BEFORE HURT

The Plymouth Mail Man Is Badly Scared Just Now.

HALF A COLUMN OF FABRICATION AND IGNORANCE.

Claims This End of the Town Is Showing Greed.

Calls a Halt in the Matter of New Township Bridges.

The Plymouth Mail has issued its ultimatum in the matter of township bridges. We had expected it but not before the meeting of congress. It is sudden as it is startling. Hear it!

"Our little suburban town of Northville should get credit for being shrewd, if for nothing else. As all are aware the division of the township takes effect April 1, 1898, and in order to make this end of the township bear the expense, they are doing their utmost to get all old bridges repaired, and to get all new ones built before the division takes effect."

"The latter part of this is their plan to bridge the I. & P. R. as hasty, meaning of which was made last week, and it is only another illustration of your greed, but they need not trust we will fall for it and give the mail credit for. No, there can't be any trouble in the township if it divides, then hate it. The township safe enough now, much more so than others along the line, and we feel safe in saying that the bridge will not be built this year on the order of the railroad company board."

"For the sake of agreement we are always ready to lend a helping hand, but if he comes to taking advantage of us—then we'll make money out of our own pockets and bring it into a net profit for the town. All we want is gentlemen to be here, and that we will have."

In the first place the Mail gentleman know what he is talking about and secondly if he did know, he would surely be uttering a lot of fabrications.

The township board is at present constituted with clippings (variously with the integrity and honesty of purpose of the average Plymouth man). This board, like its predecessors for so long a time back, has been doing its "utmost" to get all the bridges in the township, regardless of location, in the safest condition possible with the most economical use of the tax-payers' money. One has only to look over the township reports for a few years back to find that about seventy per cent of the bridge fund has been expended in what will be the township of Plymouth and that all the bridges in that end are now all substantial iron structures. During last year alone some $6,000 was expended for iron bridges in the Plymouth end, with the Miller bridge near the line, & the Benton bridge near Northville. We have long been considered unsafe and there is not a tax-payer in the township, with ordinary intelligence, but concedes the small expenditure of placing these two bridges in a safe condition this year was wise.

As for the overhead railroad bridge, Plymouth people (or at least the Mail man) are again scared before they are built." When the bridge is built over the F. & P. M. tracks here it will be with little or no expense to any taxpayer of the township, much less to those of the south end. However the township board will not ask the Mail what it can or cannot have, no matter whether it will "sit idly by" or not. The Mail says the "railroad crossing board" will not order it built. The Mail man has evidently interviewed "Civil Engineer" Saunders of the F. & P. M. who is as much of an engineer as Wedemeyer is a "secretary of the railroad crossing board," and the giving of these handles to those persons' names is on par with the ignorance manifested by the Mail all through the above article.

The matter of this overhead bridge is in the hands of Commissioner Bentou and it is safe to say that he is capable of managing it in such a satisfactory manner that it will be unnecessary for the town board to commit further acts of highway robbery upon the pocketbooks of the south-end tax-payers. The Mail closes by demanding "justice." If everybody had justice, it is safe to say there would be necessity for hundreds of additional jails and prisons in Michigan. What most people crave for is mercy.

Fred Ohr had a funny experience one night last week and even yet he wonders if it were not all a dream. The occasion was one of his periodical visits to his best girl in the vicinity of the Rider settlement. The last goodbye had been said (for the eleventh time) and Fred started to return, when he found his horse absent from the accustomed hitching post. He quickly sounded the burglar alarm and roused Carl Ash, neighboring farmer, from his pleasant dreams and together they searched for hours, driving three miles or more, among the deep and dark recesses of Salem farm lands for the missing property. Giving up the quest they returned to the Rider home and going to the barn found the missing animal tied on the barn floor as snug as a kitten. The was gritting of teeth and some short, crisp German words as the horse was backed out and started for home, and all this time the perpetrator of the joke was perched up in the windmill near the barn enjoying the fun.

LECTURE COURSE.

THE OTHER FIVE DATES ARE NOW ANNOUNCED.

List Comprises Hathaway, Ferris, McCleary, Wood and the Stars.

The C. E. lecture course committee is now prepared to announce the balance of their program. The speakers are among the best in the state. Following are the dates:

Nov. 30, Fred Hathaway of Flint.

Jan. 10, W. N. Ferris, Big Rapids.

Feb. 21, Thos. McCleary, Minn.

Mar. 14, Morgan L. Wood, Toronto.

April 4, Boston Stars.

In securing this talent the committee has been to no little trouble and expense, somewhat beyond the amount guaranteed by the sale of season tickets—and will depend to some extent upon the regular admission attendance to help out the deficiency. The course is a good one, in fact far above the average in the way of talent. The attendance should be in keeping with it

SAW-A MAN.

Mrs. Long's Girl Did One Night Last Week.

Mrs. Bell Long's hired girl was given a surprise party all by herself last week Friday night. She was alone in the house at the time, all the other members of the household being at the picture. She says about 9 o'clock she heard some one step quickly upon the stoop, fit a key in the front door and then walked in without as much as "by your leave." Thinking it was one of the boarders or some of the family she paid no attention to the intruder until he said "what are you doing?" The young girl looks up and was rather startled to find herself confronted by an ultra stranger. She is of medium height and she replied "Mrs. Long sent me up here to see what you were doing?" "I'm the girl," says he passed on through the house and out the back door. Nothing was disturbed about the house and the identity of the visitor or the nature of his visit is still shrouded in mystery. Of course Mrs. Long had sent no one to the house but the girl is positive of the visit, of the word of the visitor used that she was not dreaming.

On the Bridge at Midnight.

With propitiatory to Henry W.

I stood on the bridge at midnight, as the clock was striking the hour, and I heard the tolling warble, a tone of ten horse power, and I heard those voices rushing over the bridge in the Argon dam, and I listened, two men passed me, in zig-zag, as tight as a clam.

And I thought, how many, oh, how many of thusly encumbered men, have passed over the bridge at midnight unconscious or where or when. Then my thoughts turned toward the distance, as my eyes glanced over the deep, and I could see by the aid of the moonlight a scene that caused me to weep.

When one stands alone at midnight, on a bridge, over a dam for a mill, with thoughts to disturb his thinking, save the ghost of his last wash will he will think, yes he'll think of his first love, and the first pair of pants that he wore, and every body knows that there's nothing that will make the heart more sore.

But the sounds of footsteps disturbed me, and I lost the drift of my thinking, and I watched for the object approaching, with considerable winking and blinking. It was not long ere I saw it duly, neath the shade trees far over the deep, and it was hard to decide the question, "Is it a man, or a goat, or a sheep?"

But soon the sky became clearer, as the moon shone out in the dark. And I saw that 'twas only a policeman making his beat in the park. I watched, and I saw him meander to and fro over those nice graveled walks, and I saw him pluck a bouquet off the numerous posy stalks.

Then I saw him at the base of the fountain, where the water squirts high in the air, and I imagined he must be drinking in this scene of vanity fair. Then I saw him standing, beside those mighty huge rocks that are safe from those who would plunder, and need neither bolt nor locks.

Then I saw him sampling the shade trees, and rustle 'mong the leaves as they fell, and I saw him examine the band stand with a grin that is hard to tell. Then I saw him bend over the railing that divides the park from the lake, and gaze on the lake and its wavelets, with a smile that was hard to mistake.

Then I saw him snuggly nestled, in one of those bronze settees, that are placed here and there on the lawns, among the signs that look and say "please." Then I meandered back to my room, when the moon had gone down, and 'twas dark, and slept, with a head very dizzy, after contemplating Northville's lake and park.

The butcher was terribly bent up over the affair, but the horse got out, before he was served the same way. —Adrian Press.

Railroad Economy

The Baltimore and Ohio South-Western Railway has been experimenting with electric motors on turn-tables. Turning locomotives at divisional points and terminals is a service of much annoyance and no little expense to railroad companies. It generally takes four men to turn a locomotive, and while they are doing so their regular work is abandoned.

Experiments were made with an electric motor on the 66-foot turn-table at Callicleone with such success that the Park Street turn-table in Cincinnati was similarly equipped. The result has been rather astonishing in the matter of expense. The current was purchased from the power plant, and it cost on an average of less than one-half a cent for each time the table was turned. When this same table was operated by hand it cost 12 cents for each engine. The yearly saving is about $763.

THOMPSON'S AUNT.

I AD seated myself comfortably in my section of a parlor car for a ride of nearly 300 miles, and was cutting the pages of two of my favorite magazines, when Thompson, who is one of those exasperating creatures who mean well, came dash-ing into the car, loaded to his chin with boxes and bundles, while a bird cage containing a jackdaw, dangled from his fingers. Behind him came a small, thin, ascetic-looking woman with iron-gray curly hair and glittering black eyes. She had a huge bouquet of red roses, yellow marigolds, crimson Princess feathers, and purple petunias combined with striped grass, and "live-for-ever" and that plant causing odor called "old man." The moment Thompson saw me he called out at the top of his voice:

"Hi! Hawkins, that you? Well, if this isn't luck! Been wishing there'd be some one in the car I knew, on Aunt Jane's account! And her section is right next to yours, too! That's great! Aunt Jane, this is, Hawkins—Joe Hawkins, you've heard me speak of him!"

"Don't know as I have," said Aunt Jane, without looking toward me. "Look out, Will Thompson. You're bringing that bird cage around awful recklessly. That bird will get out first thing you know!"

She had the most penetrating voice I ever heard.

"Now, Hawkins will look after you, Auntie, and be glad to do it," said Thompson as he began to unload in her section. "Going far, Hawkins?"

"Nearly 300 miles."

"Good! Now, Auntie, you will have company all the way. Hawkins is going as far as you are, Auntie, and he'll see you through all right. He's a regular ladies' man, anyhow. Come to attend to the ladies Ha-ha! Come sit right in the section with Auntie and get acquainted, Hawkins."

"I'm afraid I'll be crowding her."

"Oh, do plenty of room. Come on."

"Hold that, please," said Aunt Jane, in a tone of command, as I sat down beside her and she deposited a large wicker basket with a cover on my knees and thrust the bouquet with its deadly odor under the handle of the basket. There was a sound of scratching and snarling from within the basket and Aunt Jane opened briefly.

"Got a two-thirds Arizona cat in that basket that my niece's sister-in-law gave me."

"I'm afraid I'll be crowding her."

Thoughts!

As your thoughts yesterday turned to Turkey.
Our thoughts today are about Stamped Linens.

If You are going to embroider a fine Centerpiece, Doiley, Tray Cloth, Pillow Shams, Laundry Bag, Scarf, or any other useful fancy work, it is about time to commence such work, to be able to finish without hurrying, before Christmas.

Stamped Doileys, in Duck, Union Linen, all linen, ex. fine Linen. Priced from 2c up, according to size. Come and spend an hour and see the pretty designs.

Filo Sille, Double Filo, Roman, Twisted and Rope Silk in stock. We especially recommend Brainard & Armstrong Wash Silks.

The Cloak Sales

Are right lively these days. There's no doubt, our prices and styles, are correct.

This week we offer a new arrival, made of black boucle, with 2 wide Kersey straps down the front and over the pockets, all lined with satin serge.

(We have seen no leather coat advertised as worth $12)

Our Special Price... $7.50.

Have you seen the Baby Cloaks we sell at $1.50? They are splendid for the price. Colors, tan, red, cream. All are for trimmed; all sizes, and the price only $1.50.

Ladies' Capes.

Don't you think of someone who would like a Cape with quite a lot of style and warmth to it, that don't cost much? We have some of this kind, and the price 75c, $1.25, $1.75, $2.00 and $3.00, is pretty cheap for the garments we have to sell, at those prices.

The second shipment of December "Standard Designers" has arrived. Those who did not get supplied from the first lot, can buy one now. The Magazine costs 10c a copy, 50c a year.

Standard Patterns 5c to 25c, none higher, none better.

As a result of some personal work and letters by Erwin Harrison the attendance at the G. E meeting Sunday night was about twice as large as usual.

Rev. Mr. Ward delivered his lecture, "The Light of Galilee" at Gaines last week and on Dec. 7 he delivers it at Mt. Morris. It is very favorably spoken of by those who have heard it.

M. N. Johnson, clerk in the county treasurer's office, is obliged to stay in Detroit these days, during the collection of taxes on account of the largely increased business of the office.

The Northville Opera House orchestra is "split in twain" as it were, this week. Last night one section of it played for a hop at Waite Lake, another at Clarenceville, while a third went to Sand Hill.

In renewing his subscription Charles N. Johnson writes us from Brooklyn, N. Y. that he has had a prosperous season, paying over $3,000 for grain and potatoes, besides 50 tons of hay and 50 tons of Hungarian grass.

Coupon orders for King's Daughters cook books came this week from far away as New York and Montana, besides a number from all parts of Michigan. It is not often that an opportunity of getting a valuable book for 10-cents is offered.

Of his lecture on Alaska the Detroit Free Press says, "Fred Hathaway is a man of observing eye and did not allow his trip to go for naught. He has some interesting and little known information regarding the great north western territory of the United States."

The Passion Play lecture, the first number of the lecture course series by Mrs. Noble last week Friday night was a most enjoyable affair. Mrs. Noble is an artist in the way of oratory, and her description of the great play was vivid and interesting. The attendance was large.

In speaking of the numerous signs of "Hunting Forbidden" posted along the various farms throughout this and adjoining counties the farmers say that it is not the protection of game they are after but it is to save their fences from being torn down and stock shot by reckless sportsmen. Past experiences show their fears to be well grounded.

Business matters in Northville have now expanded in all directions until there is not a vacant building or room to be had for any kind of merchandising in the whole village.—Northville Record.

One glance at the advertising columns of the Record tells the same story. 328 of the 480 inches of that paper are filled with lively local advertisements. No wonder Northville does lots of business.—Ypsilanti.

B. A. Northrop is to be congratulated in the way he has fixed up the rick since it came into his possession. Beside ceiling and painting it both inside and out he has put in a new partition, a new entrance, new lamps, new stairs, new dressing rooms, and now he proposes to add a new gallery across the south end, and a new furnace for heating instead of the old barn of former days the dancing hall now presents rather an attractive appearance.

The premium list for the first annual poultry exhibit at Northville has been received. It was issued from the office of the Record and is a credit to the printer. The date of the show is Dec. 6 to 11.—Milford Times.

As usual the O. E. S. party given Wednesday night was a delightful affair, over fifty couples indulging in the fantastic tripping while a number of others were present as spectators. The society will net something over $30 from the receipts.

Yesterday evening the club of ladies known as the "U. T." had one of their usually jolly gatherings at the home of Mrs. M. A. Whittemore. This was sort of a farewell party in honor of one of their members, Mrs. R. C. Yerkes, who has returned to her old home at Northville. As a pleasant surprise for Mrs. Yerkes, her sister, Mrs. W. C. Yerkes of Northville, was present to partake of the fun and hospitality. A supper of old-fashioned viands served in old-fashioned style was a feature that added to the evening's pleasure.

MICHIGAN NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD FOR MICHIGANDERS.

A Young Man in a Moment of Anger Kills His Father and Himself.

A Big Timber Fire near Saginaw.

Farmers with Money Disappear.

A Parrot and a Sutler.

Henry Kammerer, aged 30, shot and killed his father, John Kammerer, aged 70, set fire to a shed and then committed suicide.

The Kammerers were well-to-do farmers a mile from Millburg, Berrien county, and father and son were plowing when a tilling dispute arose and the son struck the father with a stone.

A reprimand from the old man angered the son who went to a shed in the rear of the house and procured a repeating rifle. Just as his father entered the house he shot him twice—in the heart and in the stomach—and then turned the rifle on himself, but the bullet, which plowed completely through him, failed to do its work.

By this time the old man was again on his feet and the son, with blood oozing from a wound in his breast, again shot his father, who stood pleading with him for mercy.

The sawmills of Tawas City have not run a day this season, but preparations are being made to operate the present mill next year. The capacity of this mill is 15,000,000 feet.

The body of a one-legged man washed ashore near Harbor and was identified by J. A. Peckett of Columbia City, Ind., as his father, who had been missing since Oct. 24.

Rev. George H. Hickox, for 25 years chaplain of the Michigan state prison at Jackson, and who resigned last October because of failing health, died from a stroke of paralysis at his home at Warren, which can be bought for $140,000.

A well-to-do farmer, Albin Havens, committed suicide by hanging himself to a tree in his orchard near Grass Lake, where he had lived for more than 40 years. He leaves a widow and three children.

Wm. Bowen, a farmer, was locked up at Howard City for drunkenness. An hour later the jail as discovered to be in flames. Bowen had set the building on fire, and he narrowly escaped cremation.

Elias Pierson and Alfred Rehmann, well-known citizens of Flint, were forcibly ejected from the English church there because they persist in airing some rather erratic religious views during their services.

Miner Striking at Houghton.

The Great mine at Houghton is the scene of a strike which may affect all subsequent operations. striking miners, 1,400 in number, all Finns, have been joined by 600 Polish miners.

The strike-speaking miners who amount to one half of the nominal underground force, and cannot keep the mine operating to advantage, let us what they object to doing their own罢工, may also quit work. Sup. Stanton will add adhesion to any demands made by the strikers. Returns are on the ground to the the miners of the U.S. miners but have been warned that they will be fired if they attempt to strike the miners.

Later—the miners have returned to work. The miners will be concerned in advance of a great growth.

It is reported that the miners are engaged in a strike, and that the miners will go back to work. The miners will be concerned in advance of a great growth.

Wm. W. Second, aged 70, was picked up near Belle, where he was attempting to get away from the burning train. He was not found until two months ago to Miss Maggie Purser, one of the relatives of the deceased. They quarreled and she went to her parents home.

"A meeting of the national conservative union at London, a delegate announced that he had received a letter from a celebrity in the West Indies in which it was predicted that before long the West Indies will seek annexation to the United States.

It is reported that Charles T. Yerkes, the street railway magnate, has purchased a continuing interest in the Chicago Inter Ocean and George Hammill, of the New York Sun will take control of the paper. The present managing editor, Wm. Penn Non, is to be appointed collector of the port of Chicago.

James R. Sawyer, aged 39, a pioneer of Racine county, Wis., was found dead in his room at the Thompson house in Union Grove. When discovered the body was kneeling and the hands open, indicating that the hands were praying when the end came.

Harry Phalen, a well-known Detroit newspaper publisher, disappeared May 1 and no trace had been found of him until the news was received that he had been found dead in the basement of the Standard, south of Atlantic.

Wm. W. Second, aged 70, was picked up near Belle, where he was attempting to get away from the burning train. He was not found until two months ago to Miss Maggie Purser, one of the relatives of the deceased.

Mr. Math. Turner of Flint, N.Y., while on a visit to his son, ex-Ald. Turner, at Battle Creek, received a letter which recalled the fact that she had a brother, Albert Sherburne, living at Allegan. Mr. Turner wrote to him and the brother and sister had a reunion after 52 years of separation.

Mrs. Turner is now 74 years of age and Mr. Sherburne 63 years.

Angus McCallum, while drilling a well on Joseph Hudson's farm five miles east of Marlette, tried to lay some frozen dynamite. Three cartridges exploded, and McCallum's hands were torn into shreds, rendering amputation necessary.

A young man standing about 20 feet away had his arm badly cut. The shock broke windows in the house and barn and tore off pieces of siding from the house.

George Hart, a young farmer living near Meridian station, Ingham county, was shot and killed by John Burgess, aged 19, through a mistake. Hart was engaged to Burgess' sister, thought he would play a joke on him. So he dressed himself up as a cowboy with pistols and knives and a slouch hat, and poked his head in at the door, asking for something to eat. It was refused and Burgess grabbed a gun when Hart pushed into the room and shot him in the head.

Edward E. Vanoy, aged 22, a blacksmith, attempted to murder Neilia Scitman, aged 19, and her brother Bert at Bear Creek, 12 miles north of Grand Rapids. He had been courting the girl, but she did not reciprocate. The girl was shot in the abdomen and her brother received a bullet in the leg. After the shooting Bert jumped into Vanoy's buggy to drive for help. The horse at once ran away, and the wounded man was thrown headlong against a stump, which injured him more seriously than did the bullet. Vanoy says he intended to kill the girl and himself, but became panic-stricken.

Further discoveries made by the police of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, coupled with a written confession by Mello, the soldier who tried to kill President Moraes leave no doubt the attempt on the President's life was the result of a gigantic conspiracy headed by many men who hold high offices under the government. Several more arrests have been made, and all the prisoners are kept in close confinement. Senor Manuel Estrela, nephew of the Governor of Bahia, who was arrested in connection with the conspiracy, committed suicide in prison.

Train robbery is now a capital offense in Missouri. It has long been regarded as a capital idea by some Missouri citizens.

Miss Maude Gondey is by no means the first pretty Irish girl that has come to the U.S. but few of them have had an enthusiastic reception.

Miner Striking at Houghton.

The Great mine at Houghton is the scene of a strike which may affect all subsequent operations. striking miners, 1,400 in number, all Finns, have been joined by 600 Polish miners.

The strike-speaking miners who amount to one half of the nominal underground force, and cannot keep the mine operating to advantage, let us what they object to doing their own罢工, may also quit work. Sup. Stanton will add adhesion to any demands made by the strikers. Returns are on the ground to the the miners of the U.S. miners but have been warned that they will be fired if they attempt to strike the miners.

Later—the miners have returned to work. The miners will be concerned in advance of a great growth.

It is reported that the miners are engaged in a strike, and that the miners will go back to work. The miners will be concerned in advance of a great growth.

Wm. W. Second, aged 70, was picked up near Belle, where he was attempting to get away from the burning train. He was not found until two months ago to Miss Maggie Purser, one of the relatives of the deceased.

Mr. Math. Turner of Flint, N.Y., while on a visit to his son, ex-Ald. Turner, at Battle Creek, received a letter which recalled the fact that she had a brother, Albert Sherburne, living at Allegan. Mr. Turner wrote to him and the brother and sister had a reunion after 52 years of separation.

Mrs. Turner is now 74 years of age and Mr. Sherburne 63 years.

New Michigan postmasters: Fisher's Station, Kent county, Cornelius Quint, vice E. J. Mansfield, removed. Moline, Allegan county, Edwin C. Nevins, vice W. W. Pierce, removed. Goodbarbor, Leelanau county, Benj. Minster, vice E. J. Schomberg, removed. Orono, Oscoda county Wm. Tuttle, vice W. E. Haybarker, removed. The present master has appointed John D. Shull postmaster at Tecumseh.

Angus McCallum, while drilling a well on Joseph Hudson's farm five miles east of Marlette, tried to lay some frozen dynamite. Three cartridges exploded, and McCallum's hands were torn into shreds, rendering amputation necessary.

A young man standing about 20 feet away had his arm badly cut. The shock broke windows in the house and barn and tore off pieces of siding from the house.

George Hart, a young farmer living near Meridian station, Ingham county, was shot and killed by John Burgess, aged 19, through a mistake. Hart was engaged to Burgess' sister, thought he would play a joke on him. So he dressed himself up as a cowboy with pistols and knives and a slouch hat, and poked his head in at the door, asking for something to eat. It was refused and Burgess grabbed a gun when Hart pushed into the room and shot him in the head.

Edward E. Vanoy, aged 22, a blacksmith, attempted to murder Neilia Scitman, aged 19, and her brother Bert at Bear Creek, 12 miles north of Grand Rapids. He had been courting the girl, but she did not reciprocate. The girl was shot in the abdomen and her brother received a bullet in the leg. After the shooting Bert jumped into Vanoy's buggy to drive for help. The horse at once ran away, and the wounded man was thrown headlong against a stump, which injured him more seriously than did the bullet. Vanoy says he intended to kill the girl and himself, but became panic-stricken.

Further discoveries made by the police of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, coupled with a written confession by Mello, the soldier who tried to kill President Moraes leave no doubt the attempt on the President's life was the result of a gigantic conspiracy headed by many men who hold high offices under the government. Several more arrests have been made, and all the prisoners are kept in close confinement. Senor Manuel Estrela, nephew of the Governor of Bahia, who was arrested in connection with the conspiracy, committed suicide in prison.

Train robbery is now a capital offense in Missouri. It has long been regarded as a capital idea by some Missouri citizens.

Miss Maude Gondey is by no means the first pretty Irish girl that has come to the U.S. but few of them have had an enthusiastic reception.

ALEXANDER PHILIPPIKOFF.

Philippihoff was found hanging from a small window in the rear of Alexander's hall, at Bay City, where a dance had taken place.

The body was still warm. An inquest will be held. He was intoxicated and probably stood up in his buggy, stuck his head through the window and the horses pulled him off.

Judge Vance in the St. Clair county circuit court made an order granting to James C. Tucker, receiver of the Detroit & St. Clair River railroad, the privilege of issuing $60,000 in receiver's certificates to the first tier on the property of the road. The $60,000 will be used in completing that part of the road between Chesterfield, Macomb county and Algonac, St. Clair county.

T. C. Sturgis, a furniture worker at Grand Rapids, bathed his sprained hand in wood alcohol, then tried to light his pipe. The hand was terribly burned.

Young Monfague, who accidentally shot and killed his step-father, A. A. Wilson, while cleaning a gun, near Howell, was fined $250 for criminal carelessness.

The sawmills of Tawas City have not run a day this season, but preparations are being made to operate the present mill next year. The capacity of this mill is 15,000,000 feet.

The body of a one-legged man washed ashore near Harbor and was identified by J. A. Peckett of Colum-

He knew that at that hour Marjorie would be from home, wandering in the fields, perhaps, with her little boy, or visiting some of her old-village friends. Seeing strong in this hope, he hurried on toward the Castle.

He found Miss Hetherington alone. She was glad to see him, but rated him kindly on what she termed his neglect.

"It is not for me to control ye if ye dinna wish to come; Johnnie Sutherland," she said. "You're your own master, and ye can gang your own gauntlet, but it's scarcely fair to Marjorie. She's lonesome, poor lassie, and she takes it ill that ye come so seldom."

"Miss Hetherington," returned Sutherland, "I stayed away not because I wished, but because I took too much pleasure in coming. I love Marjorie. I've loved her ever since I was a lad, and I shall love her till I die. I couldn't come before, knowing she had a husband, but it's for you to say now whether I may come in or not."

"For me? What do you mean, Johnnie Sutherland?"

For answer he put both the letter and paper in her hand, and bade her read. She did read, eagerly at first, but as she processed her hand trembled, the tears streamed from her eyes and the paper fell from her grasp.

"God forgive me!" she cried. "It's an evil thing to rejoice at the death of a fellow-creature, yet I cannot but rejoice. He broke the heart of my poor bairn, and he tried to crush down me, but Heaven be praised we are both free now. Johnnie Sutherland, you say that you love her?" "Weel, I'm glad You're a good lad. Comfort her if you can, and may God bless ye both."

That very night Marjorie learned the news from Miss Hetherington. The old lady told it with a ring of joy in her voice, but Marjorie listened with a shudder. After all the man was her husband. Despite his cruelty, she had once almost loved him, and, though she could not return him as a widow shuddered, she tried to respect the dead. But it was only for a while; then the cloud lifted, and she almost thanked God that she was free.

Sutherland now became a constant visitor at the Castle, and sometimes it seemed to him and to Marjorie also that their early days had returned; the same yet not the same, for the old Castle looked bright and gaily now, and it was, moreover, presided over by a bright, genial mistress.

Things could not last thus forever. Marjorie knew it; and one evening she was awakened from her strange dream she had been having during the afternoon with her little boy, and as they were walking back toward the Castle they were joined by Sutherland. For a time the three remained walking together, little Leon clinging to Sutherland's hand; but after a while the child ran on to pluck some flowers, and left the two together.

"How he loves you!" said Marjorie, noting the child's backward glance; "I don't think he will ever forget the ride you gave him out, I daresay about at the Champs Elysées—you were very kind to him, you were very kind to us both."

She paused, but he said nothing; presently she raised her eyes and she saw that he was looking fixedly at her. She blushed and turned her head aside, but not gained possession of her hand.

"Marjorie," he said, "you know why I was kind to you, do you not? It was because I loved you, Marjorie. I love you now—I still always love you; tell me, will you some day be my wife?"

The word was spoken, either for good or evil, and he stood like a man awaiting his death sentence. For a time he did not answer, when she turned her face toward him; it was quite calm.

"Have you thought well?" she said. "I am not what I was. I am almost an old woman now, and there is my boy."

"Let him be my boy, Marjorie, do not say 'No'!"

She turned toward him and put both her hands on his.

"I say 'Yes,'" she answered, "with all my heart, but not yet—not yet."

Later on that evening, when little Leon lay peacefully sleeping in his cot, and Miss Hetherington was dozing in her easy-chair, Marjorie, creeping from the house, walked in the Castle grounds to think over her newfound happiness alone. Was it all real, she asked herself, or only a dream? Could it be true that he, after all her troubles, would find so much peace? It seemed strange, yet it must be true—yes, she was free at last.

CHAPTER XXXV.

FTER the confession of her love for Sutherland, and the promise his love had won from her trembling lips, Marjorie was not a little troubled.

Again and again she reproached herself for want of fidelity to Caussiere's memory, for she was tender-hearted, and could not readily forget what the man had once been to her. Infinite is the capacity for forgiveness the old man in the garden, looking intently bright and pale; but his talk was still confused; he mingled the present with the past, and continued to speak of Marjorie, and to address her as if she were still a child.

The sun was setting when they left him, turning their steps toward Annandale Castle. They lingered slowly along the road, talking of indifferent things, and sweetly happy in each other's society, till it was growing dark.

Then Marjorie held out her hand. "Let me go with you to the Castle gate," said Sutherland eagerly.

"Not to-night," answered Marjorie. "Stay, let me walk alone, with only little Leon."

Very unwillingly he acquiesced, and suffered her to depart. He watched her sadly till her figure disappeared in the darkness, moving toward the lonely bridge across the Annan.

Gaving, wished Sutherland, good-night, Marjorie took the child by the hand and walked back across the meadow toward the Castle. It was a peaceful gloaming, the stars were shining brightly, the air was balmy; so she sauntered along, thinking dreamily of the past.

She walked up by the bridge, and looked down at Annan Water, flowing peacefully onward.

As she looked she mused. Her life had begun with trouble, but surely all that was over now. Her days in Paris seemed to be fading rapidly into the dimness of the past; there was a broken link in her chain of experience, that was all. Yes, she would forget it, and remember only the days which she had passed at Annandale.

And yet how could she do so? There was the child, little Leon, who looked at her with her father's eyes, and spoke his childish prattle in tones so like those of the dead man, that they sometimes made her shudder. She lifted the boy in her arms.

"Leon," she said, "do you remember Paris? my child—do you remember your father?"

The child looked at her, and half shrank back in fear. How changed she had become! Her cheeks were burning from her mother's side sadly shook her head.

"I cannot think of it yet," she replied, "I feel it would be sacrilege."

"Sacrifice, say you?" returned Miss Hetherington. "The sacrifice was with a Frenchman, when he beguiled you away, and poisoned your young life, my bairn. You owed him no duty living, and you owe him none dead. He was a small lummer, and hauk God be in his grave!"

"Ah, do not speak ill of him now. It is his sin that has been punished. To thee, so young."

And Marjorie's gentle eyes filled with tears.

"It be passa ripe do you think he would be gathered?" exclaimed Miss Hetherington, with something of her old forcefulness of manner. "My partie, he was ripe and rotten; Lord forgive me for judging the dead! But, Marjorie, my bairn, you're o'er tender-hearsed! Forget the past! Forget everything but the happy future that lies before you! Think you to just a young lass marry for the first time, and marrying as good a lad as ever wad ebbin north o' the Tweed?"

Marjorie rose from her seat, and, walking to the window, looked dreamily down at the Castle garden, still tangled as a mass and overgrown with weeds. As she did so she heard a child's voice, calling in French:

"Maman! Maman!"

It was little Leon, playing in the oil-garden, attended by a scuttling serving maid, who had been taken on in nurse. She saw Marjorie looking down, and looking up with face bright as sunbeams, waved his hands to her in welcome.

"How can I thank as you say?" she said, glancing round at her mother, "when I have no boy to reward me that I am a widow? After all, he's my husband's child—a gift, that makes amends for all my sorrow."

As she spoke she kissed her hand fondly to the child, and looked down at him through streaming tears of love.

"Weel, weel," said the old lady, cooingly, "I'm no saying but that it's weel to forget and forgive. Only your life, must not be wasted. Marjorie! I must see you settled down before I gang."

"You will not leave me, dear mother," answered Marjorie, returning to her side and bending over her. "No, you are well and strong."

"What's that the auld sang says?" returned Miss Hetherington, smoothing the girl's hair with her wrinkled hand, as she repeated thoughtfully:

I hear a voice you cannot hear,
That says I must not stay,
See a hand you cannot see,
That beckons me away."

That's it! Marjorie! I'm an old woman now—old before my time. God has been kind to me, far kinder than I deserve; but the grass will soon be green on my grave, in the kirkyard. Let me sleep in peace! Marry Johnnie Sutherland wi' my blessing, and I shall ken you will never want a friend."

Such tender reasoning had its weight with Marjorie, but it failed to conquer her scruples altogether. She still remained in the shadow of her former sorrow, fearful and ashamed to pass, as she could have done at one step, into the full sunshine of the newer and kinder life.

So the days passed on, till at last there occurred an event so strange, so unexpected, and spirit compelling, that it threatened for a time to drive our heroine into madness and despair.

One summer afternoon Marjorie, accompanied by little Leon, met Sutherland in the village, and walked with him to Solomon's cottage. They found MARRIAGE PROBLEM.

AS VIEWED FROM A SCIENTIFIC STANDPOINT.

Contracting Parties Should Be Equal Socially, Mentally and Morally—Should Be Different in Complexion, Descent and Selfishness.

HE constitution of the human mind indicates that marriage is an intention of nature. If it is nature's intention, then there must be a natural basis for it. Again, man being organized to follow instinct, instead of instinct, becomes his necessity to find this basis. So far as is known each organism in nature has inherent all the laws of its life. Therefore the place to look for the laws of marriage adaptation is in the mental and physical constitutions of the two sexes.

Professor Vaunt, writing in the "Philosophical Magazine," says that he has given sixteen years of study and observation to this problem, and has reached the following conclusion, viz.: That marriage, to be healthy and happy, should rest upon a tenth basis of five qualities and five differences.

Equalities: Social, Intellectual, Aesthetic, Moral, Qualitative.

Differences: Temperamental, Complexional, Lineal, National, Selfish.

As may be seen, the equalities are chiefly mental, and the differences chiefly physical.

The mental differences should occur in two groups only, viz., the selfish propensities and the selfish sentiments.

These are the only two divisions of the mind that can come directly in conflict. The four remaining divisions take delight in helping the other to become more moral and spiritual.

By Qualitative equals equals in organic quality are meant. This is one of the most necessary qualities of the five. As is the degree of organic quality, so will be the degree of the degree of the physical magnetism.

Coarse and fine magnetism cannot possibly agree. If the hands of young ladies and gentlemen disagree magnetically, they should never marry. Similarity in quality is also one of the first requirements of successful transmission, and should receive much more attention than has been given to it heretofore.

The differences should be principally physical. One reason for this is the health of the two parties. An important reason is the constitution of the offspring. Nothing is more certain than that there will be an increasing difference of the predominating temperament of husband and wife in children who both have the same constitution.

The vital temperament should always be rather strong in one of the parties to marriage. If not strong, there is danger of great degeneracy in both mind and body of the offspring. For about the same reasons given for temperamental differences, there should be differences in complexion. If two are intermediate in complexion, they may marry without harm.

The Lineal descent should, in every instance, be different. There can be a marriage only between a male and a female. Nature never intended the marriage of two masculines or two feminines.

So there should not be marriages of the same line of descent. One should be like the father and the other like the mother. One masculine and the other feminine.

A masculine woman should marry a feminine man.

In regard to National differences, it is well to have international differences.

Intero-racial marriages should not be sanctioned, for the reason that they

GOT THE BACKACHE?

If You Have, Here's the Way to Rid Yourself of the Weariness and Pain Attending It.

Some people suffer with headaches, many people are worn out and weary all the time, many more people have lame backs and backs. Few people understand the real cause of their aches and pains yet know how easily they can find a cure. Just a word of explanation before I say what we say is true. The fact is the key-note of the kidneys. If facts—that's a sign that the kidneys are not working properly, it is another sign that they are out of order. The kidneys know the filters of the blood, filters sometimes get clogged up. This means in their case that the blood courses through the entire system impeded with poisonous urea and bringing on many a disorder which, if neglected, might become incurable. And about the cure—Don't take our word for it; read what others say.

Mr. David C. Davis is proprietor of the well-known hardware and paint shop at 229 East Main Street, Kalamazoo, Mich. Davis suffered a great deal from kidney ailments, he described his condition and cure as follows: "I had a bad lame back, which I suppose was caused by my kidneys; I was confined to my bed during bad attacks. I might say, from time to time, I have been in that condition for years. The urinary organs were affected, urine being scanty, highly colored, and difficult in passing. I was in a bad shape when I got a box of Dr. D. King's Pills, about which I had heard. I have used now two boxes of them, and the pills have removed all the pain and trouble. There was marked improvement right from the first, and it has continued right along. Dr. King's Pills bring the right thing in the right place."

AMATEURS AND MATRON PICTURES.

The inventive genius of Nicholas' operator. An acetylene gas outfit, Nelson, a mechanic of Waukegan, Ill., has brought into existence a simple machine that is destined to enthuse devotees of amateur photography.

This machine is to be known as the new motion picture camera, it being a combination arrangement to take motion pictures and also to project them upon screen in a manner similar to the "Kineto" cinematograph, etc.

The fact that it is simple and easily handled, made express for amateur use, and readily operated by any one who can use a common camera, makes it attractive to those who have no previous knowledge of the craft of cameras, etc.

The camera is very simple in its construction, weighing only even in the projection picture, it is especially clear much more than the pictures thrown on the larger in cinematics, for the reason that the glass plate is more transparent than the glass plate used in the ordinary picture camera.

The possibilities of the camera for the amateur are great. One need only to attach the photographic lens to the camera, and project the picture through the lens onto the screen.
