COUNCIL MEET

An Interesting Meeting Was Held Monday Night.

VOTED TO SETTLE MR. HAKE'S DAMAGE CLAIM OF $25.00.

Contemplated Revision of the Fire Limit Ordinance.

A Committee of Investigation Appointed to the Cemetery-Vault Fund.

The council meeting Monday night was at least interesting if not exciting as it is where the council can get called a very talkative body for it sometimes takes several reminders from the president like "speak up gentlemen and sit there like wooden men" to get enough votes to second a motion. On one occasion Monday night the president declared a question unanimously carried, adding "there was always a good vote."

The first committee to report was the sidewalk committee on the case of Mr. Hake who was injured by the flying up of a loose plank in a sidewalk on Rogers street last summer. Mr. Hake had made a verbal request to some of the councilmen that the village settle with him for $25. Alderman Lanning said the committee had consulted no legal authority and while they were of unanimous opinion that legally Mr. Hake had no claim against the village, they thought him such as his claim was very reasonable one and as the case seemed a worthy one they would recommend that the village pay him $25.

The president said that he too had informed the committee that they had to appoint a committee to investigate the case and take some kind of action on it. He believed that if the claim was not a legal one, however worthy it might be, it would establish a bad precedent to pay it. Alderman Bovee said he agreed with the president. He thought the council could not be too careful in such matters or the village would have hundreds of claims against it. Alderman Phillips said that while he believed the village not liable in this case yet Mr. Hake was severely hurt; he had been sick and certainly ought to have something. He had telegraphed up three weeks ago.

The president said that he too had received injuries on slippery walks in the village last winter causing him more than $1,000 damage and from which he never expected to recover. "Give me a thousand dollars," he added. "We all feel very kindly toward Mr. Hakes" said the president, "but this is a question of right for you to consider as officers of the village."

A motion to accept the committee's report was carried as well as another motion to pay Mr. Hakes $25.

W. G. Lapham appeared before the council and said he would like to see the fire ordinances modified somewhat. He would like to see it so a man could build a one story brick building within the fire limits if he so desired—or at least so that he could build a wood shed without being obliged to build it two stories high. Mr. Merritt he said was there also for the same purpose. Alderman Bovee said he had always contended that the ordinance was unjust and he would move that a committee be appointed to revise it. None of the aldermen were in favor of abolishing the ordinance, but there seemed to be a sentiment in favor of making a slight revision. Some of the council thought one story fire proof buildings should be allowed while others thought they should stick to two stories except in the case of wood and out houses.

Alderman Bovee asked the members what they thought about getting through an ordinance whereby the village should own and control all walks in the village after their being first built. He thought this would tend to keep all walks in better shape and render them less unsafe. Alderman Phillips said he agreed with Mr. Bovee that this was the proper thing to do, but Alderman Lanning thought it would be a failure.

In reply to a question as to what had become of the receipts from the use of the city vault in Oakwood cemetery the clerk stated that during the last three years out $1,88 had been turned into the treasury but that previous to 1884 there had been received an average of about $12 per year. He thought the vault had been used more than once in three years. Alderman Phillips thought there must have been more than $1,13 to turn over in 3 years. An investigating committee was finally appointed to look the matter up.

REV. CHARLES TURNER

HE DIED AT HOLLY EARLY THIS DAY MORNING

Was Formerly Pastor of the Northville Methodist Church.

WAYNE CO. TEACHERS' MEETING

The Third One to Be Held at Bellville, Feb. 13.

The people of this place were greatly shocked Tuesday to learn the sad news of the death of Rev. Charles Turner of Holly. His serious illness had been reported in this paper from time to time but only last Saturday he was reported to be improving. After two years of labor here he was transferred to the Holy charge by the last conference. He was a man of splendid physique, the very picture of health, but it was festined that he should be the first pastor to be taken from the Holly charge by death.

Mr. Turner was but a little past 47. He was a graduate of both Oberlin and Albion colleges and had been in the conference since 1881. In 1889 he was stationed at Sioux City, whence a most memorable experience in his life ensued. He was the associate of the immortal Haddington, the prohibition martyr, when for weeks, after the prohibitory enactment, the watchword of the infuriated whisky element was "Death to Haddington and Turner!" For three weeks young Daniel did not attend Rev. Turners church Sunday evenings, expecting that he would be shot down in the pulpit. He was with Haddington on the night of his assassination and was only saved from death by a seeming intercession of Providence.

In 1889 he was invited to marriage with Miss Lydia Williams of Jackson who will be remembered as one of the very brightest and most popular women that ever graced Northville's society. The whole village will mourn with her in her great affliction.

The general services were conducted in the Holly Methodist church yesterday the deceased's brother-in-law, Rev. Isaac Williams of Negauke, officiating. The Epworth League of this place and many other friends of the family sent large boxes of flowers and Rev. Mr. Ward, W. H. Hutton and some others attended the funeral. The burial was at Jackson.

STRATEGIC CONGRESSMAN

How General Spalding Got a Worthy Pension Bill Through:

Following from Tuesday's morning Free Press refers to Congressman Spalding of this district:

"No sir, I can't do it," said Speaker Reed to Gen. Spalding of Michigan.

I would like to go along with you, but you know, how many hundred pension bills are on the calendar, and if I recognize you I will not be in a position to deny any other member."

"Mr. Reed, I don't ask you to recognize me," replied Spalding, "All I ask of you is to say the gentleman from Michigan when I tell Mr. Speaker,

"Well, all right," said the czar, "I can't deny you," and that was how Spalding got the pension bill for Anna Maria Neimboer through the house.

Constituent Payne, of New York, for the ways and means committee,

acting leader for the republican side, protested when Spalding arose, but Reed said, "the gentleman from Michigan," and Spalding stung until his bill went through by unanimous consensus. Payne not daring to continue his objection to the extent of defeating the bill. The history of the Meinboer case, which is very meritorious, has already been printed.

A Nut to Crack.

At the late annual dinner of the Boston Press Club, F. H. Cushman, city editor of the Record, submitted the following happy combination of conundrum and answer: "What is the difference between us and our esteemed contemporaries? We know news when we see it, and they seize news when they know it." The newspaper man who fails to appreciate this sound-natured thrust, had better lay aside his paste brush and give his scissors a rest.

TO THE COLDWATER HOME

The 4 Stevens Children, Plymouth Sent There This Week.

A sad case before the Probate Judge at Detroit this week was that of the four Stevens children of Plymouth who appeared upon application of the father, Thomas Stevens, to be sent to the Coldwater home. The father claims the mother had repeatedly deserted the home and children without cause, and the mother, who was also present, claimed the husband had cruelly driven her from home. The judge was inclined to believe the father's story and granted his petition. The youngest child was two years old and the others but six. Supervisor Morton took the bright little ones to the home Tuesday.

WAYNE CO. TEACHERS' MEETING

The ladies of the Bellville Baptist church will entertain the teachers, a banquet in the town hall at noon.

The Record extends its congratulations to the Mifflin Times upon its 5th birthday. The Times is one of the few really good country newspapers.

The Milan Leader did not show red good enterprise last week by quoting the thermometer at only 14 below zero. It was really 18 in the two-county town and a progressive newspaper made itself have found an indicator that registered 22 at least.

Actually it was so cold Monday that W. H. Seger's cat jumped into the oven warm after he had started the fire.—Brighton Argus.

The only thing remarkable about the above is that Seger has a cat that can start a fire. Seger has a bonanza these winter mornings.

The Plymouth Standard, Ber. Reed proprietor, received a severe scorching Friday night of last week. The fire caught from the stove pipe where it passed through the partition. The loss was something over $100. The laundry has since been remodeled and equipped with steam heat.

Sports from Bay City and Detroit ran special trains to Holly Saturday and held a big rooster fight. Thousands of dollars changed hands in a short time. That everyone might keep cool during the exciting moments the light was held in one of the city ice houses. This matc proving so successful Holly people will now be making a bid for the next Corber-Fitz mill.

If anyone thinks that the life of a Probate Judge is nothing but sunshine with roses scattered by the wayside, they are sadly mistaken. Occasionally cases come before Judge Patterson which are fought as hard as any Circuit Court case and governs many months before a settlement is effected.

The will of Ferdinand Williams was brought before Judge Patterson last Saturday, and the case was put over for two weeks. Ferdinand Williams was a very wealthy, eccentric old farmer, who lived at Waterford. The will was executed thirty-three years ago and involves $125,000 and we understand that this was willed to his son, with whom the old gentleman made his home. Mrs. Jas. McKeand of Pontiac, once a resident of Holly, a daughter, and E. W. Fielden a grandchild, of Detroit, are the contestants.

Three prominent attorneys have been engaged in the case, and the battle promises to be a hard fought one, and it is dollars to buttons that when the final settlement comes, the lawyers will have more than any one of the heirs.—Holly Advertiser.

The total railway mileage in the United States on June 30, 1895, was 38,657.47 miles, an increase of 1,015.92 miles, or 3.4 per cent in one year. The increase in 1891 was 2,017.46 miles, or 2.7 per cent, which was less than for any preceding year during the period for which reports have been made to the computation. The territory and station in which the increase in mileage exceeds 100 miles is Arizona, 247.41 miles; Illinois, 188.76 miles; Pennsylvania, 157.99 miles; Maine, 132.66 miles; Texas, 110.41 miles; and Montana, 95.79 miles. The aggregate length of all tracks in the United States on June 30, 1895, was 236,942.6 miles. Included in this total track mileage were 16,639.26 miles of second track, 975.25 miles of third track, 733.12 miles of fourth track, and 43,588.46 miles of yard-tracks and sidings.

The United States consul at Demarara calls attention to various interesting points in connection with the butter trade of British Guiana. Less than 10,000 pounds is produced in the colony. For the fiscal year 1895-'96 the imports of butter were 503,311 pounds, valued at $103,981.98; from Great Britain, 257,876 pounds, valued at $50,647.54; France, 276,375 pounds, valued at $47,378.85; United States, 24,326 pounds, valued at $2,932.53. Nearly all this comes in the ice vessels, and is not especially prepared for this market. The above may be roughly divided into two classes—table and cooking-butter. The first class is put up in one to two-pounds tins, hermetically sealed, and retails at 40 to 50 cents per pounds; the second class is put up in barrels or firkins, and retails at about 30 cents a pound. The first grades about the same as dairy firkins, and is quoted in New York at about 17 cents; the second class, about the same as bakers' tubs, is quoted in New York at 11 cents. Butter for exportation to the tropics requires, of course, to be more heavily salted than for use in the temperate zone.

It is said that Queen Victoria, a year or two ago, gave orders that the dolls which she had played with when a child should be publicly exhibited and photographed. The kind queen never had a kinder thought than this, which impelled her in her old age to bring out these treasures of her childhood, to give pleasure to her little child-subjects. Many of the dolls are dressed in the costumes worn by English sailors and soldiers, and apart from their association with their owner, are interesting illustrations of history. In a small museum in the close of Salisbury Cathedral is a doll which Marie Antoinette dressed for her little girl while she was in prison. The custodian takes out of a drawer and reverently holds this relic of the unfortunate queen, and removing the topknot shows the gown of rose-colored brocade and a court-train and bodice of the same, daintily and carefully made.

It was the last proof of her love that the mother gave to her child. It was given to the museum by the present Duchess of Portland. In the English Department of the British Museum there is a sarcophagus of a little royal princess who died three years before Christ. ## The Proposed Treaty.

With

Great Britain

The American people are familiar with the fact that there is now before the United States, for ratification, a treaty of peace with England. Few, however, have read the articles of the proposed treaty. In England and other countries this treaty is being widely discussed. Why should not Americans, who are supposed to govern themselves, read and discuss the matter and then write to their senators at Washington, telling them what they think about it? For that reason, we publish the entire proposition. It is as follows:

The United States of America and her majesty, the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, being desirous of consolidating the relations of amity which so happily exist between them, and of concluding by ing parties, and one, to act as umpire, by the four thus nominated, and to be chosen within three months after the date of their nomination. In case they shall fail to choose an umpire within the limit of time above mentioned, the umpire shall be appointed by agreement between the nominating bodies designated in Article III, acting in the manner therein provided. In case they fail to agree upon an umpire within three months of the date of an application made to them in that behalf by the high contracting parties or either of them, the umpire shall be selected in the manner provided for in Article X.

The person so selected shall be the president of the tribunal, and the award of him under this treaty, either for all cases to arise thereunder or for any particular specified case already arisen, Article XI.

Territorial claims in this treaty shall include all claims to territory and all other claims involving questions of servitudes, rights of navigation and of access, fisheries and all rights and interests necessary to the control and enjoyment of the territory claimed by either of the high contracting parties.

Article XII.

If in any case the nominating bodies designated in articles three and five shall fail to agree upon an umpire in accordance with the provisions of said articles, the umpire shall be appointed by his majesty the King of Sweden and Denmark.

Article XIII.

The time and place of meeting of an arbitral tribunal and all arrangements for hearing and all questions of procedure shall be decided by the tribunal staff. Each arbitral tribunal shall keep a correct record of its proceders, and may appoint and employ all necessary officers and agents. The decision of the tribunal shall, if possible, be made within three months from the close of the arguments on both sides.

It shall be made in writing and dated and shall be signed by the arbitrators who may assent to it. The decision shall be in duplicate, one copy whereof shall be delivered to each of the high contracting parties through their respective agents.

Article XIV.

This treaty shall remain in force for five years from the date at which it shall come into operation, and further until the expiration of twelve months after either of the high contracting parties shall have given notice to the other party to terminate the same.

Article XV.

The agent treaty shall be duly ratified by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consult of the Senate thereof, and by his

British Majesty; and the mutual exchange of ratifications shall take place at Washington or at London within six months of the date hereof, or earlier if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed this treaty and have hereunto affixed their seals.

Article XII.

Each government shall pay its own agent and provide for the proper remunerations of the counsel employed by it and of the arbitrators appointed by it and for the expense of preparing and submitting the case to the arbitral tribunal. All other expenses connected

THE BLUES.

A Graphic Description of the Dreadful Feeling.

What Is Meant by This Form of Acute Misery—Where Doctors

Maké Mistakes.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached, and back also has slept poorly.

been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart has beat very fast; then that bearing-down feeling.

Her doctor says, "cheer up, you have dyspepsia; you'll be all right soon."

But she doesn't get "all right." She grows worse day by day, till all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She has lost faith in him; hope vanishes; then comes the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES. Her doctor, if he knew, should have told her and cured her, but he did not, and she was allowed to suffer. By chance she came across one of Mrs. Pinkham's books, and in it she found her very symptoms described and an explanation of what they meant. Then she wrote to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., for advice, finding that she was telling her troubles to a woman. Speedy relief followed, and vigorous health returned.

Lyla E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound instantly asserts its curative powers in all those peculiar ailments of women. It has been the standby of intelligent American women for twenty years, and the story recited above is the true experience of hundreds of women, whose letters of gratitude are to be found on file in Mrs. Pinkham's library.

A Tale of Three Lions

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

CHAPTER III.—CONTINUED.

"She will be back again presently," said I, "look out, but for heaven's sake don't fire unless I tell you to."

"Hardly were the words out of my mouth, when back she came, and again passed the ox without striking him.

"What on earth is she doing?" whispered Harry.

"Playing with it as a cat does a mouse, I suppose. She will kill it presently."

"As I spied the lioness once more flushed out of the bush, and this time sprang right over the doomed ox, it was an exciting sight to see her clear in the bright moonlight, as though it were a trick she had been taught."

"I believe that she has escaped from a circus," whispered Harry. "It's jolly to see her jump."

"I said nothing, but I thought to myself that if it was Master Harry did not appreciate the performance, and small blame to him. At any rate, his teeth were chattered again."

Then came a longish pause, and I began to think that she must have gone away, when suddenly she appeared again, and with one mighty bound landed right on to the ox, and struck a bright blow with her paw.

"Down it went, and lay on the ground. She put down her wicked-looking head with a fierce growl of contention. When she lifted her paw again, and stood facing us, I whispered, "Now's our time, face, when I do."

I got on her as well as I could, but Harry, instead of waiting for me as I told him, fired first I did, and that of course hurried me. When the smoke cleared, however, I was delighted to see that the lioness was rolling about on the ground behind the body of the ox, which covered her in such a fashion, however, that we could not shoot again to make an end of her.

"She's done for; she's dead!" yelled Pharaoh, in exultation, and at that very moment the lions, with a sort of convulsive rush, half rolled, half sprung, into the pitch of thick bush to the right. I lived after her as she went, but so far as I could see without result; indeed the probability is, that I missed her clean. At any rate she got to the bush in safety, and once there, began to make such a diabolical noise as I never heard before. She would whine and shriek, then burst out into perfect volcya of rearing that shook the whole place.

"'Wah,' I said, 'we must just let her roar, to go into that bush after her at night would be madness.'

"At that moment, to my astonishment and alarm, there came an answering roar from that direction of the riverbank; then another from behind the swell of bush. Explicitly, there were more lions about. The wounded lioness redoubled her efforts with the object, I suppose, of summoning the others to her assistance. At any rate they came, and quickly too, for within five minutes, peeping through the bushes of our sister fence, we saw a magnificent lion bounding along toward us, through the tall tammaru grass, that in the moonlight, was now very like ripening corn. On he came in great leaps, and a glorious sight it was to see him. When within fifty yards or so, he stood still in an open space and roared, and the lioness roared to, and then there came a third roar, and another great black-maned lion stalked majestically up, and joined number two, and really I began to doubt whether Jim-Jim must have undergone.

"Now, Harry," I whispered, "whatever you do, don't fire, it's too risky. If they let us be, let them be."

"Well, the pair of them marched off to the bush, where the wounded lioness was now roaring double tides, and the whole three of them began to snarl and grumble away together there. Presently, however, the lioness ceased roaring, and the two lions came out again, the black-maned one first to prospect, I suppose—and walked to where the carcass of the ox lay, and sniffed at it.

"Oh, what a shot!" whispered Harry, who was trembling with excitement.

"Yes," I said; "but don't fire, they might all of them come for us."

"Harry said nothing, but whether it was from the natural willfulness of youth, or because he was thrown off his balance by excitement, or from sheer recklessness, I am sure I can not tell you, never having been able to get a satisfactory explanation of it; but, at any rate the fact remains, he, without word or warning, entirely disregarding my exhortations, lifted up his Westley-Richards, and fired at the black-maned lion, and, what is more, hit it slightly on the flank.

"Next second there was a most awful roar from the injured brute. He glared around him, and roared with pain, for he was badly stung, and therefore I could make up my mind what to do the great black-maned brute, evidently ignorant of the cause of his pain, sprang right at the throat of his companion, to whom he evidently attributed his misfortune. It was a curious sight to see the evident astonishment of the other lion at this most unprovoked assault. Over he rolled with an angry roar, and on to him sprang the black-maned demon, and commenced to worry him. This finally awoke the yellow-maned lion to a sense of the situation, and I am bound to say that he rose to the occasion in a most effective manner. Somehow or other he got to his feet, and, roaring and snarling frightfully, closed with his mighty toe. And then ensued a scene that absolutely baffle description. You know what a shocking thing it is to see two large dogs fighting with abandonment. Well, a whole hundred of dogs could not have looked half as terrible as those two great brutes as they rolled and roared and rent in their rage. It was an awful and a wonderful thing to see the great cats tearing at each other with all the fierce energy of their savage strength, and making the reverse, for I made four thousand pounds out of it, and saw one of the most extraordinary sights a hunter ever clapped his eyes on."

"Yes, I dare say, but then remember I got my living for many years out of hunting. Besides, half the charm of the thing lay in the dangers and disasters, though they were terrible enough at the time. Another thing is they were not all disastrous. Sometimes, if you like, I will tell you a story of one which was very much the reverse, for I made four thousand pounds out of it, and saw one of the most extraordinary sights a hunter ever clapped his eyes on."

"For some minutes it was impossible to say which was getting the best of it, but at last I saw that the black-maned lion, though he was slightly the bigger, was failing. I am inclined to think that the wound in his flank crippled him. Anyway he began to get the worst of it which served him right as he was the aggressor. Still I could not help feeling sorry for him, for he had fought a gallant fight when his antagonist, finally, got him by the throat, and struggle and fight as he would, began to shake the life out of him. Over and over they rolled together, an awe-inspiring spectacle, one the yellow boy would not loose his hold, and at length poor black-maned gave faint; his breath came in great snorts and seemed to rattle in his nostrils, then he opened his huge mouth, gave the ghost of a roar, quivered, and was dead.

"When he was quite sure that the victory was his own, the yellow-maned lion loosened his grip, walked at his fallen foe. Then he inflicted the dead lion's eye and next with his fore feet resting on the carcass, set up his own chant of victory that went rolling and pealing down the dark ways of the night in all the gathered majesty of sound. And at this point I interfered, taking a careful sight at the center of his body, in order to give the largest possible margin for error, I fired and sent a 370 express bullet right through him, and down he dropped dead upon his mighty foe.

"At that, fairly satisfied with our performances, we slept peacefully till dawn, leaving Pharaoh to keep watch in case any more lions should take it into their heads to come our way."

"When the sun was fairly up we arose, and very cautiously proceeded—at least Pharaoh and I did, for I would not allow Harry to come—so we could see anything of the wounded lioness. She had ceased roaring immediately on the arrival of the two lions, and had not made a sound since, from which we concluded that she was probably dead. I was armed with my express, while Pharaoh, in whose hands a rifle was indeed a dangerous weapon to his companions—had an ax. On our way we stopped to look at the two dead lions. They were magnificent animals, both of them, but their pelt were entirely spattered by the terrible mauling they had given to each other, which was a sad pity.

In another minute we were following the blood-spoor of the wounded lioness into that bush, where she had taken refuge. This, I need hardly say, we did with the utmost caution; indeed for one did not at all like the job, and was only consoled by the reflection that it was necessary and that the bitch was not this. Well, we stood there, keeping as far from the trees as possible and poking and peering about, but no lioness could we see.

"She must have gone away somewhere to die," Pharaoh, I said in Zulu.

"Yes, indeed," he answered, "she has certainly gone away."

Hardly were the words out of his mouth when I heard a most awful roar, and looking around saw the lioness emerge from the very center of a bush just behind Pharaoh in which she had been curled up. Up she went on to her hind legs, and as she did so I saw that one of her fore paws was broken near the shoulder, for it hung limply down. Up she went towering right over Pharaoh's head, as she did so hitting her uninjured paw to strike him down. And then, before I could get my rifle ready or do anything to avert the coming catastrophe, the Zulu did a very brave and clever thing. Realizing his own imminent danger, he bounded to one side, and then, swinging the heavy ax round his head, brought it right down onto her back, severing the vertebrae and killing her instantaneously. It was wonderful to see her collapse all in a heap like an empty sack.

"My word, Pharaoh," I said, "that was well done, and none too soon."

"Yes," he answered, "it was a good stroke, Inkoos. Jim-Jim will sleep better now."

"Then, calling Harry to us, we examined the lioness. She was old, if one might judge from her worn teeth, and not very large, but thickly made, and must have possessed extraordinary vitality to have lived so long, shot as she was; for, in addition to her broken shoulder, my express bullet had blown a great hole in her that one might have put one's fist into.

"Well, this is the story of the death of poor Jim-Jim and how we avenged it, and it is rather interesting in its way, because of the fight between the two lions, of which I never saw the like in all my experience, and I know something of lions and their ways."

"And how did you get back to Mr. Trickey's Rest?" I asked hunter Quatermain when he had finished his yarn.

"Ah, we had a nice job with that," he answered. "The second ox died and so did another, and we had to get on as best we could with the three remaining ones harnessed unicorn fashion, evidently ignorant of the cause of his pain, sprang right at the throat of his companion, to whom he evidently attributed his misfortune. It was a curious sight to see the evident astonishment of the other lion at this most unprovoked assault. The Methodists, ladies' social at the home of Hiram Denton Monday night was like the Baptists' social of the previous week at Mr. Larkins' another "showy" success. A dozen young men from the village assisted by two or three of Plymouth's talents, furnished the evening's entertainment by doing their celebrated "Comanche Indian" act and war dance. It's quite a trick to do this act perfectly, for besides the blood-thirsty yelling that must be continued for two hours, it is necessary to break at least six window lights, smash several cups and plates, break a bedstead and write a certain amount of obscene literature on the walls. The young men were equal to the occasion however. The receipts were $10.60.

Old Bell Farnbaugh proves to be one of the star players of Dunlap street this winter. Bell was formerly owned by Rev. L. G. Clark and used as a road and broad mare by him for a number of years. She has a right to be as good as she is, being sired by Royal Bear-bought 1501, the sire of Silver Thread 2:54, St. Elmo 2:16; the great heat winner, and a number of others in 2:30 and better; also the dam of Cantab 2:14. Bell's first dam is by Vernon Hero the sire of Gen. Knox, the sire of the dam of Wilkie Knox 2:16; and a number of other good ones. Bell Farnbaugh is now owned by Ed. Starkweather who converted her to the pace and could in three weeks time show a full mile in 2:40 flat. She undoubtedly would have been "one of the real good ones" if trained when young. Mr. Starkweather has a number of promising young colts from this mare by such sires as Goldenebow 2:27, Barlow Wilkes 2:32 and Expert Prince 2:13.

At the Methodist church Sunday evening Rev. W. M. Ward at the request of the YMCA preached in behalf of the young men of Northville. His text was "Run and speak to this young man." His plea for them and in the interests of the association were eloquently brought out and impressed the hearers with the importance of the work now being done by the association. He made a special plea for assistance and co-operation in all the YMCA work.

The town Sunday school association suffered Wednesday evening was a decided success and as a result the association is all up to date again. The program was a very pleasing one. The selections by the Plymouth mandolin club were especially good and nearly every number was heartily cheered. The recitation by little Miss Zelida Briggs and Master Edgar Abbott of Plymouth were excellent and they won well merited applause. The character singing by Messrs. R. H. and M. A. Porter and Mesdames Bennett and Carlson was one of the best numbers on the program. In addition to the above Messes. Blatt, Wall, Husen and Peckham each gave a recitation. Mrs. Pelton and Mr. R. H. Porter sang a solo. Mr. J. Henry Smith gave an organ voluntary. Misses Hutton, Clark, Van Zile and Carlson a quartet all of which was rendered to the pleasure of the large audience. Gross receipts $20.50.

PENINSULA MATTERS

ELATED IN A BRIEF, CONCISE MANNER.

Pv. Pingree Signs the Pardons of Four of the Famous Molitor Murderers—Double Fatality at a Bay City Fire—Kalamazoo High School Burned.

Molitor Murderers Pardon at Last. Gov. Pingree has pardoned August Farkman, Carl Weegeler, August Grossman and Henry Jacobs, convicted four years ago of murdering Albert Molitor at Rogers City, Aug. 22, 1876.

Gov. Pingree, accompanied by Lars Commissione French and Rep. Chas. Petrowski, of Wayne, went to Jackson from Lansing and were met here by ex-Congressman O'Donnell. The party immediately repaired to the state prison where the governor and O'Donnell were seated for three-quarters of an hour in Warden Chamberlain's office. At the conclusion of the interview Henry Jacobs, August Grossman, Carl Weegeler and August Farkman, four of the murderers, were brought in and interviewed separately by the governor. When this had been completed Gov. Pingree took from his inside pocket the pardons for the four men, affixed his signature and handed them to Warden Chamberlain. The men were again brought to the warden's office and told they were free men. "I seldom have men appear more pleased over any good fortune than were they. In broken language, but that which came from the heart, the convicts thanked the governor and warden, and promised to return at once to their families and live honorable and upright lives, as in fact it is claimed, they had done for many years previous to their conviction. The board of pardons had recommended the pardon of these four men, using their action largely upon the second confession of William Reiske in which he exonerated the four men from participation in the crime, saying that they were not present at the time of the killing. Reiske's admission of a part in the shooting makes it certain that he will end his days in prison. He had nothing to gain by using this second confession which had, therefore, been given much consideration.

Bold Day Robbers at Detroit.

A few minutes after 6 p.m., while the shoe store of David McAllister, 233 Michigan avenue, Detroit, contained several customers, two men, rushed in with drawn revolvers, threw Mr. McAllister upon a settee and one of the fellows held him while the other stepped over to the cashier's desk, coaxed Miss McAllister with a revolver, opened the money drawer and took out about $30 in bills. The robbers then raced out of the store and disappeared across the street. The two clerks and six or eight employees had stood rooted to the floor during the shooting, screaming as soon as the thievish crew left. They raised no alarm. The police were called and later in the evening arrested two suspects, who have been quite fully identified.

Two Old Men Burned to Death.

Charles Willard, wealthy owner of Battle Creek, died at the age of 70. Willard was a bachelor and left an estate value at $200,000. After making bequests to his heirs, his will bequeathed $30,000 to found professorships in Latin language and literature at Kalamazoo college; $10,000 for scholarships for poor but worthy students in the same college; $16,000 to the state Baptist missionary society; $40,000 for a Y. M. C. building and $10,000 for a public school library building in Battle Creek.

While not a member, he always attended and aided the First Baptist church at Battle Creek, and two years ago erected a $4,000 parsonage in memory of Mrs. Laura Harris Willard, his stepmother.

Two Old Men Burned to Death.

In a fire which occurred in Van Emster's drug store on Columbus avenue, Bay City, Theodore Durand, aged 61, and F. H. J. Van Emster, aged 50, lost their lives. At the first alarm Mrs. Van Emster aroused her husband, who snatched one of the children and made his escape. The mother and three other children escaped in their night gowns. Van Emster then returned and made a desperate attempt to extinguish the flames. He was unable to get out again, owing to a spring lock on a door through which he entered. During was found in his bedroom upstairs. Death came from suffocation. The fire was caused by an explosion of chemicals, and the loss is only $1,000.

Kalamazoo High School Burned.

A gas explosion in the high school furnace at Kalamazoo, caused a fire which destroyed the structure. The annex for the grammar school was saved, although flooded with water. Damage, $16,000; insurance, $12,000.

A ladder on which four men were standing broke. Both of Fred Winslow's legs were broken and Fred Wildsmith's spine was hurt badly. A new central high school will probably be built, and an addition be erected to the grammar department on the old high school site.

Robbery and Murder in Washtenaw.

James Richards, a wealthy hermit living on his farm in Saurier township, Washtenaw county, was visited by two men who shot him through the right lung and wounded him over the head. They then ransacked the house and presumably found considerable money as Richards would not trust banks and was known to have had quite a sum of money. He died of his injuries.

Miss Camp, a well-known dressmaker of Kalamazoo, attempted suicide with morphine, but was unsuccessful.

Michigan Forests Disappearing.

While it has often been spoken of by the press, and by men who have observed the matter, the people of the state have never seemed to realize the fact that our forests are fast disappearing. Labor Commissioner Morse has investigated quite carefully, and again calls attention to the matter. He says that the pine is nearly all gone and the forests of oak, ash, maple, basswood, black walnut, etc., are rapidly being destroyed. There is no doubt but that the removal of these forests has had some effect on climatic conditions. The information obtained by Mr. Morse came through township officials. The total figures for the state are: Hardwood, 6,166,977 acres; pine, 775,205; hemlock, 468,166; plains, 5,050,810; swamps, 3,265,867.
