Miss Agnes Fifield and her school in the Walker district will give a school entertainment at the Vanatta Methodist church next Friday evening. It is certain to be a good one and the people in that locality will do well to patronize it.

The Modoc Medicine Co., after a run of two weeks at St. Albans, have struck the dust of Salem from their feet on Monday morning and took their departure for Elmira about ten miles southwest of here, on the road to Ann Arbor. Our town seems deserted after such an active theatrical season.

"It is no secret that Rev. W. H. Hammaroff, of the Congregational church here, in Indiana this week looking for a lady who will be "presenter of the image." Mr. H. had settled the question in his own mind some months since as to whom the choice should fall upon. It is suggested that he was married in Indiana on Tuesday and that he and his bride are spending a few days among friends near Oberlin, Ohio, and will return here about the middle of next week. His pupil here audit the Peleg church will be filled next Sabbath by Prof. Roger of LaSalle, Mr. Hammaroff since coming here a few months since, has been serving the two churches with entire acceptability and his parishioners without exception trust that his matrimonial venture may conduce to his happiness and usefulness.

A box social for the benefit of the Walled Lake male quartet will be held at the home of M. E. Phelps Thursday evening, Jan. 28. Our male quartet is a new thing and comes high, but we do not purpose being outdone by a small town like Novi.

The rain of last Sunday having melted the snow on the ice, the skating is now excellent on the lake, and large numbers of young people spend their evenings there.

The neighbors and friends of Mr. Horner, who is a great sufferer from varicose veins in his feet, made a "fee" one against people of that village who were formerly their customers. The accounts amount to several thousand dollars and tend to show the cause for the firm's recent embarrassment.

M. V. D. Hosier a well known farmer of this vicinity died very suddenly of heart failure on Friday morning. A young man dipped into some prepared eggplant in a certain Fowlerville store the other day and put a good sized handful into his mouth. The Ann Arbor Courier tells of the advent of the "nose" social that city's social whirl. The young men are to pick out their best girl when the pokes her pretty, little, pink tinted pose through a hole in a sheet which suspended from the ceiling separates the two sexes. So far in Ann Arbor it has proved a failure. The young men claim they have never particularly noticed their best girl's nose but say that if the young ladies will dare their cheek against the hole the man will pick out the correct one everyday.

John Waltz of Waltz station, Monroe county, after a business life of more than a score of years has lately sold his interest in his large store, elevator, etc.

He is to go to his brother and John Ziegler.

Mr. Ziegler has been a partner of Mr.

Waltz for a long time under the firm of Waltz & Ziegler. In their big store they have a post office, the railroad and express office and besides

they have a large elevator a number of charcoal kilns, and do a large business in the way of farm implements. Mr. Ziegler who by the way is brother-in-law of L. A. Bell of Northville, has had charge of the entre business for a number of years. He is also supervisor of his township.

Probably no village in Michigan has had so many novelties seen and now

you don't see newspapers as Carlton,

Monroe county. Still occasionally and sometimes often for the past six years a good looking and newsworthy paper has blossomed forth to the old tune of

"we have come to stay" and before the song was ended the blossom was withered and gone. The latest effort came out last week under the caption of the Times Publishing Co., with C. L. Edwards of the well known and wealthy firms of Edwards & Adams, and S.

L. Wallace as head pusher. With these two gentlemen as a locomotive

There are a great many places in the state putting forward claims for the next encampment of the state troops.

Every week some new place throws

out a beckoning hand saying "come to us."

One of the latest is Northville,

the Switzerland of Wayne county.

They think they could take care of the troops. But after all is said and done

there is no place like home and Grand Rapids City.

To be sure, give it to Grand Rapids

(Grand Rapids) would make a riddle if it just aside did the state fairs. The only real success Grand Rapids ever had was in 1895 when the Northville

band, furnished the state fair music

there and the newspapers did the boycotters. The fair was a success that year but Northville, not Grand Rapids made it so. In 1896 Grand Rapids put up quite a fight that the association was compelled to hire a home band and the fair was, as we predicted, a financial failure. If Gov. Pingree desires to kill the state troops without a war just have the encampment at Grand Rapids.

At the meeting of the superintendents of county hospitals and asylums, held at Elkhorn on Wednesday, insurance was ordered placed on the buildings to the amount of $150,000. Two greenhouses were ordered, to cost $1,100. A new laundry was also voted. Commissioners

Varney, Beck and Wilson were appointed to submit to take steps to grace and beautify the grounds in front of the institutions. -Wayne Review.

A BACK BLOW.

The Weapon Small, but None More Certain or Effective.

A Tale of Three Lions

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

In these times when backs are lame, when almost every one we meet has now and then, or all the time, a backache, such pains—“a wear-back,” a bad back, a back that makes their life a misery to bear, and all they go day by day in pain and suffering. Now, if the case is such, in the words to give this play out back “a blow” that will serve it, and put it in place, a new one equal to any. It’s just like this: hit at the cause; most backaches come from kidney disorders. Reach the kidneys, start their clogged-up fibres in operation; when this is done you can say good-bye to backache.

Here is a case from Battle Creek. Mr. Josiah M. Shoup lives at 51 Broad Street, he was a member of the Battle Creek police force for many years. As a member of the force he served the city well, but the rough weather he was often subjected to laid the foundation of kidney disorder, which has troubled him very much. Here is what he says about it:

“About three years ago, while on the police force, I contracted from exposure a kidney trouble, which has since given me no end of trouble. The pain was right through my kidneys and across the small of my back; if sitting down I would get up, I had to arise very slowly and gently to avoid increasing the pain. I had such throes outwards all the time, and I was steadily getting worse. About two months ago, hearing of Dr. Dean’s Kidney Pills, I got a box. Their action and effect was most complete; they removed the old aching pains for good. I can now get around as quickly as anybody. Dr. Dean’s Kidney Pills are certainly as represented.”

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N.Y., sole agents for the U.S. Remember the name, Dean’s, and take no other.

TRADE IN THE STRAND.
A statistician says 12,000 vehicles, including 3,000 omnibuses, pass through the Strand, London, in the day, and the narrowness of the street causes each of the 62,000 occupants to waste, on the average, three minutes. The total waste of time equals 3,150 hours, the money value of which, at the very moderate rate of one shilling an hour, is $785 per day, or nearly $250,000 per annum.

A Very Popular Calendar.
Few people in these busy days are willing to live without a calendar to mark the passing of time. In this fact, no doubt, accounts for the enormous popularity of the pocket sizes which hold the month of the season. Among them all the one that best suits us is the one issued by N. W. Ayer & Son, the “Keeping Everlastingly At” Newspaper Advertising Agents of Philadelphia. We have not received our copy and are fixed for 1897. It is not difficult to see why this calendar is great a favorite. The figures on it are large enough to be read across a room, and the hand-painted appearance of the cover is unique. It is the only unadorned office or library article in the business office. The way through. The publishers state that the demand for this calendar has always exceeded supply. This let them expect no place upon it in a沼泽地, where it is sent on receipt of which it is sent, postpaid and securely packed, to any address.

spirations running down my nose, and in order to relieve the strain on my attention employed myself watching a beetle which appeared to be attracted by the fire-light, and was sitting before it, thoroughly subduing his antennae against each other.

Suddenly the beetle gave such a jump that he nearly jumped headlong into the fire, and so did we all—give jumps, I mean, and no wonder, for from right under the skirm fence there came the most frightful roar—a roar that literally made the Scotch cart shake and took the breath out of you.

Harry ejaculated and turned rather green; Jim-Jim howled outright, while the poor oxen stood and shivered and lowered piteously.

The night was almost entirely dark now, for the moon had quite set and the clouds had covered up the stars, so that the only light we had was from the fire, which was burning up brightly again now; but, as you know, fire-light is absolutely useless to shoot by; it is so uncertain, and besides it penetrates no constitution, and never neglects an opportunity of falling sick of some mysterious disease. It will get thin upon the slightest provocation, and from mere malicefulness—lie of “poverty,” whereas it is his chief delight to turn round and refuse to pull when ever he finds himself well in the center of a river, or the wagon-wheel center, in a mudhole. There is always something wrong with him.

Presently the oxen, after standing still for a moment, suddenly wended the lion and did what I feared they would do—began to stare; that is to turn and break loose from the treckov to which they were tied, and rush off madly into the wilderness. Lions know of this habit of the part of oxen, which are, I do believe, the most foolish animals under the sun; a sheep being a very Solomon compared with them, and it is by no means uncommon for a lion to get in such a position that a herd to which he became shadowing blood-thirsty. These were his bad points; his good ones were that, like most people of the Zulu blood, he became exceedingly attached to you if he took to you at all; he was a hard-working and intelligent man, and about as dare-devil and plucky a fellow at a pinch as I ever had to do with. He was about five-and-thirty years of age or so, but not a “keshia” or ringed man. I believe he got into trouble in some way in Swaziland, and the authorities of his tribe would not allow him to assume the ring, and that is why he came to work at the gold fields. The other man, or rather lad, Jim-Jim, was a Mapoch (Kafir) or Kukhobose, and even in the light of subsequent events I fear that I cannot speak very well of him. He was an idle and careless young rascal, and only that very morning I had to tell Pharaoh to whip him for letting the oxen strain, which he did with the greatest gusto, although he was, in his own way, very fond of Jim-Jim, and I saw him consulting him afterward with a pinch of snuff from his own ear-box, whilst he explained to him that the next time it came in the way of duty to stop him, he meant to thrust with the other hand, so as to cut the old ox's tail and make a pretty pattern on his back.

“Well, off they went, though Jim-Jim did not at all like leaving the camp at that hour, even though the moonlight was so bright, and in due course returned, safely enough with a great bundle of wood. I laughed at Jim-Jim and asked him if he had seen anything, and he said yes, he had; he had seen two large yellow eyes staring at him from behind a bush, and heard something snore.

“As, however, on further investigation the yellow eyes and the snore appeared to have existed only in Jim-Jim's lively imagination, I was not greatly disturbed by this alarming report, but having seen to making up of the fire, got into the skerm and went quietly to sleep with Harry by my side.

“Some hours afterward I woke up with a start. I don't know what woke me. The moon had gone down, or at least was almost hidden behind the soft horizon of bush, only her red rim being visible. Also a wind had sprung up and was driving long hurrying lines of cloud across the starry sky, and altogether a great change had come over the mood of the night. By the look of the sky, I judged that we must be about two hours from day-break.

“The oxen, which were as usual tied to the disbosom of the Scotch cart, were very restless—they kept sniffing and blowing, and rising up and lying down again, and I at once suspected that they must wind something. Presently I knew what it was; they were winded; for within fifty yards of us a lion roared not very loud, “Pharaoh was sleeping on the other side of the cart, and beneath it I saw him raise his head and listen.

“Lion, Iakobs, he whispered. Lion.

“Jim-Jim also jumped up, and by the faint light I could see that he was in a very great fright indeed.

“Thinking that it was as well to be prepared for emergencies, I told Pharaoh to throw wood upon the fire, and woke up Harry, who I verily believed was capable of sleeping through the crack of doom. He was a little scared at first, but presently the excitement of the position came home to him, and he became quite anxious to see his majesty face to face. I got my rifle handy and gave Harry his—Westley Richard falling block, which is a very useful gun for a youth being light and whiny a good killing rifle, and then we loaded not very loud,

We noticed the article relative to Rev. Mr. Ward and his wood, which appeared in the Record and Free Press a few months ago, in a Texas paper last week.

The Record is in receipt of the Free Press, edited by Chas. B. Bristol of this place. It is an eight page and cover magazine, and containing a very nice lot of interesting reading matter. The journal is well gotten up and all in all is a very creditable edition for a starter.

It was noted in last week's Record that Geo. Crager of Stark had lost $15 while enroute from that place to Northville. We have since learned that after reaching home Mrs. Crager was fortunate enough to find the amount in the clothes basket where it had found a safe repose after dropping out of George's pocket.

The Kellogg block on Main street, including Princess pink, was bid off Saturday for B. C. Northrop by Dr. J. M. Burgess for $2,495. His interest in this property belonged to Mr. Kellogg and the other half to the heirs of his deceased wife. Mr. Northrop was Mr. Kellogg's brother and is one of the three heirs to her portion of the estate.

Perry Shepard of Eagle, a son of Mrs. Edith Shepard of this place, died suddenly of apoplexy at his home in that village Sunday night. Deceased was one of the wealthiest and most highly respected farmers of that section and was well known in Northville. He made a number of trips by bicycle from his home in this village last summer to visit his mother and sister.

The will of Clinton H. Johnson who died December 28 last, bequeathing a $16,000 estate to relatives, was Wednesday filed for probate. The bulk of the farm property is devised to Mrs. Johnson. The testator bequeaths $2,000 to Ethel Taylor Johnson, an adopted daughter, and directs that the widow provide a home for her so long as she may live. The farm property in this township is left to Harley D., the only son of the testator.

There is nothing so very modest about some of this township's poor. An application recently sent in the following order to the supervisor: Oranges, peaches, bush peas, sweet potatoe, crackers, bacon, eggs, coffee, 2 cans milk, 1 pound potatoes, lemons, ham, 2 cans tomatoes, 2 pounds good butter, 2 pounds cheese, cabbage, onions, sugar, breakfast food, oil, 2 cans salmon, 2 pounds beef, salt fish, and white fish. It is needless to add that she only got part of it.

Among the ancient curiosities of Northville is the carriage mount in front of the Presbyterian church. It has been gathered gray headed to their fathers but the decrepit mount still yawns between two cterflies and scares the fool of man or woman profane! It, testily, has its sacred unity, part asunder, and then cometh the tilt, the unguarded word, and the headlong plunge "where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched." How hardly shall they who attempt it be saved.

While skating over the channel of the Yerkes pond Monday Bev. Nevison broke through the ice and would have been drowned had not Walter Evans and Frankie Clark gone to his rescue with "shinney" sticks, finally succeeding in shoving the nearly exhausted lad to more comfortable quarters upon the ice. Young Evans, who was the leader of the rescue party, is a press-reader at the Record Printery and whether feeding a job press, attending school or hauling out drowning skaters always has his thinking cap with him and it fits on a level head.

Albert Lyke was up before Justice Webster Saturday charged by Ezra McIntyre with assault. The little fracas occurred while a number of the toys were skating on the ice the previous Thursday night on the Yerkes pond. It appeared that Lyke interfered in a jangle which young McIntyre and "Jimmy" Crager were having. McIntyre alleged that Lyke struck him at that time but the jury thought differently and quickly brought in a verdict of not guilty. P. E. White appeared for the defendant and the boy's father and the justice did the questioning for the people.

This office has been equipped with a set of "The Columbian Historical Novels" by John R. Musick, published by the Funk & Wagnalls Co. of New York. The work comprises an elaborate history of the United States, with the romance interwoven, rendering it both instructive and entertaining. There are 12 volumes, each of which treats of a distinct period in our country's history. The work is a master-piece of the press and should be placed in the library of every student of American history. Mr. F. P. Quigley controls the sale for this city and is meeting with marked success.

Chas. G. Harrington received the sad news this week of the death of his brother in law, Jacob Coltron of Portland, Oregon, who died January 10. Henry Britton had a narrow escape from fatal injuries while falling a tree last week in the Sessions' woods, north of town. It was a crooked old tree and when partially down took an unexpected course and in trying to avoid it Mr. Britton tripped and the tree fell across his legs with considerable force pinning him to the ground. By much effort he succeeded in twisting the tree to one side with a cant hook sufficiently to enable him to extract himself from his perilous position. He was severely bruised about the legs and face and though able to ride home he had to be carried into the house, since which time he has been slowly recovering.

The state legislature has commenced to grind with more than its accustomed vigor. A bill has been noticed to give farmers one cent per pound bounty on beet sugar; another to give the county supervisors more money, to add to their mileage allowance for attendance at supervisors' meetings an allowance of 53 per day for time taken in reaching the sessions; another bill to amend the highway law so that instead of having from 15 to 20 pathmasters in a township the township will be divided into three highway districts, each in charge of one pathmaster who after having worked out his own road time, shall be entitled to $1 per day for actual work.

To Come: A COOL INDOOR DAY. Take Laxative when Quinine Fatuhs. An Adventure in the Pyramids of Egypt.

Adventure with a Bearded Tiger.

From Bengal comes an amazing although exciting tale of two young army officers who tried to capture a tiger. Having gorged itself once a day, the animal was astute when these two men caught sight of it. They might have shot it, but it occurred to them that there would be as much honor and a lot of money in taking it alive. So they made holes in two long ropes, and after some maneuvering from a rock above, managed to lasso the neck and one leg of the tiger. The beast, of course awoke, and for a time regarded the ropes indifferently; but when he attempted to walk away, and found himself restrained, his rage knew no bounds. He gave two or three great jumps, and the ropes snapped like strings, and then he started for his would-be captors, and would have caught them but not become entangled in the ropes. While he was jumping around they poured bullets into him, and finally hit a vital spot. So they got him after all, but not in the way they intended.

A TALE OF A CIRCUS.

THE show was over. The last stragglers had passed through the canvas portals of the main tent, and the multiplicity of diversified sounds had given way to the silence of night, broken by an occasional cry from the menagerie tent close by. The empty benches staled at the vacant ring, the scattered props and a strange commingling of ropes and poles. The odor of sawdust and tanbark, so dear to the circus man, soared upward to where a single drop-light cast a dim light on the deserted interior, and the circus slept. A few short hours before, the scene had been one of glittering grandeur, pomp and pageantry. The flashing of lights, the grotesqueries of the clowns, the commands of the ringmaster, the blaring of the band, the dazzling beauty of the star equestrienne, the bewildering agility of the acrobats, and the astounding feats of the performing animals had blended in harmonious union with the plaudits of the assembled multitude. But now the color had faded, the walls of canvas which had been dazing in their whiteness were gray in the shadowy half-light, and the unchanged precincts had descended to the commonplace. It was just at that moment that some wee imp of Pandora's loosing grasp into the queer life-head of Taro, the mamba. Taro was only a plain brown monkey of doubtful ancestry and unknown history. One of a consignment which had been the desire of the circus in days gone by, he was the sole remaining survivor. All his companions had succumbed to the climatic influences which are so fatal to the monkey tribe, and Taro was alone. Taro was the very beau ideal of a mischievous monkey his propensities being entirely to the direction of gratifying his innate and overwhelming curiosity. His accomplishments were many, and Taro was always sure of generous applause from the children whenever he made his appearance in the ring. But the first of captivity had entered his soul, and although he was not caged, the little steel chain which held him when not performing, and the small, sharp biting ship which he had so often felt when in the ring, were strong reminders of his impotency in combating the will of his master! So, when the wandering imp of mischief found his way into Taro's brain, he found plenty of good material for a frolic. The cages in the menagerie tent were arranged in circular fashion, and to the wheel of one of these Taro was chained. He had chattered his usual remonstrance, which was marked more by fluency of expression than by any beneficial result, for the keeper had simply cursed him for "a limb of the devil" and gone to rest. Perhaps the luridly of Taro's remarks may have been the Ganges equivalent for profanity, but whether it was or not, Taro was soon bundled in his heap of straw, and gibbering himself to sleep. It is not recorded to any work on natural history that monkeys are the possessors of strange foods. The late Frank Buckland, the naturalist, maintained that all flesh was edible. He sought to give proof of this statement by tasting the meat of all animals, reptiles and birds which he encountered in his career. He found the flesh of the rat snake delicate and succulent. That of the blacksnake was not so good. Lizards were exceptionable, while panther chops were not equal to those of pork, which they somewhat resemble. The finest eating was furnished by elephants, baked in a hole in the ground; according to the mode in vogue in Africa. In New Zealand, where grasshoppers are more than abundant, they are strong reminders of his impotency in combating the will of his master! strawberries as food.

In an address on "Horticulture and Health," before the American Association for the Advancement of Science, Prof. W. R. Lassenby discussed the nutritive value of various fruits, and showed that an average man who should undertake to live on strawberries alone would have to consume eighty pounds of them in a day in order to obtain a sufficient quantity of one of the most important elements of food, protein. But while he was getting the proper amount of protein from the strawberries, they would give him seven times too much of another necessary compound, namely carbohydrates. Forty-four pounds of tomatoes a day would supply nearly the right quantity and proportion of protein, carbohydrate and fat, the three most essential constituents of food. The chief value of fruit consists in its acids, which are important to health.

sciences, or other causes for insomnia, but, as that is it may, Taro's efforts at rectitude, which is the companion of slumber, were unavailing. Something glittering a few feet away caught his eye, and in his madly enthusiastic endeavors to elongate himself over the space beyond which his chain kept him from attaining, his belt of feather, to which the chain was attached, broke in two, and Taro the nimble was free. It was almost too good to be true; but when Taro actually realized that he was free he broke out into a shrill chattering, which was unmistakably a pean of joy at liberation. Soon he had resolved himself into a committee of investigation, and as the case was clear, he soon commenced his tour of examination. Having explored the interior of the tent, Taro's next thought was of the exterior, but, having ventured under the tap and found the outside world dark, dismal and unprofitable, he was glad enough to creep back. Just at that moment the night man entered the tent. His quick eye soon discovered the broken waist belt, which minutely told the story of Taro's liberation, and a second glance showed him the small form of the runaway perched on top of the snake cage. Nimbly Taro eluded the hand outstretched to grasp him. Desperately he chattered at the frantic endeavors of the keeper to capture him. But his chatter of derision was soon changed to a shriek of pain. Set into the top of the snake cage was a ventilator about a foot in diameter, and covered with a coarse meshed wire grating, which prevented an apidian exodus. Through one of these meshes Taro had intruded his tail, and one of the scaly reptiles that had slowly wound his sinuous way to the top of the cage in a languidly persistent manner, mistaking it for some new species of tree limb, had wrapped a fold or two around it, and it was this attack upon his flank that had caused Taro's anguish. Escape was vain, and Taro was a prisoner beyond release. It is said that people who are near death are witnesses of a panorama of events in their lives which passes rapidly before them. Perhaps Taro had some such premonition, for there was a thoughtful expression on his almost human countenance. Perhaps he thought of a far off jungle, where he had swung in the trees and scattered the hours away. Perhaps he thought of some soft-voiced member of the fair sex whose smiles had once been his. Perhaps recollection carried him back to the delicious evening when he had escorted his fair mounta to the aboriginal ball, and discussed cecumians and the Darwinian theory, as they swayed by their tails from the branches of Banyan tree close by his home. Perhaps he thought cruel things of his keeper, who stood, couched with laughter. Whatever his thoughts were, they were no longer. The snake having a splendid leverage, the grating could not resist the strain any longer, and Taro was pulled through the opening. A few moments later he was a shapeless mass in the relentless folds of a boa constrictor. A few hours later, and the snake's reptilian countenance seemed to wear a smile. A twinkle of contentment seemed present in his bead eyes as he lay stretched out in full length. Half way down his scaly body was a pronounced enlargement, and something in its obtrusive roundness seemed to say "Hic Jacet Taro." Taro was so. Taro's chain knew him no more, for his bones had been consummated.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johns were greatly surprised on Monday evening by about fifty five of their married friends who came to celebrate the 20th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Johns' marriage. When the guests departed they left behind them as a token of their respect and well wishes, a silver tea set of five pieces. It is needless to say the affair was a social success, although the bad condition of the roads prevented many who were invited from attending.

There was a good attendance at the West Novi Debating club Saturday night, but everybody had to go home in the rain which commenced just late enough in the evening not to keep them at home. Some very pleasing features of the entertainment were the recitations by Miss Carrie Wolfe, who responded to an enthusiastic encore, a recitation by Miss Bertha Bishop, and an extremely fine vocal duet by Misses Nabel and Jessie Vowles. The discussion resulted in a decision for the affirmative. The program for tomorrow evening, Jan. 19, is as follows:

All did justice to the feast. The occasion was in honor of Mrs. W. T. Daines' birthday. An unusual pleasure time was enjoyed.

A Farmington Methodist church mouse that crept among the organ on a recent Sunday evening affected the lady organist so that she was unable to use the pedals during the rendering of the hexology.
