A novel proposition was made not long ago to the owners of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, by the P. & O. has a branch line from Washington to Shenandoah on the Potomac River, where a car ferry is operated in connection with the line leading south from the Capital. A proposition of an eastern college desired to lease this branch of the line for the purpose of educating young men in the practical side of road work. In his letter he explained that he thought there was a wide field for the employment of boys who could be thoroughly well grounded in the practical side of road work, and in other capacities connected with the line of road. He believed that by the employment of veteran railroad men as teachers that the boys could probably spend 2 or 3 years working as trainmen, firemen, engineers, switchmen, etc., and in other capacities required in the railroad service. As this branch of the B. & O. is of considerable value the receivers were compelled to decline the offer.

WHERE IDOLS ARE MADE.

Birmingham, England, Has a Factory, for Manufacturing Heathen Gods. It has recently been discovered that there is in Birmingham, in the very center of Christian England, a factory where idols are made for heathen nations. Says the Pottery Gazette, London: Many attempts have been made to obtain admission to the factory, but a strict watch is kept upon outsiders anxious to pry into the secret chambers where the heathen gods are made, and journalists especially are prevented from entering the works.

A few facts were, however, to be gleaned concerning this extraordinary industry. Idols of all kinds are turned out, representing the gods of all heathen nations, from Tokio to Timbuctoo. The export trade to heathen countries is a fairly large one, although more gods are sent out to foreign dealers in the bazaars of Calcutta, Dacca, Cebu, Colombo, etc., for sale to unsuspecting travelers anxious to take home some mementos of their stay abroad. The price of gods varies greatly. You may get a Birmingham made one in a London curiosity shop for half a crown, or you may run up the pretty bill of £20 for an especially ugly one, "stolen" according to the dealer, "by a sailor during the Chinese war." In the Cairo bazaar, however, the price of a first-class god of this kind may run from £20 to anything a traveler informed the writer that there was little difficulty in deceiving a god of native make from one of Birmingham manufacture. The first generally displayed some slight irregularity or change of design due to the native workmen by hand, while the Birmingham god was superlatively correct in form as the most unscrupulous deity in the market. The trade in idols is kept such a close secret that it is difficult to estimate the output for the hour of trade returns. The gods would doubtless be placed under the humiliating title of "works of art or curios." But there is no doubt the trade is a fairly large one, and that some Birmingham men do very well in the business.

MINISTER AND WHEEL

(By Eben E. Rexford.)
"E came to us about the middle of the week. On the following Sunday he was to preach in the forenoon and in the afternoon at a small place about eight miles out in the country."

"It'll be a rather long walk for a hot day," he said to me after getting "the lay of the land." "I don't suppose I'd be very likely to catch a ride, would I? I don't feel able to hire a rig from the livery—I'm one of the poor ministers, you know," he added. He had but one eye, and when he wanted to make a remark impressive, or said something he had an idea was humorous, whose effect he wanted to observe, he had a trick of dropping his head in what might be called an insinuating fashion, and bring his one optic to bear on you from such an angle and in such a manner that it made you feel as if X-rays were concentrated on you, and that your inmost thoughts were being laid bare before the intensity of his gaze, which always suggested to me the application of an optical cork-screw."

"Just then he happened to catch sight of my wheel." "Got a bicycle, eh? Now, what's to hinder my going over to the other charge on that? I don't suppose you'd object to leading it." Thereupon he "drew bead" on me with that penetrating optic of his.

"You're welcome to the use of it," I said. "I did not think of asking him if he was used to riding. I supposed he must be or he would not think of starting off on an eight-mile trip as a beginning. But on Saturday morning I saw him looking the wheel over in a manner that made me think he had never had much to do with one. Therefore, after dinner, as we sat on the veranda, I asked him if he had ridden much."

"Never was 'on one in my life," he answered. "Then I'd suggest that you practice a little before attempting to make your trip," I said. "You've got to get something used to a wheel before you can manage it."

"It looks easy enough," he said. "I've watched folks ride a good deal, and all they have to do is to keep from tipping over and keep their feet going, so far as I can see. I should think anybody could do that."

"Better try it," I said. "Well, I will if you think it is necessary," he said. He got up, took the wheel and started for the yard. He propelled it by the handle bars, and the first thing he knew the pedals came around and took him in the shins quite forebly. He panted through his eye to bear on the wheel for a moment, and then held it off at arm's length until he was "in the arena." Evidently the idea of tulture had never once entered his mind. He seized the handle bars, got behind the wheel, put his left foot on the footrest, gave the thing a push and hopped after it a rod or two before he got into motion. Then he gave a leap, expecting to land in the saddle, but "overhauling ambition had outleaped itself" again, and he went over the saddle and pitched earthward somewhere in the vicinity of the front wheel. He got up after extricating his legs from the machine, with which they seemed considerably mixed up, and leveled his optic at me to see what effect his first attempt had on me. But I was sober as a judge, and he at once set about a second attempt. This time he succeeded in getting into the saddle, but the wheel had no motion. He kicked wildly about for an instant, while that awful wobble which presages coming disaster was going on, in a vain endeavor to get his feet on the pedals, and then—over went wheel and man with a crash that sent his stiff hat flying across the yard, and made things jingle generally. He got up slowly and rubbed one of his hips, and seemed lost in contemplation as he righted up his refractory steed of steel. Evidently he was pondering over the cause of his failure, for presently his face brightened, and he went at it again, as if he saw his way clear now. He got in position, got his left foot in place, gave a start, and after getting well under motion, essayed to mount. He got into the saddle all right, and this success so elated him that he forgot the pedals, and the first thing he knew he was flat on his back again, with his new stiff hat crushed into hopeless flatness under him. He lay there so long without stirring that I began to think the breath had been jarred out of him by his fall, but I think now that he was getting "the old Adam" under control before he dared trust himself on his feet. Presently he picked himself up stiffly, and set the wheel on its feet again with a jerk that showed he owed it a grudge. Then he took off his coat with an expression of grim resolution on his face that meant "no or die" and business began again.

"More attempts and more failures followed in quick succession. I have always felt that he must have been a strong believer in the theory of the "final perseverance of the saints," for he certainly persevered with a persistence that showed his "staying qualities" admirably. By and by he took off his vest. Presently cuffs and collar were discarded, and had any other portion of his raiment been removable without violating the rules of propriety I am confident that he would have divested himself of it. He had failed, so far, in the accomplishment of his undertaking, but he was determined not to be conquered by a thing without brains, and he was stripping himself for mortal combat.

"He seemed to have forgotten my presence. And I lay back in the hammock and laughed so much that my sides were sore than his body was next day, I verily believe."

"I think he kept it up for at least three hours. Once in a while he had to pause and take breath. His clothes were wet with sweat. The perspiration ran down his face in little rivulets. But he was not yet ready to acknowledge defeat. He tried that wheel from all quarters. He sidraddled the seat and tried to get under headway by walking fip-toe and getting up motion in that way preparatory to getting control of the pedals. Then he got on the horse block, and tried to mount from that position. Just about half the time, as nearly as I could calculate, he was either on his face or his back in the dust, or getting on his feet. Once in a while I saw him rubbing what I presumed to be bruised places on his anatomy, and I noticed that he was evidently getting stiffer, rapidly, as the encounter of mind and matter went on."

By and by he sat down on the horse block and seemed in deep thought. He looked that wheel over from all points. He pushed it back and forth, far enough to make the pedals go around once and made calculations as to the position they ought to be in at the moment when the foot took them. Then he roused himself for the final encounter.

He decided to make this attack from the rear. He took hold of the handle bars, got the pedals in such a position that when the right one had made one revolution it would be about where his foot would strike it when on the down grade, provided all else went well, and then he was ready for the trial. He started, he made the leap, he came down squarely in the saddle, and, oh victory! his right foot caught the pedal at the proper time and he went ahead without going over. He seemed to feel that he had conquered at last, for he gave a little whoop of exultation, but just at that instant the front wheel began to kick and wobble in that utterly depraved way peculiar to front wheels at times, and the more he tried to steady it the more uncontrollable it got. It seemed to have the St. Vitus dance. At this time his right foot was clinging to the pedal with a deadly desperation, while his left one was flying wildly around in space to find the pedal on that side of the machine, while he was going ahead with staccato and quivering shifts to all points of the compass. Then, all at once, the entire machine seemed to lift itself up as a knot for a moment, then sat burked like a man for all the world, and the poor man was pitched head first into a great clump of bull thistles. They smothered him terribly, but he ought to have been thankful that they were there, for they broke the force of his fall."

He lay there so long that I began to be alarmed, and went to his assistance. But before I reached him he struggled to his feet, corkscrewed me with a glare of awful intensity, but said not a word. He seized the iron rent-looking wheel and dragged it to the veranda in a series of vindictive jerks, and deposited it there in splendor. Then he glanced at me again, but not a word escaped his lips. I have always thought he dared not trust himself to speak, for fear he would give utterance to some of the thoughts that "arose in him."

The next day his nose had a great black and blue spot on it, and was swollen to twice its usual size. There was a bruise on one cheek, another on his neck and this scratches all over his face. He walked with great dignity—or difficulty—and seemed subject to twinges of rheumatic pain whenever he sat down or got up. I took pity on him and hired a man to take him to his afternoon appointment. He never even looked at the poor wheel after that. He utterly ignored us existence.—New York Ledger.

MRS. PETERSON'S STORY.

I have suffered with womb trouble over fifteen years. I had inflammation, enlargement and displacement of the womb. The doctor wanted me to take treatments, but I had just begun taking Mrs. Pinkham's Compound, and my husband said I had better wait and see how much good that would do. I was so sick when I began with her medicine, I could hardly be on my feet. I had the backache constantly, also headache, and was so dizzy. I had heart trouble, it seemed as though my heart was in my throat at times choking me. I could not walk around and I could not lie down, for then my heart would beat so fast I would feel as though I was smothering. I had to sit up in bed nights in order to breathe. I was so weak I could not do anything.

I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and can say I am perfectly cured. I do not think I could have lived long if Mrs. Pinkham's medicine had not helped me. Mrs. Joseph Peterson, 513 East St., Warren, Pa.

The Milford-Northville football game at Northville last Friday has created quite a commotion in the sister village. Surely, neither Prof. Rhys or any of the Milford team had any intention of defeating Prof. Rhys or the Northville team. In fact Prof. Rhys was told before the game began that the Milfords were not all High school students. He knew, for instance, that Wells was not, but evidently judging his efficiency by his size, he considered Wells to be a good man to be in the opposing team and allowed the game to begin. These three touchdowns within three minutes, however, were too much for the Northvilles to stand and they threw up the game. There were but very few rounds difference in the aggregate weight of the two teams. This was Milford's first game and as Northville had played several, including a victorious one, with the Northville town team, everyone here was surprised to see them outclassed so easily. Milford Times.

Oh, we guess its all right enough only as we said the Northvilles, didn't know the blamed thing was loaded. However, Prof. Rhys had reason to expect that at least one or two of the Milford team were High school pupils.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD FOR MICHIGANDERS.

Father and Son Sentenced to Life Imprisonment and Another Man Gets Two Years for a Murder at Gladwin. Ionia Man Sent Up to Life.

Three to Expire a Dastardly Murder. The murderer of Curtis Wright, who was shot down at his own home near Gladwin, have finally been brought to justice. Roy Nunn, aged 17, and his father, Benjamin Nunn, were sentenced to life imprisonment at Jackson. George Martell, accessory after the fact, received two years. When sentenced was pronounced, Benjamin Nunn broke down and wept, but Roy maintained his usual indifference.

The murder was committed on the night of July 10. But feeling had existed between the Nunn and Wright families for some time, and Roy, who made two different confessions, charged that his father coerced the crime, but he fired the fatal shot. Afterward he alleged that his father did the firing. The old man strenuously denied his guilt and there are many who think he has received a severe dose. Martell confessed that he tried to shield the boy after the crime, but denied being directly concerned in it.

Murder in the First Degree. The trial of Wesley Bennett for the murder of Moses Walker, near Ionia, resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree. There was a manmur over the court room, but neither Bennett nor his two sisters flinched in the least. The convicted murderer was then ordered into the custody of the sheriff. He coolly kissed his sisters and was led to jail to await sentence.

The robbery which resulted in Walker's death was caused by Lydia Vivian Walker's niece, who was engaged to marry Bennett. A sore feud existed between Walker and Bennett and on the day of the tragedy Bennett drove up to Walker's to see the Lydia Vivian, but the niece came out and hurled a stone at Bennett, who pulled a revolver and fired two bullets into him. Bennett had boasted many times that he had just as soon butcher Walker as a hog.

Later Bennett has been sentenced to life imprisonment.

An Important Decision. The last legislative change of the time for selling lands delinquent for taxes, from the first Monday in May to the first Tuesday in December, and to extend the old law providing that the sale shall continue from day to day until so much of each parcel shall be sold as shall be sufficient to pay the amount due. In response to the bill the clerk reported that the well known "shall" had been struck from the bill. In this change the bill was approved. Atty. Gen. McQuinn filed an opinion in which he holds that the "shall" should be stricken, and the result of the decision is that the bill is now in force.

Before Johnson came to Michigan 30 years ago, he was employed by a man named Harris, who owned these oyster beds. Johnson was a great favorite with Harris, who had no blood relatives living. Johnson has gone to Maryland to prove his claim.

Gen. Weyler Threatened With Court-martial—Spain Tells Uncle Sam that She'll do as She Pleases with Cuba.

Spain Will Court-martial Weyler. Madrid. At a meeting of the Spanish cabinet it was decided to demand an explanation from Gen. Weyler of the remarks he made in his farewell address on leaving Havana, and if the confessions he made are not satisfactory, the words attributed to Gen. Weyler are, in part, as follows: "My release from my post and responsibilities did not surprise me. I had expected it from the death of Senor Canovas, not believing that any political leader would be strong enough to sustain me when the United States and the rebels were together constantly demanding that Spain should come to a settlement."

Havana: The steamer Monserat, on which Gen. Weyler sailed for Spain, reached Gibraltar on the northwest coast of Cuba with her engines disabled, and may be compelled to return to Havana, in which case it is likely that there will be interesting developments.

England and France Having Trouble. The situation between Great Britain and France was viewed in England as decidedly serious, and a conflict between the troops of the two countries in West Africa is daily expected. Lord Salisbury has taken a decided stand, ordering the British troops to hold the territory belonging to the United Kingdom at all hazards, and has addressed a decidedly "stiff" note to the French government on the subject.

The English press is wrathful at the abandonment of the Nile expedition, and denounce the ministry for not recapturing the Sudan and vindicating Gordon. The Dons are Real Sassy to Uncle Sam. Madrid. The Spanish cabinet has decided to reply to the United States minister's acknowledgment of receipt of the Spanish note in reply to the representations of the United States on the subject of Cuba, in a guarded manner, and in reference to granting autonomy to Cuba, Spain will do what she deems fit. It is also understood that the Spanish government is determined in the case of the American schooner, Competitor, captured in Cuban waters in April, 1897, to act correctly in making the capture of the schooner, and that the protocol of 1877, under the terms of which the United States demanded the release of the Competitor, was solely referred to American citizens residing in Cuba.

An Aerial Battleship for Cuba. Lieut. Kungel, an ex-officer of the German army who lives in Hoboken, N. Y., thinks he has invented a successful air battleship. The affair is a combination of the balloon, flying machine, steam locomotive and bomb thrower. It has the power to raise itself from the ground, and is so constructed that after raising up it can be lowered again by the action of the engines without allowing the gas to escape. Every part of the ship is composed of aluminum. Should the ship drop into the sea it would float. The inventor believes that the ship which he has constructed would free Cuba in the space of a week. He would use it to drop bombs in the midst of Spanish strongholds and on Spanish warships.

The Sugar Beet Growing Experiments in the United States.

The report of the secretary of agriculture is unusually important this year because of the efforts Secretary Wilson has been making to increase the exports of agricultural products and still further stimulate the cultivation of sugar beets. He has a firm conviction that the people of the United States can provide their own sugar, without being dependent upon Cuba or any foreign country for their supplies. The production of cane sugar must always be limited, but the capacity of the United States for the production of beet sugar is practically unlimited, and with this object of ascertaining the most favorable localities for its growth, Secretary Wilson distributed seven tons of imported sugar-beet seeds among 22,000 farmers in 27 states. The returns have been far beyond his most sanguine expectations, and to his gratification, the most favorable results have been obtained from those sections of the United States where new industries were demanded for the farmer and where the manufacture of beets into sugar can be accomplished with the greatest economy as to labor and transportation.

19 LIVES LOST IN A STORM.

Steamer Idaho, of the Western Transit Line (New York Central) foundered in eight fathoms of water at 1:30 a. m. off Long Point in Lake Erie. This point juts out into the lake from the Canadian shore about 35 miles west of Buffalo, and its vicinity has been the scene of many disasters. The Idaho, commanded by Capt. A. S. Gillies, of Buffalo, and having on board a crew of 21, all dead, left Buffalo laden with package freight for Milwaukee. A strong southwest gale was blowing at the time and the weather office had storm signals up for the lake.

Capt. Gillies thought he could weather the gale and headed straight up the lake. Shortly after passing Long Point he discovered his mistake and tried to run for shelter. The sea was running very high at the time and in turning the Idaho shipped a big sea, which quickly quenched the fire, and the boat was helpless in the trough of the sea. The captain and crew were lowering the lifeboat when the seamer gave a lurch and went down on her side, stern first, taking the lifeboat with her.

Two of the crew, Lewis La Force, second mate, and Wm. Gil, of Rochester, a deckhand, managed to reach the top of a single spar that stood above the water. There the crew hung until eight hours later, when they were discovered by the outlook on the steamer Mariposa of the Minnesota line. The effort of those on board the Mariposa to rescue the two men, involved the greatest possible danger. The sea was running very high and lifeboats could not be launched. Lines were thrown to the two men, but their arms and legs had stiffened from the spar and they could do nothing to help themselves. The Mariposa ran as close to the spar as possible and efforts were made to grasp the men while passing. This was repeated several times and with success at last.

The Idaho was an old boat, having been built in 1863. She went out of commission several years ago, but was overhauled this year and put to work again. She was 220 feet long and had a gross tonnage of 1,120. The captain of the ill-fated steamer Alexander Gillies, was one of the most widely known of lake seamen. He was 41 years old and knew the lake waters like a book.

Three Men and Horses Drown at Atoms. At Pine Fork, Wetzel county, W. Va., William Conn, of Cuba, N. Y., drove to the nitro-glycerine magazine with a two-horse wagon to get 100 gal of nitro-glycerine to erect some buildings on the site which he had supervised. While he was inside another two-horse wagon with two men in it, who have not been identified, drove up before these strangers alighted, the wagon blew up with a report, killed all over who were in a piece of a man's leg. All three horses were killed, but the men were saved. When the magazine blew down a deep crater was formed, and a large quantity of nitro-glycerine was blown within a radius of half a mile.

When the thrower wishes to use it, he grasps the thong in the middle with his finger and thumb, whirls the weight around his head two or three times, and then, with a peculiar twist, flings it at its mark in such a manner that the two balls travel parallel to each other, with the thong stretched out between them.
