That's the Answer the Council Gave Attorney Valentine

IN THE MURDOCK CLAIM FOR SIDEWALK DAMAGES.

The Lumber Yard Subject Was Reconsidered.

A Lot of the Business Men Petition the Council Favorably on It.

The gallery in the Northville Council chamber was filled with spectators at the regular council meeting Monday night.

The first thing brought up was the Murdock sidewalk damage case. For the committee, Aid Phillips said they would recommend that the proposition of Mr. Murdock through Atty. Valentine to settle with the village for $200 be not accepted.

Atty. Valentine asked for a more definite report and the president replied that they had taken council in the matter and concluded that the village was not liable.

Atty. Valentine—Your honor you do not intend to say that Mr. Murdock has no just claim do you or that he was not injured?

The president—We did not look into the matter of Mr. Murdock's injuries. We simply conclude that the village is not liable.

A petition signed by the larger portion of the Northville business men presented requesting the council to grant the Ambler Mercantile Co. permission to erect their sheds and establish their lumber yard on the vacant property corner Atwater and Main street under such restrictions as the council might dictate.

The petition was signed by W. C. Hake, B. S. Webber, J. B. Hoar, M. Mank, N. Nevelson, Stark Bros., R. McCully, Johnson & Co., Merritt & Co., J. S. Lapbam & Co., O. H. Johnson and Frank Harmon, all of whom are in the same block and would be more affected than anyone else.

The ordinance was signed by nearly all the other up town business men. Aid Phillips said that such a petition from so many Northville business men meant something to him at least and if such men as Webber, Hoar, Mank, Hake and others who were especially interested, could stand it, so could he. What he was against it before, this would change his ideas.

Aid Sessions asked to have the ordinance read again and then asked the president to construe the meaning of the ordinance as prohibitory so far as wooden buildings were concerned. The president thought the second section gave the council power to grant a request of this kind, and Mr. Northrop also gave that as his construction of the ordinance wherein section 2 made such a proviso.

The former vote was finally reconsidered and then the matter was laid on the table for one week, while a committee looks more thoroughly into the matter. The petition was also received and placed on file.

A report was received from the fire wardens relative to defective stoves and pipes in the rink and wooden cupboards filled with sawdust and ashes in a number of stores about town. The fire wardens were told to go ahead with their investigation and they were informed that people who failed to comply with these orders were liable to a fine of $50.

The president then appointed the many lumber to conduct the municipal election, as will be seen in official proceedings published after which the council adjourned.

THE CHARITY BALL.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE FOR A GREAT TIME TONIGHT.

Elaborate Decorations, Free Carriage Service, Lovely Music, Delicious Supper.

The Charity Ball given at Princess rink this evening by the Y. M. social club will be one of the finest affairs of the season. Two hundred invitations have been issued for the event and indications are favorable for a large crowd from Saginaw, Flint and Detroit, besides many from neighboring towns. The club has arranged for free carriage service through the village and by notifying the reception committee a carriage will call for any invited guests as well as convey them home "After the ball is over." Out of town people will be met at the train.

The rink is elaborately decorated with flags, bunting, flowers and evergreens. The music will be by Tinham's well known society orchestra to which will be added several Detroit pieces to make seven in all. This music it is safe to say, will be just a little finer ever heard in a Northville ball room. The supper will be of a variety that will be especially pleasing and will be neatly served by a committee of eight especially engaged for the occasion. Arrangements are made to care for 100 couples and the event will be a fit closing of this season's entertainments by this popular club, who, as entertainers, have an enviable reputation.

BEAL & DANIELS.

That's the Very Latest New Firm in Northville.

THEY WILL SELL THE ENTIRE PRODUCT OF

The Globe, the Columbia and American Bell Factories.

The Change Took Place This Week and It Is an Important One.

A little printed slip came into the Record office this week saying:

"From and after Feb. 1, 1896, the entire product of The Globe Furniture Co., The Columbia Refrigerator Co., The American Bell Foundry Co., will be sold by Beal & Daniels, Northville, Mich. You will hear more of this hereafter."

We naturally wanted to know what it all meant so as to tell our readers about it, and here you have it:

A co-partnership has been entered into by F. R. Beal and H. E. C. Daniels, the sole purpose of which is to sell the entire output of the factories above named. By this two things are to be gained: First, as the new firm is simply a partnership, and will not be incorporated, it will not be liable to the annoyance and expense incident to the special legislation which has been introduced in by so many states against corporations of other states. Second, Mr. Daniels, who has been for years the secretary and treasurer of the firm of Thomas, Kane & Co. of Chicago, brings to the firm a large and varied experience which will be devoted entirely to the work of selling the wares made by the factories here and cannot fail to bring largely increased sales.

Mr. Daniels' residence is in Evanston Ill., at present but he will bring his family here about May 1st.

We extend our congratulations to the new firm, and Northville will well feel elated over so valuable an acquisition.

COLONEL L. W. AYER.

Is the Distinguished Speaker to Open the Lecture Course.

The lecture course will be opened next week Wednesday evening in the Presbyterian church by the famous Kentucky orator Col. L. W. Ayer M. D. The gentleman is a speaker of national fame and the committee was in great luck in securing him. The subject will be "The great treason plot in the North during the war." Col. Ayer was a gallant union officer and this coupled with his fame on the lecture platform will make his presence here of unusual interest.

SISTER ROSE

A STORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

BY WILKIE COLLINS

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER IV. HE had started with a genuine astonishment. 'For me!' he exclaimed. 'At a dinner? No, no, no! I have not troubled myself to keep a cup of coffee hot for me! The old servant stared; Trudaine stopped and looked back. 'What is there so very surprising?' he asked. 'In such an ordinary act of politeness on my sister's part?'

'Excuse me, Monsieur Trudaine,' answered Lomaque. 'You have not passed such an existence as mine—you are not a friendless old man—you have a settled position in the world, and are used to be treated with consideration. I am not. This is the first occasion in my life on which I find myself an object for the attention of a young lady, and it takes me by surprise. I repeat my excuses—pray let us go in.'

Trudaine made no reply to this curious explanation. He wondered at it a little, however, and he wondered still more, when entering the drawing-room, he saw Lomaque walk straight up to his sister, and—apparently not noticing that Danville was sitting at the harpsichord and singing at the time—addressed her confidentially and earnestly with a set speech of thanks for his hot cup of coffee. Rose looked perplexed, and half inclined to laugh, as she listened to him. Madame Danville, who sat by her side, frowned and rapped the land-steward contemptuously on the arm with her fan.

By so good as to keep silent until my son has done singing,' she said. Lomaque made a low bow, and retiring to a table in a corner, took up a newspaper lying on it. If Madame Danville had seen the expression that came over his face when he turned away from her, proud as she was, her aristocratic composure might possibly have been a little ruffled.

Danville had finished his song, had quitted the harpsichord, and was talking in whispers to his bride, Madame Danville was adding a word to the conversation every now and then; Trudaine was seated apart at the far end of the room, thoughtfully reading a letter which he had taken from his pocket—when an exclamation from Lomaque, who was still engaged with the newspaper, caused all the other occupants of the apartment to suspend their employments and look up.

'What is it?' asked Danville, impatiently. 'I shall be interrupting if I explain,' murmured Lomaque, getting very weak in the eyes again, as he deferentially addressed himself to Madame Danville. 'You have, apparently, interrupted me, said the old lady, sharply, so you may now just as well explain.'

'It is a passage from the Scientific Intelligence, which has given me great delight, and which will be joyful news for everyone here.' Saying this, Lomaque looked significantly at Trudaine, and then read from the newspaper these lines: 'Academy of Sciences, Paris.—The vacant sub-professorship of chemistry has been offered, and we are rejoiced to hear, to a gentleman whose modesty has hitherto prevented his scientific merits from becoming sufficiently prominent in the world. To the members of the academy he has been long since known as the originator of some of the most remarkable improvements in chemistry which have been made of late years—improvements, the credit of which he has, with rare, and we were almost about to add, culpable moderation, allowed others to profit by with impunity. No man in any profession is more thoroughly entitled to have a position of trust and distinction conferred on him by the state than the gentleman to whom we refer—M. Louis Trudaine.'

Before Lomaque could look up from the paper to observe the impression which his news produced, Rose had gained her brother's side, and was kissing him in a flutter of delight. 'Dear Louis,' she cried, clapping her hands, 'let me be the first to congratulate you! How proud and glad I am! You accept the professorship, of course?'

Trudaine, who had hastily and confusedly put his letter back in his pocket the moment Lomaque began to read, seemed at a loss for an answer. He patted his sister's hand rather absently, and said: 'I have not made up my mind; don't ask me why, Rose—at least not now, not just now.' An expression of perplexity and distress came over his face, as she gently motioned her to resume her chair.

her arms round his neck, and whispered to him, 'Oh, Louis, Louis! how I wish I could teach you to see Charles with my eyes!'

He felt her tears on his cheek as she spoke, and tried to reassure her. 'You shall teach me, Rose—you shall indeed. Come, come! we must keep up our spirits; for how are you to look your best to-morrow?'

He clasped her arms, and led her gently to a chair. At the same moment, there was a knock at the door, and Rose's maid appeared, anxious to consult her mistress on some of the preparations for the wedding ceremony. No interruption could have been more welcome just at that time. It obliged Rose to think of present trifles, and it gave her brother an excuse for retiring to his study.

He sat down by his desk, doubting and heavy-hearted, and placed the letter from the Academy of Sciences open before him. 'Passing over all the complimentary expressions which it contained, his eye rested only on these lines at the end: "During the first three years of your professorship, you will be required to reside in or near Paris nine months out of the year, for the purpose of delivering lectures and superintending experiments from time to time in the laboratories." The letter, in which these lines occurred, offered him such a position as in his modest self-distrust, he had never dreamed of before; the lines themselves contained the promise of such vast facilities for carrying on his favorite experiments, as he could never hope to command in his own little study, with his own limited means; and yet, there he now sat, doubting whether he should accept or reject the tempting honors and advantages that were offered to him—doubting for his sister's sake!

'Nine months of the year in Paris,' he said to himself, sadly, 'and Rose is to pass her married life at Lyons. Oh! if I could clear my heart of its dread on her account—if I could free my mind of its forebodings for her future—how gladly I would answer this letter by accepting the trust it offers me!'

He passed for a few minutes and reflected. The thoughts that were in his mind marked their obvious course in the growing paleness of his cheek, in the dimness that stole over his eyes. 'If I could free myself should be in very truth the mute prophecy of the future to come, I know not—' (if it be so (which God forbid), how soon she may want a friend, a protector near at hand, a ready refuge in the time of her trouble. Where shall she then find protection or refuge? With that passionate woman? With her husband's kindred and friends?'

He shuddered as the thought crossed his mind, and opening a blank sheet of paper, dipped his pen in the ink. 'So all to her, Louis, that I have seen,' he murmured to himself, repeating his mother's last words, and beginning the letter while he uttered them. It was soon completed. It expressed, in the most respectful terms, his gratitude for the offer made to him, and his inability to accept it, in consequence of domestic circumstances which it was needless to explain. The letter was directed, sealed, and only remained for him to place it in the post-bag lying near at hand. At this last decisive act he hesitated. He had told Lomaque, and he had frankly beloved himself, that he had conquered all ambitions for his sister's sake. He knew now, for the first time, that he had only loved them to rest—he knew that the letter from Paris had aroused them. His answer was written, his hand was on the post-bag, and at that moment the whole struggle had to be risked over again—risked when he was most unfit for it! He was not a man under any ordinary circumstances to procrastinate, but he procrastinated now.

'Night brings counsel; I will wait till to-morrow,' he said to himself, and put the letter of refusal in his pocket, and hastily quitted the laboratory. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

CHAPTER V. LOMAQUE, who had remained unperturbably cool during the outbreak of the old lady's anger; Lomaque, whose observant eyes had watched sarcastically the effect of the scene between mother and son on Trudaine and his sister, was the last to take leave. After he had bowed to Rose, with a certain gentleness in his manner, which contrasted strangely with his wrinkled, haggard face, he held out his hand to her brother. 'I did not take your hand when we sat together on the bench,' he said, 'may I take it now?'

Trudaine met his advance courteously, but in silence. 'You may alter your opinion of me one of these days.' Adding those words in a whisper, Monsieur Lomaque bowed once more to the bride and went out. For a few minutes after the door had closed, the brother and sister kept silence. 'Our last night together at home,' that was the thought which now filled the heart of each. Rose was the first to speak. 'Hesitating a little, as she approached her brother, she said to him anxiously: 'I am sorry for what happened with Madame Danville, Louis. Does it make you think the worse of Charles?'

'I can make allowance for Madame Danville's anger,' returned Trudaine, evasively, 'because she spoke from honest conviction. "Honest," echoed Rose, sadly; "honest—ah, Louis! I know you are thinking disparagingly of Charles's intentions when you speak."'

In showing the proofs of a lady's photograph to her husband the other day Photographer Brown laid one aside with the remark "This one is not good, the end of her tongue shows." "For Heavens sake! let me see it!" the man exclaimed. "Ah, that's the one I want for I never knew before that it had any end."

The Plymouth Mail man says his sympathies are with the Northville Record in its struggle for bread. Brother Neal must be having A I bread these days if we are to judge from the amount of advertising Northville business men are giving him. Incidentally we might mention that he has been obliged to enlarge his paper within the past few weeks, and now issues a seven-column quarto. —Springwells Times.

An important law point, to some publishers at least, is that raised by the Judge of Probate of Monroe county where he decides that the place of doing the press work denotes the place of a newspaper publication. For instance a legal notice is not legally published in a paper type-set and circulated in Monroe or Washtenaw county when the press work is done in Wayne county. This will, if the ruling of the probate judge is correct, affect many papers in the state outside of Wayne county who have for years had their press work done in Detroit. The decision of the attorney general is looked forward to with much interest.

The King's Daughters' cook book is in the hands of the Record Printery and will be ready for distribution some time this month. The book will be a valuable one inasmuch as all the recipes are such as have been tested by the ladies of the village who are connoisseurs in the culinary art. One thousand copies are to be issued and each will contain 64 pages besides the cover.

Fred Brooks, with several aliases, who will be remembered as the "Slick chap" who boarded at Mrs. Sessions' boarding house here for some time about two years ago.

That lady a Jersey cow who contracted with Bovee & Smith to build a barn on his (?) farm near Pontiac; and who succeeded in borrowing (?) some money of other parties in town to whom he forgot to return it, has just been arrested at Howell by Genesee officials and taken to Flint for trial for some old offences committed there.

An Oakland county farmer has a cow which he thought was afflicted with a cancer of the jaw, quite a lump being prominent. The cow was regularly milked; but the farmer would not use it, and threw it away. Last week he summoned a cow surgeon, and the latter soon found the cow had no cancer, but that the "lump on the jaw" was only a china nest egg that had become lodged between the jaw bone and skin, and for which many dollars' worth of milk have been thrown away. Sometimes it pays to not take things for granted.

Among the fruit and flower novelties which 1896 brings us, we notice that the enterprising and reliable firm of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., are already calling attention to three, which seem to have won great favor where known. They are the double sweet pea, the only one in the world true to name, "Bride of Niagara," the "Early Leader Tomato," the earliest of all the early tomato family and sure to become a great favorite, and the already famous huckleberry, the "Rathburn," 10 cents will get their Floral Guide for the current year.

One of the largest and most cultured audiences of the season filled the opera house last week Friday evening to listen to Rev. Mr. Herbenner's lecture, "The Grim Joker of Sacred Writ." When the speaker was introduced in a few well-chosen words by Mr. Brown in behalf of the King's Daughters, under whose auspices the lecture was given, the audience rose en masse and gave him such an ovation as would put any speaker at his best, and at such he evidently was. His easy, graceful delivery, sparkling wit and admirable rendering of the tragic jokes of his subject captured his hearers who listened with rapt attention, broken only by laughter and applause. Mr. Herbenner seems to be as eminently successful in the roll of lecturer as in that of an evangelist. His jester proved to be Samson. Mrs. Blinbury of Detroit rendered two solos.

To illustrate how easily the tender cord of sympathy is touched in mankind even when they are prone to find fault by being put to some inconvenience was touchingly illustrated by Superintendent Beal of the Methodist Sunday-school last Sunday. He stated that while returning from Toledo Saturday night the E&M train was side-tracked at Delray. The train was filled with passengers all anxious to get home and after a long wait they were informed that their train was waiting for the Wabash which had passengers for the F&M. After an hour's delay the connecting train arrived and when one lone male passenger was all that boarded their train the grumbling of the passengers was denounced. Before long however it was noised through the cars that the gentleman was from some point in Ohio and with him came the last remains of his beloved daughter which were then resting in a casket in the baggage car being conveyed to their final resting place. It was then that the love and kindness, always so manifested towards others in bereavement, made itself felt. The grumbling ceased as by magic, and there was not a passenger on the train but who would have been glad to have waited half the night if necessary. The moral Mr. Beal drew was that oft times when people are finding fault at some inconvenience a little patient waiting will turn it into pleasure.

HARRISON DECLINES.

Does Not Want the Nomination for the White House.

A dispatch from Indianapolis, the home of ex-President Harrison, says, Capt. John K. Gowdy, chairman of the Republican state central committee, called on Gen. Harrison by invitation, and the general declined to have the following self-suggested letter...

Had John K. Gowdy, Indianapolis, in view of the resolutions passed by the state central committee at its recent meeting, and of the fact that delegates to the national Republican convention are to be chosen in this state, he has concluded that some statement from the general as to his wishes and purpose would now be in the interest of the party.

Bethany has declined to speak at the public meeting, but scores of friends to whom he has talked, and many scores more to whom he has written, will recognize in this expression the substance of what he said to them. By every means he has proposed to prevent his nomination.

The white House that I have seen is not the white House that I have seen in the past. It is not the white House that I have seen in the past. It is not the white House that I have seen in the past.

I cannot consent that any name be presented to or used in the State Convention, and much less to be used in the National Convention, and finally expression upon the subject.

FAMILY OF FOUR BURNED.

Terrible Holocaust in a burning Barnum house near Marshall. Harvey Page, his wife and two children were killed, and a fourth child nearly so.

The fire broke out in a barn on the east of Marshall, Mich. Page and his family occupied half of a double-log farmhouse, the other half being occupied by his brother, Wilbur Page, and family.

Wilbur says he and his family slept on the first floor, and his brother Harvey and family in an upper room of the house. About 2 a. m. he was aroused by the cries of Harvey and he at once saw that the house was on fire.

With his hired man Wilbur got into his family and then tried to rescue Harvey and his family, but the flames were too great for him.

Harvey and his family were found in a room on the second floor, and he was unable to get them down. The youngest son, a babe three months old, was found with the family. The oldest child, a lad of three years, had gotten out of bed and was endeavoring to escape when the flames overpowered him. The fire is supposed to have started from a defective stove or chimney.

SERPENTS USED BY THE SURGENTS OF CUBA.

Fearful Use to Which the Revolutionists Put Them—Dipped in Petroleum and Thrown into Camp Fire—Moving Streaks of Fire.

It has been left to the Cuban surgeons to introduce one of the most novel methods of construction known to the employment of snakes.

Accepted for a definite purpose, but this is a definite time the snake has been through a practical basis of usefulness.

The recent march of General Gomez's troops through the sugar districts was for the avowed purpose of destroying the plantations, and well has the purpose been achieved.

Snakes are very plenty in Cuba, and more so than the varieties known as the mamba and tubo. These the surgeons would catch by the hand.

The manner in which these wild reptile captures were made is peculiar. The men would divide into squads, and form something like snake lines, only in closer order.

As fast as one of the snakes was discovered, a soldier would cleverly capture it and throw it into a sack he carried for the purpose. This hunt would keep up until a sufficient number of snakes had been secured.

The intention was to use the insurgents would dip them in petroleum grease, cans of which were secured for the purpose; set on fire and then release them.

Each of these snakes, which are of a size and shape that would make their way into the center of the plantation, would crawl into the trees.
