and waits for her change, and then the whole process is reversed, and thereby the fatigue of both and the time consumed is doubled. In occasional instances when a purchase of some magnitude is to be made, and the time and advice of another is desirable, a shopping companion is a real help. But ordinary shopping, the frequent aggregation of trifling purchases, the sensible woman will accomplish in solitary comfort—or at least a nearer approach to it than if she had another woman with her—to say nothing of the increased comfort of the other woman somewhere else.

The Old Trundle Bed.
The old trundle bed, where I sit when a boy!
What capoted his might not cover the joy!
The play and peace of that stumber of mine
Like a low graceful rest in the bosom of The bed.
This quaint, homely couch, hidden close from
The light,
But quietly drawn from its hiding at night,
O' a nest of delight from the foot to the head.
Was the queer little, dear little, old trundle
bed!
O' the old trundle bed, where I wonder now
The secret through the window, and listened with awe
To the sigh of the wind as they tremulously crept
Through the reeds where the robins so fast
leapt
Where I heard the low, murmurous chirp of the wren,
And the rattled listlessly chirrup again,
Till my fancies grew faint, and were drowsily led Through the maze of the dreams of the old trundle bed!
O, the old trundle bed! O, the old trundle
bed!
With its plump little pillow and old-fashioned spread
Its "mother" white sheets, and its blankets
"above," Smoothed down and tucked round with the touches of love
The voice of my mother to lull me to sleep
With the old story songs my memories keep Still fresh as the lilies that bloom o'er the head.
Once bowed o'er my own in the old trundle
bed!
—From Armazady and Other Poems.

Books for Children.
A wise and bright young mother does not approve of too many children's books for children. "They will often reach up and understand your book when you think it necessary to stop by giving them your book in a diluted state," she says. "Read to them and with them, and then so many children's books will not be necessary. They will also learn how to use books by imitation, and in a home where the reading is discussed, where the dictionary and atlas are in constant use, you will most likely notice like habits, even among the small children of the family."

What There is in Sheep.
About all there is in life is a good night's sleep. Instead of worrying and fretting for fame, a man should conduct himself in such a manner during the day that he will sleep well at night. If a man will behave himself and sleep well, he need not worry about his future; he will succeed in everything that is desirable, very much better than those who do not behave themselves, and consequently do not sleep well. The great secret of life is good conduct. It brings all the rewards that are worth having.

We have suffered blizzards, a water winter but now we have a newly organized boys' band. Prof. Jenkins

How to dine at Half Price.—Wear a pair of spectacles of strong magnifying power, at dinner time you will find a penny roll transformed into a two-penny loaf—a sardine metamorphosed into a Yarmouth bloater.

There seems to be some mistake in regard to the hours of closing the library Saturday night. For the benefit of the gentlemen calling for their lady friends, the hour of closing is nine o'clock, not eight.

Ernest Westphal, who occupies the Pitt Johnson farm half a mile east of resort to Hood's Sarsaparilla or Paine's Celery Compound, but come to the

The business manager of our usually uplifting and genial paper Mr. R. H.
Lynch in the "What Next" column takes on a pathetic aspect when the fact that he was suffering intensely from an attack of neuralgia when interviewed is disclosed.

Miss Mae Starkweather entertained the Coma Pedro Club last week Wednesday evening. Owing to the inclem-ency of the weather not all of the members were present but those that were had a very enjoyable time. Two more parties complete the series.

As the result of a bit of bluffing between two of Northville's young men the other day, one of them suffered the humiliation of backing the others shoes. Now Mr. —, a boot-black is greatly needed at the institute and by working up the trade a little it might pay even better than a government job.

Being unable to see each personally we take the means of expressing our sincere thanks to the many friends who rendered so many kind acts during the illness and death of our husband and father. We are grateful for beyond what mere words can convey. Mrs. Charles Woodman and sons.

The Record office is making special inducements, as usual this season on auction bills. Auctioneers every where agree that no more attractive bills are printed in the state than at this office.
The extra notice to the Record which is read by everybody draws the balance of the crowd who don't see the catchy bills.

The dignity of one of our business men was slightly ruffled not long since, that is, as much ruffled as two pails of cold water and a full length contact with an icy path could make it. He considers the cause of his downfall a necessary adjunct of his business when the warm weather comes but just now he would prefer that it remain in the hands of the ice dealer.

Was a woman ever known to blow out the gas or to be bunched by a man who wanted to borrow money to pay a freight bill? Does she ever get her pockets picked or lose money on a "little game"? If she has a roll of money with her, does she ever flash it out when she wants to buy a cake of chewing? Isn't it a fact that she is wiser with money when she is traveling than the men and more to be trusted? Instead of a woman having a man along to "protect" her, the daily papers prove that every man that goes away from home should have a woman to act as a guardian and keep him from making a bigger fool of himself than he naturally is.

The "Citizens" caucus will be held

all reliable.

Do not forget the LOTM masquerade social at the home of A. K. Dohg this Friday evening. Doughnuts and coffee will be served. Admission ten cents at the door.

The editors in charge acknowledge the receipt of a fine quantity of paper from Mrs. Lamoureux, Mrs.
Walters and Miss Nina Ambler. It too early for strawberries, we suppose.

The regular subscribers of the Record will receive abridged copies of the "Woman's Edition" owing to the fact that several columns of reading matter had to be removed to make room for regular foreign advertisers.
On receipt of five cents a complete number will be forwarded.

That Winter Night

BY ROBERT BUCHANAN

On a sunny Sabbath afternoon, the month of October, 1870, the Chevalier de Gavrolles and his only daughter, Blanche, a beautiful young girl between seventeen and eighteen years of age, attended service in the chapel of Our Lady in the little village of Etréat, situated some ten or twelve English miles from the seaport town of Havre, in Normandy.

The church was a simple, unassuming building, but the interior was richly decorated with religious pictures and tapestries. The organ played a solemn and beautiful melody, and the choir sang with sweet voices. The Chevalier and his daughter were seated in the front row, and they looked at each other with affectionate glances.

"Blanche, my child, you heard what the old woman said? She was right. It is not only the poor who are suffering now, but the rich are also in a state of distress. The war has done us all a great deal of harm."

"But, father, I am not a soldier. I am a woman. I have no part to play in the war. I only wish to be happy and contented with my lot."

"You are wrong, Blanche. You are not a woman, you are a French citizen. You have a duty to perform. You must be prepared to sacrifice your life for your country if necessary."

father, they are husbands and fathers like ourselves. It was clear that he had no patience with the point of view which regarded the enemy as an unfortunate fellow creature. He would have spoken volubly of the Chevalier's holding his daughter in his arms, moved quickly down the churchyard, and his daughter took a path which led by a circuitous route up to the summit of the sea-cliffs.

On the very summit of the cliff, to the right of Etréat, looking seaward, stands the tiny chapel of Notre-Dame de la Grâce (Our Lady of Safety), the door of which is open day and night, and the altar of which is hung with all sorts of votive offerings, made by the fishermen and those who live there. Father Andre and daughter, bent their footsteps and presently entering the little chapel stood for a few minutes in meditation.

"I wish to speak to you, father, on a subject which concerns the happiness of my dear daughter."

and her golden hair gleamed softly under her white straw hat. Her father stood looking at her, and for a moment his eyes grew dim.

GOT A BABY BOY NOW?

Happiness in a Southern Man's Home

"I want to go on record that tobacco has robbed me of many years of life and a great deal of happiness. I realize it now. I compare my feelings and my condition with that of a year ago when I was a tobacco smoker. I can't describe the relief that I feel now. I feel like a new man. I feel like a man who has been reborn. I feel like a man who has been given a second chance at life. I feel like a man who has been given a second chance at happiness. I feel like a man who has been given a second chance at love. I feel like a man who has been given a second chance at life, happiness, and love."

THE MILL POND AGAIN,

Or the Consideration of the Other Side of the Question.

Who has stopped to consider at all the other side of the mill pond question? And there is another side—for even Altamont had a friend.

Have you stopped to remember for how many years we have proudly boasted of being a town "of this size" without a saloon? and that all this time that mill pond has stood guard (in company with our other two like moat around a castle? Have you considered what it might be to take away that pond and allow Plymouth people to come over here dry shod? shall we be most less? Shall we elect to have only two ponds so long as Rosy O'More says there is luck in odd numbers?

And we hear such an "indicate amount of talk about the malarious microbes! Why these fine delectable discs, nothing but morsels picked battles between microbes and the zikophites, and what we want is not less of disease germs, but more germs. Let something be injected into the pond to destroy the germs, which may or may not be there, but let the pond go on forever!

If this so-called "debris" is taken out in care leads to the extent of the 100,000 estimated, and spread upon the fields adjacent to the town it practically sows malaria, typhoid, and makes diphtheria, typhoid and malarial fevers inevitable. So long as they are kept under water we are safe, but when these dried spores are taken up by the four winds, our doom is sealed.
We can not afford to act wholly upon impulse in this matter.

Some one has offered the objection that the "spirit" of this mill pond is obnoxious and likely to prejudice strangers against Northville. But our paramount duty is towards our residents; our charity must begin at home
—bacteria before esthetics.

But above all things, gentlemen of the council, let it be decided to dry up or not to dry up—that has been the question for so long that the whole population seems to be like the Gutarcoe swine—between the devil and the mill pond.

Not That Sort.

A young minister was recently holding special meetings in a town
just over the river (but not in Heaven) and as he was called the congregation to move out of their places and take still other seats near the front.
Later a gentleman entered whom the minister had been introduced to as Dr. — and whom he at once invited to occupy a seat at the right of the platform. Then he proceeded with his sermon on the brevity of human life and the necessity of preparing for death. Spoke of death-bed scenes which he had witnessed and said "I presume my friend on the right, Dr.
— has also attended many a death-bed, have you not, Doctor?"
The doctor appeared a little mortified
for some reason and dropped his head, while all the people looked at one another with expressions of amusement which were unmistakable. Their suppressed mirth shook the whole of Lower Canada and so surprised the minister that he forgot to rebuke them. On leaving the pulpit he was informed that Dr. — was a veterinarian!

We are greatly indebted to Mrs.
Bradley for a copy of The Philadelphia Courier dated March 11, 1877 from which we cite the following:

"La Grippe"—Frightful Ravages.

All the recent intelligence from Europe represents the ravages of a mortality to which the Paris physicians have given the title of "La Grippe," as most fearful. In medical reports from Stockholm state that between Christmas and New Year's day no fewer than 13,000 or 19,000 people, about one fourth of the whole population have been attacked by this curious malady, "La Grippe." Private accounts say that the disease is in reality the typhus fever.

The acquittal at Strasburg of the persons implicated in the conspiracy of Louis Bonaparte occasioned great excitement in Paris.

Pennington's Legislature.—A bill to give fugitive slaves a trial by jury (which has been several days under discussion) has been lost in the senate by a vote of 20 to 10.

Besides these items of news which look more like a page of history to us now than a collection of newspaper clippings, the paper contains Martin Van Buren's inaugural address, and Pres. Jackson's farewell words to the people, also selections from "Sketches by Fox."

overcomes us when inferior preparations are recommended by unscrupulous dealers as "just as good as Foley's Honey and Tar Cough Syrup," when

—HAVE YOU HAD THE GRIPE?

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

As an honest remedy Foley's Honey and Tar does not hold out false hopes in advanced stages, but truthfully claims to give comfort and relief to the very worst cases, and in the early stages to effect a cure. C. R. Stevens.

A little fellow that had his wife about him when the contribution plates were being passed at church,

mother," he questioned innocently,
"what could you expect for a seat?"
