ANOTHER DARING BURGLARY.

Star Clothing House Entered Early Sunday Morning.
Early last Sunday morning the Star clothing house was entered by burglars. The thieves, evidently mistaking the window, first entered Mr. Whipple's harness shop by raising the window with a bar of some kind. Here nothing was taken but a valise and an old blackintosh, both of which were left behind after entering the other store. After forcing the window of the clothing house the burglars proceeded Suburban News.

The Milford Times speaks of the recent storm as a "miniature cyclone." Northville's big flood would doubtless have been called a light rain storm in Milford.
Someone "had it in" for the Elsie Sun man last week and left a dose of green corn and cucumbers on his doorstep. Such anarchism in a free country should not go unpunished.
In speaking about the storm at Plymouth Sunday night when the Baptist church was struck by lightning the Mail says: "Services were being held but no damage was done." No.

Fish Hatchery Contract Awarded to Lanning & Smith.

Judson Lanning obtained the contract from the government for the two fish hatchery buildings, underbidding forty-four competitors. According to the terms of contract he is to receive $8,500 for the entire job and the buildings must be completed within ninety days. The excavating was commenced Thursday morning.
Mr. Lanning was the only bidder from Northville. It is a fortunate thing for the village that Mr. Lanning secured this contract as nearly all expenditures for labor and material will be made here. An outlay of $8,000 or so in a small village means considerable money in circulation.

CUT THIS OUT.

[This column is conducted by the Northville Financial Club.]
Let us strip the matter of all technical and perplexing details. Let us narrow it down to the closest and clearest issue. Let us dismiss all other questions and ask simply: "Will it be an honest thing for Mr. Bryan to pay the notes and bonds of the government in silver?" That is the issue in a nutshell. Mr. Bryan is committed to doing this thing. It is immaterial that the principal of the bonds is now payable; the money that is used to pay the interest will fix the value of the principal. Whoever votes for Mr. Bryan votes beyond question for this policy and he cannot claim to be an honest man unless he holds this to be an honest policy. We do not see how any one can conscientiously hold such a view, and we shall state what it implies in a few simple words.
The silver dollars under free coinage will not be worth so much as the gold dollars. They will not buy so much bread, or fuel, or clothing, or pay so much rent. There is no disagreement about this. Those who want silver coinage say distinctly that they want it because it will make prices higher, that is, because silver dollars when coined freely will not purchase so much as the gold dollars. That is the reason why they want free silver, and that is the reason why their opponents do not want it. If prices were not going to rise under free coinage, no one would care whether he had it or not. So much then is beyond dispute; that with free coinage prices would rise, that is, that the dollars that we should have would not buy so much as those we have now.
The maintenance of the gold standard and means the continued use of silver money as it is present purchasing power. It means, as heretofore, a sound bimetallic currency. Note this fact. All gold standard countries have both gold and silver in circulation; silver standard countries have only silver.
Chas. L. Hutchinson, the well known business man of Chicago, has just returned from a trip around the world, and says concerning free silver: "In India the rupee was once worth 50 cents, but free coinage brought it down to 27 cents, where it now stands. The natives hope, however, that the United States will adopt free coinage, as they can then ship their rupees and raw silver to be coined."

[SUPERINTENDENT'S NEW RESIDENCE, U. S. FISH STATION, NORTHVILLE, MICH.]

The above cut of the new residence for the superintendent of the U. S. fish station at this place is taken from the plans as made by Varney & Co., the Detroit architects, and is very exact. The residence will be what is termed a 2 1/2 story house. The size is 42x44 feet with a veranda along the front and east side. The veranda will be about 2 1/2 feet long and 11 feet wide. The first floor will contain reception rooms, parlor and sitting rooms, kitchen, library, and a private office for the superintendent's use. The second floor will be devoted exclusively to sleeping rooms. The residence is to be heated by furnace and hot air gas. The building is to cost $3,000.
There is not much danger of church services being seriously damaged by Plymouth people.
Springwell people are getting their mittens promptly now and in order to get into the snow, but more glorious processions, they are clamoring just at present for free delivery.
The secretary of the Oakland county agricultural society has announced that no fair will be held there this fall as intended. Lack of finances the cause.—Elsie Sub.
Lack of fences around a track

The yield of grain from this year's crop is disappointingly small in every instance. A wag suggests it to be another result of the demonization of silver. Though that event occurred about twenty-three years ago, after about nineteen years it caused a general fall of prices and now comes eight crops. Verily what we don't know, even some of us very smart ones, would make a much larger book than a compilation of what we do know.

[THE NEW U. S. FISH HATCHERY AT NORTHVILLE, MICH.]

The above cut is the work of the same architects as the residence. The hatchery is to be 40x72 feet, a three story rear and a two story front. It will be located about midway between the two buildings that are now in use there. The first story or basement will be devoted to the hatching business; the boiler rooms, elevator, etc. The second floor, or really the first floor from the front, will contain the reception room, the superintendent's office facing the street, back of which will be the packing room and carpenter's shop. The next floor will contain sleeping rooms, and offices. This building is to cost $6,000.

Frank Davis killed Robert Pickett at Cripple Creek, cutting his head nearly off with a razor, and also cut May Rivers so badly that she will die. He then cut his own throat, but it is not thought the wound is fatal. Pickett was a dance hall proprietor, and Davis the porter of the place. The woman was an inmate of the place, and jealousy caused the tragedy.

Epilepsy 20 Years.

Cured by Dr. Miles' Nerve.

A few years ago, Mr. L. W. Gallaher, was an energetic, successful export manufacturer of lumber products. Attacked with epilepsy, he was obliged to give up his business. The attacks came upon him most inopportunistically. One time falling from a carriage, he struck down stairs, and down to the street. Once he fell down a shaft in the mill, his injuries nearly proving fatal. Mr. Gallaher writes from Milwaukee, Feb. 14, 1924:

There are more men than ever before in the world who are suffering with epilepsy. It is a disease that is not understood by many of the physicians, and it is a disease that is not cured by any of the ordinary remedies. I have tried many of the ordinary remedies, but they have all failed. I have tried Dr. Miles' Nerve, and it has cured me. I have been free from the attacks for over a year. I am now able to do my work as usual. I am now able to do my work as usual. I am now able to do my work as usual.

Dr. Miles' Nerve is a powerful medicine for the cure of epilepsy. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

"THE GLOW OF SUNSET," LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

From the Text: "Abide with us, for it is toward evening." Luke 24:29. Lighting of the Tapers of Life by the Gospel.

Two villagers, having concluded their errand in Jerusalem, have started out at the city gates and are on their way to Emmaus, the place of their residence. They go with a sad heart, Jesus, who had been their admiration and their joy, had been basely massacred and embowed. As with sad face and broken heart they pass on their way, a stranger accosts them. They tell him their anxieties and bitterness of soul. He in turn talks to them, mightily expounding the Scriptures. He throws over them the fascination of intelligent conversation. They forget the time, and notice not the objects they pass, and before they are aware have come up in front of their houses. They pause before the entrance and attempt to persuade the stranger to tarry with them. They press upon him their hospitalities. Night is coming on, and he may meet a prowling wild beast, or be obliged to lie unsheltered from the dew. He cannot go much further now. Why not stop here, and continue their pleasant conversation? They take him by the arm and they insist upon his coming in, addressing him in the words: "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The candles are lighted, the table is spread, pleasant socialities are kindled. They rejoice in the presence of the stranger guest. He asks a blessing upon the bread they eat, and he hands a piece of it to each. Suddenly and with overwhelming power, the thought flashes upon the astonished people—it is the Lord! And as they sit in breathless wonder, looking upon the resurrected body of Jesus, he vanished. The interview ended. He was gone. With many of us it is a bright, sunny day of prosperity. There is not a cloud in the sky, not a leaf rustling in the forest. No child in the air. But we cannot expect all this to last. He is not an intelligent man who expects perpetual daylight of joy. The sun will after awhile near the horizon. The shadows will lengthen. While I speak, many of us stand in the very hour described in the text, "for it is toward evening." The request of the text is appropriate for some before me. For with them it is toward the evening of old age. They have passed the meridian of life. They are sometimes started to think that old they are. They do not, however, like to have others remark upon it. It often suggests their approximation toward venerable appointments. They say, "Why, I'm not so old, after all." They do, indeed, notice that they cannot lift quite so much as once. They cannot read quite so well without spectacles. They cannot so easily recover from a cough or any occasional ailment. They have lost their taste for merriment. They are surprised at the quick passage of the year. They say that it only seems a little while ago that they were boys. They are going a little down hill. There is something in their health, something in their vision, something in their walk, something in their changing associations, something above, something beneath, something within, to remind them that it is toward evening.

The great want of all such is to have Jesus abide with them. It is a dismal thing to be getting old without the rejuvenating influence of religion. When we step on the down grade of life and see that it dips to the verge of the cold river, we want to behold some one near who will help us across it. When the sight loses its power to glance and gather up, we need the faith that can illumine. When we feel the failure of the ear, we need the clear tones of that voice which in olden times broke up the silence of the deaf with cadence of mercy. When the axemen of death hew down whole forests of strength and beauty around us and we are left in solitude, we need the dove of divine mercy to sing in our branches. When the shadows begin to fall and we feel that the day is far spent, we need most of all to supplicate the strong, beneficent Jesus in the prayer of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The request of the text is an appropriate exclamation for all those who are approached in the gloomy hour of temptation. There is nothing easier than to be good-natured when everything pleases, or to be humble when there is nothing to oppose us, or forgiving when we have not been assailed, or honest when we have no inducement to fraud. But you have felt the grapple of some temptation. Your nature at some time quailed and groaned under the infernal force. You felt that the devil was after you. You saw your Christian graces retreating. You feared that you would fall in the awful wrestle with sin and be thrown into the dust. The gloom thickened. The first indications of the night were seen in all the trembling of your soul, in all the internal suggestions of Satan, in all the surging up of tumultuous passions and excitements; you felt with awful emphasis that it was toward evening. In the tempted hour you need to ask Jesus to abide with you. You can beat back the monster that would devour you. You can unhorse the sin that would ride you down. You can sharpen the battle-axe with which you split the head of helmeted abomination. Who helped Paul shake the brazen guard heart of Felix? Who acted like a good sailor when all the crew howled in the Mediterranean shipwreck? Who helped the martyrs to be firm when one word of recantation would have unfettered the wiles of the stake and put out the kindling fire? When the night of the soul came on and all the denizens of darkness came railing upon the winds of perfidion who gave strength to the soul? Who gave calmness to the heart? Who broke the spell of internal enchantment? He who heard the request of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

You have long rejoiced in the care of a mother. You have done everything to make her last days happy. You have run with quick feet to wait upon her every want. Her presence has been a personal blessing in the household. But the fruit-gatherers are flocking wistfully at that tree. Her soul is ripe for heaven. The gates are ready to dash open for her entrance. But your soul stings at the thought of a separation. You cannot bear to think that soon you will be called to take the last look at that face which from the first hour has looked upon you with affection unchangeable. But, on see that life is ebbing and the grave will soon bid thee from your sight. You sit quiet. You feel heavy-hearted. The light is fading from the sky. The air is chill. It is toward evening.

You had a considerable estate and felt independent. In five minutes on one fair balance-sheet you could see just how you stood in the world. But there came complications. Something that you imagined impossible happened. The best friend you had proved traitor to your interests. A sudden crash of national misfortunes prostrated your credit. You may today be going on in business, but you feel anxious about where you are standing, and fear that the next turning of the wheel will bring you prostrate. You foresee what you consider certain defalcation. You think of the anguish of telling your friends you are not worth a dollar. You know not how you will ever bring your children home from school. You wonder how you will stand the sailing of your library or the moving into a plain house. The misfortunes of life have accumulated. You wonder what makes the sky so dark. It is toward evening.

Trouble is an apothecary that mixes a great many draughts, bitter and sour and nauseous, and you must drink some one of them. Trouble puts up a great many packs, and you must carry some one of them. There is no standard to which and well adjusted but some there will strike through it. There is no sound so sweet but the undertaker's grim driver grates through it. In this swift scuffle of the human heart some of the heroic must break. The journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus will soon be ended. Our Bible, our companion-sons, our observation reiterate in tones that we cannot mistake, and ought not to disregard. It is toward evening.

Oh, then, for Jesus to abide with us, He sweetens the cup. He extracts the thorn. He wipes the tear. He hushes the tempest. He soothes the soul that flies to him for shelter. Let the night swoop and the strongly-don cross the sea. Let the thunders roar—soon 't will be well. Christ in the ship to soothe his friends. Christ on the sea to stop its tumult. Christ in the grave to scatter the darkness. Christ in the heavens to lead the way. Blessed all such. His arms will enclose them, his grace comfort them, his light cheer them, his sacrifice free them, his glory enchant them. If earthly estate takes wings, he will be an incorruptible treasure. If friends die, he will be their resurrection. Stagnating with us in the morning of our joy and in the noon-day of our prosperity, he will not forsake us when the tapers are faded and it is toward evening.

This ought not to be a depressing theme. Who wants to live here forever? The world has always treated me well, and every day I feel less and less like scolding and complaining. But yet I would not want to make this my eternal residence. I love to watch the clouds, and bathe my soul in the blue sea of heaven; but I expect when the firmament is rolled away as a scroll to see a new heaven, grander, higher and more glorious. You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the stone-bruise, or festers with the thorn, or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the Jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolhardy. I do not see your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any you have in your wardrobe to keep you warm in that place.

Circumstances do not make so much difference. It may be a bright day when you push off from the planet, or it may be a dark night, and while the owl is hooting from the forest, it may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple-orchards swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autumn, and the forests set on fire by the retreating year; dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand, or you may be in a strange hotel with a servant, faithful to the last. It may be in the rail train, shot off the switch and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment—crash! crash! I know not the time; I know not the mode; but the days of our life are being subtracted away and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours, three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left, five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute. Then only seconds left, four seconds, three seconds, two seconds, one second. (Gosh! The chapter of life ended! The book closed. The pulses at rest! The feet through with the journey. The hands closed from all work. No word on the lips. No breath in the nostrils. Hair combed back to be undisturbed by any human hands. The muscles still. The nerves still. The lungs still. The tongue still. All still. You might put the stethoscope to the breast and hear no sound. You might put a speaking-trumpet to the ear, but you could not wake the deadness. No motion, no throbs, no life. Still, still!

So death comes to the disciple! What if the sun of life is about to set? Jesus is the day-spring from on high, the perpetual morning of every ransomed spirit. What if the darkness comes? Jesus is the light of the world, and of heaven. What, though this earthly house does crumble? Jesus has prepared a house of many mansions. Jesus is the anchor that always holds. Jesus is the light that is never eclipsed. Jesus is the fountain that is never exhausted. Jesus is the evening star, hung up amid the gloom of the gathering night.

You are almost through with the abuse and backbiting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will no longer be misinterpreted for your honor blined. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities of toward evening. The deceptions of earth will soon be lifted. You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb, like Rachel weeping for her children or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the dead-march! Toward evening. Death will come, sweet as slumber, to the eyelids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire-petal, every lake a glassy mirror; the forests transfigured; delicate mists climbing the air. Your friends will announce to your pulses will beat in your veins will ring in your ears will whisper in: "Toward evening!"

The Christian Guardian gives utterance to the following excellent application: "A bank official, speaking of the defunct of one of his clerks, recently made this suggestive remark: 'Had I known he had not a happy home I would not have kept him in so responsible a position.' There is involved in this remark a truth of widest application. The home is the basis of all life. A happy home is essential to safety and success in every department of life."

In this world of evil, where so many unholy influences breathe about us, it is the Christians' mission to be pure; to keep themselves "unstained from the world." Do you ask, how is this possible? Christ can keep you. If God can make a little plant so that no dust can stain its whiteness, can He not by His grace so transform your heart that no sin shall stain its purity? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect.

God's Plants. We are not only the roots of a future beautiful plant. The best man or woman is only a shoot a little way out of the ground. We are God's plants, God's flowers. Be sure that He will help us to unfold into something generally fair, nobly perfect, if not in this life, then in another. If He touches us not to be satisfied till we have finished our work, He will not be satisfied until He has finished His.—James Freeman Clarke.

The Art of Life. Science has already done a vast amount of detached work for the improvement of life. But she is now beginning to go to work constructively on the life of man as a whole. She is beginning to recognize that all the sciences exist for the supreme science, the science of life. Out of this supreme science is to come some day the supreme art, the art of life.—Rev. W. R. Taylor, Presbyterian, Rochester.

Evolution. The time must come when all scientific men will admit that there must be something beyond this present life of ours. The theory of evolution is now being accepted by all leaders of science, and the only interpretation of life as we see it is that there must be another life beyond for which we are being prepared. The doctrine of immortality is now popularly accepted.—Rev. Henry Blanchard, Universalist, Portland, Me.

The Gift of Responsibility. Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work, and forced to do your best, will breed in you temperance and self-control, diligence and strength of will, cheerfulness and content, and a hundred virtues which the idle never know.—Charles Kingsley.

ROQUEFORT CHEESE.

How it is Made—Peculiar Flavor—Dose and Method of Eating.

It is supposed that hundreds of years ago the south of France was disturbed by volcanic eruptions, which split up the ancient granite rocks, causing streams of lava to flow from them, says the Mercury. The new surface consisted of basaltic rocks, which in turn were fissured by eruptions and thrown into a mountain range. The whole of the interior of a mountain was thus formed into caverns and caves, which held forth a host of subterranean springs. It is here that the celebrated Roquefort cheese is made. The village of Roquefort is situated on the mountain Laroque, which is about twenty-five miles in length and nearly 3,000 feet high. It consists chiefly of limestone, covered with sufficient pasture to feed the 300,000 sheep kept for their milk. The caves, being formed by the displacement of rocks, consist of an intricate labyrinth of open spaces and passages, connected with each other and with a subterranean outlet. A cool current of air, therefore, always of the same degree of humidity and temperature, flows in a never interrupted stream through the caves. There is nothing in the milk or in the preparation of the cheese that gives them that peculiar flavor and delicious mellowness for which they are so renowned. They are entirely effected by the method by which they are cured. When the cheeses are ready for treatment they are taken to the caves and after being allowed to cool are carried to the salting room. They are rubbed with salt on one face and then piled on top of each other until the cave is full. After standing for twenty-four hours or so the reverse side is salted and once more they are piled up as before. The cheeses have to be frequently reversed in order that the moisture may be even throughout and to develop the fungus which has previously been sown in the curd. In forty-eight hours the cheeses become viscous and are rubbed with a coarse cloth. In the course of another two days the fungus will appear on the outside in the form of a sticky paste. This is carefully scraped off with knives together with a thin stratum of crust, and set aside for food.

The cheeses are now sorted out, the most solid ones being placed on the floor. In eight days' time they become covered with a yellowish-red mold, together with other minute vegetation, which is removed and given to the pigs. The scrubber is continued until the character of the mold changes, showing that the curd has altered its condition and announcing the completion of the cure. Then they are again carefully scraped and wiped and wrapped in tin foil and are ready for the market. Roquefort cheese has been found for centuries by the Romans and used as a tribute of ungrateful art.

He Played Another Game. As the train sped along over the Texas prairie a gentleman for a St. Louis house came back into the parlor car and asked me to rent for him a pair of pokers. I found two other gentlemen belonging to the "green" and we had the game to ourselves. After a few minutes, however, a young man on at a small station, threw a snuff-bag and got at all dangerous. He watched the table with much interest for two or three games and one of the men finally observed:

"Stranger, do you play this game?" "No, I don't," he drawled. "What do you call it?" "This is called four-handed euchre." "Yes." "Lots of fun in it and you ought to learn to play. It's good to take hayseed out of the hair."

The young man removed his hat and ran his fingers through his hair, as if expecting to comb out a lot of hayseed, and it was three or four minutes before he said:

"So that's four-handed euchre, eh?" "Yes, nice game, isn't it?" "Pears like it, but I've got one to beat it." "Have you? What do you call it?" "I call it a one-handed hold-up and here's looking at you!" He was not only looking at us but his two guns were doing the same thing and the man looked bright enough and carried a smile at the corners of his mouth.

"Yes, your game beats this," said the drummer after a look. "Boys, he wants our boodle." We put down four watches and four wads of greenbacks and the young man reached for them with the remark: "I generally take all the tricks in this game! I got it here and if you want to raise a row go ahead." We didn't. We sat right there until the train started up and left him behind and when the conductor came in and saw the cards on the floor and four men looking tired he exclaimed: "Well, well! But you fellows seem to need something to brace up on."

Miss Jessie Ely entertained about sixteen of her friends Friday evening in the form of a "col-web" party in honor of her friend, Miss Fannie Jenner of Detroit. The evening was very pleasantly passed in games and music and the unangling of the mysterious woven web, which resulted in the awarding of the ladies' prize to Miss Jennie Barley and the gentleman's to Mr. Robt. Cameron while Miss Nellie Joslin received the "booby" prize, after which refreshments were served and all report an enjoyable time.

When will the time come when "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will lose its charm for the rising generation? Judging by its present freshness, its alluring powers will be perennial. There is something in the skillful combination of the pathetic and the humorous that never fails to fascinate, and the story that it tells of the suffering of the poor slaves appeals directly to the finest sensibilities of the human soul. The Ed. F. Davis colossal Uncle Tom's Cabin Company will appear at Northville Aug. 13, Plymouth Aug. 14. One performance at 7:00 p. m. Admission 25c.

Ball games between picked-up nines of the village seem to be all the rage. Last Friday a team consisting largely of boys below the high school defeated the shopmen by a score of 14 to 10. Wednesday, the Globe office played a tie game with the business men. Score 11 all. It was a good game and lots of fun for everyone. Yesterday the Pearls of Plymouth played the Northville High School.

The following letter received from Orionville explains itself. Some people seem to think that money paid out for benevolent purposes is almost wasted. In this case we realize more clearly the great need of the sufferers. At the same time it is pleasant to have a generous effort, such as the people of Northville exerted, appreciated.

Orionville, Mich., August 3rd, '96.
Mrs. Hirsch,
Northville, Mich.

Dear Sister: We wish to thank you and behalf of the cyclone sufferers for the boxes sent us from Northville. We understand you had much to do in preparing them and we wish to express our appreciation of the same. They are about the most goods we have received and we think there is nothing to throw away as you intimated in your note. We will endeavor to do our best in distributing them and know they will be very acceptable to those who have lost all they ever possessed of this world's goods.

We trust that you will be repaid in some way for your kindness. Again thanking you we are Yours Sincerely,
Mrs. and Mrs. M. J. CARLEY.

The attendance at the meeting of the McKinley club Tuesday evening was not as large as could be desired. W. H. Hutton made a speech in his usual happy manner, accepting his election as president. The club adopted the constitution and bylaws as reported by the committee. F. R. Best and J. A. Dubuar were elected as additional vice-presidents. An executive committee was appointed consisting of Wm. Anable, W. G. Lapham, Harrison Yerkes, J. L. Becker and W. J. Lanning. As finance committee, D. C. Bliss, S. E. Carrington, and C. M. Joslin were appointed. Mr. Chadwick proposed that a glee club should be formed to furnish music for the campaign. Mr. Harrison said that a club was already in process of formation and as it consisted largely of republicans it would answer all needs. Mr. Chadwick also suggested that all members of the club should wear McKinley buttons. After voting the constitution the club adjourned for two weeks.

More Novl News

We know that it is "more blessed to give than to receive," but in some cases the blessing does not appear to have much connection with the recipient of the gift. Apparently it would require more than a cyclone to make some people decent. Two of the most estimable ladies in this vicinity have been so deeply interested in the unfortunate people in the tornado swept district north of us that they have almost robbed themselves to help them, and have spared neither time nor labor in their efforts to do all that was possible in the cause. Besides giving very substantial assistance in filling the barrels and boxes sent from Novl, (the writer of this was present when 40 different articles, all excellent, were brought in by them,) they wrote asking for information as to the needs in some judicial cases, that they might make their help as efficient as possible. After receiving a reply they donated and collected enough to fill a box with what they considered would be good enough for themselves in similar circumstances. Imagine their feelings on receiving an impudent letter characterizing the supplies sent as not worth having and capping the climax of ingratitude by the hope that we "would have a cyclone down here sometime so they could send us something decent," or words to that effect. It is quite probable that such people are decidedly in the minority there or anywhere else, and that such an example of meanness and ignorance does not exist in many places on earth. After all, these good women can console themselves with the thought that the blessing is theirs just the same, as it is promised by the One in whose name they have been so ready to "lend hoping for nothing in return." Neither should such assistance prevent any one from trying to do good to those who are deserving and grateful.

The Discovery Saved His Life.
"Mr. G. Caillouette, druggist, Beaverville, Ill., says: 'To Dr. King's New Discovery I owe my life. Was taken with La Grippe, and tried all the physicians for miles about but of no avail, and was given up and told I could not live. Having Dr. King's New Discovery in my store, I sent for a bottle and began its use and from the first dose began to get better and after using three bottles was up and about again. It is worth its weight in gold. I won't keep store or house without it.' Get a free trial at G. C. Hueston's drug store."

The engineer was found in the debris, while his right hand still clapped the throttle. He had been faithful unto death and met it at his post. The fireman had leaped a few seconds before and escaped with a few injuries.

BLOODSHED IN A STRIKE.

The Brown Hoisting Co. Trouble Again Causes Bloodshed.

The strike at the works of the Brown Hoisting Co. at Cleveland has been revived by order of the strikers' executive committee. The men and the settlement effected by the state board of arbitration does not include recognition of authority of labor union committees for the discharge of all non-union men and on these points they will continue the battle. Serious trouble resulted at once as soon as the announcement was made and the strikers attempted to intimidate the non-union men as they were going home from work under police protection. First the rioters began to shout at the non-unionists and then to hurl bricks. Then the scabs drew revolvers and began firing at the crowd. Several shots were fired, but only one took effect. John Prinz, a foundryman, fell to the pavement, shot through the body and was taken to a hospital.

The outbreak resulted in the calling out of two companies of militia, and 50 policemen in addition to the military, were massed in the vicinity of the Brown works. It is thought that a long and bitter struggle will ensue. It is probable that the Central Labor union will make a big sympathetic strike throughout the city. The strikers have organized a committee with the Central Labor Union as president, and the total membership numbers over 20,000 in all branches of trade.

A standing piece of news in connection with the Brown strike, which comes from an apparently reliable source, is to the effect that the strikers are arming themselves and drilling. It is said that 40 of the strikers have organized a company, elected a captain and purchased revolvers, and it was announced that the purpose of the men is to avenge the death of the two men who were shot at different times in conflicts between union and non-union men.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE

It was not the reputation of the Rev. Elias Ormsby that drew so large an attendance at the little church on the next Sabbath. Curiosity led most of those who wore bonnets and crinolines...

Other mamma said much the same, and during the afternoon a procession of "help" might have been seen on the road leading to the cottage...

They were decorous and prudent in Applebloom, and all the forms of civility were gone through with. The new minister's wife was invited out to tea...

When grave for her, no friend had watched beside her death-bed, and she was buried in the death-house...

And the young paragon soothed his weeping wife and bade her have good cheer, for matters would mend, and all would be right again...

Of course the visit ended as they expected; there was but one consummation possible: Applebloom knew, in a day or so, that their pastor was about to leave the place forever.

The winter had set in—so unhealthy, warm and moist, instead of cold and bracing. Rumors of prevailing ill health spread over Applebloom...

One day Walter Redlaw left his home to perform the burial service over the graves of three children of one family...

But she, as she spoke, left her seat, and knelt before him, resting her head upon his breast, as he sat before them...

BLOODSHED IN A STRIKE.

The Brown Hoisting Co. Trouble Again Causes Bloodshed.

The strike at the works of the Brown Hoisting Co. at Cleveland has been renewed by order of the strikers' executive committee. The men find the settlement effected by the state board of arbitration does not include recognition of authority of labor union committees nor the discharge of all non-union men, and on these points they will continue the battle. Serious trouble resulted at once as soon as the announcement was made and the strikers attempted to intimidate the non-union men as they were going home from work, under police protection. First the rioters began to shout at the non-unionists and then to hurl bricks. Then the scabs drove revolvers and began firing at the crowd. Several shots were fired, but only one took effect. John Prinz, a foundryman, fell to the pavement, shot through the body, and was taken to a hospital.

The outbreak resulted in the calling out of two companies of militia, and 80 policemen in addition to the military, were massed in the vicinity of the Brown works. It is thought that a long and bitter struggle will ensue. It is probable that the Central Labor Union will order a big sympathetic strike throughout the city. The number of unions affiliated with the Central Labor Union is over 600 and the total membership numbers over 20,000 in all branches of trade.

A startling piece of news in connection with the Brown strike, which comes from an apparently reliable source is to the effect that the strikers are arming themselves and drilling. It is said that 40 of the strikers have organized a company, elected a captain and purchased revolvers, and it was announced that the purpose of the men is to avenge the death of the two men who were shot at different times in conflicts between union and non-union men.

FREQUENT HEAVY STORMS.

Central States Continue to suffer from the Furious Elements.

Leaving the city in darkness and paralyzing street car traffic and telephone service. The third visitation of the wrath of the elements did much damage about Pittsburg and three persons were killed by lightning, as follows: James Ellis, West Ostron; John Schuler, Homestead, unknown woman, Duquesne. James Foyle's family, consisting of mother and three children, of Duquesne, were shocked by lightning. The storm in and around Duquesne assumed the nature of a cyclone, destroying six residences and two stores besides unroofing others.

34 Houses Wrecked at Steubenville. The storm took the character of a cloud-burst at Steubenville, O. Farmers and fishers became mighty currents with a few minutes and people had to flee from their homes to save their lives, many wading through water which was above their knees before they reached the hills. During the flood on Farmers' run William Bush and wife took refuge in a tree. The water came down the crevices 20 feet high, sweeping below it barns, houses, bridges, trees and outbuildings. The houses that were washed away and completely wrecked were occupied by the families of Mrs. Eldibann, Rula Ritchie, Wm. Risdon, James Burress, Andy Albaugh, Benjamin Whitcraft, Grand Strand, John Harland Henry Ho, Houchman shore. The houses of 25 others were wrecked or damaged by the water. Two hundred people are homeless as a result of the flood. The damage will aggregate $200,000.

REVIEW OF TRADE.

Business conditions have clearly improved, though business has not, in the cotton season and better prospects have since been met with. The cotton market is expected to control foreign exchange by a syndicate, through the use of $20,000,000 for that purpose, but it is not necessary to use the gold and has been some stocks a slight advance. Gold exports have been stopped and foreign trade more promising of an early demand for our products. The prospects for large crops of cotton and corn are still excellent. Some suppose that the exchange syndicate is intended to do more than arrange over a period in which merchants' exports have been high. But exchange in foreign trade is already in the helpful direction. Domestic exports from New York for four weeks have been 1 per cent larger, while imports have been 2 per cent smaller than last year. Wheat is already going out with more freedom than is usual for the season and Atlantic exports have been 1,000,000 bu. for the week, against 9,000,000 bu. for last year, and for four weeks 6,300,000 bu. against 4,400,000 bu. for last year. Western receipts are also remarkable, being in four weeks 13,900,000 bu. against 2,800,000 bu. for last year, and it is held against such a large crop that the scarcity of it to the western farmers and holders.

Something about the Resort Region and Pictures of some Pleasant Places.

TRAVERSE CITY.

Traverse City, situated at the head of Grand Traverse Bay, is not only the commercial center of a great and prosperous lumber, fruit and agricultural region, but, what is more to the purpose of this publication, the place to leave the train for numerous summer resorts, and which are located on the shores of the bay and contiguous rivers and lakes. It is a pushing, go-ahead little city of 500 inhabitants. A very comfortable and comfortable neighborhood for Traverse Bay, Michigan, Edgeood, Nesbit, Fountain Point and the numerous other summer places in this beautiful region, all of which are reached by drive or steamer.

EDGEWOOD.

Post Office, Traverse City.

Edgewood is reached by a three-mile drive from Traverse City, up the west shore of the peninsula. And such a drive! Except, perhaps, the Cliff road at Monterey in California, the Newport Boulevard, and the Riverside drive in New York, there is no successful competitor of the romantic carriage road which winds for miles up the peninsula of Traverse City, Michigan, to Edgewood. The road is a masterpiece of engineering, penetrating a stretch of forest primeval in the singularly rugged and beautiful terrain. Now, a level stretch past cultivated fields, where fruits and flowers attest the care of man, a drive within the artistic lights and shades of second growth, with here and there a glimpse of the beautiful bay and the distant shore, and all the way well kept with easy grades, graceful curves and smooth surfaces.

The comfortable cottages, situated within a stone's throw of the water's edge, are surrounded with a forest of pines, in which the wind sings always in low refrain. Here is the peace and rest of home, here are cool breezes in shady woodland nooks. The pond water flows many a sunny day with its happy crew. Gay riding parties explore the winding woodland roads, or improve the many lovely drives which stretch themselves in all directions. Delicious fruits, for which this tongue of land has long been famous, are abundant.

Day fever vanishes, and its victims find on the shores of Grand Traverse Bay a safe refuge. All the several comfortable houses and cottages have a total capacity of one hundred and fifty persons.

OMENA.

In twenty miles north of, and two hours ride by boat from Traverse City, on the west side of Grand Traverse Bay, is situated a high bluff, with geological and climatic advantages as a summer resort unsurpassed. The air is cool and the soil and refreshing breezes from the bay and lake pure and invigorating. Beautiful Omena is almost surrounded by forests of maple, birch, ash and cedar, which give a peculiar tone to the air. It is said that the fresh air and weakness of fatigue, and all of the ailments which attend the summer months, stimulate and purge the most tired and weary of the people. Omena is one of the most desirable places in the country for persons afflicted with hay fever, the same afflicting immediate relief. The advantages that Omena affords to those who delight in fishing, hunting or boating are equal to any point in Michigan, a long boat about distance from Bass Lake and Marquette's Mill, the paradise of the fisherman, where black bass, pickerel, muskellunge and the smaller and less game fish are always found. Numerous trout streams in the neighborhood afford fine sport with the game, speckled brook trout, while the main bay affords splendid deep water fishing for Mackinac trout. There is no drifting, buffing or blowing around Omena. The green grass and beautiful trees afford an attractive and refreshing view.

Omena Bay is a beautiful picture all the mid-summer, which changes from hour to hour, all the day through, and lovely always, its waters areas clear as crystal, and its clean and pebbly beach is inviting to the children and those who enjoy a cable along the wave-washed shore.

NE-AH-TA-WAN-TA (Placid Waters.)

Post Office, Traverse City.

On a sub-peninsula from Old Mission Peninsula is pretty Ne-ah-ta-wan-ta. The tract extends southward, with the waters of the western arm on the west and Bower's Harbor on the east.

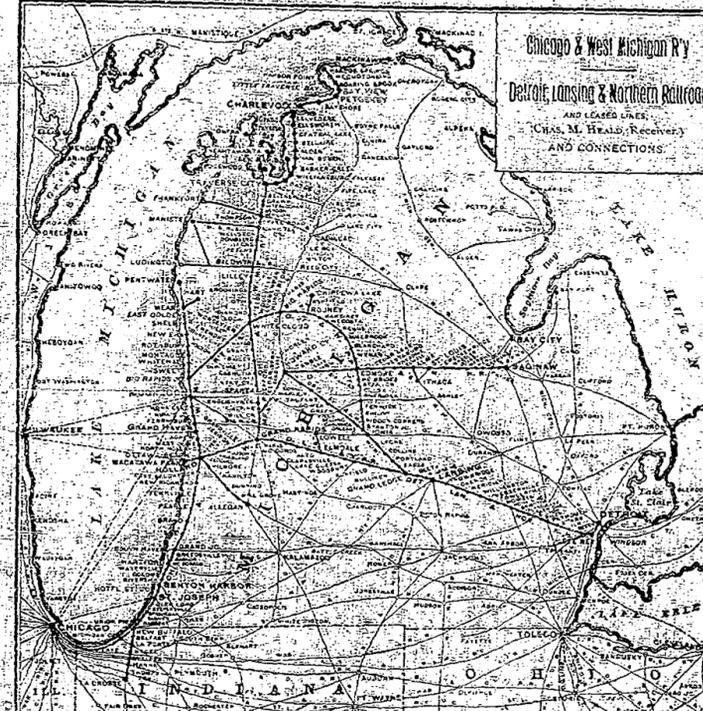

This means a good deal in the summer resort line, for it guarantees pure air, cool nights for sleeping—tempered waters of the harbor for bathing, perfect drainage, safe boating for the transient and inexperienced sailor and rower, etc.

Keep in mind that it is only a ten-mile drive over one of the most beautiful roads in this country from a city (Traverse) of 5,000 inhabitants (with all that goes to make up modern business centers in the way of stores, banks, hotels, physicians, rail connections with the world at large), and that it is and it will at once be appreciated that Placid Waters, one of the greatest of the great Traverse resorts, is bound to be one of the greatest. The surface is high and rolling, nearly all covered with virgin forest trees—heavy growth of maple, birch and other hard woods. Soil is sandy gravelly loam, especially favored with ample springs of pure, soft water.

ELK RAPIDS.

Elk Rapids, like Traverse City, is the growing commercial center of a rich farming and timber region, the products of which have won the admiration of the world. It is on the east side of the east arm of Grand Traverse Bay, where Elk Lake empties into the latter. A thriving town of 2,000 inhabitants, with an enormous blast furnace and the largest wood alcohol works in the world.

About a dozen lakes in this vicinity, and accessible to Elk Rapids, afford unrivaled attractions for the canoeist and fisherman. All have flowing into them streams that abound in trout, and many of them have never been fished.

PETOSKEY.

"THE PEARL OF THE NORTH," as it has been aptly called, derives its name from old Ne-yas, Petoskey, the original owner of the land. He is commonly spoken of as "Chief Petoskey," and many of his descendants still reside in the vicinity. The name, which was Anglicized into Ignatius Petoskey, means "the break of day," when the sun touches the hill tops. It is very appropriate, for since it was first started twenty years ago Petoskey has always been "up and dressed." It is the northern terminus of the C. & W. M. R. Y. and situated on the south shore of Little Traverse Bay, a beautiful sheet of water, bounded on the east by a semi-circle of silvery beach, backed by forest-topped sand dunes and broadening gradually as its shores sweep westward some fifteen miles to the open expanse of Lake Michigan.

From the deck of an approaching steamer the city presents a striking appearance. The green hills, which range from the water's edge to the crests of the encircling hills, two hundred and seventy feet above, gleam and flash through the darkness—a coronet of diamonds on the brow of night—and furnish a beacon for vessels far out upon the lake. By day one sees the main part of the town spread out upon the side of a vast natural amphitheater in such a manner that its broad streets, parks and regular squares can be traced as though it were a map. As the tourist draws nearer the trees tall spires rising above the trees handsome residences occupying every commanding point, and substantial business blocks attesting the thrift and prosperity of the place. The water front, instead of being the unsightly bluish which it is at most cities, is a clean gravelly beach, the favorite resort of tourists waving with eager eyes for the coral and granite castles by the restless waves. Immensely in front is a park, with flowers and fountains. At the left a precipitous limestone cliff overhangs the railroad, the wheels along its base, and at the right, Bear River, harnessed down the narrow gorge it has worn through the hills, turning the wheels of a dozen busy factories and still fretting and murmuring over its work as it tumbles into the blue waters of the bay.

Boulevard streets, flanked by well-kept lawns in front of comfortable and attractive homes, rise from the beach so gradually that the visitor does not realize the elevation until he reaches the semi-circular crest which separates the manufacturing district from the principal business and residence portion of the town. Then, filling his lungs with the pure and bracing air, washed by its sweep across the waters, he turns his delighted eyes upon the beautiful city, the bay far below, its blue expanse flecked by dashes of white, the land-locked harbor on the opposite shore, the far-reaching wooded hills beyond, and out upon the broad bosom of Lake Michigan, where forty miles away, Beaver Islands are dimly seen, floating upon the hazy horizon.

Petoskey summers are among the special attractions of this famous resort. Nearly every evening in July and August upon the broad verandas of the hotels and the porches and piazzas of boarding houses and private residences, hundreds of people sit watching the wide waters; "Juno's" west. Nowhere are such responsive skies. The shifting shades of crimson and orange and blue mount to the very zenith and play across the heavens like a borealis arch. A hundred windows burst into flame as the sun drops from behind a low lying cloud and sinks into the water—a glowing ball of fire. Silhouetted against the setting sun appears a distant sail, and row boats fleck the glowing path of gold that shimmers on the waves. Then the shadows deepen, the colors fade, the stars blossom in the infinite meadows of heaven, and the purple twilight is laid like a benediction upon the bending hills.

Among points of interest to visitors at Petoskey are the Indian scalping ground, where prisoners were tortured to death centuries ago, and Marquette's trail, the path trod by the pious missionary, over two hundred years since on his way to and from L'Arbre Croche. An artesian well of magnetic mineral water has such remarkable medicinal properties that the principal object of many yearly visitors is to drink the water and take the baths in the large mineral bath house. The Western Hay Fever Association of the United States, composed of "exiles" at different resorts, has its headquarters at Petoskey.

Petoskey is deservedly proud of its many excellent hotels, which, together with dozens of boarding houses, cater to all classes, from those of most expensive tastes to the most economical. The city has a complete sewerage system, and pure water is supplied from deep artesian wells by a splendid system of water works. The streets and parks are lighted with arc lights, and the business places and a large proportion of residences with incandescent electric lights. In short, Petoskey has all the up-to-date conveniences, the dummy trains taking the place of street cars.

CHARLEVOIX—"The Beautiful."

Charlevoix, unlike most of the other Michigan resorts, is on Lake Michigan. It is around the bend as you follow northwardly the eastern coast line of Grand Traverse Bay, and it is also around the bend to the south as you follow the southern shore of Little Traverse Bay, starting from Petoskey. The advantage of this choice of location to the summer resident is at once apparent.

First, there is the town of Charlevoix, a prosperous center, with twenty-two hundred permanent residents, mills, factories, banks, stores, city water works and considerable shipping. Its business district is situated on a narrow strip of high bluffs which separate Round Lake from Lake Michigan, and through the center of which flows Pine River, whose impetuous waters of the two Round Lakes—but a short distance from Lake Michigan—is a natural basin of great depth, almost circular in shape and about a half mile in diameter. This latter is separated from Pine Lake by a formation similar to that referred to above, and the waters of these two connected by a similar but shorter channel. The surface of the earth all around these shores is in natural terraces of four levels; that at the water level of Round Lake is taken up with warehouses, mills, wharves, boat houses, steamboat landings, etc. On the three higher levels are built the residences, each place being sufficiently above the next lower one to afford commanding views, and also a wonderfully scenic perspective. Pine Lake, one of the most beautiful lakes in Michigan, lies immediately adjoining Round Lake to the east and its sandy beach, three miles in length, is the eastern boundary of the town. The terraces which rise from this splendid beach, as elsewhere in this vicinity, have been retained and summer residences built thereon, making a beautiful display of architecture and landscape effects. It will be noted that within its entire width of about a mile Charlevoix has the unlimited beach of Lake Michigan as its western line, and three miles of sandy shore of Pine Lake as its eastern, and in between, an almost circular lake, with communication for large vessels from and to all three, and rising from all these natural terraces, each of which is of enough depth for purposes of residence and simple grounds surrounding.

Next, there is the Charlevoix Resort, frequently referred to as the Kalamazoo Resort, because of its being largely patronized and promoted by Kalamazoo people. This occupies a tract south of the river on the terraces overlooking Round and Pine Lakes, and embraces a good hotel and one hundred cottages.

Then there is the Chicago Resort, which is what its name indicates, the summer home of Chicago people. They have a hotel and numerous cottages, and own a considerable tract on the north side of the river, and similarly on the terraces overlooking the two lakes.

The tracks of the "West Michigan" Railway extend along the sandy beach of Pine Lake the entire length, crossing the river by a draw-bridge. The main station is built on the Chicago Resort side of the river, and an additional station on the south side in front of the Kalamazoo Resort.

The latter station is known as Brivedere, and a post office of that name is maintained in the hotel during the summer.

BAY VIEW.

One mile north of Petoskey, and reached therefrom by rail every fifteen minutes, is Bay View, an Assembly and Summer University fame. It rises among the terraced groves at the head of Little Traverse Bay, and is at once one of the most beautiful and interesting summer resorts in all the world.

It was founded in 1887, and in 1890, to date in an elegant and well-built summer city of over four hundred cottages besides hotels, and the seven beautiful halls of the assembly and university. Ample parks and play-grounds have been laid out. All the grounds are supplied with water from the cold springs and lighted at night—in fact everything has been done to make this favored spot an ideal watering place. It claims special advantages from its easy accessibility by rail or water, and its close proximity to Petoskey, as well as the resorts around the bay. Summer trains and boats leave the ground every fifteen minutes, affording many pleasant excursions. The resort is quite cosmopolitan, and although once strongly Methodist, it has become, by a fraternal spirit and management, now almost equally marked in its inter-denominational characteristics—a feature which is very attractive to everybody. Tourists invariably content on the pleasant cottage life, the excellent society, as well as the fine views of the bay and opposite shores, at Bay View.

Harbor Point is a "next-door neighbor" to Harbor Springs—being located on the narrow peninsula which separates the harbor from Little Traverse Bay. It belongs to an association of cottage and lot owners, and the aid rendered by art to the natural advantages of the spot, makes it one of the loveliest bits of ground in the whole region. It is well shaded with forest trees, and has a fine water frontage on both the bay and harbor. The association has no denominational basis, but was formed and is maintained as a purely civil society, with no other object than to beautify the surroundings and make pleasant the summer life of its members. There is a splendid new hotel at Harbor Point.

HARBOR SPRINGS.

Harbor Springs is located on the north side of Little Traverse Bay, or rather in a small land-locked harbor formed by Harbor Point, a narrow peninsula projecting into the bay and enclosing a surface of a mile in length and a half mile in width. The shore is a pebbly beach washed by waters of crystal-like purity, in which small objects are clearly discernible on the bottom at depth ranging from thirty to fifty feet. Along the water's edge large springs gush up streams of water clear as air and only twelve or fifteen degrees above freezing point. Its pure spring water and well-known bracing and exhilarating atmosphere attract visitors from all parts of the country.

WE-QUE-TON-SING.

About a mile east of Harbor Springs, and seven miles from Petoskey is the Presbyterian resort known as We-que-ton-sing, after the Indian name of the harbor, which has been translated as "Harbor-of-rest." Here is indeed a quiet harbor, and the location one from which fine views are to be had of Harbor Springs, Harbor Point, Bay View, Petoskey, the bay and Lake Michigan beyond. It is developing rapidly and each year adds to its already liberal capacity in hotels and cottages and in other facilities which are necessary for the furthering of the plans of the association.

ROARING BROOK.

This, the newest of the summer resorts in the Petoskey region, is next door to We-que-ton-sing, or about five miles from Bay View. Tract contains 135 acres, and is located on water of half a mile.

The "Inn" is located 100 feet above the water, immediately adjoining a wild, romantic forest, commanding a superb view of Little Traverse Bay and its surroundings, an ideal spot for a restful recreation. A mecca for hay fever sufferers. The house is new and elegantly furnished, rooms large and airy, elegant dining hall and parlors, with wide verandas. All points in the vicinity easily reached by rail or water. Conveys to and from the dock and station every few minutes, free to guests.

The outlook from the high ground at Roaring Brook is charming, and from the fact the view is unsurpassed. Beneath and southward, a forest fresh and green, with bubbling springs and mossy brooks, inviting thither the seeker after a cool retreat; a magnificent bay dotted with ferries, sailing craft and floating palaces, and westward little towns, a quiet harbor and a great lake.

THE MINISTER'S WIFE

It was not the reputation of the Rev. Giles Ormsby that drew so large an attendance at the little church on the next Sabbath. Curiosity led most of those who were present to the minister's parsonage. It was gratified to see the old gentleman utter a devout and earnest supplication for the pastor of the congregation, who at that very moment, perhaps, took unto himself the solemn obligation of married life. Might Heaven give him strength and bless him and his young and pious wife, etc. It was a prayer worth listening to, but the ladies of Applebloom heard nothing after the word "wife." They were lost in astonishment and hurried out of church after the benediction with indecent haste to discuss the affair by their own firesides. And on Monday when it was known by all that Miss Betty, the charwoman of the place, was engaged to scrub and scour the parsonage, but an ingrain carpet had been sent down from New York for the parlor floor, and that a tea-set had arrived in a box marked "Miss Betty with care," the certainty of the astonishing fact became established, and Applebloom, Johnnie, and the Rev. Mr. Ormsby, as a desirable life. And, said the plump mamma of the nine sermons Miss Fish, "all men, a minister should blush to earn such a reputation. Nobody would believe the attention he has paid my girls. I couldn't tell which one of them he wanted, he was so particular to all of 'em."

THE TRIUMPH OF THE TEUTON

One may travel far without seeing a more charming stretch of river scenery than can be found along our northern boundary, between Lake Superior and Lake Huron. The picturesque scenery really begins at the rapids of St. Mary's river, which have been called the Soo since the time of the French occupation. Old Fort Brady, with its drill ground facing the river, and some old dilapidated cabins of the half-breeds, and their forsaken burying grounds are the only reminders of the modern, prosperous town of the olden time. When Jesuit priests said mass in the mission chapel, and the lady voyageurs traded on the river. Two or three miles below the Soo the river divides around Sugar Island, one arm making a bend to the east and the other continuing nearly straight down for some ten miles through Hay Lake. The two branches unite at the Neeshib. Up to within a year or two the longer and more crooked channel on the east side had been the only navigable one, but years of dredging and blasting and scraping have opened the more direct course, and now vessels usually pass by the new channel. One old May day a strange incident happened on the Soo. The boat was the "Tam O'Shanter," carrying Dr. J. A. and his two dumping screws down below Little Rapids in the new channel, where some some dredging was to be done. Such scenes were common enough to people on the river, and no one thought of looking twice at the uninvited procession, unless to remark casually that "Tammy" was here in a pretty good time of it. Chased down-stream by the big logs, a black dog in the middle of the summer the Tam O'Shanter was transferred to a dredge at Nine Mile Point, and another tug, the W. H. Maxwell, took her place with No. 4. The new tug did not bring a very agreeable crowd to the river gods on Celina's dredge. The new captain was an old man who insisted his business affairs, and the pilot house as his castle. The engineer was a slow, phlegmatic German, whose king and to the tongue of the river, unpronounceable name, Jacob Zimmler, was a specially changed "fate" "Jakey." This was, firstly, for utilitarian reasons, and secondly, he was the commander of the river for every man's identity in the vagueness of a nickname as soon as possible. There never was any regular signal on the W. H. Maxwell. The old man, as the men called him, German and Dutch, was very much to be feared. The latter's most extended effort at conversation never exceeded this one phrase with which he used to admonish his subordinate: "Say, boy, you've no fire up? Does your fire not burn hot enough?"

THE TRIUMPH OF THE TEUTON

It was a trying time, but they were very brave and faithful. Some of those who had been most cruel to Rosa Redlaw were her patients now, and helpless as infants who saw faded the flickering flame of life within their bosoms. When, save for her, no friend had watched her, the couch of death, she lay in the death-room, pestilence-battered, she sat all night and watched; when her own hands robed the dead infant for its last sleep, and it was known to all what mission she had taken upon herself, wonder filled the village, and in a little while their prayers for Rosa Redlaw and her husband that had the Mohammedan belief been true, they might have had no dread of the "burning path," it must have been paved so thickly. And in this, though that day was slow in coming, the pestilence began to abate, and health came to Applebloom again, with the sharp frost and keen cold air of the Christmas time. On Christmas day joy-bells were rung from the steeples in Applebloom, to tell the people that the road was lifted. But before night sad news ran through the village. Who had been so tender and so faithful, who had passed through those fearful scenes when the pestilence was at its worst, as though she were a charmed life, was smitten, now that she was no longer needed. The shutters of the parsonage were closed, the windows darkened, silence of death reigned throughout its rooms, for the angel of the house lay trembling on the margin of the grave. Another pastor preached this Sabbath in Applebloom, and all knew well why he was there. Walter Redlaw watched beside his darling's bed, and never left it day or night. Penitential fears fell in Applebloom that Sabbath, prayers went up to Heaven for the pastor's fair young wife, and the angels heard them, and heard also those of the young husband, and, through the gates of Heaven, and sang them to beatitude, so at the foot of the Throne, telling how good she was, and how true, and so fit for heaven that it were a mercy to less perfect mortals to let her stay on earth. And the Most High listened. The death angel's wings flung their shadow on the portal of the parsonage, but did not pass it; and, pale and feeble, but with life still strong in her young breast, for she clung to her husband with all a woman's earnestness, and loved earth for his sake, Rosa Redlaw lay at last free from the burning fever, certain to live—the old doctor said, with tears in his gray eyes. But was she sure of recovery? Like white of her pearly skin, of her golden hair, of her bright blue eyes? God alone could tell. But Walter, bending over her, thought of the promise he had made her on the day when she entered on her task of peril, and self-denial, and how she had done how dear she was to him, that no change in his darling's beauty could change his love. And into the darkened room, health came, bringing, balm; and the sun shone in again, and the soft air breathed through the lattice, and the birds sang in their golden cages and the housemaid in her kitchen, where she made dainty messes for the convalescent; and there came a Sabbath at last, when Rosa was well enough to go to church with her husband. Applebloom knew it, and the church was full, and out upon the grass in the

The steam low on his return. Any hitch in the workings of his part of the boat was an annoyance to Jakey, and then the captain was particularly and liked the tug to carry a good head of steam. Jakey climbed down into the engine and fixed the fire, and just as he came up the fireman and captain came back. The old man was feeling pretty steady in his failure, and a boy man, and the man who had fired coming up, had been drinking somewhat. "Jezz-wit's los'gehen," said Jakey to himself in German, then relapsing into English: "Die old man he get mad and die fote is most out." They cast off the lines and backed out of the slip. There was a number of logs passing and the captain ordered to be ahead, and repeated "Slow up, add to put on steam, till poor Jakey was wild. "Py, careful, die captain he you yild man!" he kept muttering to himself, as he sat at the lever, and the signals came pouring in like news on election night. A half-mile down the river, the signal bell again changed. "Full steam, full steam," said Jakey aloud. "Full steam! Bot was a shoke, ve aint full steam!" "Jakey!" yelled the captain, "there comes Morrison's tug for a race! Open her up!" Jakey was beside himself. He crawled out and ran to the pilot house. "Captain, ve to have shteam. Dr. here, Morrison's tug for a race, open her up!" "Mackellin fire up," signaled the captain. "The old man on the W. H. Maxwell had one more more than another in his old age. It was, that his tug should never be passed. Jakey hurried to the fireman. "Fear not, the boiler is hot, the pressure is good, the water is full, the fire is burning, the engine is running, the tug is ready to start." "You no shake now, I want shteam," said Jakey, but the man only laughed. He was drunk enough to be ugly, and angry. "I have a fire up, and I am ready to start." In the meantime the bells came faster and faster to the engine room. "almelshereget," ejaculated Jakey, "ve no hare shteam, und yet the captain he bust!" The fireman was now around on the bow and the captain was swearing at him and telling him to fire up. Finally Jakey stepped again at the pilot house, but a large fireman's cap was put on the captain, but don't matter. I think ve will have peace! Here he marched up to the fireman. His hat was off and his flaxen hair was fluttering in the wind. "Will you make fire?" he demanded. "Hillel You here, Germany?" growled the fireman. "I don't have to work for you." "Oh, you don't! I makes you run!" and Jakey grabbed the rebel by the collar. "Give it to him, Jakey!" yelled the captain. "Give it to him!" But Jakey needed no encouragement. It was a war of conquest, and Marshal Blue's motto since more to battle, and his own blood was up to the neck. The fireman was snatched, and Jakey set upon his antagonist upon the deck. "Give it to him!" yelled the captain. "You shake! You play fool!" yelled Jakey. "You got in laugh away!" Suddenly a thought came to him. He snatched the cap of the fireman, and the fireman, doubled him together and literally poked him down below. It was only the work of a moment to fasten the cover—the revolt was over. Jakey now went back to the fire-hole and stoked up. Then he took his seat in the engine room and opened the lever of a little while the stoppers were being reset, and a steam dropped out of the boiler. The captain was jubilant and kept signalling for more steam. "You have a good fireman, boy, captain," called Jakey as he disappeared down into the fire hole. "A great pulling and snorting, and rolling out big clouds of smoke, the W. H. Maxwell steamed up to No. 4. The engine room and the boiler were coming up out of the main-hole on the upper deck. The captain soon proclaimed the news, and all the dredge units stood around to see the victorious fireman crawl out. Yankee generosity was quick to give Jakey the palm; and henceforth he was treated with respect—the respect of the river, which, in fact, may be said to be always a monarch. The triumph of the Teuton was complete.—Detroit Free Press.

THE TRIUMPH OF THE TEUTON

A different taste in jokes very nearly cost the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Dyches, of Leesburg, Fla., recently. They were their "youngest" experience to the court, as displayed by Mrs. Dyches. The husband and wife were out driving when they encountered a rickety, four-wheeled horse. Mr. Dyches thought it would be a joke to drive over the horse. Dyches did not, and neither did the alligator. As the wheels touched the saurian the animal made a sweep with its tail that wrecked the buggy and deposited the Dyches promptly at the ground. The alligator promptly attacked them and tore off the left arm of Mr. Dyches. The wife rushed to her husband's aid, only to be knocked over by another sweep of the animal's tail. She fell near her mangled husband and with great presence of mind pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired bullet after bullet into the alligator's open mouth. At last a bullet touched a vital spot and the alligator tumbled its jaws were closed on the body of the woman's arm. It was feared at first that the husband might die from loss of blood and shock, but later reports represent the couple as getting on very well. So Near and Yet So Far. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the one and only effective remedy in such cases. It speedily restores the system and effectually restores the organs to a healthy and normal condition. Mrs. Pinkham cheerfully answers all letters from ailing women who require advice, without charge. Thousands of cases like this are recorded. I have taken one-half dozen bottles of E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has relieved me from all pain. I cannot tell you the agony I endured for years; pains in my back (Oh, the backache was dreadful!) and bearing down pains in the abdomen extending down into my limbs; headache and nausea, and very painful menstruations. I had grown very thin, and a "nerve strainer" of my stomach self. Now I am without a single pain and am gaining in flesh rapidly. —MARTHA GRANN, 1031 Dudley St., Cincinnati. Thompson's Eye-Water.
