CUT OFF BOTH LEGS.

Eight-Year-Old Earnest Axford of Walled Lake

WAS RUN OVER BY A GRAND TRUNK TRAIN FRIDAY.

He Only Lived Four Hours After the Accident.

WALLED LAKE, August 24, 1898.

(Special.)—One of the saddest accidents in the history of this place occurred at the depot, half a mile from the village, last Friday noon, when eight-year-old Earnest, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Axford, was run over and horribly mangled by a Grand Trunk train. He with several other boys had been playing about the depot, and catching on the cars, and as the train finished work, they were all ordered away.

Earnest climbed to the opposite side of the train and hung to a brake rod or ladder. As the train started, a brakeman saw him and warned him not to attempt to jump, but the lad did not obey and jumping he fell under the moving train, and despite the frantic effort of the brakeman to have the train stopped, the cruel iron wheels tore one of the unfortunate boy's legs off close up to the body, and crushed the other from the foot to near the thigh and he was dragged some distance before the train could be brought to a stand. Dr. Chapman was immediately called, but all he could do was to relieve the intense sufferings of the little boy, who begged piteously to be killed, as a means of relief. Mrs. Axford arrived within a few minutes and the little fellow said to her, "Mamma, you have told me to keep away from the cars, and I won't do it again." He called for his papa, who was in Canada, and when the loving mother asked what she should tell papa for him, he replied, "Tell papa I won't catch on the cars again." He retained consciousness until within a few minutes of his death which occurred at 4:00 o'clock, about four hours after the accident.

The funeral occurred Sunday at 10:30, services being held in the Baptist church, and conducted by Rev. Mr. Tiesner. A very large number attended the service, and a delegation composed of his little associates followed his remains to the grave, where each deposited a small bouquet on the casket as the sad and solemn words, "Earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes," fell from the minister's lips. It was a sad, sad multitude and great sympathy is expressed for the parents, who have lost a bright child, partially through what appears to be neglect on the part of the railroad company, in even allowing boys on their premises.

Boys have for years been permitted by the train men, it is said, to ride on the cars while doing switching here and the only wonder is that some one has not been hurt long ago. On this occasion, some of the boys were allowed, so it is said, by permission of the train men to go inside the baggage car, and this goes to show that the boys have been given too much freedom on and about trains, a gross violation of explicit instructions of the company to its employees against boys being allowed on the company's tracks or permitting them to jump on and off trains. —P. ## SICK FOUR DAYS.

Arthur Moore Died at Midnight Tuesday.

"I never felt better in my whole life," remarked Arthur Moore to his fellow employees after he had eaten supper Friday night, at the close of a hard day's labor with James Hamilton's threshing machine. Soon afterward he complained of a pain in the abdomen and though suffering greatly he did not consider the case serious enough to have a physician make a thorough diagnosis of the case until Sunday morning when Dr. Burgess pronounced it an aggravated case of peritonitis and appendicitis. Notwithstanding the heroic measures that were taken he grew rapidly worse until death resulted at midnight Tuesday.

The funeral was held in the Novi Baptist church yesterday afternoon, Rev. J. H. Herber officiating. Mr.

Moore was an industrious young man of about 25 years of age and was well thought of. He was unmarried.

CALLED NAMES.

Neighborhood Row Got into the Justice Court Monday.

A neighborhood row got into Justice Lowder's court Monday. Mrs. John Darlington made a complaint for assault against Mrs. Chas. Pearsal, who occupies Mr. Darlington's tenant house next door, and upon whom a notice had been served to vacate. Mrs. Darlington's testimony, corroborated by her girl, was that Mrs. Pearsal had called her names and had threatened to strike her. Mrs. Pearsal pleaded not guilty, and claims that her family was called names. The case was taken in the name of the people. Justice Lowder found Mrs. Pearsal guilty and fined her $5.00 and $5.00 costs. The fine, however, was remitted by the court the next morning, when the defendant paid the costs. P. E. White appeared as attorney for the people. Mrs. Pearsal claims she was financially unable to employ counsel, her husband being at work at Pontiac at the time.

The village was asked to issue a warrant in the first place but after hearing the complaint City Attorney Yerkes considered the case not serious enough to allow a warrant to be issued in the name of the corporation and he refused it.

LUTHERAN CHURCH TROUBLE SETTLED.

PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE PASTOR SQUASHED.

A New Pastor May Be Expected Here Soon.

A warrant was served on Rev. Paul Reinhart Tuesday afternoon and he went before Justice Lowder and gave bail to appear for trial Saturday. Mrs. Wm. Meisner, wife of one of the trustees, is the complainant, and she charges that during the church trial of August 5, the pastor pushed and struck her. Mr. Reinhart says it was an excited crowd all about him and he only pushed her aside to get out of it. The trouble grows out of a misunderstanding between the trustees, a portion of the congregation of the German Lutheran church, and the pastor, which has been going on several weeks. The trustees held a meeting some four weeks ago asking for Mr. Reinhart's resignation. The latter took an appeal to the synod and it finally decided that a vote of the congregation would have to settle the matter and it was decided to obtain a new pastor. Mr. Reinhart refused to be deposed, he claiming that the church was his property until some $200 back salary and expenses was paid and he proposed to stay.

On Wednesday the trustees offered to have the Mrs. Meisner suit dropped and make an amicable settlement of all other difficulties if Mr. Reinhart would give a receipt in full of all obligations; give up all church papers and property in his possession, and accept the action of the trustees regarding his discharge as final. P. E. White acted as arbitrating committee and Mr. Reinhart finally agreed to the conditions and everything was satisfactorily adjusted and the case referred to dropped. A new pastor will likely be sent here very soon and Mr. Reinhart may shortly move to St. Paul, where he has a call.

Fenton has a sensation in the shape of the arrest of ex-cashier Walter M. Millard, who is accused of precipitating the failure of the Fenton bank last year by appropriating funds on deposit to his own use. Hearing, August 24, $3,000 bail. The alleged defalcation is about $22,000.

A village over in a neighboring county has neither a doctor nor a Sunday school, and the people are pictures of health and morality. —Fenton Independent.

Yes, just so. But please bear in mind that a "picture" is only a counterfeit presentment, after all.

The Orion Review tells of a girl of that place who had anticipated a visit with friends in a couple of neighboring towns, but as she packed her grip and placed the last article therein, a thought of the pleasures of home stole over her and a homesick feeling took possession of her. The satchel was unpacked and she is taking her outing at home, like the sensible girl she is.

Both the Orion Review and the Brighton Argus call attention to the fact that traveling agents have been selling steel ranges for 60 or 65 dollars which are exactly the same as local dealers sell for 25. And yet the probabilities are that those same agents will just keep right on making a good thing selling those same articles. The immortal Bill Shakespeare must have had some such transaction in mind when he remarked "What fools these mortals be."

St. Johns people were all stirred up last week by a terrible murder story. Telephone messages concerning it were received at the News office and Detroit papers were all agog and their representatives hustling in all directions. It was finally learned that a dear old lady had heard somebody talking about an affair that had occurred in another state years ago and thought it had just happened in her own neighborhood. She heard too much and yet too little.

A Pontiac preacher who was slated to speak at the Oakland county supervisors' picnic publicly refused to go because there was to be a dance in connection. His influence over "the ungodly" will undoubtedly (?) be enhanced by this narrow minded proceeding. While we like to see people consistent, such bigotry is sure to antagonize any number of people who might possibly some time be brought under the influence of the "word fitly spoken," but who would take special care to keep away from a person who was so easily contaminated. The circle of the gentleman's sphere of usefulness must be extremely limited if he carries his Pharisaical principle of thus "withdrawing himself" to its logical sequence. The greatest of all Preachers realized that in order to reach and influence "publicans and sinners" it was needful to get somewhere near them, and it was the condemnation of the Pharisees only that he received thereby. And, moreover, the extreme selfishness of this particular amusement is an open question among intelligent believers who have as good a right to their opinions, and as clear an insight into the problems of life and ethics as though they were bound by the traditionalism from which the average theological mind finds it so hard to break asunder.

At first we thought it was a funeral announcement, but on closer examination it proved to be a Walled Lake celebration notice in deep mourning. Must have had a whale of an advertising committee over there.

A very pretty home wedding occurred Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Groner, when their daughter Mabel was united in marriage to Mr. Arthur Limpert of Fenton, by Rev. J. W. Mitchell. The bride was attired in white organdy over pink, and carried white roses. The happy couple left on the evening train for their future home in Petoskey.

One of the most jolly and profitable times had in Novi for some time was that held Tuesday night on C. E. Goodell's lawn, the occasion being the much talked of Baptist experience social. The grounds were made especially inviting and attractive by bunting and Japanese lantern decorations, and the crowd was in that happy state of mind necessary to such a successful experience.

Miss Nellie Tibbitts had earned $1.20 blacking boots, but from the time she devoted to her task it is surmised that she charged all kinds of prices for a shine. # DAIRY AND POULTRY.

INTERESTING CHAPTERS FOR OUR RURAL READERS.

How Successful Farmers Operate This Department of the Farm—A Few Hints as to the Care of Live Stock and Poultry.

Abortion and Milk Fever.
In herds the best regulated and cared for there will occasionally occur a physical accident or some sudden fright that causes a cow to prematurely drop her calf. writes Henry E. Alvord in "Northwestern Agriculturist." The herds should be constantly watched for symptoms of abortion, which will generally be recognized by the experienced herdsmen. Should such symptoms appear, the animals should be immediately removed to a hospital until the case is over or the signs disappear. In case abortion occurs in a stable yard or pasture, despite precautions, and wholly without warning, as is sometimes the case, take the animal to a hospital at once and use every exertion to thoroughly clean and disinfect the place where the accident occurred. The aborted cow should be carefully nursed and the genital organs freely dressed with antiseptic solutions. The animal should not return to the herd until fully cured, clean, and free from all vaginal discharges. Be on guard for a second case following the first in a few days or within three weeks; if a month elapses, recurrences are not to be expected. Veterinarians recognize two distinct kinds of abortion, viz., the sporadic, which is first mentioned above as resulting from accident, physical injury or fright, from disease of the uterus, or from "sympathetic" influences, and the epidemic contagious, which is undoubtedly a germ disease, communicated from animal to animal by the germ and caused only by contagion. There is still much uncertainty about this dread disease and its prevention. Milk fever, "drooping," or parturient apoplexy is another scourge of the dairy, twin to abortion. It is an affection which comes without warning, attacks the deepest and richest milkers, is sudden in attack, rapid in progress, and generally fatal. The symptoms are a chill, twitching of the head muscles, failure to eat, chew the cud or pass manure, distended udder without milk, insensibility of the hind quarters when pinched or pricked; later the cow becomes unsteady on her hind legs, and presently drops. Good cows should be carefully watched for forty-eight hours after calving, and if such warnings appear, a veterinarian can not be called too soon. Preventive measures form the best assurance of the owner against losses from this cause. The cow should have abundant exercise up to the week before calving, and then quiet and good care, with daily grooming and active rubbing. Keep the bowels active with proper feed, or purgatives if necessary. Insure comfort, guard against cold, and endeavor to maintain active circulation on the surface of the body. A strong dose of physic and brisk grooming may be used immediately after calving, in case of cows believed to be predisposed to milk fever.

Streaky Butter.
Among the various causes of streaky butter that of temperature—too cold a temperature somewhere in the process of making—is not sufficiently considered, says a writer in Agricultural Gazette, Tasmania. Sometimes, and especially at this season of the year, the water with which the butter is washed is of a temperature very many degrees lower than that of the butter. Now, the use of very cold water chills and hardens the surface of the butter granules, while the interior remains comparatively soft; when salted the salt will not mix evenly, and the color of the different parts of the granules will vary. If worked in this condition the chilled granules will not combine readily, and the result will be streaky, mottled butter. Even if the butter is left in the water a length of time sufficient for the granules to be of the same temperature throughout the butter of the granules will, if the latter are very firm and hard, adhere more than it will adhere. That is, the granules do not stick to each other with the same force that the butter particles of the granules stick together. The working flattens out the granules, but does not make of them one homogeneous mass, and as the outside of these granules are saltier than the inside, and therefore deeper in color, the butter will, when cut through, look marbled, mottled, or streaky, according to the degree of working.

Man With the Chicken Fever.
I claim this chicken fever that gets us all some time during our experience is contagious and needs a remedy, writes M. M. Johnson in Rural Californian. I would prescribe moderation in all cases. If it is an extremely bad case, where the patient has quite a reasonable income, in order to get rich the first year in the poultry business, I would advise some kind of a tonic, such as holding on to a part of some job that he is acquainted with and knows its bearings. I can't make fun of any one with the fever. I had it once myself and am too sensitive now to even think how I pulled through. It was about six years ago this month that I was stricken. It came on this way: If it only costs one bushel of grain to keep a hen one year, I could buy said one bushel in corn for 85 cents. If said 85-cent hen laid 240 eggs in one year, at 1 cent each, I would have $2.25 clear profit out of the said one hen. Whereas, if one hen makes a profit of $2.25, why would not 100 hens make a profit of $225? My figures said they would. And if $225 was the profit of 100 hens, then 1,000 hens would bring me in the nice income of $2,250 every year, and about all I would have to do would be to buy the grain and wheel in the eggs. Then I took up the broiler question for consideration. It considered fine, as follows: One dozen eggs, worth 12 cents, turned into broilers worth 40 cents each. The figures ran wild and some of them got away, and I have never been able to get said figures all together since. Gentle readers, can any of you sympathize with me? Have you ever had it? Some years later I had gone through all the experiences that belong to the novice in the business. I find that poultry really pays, and the best way to make it pay is to throw away your slate and pencil, roll up your sleeves, and go into it. Start on small capital, and with a small flock. Learn the trade and grow up with it. You will find a screw loose occasionally, but always carry a screw driver.

Little Thing in Incubation.
If a man is about to start using an incubator for the first time it will be well for him to look after some of the little things that have so much to do with the success or failure in handling these adjuncts to poultry raising. One of the things that should be looked after carefully is the regulation of the heating apparatus and the record of same by the thermometer. It is best for a man to practice with the incubator without eggs in it till he is sure that he can control the heat. We believe it is a mistake for any amateur to go ahead at once with the eggs in the drawer without knowing if he can keep the temperature uniform. In looking at the thermometer each time, do so quickly, as a draft of cold air will quickly cool off the air inside of the incubator.

Another thing that will be of interest to note will be the relative heat compared with the outside temperature. Some incubators are so carefully and thoroughly built that the outside temperature has little effect on them. There are others, however, that seem to be greatly affected by the general state of the weather. This is of great moment, as, if it be found that an incubator responds too quickly to outside influences, it will be necessary to place it in the cellar or some other place where the temperature is uniform, or at least changes but slowly.

It is not necessary that the eggs be kept at a 100° or 102° all of the time. The eggs may even be taken out each morning and allowed to cool down to 70 or 75 degrees, and then returned. We believe there is less danger of the eggs being injured by too little heat than by too much. We have seen hens leave their nests in the early spring and stay away till it seemed that the eggs must all be chilled, and yet the same hatches would bring out a full brood of chicks from the eggs so treated.

As to the thermometer, be sure that it is correct. There will be no gain in saving money on a cheap thermometer and losing it in a whole drawer of eggs. If a cheap thermometer can be obtained that is reliable it will be as good as one that is expensive, but see to it that it is in every way reliable, no matter what it costs.

Iowa Export Butter.—Dewitt Goodrich, the Iowa butter maker, so prominent at the World's Fair dairy contests, made the butter recently sent to England by the United States department of agriculture. The cream was very lightly ripened, and the butter a light straw color. It contains fully 86 per cent of butter fat, about 10 per cent of water, and 3 per cent of salt, which means one-half ounce to the pound. It was packed in cubical boxes, made of spruce, each holding one cubic foot of butter, and lined on all sides with two thicknesses of parchment paper.

Advices from France are to the effect that since the forty-dollar per head duty was imposed on horses, prices have risen materially, and the French breeders are correspondingly happy. Five American importers are now visiting the breeding districts of France in search of French Coach and Percheron stallions and mares. One small lot of stallions was shipped at Havre a week ago, we learn, consigned to an American gentleman who has not previously been identified with the French Coach breed.

Exercising Brood Mares.—Mares with suckling foals should be exercised plentifully with slow and light work. After the foal is a month old it may be left in a box stall or feed lot out of sight and hearing of its dam from morning till noon, when it should be allowed to suckle. If the mare's udder is very full of milk, it should be partly emptied when the animal comes home at night and before the colt is allowed to get its evening drink.—Ex.

MRS. PINKHAM CONQUERS BACKACHE.

Four Women Who Owe Their Present Happiness to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I wrote to you last June, I was not able to do anything. I suffered with backache, headache, bearing-down pains, pains in my lower limbs, and ached all through my body. Menstruations were very painful. I was almost a skeleton. I followed your advice and now am well and fleshy, and able to do all my own housework. I took medicine from a physician for over a year, and it did not do me a particle of good. I would advise all suffering women to write to Mrs. Pinkham. She will answer all letters promptly, and tell them how to cure those aches and pains so common to women. —Mrs. C. L. WINN, Marquez, Texas.

I think it is my duty to write and let you know what your medicine has done for me. For two years I suffered with female weakness, bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and too frequent occurrence of the menses. I was always complaining. My husband urged me to try your Vegetable Compound, and I finally did. I have taken three bottles and it has made me feel like a different woman. I advise every woman that suffers to take your medicine and be cured. —Mrs. GARNETT LIGHTY, 612 S. Prince St., Lancaster, Pa.

I had suffered for over two years with backache, headache, dizziness, nervousness, falling and ulceration of the womb, leucorrhoea, and about every ill a woman could have. I had tried doctors, but with no success, and it seemed as though death was the only relief for me. After using five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and four packages of Sanative Wash, I am well. Have had no more pain, womb trouble, backache or headache. —Mrs. CLAUDIA HALPIN, Cream Ridge, N. J.

Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was afflicted with female complaints so that I could hardly walk. My back ached terribly, in fact, I ached all over. Was not able to raise myself up some of the time. I had no appetite and was so nervous that I could hardly sleep. I have taken but two bottles of your Compound and feel like another person, can now eat and sleep to perfection, in fact, am perfectly well. —Mrs. SUE McCULLOUGH, Adair, W. Va.

Davenport, Iowa, correspondence: the striking resemblance, and if Uncle Sam had not been drawn generations before Mr. Young's birth you would swear that the superintendent had been the model for the artists. Superintendent Young comes of a long line of American ancestry and is as American in every respect as he looks. He was born in New York state, graduating from Middlebury college in 1861. For seven years he has been at the head of academies at Lawrenceville and Fort Covington, New York. In 1868 he came to Davenport as superintendent of the school system of this city, and his record of twenty years' continuous service in that office is one that is believed to be unequalled in any other American city. His popularity in Davenport is said to be greater than that of any other man.

Engineer Dolph of the Globe factory has faithfully blown the weather signals each day for a year and thinks it is time to know if the effort is appreciated or beneficial. By the number of signal cards applied for at the Record office, we are sure that the farmers and people in general, within the sound of the whistle, feel under obligations to Mr. Dolph, and that they have not personally made him aware of the fact is because they so seldom see him.

Art Nichols has gained some little newspaper notoriety by having while at Island Lake last week, occupied a room next to that of Ascher or Loud who is suspected of the murder of the Pittsfield farmer named Nichols (no relation to Art). That was on Wednesday night and Art heard a voice in that room cautioning someone against talking loud for fear of being heard. Art thinks he would be able to identify the voice.

The peace commission has settled the local flour war and all the local dealers are again handling Northville flour. It now rests with the people what make of flour they shall use, but all things being equal it is but right that Northville people purchase Northville flour—and then too if Northville merchants are inclined to practice what they preach they will "patronize home" by pushing the sale of a Northville product in preference to any other.

An event of local interest was the family reunion of the descendants of the late Levi Deake which was held at the home of Clayton Deake, one of the younger sons. Levi Deake was fairly entitled to be classed with the pioneers of Salem, having settled in the township in 1836, first on the west half of the N. W. 1/4 of Section 11. Later he sold this farm and went one mile north and bought the west half of the S. W. 1/4 of Sec. 35 of Lyon, where he resided until his death a few years ago and where the family home is still continued. A large gathering of children and grandchildren assembled at the old home on Wednesday and the occasion was a pleasant one, long to be remembered. The family is quite widely scattered and it is doubtful if so many of them ever meet again.

The one inappropriate feature of our celebration is the antiquated, "bewhiskered" advertising matter used by the committee, headed by Mr. Blair, but we presume that for financial reasons the committee was obliged to use a "cheap John" looking article, which is not at all in keeping with the usual enterprise of our Walled Lake people. The celebration however promises to be of much more importance and attractiveness than such bills would indicate.

Keeps Folks Well.

It is better to keep well than to get well, although when one is sick it is desirable to get well. When we consider that eight-tenths of the ailments that afflict the American people are caused by constipation, we shall realize why it is that Baxter's Mandrake Bitters "keeps folks well," or if sick enables them to get well. Baxter's Mandrake Bitters cures constipation.

Murdered for His Money.

On August 10 Valmore C. Nichols, aged 45, a farmer of Pittsfield township, Washtenaw county, between Ann Arbor and Ypsilanti, visited Detroit to pay interest on a mortgage on his farm. For this purpose he had borrowed and drawn from bank something over $400. He did not return home and after two days his family became alarmed at his absence and reported him to the Detroit police as missing. Detectives were unable to find any trace of Mr. Nichols, but learned that he was in the habit of visiting a clairvoyant medium, Robert Lang, every time he visited Detroit.

Members of the Detroit Boat club, on Belle Isle, Detroit, while rowing some distance from their club house, discovered the body of a man in the water. It was dragged ashore and two heavy stones were found attached to the legs with copper wire. There were bruises on the head, apparently made with a blunt instrument. The authorities were notified and the body was at once identified as Valmore C. Nichols, the missing farmer. The money was gone, but his watch and other valuables had not been taken.

The detectives learned that Robert Lang, the clairvoyant, had seen Nichols on the day he disappeared and they at once began to search for Lang, whom they traced to the spiritualist camp meeting at Island Lake. It was about 12 p. m. when the officers reached there, but they routed out Secretary Brown, who is in charge of the hotel, and who at first refused to allow the officers to go to Lang's room. Persuaders were brought forth which caused him to change his mind, and Lang was soon on his way back to Detroit between two detectives. As they left the hotel Brown called out to Lang to keep his mouth shut until he had secured counsel.

A Glorious Welcome Home.

With the knowledge that they had served their country well the 260 men of the Michigan Naval Reserves, who served on board the cruiser Yosemite through the war against Spain, left their gallant ship for Detroit. Their arrival home was the occasion of one of the most enthusiastic demonstrations that has occurred in the Michigan metropolis in years. From the time the gallant boys alighted from their special train until their arrival on their good ship Yautie, after traversing a mile and a half of streets, they were treated to a continuous ovation from the tens of thousands of admirers who filled the streets until there was scarcely room for the boys to march along. And then when they reached the Yautie's landing place and met wives, mothers, sweethearts and bosom friends, what a glorious reunion there was. With cannon booming, whistles screaming, crowds cheering and flags waving the brave sailor boys felt amply repaid for all of their sacrifices and hardships.

Still this was not the end. A whole week of receptions and various functions had been arranged by the Reserves who had not been called to the front and by others organizations and they were fully satisfied with good things.

Destructive Blaze at Marquette.

Before there was time to remove their contents, the houses of Alfred Scott, Albion McIntosh, and the blacksmith shop and house of Geo. Stephenson were all ablaze. Scott and McIntosh barely escaping. The fire was confined to the block and buildings on the opposite side of the streets were saved. George Stephenson was badly burned about the face and hands while trying to remove some of his property. The losses will foot up of $25,000; insurance, $13,800.

Corbin and other war department officials, to say nothing of his visit to President McKinley, is bearing fruit, not the least of which is the change in war department plan whereby the 35th Michigan regiment will remain in Uncle Sam's service and will be detailed to garrison duty. The governor also visited New York while on this trip and was the only governor to visit Admiral Sampson's fleet upon its arrival in New York harbor.

COURT OF INQUIRY.

COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE CONDUCT OF THE WAR.

Instructions Issued for Mustering Out the Volunteers—Knights of Pythias Biennial Convention at Indianapolis Draws a Large Crowd.

Military Inquiry on Conduct of the War.

Washington: The administration has decided to institute a military inquiry into the conduct of the war with Spain. It is the belief that a properly conducted military inquiry will reveal the men who are responsible for the alleged Santiago blunders and the mistakes of the quartermaster's department, and would determine if any important orders had not been obeyed. The supporters of an investigation further say that the board of inquiry would make a report which would be of great value in resulting in new military legislation.

A military inquiry by a court whose members commanded respect by their rank, experience and character, would clear up the exact limits of failure. When these were known it could be made clear how much of the failure was due to lack of preparation, how much to the inevitable conditions of war, how much to a defective organization of the staff, how much to the inefficiency of regular officers, how much to the ignorance of volunteer officers and how much to civilian appointments. These things need to be known through a methodical and searching inquiry conducted by experts.

Hostilities are over. Congress is over three months distant; the public attention is aroused. There is grave danger of personal injustice due to mere clamor. If an adequate military commission investigates the whole field of operations—equipment, organization, camp abuses and all the work of quartermaster, commissary, ordnance and medical staff departments—by December congress and public opinion will be informed, enlightened and educated, and fruitful legislation will follow. If nothing is done we shall have a congressional investigation, a swarm of grievances, slanders and scandals, personal and partisan reports and nothing accomplished.

The Situation at Manila.

Perfect order has thus far been maintained in Manila under American control. The city is quiet and seems almost to have resumed its normal business and social activity. The rumors of troubles between the natives and the Americans are for the most part unfounded. The fact is that the insurgents have been unwilling to disarm until assured of the permanence of American protection. From the first they have had the greatest confidence in Admiral Dewey, whom they regard as a sort of father and the most important American at Manila. The junta is satisfied that all friction will soon disappear and that there will be no trouble from the insurgents if the Americans decide to retain the Philippines.

Gen. Merritt and Aguinaldo have agreed that the latter shall govern outside of Manila for the present. No insurgents will be allowed inside of the city with arms. Business is now booming. The obstructions in the river Pasig, which flows through the town, have been removed and the water works have resumed operations.

Mustering Out the Volunteers.

Adjt.-Gen. Corbin has issued the order providing for the mustering out of volunteer troops. This will be done by regular army officers only. The regulations regarding the accounting for property and men are very strict. Each volunteer officer will be held responsible for the men under his command up to the moment of muster out. Men who are sick and absent will get their discharge certificates. The mustering out will occur at state rendezvous as a rule. Every man will be examined by a physician before he gets his discharge. The troops will be allowed to retain certain property, such as rifles and other equipment by paying a stipulated price for them.

The Pythians' Big Convention.

The biennial meeting of the supreme lodge Knights of Pythias at Indianapolis was one of the largest ever held in the west. The national encampment of the Uniformed Rank contained fully 12,000 uniformed men, but only about half of that number participated in the parade, owing to the extremely hot weather. About 50,000 strangers were attracted to Indianapolis by the affair. The supreme lodge continues in session two weeks.

It is denied at Washington that the United States is to pay off the Cuban insurgents. The Cuban junta has been advised to disband their forces and they will probably do so as soon as possible.

Madrid announces that the evacuation of Porto Rico will begin in September, but it is not expected that the embarkation of the Spanish troops in Cuba will be commenced before December.

The London Daily Graphic says an interchange of views on the Chinese question is occurring between the governments of Great Britain and Russia and that negotiations are proceeding in a conciliatory spirit.

The President has promoted Capt. Chas. D. Sigbee, who was commander of the Maine, and during the war commanding the auxiliary cruiser St. Paul, by advancing him three numbers on the list of captains for extraordinary heroism.

Illness among the troops in Porto Rico is on the increase, and there are now nearly 1,000 cases of malaria and dysentery, with a few of typhoid fever.

Surgeon-General Greenleaf has recommended that the sick be sent north as rapidly as possible. Rumors of yellow fever at San Juan are not confirmed.

Havana authorities have declined to allow the landing of a number of American correspondents. Gen. Blanco says their presence, prior to the arrival of the military commissioners, might prejudice the work of the commissioners, and it would be impossible for the authorities to guarantee the safety of the correspondents against fanatics.

The Cuban military commission will sail Sept. 5 either from New York or Fort Monroe, on the cruiser New York. If she can be made ready in time. Admiral Sampson says that the mines will be removed from Havana harbor before the commission enters. It is not known whether or not the United States will insist also that Morro castle be put under its control. About 300 white caps at Smithfield, W. Va., dragged three men and three women out of beds in a house of ill-fame and tarred and feathered all of them. The house was then blown to pieces with dynamite.

Surrendered the Philippine Islands.

The terms of surrender outlined by Gen. Merritt and agreed to by the Spanish general were as follows:

An agreement for the capitulation of the Philippines. A provision for disarming the men who remain organized under the command of their officers, no parole being exacted.

Necessary supplies to be furnished from captured treasury funds, any possible deficiency being made good by the Americans.

The safety of life and property of the Spanish soldiers and citizens to be guaranteed as far as possible.

The question of transporting the troops to Spain to be referred to the decision of the Washington government, and that of returning their arms to the soldiers to be left to the discretion of Gen. Merritt.

Washington: The administration is without definite information as to the extent of our present authority in the Philippines. Under the peace protocol the United States was given the occupation of Manila with the bay and harbor, until a permanent disposition of the Philippine question was reached. But, according to press dispatches, which are so circumstantial as to be credited in most official quarters, Gen. Merritt and Admiral Dewey received the capitulation of the entire Philippine archipelago. There is a disposition to await fuller official information before laying down a policy as to the extent of our jurisdiction in the islands.

Instructions have been sent to Merritt as follows: "The President directs that there must be no joint occupation with the insurgents. The United States, in the possession of Manila city, Manila bay and harbor, must preserve the peace and protect persons and property within the territory occupied by their military and naval forces. The insurgents and all others must recognize the military occupation and authority of the United States and the cessation of hostilities proclaimed by the President. Use whatever means in your judgment are necessary to this end. All law-abiding people must be treated alike."

The war department officials hope there may be no trouble with the insurgent forces in the Philippines, although the dispatches which have been received and published in the press, together with the demand of Aguinaldo for joint occupation has indicated a temper on the part of the insurgent leaders which is not satisfactory. The possibility of an attack on the city by the insurgent forces has been considered, but it is not feared that they would be very formidable against the forces of Merritt and Dewey.

Naval Heroes' Grand Ovation.

Hundreds of thousands of people along the banks of the Hudson and thousands on all styles of river craft blended their shouts in a royal welcome to the returning North Atlantic squadron, under command of Rear Admiral Sampson as the big warships passed in review, through the harbor and up North river as far as Gen. Grant's tomb and return. For almost three solid hours steam whistles of all sizes, steam sirens and small guns along the shores shrieked and boomed in the effort to display the heartiest enthusiasm for the home coming of the naval heroes with their battle-scarred ships.

When the New York, Iowa, Indiana, Brooklyn, Massachusetts, Oregon and Texas, arrived in New York bay Admiral Sampson had no idea of the reception awaiting him until a tug from the navy yard carried him the news, and all the ships of the squadron were immediately put under preparation for dress review. The fleet made a splendid pageant and the reception they received must have shown the gallant sailors that they were regarded as heroes. The following day the warships were visited by nearly 150,000 people.

The secretary of the treasury has decided that under existing conditions Spanish vessels may enter, load and clear at ports in the United States.

Shell Wilden.

A ROMANCE

"You don't seem altogether happy in here," a cheery voice calls out at this moment, as Shell's somewhat mocking face appears at the open window.

"Happy!" cries Ruby derisively. "Would you feel happy caged up with a couple of young bears? The children have been behaving shamefully."

"Have they?" returns Shell in a tone which denotes doubt, as she steps in over the low window ledge, and gently begins to stroke Meg's hair, which has become disheveled through her various emotions.

The child nestles up against her side, clasping her skirts firmly, as if for protection, while Bob indulges in a vigorous welcoming nod, for he knows he is not allowed to speak.

"Yes, they have given me quite a headache," pursues Ruby, pressing her head to her brow. "I shall be fit for nothing the rest of the day if I can't get rid of it. I wish you would hear the children read for me."

"Why should I?" answers Shell bluntly. "As you know, I disapprove of their coming here, and I told you from the first to expect no help from me!"

Shell speaks in French, that the children may not understand, but Meg guesses, with the quick instinct of childhood that she is refusing to take charge of them.

"You hear me read, Shell?" she lips with a look of almost piteous entreaty on her baby face. "Me will be good."

Shell looks down for a moment with unrelenting eyes—then she catches Meg up in her strong young arms, gives her a resounding kiss, and turning to Ruby, says—

"All right—if you are tired, I don't mind looking after them till they are fetched—only I don't profess to be a good hand at teaching."

"I wish you wouldn't be so rough with them," says Ruby, rising from her chair with a sigh of intense relief.

"Now us is happy!" cries Bob, sliding down from his chair and stretching his small arms with delight as Ruby disappears.

"But us must go on with our lessons," says Shell gravely.

"All right," acquiesces Bob, as he begins to hunt for their reading book. "You sit down in the big chair, and have Meg on your lap, like you did last time, and I can stand beside you."

"My dear children, isn't it rather hot for that kind of arrangement?" expostulates Shell, as Meg springs into her arms, whilst Bob installs himself with his arm around her neck.

But the children only know that they love her, and want to be as near her as possible; any minor consideration as the state of the thermometer is a matter of supreme indifference to their inexperienced and consequently selfish little minds.

That evening, as luck will have it, when the children come in to dessert, their father begins to question them as to their conduct.

"I hope you were both very good children this morning?" he says, helping each to a plentiful supply of strawberries.

"No, pa—us wasn't berry good," falters Meg, with downcast eyes and burning cheeks.

"Dear me—that is very sad, Meg!" says Robert Champley, with a laughing glance across the table at Ted. "How did you misbehave yourselves?"

"I didn't know tree times four," replies Meg, looking deeply abashed.

"That was extremely wicked of you," says her father smiling.

"And now that Meg has made an open confession of her sins, we must hear your encumbrances, Mr. Bobby," laughs his uncle. "How did you offend Miss Wilden?"

Bob heaves a profound sigh. "I did something dreadful," he says in a low, ashamed voice.

"Something dreadful?" repeats Ted, being intensely amused. "Come—out with it."

"Papa, dear, don't be angry with Bob—he didn't know," interposes Meg, suddenly, laying hold of her father's arm and hugging it vigorously.

"Dear me, this is getting alarming! What did you do, Bob?" asks Mr. Champley with real interest.

Bob takes a kind of gulp to swallow down his fear—and then he says in an awestruck voice—

"I pulled her hair out."

"Good gracious—whose hair?" asks his father, looking startled.

"Miss Wilden's," explains Bob, much alarmed at the sensation his announcement had created.

"You young villain!" exclaims his uncle. "What induced you to attack a lady like that?"

"I didn't attack her," says poor Bob, on the verge of sobs. "I just pulled out her pins for fun, when she was setting my copy, and then all her hair tumbled down on the carpet."

"Not all," hastened to explain Meg—"only a lot of it."

Ted Champley is seized with a violent fit of coughing, which sends him over to the window for relief, whilst his elder brother as suddenly develops a cold, which necessitates a vast amount of handkerchief play before he speaks again, then he says quietly to Bob—

"That was very ungentlemanly of

CHAPTER V.

This threat from his usually indulgent father has such a depressing effect on Bob's spirits that he makes up his mind to eschew temptation for the future.

"Miss Wilden won't love you if you don't behave like a gentleman," continues the father severely, as an appropriate ending to his reprimand.

"Us don't love Miss Wilden," here interrupts Meg with great dignity. "She is a nasty cross old thing."

"Nonsense, Meg!" says her father, placing his hand under her chin and smiling down into her eyes. "If you don't love Miss Wilden, I am afraid you must be a hardened little wretch, for with a dainty sigh—alas, she is only too devoted to you!"

Meg shakes her head in an uncompromising way, and repeats, with a determined little pout—

"Us don't like her—us loves Sell."

"Yes, us loves dear Sell," chimed in Bob eagerly. "She tells us lovely stories."

"My dear misguided children, your affection for Miss Shell is decidedly misplaced," here interrupts their uncle, returning from his post at the window. "She doesn't like boys and girls at all."

"Not like little boys and girls?" repeats Meg, quite taken aback by such an extraordinary statement.

"No, indeed—in fact she gave me to understand that she almost hated them," repeats Ted, much amused at the children's look of horror. "So I strongly advise you not to waste your young affections on such an unresponsive object."

The warning, being clothed in words beyond their understanding, makes no impression on the children's minds, but their strong preference for the younger sister strikes their father forcibly, and he catches himself murmuring more than once in a wondering tone—"Us loves Sell; us loves dear Sell!"

After that it often happens that Ruby, under some trifling pretext or other, shifts the burden of her self-imposed task on to Shell's young shoulders—she has a headache, or is busy, or has letters to write; and then Shell, taking pity on the poor children—who are sure to have a rough time of it if Ruby is disinclined for them—devotes her morning to their instruction and amusement.

She bribes them to be good at their lessons by the promise of a romp in the grounds when their task is completed; and so it happens that Robert Champley, chancing to drive over himself to fetch them one late June morning, comes upon an unexpected and to him a charming sight.

On a moss-grown mound at the front of a copper-beech sits Shell in a dark print gown, with her bright hair coiled around and around with daisy-chains, which the children's busy fingers have been weaving, whilst she tells them a wonderful tale from Fairyland.

So engrossed are all three that they do not become aware of the intruder's approach until he has descended from the trap and walked quietly to within a few paces of their resting place; then a shout of "Papa, papa!" from Meg rouses them all from their ideal world to a realistic one.

Shell starts from her lowly seat, crimson to the very roots of her hair, and puts on as forbidding a look as she can well assume.

"Oh, pa, it is so jolly; you come and listen, too!" cries Bob, eager that his father should participate in their enjoyment. "The princess is shut up in a dark room, because her wicked god-mother won't allow her ever to see the sunshine, and the prince is keeping guard outside her tower with a carriage and six, to carry her away to an island blazing with light if he gets the chance."

"Rather trying for her eyes, won't it be? I should be inclined to recommend her a pair of spectacles till she gets used to the glare," laughs Robert Champley as he shakes hands with Shell.

But Shell has become fossilized. She shakes hands lamely, puts on a stolid conventional expression, and, drawing her small figure up to its fullest height, tries to look exceedingly dignified. Her efforts are somewhat marred by the daisies so profusely twisted around her head; but, as she is happily forgetful of their presence, they do not trouble her.

"Sell, dear, she didn't have blue spectacles, did she?" cries Meg, shocked at such a very unromantic suggestion.

"I don't know, I am sure," responds Shell in a tone of cold indifference.

"But so does know," cries Meg, waxing impatient, and shaking Shell's skirts in her anxiety to have the doubt settled.

"I am afraid my children are wearying you, Miss Shell," says their father rather stiffly. But I have just come over to carry them away."

"I find the easiest way to keep them quiet is to tell them stories," says Shell bluntly and ungraciously.

"I am very sorry that you should be put to so much trouble, particularly as you dislike children," remarks Mr. Champley, with a curious and rather satirical glance at her flower-decked head.

"Oh, it doesn't matter!" answers Shell condescendingly.

"Now then, young monkeys—if you are ready, we may as well start," he says, pointing to the trap which is waiting in the avenue. "I am going to take you for a drive right around by the sea."

"Take Sell too, pa," pleads Meg, catching her father's hand and fairly jumping with delight.

"With pleasure, if she will only consent to go," is his ready answer, whilst he darts an amused glance at the girl's flushed, vexed face.

"No, thanks—I hate driving," responds Shell curtly.

"You seem to have a great many detestations, Miss Shell," says the gentleman sarcastically.

"I hate," is Shell's laconic answer.

"Well, then, since we can't persuade you to accompany us, we may as well start. Come, children!"—and, making no effort to shake hands, he raises his hat politely.

A latent fear that she has been inhospitably assailed Shell.

"Won't you go up to the house?" she asks almost eagerly.

"No, thank you—since I have been fortunate enough to meet with the children here. Good morning."

"Good-morning," answers Shell stiffly, and quite ignoring the two little faces that are turned up to her for a good-bye kiss.

"Papa, is us naughty?" asks Meg, as she trots over to the trap beside her father.

"I hope not. Why?" he demands absently.

"Cause Sell didn't kiss us," answers Meg in a wondering tone.

"Kiss you!" repeats her father, laughing. "She looked far more likely to bite."

But all the same, as he makes the assertion a memory of Shell as he first came to her, with sparkling eyes and smiling lips, and the two children kneeling beside her, rises before his mental vision.

"Well, have you got rid of those little torments?" asks Ruby languidly, looking up from her book as Shell enters the room.

"Their father has just come for them," answers Shell shortly.

"Their father—oh, where is he?" cries Ruby, starting from her chair. "I want to consult him about Bob's writing; and I must speak about the nurse! I am afraid she is not very careful—Meg's hands were quite dirty this morning. Where is he—where did you leave him?"

"He is down by the sea; I didn't leave him—he left me," answers Shell drily.

"Why did no one tell me he was here?" asks Ruby angrily.

"He didn't come to the house; I was in the drive with the children, and he picked them up there."

"How very strange! But it is all your fault, taking them out the foolish way you do. I suppose you were romping like a tom-boy when he came."

"I was telling them stories."

"Anyway you were a ridiculous object," says Ruby, with such an obviously scornful sneer that Shell instinctively glances across the room at her reflection in the mirror, then for the first time becoming aware of her profuse decorations. With a sudden access of wrath she tears the daisies from her hair, whilst tears of mortification rise to her eyes.

"I wouldn't have had him see me so for a hundred pounds," she says angrily.

"What nonsense! I don't suppose that he even noticed them," observes Ruby with cutting scorn.

"Ah, perhaps not!" murmurs Shell with a sigh of relief; and yet, thinking it over, she remembers clearly that twice or three times during their short interview she noticed an amused smile flicker over his face.

LENGTH OF MEXICAN WAR.

Continued for Two Years Before Peace Was Declared.

The Mexican war is the best example and instruction in the time it takes to fight small wars. That took two years, and the present war is moving at express speed by its side, as might be expected after fifty-two years. Hostilities began March 18, 1846. General Mejia at Matamoros called out the Mexican troops. A month later, April 26, 1846, General Taylor called for 5,000 militia. A fortnight later, May 13, congress officially recognized the war and called for volunteers. Mexico declared war May 23, 1846. Mexico had no fleet and no army on the frontier, except some desultory levies. Monterey was not taken until four months later, Sept. 28, and Buena Vista was not fought until eight months after the war began, Feb. 22, 1847. After nearly one year of hostilities, in which our forces had been drilled and disciplined in camp and by months of campaigning, Gen. Scott sailed for Mexico and captured Vera Cruz, ten months after hostilities began—March 29, 1847. It took four and one-half months, to Sept. 14, 1847, before the City of Mexico was taken, sixteen months after hostilities opened. Peace only came in two years, in June, 1848. Yet the Mexican war is quoted as a great case of quick work in fighting.—Philadelphia Press.

What's in a Name? Letters!

Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllantysiliogogoch appears in the British postoffice guide as the name of a post and telegraph office in the island of Anglesey. It is said to mean, "The Church of St. Mary in a hollow of white hazel near to the rapid whirlpool and to St. Disilio's church near to a red cave."

A SKETCH OF LAWTON.

REMINDS ONE OF SCOTT'S NORMAN BARON.

Giant in Size and Strength—No one Has Done Justice to the Laid-back Picturesqueness of the Man—His Utter Fearlessness.

(Special Letter.)

HE papers have given many short biographies of H. W. Lawton, now a major general of volunteers, who commands one of the divisions of Shafter's army and whose men were engaged in the desperate assault of El Caney. They have told of his long years of service; of how he has worked himself up through the lieutenantcies to his present rank, and of the training given him of more than a quarter of a century of experience, but of the gigantic size, the phenomenal strength and activity, the abnormal endurance, the utter fearlessness and the unalterable picturesqueness of the man not a word. I have the honor to know him well, and since I like men whose basic manhood has not been utterly refined out of them, I like him.

Lawton reminds me always of Scott's Norman baron, Front de Boeuf. He has better morals, of course, as well as a very pretty taste in red wines and rocc birds, but he is as big as the giant slain by Richard of the Lion Heart, is as direct in his methods and in personal or general combat, every bit as savage. There is plenty of the primal man in him. What he thinks he says. He has a strong sense of justice, but his temper is terrific, and he is not gentle. He requires of subordinates the utmost endeavor and gets it. He asks no one to do work that he is not competent and willing to do himself.

MAJ.-GEN. LAWTON.

Naturally a leader, he goes first, and the more difficult or desperate the undertaking the faster he goes. Upon the gray granite slab which covers the bones of a Confederate officer who sleeps on the magnolia petalled uplands of Louisiana is an inscription: "He never told his men to go on."

That will do for Lawton when he dies. He is 6 feet 2 inches high. He weighs 210 pounds and nearly every ounce of it is bone and blood and tendon and muscle. He is 55 years old and as springy as a youth. His capacity to go without food, drink or sleep is seemingly unlimited. "Macumazahn" the Zulus called Quatermain—"the one who has his eyes open." Macumazahn Lawton will keep them open for a week at a stretch when necessary, and then walk, talk, eat, drink, or fight a dozen men to a standstill. He has lived a life of peril and hardship. His only rule of hygiene is a tub in the morning. He has taken no sort of care of himself. Yet so splendidly was he endowed by nature that there is no perceptible weakening of his forces. Apparently he is as powerful and enduring as when I saw him first. That was more than ten years ago. He had completed one of the most remarkable feats of strength and perseverance chronicled in the long annals of the Anglo-Saxon race, but he was as fresh as a rose in the morning.

He stood on the government reservation at San Antonio surrounded by the tawny savage band of Chiricahua Apaches, whom he had hunted off their feet. Near him, taciturn but of kindly visage, stood young Chief Naches, almost as tall as he. In a tent close by lay Geronimo, the medicine man, groaning from a surplussage of fresh beef eaten raw. The squat figures of the hereditary enemies of the whites grouped about him came only to his shoulder. He towered among them, stern, powerful, dominant—an incarnation of the spirit of the white man whose war drum has beat around the world. Clad in a faded, dirty fatigue jacket, a greasy flannel shirt of gray trousers so soiled that the stripe down the leg was barely visible, broad boots and a disreputable sombrero that shaded the harsh features burned almost to blackness, he was every inch a soldier and a man. To the other officers at the post the Indians paid no sort of attention. To them Gen. Stanley and his staff were so many well-dressed lay figures standing about as a part of a picture done for their amusement, but the huge, massive man with the stubble on his chin had shown them that he was their superior on hunting grounds that were theirs by birthright, and they hung upon his slightest word.

For the tenth time Geronimo's band had jumped the San Carlos reservation. The spring grass was two inches high and the Indian lust for blood was awake. As usual, troops were started upon a perilous chase. For days they followed the trail over a country that God Almighty made in wrath. Further and further into the vast solitudes they toiled. Volcanic crests reared about them. Lava tore the leather from their feet. They drank from springs that gushed thousands of feet above the valleys. They wandered in canons so deep and dark that through the narrow ribbon of white far above them the stars were seen at midday. They lived upon animals no wilder than the men they were pursuing, and scarcely more wild than they. Now and then, from a forest of pine far above them, a shred of blue smoke drifted on the furnace air, followed by the shrill of the bullet's wild singing. The horses long since had been left behind. The cavalymen were on foot with Lawton at their head, his teeth hard set. "We'll walk them down," he told his sergeant when the mountains were reached. He was walking them down.

Six weeks afterwards an Indian, whose bones seemed ready to start through his skin, came to the camp and said that Geronimo was ready to surrender. Lawton went alone to the lair of the starving wolves and received their submission. Cavernous eyes glared at him. Lips black from thirst and hunger were drawn back over discolored teeth. Skeleton fingers pointed at him. From skeleton jaws came sounds of pleadings mixed with wrath. The poison of bitter racial hatred was in every glance. "Even the rocks smelled like mad Indian," he told me with a laugh long afterward. He lounged among them, their master by virtue of superior courage and strength.

Dr. Oliver Guiteaux, Veterinary Surgeon of that city, a well-known man there, as well as in Kalamazoo and Marshall, speaks of his experience with the little conqueror and the result of a few timely words of advice. He says:

"I was standing in Amberg & Murphy's drug store in Battle Creek one day when a friend of mine came in and asked for a box of Doan's pills. After he had made his purchase I said quietly to him, 'You have made a mistake in buying those.' His reply was, 'How is that?' I said 'Doan's Kidney Pills are worth all the others put together.' As he wanted my reasons for thinking so I told him that my kidneys had bothered me for years, that I suffered from backache until I could scarcely stand it, that I had nearly every symptom to be found where the kidneys are affected, that I had used every remedy I could find, including box after box of the one he just purchased, and that until I used Doan's Kidney Pills I might have taken as many spoonfuls of water, in fact, I think some of them hurt me. A couple of weeks after this I met him on the street, when he said: 'Doc, Doan's Kidney Pills are just as you represented. After using the box about which we had a conversation in Amberg & Murphy's drug store I was as bad as ever. I then procured Doan's and stuck to their treatment until they cured me.'
