NINE GRADUATES

The Class of '96, the Largest One in Years.

THEY RECEIVED THEIR DIPLOMAS LAST NIGHT.

The Exercises Were Very Pleasing —Large Crowd.

The commencement exercises at the opera house last night were very pleasing. The class of '96 is remarkable in several ways. It is not only the largest class for some ten or more years, but also has the distinction of containing more boys than girls, an instance which probably never before occurred. Another thing, the class is brought into eminence by being the first one to ever receive their sheep skins from a lady member of the school board.

The stage was uniquely decorated with the class colors of white and green, the scenery and carpeting being covered with white, while evergreens, flowers and ferns banked the front.

Rev. C. G. Turner offered the invocation and also pronounced the benediction.

With a few appropriate remarks Mrs. Ida M. Joslyn presented the diplomas. The music was by Miss Netta Jacobson, an accomplished pianist of Detroit. The music was not only a novelty but it was extremely enjoyable.

The graduates made a very pleasing appearance and were the recipients of many tokens in the way of bouquets, books, etc.

In their respective order the graduates and their subjects were as follows:

CHARLES H. NORTHROP.

Mr. Northrop's subject was "The Progress of Electricity." In an interesting manner he showed the progress made since 1837 and made some telling points by a comparison of the present with use, made of the wonderful power twenty years ago when there was not even a single incandescent light in the whole world. He prophesied that with the improved X-rays it would yet be possible to at once see both sides of a political plank.—Mr. Northrop also gave the salutary in a very fine manner using well-chosen words exceptionally well delivered.

JESSE W. GREEN.

"Educational Reforms" was Miss Green's subject. She considered first with two natures, the original and the acquired. Beginning with "Rivalry has ever been the past incentive to progress," she traced the progress of educational systems and reforms in a brief way from the very earliest days to the present. Ingergarten, of the 20th century, was a monument to Froebel, the real originator, in the education of children, giving them something star shapes while it instructs.

AMI G. WILSEY.

"American Citizenship" was the subject of Mr. Wilsey's paper. "Whatever we do for our country," he said, "must be done for the people." The moral and intellectual character of the people gives to our institutions their form and character. A man who cannot read is a dangerous member of a community. When the entire mass of our population becomes intellectually educated the most important part of our work is accomplished." The paper, though brief, was a good one.

M. RACHEL LANCASTER.

"Relief Work in Cities" was Miss Lancaster's subject. She took up the charity work in the United States beginning with 1851 when for the first time a special effort was demanded of our charitable people and institutions because of the vast number of unemployed people. She told of the system inaugurated of giving work temporarily to those unfortunate people in many of the large cities and its result. The problem she contended that now confronts us is how to establish a permanent system of relief. She thought manual training in our schools would go a long way towards such an end.

CARL A. YERKES.

Mr. Yerkes' subject was "The Monroe Doctrine," brought into particular prominence during the session of our last congress over the Venezuelan boundary question. In a very concise manner he showed the meaning of the doctrine in its fullest sense and gave data and instances where it had been applied, in every case with success; the first being when the state of Louisiana was ceded to Napoleon by Spain and President Jefferson made a successful protest.

ALBERT R. LONG.

"Manual Training in Public Schools" was Mr. Long's theme. He advocated that education in the United States must be considered first as to the needs of the masses. He contended that to omit manual training from our schools was to wage war against common sense. Less than three per cent of the boys of this country can hope to make a living by professions, therefore the great need of educating the eye and hand as well as the mind. This feature added to our schools will quicken the life of society and go a long way towards the reconciliation of capital and labor.

ANNA M. BLAUM.

"Fact and Talent" was Miss Blaum's subject. She said, "A fact is a thing for which we have evidence; and talent is the thing possessed."

In a very conclusive way of argument and illustrations she showed that fact will accomplish all things. It will outlive our general out-work talent in every case where they come in direct contact with each other. Fact will always secure the place, talent sometimes.

WILLIAM B. BARLEY.

"The Beacon Lights of History" was Mr. Barley's subject. Beginning with Gracian history he followed the lives and acts of great men down to the present century who have aided the civilization of their country, saved it from ruin or increased its power. In closing, he paid a fitting tribute to our own Washington and Lincoln.

FLORENCE CLARKSON.

The subject of Miss Clarkson's essay was "The Spoils System." The system referred to was that in vogue whereby the motto of "To the victor belongs the spoils" was interpreted by the political party in top just after an election. The evils of this system were vividly contrasted with the benefits of the civil service reform idea. "When all offices were included under this system—national, state and municipal—the reform would be complete, and men of character and ability would seek official life as they now do professional."

In her valedictory Miss Clarkson pointed the class to their duty and after paying the respects of the class to their tutors bade a last good night.

FOR SWEET CHARITY.

NORTHVILLE ASSISTS THE CYCLOPE SUFFERERS.

The Total Will Doubtless Reach 200 Dollars.

ANOTHER BARN RAISING.

An Old Fashioned Time at George Clark's.

ON SATURDAY.

Northville people were just a trifle slow in awakening to the needs in the case of the Oakland county cyclone sufferers but when they did awaken they got right out of bed. About three weeks ago the society of King's Daughters telephoned $100 from their treasury and then passed a paper around among some of the business men who contributed in various sums amounting in all to $175 making the total $275 which the society forwarded to G. W. Hinman chairman of the relief committee at Pontiac.

At the union service held Sunday night there was a crowded house, the ladies being a big majority. Before the special collection was taken short, appropriate speeches were made by Revs. Mr. H. Beal and G. C. Turner. F. R. Beal said there was three ways to look at this matter. (1) "We could read about the sufferers and their needs in the papers and smile over it; (2) we could get together and talk about it; and (3) we could go down in our pockets and put up some practical help in the way of money."

A committee of four, W. H. Hutton, F. N. Clark, R. H. Beal and Charles Filkins, was then appointed with W. H. Hutton as treasurer, to receive contributions.

F. R. Beal headed the list with $10 and others subscribed various amounts ranging from 25 cents to $5.00 until the total amount reached $45.00. The committee was continued and since this meeting have received from various people about town, (including $5 from M. D. Gorlow and $5 from H. E. C. Daniels and the $5 from Miss Lettie Johnson) enough to make the total thus subscribed $104.

The ball game Monday afternoon brought out the largest crowd ever seen on the local ball grounds here. It was the "Fats" vs "Leans" so called. The players were "Fats"—C. Filkins, B. Filkins, C. Hutton, T. Murdoch, G. Turner, B. Wheeler, A. McPhail, W. Porter, J. Shearer, Leans—C. Yerkes, F. Matthews, E. Merritt, E. Harmon, C. Downer, S. Knapp, H. Baker, W. Murdoch, W. Hutton.

The game was a most laughable one. At the end of the second inning the score stood 18 to 2 in the lean's favor and then the "points" (sharpened by Misses Clark and Brooks) got in their work among "de-gong" on the bleachers and by successfully rattling somebody the fans crowded up until at the end of the game the score was 21 to 22 in favor of the slim players. The net receipts were just $70 and this amount was forwarded by Treasurer Booth to Mr. Hinman, Pontiac, Tuesday morning.

For the ball game all the business houses and factories closed at 3 o'clock to give employees and proprietors an opportunity to attend the game, and even landlord Shuster of the Parkhouse besides contributing to the fund closed up the hotel bar, an act probably unheard of before in the history of this country.

It is thought that with what the King's Daughters sent, the church collection, the ball game and the subscription now being solicited will raise the total amount to $200.

ANOTHER BUSINESS CHANGE.

The Firm of Hutton & Son Makes a Shift.

The well known grocery firm of L. W. Hutton & Son makes a change this week whereby the junior member William H. purchases his father's interest and becomes sole proprietor. Mr. Hutton junior has been so long in business in Northville that he needs no further introduction at our hands.

The Springwells Times has secured commodious quarters on the ground floor in a central location, and the next thing will be a bulge on the paper.

F. J. Simmons is having an independent sleeping building constructed near his summer cottage—Orion Review.

Simmons must be afraid either of flies, mosquitoes or his wife.

An Ypsilanti night watchman fell down stairs the other night and was severely injured. A night watch should sleep at the bottom of the stairway, not at the top.—Monroe Democrat.

Howell has a ladies club that aims to entertain their husbands and the members study how to succeed in that gigantic task. They say they believe in the "Golden rule," but the husbands don't.

Only seventy-five people turned out to hear Morgan L. Wood at Farmington recently. Some how or other the majority of people do not seem to appreciate a chance to hear a celebrated speaker.

Over 2,000 gallons of milk are shipped daily to Detroit, from Northville. Farmers milk their cows three times a day and the pump once at midnight. Why not establish a pipe line into the city, same as for oil?—Adrian Press.

And have some Adrian milk man tap it to supply his customers? Not much.

Nearly 500 performers will take part in Paul's thrilling military spectacle, "Storming of Vicktburg," performance at the Detroit Railway's Boulevard Park, Detroit, commencing June 22 and continuing every night until July 5, and the big amphitheater will comfortably seat 15,000 persons.

We should like the Adrian Press to do this and England the following, which we skip from Monday's Tribune. While ENAMEL Wilfred Spence of Adrian was preparing to start another circus, the other day, about what the city should and should not do, it is said his husband, the street competitor, was up in front of his house taking a writing napkin on his left cheek sideways!

The Holly bees are declared off. Many of the most liberal subscribers to the cyclone fund are those who before have given for the guarantee fund of the driving club and in the face of the discouraging reports from other good towns where race meetings have run behind it was thought best to postpone it until autumn.

The editor of the Trenton Visitor returned thanks last week for beautiful bouquets. Mrs. Matel L. Ayers is the straight editor, but she was away last week and her husband edited the paper. She can see how things have been going since she left—Monroe Democrat.

And only a week or two ago a representative of a well known Chicago tailoring house was showing us a contract made with the Visitor publisher for a whole suit of clothes, including coat, pants and vest.

It was a very swell affair, 'twas indeed.

The reception tendered to the class of '96 by the juniors from ten to twelve at the close of the commencement exercises at the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Burgess last evening was the finest affair of the kind ever held in Northville. There were fifty invitations issued and just about that many responded.

The house was beautifully decorated with potted flowers, ferns and colored lights. Mrs. Long and Mr. Tinham furnished the evening's music in a delightful manner. Miss Mabel Welch acted as toast-mistress in a very able manner. It was an event that will long be remembered.

Mr. Vernon was the first to touch the beach.

"I welcome you gladly to our retreat, my gallant countryman," he said, waving his hand courteously; "and here I introduce to you its princess."

"As all hats were doffed, and the eyes of the party bent in respectful admiration upon her, Eleanor blushed deeply; then regarding her self-possession she bowed gracefully, and hastening to Walter's side whispered:

"Come, Walter, do come and tell me all about it; the time has seemed so long since you went away."

The affectionate tone—more than that the tenderness with which the small hand was laid upon his arm—brought back the light to Walter's face, and he cast a half-faint look backward where the handsome officer was left to Mr. Vernon's care while he himself was drawn away by the beautiful object of their mutual admiration.

A brief but comprehensive recital of the events of the last ten years was given to the lieutenant by Mr. Vernon, and then he called Eleanor to bring the diamond necklace found in her relatives' trunk.

The young girl brought the trinket, laid it in his hand and looked up anxiously at his face.

The lieutenant started.

"I have seen a face like yours before—where can it have been?"

"I am not given to inquisitiveness myself," said Mr. Vernon, "but my fellow-passengers were far my superiors in rank—they had the private cabin, and I seldom saw them. I never asked either their rank or family. For Eleanor's sake I have always regretted my indifference. I helped some of your company might know the crest."

Lieutenant Ingalls turned the cold clasp to find it, and started.

"Ah!" said he, and paused.

Walter's hand was clenched firm and tight on the arm of the brawny sofa. Mr. Vernon looked anxious and interested, but Eleanor's wild, imploring eyes never left his.

"My name—what is it?" she gasped.

Lieutenant Ingalls hastened to answer in earnest sympathy.

"My dear lady, I cannot tell you, but there is one year at hand who can, for your crest is that of our admiral, the Right Hon. Charles Lord Collingwood, commander of Her Majesty's ships in the Indian and Pacific oceans. His flagship lies but a few leagues beyond the 'Hornet,' and she signified us to lay by and ascertain the meaning of your light the night before 1833. We have orders to report to him with news of our discovery, and you may speedily see him. I must soon return and report to the captain, who will come down to the island himself, I doubt not."

"You will find an abundance of fruit. You may help yourself freely to our supply for the rainy season," said Mr. Vernon, rising to accompany him to the tea-table.

"Your water good? We were running close to find some, or we had never come so far to the eastward."

Neither of the party accepted his invitation to visit the salp. They preferred to remain on the island till their final departure, and passed themselves in packing the few mementoes and relics of their island life ready for transportation to the ship.

In the afternoon the captain's gig made its appearance. The captain, Sir John Wilson, was much interested in the communication his lieutenant brought to him, and the moment he landed, passing Mr. Vernon and his son, advanced to Eleanor, and removing his lace'd hat from his gray head, said respectfully:

"My best greetings and congratulations to you upon this fortunate escape from a lonely island, fairest Lady Eleanor Collingwood."

Eleanor's tears bedewed the out-stretched hand.

"You know me then? And that's my name?"

"Without a doubt, even if your face bore not the youthful likeness of our much-admired Lady Collingwood, the widow of our noble admiral's elder brother. Well do I remember how we all sympathized with her grief when, in addition to the death of her husband, came the mysterious loss of the 'Petrel,' which was bringing home from India the relatives who had charge of her only child. Dear Lady Eleanor, how I rejoice that we shall be the humble instrument of bringing so much happiness to that lovely and estimable lady, the pride and pattern of our court. As for you," he continued, turning somewhat patronizingly to the attentive Vernon, "you will be generously rewarded for your services. You may consider your fortune made, for no office you may ask will be denied you."

"We shall claim none," replied Mr. Vernon quietly, while Walter's proud eyes flashed.

"Lady Eleanor knows whatever assistance we may have rendered has been well repaid by her sweet presence. Her noble relatives will find that, although for ten years debarred from all save our society, she is neither uncultivated in her tastes, unlearned in her mind or ignorant in manners. For ourselves, if such humble persons can interest you, we shall forego our original purpose to reach England speedily, and take passage in the first ship that crosses the ocean that will take us nearest to our goal. We have received all the information grace and refinement. I shall not venture to depict the maternal love awaiting you. But come time presses, and we must reach the ship before nightfall. Without doubt the commodore is already on board the 'Hornet' awaiting our arrival. Say your farewell to your prison joyfully, sweet lady, for freedom and happiness and honor lie before you."

Admiral Lord Collingwood received his visitor with a tenderness that banished at once all her fears of coldness. His regard was nearly as great as her own. Holding her closely in his arms he sobbed:

"My sweet child, my precious one, you know not how joyfully your poor old uncle welcomes your return to life and liberty. Your mother and I thought to pass our dreary lives alone, without a noble companion of our exile is parted from us effectually, until we reach a fairer and brighter shore than that of England."

CHAPTER IX.

LEANOR had dressed Sir John shandy, and with a frightened, judgmental look she sprang to the speaker's side.

"What do you say—what do you mean by friend and benefactor? my treacherous? Do you think I have a heart of stone? Do you think for luxury and pleasure I shall renounce you and Walter? No, ne; if that is the penalty of liberty, let me stay here forever."

Mr. Vernon looked sadly at the kindling eye and flushed cheek.

"My dear child," he said kindly, "I shall never wrong your noble nature by a single such unkind thought. You will never forget us, but time and new associations, more than all your duty to mother, this gentleman has pictured so lovely and beautiful, will make you acquiesce contentedly in a decree long-standing customs have made more binding than the edicts of sovereigns."

Eleanor was looking less gaily at Walter, but he neither spoke nor moved, nor seemed to have heard a word that had been spoken. She went to him and touched his hand timidly.

"Walter," said she, pleadingly, "lady Eleanor!"

The girl stood silent a moment, and then burst into tears.

"I am not lady Eleanor," cried she passionately. "I am your wife, that you loved and carried for once. If I cannot be the wife of him I will fling myself on Tom's grave, and no force shall tear me from it." Oh, I thought I was so happy when I knew she had come at last, but now I am miserable!"

"Tom, dear Tom!" said Walter, torn from his boyish memory by her tears, "let us go to Tom's grave now for the last time."

She obeyed instantly, and unhesitatingly by any of the party, they went down the path Tom's feet had worn so plainly in the ground, and sat down beneath the hibiscus tree. Then Walter spoke.

How clear and strong and hopeful his tones were.

"Ellie," he said, "you know how my father has taught me, what sentiments he has instilled, for you have shared them. You know I must not swerve from the path honor and conscience point out to me; you know I will not though the way is strewed with thorns. You are restored now to the supremest round of noble society, while I, even for your sweet sake, though life holds no prospect so dear as the hope of your love—I will not be lifted up to a place beside you by any one's pity or gratitude or charity—no, nor by sweet love itself. My place is far below; but if I can, by my own exertions, industry, perseverance and genius, mount up to your side, I will do it. Day and night I will strive and pray for it; your dear man, my soul shall keep my soul strong in the struggle; no other can usurp your throne within my heart." Bush, Ellie, do not speak! I ask—I will accept no promise from you; I have no right to do it."

He was fixed upon him in proud affection.

"It is like you, Walter, to talk so. No matter, if you will not hear it. Here at Tom's grave, which I shall never see again, I say to the wind and sea and sky, if your ears are deaf, I know Walter will succeed, and I shall wait for him."

The soft, exulting tone, half shy, half bold, was irresistible. Walter was not so heroic that he could turn away without one grateful kiss to the crooked-smiling lips. This was all that was said—it was a betrothal!

Sir John evidently thought Lady Eleanor Collingwood had talked long enough with an obscure plebeian son, for he came sauntering down the path with a significant cough.

Walter quickly retreated to his father's side, and the gallant old officer, extricating himself to the utmost to entertain her, began a flattering account of her mother's high position, exceeding loveliness and irreproachable character.

"Ah, my dear young lady," said he, "you cannot imagine how all London idolizes, venerates and yet fears Lady Annabel, because her unparalleled goodness is a constant reproach to the folly and indiscretion of ordinary mortals."

She is at once the pet of our royal mistress and the pride of the whole court."

"Ah!" sighed Eleanor, her sparkling eyes weeping over tears, "so superior herself, how will she be able to love a single wildwood's daughter like me?"

Sir John gazed in smiling scrutiny upon the lovely face turned toward him so ingenuously.

"Never fear that you are your mother's own child; it is plain by the fact that this long isolation on a lonely island has not dimmed your beauty, nor lessened your grace, nor impaired your health."

HEALTH IN OLD AGE.

AN OLD WOMAN FINDS THE TRUE SOURCE OF VITALITY.

A Reporter's Interesting Interview With a Lady, 100 Years Old, Who Tells a Marvellous Story.

Easiest way to kill a chicken is to break the egg before it is hatched. Same is true of consumption. Dr. Woot's Norway Pine Syrup is a positive cure for coughs and colds. Nothing will cure consumption. Does it pay to neglect the cold?

Buzzards flying high indicates fair weather, but a solitary buzzard flying alone is a sign of bad weather, but if crows fly in pairs expect Electric Bitters.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited for any sore, but perhaps it is generally needed when the languid exhausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and aperient is less. A prompt use of this medicine has often averred long and perhaps fatal bilious fevers. No medicine will act more surely in countering and freeing the system from the maligial poison. Headache, Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c and $1.00 per bottle at Geo. C. Huston's drug store.

A reception will be tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Herbener at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Swift this evening. No invitations were issued but it is understood that all friends are invited.

Children's day exercises at the various churches here passed off very nicely last Sunday and all those in attendance were exceptionally well pleased. The decorations of flowers were particularly fine.

It is whispered about town that a game of tennis played on the ball grounds by our local lady players against some team from abroad would be highly pleasing to the town's people. If the ladies have any desire about undertaking such an exhibition of skill for anything but amusement for the players, let an admission fee be charged, the proceeds of which will relieve the cyclone sufferers.

The subscription books of the cyclone sufferers relief fund will remain open until Saturday night at the store of the treasurer, W. H. Button.

Any one who would like to donate a few dollars or a few cents can thus have an opportunity even though the committee fails to call personally. There are still a number of people in Northville who have not yet given a single cent for this suffering people who can easily afford to do so, but for some reason or other have thus far failed to respond.

The editor has been taking observations on the difference between a lady and gentleman in mounting a bicycle. Nowdays the lady stops, adjusts her skirt, puts one foot upon a pedal gives a little spring, sets it tightly upon the saddle and away she goes. The man grabs the handle bar, stretches himself out behind the machine, puts one foot upon the stop, hops along on one leg like a lame ostrich, gives a jump, finds "gooplants" in the saddle, kicks about to find the pedals and then goes wobbling along for a roly poly before he gets his center of gravity located.

LIFE INSURANCE SWINDLERS.

A New Brand of Fraud Aborted by Unscrupulous Medical Practitioners. The discovery has just been made by the medical examiners of some of the leading life-insurance companies that an unscrupulous class of practitioners are making a business of "doctoring" diseased applicants for policies so they can deceive the agents of the companies, and thereby swindle those organizations, says the New York World. So extensive has this nefarious practice become that it is proposed to hold a convention of insurance examiners for the purpose of devising plans to combat it. Heart trouble, for instance, is one of the commonest causes of rejection for life insurance. The stethoscope under ordinary conditions shows the condition of the heart, but it has been found possible to "doctor" a man who is suffering from a valvular insufficiency of heart murmur, so that for the time being the heart acts in a perfectly healthy manner and would be passed by the keenest examiners as all right. In like manner it is possible to administer medicaments that will hide all evidence of Bright's disease, provided it is not too far advanced. And the same thing is true of persons suffering from diabetes and many other diseases. The question is a most important one, not only for the companies, but for bond-side policy-holders, and it probably will be made a subject of legislation in every state in the Union.

Michigan W. C. T. U. Convention.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union of Michigan met in annual convention at Marquette with nearly 200 delegates in attendance. The first session was devoted to memorial services. Major Jacobs, Rev. F. J. Muller, and Mrs. Geo. L. Hartford delivered addresses of welcome. Reports of offerings showed a state membership of 2,633 new unions, 48 honorary members, total receipts $3,991, to disbursements $2,801. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. A. S. Benjamin; Vice-president, corresponding secretary, Mrs. Julia Pariali; of Bay City; recording secretary, Mrs. C. H. Johnson, of Flint; treasurer, Mrs. Jeanie Voechtes, of Ann Arbor; delegate to national convention at St. Louis, Mrs. Anna Sheldon, of Saginaw. There was a warm vote over electing a vice-president-at-large instead of allowing the president to name the incumbent, but it was voted down and the president named Mrs. G. C. Faxon for the office. A telegram received from the headquarters of the new National party came near causing trouble when it was moved to adopt a memorial denouncing the old Prohibition party for revising its platform to place a suffrage plank in the platform and to endorse the new party. The matter was finally referred to a committee and a compromiser was later reported and adopted which virtually commits the union to the new party without naming it.

Almost a Catastrophe at Muskegon.

For some time the great stone viaduct which spans the Muskegon river, on Lake street, Muskegon, has been considered unsafe by a great many, and yet the city has allowed it to go un-inspected and un-repaired until it has finally collapsed. A street car and two trailers heavily loaded with people had just crossed on their way to Lake Michigan park when the west end of the bridge went down with a crash. Fortunately no one was hurt. The big main from the pumping works, which runs along the bridge, broke in two, and the city's water supply was cut off. The old abandoned pumping station was started up, and a large force of men went to work repairing the main.

Three Killed in an Explosion.

A terrific explosion at the Michigan salt works, two miles below Marine City, killed three men and injured one other. The dead are: William Nowbray, night foreman; John E. Haley, farmer; Peter Booth, fireman. The injured: Cyrusius O'Neill. A few minutes after the explosion flames broke out, and half an hour later, the structure was in ashes. This was the newest salt works at Marine City, and the loss is about $50,000, with $10,000 insurance.

Constable Killed by a Tramp.

Constable Arthur Sever of Bridgeport was stabbed through the heart by a tramp, whom he was trying to arrest near St. Joseph. The tramp resisted the officer, and a fight ensued, in which the former drew a long knife and plunged it through the officer's heart. Sever died instantly.

Mrs. Frances E. Burns, newly elected great commander of the great hive of Lady Macabees, was given a big reception upon her return to St. Louis.

Wm. H. Lampham, proprietor of a cheap lodging house at Grand Rapids, was shot and killed for eating Geo. T. Sullivan, "a thief and a liar" during a quarrel over a laundry bill.

Bela Hubbard, aged 82, one of the oldest prominent citizens of Detroit, died after an illness of several weeks. He had been identified with Detroit's interest since the early territorial days of Michigan.

PENINSULA MATTERS

RELATED IN A BRIEF, CONCISE MANNER.

State Convention of the Woman's Christian Union at Marquette had a Warm Time. Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch Passes Away at Ann Arbor at the Age of 92 Years.

Ex-Gov. Felch is Dead.

Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch, deceased quietly away at his home at Ann Arbor after a lengthy illness at the age of 92 years.

Alpheus Felch was born in 1804 in Limerick, Me., and came to Michigan in 1833, settling at Monroe. He at once took an active part in the public affairs of the territory. He was chosen a member of the first legislature in 1835, and was re-elected in 1836 and 1837. As a legislator he rendered signal service in laying the foundation for Michigan's Cathedral. In 1833 he served as one of the state bank commissioners. A brief service as auditor-general in 1842 was followed by his appointment as judge of the state supreme court. In 1851 he was elected governor and served in that position until he resigned to enter the U. S. Senate in 1857. His term closed March 3, 1855. He was soon afterwards called upon by the President of the United States to discharge the duties of a most important and delicate position in adjusting Spanish and Mexican land claims in California. His duties completed, he returned to Michigan in 1855 and made his home at Ann Arbor. Being a Democrat he politics, as a descendant of the Republican party in Michigan relegated Mr. Felch to private life. He was nominated for governor, U. S. senator and twice for judge of the supreme court, but was defeated each time. In 1873 he retired from the active practice of law. In 1877 the honorary degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by the University of Michigan, and in 1879 he was appointed Tappan professor of law. Which chair he held for six years. His last speech in public was at the bicentennial of his birth in September 1891, in honor of his 90th birthday. Prominent lawyers were present from all over the state and from other states, and the speech of the occasion was that by Gov. Felch.

Mr. Lecke gave one of his lectures at the hall Tuesday evening and had a full house.

Excursion to Detroit at 10:30 Sunday morning by way of F.W.M. Round trip fare 25cts. Bicycles and baby carriage free.

Nov has done a great Julie for the cyclone sufferers. At the Baptist Church $6.75 was raised which Mr. Klundt doubled making in all $13.50. At the Methodist church $2.50 was raised which Mrs. Wright doubled making $4.00 which Mr. Klundt matched with another $4.00. Barrels and barrels, photo of the decorative scheme. Both of provisions and clothing have also been sent.

Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer Root spent a part of last week with friends in South Lyon.

Oliver Goodell returned home Monday from Saginaw. Mrs. G. remained there on account of the illness of her father, Mr. Grew.

W. D. Nash and wife entertained their son and a friend of Detroit for a day or two last week. They drove out for a day's fishing excursion.

Hudson Vogt, formerly a well known Nov boy, is reported to have been quite seriously hurt by the collapse of an old building where he was working in Detroit.

Mrs. C. M. Wright suffered another the third attack of paralysis Wednesday night and now lies in a very critical condition with but little hope of recovery.

The children's day exercises at both churches were very entertaining and the little folks participating showed that they had been thoroughly and carefully trained. The decorations were beautiful and appropriate. One place that was especially admired at which Mrs. Wright doubled making the Baptist church was a large cross of the little folks, participating showed that they had been thoroughly and carefully trained. The decorations were beautiful and appropriate. One place that was especially admired at which Mrs. Wright doubled making the Baptist church was a large cross of houses were crowded to the doors.

As mentioned last week the WBHM circle met at Mrs. J. L. Becker's on Thursday afternoon. Contributions of clothing were to be brought in for the cyclone sufferers and the response to the call was very liberal. Had the fact that supplies were to be brought been more widely known much more would have been donated, as many of the ladies were not aware of the plan.

As it was a barrel was filled to overflowing with excellent articles of clothing of a quality that would indicate that some self-denied and judicious practicality by the donors for the sake of relieving the necessities of the unfortunate.

Fifty-three good articles were brought from one house and one lady sent five good dresses in perfect condition for use. Only a few articles need slight repairs, which were made by the ladies present. A short program on the mission work among the Indian tribe was given which was very interesting and enlightening especially a short talk on the Chinese in San Francisco by Mrs. D. H. Magill given by request and from personal observation. Seven teen were in attendance and three new members were added to the society.

Five do to buy ladies' Vestments, Miss

Boggs, Northville.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

The partnership of the firm of L. W. Hutton & Son. has, by mutual consent, been dissolved; the undersigned having purchased the entire business; the business in the future will be conducted under the name of W. H. HUTTON, the junior member of the firm. And right here we, of the firm of L. W. Hutton & Son., wish to heartily thank our many friends for the liberal patronage you have given us in the past, and sincerely ask you to continue the pleasant relations in the future with the new firm. We are not strangers to the people of Northville and vicinity, and trust our past manner of conducting business, and our endeavors to please our patrons, and give every one a hundred cents-worth of goods for a dollar, will merit your future favors! We shall continue to keep up our past reputation of keeping

Good Goods at Fair Prices.

We affirm that good goods MAKE business; but poor goods mar business. We also affirm that Short accounts make Long friends. We are always ready to accomodate just as far as possible, but we must insist on prompt payments. W. H. Hutton assumes all the obligations of the old firm, also all outstanding accounts are payable to him—which we now ask all who have accounts with us to call and settle. Prompt pay wins the day! We always keep a Full Line of

CHOICE GROCERIES, PROVISIONS AND NOTIONS.

We have the Sole Agency for some of the Best Teas and Coffees in the Market.

"Gold Lace" Flour, "Argo Mills" Flour, and the "Peerless," sole agency—manfd by L. Gildemeister.

No room for price quotations this week.

Same Old Stand, No. 76 Main Street.

Everybody Welcome at the

L. W. Hutton & Son.

WILLIAM H. HUTTON, NORTHVILLE
