DR. J. M. SWIFT.

Northville's Distinguished Citizen Is No More.

DEATH CAME PEACEFULLY MONDAY EVENING.

Had Been Ailing for Upwards of Two Years.

Had Been Identified With Much of Village's Material Prosperity.

Dr. John M. Swift, whose illness has been noted in these columns from week to week and which dates back for two or more years, passed peacefully away at his home in this village at 7:00 o'clock Monday night. Of him it may be truly said, "A good man is gone." Northville owes much of its material prosperity to Dr. Swift. His money, labor and industry were always ready for all that was for its welfare and advancement. He has worthily held every position of trust at the gift of the people of this village, besides serving a term in the state legislature. He was for years village trustee, village president and president of the school board. He was one of the leading organizers of the State Savings bank and held the office of president until a few weeks ago when he resigned on account of failing health.

John Marcus Swift was born in Nankin, Wayne county, Mich., on February 11, 1832, and was the son of Rev. Marcus and Anna (Osband) Swift. The family descended directly from William Swift, who came from England prior to 1694. The life of Rev. Marcus Swift was one crowded with incident and exciting events. He emigrated to Michigan in 1835, settled in the township of Bucklin, a portion of the township being afterwards named Nankin. He founded his home in a perfect wilderness, three miles from the house of any white man.

At the time of Dr. Swift's birth this part of the country was in a wild and undeveloped state. The schools were ill equipped, and educational facilities meagre. The doctor's father was poor, and he received almost nothing from his ministerial labors. The lot of John M. Swift was therefore from a very early age one of work and toil upon the farm. He went to school but little before his thirteenth year, and not afterwards until he went to college. His mother died when he was but ten years old, and subsequently his father married Miss Beldah C. Peck, who was an experienced school teacher, and from whom, as well as from his father, he received such assistance during spare hours as they could afford.

In his nineteenth year he entered what is now Adrian College, but after a few months he was taken down with an almost fatal attack of brain fever caused by incessant study and overwork, and was obliged to give up school. He then, when in his twentieth year, commenced the study of medicine and was graduated a doctor of medicine from the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati in 1854, and in 1861 took an additional degree of M. D. from Rush Medical College of Chicago. Without a dollar assistance from any source he prosecuted his studies, passed his college examinations, received his diploma, spent six months in work and study in a clinical school, and started and continued his professional career.

He was long the leading physician of this section, and was frequently called to consult with the faculty of the University and with eminent physicians of Detroit. He has been a frequent contributor to medical magazines and reviews, and his articles have always attracted wide attention in medical circles for their originality and learning. He has been a member of the American Medical Association, of the Wayne County Medical Society, of Detroit, of the Oakland County Academy of Medicine, and of other societies in this country and Europe. He was also one of the Board of Censors of the Detroit Medical College. He removed from Nankin to Northville in 1858 and has ever since been in constant practice in this place until his health failed him some two years ago. In 1888, on account of an accident, he was obliged to give up the more arduous labors of his country practice; and he then turned his attention also to mercantile pursuits, entering into a partnership with Mr. Crowl who took charge of the details of the business. For sixteen years their store was the largest in the town. At the end of that time he sold out, and since then has had no occupation other than his profession, except as he has been interested in the fostering of manufacturing and other interests of the village.

In 1884 he was elected to the state legislature, and represented the fourth district of the county during 1885-6, but refused renomination for the next term. He was appointed by Governor John J. Bagley one of the commissioners, to help to locate the State House of

HON. JOHN M. SWIFT.

Correction at India, and aided in the plans and specifications for the building. He has been an earnest and active Republican since the birth of that party, and previous to its existence was an old time Abolitionist and ardent advocate of the rights of the slave. He was a very strong temperance man, and has given his support to the temperance cause in its various phases of activity. He was outspoken in the defense of his principles, was an original and independent thinker, and spoke easily and with emphasis upon subjects in which he was interested, particularly on those having a moral bearing.

Dr. Swift was formerly a member of the Wesleyan Methodist church but disagreeing with their position in relation to secret societies—being himself a member of the Masons and Odd Fellows organizations—he left the Wesleyan Methodist society and became a member of the Presbyterian church, joining with their plot avowal on his part that he did not accept the confession of faith in many of its particulars. He was thoroughly evangelical in doctrine, and liberal and catholic toward all. His views of Christianity, he briefly summed up in the words: "To be a Christian is to be in harmony with God and in possession of the spirit of Christ." He gave time, money and influence to aid the various churches in this village; and they are indebted to his freedom from sectarian bias for services in Sunday schools, business and religious meetings, and in the choir which have been successfully instructed by him. He had a good knowledge of music, a fine tenor voice and has made great sacrifices in the interests of sacred and secular music.

He was liberal in his views, and possessed a broad mind which was embellished and chastened to a high degree by self culture. Well read, not only in his profession, but also in much of the science, literature and politics of the day and ever ready and thinking, he was ready on all suitable occasions to give utterance to his views and defend them with earnestness and spirit. He was often pressed into service on miscellaneous occasions, and has frequently spoken upon religious, secular, educational, patriotic, political, scientific, and especially medical topics.

In 1882 he married Miss Emily B. Barker, daughter of Captain George J. Barker, of Grand Rapids, Mich. They had one daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who was born on October 1, 1884. She was married on February 12th, 1897 to George A. Milne, of Fall River, Mass., and died January 5th, 1894. She was a lady of rare gifts and accomplishments, especially in music, was widely known and universally beloved. She left two little boys, Swift, five years of age, and Alexander, three years of age, who have since resided with Dr. Swift and his wife until within the last three or four years, since which time they have resided with their father in Brooklyn, N. Y. The other children shared with their own daughter the place of brother and sister in her own and her parents hearts and here. These were Marcus G. B. Swift, now of Fall River, Mass., and Camilla A. Debar, wife of J. A. Debar, of this place. They were the young children of Dr. Swift's brother, Dr. Orono R. Swift, and his wife Elizabeth, who was a sister of Dr. Swift's wife, the two brothers having married sisters. Both died young, leaving these children orphans at an early age.

The funeral was held from the home at 2:30 Wednesday, Rev. J. H. Herber of Northville officiating, assisted by Rev. W. H. Shannon of Wayne. The service was wholly eulogistic, particularly appropriate and fitting as a last tribute to him whose deeds, lost to memory, will soon only be recorded in the pages of history. The pall bearers, E. K. Simonds, F. R. Beal, A. M. Randall, L. W. Simmons, C. G. Harrington, H. S. Thayer, were among his life long associates. The interment was in the family lot in Rural Hill.

Salem News.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Westfall of Portland, Mrs. John King and Mrs. Everett of Plymouth were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wheeler Sunday.

After a brief burial service at the home of Mr. Peter Larkins, on Saturday morning, the remains of Mr. L. M. Larkins were taken to Salem and put on the train for Howell, where they were buried beside those of his wife, a brief service at the grave being conducted by the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Howell.

Chas. Stark has moved to McBain to take charge of the high school in that village. For the last three years Mr. Stark has had charge of the Salem high school, where he has not only given satisfaction to the pupils and parents but has won a host of friends in the community. We part with Mr. Stark with much regret.

H. B. Thayer received news on Sunday morning of the death of his cousin, Hon. Sidney N. Alexander of Clifton county. Mr. Alexander was an honorable man and prominent citizen of his county, which he represented in the legislature in 1867, the session of which the late George W. Swift was a member. His burial took place at Grand Lodge on Sunday afternoon.

The Farmers' picnic at Whitmore lake on Saturday drew an immense crowd—larger than for several years. The two addresses given were by President Snyder of the Agricultural college and ex-Governor Lucas, and were very class. President Snyder talked upon the hickory theme "Education" and notwithstanding it is a threadbare subject he evolved many new thoughts. The point upon which he laid peculiar emphasis was the special duty of teachers of young men and young ladies to impart their instructions so as not to lead them away from the calling of agriculture and they should inculcate the idea that labor with the hands—manual labor—is just as honorable as labor with the head or intellectual labor. Young men should not be trained to the idea that there is not honor or glory outside the professions of law, medicine, or theology. Young ladies should be trained in the industry that every good house wife uses daily in the kitchen and in the qualities that will make them good wives and good mothers. The president's talk was of this character and was eminently practical. The Governor talked of farmers—of their position in society; of their contributions to commerce and to every table in the land; every item on the bill of fare at every hotel in city or town, except fish, is a contribution from the farm. These facts should lead farmers to feel that their calling is one of which they may justly feel proud. The Governor talked for one hour in this strain and with remarkable force and earnestness for a man of seventy-three years. At the close of the exercises, President Wm. Ball was re-elected for the ensuing year. Mrs. Kate Smith of Salem was elected secretary and Mr. Duffy treasurer, with a long list of executive committees met.

Suburban News.

Plymouth is going to have a new Bath house. Fred Bath is putting it up.

A tramp made an unusual steal at Wilson last week. A comb was what he hauled off from the back room of one house.

The wool stolen a couple of weeks ago from Weaver & Watkins, at Wilson by the thief who stole the horses and wagon of Clayton McKinney, near Valled lake as mentioned in the Record at the time, consisted of 1,000 pounds and was sold by the thief to Mack & Smith of Ann Arbor, who gave a check which was not cashed, because the enterprising robber couldn't be identified. Now Mack & Smith refuse to give the wool, claiming it was stolen from them and resold to them. A lawsuit casts its shadow before.

INTERNATIONAL PRESS ASSOCIATION.

To go to Edinburgh would take her too far from her beloved dead, while the thought of living with Miss Hetherington at Annandale Castle positively appalled her. She said, "No."

The lady of the Castle received the refusal kindly, saying, that although Marjorie could not take up her residence at the Castle, she must not altogether avoid it.

"Come when you wish, my child," concluded the old lady. "You'll see we welcome you. We are both lonely women now, and must comfort one another."

During the first few days, however, Marjorie did not go. She sat at home during the day, and in the dusk of the evening, when she felt no one would see her, she went forth to visit the churchyard and cry beside her father's grave. At length, however, she remembered the old lady's kindly words, and putting on her bonnet and a thick veil, she one morning set out on a visit to Annandale Castle.

Marjorie had not seen Miss Hetherington since that day she came down to the funeral; when, therefore, she was shown into the lady's presence, she almost uttered a frightened cry. There sat the grim mistress of the Castle, in state, but looking as worn and faded as her faded surroundings. Her face was pinched and worn, as if with heart-eating grief or mortal disease. She received the girl kindly, yet with something of her old imperious manner, and during the interview she renewed the offer of protection.

But Marjorie, after looking at the dreary room and its strange mistress, gave a most decided negative.

She remained with Miss Hetherington only a short time, and when she left, the Castle-mistress was so full of solicitude that she walked along utterly oblivious to everything about her. Suddenly she started and uttered a glad cry of surprise. A man had touched her on the shoulder, and, lifting her eyes, she beheld her lover.

The Frenchman was dressed as she had last seen him, in plain black; his face was pale and troubled. Marjorie, feeling that now some sense of desolation upon her, drew near to his side.

"Ah, monsieur," she said, "you have come—at last!"

Causidiers did not embrace her, but held her hands and patted them fondly, while Marjorie, feeling comforted by his very presence, allowed her tears to flow unreservedly. He let her cry for a time, then he placed her hand upon his arm and walked with her slowly in the direction of the manse.

"My Marjorie," he said, "my own dear love! this has been a sore trial to you, but you have borne it bravely. I have seen you suffer, and I have suffered, too."

"You have seen, monsieur?"

"Yes, Marjorie. Did you think because I was silent I had forgotten? Ah, no, my love. I have watched over you always. I have seen you go forth at night and cry as if your little heart would break. But I have said nothing, because I thought 'Such grief is sacred. I must watch and wait,' and I have waited."

"Yes, monsieur."

"But today, Marjorie, when I saw you come from the Castle with your face all troubled—ah, so troubled, my Marjorie—I thought, 'I can wait no longer; my little one needs me; she will tell me her grief, and now in her hour of need I will help her.' So I have come, Marjorie, and my little one will confide all her sorrows to me."

Then the child in her helplessness clung to him; for he loved her and sympathized with her, and she told him the full extent of her own desolation.

The Frenchman listened attentively while she spoke. When she ceased he clasped her hands more fervently than before, and said:

"Marjorie, come to my home!"

She started and drew her hands away. She knew what more he would say, and it seemed to her sacrilege, when the clergyman had been so recently laid to his grave. The Frenchman, gathering from her face the state of her mind, continued prosaically enough:

"I know it is not a time to talk of love, Marjorie; but it is a time to talk of marriage! When you were in Edinburgh, you gave me your promise, and you said you loved me. I ask you now, fulfill your promise; let us become man and wife."

"You wish me to marry you now, monsieur?"

"Ah, yes, Marjorie."

"Although I am a penniless, friendless, homeless lass?"

"What is that to me, my dear? I love you, and I wish you to be my wife!"

"You are very good."

"Marjorie?"

"Yes."

"Tell me, when will you make me the happiest man alive?"

Marjorie looked at her black dress, and her eyes filled with tears.

"I do not know—I can not tell," she said. "Not yet."

"En bien!—but it must not be long delayed. The decrees of destiny hurry us onward. You will soon be thrust from the manse, as you say, while I must return to France."

"You are going away?"

He looked at him in wonder. "Ah, no! good and kind he was! Knowing her miserable birth, seeing her friendless and almost dead away, he would still be beside her, to comfort and cherish her with his deep affection. If she had ever doubted his sincerity, could she doubt it now?"

Half an hour later Causidiers was walking rapidly in the direction of Annandale Castle. He looked supremely self-satisfied and happy, and hummed a light French air as he went.

Arriving at the door, he knocked, and the serving-woman appeared in answer to the summons.

"Miss Hetherington, if you please."

"You cannot see her," was the sharp reply. "What's your business?"

"Give her this card, if you please, and tell her I must see her without delay."

After some hesitation the woman carried the card away, first shutting the door unceremoniously in the visitor's face. Presently the door opened again, and the woman beckoned him in.

He followed her along the gloomy lobby, and up stairs, till they reached the desolate boudoir which he had entered on a former occasion.

The woman knocked.

"Come in," said the voice of her mistress.

Causidiers entered the chamber and found Miss Hetherington, wrapped in an old-fashioned morning gown, seated in an arm-chair at her escritoire. Her fingers were busy with a letter, and her eyes were fixed upon it.

He stepped forward and fixed his eyes upon the Frenchman's face. She looked at him with a wild and ghastly expression, and her features wore an expression of indomitable resolution.

Causidiers bowed politely, then turning softly, he closed the door.

"What brings you here?" demanded the lady of the Castle.

"I wish to see you, my lady," he returned. "First, let me trust that you are better and apologize for having disturbed you on such a day."

Miss Hetherington knitted her brows and pointed with trembling forefinger to a chair.

"Sit down," she said.

Causidiers obeyed her, and sat down, but in hand. There was a pause, broken at last by the lady's querulous voice.

"Well, speak! Have you lost your tongue, man? What's your will with me?"

Causidiers replied with extreme civility:

"I am anxious, my lady, that all misunderstanding should cease between us. To prove my sincerity, I will give you a piece of news. I have asked Miss Annan to marry me, and with your consent she is quite willing."

"What!" cried Miss Hetherington, half rising from her chair, and then sinking back with a gasp and a moan. "Have you dared?"

Causidiers gently trembled his head.

"And Marjorie—she has dared to accept you, without warning me?"

"Pardon me, she is not aware that you have any right to be consulted. I, however, who acknowledge your right, have come in her name to solicit your kind approbation."

"And what do you threaten, man, if I say 'no'—a hundred times 'no'?"

Causidiers shrugged his shoulders.

"Parbleu, I threaten nothing; I am a gentleman, as I have told you. But should you put obstacles in my way, it may be unpleasant for all concerned."

Miss Hetherington rose to her feet, livid with rage, and shook her extended hands in her tormentor's face.

"It's well for you I'm no man! If I were a man, you would never pass that door again living! I defy you—I scorn you! Ye coward, to come here and molest a sick woman!"

She tottered as she spoke, and fell back into her chair.

A PRETTY SCREEN.

One Which Can Be Easily and Inexpensively Made at Home.

Soft pine wood panels of the desired size are cut, by a carpenter and are then covered by stenciling various, denim or any plain colored, durable material tightly across one side, tacked into place, and the reverse side covered with any good lining for the part of the screen not intended to show; says the Philadelphia Times. The next step in the process is to cut stiff brown paper panels the size of the wooden ones, and on them draw in charcoal a simple outline, conventional pattern.

If one is not original enough to do this alone, ask some friend to draw one, or copy some good design from an art magazine. The center panel should be the most prominent, while the side ones each have the same design, reversed to suit the branches of the screen and in its main features harmonizing with the center one. When this is done, lay the paper on the panel tack it in place and along each line of the pattern tack in gently upholstery nails, arranged carefully at equal distances.

These should be indicated by pencil marks if one has not a correct eye. When this is done the paper is torn out from beneath the nails, consequently too tough paper should not be used, and each nail is then carefully driven home with a hammer until it sinks in to the body of the material itself, giving a very rich metallic effect, for slight cost and little ingenuity. This style of screen is particularly well suited to dining rooms or halls, and may be made almost as effective without a framework, using the plain wooden panels hinged together after the work on them is completed.

Artificial habits are born tyrants.

Ten Years An Invalid.

Now Restored to Perfect Health and Able to Perform All Household Duties—A Cure After Skilled Physicians Had Failed.

From the Industrial News, Jackson, Mich. Mrs. Clara Hazelton, of Webberville, Michigan, related to a representative of the Industrial News the story of her cure from chronic and other ailments, which she says equals in this part of the country, and perhaps the most famous physician.

"My husband's name is John H. Hazelton. He is a farmer, and we live in Webberville. I am 30 years of age, and for over ten years have suffered from chronic catarrhs, female weakness, and a combination of kidney and bladder troubles. I have been unable to perform my household duties, and I have been unable to work, until a few years ago when I was a painful menstruator, and my misery was almost unbearable. It was then that I began to read the Industrial News, and I found in it the story of a cure from chronic catarrhs, female weakness, and a combination of kidney and bladder troubles. The community was greatly shocked Saturday morning when the news came that John Ely was dead. He was not sick quite a week but was a terrible sufferer from peritonitis. The funeral service was held Monday afternoon from the Methodist church, Rev.
Walker McIntosh of Walled lake officiating, assisted by Rev. D. M. Ward.
The K. O. T. M's and lady Maccabees attended in a body. The house was filled to its utmost capacity with sympathizing friends. Deceased leaves a widow, three children, a father, several sisters and brothers to mourn their loss.
John Ely was a young man greatly esteemed by everybody and will be missed in the community by all who knew him. The remains were laid to rest in the village cemetery.

Miss Thurgood Plarce of Detroit, while visiting friends and relatives in and about this village, was taken seriously ill at the home of her sister, Mrs. Frank, with what appeared at first to be peritonitis, but later developed into typhoid fever. During the afternoon of the funeral of Dr. Swift Wednesday, the business houses of the village were all closed and the village hall flag was displayed at half mast. ## Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be probably until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar-coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly, and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. When your liver wants help, get "the pill that will."

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A STORY AT SEA LAST SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

"And There Were Also with Him Other Little Ships, and There Arose a Great Storm of Wind."—From Mark IV. Verse 36.

IBERIAS, Galilee, Genesareth, three names for the same lake. No other gem ever had so beautiful a setting. It lay in a scene of great luxuriance, the surrounding hills high, the water sloped, groved, so many hanging gardens of beauty, the waters rumbling down between rocks of gray and red limestone, flashing from the hills, and bounding into the sea. On the shore were castles, armed towers, Roman baths, everything attractive and beautiful; all styles of vegetation in short; space than in almost any other space in all the world, from the palm tree of the forest to the trees of a rigorous climate.

It seemed as if the Lord had launched one wave of beauty on all the scene, and it hung and swung from rock and hill and oleander. Roman gentlemen in pleasure boats sailing the lake, and countrymen in fish-smacks, coming down to drop their nets, pass each other with nod and shout and laughter, or swinging idly at their moorings. Oh, what a wonderful, what a beautiful lake!

It seems as if we shall have a quiet night. Not a leaf winks in the air; not a ripple disturbs the face of Genesareth; but there seems to be a little excitement up the beach, and we hasten to see what it is, and we find it an embarrasment.

From the western shore a flotilla pushing out; not a squadron, or deadly-armed, nor clipper with valuable merchandise, nor pirate vessels ready to destroy everything they could seize; but a flotilla, bearing messengers of life and light, and peace. Christ is in the front of the boat. His disciples are in a smaller boat. Jesus, weary with much speaking to large multitudes, is put into somnolence by the rocking of the waves. If there was any motion at all, the ship was easily righted; if the wind passed from one side, from the starboard to the larboard, or from the larboard to the starboard, the boat would rock, and by the gentleness of the motion putting the Master asleep. And they extemporized a pillow made out of a fisherman's coat. I think no sooner was Christ prostrate, and his head touching the pillow, than he is sound asleep. The breathers of the lake run their fingers through the locks of the worn sleeper, and the boat rises and falls like a sleeping child on the bosom of a sleeping mother.

The subject in the first place impresses me with the fact that it is very important to have Christ in the ship for all those boats would have gone to the bottom of Genesareth if Christ had not been present. Oh, what a lesson for you and for me to learn! Whatever voyage we undertake, into whatever enterprise we start, let us always have Christ in the ship. Many of you in these days of revived commerce are starting out in new financial enterprises. I bid you good cheer. Do all you can do. Do it as high a plane as possible. You have no right to be a stork in the ship, if you can be an admiral of the navy. You have no right to be a colonel of a regiment if you can command a brigade. You have no right to be an engineer of a boat on river-banks, or near the coast, if you can take the ocean steamer from New York to Liverpool. All you can do with utmost tension of body, mind and soul, you are bound to do; but oh! have Christ in every enterprise. Christ in every voyage, Christ in every ship.

There are men who ask God to help them at the start of great enterprises. He has been with them in the past; no trouble can overthrow them; the storms might come down from the top of Mt. Hermon, and lash Genesareth into foam and into agony, but it could not hurt them. But here is another man who starts out in worldly enterprise, and he depends upon the uncertainties of his life. He has no God to help him. After awhile the storm comes, and tosses off the masts of the ship; he puts out his life; the sheriff and the auctioneer try to help him off; they can't help him off, he must go down; no Christ in the ship. Here are young men just starting out in life. Your life will be made up of sunshine and shadow. There may be in it arctic blasts or tropical tornadoes. I know not what is before you, but I know if you have Christ with you all shall be well.

You may seem to get along without the religion of Christ while everything goes smoothly, but after awhile, when sorrow hovers over the soul, when the waves of trial dash clear over the hurricane deck, and the bowsprit is shivered, and the ballards are swept into the sea and the gangway is crowded with practical disasters—oh, what would you then do without Christ in the ship? Young man, take God for your portion, God for your guide, God for your help; then all is well; all is well for time, all shall be well forever. Blessed is that man who puts in the Lord his trust. He shall never be confounded.

But my subject also impresses me with the fact that when people start to follow Christ they must not expect smooth sailing. These disciples got into the small boats, and I have no doubt they said, "What a beautiful day this is! What a smooth sea! What a bright sky this is! How delightful is sailing in this boat, and as for the waves under the keel of the boat, they only make the motion of our little boat the more delightful." But when the winds swept down, and the sea was tossed into wrath; then they found that following Christ was not smooth sailing. So, you have found it; so I have found it. Did you ever notice the end of the life of the apostles of Jesus Christ? You would say that if ever men ought to have had a smooth life, a smooth departure, then these men, the disciples of Jesus Christ, ought to have had such a departure and such a life.

St. James lost his head. St. Philip was hung to death on a pillar. St. Matthew had his life cashed out with a halberd. St. Mark was dragged to death through the streets. St. James the Less was beaten to death with a fuller's club. St. Thomas was struck through with a spear. They did not find following Christ smooth sailing. Oh, how they were all tossed in the tempest! John Huss in the fire. Hugh McKail in the hour of martyrdom; the Abigens, the Waldenses, the Scotch Covenanters—did they find it smooth sailing?

My subject also impresses me with the fact that good people sometimes get very much frightened. In the tones of these disciples as they rushed into the back part of the boat, I find they are frightened almost to death. They say: "Master, earnest thou not that we perish?" They had no reason to be frightened for Christ was in the boat. I suppose if we had been there, we would have been just as much frightened. Perhaps more.

In all ages very good people get very much frightened. It is often so in our day; and men say, "Why, look at the bad lectures; look at the Spiritualist societies; look at the various errors going over the Church of God; we are going to perish; she is going down." Oh, how many good people are frightened by triumphant iniquity in our day, and think the Church of Jesus Christ and the cause of righteousness are going to be overthrown, and are just as much frightened as the disciples of my text were frightened. Don't worry, don't fret, as though iniquity were going to triumph over righteousness.

A lion goes into a cavern to sleep. He lies down with his shaggy mane covering the paws. Meanwhile the spiders spin a web across the mouth of the cavern, and say, "We have captured him." Gossamer thread after gossamer thread is spun until the whole front of the cavern is covered with the spiders' web, and the spiders say, "The lion is done, the lion is fast." After awhile the lion has got through sleeping; he rouses himself, he shakes his mane, he wakes out into the sunlight, he does not even know the spiders' web is spun, and with his voice he shakes the mountain.

So men come, spinning their sophistries and scepticism about Jesus Christ; he seems to be sleeping. They say, "We have captured the Lord, he will never come forth again upon the nation; Christ is captured, and captured forever. His religion will never make any conquest among men." But after awhile the Lion of the tribe of Judah will rouse himself and come forth to shake mightily the nations. What is a spider's web to the aroused lion? Give truth and error a fair grapple and truth will come off victor.

But there are a great many good people who get frightened in other respects. They are frightened in our day about revivals. They say, "Oh, this is a strong religious sale, we are afraid the Church of God is going to upset, and there are going to be a great many people brought into the Church that are going to be of no use to it," and they are frightened whenever they see a revival taking hold of the churches. As though a ship captain with five thousand bushels of wheat for a cargo should say, some day, coming upon deck, "Throw overboard all the cargo; and the sailors should say, 'Why, captain, what do you mean? Throw over all the cargo?' Oh," says the captain, "we have a pack of chaff that has got into this five thousand bushels of wheat, and the only way to get rid of the chaff is to throw all the wheat overboard." Now, that is a great deal wiser than the talk of a great many Christians who want to throw overboard all the thousands and tens of thousands of souls who have been brought in through great awakenings. Throw all overboard because there is a pack of chaff, a quart of chaff, a pint of chaff; I say, let them stay until the last day; the Lord will divide the chaff from the wheat.

Oh, that these gales from heaven might sweep through all our churches! Oh, for such days as Richard Baxter saw in England and Robert McChesney saw in Dundee! Oh, for such days as Jonathan Edwards saw in Northampton! I have often heard my father tell of the fact that in the early part of this century a revival broke out in Somerville, N. J., and some people were very much agitated about it. They said, "Oh, you are going to bring too many people into the church at once," and they sent down to New Brunswick to get John Livingston to stop the revival. Well, there was no better soul in all the world than John Livingston. He went up; he looked at the revival; they wanted him to stop it. He stood in the pulpit on the Sabbath, and looked over the solemn auditory, and he said: "This, brethren, is in reality the work of God, beware how you try to stop it." And he was an old man, leaning heavily on his staff—a very old man. And he lifted the staff, and took hold of the small end of the staff, and began to let it fall very slowly through between the finger and the thumb, and he said: "Oh, thou impatient! thou art falling away—falling away from life, falling away from peace and heaven, falling away from that calm that is falling through my hand—falling—certainly, though perhaps falling very slowly." And the cane kept on falling through John Livingston's hand. The religious emotion in the audience was overpowering, and men saw a type of their doom as the cane kept falling and falling until the knob of the cane struck Mr. Livingston's hand, and he clasped it stoutly and said, "But the grace of God can stop you, as I stopped that cane; and then there was peace all through the house, at the fact of pardon and peace and salvation. "Well," said the people after the service, "I guess you had better send Livingston home; he is making the revival worse." Oh, for the gales from heaven, and Christ on board the ship. The danger of the Church of God is not in revival.

Again, my subject impresses me with the fact that Jesus was God and man in the same being. Here he is in the back part of the boat. Oh, how tired he looks! what sad dreams he must have! Look at his countenance; he must be thinking of the cross to come. Look at him, he is a man—bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh. Tired, he falls asleep; he is a man. But then I find Christ at the prow of the boat. I hear him say, "Peace, be still," and I see the storm kneeling at his feet, and the tempests, folding their wings in his presence; he is a God.

If I have sorrow and trouble, and want sympathy, I go and kneel down at the back part of the boat, and say, "O, Christ! weary one of Genesareth, sympathize with all my sorrows, man of Nazareth, man of the cross." A man, a man! But if I want to conquer my spiritual foes, I want to get the victory over sin, death, and hell; I come to the front of the boat, and I kneel down, and I say, "O, Lord Jesus Christ, thou who dost hush the tempest, hush all my grief; hush all my temptation, hush all my sin." A man, a man; a God, a God.

I learn once more from this subject that Christ can hush a tempest. It did seem as if everything must go to ruin. The disciples had given up the idea of managing the ship; the crew were entirely demoralized, yet Christ rises, and he puts his foot on the storm, and it crumbles at his feet. Oh, yes! Christ can hush the tempest.

You have had trouble. Perhaps it was the little child taken away from you—the sweetest child of the household, the one who asked the most curious questions, and stood around you with the greatest fondness, and the shade out down through your bleeding heart. Perhaps it was an only son, and your heart has ever since been like a degenerated eagle, the owls of the night hooting among the falling rafters and the crumbling stairways.

Perhaps it was an aged mother. You always went to her with your troubles. She was in your home to welcome your children into life, and when they died she was there to pity you, that old hand with no more bloodiness, that white lock of hair you put away in the closet, or in the locker, did not look as well as it usually did when you brushed it away from her wrinkled brow in the home circle or in the country church. Or your property gone, you said, "I have so much bank stock, I have so many government securities, I have so many houses, I have so many farms"—all gone, all gone.

Why, all the storms that ever trampled with their thunders, all the shipwrecks, have not been worse than this to you. Yet you have not been completely overthrown. Why? Christ hushed the tempest. Your little one was taken away. Christ says, "I have taken care of him, I can take care of him as well as you can, better than you can. O bereaved mother! Hushing the tempest. When your property went away, God said, 'There are treasures in heaven, in banks that never break.'

There is one storm into which we will all have to run the moment when we let go of this life, and try to take hold of the next, when we will want all the grace we can have—we will want it all. Yonder I see a Christian soul rocking on the surges of death; all the powers of darkness seem let out against that soul—the swirling wave, the thunder of the sky, the screaming wind, all seem to unite together; but that soul is not troubled; there is no sighing, there are no tears; plenty of tears in the room at the departure, but he weeps no tears, calm, satisfied, peaceful, all is well. Jesus hushing the tempest. By the flash of the storm you see the harbor just ahead, and you are making for that harbor. Strike eight bells, all is well.

Into the harbor of heaven now we glide:

We're home at last, home at last. Softly we drift on its bright, silvery tide.

We're home at last, home at last. Glory to God, all our dangers are o'er. We stand secure on the glorified shore. Glory to God, we will shout evermore.

We're home at last, home at last.

Hurry and Worry.

We frequently hear of Christian workers breaking down from overwork, but nine times out of ten it was hurry and worry which brought them to the state of enforced inaction which they regret. Hurry and worry, which usually go together, run more lives than any amount of regular systematic labor. Indeed, inconsiderate exertion is almost as bad in its effects as idleness. Way cannot we bear in mind that there is always time enough to do well all that we are called upon to do? If we do more than this, we do injustice both to our work and to ourselves. On the other hand, if we waste the time entrusted to us, it is useless to attempt to get it back by extra haste.

Good and Evil.—It is an inherent and inevitable necessity that man be free to choose or reject; that is human morality. Without the choice between good and evil we would be as the birds and the beasts.—Rev. R. Heber Newton, Episcopalian, New York City.

LIGHT AS AIR.

The day of chiffon is not over by any means. This lovely delicate fabric is still used in every possible way. Over every shade of color, black chiffon is deemed appropriate. A beautiful gown of green satin, cut princess, had a vest of black chiffon covered with a handsome applique pattern in velvet, outlined with the finest gold cord. The sleeves were formed of trillings edged with lace.

Pink is so becoming to youth, that it is much worn. One pretty gown of pink, crepe de chine has horizontal rows of lace, set into the bodice beneath a lace-trimmed cape, while five gathered tucks appear below the waist. Pink tulle formed the slip underneath.

A charming gown had the entire skirt of coarse Brussels lace applique mounted on white chiffon veiling white satin, the chiffon letting a more subdued tint to the yellow of the lace; the little bolero over the waist was of shot blue and white silk, exquisitely embroidered in silks, edged with tulle lace with a full front of white chiffon drawn in at the waist by a belt of blue chiffon.

Mousseline de sole and chiffon have seemingly reached the apex of perfection in coloring and design, the black with floral chine patterns being especially handsome. Over-colored silks. Lovely skirts are made of the sun-ray accordion plaiting in chiffon and the mousseline, though they are not especially durable.

Tulle skirts are covered from hem to waist with tiny ruckings and the amount of labor expended in making one is something to turn the hair gray. Cerise and flame-colored gauzes with faint chine patterns are being sent over from Paris, the bodices cut square, the sleeves ruffled and transparent.

A charming garden frock could be made of patterned crepe de chine, with a vest of soft white tulle or lace insertions in white or black. Little frills of lace should fall down on either side of the chiffon vest.

Chiffon, which has hitherto been considered proper in the shape of entire gowns, only for evening wear, is now made up for daytime in light pink, yellow, heliotrope, blue and spring green. The skirts are made with graduated flounces or frills to the waist and the proud wearer does not dare sit down for fear of ruining the fragile fabric.

Matrons are ordering the transparent, black-ribbed materials, trigoline being the favorite. A black trigoline, corded, yet transparent, was embroidered around the skirt with white feather stitching and had a short but stylish bolero of poppy-red silk trimmed with black and white in squares and secured at the crisscross with ornamental buttons. The high collar had purlings at the back and there were lace purlings and a ruffled belt of black and white silk.

Over the Phone.
"Yes, this is Maud. Oh, is that you, George? Well, what did papa say? What's that? You didn't mind what he said? Well, what did he do? Good gracious! Did he? And you can't sit down? Where are you now, George? In the hospital? Dear, dear!"—Levi and Plain Dealer.

PERSONALS.

Daniel Webster was extraordinarily fond of oxen, and all those on his farm knew him by sight and would follow him like dogs.

Of the 25 senators who served terms in the lower house before coming to the senate, Senator Mann, of Texas, served longest, his term being from 1873 to 1892.

Secretary Gage will next Tuesday be given a dinner in Boston by the business men of that city. The mayor of Boston and the governor of Massachusetts will also be guests.

Senator Charles J. Faulkner, of West Virginia, has carried a bullet in his right leg ever since the war. It was fired from a revolver which he himself was handling carelessly.

Hon. Horace Chapman, Democratic gubernatorial candidate for Ohio, is said to have a remarkably big voice. A prominent Ohio politician said recently that no one could confer with Mr. Chapman, because "his voice could be heard all over the state."

President McKinley, who has accepted an invitation to the G. A. R. encampment at Fremont, O., for September 2, will probably meet there William J. Bryan, ex-President Cleveland and Horace Chapman, the Democratic nominee for governor of Ohio.

"Bill Nye, when shown the state of North Carolina from Lookout Mountain, drew a map from his pocket, and said: 'Here is a map of the United States, and you can see for yourself that North Carolina is pink. That is not North Carolina over there.'"

James Whitcomb Riley, when asked recently how he could help a young poet to succeed, replied: "He must hammer out his own success. He must work steadily. He must study the meanings and values of words. He must be patient. He must not be in too great a hurry."

Senator Mason recently asked Senator Morgan, of Alabama, how long he could talk on a subject of which he knew absolutely nothing. "Well," answered Morgan, with a smile, "it was a matter about which I knew absolutely nothing. I do not think I could talk more than two days."
