According to Prof. Bell everybody will soon be able to fly.

The business concerned with many American women by Paderewski may be overlooked now that he has given ten thousand dollars to the cause of music in this country, and indeed he shall be forgotten even his profuse and tangled locks and the almost pouring of the universal piano. Yes, let him come again and he will be received with one grand, sweet song.

Brooklyn has a young girl who robs smaller children to get money with which to buy candy.

A dentist in Connecticut says he expects to meet his pay parcel in heaven. Whether the bird has been sent out of the land of the living is not known, but the dentist is waiting to write a glowing book praising his patient's teeth.

The Michigan crop reports for last week show wheat, corn, clover and alfalfa are doing well in nearly all sections and in the southern counties wheat is beginning to head.

The United States Department of Agriculture says that in constructing new dirt roads all stumps, brush, vegetable matter, rocks, and boulders should be removed from the surface, and the resulting holes filled in with suitable material, carefully and thoroughly tamped or rolled. Before the road embankment is commenced, no perishable material should be used in forming the permanent embankment. Wherever the subgrade soil is found unsuitable it should be removed and replaced with good material rolled to a bearing. The roadbed having been brought to the required grade and crown should be rolled several times to compact the surface. All inequalities discovered during the rolling should be leveled up and re-rolled. On the prepared subgrade the earth should be spread, harrowed if necessary, and then rolled to a bearing by passing the unbalanced road roller a number of times over every portion of the surface of the section.

The May returns of the statistical division of the department of agriculture on the condition of winter wheat show an increase of 5.5 points above the April average, being $2.7, against 77.1 last month, and $2.9 in May, 1895.

"Ah," said she, fixing her eyes steadfastly on the dim line where sky and ocean blended into one. "When I sit here, I grow so impatient. Walter, I long to skim like the albatross viceroy with daring wing, soar above the heaving waves, and be with the world—so beautiful—so grand!—would see my spirit free of this messiness; it pants like an imprisoned bird longing for one taste of the purdair of freedom."

"Silly girl! What is free and purdair than this sea breeze, blowing so delightfully with your curls?—What more boundless vast and grand than this ever-changing sea at your feet? Why should you sigh for anything buter?"

"Because, father, it is not very hard for us as well as you."

"My child," answered he, solemnly, "it will be of little use for me to tell you what a bitter cruel enemy I have found this same world for which you sigh. I may bid you prize this calm peace, this freedom from sin and sorrow, but you will be dear to my words, because of the island's song, the radiant-faced Hope sings ever to the ears of youth. No, my children, I long no more to be busy-hunts of men. I am ready to pray that this peaceful Eden may prove a grave."

The young creature, dimly guessing through what waves of grief and pain he had reached the peaceful shore of content, looked up wistfully into his pensive face and kept respectful silence.

"Now, then," said he, rousing from his reverie, "I shall send you, Ellie, to the house. You will find the French lesson I prepared on your table, and you may translate it as neatly as you can." Tom has plenty of freshly-made paper in the drawer."

Eleanor obeyed at once, glancing at Walter as if expecting him to follow; but his father laid a restraining hand on his arm, and Walter remained at his side.

"My son," said Mr. Vernon gravely, "so gravely that Walter felt the tears rising to his eyes—"you are pining for action, you long for the excitement and effort required in the battle of life. See, here in this deserted island is a grand opportunity for heroism that you have quite overlooked. Do not be startled, Walter, when I tell you that I have made a painful discovery today—that you love Eleanor with an affection more fervent than a brother's or a friend's."

"I put it to your own conscience and motherhood—Is it honorable to take advantage of the isolation of her life here, and win her love before she has opportunity to see others and judge for herself? There is no doubt, Philip, from the justice in the trunk, the coat, the hat, the shoes, and Tom's portrait of the boy's sister's face of the family's indignation, that Eleanor is the child of noble and aristocratic parents. You know the exquisite pride of such, for I have often told you of it. Now, then, have you a right to profit by the accidental circumstance of the shipwreck, and take advantage of her gullibility, unsophisticated nature? Here is your task, grander and nobler than any struggle for worldly fame and prosperity—conquer yourself, Walter; be a man thus early in your boyhood."

There was a yearning, pining tenderness in the tone that belied the calm, reasoning words. Walter knew that his father grieved for him, and looking up proudly, although his lip quivered, he said:

"I know what you mean, father, and I will be worthy of your goodness. Ellie shall never hear a word of hint from me to suggest there is anything else in the world besides a brother's friendship."

His father bent down suddenly and left such a kiss on his forehead as in his dreams Walter had received from an unknown angel, mother, and was gone.

Walter continued on so the little wood beyond the cliff, and only himself, and the pale-leaved blossoms that were wet with briny dew knew of the passionate flood of boyish tears that were shed there.

Thenceforward there was a quiet dignity of manliness about Walter's demeanor that puzzled Tom and Eleanor as much as it pleased his father. He did not take so many strolls alone with Ellie, but always managed to find pretext for Tom's company. He no longer used the slightest freedom in word or act, but treated her with as much honorable delicacy as he might have used toward his queen. Her probable rank and superior station were more frequently alluded to, until, pointing with pretty vexation, Eleanor declared that she would throw into the sea the sparkling chain of diamonds whose unknown crest had raised such a formality between them. Tom in his droll way coincided with her.

"I know," said he, "I've often been brought up to think nature made a great difference in folks when she brought 'em into the world. Why, our folk in 'em country thought we were hardly fit for Mr. Lady Somerset to speak to; but the older I grow the more I come to reason that our souls are pretty much equal in the Lord's sight, if so be we all do right. Shiver my timbers if I didn't use to get into a corner when one of my shipmates that went down off here in the 'Petrel' argued with me about it. Ye see, he came from Americk, where, if they behave, all the folks are lords and ladies, and, copying to his account, they live amazingly happy. Well, well, the Lord knows all about it—where's the use of puzzling over what don't concern us?—though sarly, here in this 'ere forr'n place, we don't get any special sign that little Ellie's any better than the rest of us, only for having the angel nature of all womanhood."

"There," said Eleanor, laughing gayly, "see what a philosopher our Tom has become! Look that you take a lesson from him, Sir Walter. I am becoming much aggrieved, you see so formal and polite. You don't trot with me; you don't pl. me. I declare, Walter, you haven't kissed me for these three weeks!"

"As she spoke she laid up her beautiful face, the crimson lips pouting archly.

"Poor Walter colored crimson, stammered incoherently, and then darted away."

Ellie burst into tears, Tom whistled, and Mr. Vernon, closing his book, followed after his son.

CHAPTER VII.

I RECKON I'll find Walter and fix the hag as we agreed," said Tom, looking ruefully at the weeping girl. He had hardly disly heard when Mr. Vernon returned, and began quietly wiping away the tears from the girl's eyes. An earnest conversation ensued, from which they were interrupted by Walter, who came bounding up with a face so ghastly they all sprang up in alarm.

"Quick, father, quick! Come up to Tom. He is hurt, he is dying, I am afraid!"

Mr. Vernon seized a flask of brandy, pressed it carefully through his fingers, and carried after his son, who had flung an arm around Eleanor, and almost carried her in his rapid flight back to Tom.

At the foot of the tall tree to which the flag staff was nailed they found poor Tom. He was lying just as Walter had left him, with a face wearing the awful, unmistakable sign of death. Mr. Vernon shuddered and flung himself frantically beside him, groaning:

"Oh, Tom, Tom, what terrible thing has come upon us? What has happened to you?"

The glaring eyes turned lovingly to the distracted group.

"My hour has come this time. The 'Petrel's' rig wasn't clearest stove up than mine are now. Tom's last voyage is nigh on it ended."

"It can't be, it can't be," shouted Walter fiercely, and passing his arm under the drooping head he poured a little brandy in his hand and wet the clapping, parted lips, and turning impatiently to his father, said almost angrily:

"Why do you look so hopeless? Help me take him up, help me to do what will make him well again!"

"No, no, lad, don't move me, it's no use. Tom tells ye so himself—he's scolded the 'Petrel's' land already, God children, dear children, ye're sorry to lose poor Tom; he thanks you kindly, Mr. Vernon, sir."

"Tom, my best friend, my preserver and savior, say one I hear you," sobbed the strong man, having his gathering force.

"I'm going fast, and I must say quick while I can talk all I want you to do. I've wrote down where my sister lives four ago; you'll see it, and if you ever get away from here I know you'll see here. Tell her I was willing to die, that I allers tried to do the best I could, and I thank the Lord is merciful."

Mr. Vernon could only take the cold hand in his and press it tenderly for a response.

"I know ye'll miss me, but the use of the change will soon come. I'm sorry so much hard work will fall to you without Tom's stout arm to do it, but the Lord's will be done. He knows what's best, and can take care of you."

He paused again to rest, and seemed sinking into a stupor, until Walter tried to move him to a more comfortable position, when he sniled feebly in thanks, opened his eyes, and said with considerable energy:

WOMEN STARING AT WOMEN.

A Man's Comments on This Weakness of the Fair Sex.

Two women pass each other on the street of a provincial town; they are not acquainted, yet it is long odds that one of them turns around to look after the other—very short odds against God doing so, says the Nineteenth Century. It is not the gait or the figure of the stranger that has attracted attention; it is the dress, not the person within it. The gentle anarchists who are busy organizing the debrutalization of man's will, of course, attribute this little failing to the vanity of the feminine mind by reason of man's tyranny in excluding women from boards of directors and other intellectual arenas. It may be conceded that psychology and betterment are more recondit fields than millinery, but this would be a dull world-and far uglier, than it is if every woman had a soul above chiffons. Odds grenadine and tartan! That were a quackemation by no means desirable. No, let all men who have eyes to see withal or hearts to lose set great store by the pains bestowed on pretty dressing, but if one may speak and live the art should be studied with subtler tact than is sometimes seen. It should be better concealed; it is distressing to see a young woman's eyes, wandering over the dress of her with whom she is talking, for if the mind be engaged in talking note of external detail conversation ceases to be intercourse, and becomes the crackling of thoras under the pot.

A loyal Irishman.

A loyal Irishman, who recently died in Wisconsin, set apart $10,000 in his will for the purpose of transporting his own body and those of his brothers buried in this country to Ireland, where they will be interred on the old family estate in the shadow of a grand monument.

Why Marior Wallace Resigned.

J. W. Wallace was mayor of Parnassus, Pa. His official life is now a matter of the past. Religious scruples worked the change.

Wallace believed that what work was done should be attended to on week days. His fellow-townsmen differed from him in views.

An ordinance before the council was written on Sunday. In the mayor's eyes it was a grievous offense. He could not countenance such disrespect of the Sabbath.

And on the next day he resigned.

Alford, Ill., was the first town in the world to illuminate its streets with electricity. The wires were used in position in 1851.

A POSTMASTER'S WIFE

A LEEDS WOMAN WHO ASTONISHED HER FRIENDS AND NEIGHBORS.

Next to Death: Restored So Completely That She Has Been Accepted by a Life Insurance Company as a Good Risk.

From the Journal, Leavelson, Me.

A bright little woman, rosy and fresh from her household duties, dropped from a chair before the writer and talked with enthusiasm, smiling in her snappy, black eyes.

The people in the pretty village of Leeds Centre, Me., have watched with some interest the restoration to complete health of Mrs. W. T. Francis, wife of the postmaster. So general were the comments on her interesting case that the writer who had known Mrs. Francis and learned from her that the statements regarding her troubles and her subsequent extrication therefrom were entirely true. All of her neighbors know what was accomplished by her, and she performed it, but the other members of the family, by her experience, Mrs. Francis has consented to allow her story to appear in print.

"If there is anything in this dread malady," she says, "I can tell you. But in this case I conquer my repugnance and give publicly the same credit to the savior of my life as I would to those who had dragged me from a death beneath the waves. In fact, I have not only recovered my health, but I am, and unreservedly, have sought out sufferers and recommended the remedy to so many friends and acquaintances that already my neighbors joyfully call me 'Pink Pills Francis.' But, really, my recovery is something of a wonder. I know that there are so many testimonials of medicine in the papers nowadays that people do not pay as much heed as formerly, but I do wish folks who are suffering would remember that the way is right from the heart of a woman who feels that she had a new lease of happy life given to her."

"Eleven years ago I was afflicted with nervous prostration. My existence until three years ago was one of dreary misery. Anyone in the village will tell you of my condition. My blood seemed exhausted from my veins and mouth after months I grew weaker. I was able to undertake only the lightest household work, and even that I could perform only by slow and careful movements. During all these sorry months, and again I was under the care of this doctor and that, but their medicines helped me only spasmodically, and then I felt like a patient whose prostration had never been relieved.

"In the night I used to be awakened by the most excruciating pains in my head and side, and was obliged to use powerful analgetics; that the doctor gave me for relief was but of little use. At last, my condition became so grave that I went out only in a sedan chair, and in my mind I was ever my husband's grave, and in my thoughts I was frequently being buried. I was so feeble and my nerves so shattered that I could not do any work, and I was obliged to go and call on my physician, which I did not do until I could no longer do so. I was so weak that I could not go to my usual physical prostration."

"One day I saw an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and I bought a box and tried them. That was two years ago. Now I call myself a well woman, and I wonder!"

"I haven't had one of these extraordinary gains in the heart for a year and a half. Why, even the first box of pills helped me. I can walk miles now, can do my work easily, have gained in weight constantly, and you would scarcely believe it, but a little while ago I was examined for admission to the Maine Central railroad, and I was usually good health and spirits, and we made inquiry as to the cause."

"Do you know," replied he, "I think I've made a discovery, or at least Mrs. Francis has for me. I have been in poor health for a long time with a heart trouble variously complicated. We have been so fully interested in Mrs. Francis' wonderful recovery that I at once determined to give the medicine recommended a thorough test. So, about two months ago, I bought the first box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Only two months, please note, yet already I am so much improved, so much better able to fulfill my duties, so sanguine that I am on the road to recovery, that I feel like a new man."

"I can now walk without the fatigue I once experienced, my heart affection appears to be relieved, and I have joined the Pink Pills' Band in our community."

"Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and vigor to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are for sale by all druggists, or may be had by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y., for 50c per box, or six boxes for $2.50."

Columbia Bicycles

Facts Popularity does not come without cause. Nothing but the standard quality that is invariably maintained in Columbia Bicycles could secure such indorsement as comes unsought to Columbias.

EVERYBODY'S CHOICE When The New York Journal offered the choice of the ten leading makes of bicycles recently to the ten winners of a guessing contest, every one of the ten selected Columbia. And The Journal bought ten Columbias at $100 each.

TIFFANY'S CHOICE When Tiffany & Co., the famous jewelers, desired to make an experiment with elaborate decoration of bicycles, they of course first selected a Columbia—and paid $100 for it. They have decorated other bicycles since, but Columbia was first choice.

When the United States Government recently asked for proposals for furnishing five bicycles, it received bids from other makers of from $50 to $100 each for Columbias, but its experts selected Columbias, all in their opinion Columbias were worth every cent of the price asked.

If you are able to pay $100 for a Bicycle, will you be content with any but a Columbia?

The ladies of the missionary society will give a tea at the Methodist church, this Friday afternoon from five to eight. The bill of fare will consist of bread and butter, salmon loaf, yeast and scalloped potatoes, strawberries, cookies and coffee. All for ten cents. Everybody welcome.

When completed, the Mrs. Smith residence, corner Dunlap and Wing street, will be one of the most attractive and commodious houses in the village. The broad veranda about its front already gives tokens of comfort and indications of the cheerfulness that will exist inside.

Superintendent Clark of the U. S. fish commission met with a peculiar little accident Tuesday evening. In taking his arm suddenly from the window where he had been quietly resting it, his index finger came in contact with a tin match box and the end was just as nearly cut off as could be and yet not be.

Northville's fire alarm bell lately put up by the American Bell Foundry Co. was heard Monday night as far away as Plymouth and Novi. Plymouth people showed their thoughtfulness in an endeavor to telegraph or telephone to see if any hose was needed but were unable to get communication owing to there being no night office here at present. They came up in large numbers however to see the fire and offer assistance if needed.

The Record believes if Northville people could see their way clear to raise some money just now to assist in the rebuilding of the Dubuar factory that Mr. Dubuar could be induced to construct a larger factory and branch out into other industries which would give employment to a still larger number of men than has heretofore been employed. If this could be done it would certainly be a paying investment.

The Epworth League observed the seventh anniversary of its organization last Sunday evening in the Methodist church at which time a very fine program was presented. C. A. Hutton gave a bird's eye view of the general progress of the Epworth League since it was founded; Mr. D. C. Bliss told how to do Mercy and Help work and some of the things that had already been accomplished. The Spiritual Mission of the Epworth League was the subject from which Miss Minnie Beal gave much information, and Miss Anna Blair recited a poem in her pleasing manner. These parts were interspersed with singing by the audience and choir. The local society is doing good work and has a full corps of wide-awake officers.

Miss Boyce will sell you School Hats for 10c.

Mrs. A. H. Dolph, sister of A. K. Dolph and Mrs. J. A. Thomas of this place, lies very low at the home of Dr. Bennett, Detroit, having undergone a dangerous surgical operation Wednesday morning of this week.

The Dubuar factory fire demonstrated the need of about 500 more feet of hose; a hydrant located in the factory yards; that the Globe Co.'s yards should also have one or two new hydrants located back of the main factory a better alarm system; a hydrant attachment so that one hose may be shut off for necessary repairs without shutting off the entire hydrant.

The Record fails to see the economy in the school board's appropriation of money toward the graduation expenses thus compelling the class to charge a ten cent admission to the commencement exercises or go down in their own pocket to meet the expense. We believe the tax payers would just as soon pay ten cents more tax as to pay it in an admission fee. Some of our people object to the charging of an admission but there is certainly no other way out of it for the class.

The names in Cain's memoirs of the "Storming of Vicksburg" which the Detroit Railway have secured for their mid-summer excursion at Honda-vand Park, commencing June 22, open in plain view of the many Detroiters Vicksburg before the war. The picture is taken in its proportions, and is the work of artists in every detail. Porter's muskets, Paragon's guidons, and the Mississippi steamers in miniature, and military are to be seen everywhere. There is a large gathering of slaves on the levee, and they delight in quaint songs and familiar dances. Here are introduced a large number of European and American specialty artists of the highest order. Now assemble the contending armies, and the realistic scenes that follow are marvelously true to life. A union spy swims the river to get "pointers" on the enemy. He is captured and shot. His comrades quickly rescue the body. Hand-to-hand encounters between the opposing forces take place. Infantry and batteries are now hurrying to the scene. The very earth seems to belch forth fire and flame. The deafening sound of cannon, mortars and gunboats as they pour their deadly fusillade into the fated city is fairly appalling. The audience can scarcely resist the temptation to take a hand in the struggle, so intensely are their sympathies enlisted in the cause. The city is finally captured and peace reigns. The Federal of the peculiar and tragic story occupies nearly two hours, then follows one of the most thrilling and brilliant displays of Pain's famous fire works ever seen outside of the exhibitions given by this firm at the world's fair.

If anybody in this town has lovelier strawberries than has Frank Fry we should like them to leave a proof quart at our office.
