HIS PLYBOOK

"It is Deceit to the Angels Than Any Other Person."

"Is there anything closer to an angel's heart than his fly-book? I know of a case where a burglar, among other things, took a fly-book. He was arrested and speedily convicted and imprisoned. He'd eaten things out pretty well in the house, but the owner seemed to care nothing about the missing fur coats, sealskin jackets, silverware, and other valuable lures and penates, but he did bewail the loss of his book of flies. The other things he could buy again, but to get together such an assortment of valuable flies seemed to him an impossible thing. He had been years collecting them, picking up odd ones here and there, until, for quality and variety his book could not be effected. It was a fly storehouse, as it were. No matter where he intended fishing, or whether, for trout, bass or salmon, he could always find a choice assortment to draw from with which to fill up a supplementary book. Although it was some time ago he yet bewails the loss of that fly-book. Many have been the efforts to get track of it, but all in vain. He has gone to the expense of sending to the prison, in a distant city, and endeavoring to prevail upon the convict to divulge the hiding place of the book, but without success. A persistent search of the pawnshops and periodical advertising have produced no better results.

There were flies in that book for trout and salmon in Irish waters; flies for the salmon and trout of the Scotch lakes and the English streams, and flies for the salmon of Norway. The favorites from Maine to California, and from one end of Canada to another, were collected in that wallet, anything and everything from the featherdown midget with cobweb gut to the lordly salmon sp. above, irresistibly irresistible to the lurking salmon deep down in the icy pools of the Cascapedia. There were flies in that book on which famous bass, trout and salmon had been hooked, each by carrying with it memories of battles fought from canoes among the rushing, swirling waters.

Pittsburgh Dispatch:
MISERLY WITH DYING BREATH.
Passing of Halle Sven, Worth a Quarter of a Million.

From the Chicago Times-Herald—"Halle Sven," character of the North Side for some fifty years, died at the Alexian Brothers' hospital last Thursday as the result of a fall from the second story of a building at Hobble street and Milton avenue. "Halle Sven"—which means "Lame Sven"—was a miser. His name was S. V. Johnson, but few knew it. He owned a score of apartment houses on the North Side and his wealth is estimated at $250,000. But the old man had lived for years on what he could find in the ragbag boxes of the neighborhood. If any of his Swedish countrymen offered him a drink he refused to be given the cold, it would cost and pocket him terribly.

Many people are told of "Halle Sven's" miserliness. One day he called at one of his handsome apartment houses, and a servant who did not know him came to the door. He announced he was a tramp, and without qualms took his cap and some bread. He eagerly devoured the food and then demanded the girl by requesting her to tell her master the landlord had been there for the rent. He did not pay the expense incurred at the Alexian Brothers' hospital, and almost his last breath failed to be removed to the free County hospital.

The Bird of Paradise.
A creature of most gorgeous beauty is the bird of paradise. As an ornament of beauty and grace, the bird of the sun—or bird of God, as it is sometimes called by the people of Ternate—stands unrivaled, and no bird has given rise to more romantic and fabulous tales, such, for instance, as the ridiculous assertion that the bird of paradise lives all its life long on the wing and in the air, and is born without legs. The natives of Gihelo and New Guinea have a curious custom of cutting off the legs of all dead birds of paradise offered for sale or barter, and this may have given rise to the legend as to the bird being without legs. The true reason, however, for this peculiar operation is that the birds are supposed to be much better preserved, and the natives are also enabled to more easily wear them as ornaments to their nests in mock battles.

Id keep quiet!

The gift of speech is a great gift; but the gift of silence is also very valuable. There is a time to speak and there is a time to be silent; and the time to be silent is when you have nothing to say. There is a story of one man who was making a somewhat lengthy address to some children, forgetting how weary little folks become until at length, having pretty much run out of ideas, he said:

"What more shall I say?" when one little urchin spoke up and said "Say amen, and sit down!" a suggestion which the speaker was quite prompt to follow.

A Sunday school speaker tells of a similar experience. He was invited to make an address at a Sunday school festival, and having nothing prepared to say, he tried to picture to the children the foolishness of his position, and asked them this question: "What should you do were you compelled to stand on a platform before so many bright boys and girls, who expected a speech from you, and you had nothing to say?"

"Id keep quiet," said one small boy, and his answer brought down the house and brought down the time of the boy.

It is a great thing to be able to speak in an interesting and profitable manner on any occasion, but if we do this we must try our very best to study and practice, and so be ready to improve the opportunities which come to us and which may be fruitful of blessing to many and all.

"Id keep quiet," said one small boy, and his answer brought down the house and brought down the time of the boy.

Savagery Food.

We have become totally used to pet lions, bears and other wild animals among so many women of the stage have pasted Progeny Chicago accompanied by such lascivious and lewd gestures.

This young panther, however, appears mild and gentle. He belongs to a western now living in India who found the handsome animal with two other panther babies—in fact, they were triplets—under a hedge, emaciated and half-starved. The mother had evidently gone foraging and had come to get them. The cub kept one of the infant panthers and a little pot of fresh milk and soon restored him to plumpness. It healed the panther has never tasted raw meat, being fed on cooked mutton and water, which may account for the fact that he is still very gentle. He travels with his owner all over the district of South Africa where his master lives, and if given a good long rope under

They Knew Me.

The train had stopped for a few minutes at a station out on the plains, and two or three bare-rooted little boys and girls laid their backs against the depot and their fingers in their mouths, while they stared at the passengers.

Suddenly a boy of about ten years dashed round a corner of the station and called to his brother and sister,

"You Joe," Ma says, "you son' Vass, you don't come right straight home she'll—she'll—well, I forgot what, but she'll be there, for you know what ma is when she gets started, so you a better git home straight off."

Joey and Maggie evidently knew what ma was when she "got started" for they started homeward as fast as their bare little feet would carry them to consider that they are but strangers and pilgrims in this world, having here no dwelling place, but seeking one to come; that they, remembering the short continuance of this life, may be content with that, which is sufficient, and not join house-to-house and land-to-land to the impoverishment of others; but so behave themselves in letting their tenements, lands and pastures that after this life they may be received into everlasting habitations."

LAST MONTH

of the Tennessee Centennial and Industrial Exposition.

The month of October closed this great est of all Expositions ever held in the South, and next to the Columbian, the best ever held in this country. For the closing months special attractions have been arranged, and the rates from all parts of the country have been made lower than ever before known. The location (Nashville, Tenn.) is on the main line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, and the route between the North and South, and the man in either direction via that city can be made as cheaply, if not cheaper, than via any other route.

Ask your ticket agent for rates, or write to

DEBILITY

To those who suffer pain the joy of relief is indescribable. Debility or nervous prostration causes all the inconveniences of pain, though not its sharpness. It is a later stage of disease.

Pains and debility are symptoms of a deranged condition of the kidneys. Both will disappear when the kidneys are made to act right, not before. Disease or inactive kidneys can be CURED.

H. F. Wyatt & Co. Gentlemen:—On a short time ago I was all broken down. My kidneys were in a terrible condition. The pain in my back was so severe I could hardly walk. Urine was scanty and highly colored. I tried everything I saw advertised but all to no good purpose. I was finally persuaded to try Hobbs Sparagus Kidney Pills. After taking the sample and one box, I am entirely cured as far as I can see. I gladly send you this testimonial, and you may use it as you think best. JOHN DALE, Adrian, Mich.

Fall Weather and Fall Apparel...

These occasional cold days and colder evenings warn us of the approach of winter. Now is the time to prepare for the coming cold weather.

We call your attention to our large assortment of JACKETS and CAPES. We have, for your inspection, the pick of the assortments made by nine of the largest and best manufacturers in the United States, making our line well assorted and not the sameness of it usually found in village stores.

Our line is new, fresh, clean and thoroughly up to date. Our prices are positively lower in some cases, and as low on others as any store in Michigan that we know of.

The Jacket like this cut is a representative garment for $5.00.

We believe there is no store in the State that beats this at the price.

Nicely made and stylish trimming. The cut does not show, it is as good as it is. You should see it.

Here is a leader at $7.50.

Heavy boucle, choice style, nicely lined. You would say it is a good $10 jacket, but our price for all now in stock is Only $7.50.

This stylish garment is a heavy boucle, trimmed with Kersey strips, well lined and a very desirable garment at

Only $10.00.

Novelties, Fads, Special Styles, Etc.

Our connection with the New York markets brings us the newest ideas as soon as they come out. We show you this week very choice styles in Russian Blouse effect. New Kersey Jackets in all the popular shades of green, black, etc.

Capes

Are not out of date entirely. We have some very pretty styles in Plush, Boucle, Beaver Kersey, etc., at prices from 90c to $10.00.

"You will oblige me by leaving the house," he said, "if you cannot speak civilly. I have made this lady my wife. She belongs now to me and my country, and she accompanies me to Paris tonight."

"No, not tonight," said Marjorie quickly. "You will not take me away tonight, Leon!"

"And why not tonight, Marjorie?"

"Because I have promised Mr. Sutherland to go back with him to Annanale to see my—see dear Miss Hetherington. She is ill; and she wants me, monsieur."

"I regret it, but we do not get everything we wish in this world. I must leave for Paris without delay!"

Marjorie hesitated and looked confused. Then Sutherland spoke, unconsciously uttering the thoughts which had been in the girl's mind.

"You can't go to Paris," he said. "If you allow Marjorie to return with me, the Frenchman gave a smile which was half a sneer."

"You are considerate, itself, monsieur," he added. Then, turning to Marjorie, he added: "What does my wife say to that?"

"I—I don't know," she stammered. "I am so sorry for Miss Hetherington. It would be only for a few days, perhaps, and I could follow you."

Caussidiere smiled again, this time less agreeably.

"You seem to be tender-hearted, Marjorie," he said, "to every one but myself. Truly, an admirable speech to make to your husband in the first flush of the honeymoon. I am too fond of you, however, to lose you quite so soon."

"Then you will not let me return?"

"Most assuredly I shall not let you go; what is Miss Hetherington to you or to me? She is your mother, perhaps, as you say, but in her case, what does that sacred word 'mother' mean? Merely this. A woman so hardened that she could abandon her helpless offspring to the mercy of strangers, and afterward, when she saw her alone and utterly friendless, had not tenderness enough to come forward and say 'Marjorie, you are not alone in the world, come to me—your mother!'"

"An, Leon do not talk so!" exclaimed Marjorie; then seeing Sutherland about to speak she went toward him with outstretched hands.

"Do not speak," she whispered, "for my sake. Since my husband wishes it, I must remain. Good-bye."

She held forth her hand, and he took it in both of his, and, answering her prayer, by the sweat of your brow! Who is the victim, monsieur? Who bleed?"

"I do not waste what I have," returned Caussidiere, "and I love clean lines, that's all."

Huet snapped his fingers and laughed.

"Do you think I am a fool to swallow that canard? No, my Caussidiere. You have money; you have a little nest-egg at home. You have a wife, brave boy, she is English and she is rich."

So, instead of turning to the Frenchman, he kept Marjorie's hand, and said:

"You are sure, Marjorie, that you wish to remain?"

"Yes," sobbed Marjorie, "quite sure. Give my love to my dear mother, and say that very soon my husband will bring me home again."

He lifted her hand to his lips and kissed it again and again; then, with another word, he was about to leave the room, when Caussidiere stopped him.

"Monsieur," he said, "you will also if you please, bear a little message to our much esteemed Miss Hetherington from me. Tell her that though in the first days of our married life she has tried to separate my wife from me, I bear her no ill will; on the contrary, I shall be glad to hear of her prosperity. Tell her, also, monsieur," added the Frenchman blandly, "that since Marjorie Annan and I are one, we share the same good or evil fortune; that she cannot now gratify her malignity by persecuting Leon Caussidiere without persecuting her own child!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

N one of the narrow Parisian streets in the near neighborhood of the Seine, close to quays and old bookstores, frequented by the littérateur out at elbows and the bibliomaniac, there is an obscure cabaret or house of entertainment, bearing the name of Mouche d'Or. Besides the sauced saloon, with its marble tables and its buffet, presided over by a giddy damsel of forty, there is a dining-chamber up stairs, so low that a tall man standing upright can almost touch the ceiling with his head, and so badly lit by a narrow window that a light of some sort is necessary even by broad day.

In this upper chamber, one foggy afternoon in autumn, three years after the occurrence of the events described in the last chapter, a man was seated alone and busily writing at one of the wooden tables.

The man was about forty years of age, corpulent, with jet-black hair and mustache, but otherwise clean shaven. He wrote rapidly, almost furiously, wooden stairs till he gained the second floor, which consisted of three rooms in suite, a small saloon, a bedchamber, and a smaller bedchamber adjoining.

In the saloon which was gaudy but shabbily furnished in red velvet, with mirrors on the walls, a young woman was seated sewing, and playing near to her was a child about a year and a half old. Both mother and child were very pale and delicate, but both had the same soft features, gentle blue eyes and golden hair.

The woman was Marjorie Annan. Marjorie, with all the lightness and happiness gone out of her face, which had grown sad and very pale.

Caussidiere entered, she looked up eagerly and greeted him by his Christian names. The child paused timidly in his play.

"You are late, Leon," said Marjorie, in French. "I have waited in all day, expecting you to return."

"I was busy and couldn't come," was the reply. "Any letters?"

"No, Leon."

Caussidiere uttered an angry exclamation, and threw himself into an armchair.

"The old woman had better take care," he cried. "Nearly a week has now passed and she has not replied to my note—that is, to yours. And we want money infarntly, as you know."

Marjorie sighed, and her eyes filled with tears.

"Why are you crying?" demanded her husband sharply. "Because you have an unnatural mother, who would rather see you starve than share her wealth with you or with the child?"

"No, no, it is not that," answered Marjorie. "Miss Hetherington has been very good. She has given us a great deal already; but we require so much, and I am sure she is not so rich as you suppose."

"She is a miser, I tell you," returned Caussidiere. "What she has sent you is not sufficient for an ordinary semiprivate wage. She had better take care! If she offends me, look you, I could bring her to shame before all the world."

At this moment there was a knock at the room door, and the man who had admitted Caussidiere entered with a letter.

"A letter for madame," he said.

Marjorie took the letter, and, while the man retired opened it with trembling hands. Her husband watched her gloomily, but his eye glistened as he saw her draw forth a bank order.

"Well," he said,

"It is from Miss Hetherington—from my—mother! Oh, is the not good! Look, Leon! An order upon the bank for thirty pounds."

"Let me look at it," said Caussidiere rising and taking it from his wife's hand. "Thirty pounds! It is not much. Well, what does the old woman say?"

"I—I have not read the letter."

"Let me read it," he said, taking it from her and reading the action to the words.

It was a longish communication.

Caussidiere read it slowly, and his face darkened, especially when he came to the following words:

"If you are unhappy, come back to me. Homeaten your home is always here. Oh, Marjorie! my heart never forgot that! It is a mother's heart that yearns and waits for you! Come back, Marjorie, before it is broken, altogether."

Caussidiere tossed the letter on the table.

"So you have been telling her that you are unhappy?" he said with a sneer. "In the future, I must see all your letters even to the postscripts. And she begs you to go back to Scotland! Well, who knows—it may come to that yet!"

SALADS AS A DIET.

Most Wholesome Food and Should Be Eaten Every Day.

"The beauty and wholesomeness of the salad should commend it to every American housekeeper," writes Mrs. S. T. Rorer in the Ladies' Home Journal.

"I do not refer to those highly seasoned combinations of hard-boiled eggs and mustard, but to dainty dinner or luncheon salads made with a dressing of olive oil, a few drops of lemon juice and a light seasoning of salt, garlic and pepper."

"The salts necessary for the well-being of our blood are bountifully given in these green vegetables. Then, too, it is a pleasant way of taking fatty food."

All machinery must be well oiled to prevent friction, and the wonderful human engine is not an exception to the rule. Look carefully to it that you take sufficient fatty food.

"The Americans do not use enough fat to keep them in perfect health.

While butter is served in some families three times a day, and is better, than no fat, its composition is rather against it as compared to a sweet vegetable oil.

Fats well digested are the salvation of consumptives, or those suffering from any form of tuberculosis. For these reasons a simple salad composed of any green vegetable and a French dressing should be seen on every well-regulated table 365 times a year. Those who live out of town can obtain from the fields sorrel, long docks, dandelions and lamb's quarters for the cost of picking.

Where desserts are not used, and I wish for health's sake, they might be abolished, a salad with a bit of cheese and bread or wafer or cracker, with a small cup of coffee, may close the meal. Where a dessert is used the salad, cheese and wafer are served just before it, to pick up the appetite that it may enjoy more fully the sweet. At a large dinner the salad is usually served with the game course."

Courting done on a tandem ought to result in a double safety match.

A LOCK OF HAIR.

He was sitting on a log opposite the postoffice, waiting for the coming of the stage that brings mail to the Spanish villages. He looked at me with frank curiosity. "You are a reporter, ain't you?" he asked.

"Reporter is the peninsular title for summer boarders."

I admitted that I was Mrs. Knut Olson's reporter and had arrived on the Highgoe boat.

"Every summer we have 'em," he said proudly. "Last year there was six reporters in Abraham coming and going. Won't you set down on this log?" he asked. "The stage'll be here in bout twenty minutes—I can hear it jingling along the bay road now."

He was the picture of venerable old age as he sat there in the sunshine. His hair was like the whitecaps on the bay, his color was of the rich brown that comes on a fair skin long exposed to wind and weather, and his eyes were yet of a brave blue. He wore an old coat, jeans pantaloons and gay carpet slippers—the favorite footgear of the peninsula sailor when ashore.

"You've been a sailor!" I ventured as he was looking across the bay to where the cliff came up from the water like an uncouth giant fresh from the bath.

"I've been a sailor!" he said. "I was looking across the bay to where the cliff came up from the water like an uncouth giant fresh from the bath."

to take his long delayed vacation. He has recommended Juries M. Price for next master at Oldeville, Genesee county and Oliver H. P. Green at Orion, Oakland county. The appointments will be made in a few days.

John Waters of Flint will have his pension increased from $8 to $12, and John Clark of Clarkston, Oakland county, whose case was reversed on appeal to his department, will be given a special examination once.

He has secured detail of a special examiner to investigate the case of Marie Philbrick, of Brighton, and a pension for John Holmes of Milford. Mr. Smith expects to secure an extra allowance of sugar beet seed from Secretary Wilson, and will endeavor to have a factory established in his district.

Seth Durfee, almost the last one of Novi's earliest settlers died at his home two miles northwest of the village, on Sunday Sept. 26, at the advanced age of 87 years, 7 months. He was the only one remaining of a family of six brothers and sisters, and had lived in Novi 68 years nearly all that time at the home where his long life reached its ending. He was born in Marchester, Ontario County N. Y., Feb. 10, 1810. He was never married, his niece, Miss Eleanor Shurtliff having charge of his home and caring for him many years. He was a good citizen, honorable and upright, and respected by all who knew him. The funeral occurred from the home Wednesday forenoon, Rev. Lee McColister of Detroit officiating. The burial was at West Farmington.

Herbert Andrews, our C. T. Agent, took a brief vacation this week and was married Tuesday afternoon to Miss Pearl Smith of Milford. His many friends here extend congratulations. Mr. Williams of Stockbridge takes his place at the depot during his absence.

Saturday last was the 25th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Hyde Smith's wedding and their daughter Nellie and friends got up a pleasant surprise for them. The house was filled with friends who presented them with a handsome set of dishes, a silver butter dish, and a fine rocking chair. After spending a very pleasant evening all departed wishing them many happy returns of the day.

Thank You,
Very Well Indeed.

So many solicitous patrons—friends have asked,

"Are you doing well in your new store?" that we are induced to head our ad with the above reply, so that those who run may read.

We make our whole aim to please our patrons. We have two wagons and deliver quick. That's one pleasing feature. We always keep on hand a choice line of Groceries, Fruits and Vegetables and have them fresh—that's another pleasing thing. Price always right—that's another.
