

THE NORTHVILLE RECORD.

Vol. XXVII, No. 38.

FRIDAY, MAY 1, 1896.

$1.00 per Year, in advance.

VERY SAD CASE

That of Richard McGuire of South Lyon.

SAYED TO HAVE FORGED A CHECK
FOR $295.86

Always borne an exceptionally good character.

And there was no apparent reason in the deed.

Richard McGuire, a well-known South Lyon butcher, was arrested last week and taken to Detroit to answer to the charge of forging Samuel Andrews' name to a check for $295.86. Andrews is a Detroit wholesale butcher with whom he dealt.

Rich is well known in Northville where he clerked for some time in the store of Ball & Neal, afterwards going into business with his brother-in-law, Frank Power at Wixom, under the firm name of R. McGuire & Co. He disposed of his interest there to Mr. Power a few years ago and started in the meat business for himself in South Lyon. He was held in high esteem in all these places because of his integrity, industry and agreeable ways. His friends can account for this singular freak in no other way except that he is or was temporarily demented.

His wife, formerly Miss Alta Bogart, of this place, has been at her parents' home near Wixom regaining for some time past much sympathy is expressed for the family at this added affliction.

Rich was released Monday on $500 bail and returned home with Mrs. Bogart. She is a widow in Detroit for trial tomorrow Saturday.

What if at first deplored, he apparently admitted Monday, that he did the deed and used the money to buy another meat market building in South Lyon. A petition was extensively circulated here this week petitioning the court for clemency in the case.

Oh yes! kind friend, Farmington is to have the electric road, brass band and there has been talk of electric lights.

Last Sunday while F. M. Warner, wife and baby were out driving something about the harness became broken and the horse started to run, throwing them all out into the ditch just in front of Mr. Warner's. The horse ran down Main street and was caught near the gas factory. No serious damage to the occupants though Mrs. Warner's foot and ankle were hurt slightly. The buggy was badly demoralized.

H. W. Lee and wife were Sunday visitors at Southfield, the guests of Mrs. Lee's parents, Chas. Murphy and wife.

Messrs. John and Clyde McGee of Pontiac were visitors Sunday at the home of their parents, Thos. McGee and wife.

The dance given by the senior class last Friday evening at the town hall was largely attended and a pleasant time had.

Chas. Moore and family have moved to Birmingham. Their many friends wish them happiness and prosperity in their new home.

Through the earnest efforts of the Misses Thomas and Kennedy, teachers in the intermediate and primary departments, a fine reading room has been furnished and is an ornament to the school. Good reading suitable for children has been placed there for use. Much credit should be given the teachers in the interest which they are taking in the school work to instruct and interest the children placed under their care.

MORGAN L'S LECTURE.

OVER TWO HOURS OF VERY FAST TALK.

Interesting Lecture and a Large Audience Heard It.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you. Weep, and you are alone; for the sad earth has need of your mirth. It has grief enough of its own.

The Rev. Morgan L. Wood delivered another of his incomparable lectures, "Manhood Triumphant," to a large and attentive audience on Tuesday evening.

THE DREAM OF THE FUTURE.
He said: The present is the fulcrum of the past and the germ of the future, and we must base on men themselves. Care for the men and let the theology go. Morganian posse attributes and qualities which if developed will level us to the highest plane, and we are not to pride of what we might do, but see what we are doing for the general good.

CONTINUATION.
One can't tell by looking at the place where the brain center ought to be to be assured of what is to come from that brain or whether there is anything in it. Big head does not argue intense head? The only way is to reason from effect back to cause to see whether there is anything.

Three great and needful attributes of the brain are: receptiveness, retentiveness and responsiveness. Be able to see, to remember and to put in good simple language what you do know.

Most of us do not know how to use what we have. It is not because we haven't got it tucked away somewhere but because we do not know how to use it. Many seemingly clever men are only ordinary mortals, who have the happy faculty of always using the best they know.

UPHOLDS AMUSEMENTS ETC.

If we are to study Shakespeare in our high schools why not see the play. The first is only rhetoric, but the last—that is different. It is the test.

Novels and poetry are all right—if the reader has horse sense—one can devour as much idealistic reading as his intellectual appetite craves. It is no harm to build air castles, providing he brings them safely to earth, for the ideal is always ahead of the real.

WHY MEN FAIL.

Men fail oftener from inertia than circumstances, because they don't will to win. To see if you can never do.

Aim to be the best or not at all. Man is not the creature of circumstances, but the creator of them principally, although modified by climate and perhaps ancestors.

MAN GOD TRIUMPHANT.

Perfect physical development, piety, methodical business habits, wit, or even an all-around brainy man are all efficient but not sufficient. Manhood means a good man and by goodness is meant God-ness.

His stories were all to the point and he acted them so cleverly that his audience loses sight of the speaker in the character he sets off.

Many thanks are due to the YMCA for the pleasure afforded on this second occasion.

Do not forget Miss Boeves is head

WAS DEAD EASY.

The Northville Ball Club Slaughtered the M. A. A's Saturday.

The "sober" boys from the Orchard Lake Military Academy constituting one of the school's ball-clubs were nearly whipped off the face of the earth in Saturday's ball game here. They couldn't really give the home club practice. The game was very uninteresting and void of any special features. The score was 29 to 2 in Northville's favor.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

Floyd Nichols of Farmington Has a Narrow Escape.

Last week Thursday evening Floyd Nichols, the elder son of Gilbert Nichols of North Farmington was kicked by a horse which he was breaking, receiving frightful injuries on the head. The frontal was fractured and crushed in upon the brain. Dr. Moore was hastily summoned and extracted no less than nine pieces of bone from the wound, leaving the brain exposed. With returning sensibility, convulsions followed by delirium supervened. The patient however rallied from the shock during the following morning and at the present time his condition seems favorable for recovery.

SISTER ROSE.

A STORY OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

BY WILKIE COLLINS.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

"Let that man enter, whoever he is!" cried the general.

Trudaine passed Madame Danville on the staircase. She trembled as he brushed by her, then supporting herself by the wall, followed him a few paces into the room. She looked first at her son—after that at Trudaine—after that back again at her son, something in her presence stifling every one. There fell a sudden stillness over all the assembly—a stillness so deep that the eager, frightened whispering, and sharpened rustling of dresses among the women in the library became audible from the other side of the closed door.

"Oblige me sit for the last," by keeping silence. You and I have no need to say to each other I am the daughter of a race of nobles, and the widow of a man of honor. You are a traitor and a false witness, as I think of my son," she said; "and I see contempt in your face. By what right do you, who are more wise and grateful sense of his mother's obligations to you, make him suffer for the saving of your son?"

She turned her head, continuing, going to the other persons in the room, with the old formal courtesy of bygone times, walked slowly and steadily to the door. Stopping there, she looked back, and then the arduous course of the moment failed her. With a faint suppressed cry, she clutched at the hand of the old servant, who still kept faithfully at her side; he caught her in his arms, and her head sank on his shoulder.

"Help him!" cried the general to the servants near the door. "Help him take her into the next room."

The old man looked up suspiciously from his mistress to the persons who were assisting him to support her. With a strange, sudden jealousy he shook his hand at them. "Home," he cried, "she shall go home, and I will take care of her. Away you there—nobody holds her but old Dubois. Don't start down stairs to her, darling."

"I think I shall express the wishes of Citizen Trudaine," he said, addressing Madame Danville. "If I recommended this lady not to press too public an answer to her question."

"Pray, who are you, sir, who take it on yourself to advise me?" she retorted haughtily. "I have nothing to say to you, except that I repeat those questions, and that I insist on their being answered."

"Who is this man?" asked the general, addressing Trudaine, and pointing to Lomagne.

"A man unworthy of credit," cried Danville, speaking angrily for the first time, and darting a look of deadly hatred at Lomagne. "An agent of power under Robespierre."

"And in that capacity capable of answering questions which refer to the transactions of Robespierre's tribunals," remarked the exiled agent with his old official politeness.

"Truly, excepting the general, this man is right—let him be hanged!"

"There is no help for it," said Lomagne, looking at Trudaine, "they'll do it—it's fitness they should speak. I was present," he continued in a louder voice, "as the trial of Citizen Trudaine and his sister. They were brought to the bar through the denunciation of Citizen Danville. And the confession of the male prisoner exposed the fact I can answer for Danville's not being aware of the real nature of the offenses charged against Trudaine and his sister. When it became known that they were secretly helping this jackal to escape from France, and when Danville's own head was consequently in danger, I myself heard him say it by false assertion that he had been aware of Trudaine's conspiracy from the first."

"Do you mean to say," interrupted the general, "that he proclaimed him self in open court, as having knowingly denounced the man who was on trial for saving his mother?"

"I do," answered Lomagne. A murmur of horror and indignation rose from all the strangers present at that reply. "The report of the tribunal are existing to prove the truth of what I say," he went on. "As to the escape of Citizen Trudaine and the wife of Danville from the guillotine, it was the work of political circumstances which there are persons living to speak to if necessary, and a little strategem of mine, which need not be related to now." And just with reference to the concealment which followed the escape, I beg to inform you that it was planned the moment we knew what was going on here; and that when Danville's own head was consequently in danger, I myself heard him say it by false assertion that he had been aware of Trudaine's conspiracy from the first."

"I only eat green vegetables," answered Molesquin. "Nevertheless, if the gentleman will come in for a short while I will play them my part in the 'Tour de Nesles.' There are some interesting passages in it."

Andold and Edgar did not like to refuse, and went into the old musician's room. Molesquin gave them a seat and some cigarettes and then, going up to the stand, he played through for them the whole of the first bassoon part in the "Tour de Nesles."

Edgar made a brave face over it, while Anatole sat in the window with his potato in his hand, scarcely able to contain his patience.

Suddenly the musician struck a false note. It increased Anatole's impatience so much that he gave a jump and in doing so allowed the potato to slip from his fingers. It rolled over the window sill, and, with a hop, disappeared in the street below.

With a smile Anatole dropped her potato.

STORY OF A POTATO.

MILLE AGLAÉ, a milliner by trade, was sitting one fine Sunday morning by the open window peeling potatoes. The window was on the fifth floor and looked out on Rue Lepic. Suddenly one of the potatoe—slipped through her fingers, dropped over the edge of the window sill, and disappeared into space. It fell with a bang upon a gentleman who was passing beneath, and made a deep dent in his elegant silk hat.

It took him but two seconds to reach the landing on the second floor, when the potato was found that the tenants next door were innocent. They would come in and accuse her. After some moments, however, she gained enough courage to conceal the basket of potatoes which must otherwise have appeared so much against her, and forced herself to put on an innocent expression with which to meet the police.

"Atable!"

"Edgar!" Anatole Baudruche and Edgar Bricheton were two old college chums. They had not met since the day when they took their bachelor of arts degree together twelve years before. In spite of this long interval in their intercourse they found on the occasion of this sudden meeting that they had very little real change of conversation.

Edgar was the first to speak:

"Say, you hat looks very pretty, he said.

"Do not speak of it. It has just served for a target for a potato that fell from the fifth story."

"And now you are going upstairs to return the potato to its owner? That's very nice of you."

"Not exactly means. I'm going to charge the clumsy devil with his crime—try to make him pay for my hat."

"Well, so far as that is concerned, you might as well tackle a corpse."

"And why, if you please?"

"Because old Bidoche is a bold hedgehog who will kick you downstairs even if he sees the door for you at all."

"Old Bidoche?"

"Yes, the man you are after. Oh it can be no other than he. All the tenants in the building are always having trouble with him. One might think that he made a point of being disagreeable to everyone as he possibly can."

"Then do you live in this house?"

"No, but an aunt of mine does, and scarcely a day passes without her having a scrap with old Bidoche. If you will allow me I will go up with you; two heads are better than one in a matter like this."

An old and Anatole went up three flights together, and stopped outside a door through which came softly the sounds of a melancholy musical instrument.

"This is the music," said Edgar.

"It's a bit strong, on its harmonic."

With these words he pulled the bell and the harmonic suddenly ceased. Then the sound of feet was heard along

"MONSIEUR, YOU ARE A FOOL," the floor, the door opened and there, framed in the doorway, stood a little old man with benevolent smiling face and a large-sized bassoon resting across one arm.

"What do the gentlemen desire?" asked the little old man.

"M. Bidoche," replied Edgar.

"Yes, the wretched Bidoche," added Anatole, shaking his ruined hat in one hand and with the other placing the potato on the top of the musician's nose.

"M. Bidoche," replied the old man merrily. "I do not know him, I never heard of him."

"What's that? What's that?" cried Edgar. "Are you trying to deceive us?"

"Not at all," answered the old man quietly. "There must be some mistake somewhere. My name is Molesquin. I am the sole basso in the orchestra of the Theater des Gobelins, and I moved to this morning."

"Then," confided Anatole, "you are not the man who threw this potato on my hat?"

"I only eat green vegetables," answered Molesquin. "Nevertheless, if the gentleman will come in for a short while I will play them my part in the 'Tour de Nesles.' There are some interesting passages in it."

Andold and Edgar did not like to refuse, and went into the old musician's room. Molesquin gave them a seat and some cigarettes and then, going up to the stand, he played through for them the whole of the first bassoon part in the "Tour de Nesles."

Edgar made a brave face over it, while Anatole sat in the window with his potato in his hand, scarcely able to contain his patience.

Suddenly the musician struck a false note. It increased Anatole's impatience so much that he gave a jump and in doing so allowed the potato to slip from his fingers. It rolled over the window sill, and, with a hop, disappeared in the street below.

With a smile Anatole dropped her potato.

To this the street she was overcome with fear. She hurriedly shut the window so that in case there had been an accident no one would suspect her. Then she sat down and quietly waited the turn of events. What then was her terror when she heard steps coming up her stairs—the steps of men, of two men, heavy and solid.

"They're policemen," she thought, and at the thought her little heart began to beat more quickly, while perspiration broke out on her pretty white shoulders.

"But just when she expected to hear the men's cruel fist knocking at the door, her little room her face suddenly resumed its calm and peaceful expression.

Still she was afraid to move for some time, fearing by logical mind, that when the potato was found that the tenants next door were innocent they would come in and accuse her. After some moments, however, she gained enough courage to conceal the basket of potatoes which must otherwise have appeared so much against her, and forced herself to put on an innocent expression with which to meet the police.

After waiting a little longer and hearing no noise of steps, but only the bassoon, she became completely reassured.

In order to make assurance doubly sure, she opened her cupboard, and taking out the milk jar, opened the door quietly and crept down the stairs to get four sous' worth of milk from the dairy at the corner. In this way she hoped to make an alibi, and her case would be 100% strong for the slightest suspicion. Besides she wanted some milk to boil her potatoes in, and it was her intention to put in a cauliflower as well.

So she bought her four sous' worth of milk and started on the return journey with her potato at her side.

Bottle carefully held in front of her, suddenly she felt a violent blow on her fingers, and at the same instant her hands, her bare arms, her corselet face, half and mouth were drenched with milk.

It was the potato that had slipped from Anatole's hand and had landed with remarkable precision right in the mouth of the milk jar.

"Oh, mamma," cried Aglaé in despair, "what has happened? Who has done this?" And she ran up the staircase, only to run straight into the hands of Anatole.

Anatole, as a matter-of-fact, when he saw the potato flying downward, remembered the police surveillance against throwing stones out of the window.

It was about 9 a.m., and decided to leave Bidoche as soon as it was fit, once public and possible. He took Edgar, who had fallen asleep, and after pronouncing Moléquin to return next day and take him, ran out of the room.

"Old Bidoche," cried Aglaé in despair, "what has happened? Who has done this?" And she ran up the staircase, only to run straight into the hands of Anatole.

"This is the music," said Edgar.

"It's a bit strong, on its harmonic."

Chas. Keys found the roads so bad on his 45 mile bike ride last week Saturday that he could not make a go of it. He reached Farmington on time but had to walk two miles before reaching Pontiac where he arrived 30 minutes late.
He will try the run again when the roads are more settled.

Last Sunday was the 77th anniversary of the founding of the IOOF in America.
Globe Lodge observed the day by attending service at the Baptist church where the pastor, Rev. F. E.
Arnold, preached a sermon for them on the subject of Truth. The order

Willard Stark of South Lyon closed a very successful school year last Friday as teacher in the Henry White district.
In the evening the scholars under Mr. Stark's training gave an entertainment assisted by Mrs. Jesse Clark, and Miss Ferguson of New Hudson. Miss Wolfe gave two readings in her usual pleasing manner.
Altogether it was a grand success and greatly enjoyed by the large crowd present. Mr. Stark has made many friends with us and all wish him great success in what ever business he may take up in the future.

A dozen or two of our exchanges have the following: "According to the recent ruling of the postmaster general all post offices having a double line henceforth shall be written without the second capital and the two shall be written as one word." Under this ruling Bay City will hereafter be written
Bay City, and other towns as follows:
Cedar Springs, Grand Rapids, New York,
Nuvorleans, Saint Louis, Eaton Rapids,
etc. The ruling will be very unpopular.
There is no such ruling in existence.
What there is of it all applies only to newly made post offices.

A "slick" stranger "did" a lot of the Northville smokers and some of our business men very neatly last week with his "Cubanola" cigars. They were made by the insurgents in Cuba and if our people would buy a box or two each they would not only be getting a very choice article but at the same time they would be helping the Cuban cause. The little scheme worked very nicely but the cigars turned out to be the very poorest kind of "two-for's" and the patrons of the "Cuban cause" here are rapidly transferring their sympathy to Spain. The whole thing, it is needless to add, was a fake.

The Murder of Enos Lawrence at Houghton. Created by the Murderer Confessing—Love-Loss—Youth Shoots His Sweetheart and Then Suicides.

Mrs. Lawrence Confesses.

Mrs. Mary A. Lawrence, widow of the murdered Enos Lawrence of Houghton, has made a confession to her daughter-in-law at Grand Haven. She says that at the height of the murder she and her husband had a quarrel. She was locked in her bedroom, and her husband slept in a cot. In the night Coates came down stairs declar- ing he was going to do this up. He said this on passing through her bed room. Her husband went to know what was in the keeping of Sheriff Karpel. Mrs. Lawrence says she knows nothing of the disposition of the body.

Coates also confessed. He says he came down stairs because of a quarrel and struck Lawrence with an ax in self-defense. He then weighted down the body, placed it in a baggy and buried it seven blocks by railroads, threw it into the river.

Mrs. Lawrence advises that Samuel Coates, his brother and sister, and his wife were married in order to hide the crime. It is also stated that, according to glass, just the feeling between her and Lawrence was very bitter and that Coates killed Lawrence to rid his sister of a bad husband.

Gen. George Englehardt, 73, the most stupendous feat of military engineering undertaken in the Lake Superior country in many years is the redemption of the Marquette mine in the Crystal Falls district by dredging the course of the Mississippi. The Marquette is the only producer of Bessemer iron in the district. The deposit extends under the bed of the river, and three years ago its workings were inundated by the stream breaking into the encasing ledges. At that time the lives of 25 men were lost. The course of the river will be dredged by the construction of a new causeway 2,000 feet in length. The water will be turned into the new channel by a mammoth dam 100 feet above the shaft and prevented from regaining the outlet. The work costs $10 million.

NOVI LOCALS.

"what is everybody's business" is nobody's business." Novi has another strange freak of nature. This time it is a pig with two perfectly formed noses, and a bump for the third; three mouths and three eyes; the eyes are in a row across the forehead, the third one located in the center. The remainder of this remarkable pig is perfectly formed. It was born on a farm near here last Friday and only lived a couple of hours. Dr. Wiggins has it pickled. (Now you Adriam Press man, be careful what you say about our state.) Cyrus Russell and his well-trained company gave a very creditable musical entertainment at the Baptist church Monday evening. The selections which "formed" the listeners were "The Three Wishes" by Mr. Vowles, and "The Daisy" by Mrs. Russell. Mr. Russell and family were for many years residents of Novi. Mr. Russell having taught school in the school house which occupied the site of Mr. Wooster's residence of Novi. A large number turned out to give them the greeting of old acquaintance.

Three quite important events occurred at the Baptist church last Sunday. Rev. Mr. Tickner delivered his sermon on Solomon's Temple to the largest congregation that has been gathered in that church in many years. The discourse was interesting, and especially that part referring to the temple. Mr. Tickner handled the subject in a most able manner. The second event followed the preaching service when the Sunday school convened. It was reported as one of the largest schools in the history of the society. Third and by no means least, following the young people's meeting in the evening when Hon. A. N. Kimball delivered his talk on "The Days of Daniel," which was listened to by the largest audience which has ever responded here to an announcement of this character. It was a lecture, a copy of which should find a place in every home in the land; it was historical, covering a vast period of the world's history; it was replete with elaborate description; it portrayed the destruction of ancient Jerusalem, and the fall of the greatest city that has ever existed—Babylon. It joined the civil governments of ancient times.

There is a good story being told on our Lawyer Wixom. It seems that Mr. Niles, the very obliging deputy game warden for Oakland county, paid Novi a visit last Friday and expressed a desire to go duck hunting. (He went fishing the previous time he was here.) Lawyer Wixom procured the necessary fowling pieces and also engaged "Polly" to go along and scare out the ducks. It was agreed to make the start for Walled Lake at three a.m. next morning, but the clocks failed to cut the desired figure, and Mr. Wixom was aroused at one o'clock a.m. and all three gentlemen started. On arriving at the outlet of the lake the obliging game warden and the goodnatured lawyer stationed themselves in a piece of woods near the lake and "Polly" took a boat and lantern and rowed out among the rushes, but he kept right on rowing until he reached a dry spot on the opposite shore and there he built him a fire and his weary self down beside it and snored away until breakfast time. Wixom and Niles, in the mean time, stood shivering in the woods until they "tumbled" and went home. We feel sorry for both fellows as it would have been such sport shooting ducks in a grave, but you will choke up Novi and ask the state game warden to investigate Deputy Niles' conduct.

Mrs. Gruber who has been ill for so long successfully underwent an operation last week performed by Dr. Wiggins and Carter by which six tumors were removed. The patient is doing nicely, and her many friends are pleased to hear the promise of a speedy recovery.

Mr. Scovel, one of the promoters of the Detroit Northville and Walled Lake electric railway, was in attendance at the citizens' meeting at the town hall Saturday and the franchise which Mr. Scovel asked the township to grant him was discussed. It was decided to postpone action until Saturday May 9th when a franchise embracing more satisfactory features will be presented. We might suggest that our people desire that whoever acquires the right of way over the Detroit and Howell plank road shall have nothing to do with time limit regarding our own highway.

Fourth, that the company acquiring a franchise must put up a guarantee fund of at least $1,000 as a forfeit; in case the company fails to construct the line within the time mentioned. The township board was authorized to ask such assistance as they desired in the preparation of a franchise.
