GOT A CANING.

F. R. Beal Was the Victim Tuesday Night.

INVEIGLED AWAY FROM HOME BY POSSES TELEGRAM.

The Business Men and Citizens Take Possession of Him on His Return.

Presented With Beautiful Gold Headed Ebony Cane. Immense Crowd Great Demonstration.

One of the golden marks in Northville's history was that drawn Tuesday night. F. R. Beal, in the past the business men of the village have had their heads together, conjuring up some scheme whereby they might show a slight token of their esteem and appreciation of one who has done so much towards making Northville what she is—the banner village of the state. F. R. Beal, president and manager of the Globe Furniture works, the Columbia Refrigerator Company, and the American Bell Foundry. This scheme was put into lively action last week with the result that on Tuesday Mr. Beal was inveigled into Detroit for the day by a previously planned posse telegram, from C. A. Warren, and then the committee and business men went to work with all effort to make "Ned" generally and get ready to turn the town loose on the arrival of the 7 p.m. train from Detroit on which Mr. Beal was to make his return. Everyone took hold with a will—the enthusiasm inspired by the spirit of the occasion being seen on every side and the very air seemed appropriate with it that huge canes could be cut out with a knife.

Although the event originated with the business men, yet it was everybody's day and each man, woman and child in the village seemed to vie with each other in doing honor to their worthy乡man.

When the train arrived the crowd at the depot was so dense that one could scarcely move. As the train came to a standstill the Globe band struck up a lively air, and which the chimes of some of the new bell foundry's product could be heard. Mr. Beal was escorted to a carriage which was in readiness, and amid cheers and music the parade started up through the village headed by the band to Mr. Beal's home.

Besides a thousand or more people in the parade there was one wagon containing a number of the American Bell Foundry Co's bells, representing Mr. Beal's latest enterprise, and another containing school and church furniture and refrigerators.

Heartfelt demonstrations were made along the route, church and fire bells rung and frequent calls of "What's the matter with Beal?" were quickly taken up by the customary "He's all right."

The lawn and residence of Mr. Beal were tastily decorated for the occasion and as the procession stopped at the home a loud cheer was taken up by those already gathered.

After some nice music by the band Rev. S. L. Reed began the task for which he was delegated, that of presenting to Mr. Beal a beautiful ebony cane as a slight token of the estimation in which he's held by the representative business men of the village. The cane was ornamented with a handsome hand carved solid gold head on which was engraved "F. R. Beal—Presented by the Northville Business men, August 8, 1895." Accompanying the gift was the following card: "We, the business men of Northville, as a slight token of our admiration of you as a citizen, a business man, and a manufacturer, one to whom Northville owes so much of her welfare and prosperity, ask that you accept this staff, and in presenting it we trust it will prove more of an ornament to you in the years to come than as an article of necessity." Mr. Reed spoke as follows:

"Fellow citizens and business men of Northville: It is no sudden exclamation nor ride of alarm which has drawn you together in such unusual numbers tonight. It is rather in obedience to a pleasing prompting of your nature, a desire to express a fact you can well appreciate of one of your neighbors. Some of you have watched the course of F. R. Beal from his early life, even from the time when he opened his eyes to the light of the sun on this Main street of your village, the street on which he still lives. Regarding life in humble, faithful, manual labor you have seen him struggle on and climb up the steep sides of business enterprise.

As his business talents developed, he has added branch to branch of his enterprises until today he stands at the head of a business the size of which can seldom be found in a town of this size, and through his splendid abilities and his marked success have invited him to larger commercial estates than Northville, yet he has steadily adhered to his purpose of giving the advantages of his business to his own loved home town.

Mr. Beal associates with himself in business men of intelligence and of high moral character; and his employees are other intelligent, industrious men, averaging above the average operative in many of our industries. They are in our village government, our public schools, boards, and our church officers.

No questions are raised respecting the way community cherishing each factor in his business, what is the man and, what does he do?

A good man cannot be engaged in bad business, but a bad man may be engaged in a good business. He may then be of some service to his fellow in spite of being sold.

But with a good man engaged in a good business, his right is a way to the happiness of the universe. The two thoughts by which Mr. Beal's business rests, viz., the church and the school. Education and religion are fundamental thoughts in the welfare of any people.

Two questions are of prime importance in any community cherishing each factor in his business, what is the man and, what does he do?

A good man cannot be engaged in bad business, but a bad man may be engaged in a good business. He may then be of some service to his fellow in spite of being sold.

But with a good man engaged in a good business, his right is a way to the happiness of the universe. The two thoughts by which Mr. Beal's business rests, viz., the church and the school. Education and religion are fundamental thoughts in the welfare of any people.

The origin of the present great church and school seating factory of this place is in Mr. Beal's own words when your school house was built he said, "Why not make the seats for it ourselves?" and straightway he and Mr. Harrington and one or two others set about it and the seats were produced; rude it is true but they were the peers from which the Globe Furniture factory grew.

[This was in 1855.] In February 1855 a company was organized for the manufacture of seats.

Its capital and business were very small at first, but its development has been steady and rapid until now its work is probably in schools and churches in every state and territory in the union besides many foreign countries.

At first it employed 15 men, now it employs in all its branches about 250.

It turns out to all its employ about $5,000 per week. Its average gross income is about one quarter of a million dollars annually.

The aggregate of its business for the past 22 years is over $3,000,000.

Apart from the schools seated, it has seated one church a day for every day of the past ten years.

In the three cities of Baltimore, Philadelphia and Washington it has seated 175 churches, and in the two states of New York and Pennsylvania it has seated about 700 churches.

This has the outer village of Northville been introduced by Mr. Beal to the very best society on the American continent through their schools and churches.

Mr. Beal, (the speaker continued) your business companions of Northville appreciate you and your work.

They will remember you as long as they live and their children and grand-children will talk of you as a leading factor in the upbuilding of this town.

And these business men wish you to remember them as long as you live.

Last winter when you were dissolved for a season and compelled to cease from activity, the condition forced itself upon their minds that sooner or later this business that is now in your hands must be bid into other hands.

That sooner or later your strong and manly form must begin to tremble, though they do pray that that day may never be far in the future.

Your friends desire tonight to place in your hands this staff, on which you may lean as the sun of life goes down.

It is a small token of their esteem but it is wrapped round and bound with their good wishes and is accompanied with a God bless you from each one of them.

It represents a mix of good feeling, more valuable in a community than the gold which surrounds it. Its inscription is copied from the writing that is in their own hearts.

The speaker's remarks were heartily applauded at every point, and as Mr. Reed rose to respond there was a continuous clapping of hands.

In his response Mr. Beal spoke in substance as follows:

I little thought of this demonstration when I left home this morning. If I had known you were going to make such a noise with your new bell [there was a wagon load of

CHAPTER IX.—(Continued.)

The letter was from her father. It said not a word about his own recent illness, and was otherwise so characteristic that it will be given entire:

"MY DEAREST DAUGHTER:—I thank you and Adolf went to the Springs, beyond the atmospheres of this cholera-stricken city. The doctors say it is declining. I am in my usual health, and my son's health is for you—and Adolf. Of course, business is dull; and I have abundant time to write this letter—the first I have ever had occasion to write you. I have had you with me always.

Before you return, I wish you quickly to find out all you can about the people at the Springs, without showing that you are anxious to know.

First—what is the full name of the proprietor and of all his family?

"How long have they all lived at the Springs, and do they own the property?"

"How valuable is the property? Is the hotel well patronized, and by what kind of people?"

"Is the proprietor and are his family members of good society?"

"Last—and most important—What noted incident, or accident, or bereavement has fallen upon any of the family in the last twelve or thirteen years? And many and all about it—names, dates, effect upon others—in short everything."

"By complying fully with my wish you will oblige your old father very much, and possibly benefit yourself. If a man had been drawn through the last four winds to obliterate them, but Vivette made them out!"

"Take your time, and do not return till I write for you."

"Remember me to Adolf, and believe me, as ever, your loving father."

"I'll—Write when you can in the meantime."

Here was food for thought. What could her father want with the history he sought? She could not imagine but she resolved to obey his instructions to the letter, and trust to her father's prudence and to time. She already had a general knowledge of the Moller family history, and for greater accuracy she put it into written memorandum form, and determined to add to it day by day as she acquired further particulars. "God," she jolted down, "from day to day every item obtained strong Mrs. Blake from her maid, Liza—always ready to communicate—and from any other authentic source."

In the early afternoon Adolf came in and proposed marriage. He was looking pale, and his little black eyes shone from their retirement in the depth of their sockets like diamonds behind glass.

"The doctor says I need air and sunshine, and a drive over the hills with my sunburn, will renew my life—you will go?"

"Certainly," cousin Adolf, with pleasure.

"They were soon out over the hills, and himself to drive. Vivette protested, but he declared himself strong enough, and, in fact, he wanted to be alone with Vivette.

As they drove gaily from the door through the evergreens and down past the stables, one colored hostler said to another:

"Looks like he'd bin sick, Study, but he kin handle 'em. Isn't the lady just too party?"

At the laundry old Winnie was at the door. Putting up her hand to shade her old eyes, she said to herself: "Uh Uh." [Nasal exclamation] "Too party for dem specieles."

THE COUSIN ADOLF

Gentlemen on the veranda had already expressed themselves, and the verdict as to Vivette's "good looks" was unanimous, while one gentleman had said: "Would be a shame for that cat-eyed cousin to carry her off!"

Everwhere it appeared to be assumed that "cousins" or no cousins—Moller at least was up to his eyes in love.

A mile from the hotel Adolf passed Sulphur Creek and stopped the carriage to admire a diminutive cascade which poured out of a cedar-crowned limestone cliff, and dashed itself to spray on the rocks below, at the base of the cliff, under a little sparkling stream. Some ingenious boy had fixed a mimic water mill, which lifted and dropped by turns a small hamper to the bottom of an old tin pan. Thump, thump, thump, all day, and all night long, the busy hammer struck the tin tambour with rhythmic blows. "So beat my heart when the cholera fell upon me," said Adolf.

"Not quite so loud, cousin," replied Vivette.

"I am afraid, my dear Vivette, now let all poetic sentiment behind you when you come to the Springs." Now my heart's beating again, will you not minister in it as willingly and successfully as before?"

"No, why, cousin Adolf! You are not pale now, but blushing red," said Vivette, with a questionable smile.

"I can bear this suspense no longer," passionately declared Adolf. "Say you will be mine, Vivette, and end it?"

"I can not say it."

"You mean you will not?"

"I feel, cousin Adolf, that an honest man is best for both of us, and while it troubles me to tell you so, I can never be my husband. Adolf never!"

His countenance fell in sheer despair. He felt that these words would never be recalled. "And, assuming a self-control which he had lost, said in reply:

"That is straightforward, at least I thought to thank you. But you should have left me to die of apoplexy too in a Madras, and henceforth my lips are sealed. Winnie, he goes on, if we never can be more."

Then cracking his whip, he drove off down the valley over the stone road by the bridge, and round the tobacco fields back to the hotel. Not a word was spoken by either on the way.

"Uh, uh," said old Winnie, as they passed, "the laundry, he's done got shocked, he is."

The hostlers looked at each other as Adlif drove rapidly by, and, through the evergreens, up to the hotel door and one said:

"He gal's shocked him, sho!"

Genitaneously on the veranda, looked misgivingly at each other, meaning much, but saying nothing. Moller, tall-tale-faced betrayed him almost as plainly as words.

On the next day after Adolf had heard his fate with certainty, he began to think of bringing his stay at the Springs to an end, and going into Dr. Goroth's office, was received with unexpected courtesy. On asking for his bill, Dr. Goroth urged him to be seated, saying that it would be unsafe for Moller to attempt a journey without a few hours' rest. Moller was in a humor to accept the doctor's invitation, and soon found that, under a rough exterior, Dr. Goroth was really a warm-hearted gentleman.

"You thought me pretty crusty," he said to Moller, "but you had the universal panic, and it was necessary to get rid of that first of all."

"But doctor," replied Adolf with a smile, "do you talk to all your patients that way?"

"Oh, no, I treat each according to his temperament. I saw you were a gentleman and sensitive to insult; and I know you would die if I did not drive off your pain."

No man is big enough to hold two conflicting passions at once, so I roused your indignation, and let your sense of insult drive out panic—you understand."

"Certainly, doctor, I do now."

"You are of the New Orleans Molliers, I think?" said the doctor, interrogatively.

"Yes, you know them?"

"I know of them. They stand a No. 1. But how unfortunate they should generally be small. Now that doesn't hurt a woman, but it is bad for a man."

"What is that, doctor? I have not thought of it."

"Because a little man never gets credit for half he really is, and a large man gets credit for much more than he is, in most instances. And, phrenology or no phrenology, there's something to the influence of magnitude, and people like him fit it without knowing why."

"I guess that's so, doctor," said Moller.

"Of course it's so. You yourself never get half the credit you are entitled to as a man of education and strong native ability. And strange enough, women are more controlled by this matter of size as an indication of superiority than men. Curious isn't it?"

"By Jove, that's so, doctor; I know it."

He thought of the stalwart arms which pitched him out of the window and afterward pulled him out of the river.

Dr. Goroth saw instantly that he had touched a tender spot, and sought to change the drift of conversation.

"You were prejudiced against calico," he said.

"I was doctor. I am not now."

"I should think not. It's brought you nothing, soon as a little stuck."

"Then the doctor dilated upon the great remedy—for awhile, and both gentlemen drifted into general conversation, until Adolf left, for Moller surprised and pleased with the doctor who had cured him by substituting anise for fear."

After supper, Adolf was sitting in his room alone with his thoughts and his cigar, when Mr. Sam. Blake, the acting host of the hotel, made him a call. After congratulations on Moller's recovery, and general conversation, Blake said to Adolf:

"There is a gentleman of your name at Cincinnati, I think."

"Yes, my father's brother."

"Lived or died five years ago on Market street?"

"Yes, Lower Market. He lives there still."

"Have you seen much of him?"

"Not until recently. I have spent some months at his house before coming here."

"Ever hear him speak of an idiot boy named Joe?"

"Joe Ginst."

"He lived with a man named Gust. I rather think I have heard of him. He is no idiot now, by a good deal."

"And his memory?" inquired Blake with much and manifest earnestness.

"Not wholly, as I am informed. Could not remember his name, except Little Joe, and couldn't tell the names of his kindred, nor where they lived."

"What became of him?"

"Gust, the gentleman who took care of the boy, adopted him as his son, educated him, and he is now a lawyer and a fine-looking man."

"And his memory?" inquired Blake with much and manifest earnestness.

"Not wholly, as I am informed. Little Joe, and couldn't tell the names of his kindred, nor where they lived."

"You mean you will not?"

"Yes, he says in a letter that he is in poor health. Do you know anything of the boy—he was a man?"

"Nothing at all," replied Blake. "Once heard of him while in Cincinnati."

"He thinks himself a Kentuckian, and is rather proud of it."

"How does he come to think that?"

"That is straightforward, at least I thought to thank you. But you should have left me to die of apoplexy."

"My uncle thinks it. He goes where he can meet men of spirit, and does no discredit to the claim."

Moller listened dumbfounded and speechless.

On the next afternoon, old Blake fell down paralyzed. From the hips down, all sensation was gone, and Dr. Goroth found other very grave symptoms, and advised the old man to make final arrangements of his affairs for the last journey.

"Doctor," said Blake, deliberately and firmly, "my will has been made for years, and I see no reason for altering it."

"Where is it, father?" inquired Sam, who had just come in.

"It is in safe hands. Sam, you and Myra are left in joint possession of everything until—"

"Until what, father?"

"Never mind. I shall make no changes."

"Let him rest, Sam," said the doctor.

The less he is worried the more peaceful, that he may revive and temporarily recover."

Sam Blake went out moodily, and the old man asked for Myra. When Mrs. Blake came in she was crying.

"The old man took her hand kindly in his own, and said:

"You have been a true woman, Myra, and poor Jeff knew better than I. Where's the paper I gave you to keep?"

She drew an envelope from her bosom and gave it to him with the seal unbroken.

"Open it," said the dying man, "quick! I am going fast."

She broke the seal and by his instruction read:

"Memorandum from Joe's medical: Little Joe: June 29, 1874. [Signed] JOSEPH GRIST."

The old man could barely say:

"Go to Cincinnati, young man; find Joe—when the paralysis stopped his speech, and an hour later his life."

Old Tom Blake was buried with due ceremony, and little sorrow, except upon the part of Mrs. Blake, and some of the slaves, to whom he had been, on the whole, not an unkind master.

The will was found in the keeping of a friend of the old man—Judge Walpole, who was duly proved and no contest made.

(To be continued.)

Lawyer—Well, my young friend, your Uncle Josh determined that you should be a farmer, or get nothing from him. He did not leave you a cent of money, but he willed you his plow, cultivator, mowing machine, thrasher, portable saw-mill, stone-crusher, road-scaper and stamp-pulver.

Young Scrubber—all right, I'll sell them.

Lawyer—He has provided against that. You cannot sell, or even rent them. You must use them yourself.

Young Scrubber—Very well, I will.

Lawyer—On the old farm?

Young Scrubber—No, I'll write a play and use them on the stage.

ROGUE GOT AWAY WITH ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS.

Frank A. District Attorney of California induced a merchant to endorse a check for him by a peculiar system of reasoning.

ME OF THE CLEVEREST SWINDLES.

Herbert Place, a negro, 27 years old, walked into Bellevue Hospital, New York, yesterday morning, and said he would like to be examined, as his heart was on the wrong side of his body. The clerks were incredulous, but finding that Place was in earnest, he was referred to the house surgeon. Afterward, in the presence of the eligible surgical staff, a thorough examination was made of him. It was found that not only was his heart on his right side, but that his right lung was on his left side, and the left lung on the right side, the liver was on the left side, and the spleen on the right side. Place is of medium height, strongly built, and has never been seriously ill for a day in his life. Last fall, he said, he urged him to have his life insured, and he underwent a medical examination. The insurance doctor discovered the misplacement of the vital organs, and refused to pass him.

The doctor said, "Don't Drive Your Feet."

Mr. G. W. Barnes, of San Francisco, was so affected by the continued use of tobacco that he was very tired.

"All this can easily be overcome by the tobacco user wanting to do away with the bad habit."

"I have a strong case of rheumatism," he said.

"The world is full of such cases," said the doctor.

VACATION DAYS

A Delightful Place to Spend Them.

The approach of vacation days is a time for selecting some interesting place for a summer outing. A few places combine so many advantages that will quickly suggest themselves. Most vacation plans are canvassed. One of these is always Bay View, rich in varied, restorative delights, social and educational advantages, and growing more interesting every year. This season's summer announcements are particularly attractive, filling nearly sixty pages of the Bay View Magazine, and beautiful with a hundred half-tones views. The Flint & Pere Marquette railroad has secured a quantity of the magazines and placed liberal supply at their ticket office in this place for the public.

All persons planning a vacation, or intending to attend some summer school will be interested in the Bay View announcements. The public is invited to call for copies.

The P&P RR will as usual make very low rates to Bay View Aug. 31.

As we announced some time ago we have to close out two lines of goods entirely and make some alterations in our store for fall trade. Some of our fall goods are now on the way from New York, Boston, and factories in Massachusetts and New York State.

Our Hats are nearly all sold, and this week we offer our Groceries AT COST to close them out. This line is all new and fresh, and consists of the staple goods that everybody must have. We have particularly large quantities of Sugar, Tea, Coffee, Spices and Canned Goods.

Prices will be low, as our "cost" is conceded to be the lowest of any.

AUGUST 9, 1895.

WALLED LAKE, JULY 24

Suburban News

ly business houses commence 6 o'clock evening closing Aug. 1.

A Pontiac Daily Gazette office is equipped with a type-setting machine.

Walled Lake people are already busy with arrangements for their coming up-to-date.

Here is the unkindest cut of the season and its from the Ann Arbor Daily Courier too: "When the ladies cannot get me to go with them they run off by themselves and have a picnic."

After being knocked out on all the fish and snake stories like Fenlon independent spring this on its readers as result of its diction: "Frank L. Adams left at this office it was a stem from an apple tree to which were attached fine perfect apples in a cluster. From a branch a foot long he picked forty fine apples."

Northville has a new hotel and the first bell was cast last week. Northville always was a great town for belles and we know of a Holly man who's contemporaries going down there after one son—Holly Advertiser.

Yes, and several Northville young men have their eye on some mighty nice looking Holly girls too.

The village president of Holly, in council meeting last week with the resident intention of silencing the advertiser's lady stenographer from the council room, lowered himself and the dignity of his office by getting off his wholly unclothed, for obscene talk. It had the desired effect, but the Advertiser has put on. Up to him to hit the boy's place at these meetings no the savings and doings of that inglorious boy will continue to be reported. Holly's village president should be ducked in the Northville mill pond.

A game of ball at Flitford, between married and unmarried nine resulted 3-3 in favor of the unmarrieds (ed), what she was to have been expected. Think a man can walk the bar half the night with a cooley kid, how mother the new woman is out in the bicyclette, and then play all next day like a member of the national league? Verily we say unto you, it's a jingle!—Advertiser.

The proper way for Ann Advertiser to appreciate their own beautiful hours, for them to go away for a time and come back contented and robust. And Arthur Corder.

It all depends on where the Advertiser is going. A visit to Adrian or Ypsilanti would probably have just what you seek, but a visit to Northville would break bonding to make the University people very discontented with their surroundings upon their return home.

This being followed by long and continued applause, we were next entertained by a recital given by the "Boulder Point Mixed Orchestra."

This indeed was a brilliant feature of the great day. Our pen cannot in any degree, do justice to the vocal expression and physical gyrations which were enacted before the waiting and expectant audience. While possibly it did not attain the high degree of musical art exhibited in "Switzerland," of course to the limited time for rehearsal, still it was soul-stirring in the extreme, and the listeners spell bound with admiration, involuntarily suspended the more common place enjoyment, that they might absorb unreservedly the undying strains of the musical discourse that were ever and once wafted to them on the wings of the gentle zephyrs.

Great preparations were made to minister to the athletic tastes, as well as the stomachs of the crowd.

The day was delightful, even the gods were favorable, veiling the piercing rays of the sun in the comfort of the occasion.

Refreshments first in order were prepared by an able and proficient committee to the whole, and were such as to minister to the taste of any confirmed voluptuary.

A new feature in the menu was "steamed eggs" introduced for the purpose of averting any evil effects of the festive occasion, but opposite effects were observed. The principal male participants acting as if they had been deviled.

VACATION DAYS.

A Delightful Place to Spend Them.

The approach of vacation days is a time for selecting some interesting place for a summer outing. A few places combine so many advantages that will quickly suggest themselves when vacation plans are discussed. One of these is a vacation resort, rich in varied & creative delights, social and educational advantages and growing more interesting every year. This season's summer announcements are particularly attractive, filling nearly sixty pages of the Bay View Magazine and beautiful with a hundred half-tone views. The Flint & Pere Marquette railroad has secured a quantity of the magazines and placed liberal supply at their ticket office in this place for the public.

All persons planning a vacation, or intending to attend some summer school will be interested in the Bay View announcements. The public is invited to call for copies.

The F&PM RR will as usual make very low rates to Bay View Aug. 31.

SAC VESSELS FOR THE LAKES

They will go long, do the great work of the Great Lakes Trade.

Plans already formed settle the question whether lake steamships 400 feet long or upward, with a capacity of carrying 6,000 tons of freight at a time, will be common after the opening of the channels twenty feet deep through all the shallows between Duluth and Chicago, and the ports of Lake Erie. There is no longer a doubt that such monster vessels will rapidly multiply within the next few years, and they are certain to do a great part of the carrying trade of the lakes; perhaps most of it, before the end of this century.

The steamships already contracted for and those which are certain to be built before next spring will undoubtedly, so far surpass all small now in use in ability to make money, crowding rates for freight that other vessel owners will be forced to follow the pioneers in this latest step forward in the construction of splendid lake carriers.

Even an over-supply of tonnage such as is very likely to be the result, will not prevent the work of replacing small craft with steamers of the larger size from going on steadily. In one sense it will hasten the change, says Cleveland Leader. Only the biggest vessels can make money in such seasons of general over-competition for cargoes, and in order to continue the business the owners of old boats must let them go and put in commission steamships equal to any on the great lakes.

FIDS AND THISTLES.

The devil and whisky are always on good terms.

"Prayer is not prayer until it becomes communion with God."

The Christian may lose his gold, but he can never lose his God.

The devil's curse is most when he smites us through those we love.

When God puts a good man in the dark, it is to give somebody light.

God can say "no" in the heaven made he couldn't speak in the heaven.

Job shuddered with his tongue because there was no life in his heart.

When the mountains are cast into the sea, God's hand is under them.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

Look after the Back: A Fall.

Strain, a Constant Sitting or Sloping Position—Bring Backache—Do You Know This Means the Kidneys are Affected?

How few people realize when their back begins to ache that it is a warning of trouble to return to tell you that the kidneys are not working properly. You have a severe fall, you strain yourself lifting or perhaps you are compelled to maintain a sitting or stooping position for long intervals at a time, your back begins to ache, then your head, you become listless, tired and weary, but do not understand the real cause? We think first, else you would not use plasters and liniment or the back, which only relieve but do not reach the cause? If you would rid yourself of the pain and cure the root of the trouble at the same time save many years of suffering and perhaps life itself, you will take a kidney remedy that has been tried and proven that it will cure.

Mr. John Robison of 66 Russell Street, Detroit, says: "As a result of exposure during the war, I have suffered, even since with the unceasing kidney trouble. Pains would start in my back and go around to my back. Highly colored urine denoted kidney disorder. The pain in my back was often so bad I had to give up work until the severity of the attack passed away. I have used many liniments and other things, but received very little relief. Some time ago I started using Doan's Kidney Pills and they have worked a wonderful change in me. My back is all right now and I owe it all to the almost magical influence of Doan's Kidney Pills."

Mr. Robison was a member of the Fifty-first Illinois Regiment, which served through the war with honor and distinction. Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale at all dealers—price, 50 cents. Made by Foster-Silburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.—Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

Uncle Sam's Park Note.

How few of the many people who are fortunate enough to have a dollar bill in their pocket think of it as a work of art. Two hundred years ago this piece of paper would have been of almost incalculable value, and have awakened an interest among the artists of that day which we can scarcely realize.

Look at the portrait on the left face of the note. Here we have a beautiful specimen of pure fine engraving—much better work than most of that done by some of the old masters and now considered classic. Then there are on both face and back the fine, delicate effects of light and shade produced by the ruling machine and geometrical engraving lines. Further that this can be seen elegant designs in scroll work and lettering.

This may be a piece of "the root of all evil," and we may know it is only "nitty luco," only worth 100 cents to and it is refreshing to my ears."

IT IS ACCOMPLISHED.

I have accomplished what I have long been desirous of accomplishing, and it is simple that I have been convinced for some time that if I could get more room in some way or other that I would like to give the people of Northville and vicinity, which I think they are truly deserving of, one of the best equipped Dry Goods, Carpet, Wall Paper, Curtain, Drapery, Clothing and Gentle Furnishing House west of Detroit. The account I have accomplished by dispensing of my stock of Boots and Shoes which occupied 75 feet of shelf room in my store. Now, you will readily see that this amount of space will give the needed amount of room, and as the people of Northville know that I intended to go out of trade two years ago, as that was the allotted time that I had set down—that when I had been in trade 21 years that I would go out of business—but owing to the critical times two years ago I found it impossible to do so, therefore I decided to add five years more to my business career and ever since that time I have had in mind just such a store as I now expect to carry on. And now I want to state just what the people of Northville and vicinity may expect, and that will be a first-class stock of Dry Goods not cheap stuff, but many lines of first-class Dry Goods at rock bottom prices for No. 1 goods; a complete line of Carpets in the latest patterns in Hems, Logains, Cotton and Wool Extra Supers and Brussels.
