PAINT AND PAPER ARTISTICALLY 'PLIED.'

YARNALL GOLD-CURE UNDER- GONE A TRANSFORMATION.

The Interior Presents a Decidedly Beautiful Appearance.

The Yarnall Gold-Cure Institute which is located on such a light spot in Northville has a handsome exterior appearance which has always bespoke the homelike comforts and attractiveness within. Its exterior appearance never for a moment belied what might be expected upon the inside, but with the aid of paper, paint and decorations in the hands of a skilled artist for the two past weeks the interior has undergone a change that neither the outside nor pen can properly depict and which to be properly appreciated must be seen.

Every room has undergone a change that is both pleasing and restful to the eye. The halls have all been newly finished in terra cotta ingrain paper, with a shaded red rose border to match, while the ceiling contains figures of gilt to give a pleasing effect and the wood work has been painted to match. Dr. Yarnall's private office is finished off in a similarly rich manner to that of the halls.

The reading room is finished in a pea green ingrain with a vainscotting of quarter sawed oak molding for a chair rest, which is followed to the floor by a tile work oil-finish paper.

The parlor is finished with olive green and gold paper which harmonizes with the handsome velvet Brussels carpet.

The operating room is finished in three pretty shades of French yellow. On the second floor the spacious halls are finished in terra cotta colors the same as below. The smoking room here, which overlooks the street and occupies nearly the whole front, is exceptionally beautiful in its finish along the side walls of robin's egg-blue ingrain paper, while the ceiling is of a baby-blue tint, with a rich wide border of roses to make both a striking and harmonizing effect.

The club or writing room just back of the smoking room has an artistic finish of sky blue colors.

The wood work throughout the building has all been done in enamel finish and in colors in harmony with the walls and ceiling. Nick Nolan, formerly of Detroit but now of Northville, did the work and it shows unquestionable artistic skill. The designs were all the personal selections of Dr. Yarnall himself and it reflects no small amount of credit upon his taste for that which is both unique and artistic. Nothing of the kind has ever been attempted here and we doubt that another institute of even a similar kind in the United States presents such a tasteful, attractive and at the same time beautiful interior appearance as this. Dr. Yarnall's idea to make the institute as home-like and attractive as possible for his patients has been most successfully carried out.

THE THIRD NUMBER.

The "Funny" Canary Will Be at the Opera House Next Week.

The third number of the C. E. lecture series will be given in the opera house next week Thursday evening. Hoyt L. Canary is the attraction and the funny man's most amusing lecture, "Around the Store," will be presented. Canary is about the funniest man on the lecture platform and "Around the Store" is his best. In it he depicts the sayings and doings of those who sit about the country grocery store stove during the long winter days and nights. It will be one of the most humorous as well as interesting lectures ever heard in Northville. Tickets on sale at Merritt and Co.'s and at the door.

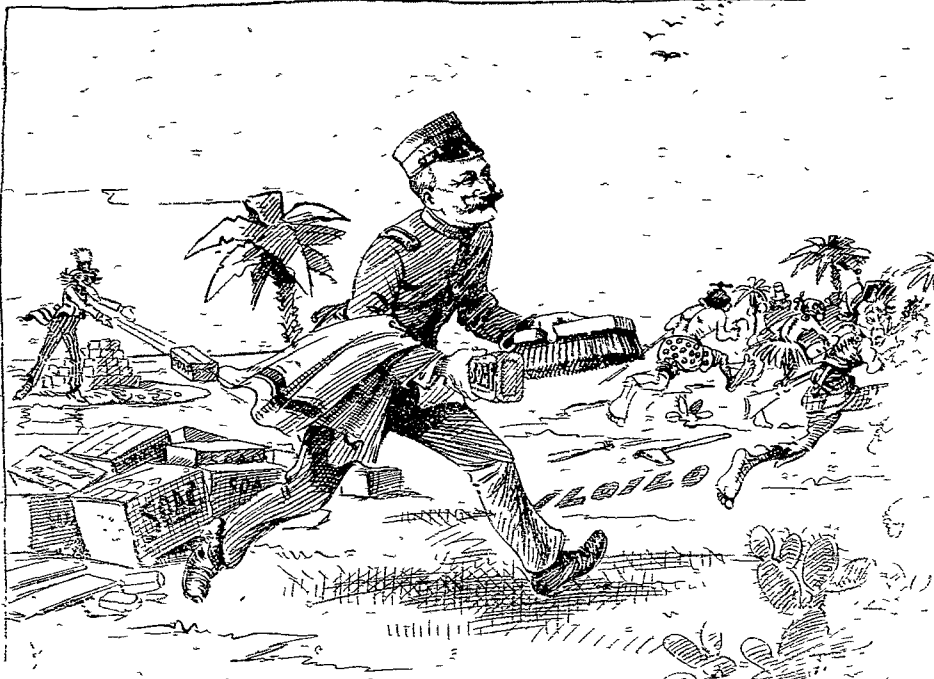

Home Seeker's Excursions

On Jan. 17, Feb. 7 and 21, March 7 and 21 April 4 and 18, agents of the C. H. & D. Ry. will sell home-seekers' tickets to points east of the Mississippi river and south of the Ohio River, except to Florida, at the rate of one regular fare plus $2 for the round trip. Call on C. H. & D. Agents for information.

MICHIGAN'S 62D ANNIVERSARY.

W. R. C. AND SCHOOL WILL CELEBRATE IT THE 26TH.

Public Asked to Show Appreciation By Attending Entertainment.

Michigan's sixty-second birthday as a state, an anniversary which should be of great interest to every citizen of our commonwealth, occurs on the 26th of the present month, and arrangements are being made by Northville WRC and the school to observe it fittingly and as they believe in a manner that will be entertaining as well as instructive to all who may contribute by their presence to the success of the occasion. It is hoped that the people of our village will appreciate the efforts of the teachers, pupils and the ladies of the corps to commemorate an event so important to all patriotic Michigan citizens and show their appreciation by attending the entertainment, at the close of which opportunity will be given them to meet our teachers socially an opportunity that is not offered as frequently as should be the case for the mutual pleasure and benefit of teachers and patrons of the school. The program will be published next week.

OAKLAND CO.'S INSURANCE COMP'Y.

ANNUAL MEETING WAS HELD AT PONTIAC ON MONDAY.

Refused to Pay Loss on a Threshing Machine.

The annual meeting of the Monitor Insurance Co. of Oakland county, held at Pontiac this week showed that the company now has a membership of 4,257, an increase of three over a year ago. This year's assessment is $2.98 per $1,000, which is higher than that of a year ago. The officers elected for the ensuing year are: President, George D. Cowden, vice-president, Joseph A. Graley, secretary, William E. Carpenter, treasurer, Chauncey Wolcott; directors, A. Tuttle, Geo. German and W. P. Hicks. Wolcott was elected treasurer on his offer to make the collection of all assessments for one half of one per cent.

There was a warm contest over the proposition to allow a claim of $500.00 Kellogg & Joslin at Holly, for the loss of a threshing machine. The machine was not in the place where it was insured when burned and on that account the directors refused to pay the insurance. A resolution was offered that the charter of the company be amended so as to permit the payment of this loss. On the ground that the passage of such a measure would bring up hundreds of dollars' worth of back claims which were disallowed under similar circumstances, the chairman refused to entertain the motion.

How about the editor? Didn't the ladies include him in their beneficence? Mean trick.

An Orion lady has been for some time suffering severely with a pain in one of her lower limbs and last week her physician cut into the flesh and found a large needle. The lady had no idea how or when it could have been taken into her system. It is needless to remark that she knows how it got out.

In school in Shiawassee county last week a little pupil was asked "who discovered America?" The reply came quickly "Hazen S. Pingree."

You are mistaken, little dear, Hazen didn't discover America, he just owns it—Fenton Independent.

Wyandotte has had so many accidents with her electric light system that the council last week ordered a thorough investigation of the management of the plant. The city has been in darkness for several days lately, and this state of affairs has occurred two or three times within a few months, causing general dissatisfaction. People are demanding that more light be thrown on the matter.

The Wyandotte Herald must have had a dearth of s's last week. A shoe ad presented a rather striking appearance by extolling all sorts of "hoes." There was a long row of "hid button hoese" and the list finished up with "a good working hoe for men, $1." Every one who read the ad said ho ho!

Farmington Helping Hand society had a chicken pie supper last week which netted $17. It is to be hoped that none of the hands surreptitiously helped themselves to anybody's hens. There has been a great deal of complaint lately in some parts of Oakland county that unknown parties are too handy in helping folks get rid of their poultry.

An exchange says that the late William B. Smallbridge of Glenville, W. Va., a veteran of the Civil War, carried a bullet in his heart for thirty-seven years. His death was not due to the presence of the bullet, and, in fact, he never suffered any inconvenience from it. Before his death he asked his physician, in the interest of science, to make an autopsy to find the bullet. The physician did so and found it imbedded in the heart.

Rev. Mr. Herbener created a sensation in his church at Northville, Sunday evening by requesting the ladies to take off their big hats. It would be a good thing if the churches in Farmington would do the same thing. It makes a man's head, neck and back ache to keep dodging in order to see around a big hair in front of him. Ladies will take off their hats in a theater, why not in a church?—Farmington Enterprise.

The Record's exchanges lately have published the account of the recent examination of a soil sent to the agricultural college by a farmer who killed them because he thought they were destroying his grain. No grain whatever was found in their crops but 45,000 nettle seeds were found. Other examinations at the same place have disclosed grasshoppers, worms, climb bugs and weed seeds in the crops of these much hunted birds. After awhile the human race will learn to be willing to believe that the Lord knows his own business.

Town folks are divided into nine separate classes about as follows:—First, those who go out of town to do their shopping. Second, those who are opposed to improvements. Third, those who prefer a quiet town to one of push and business. Fourth, those who imagine they own the town. Fifth, those who deride public-spirited men. Sixth, those who oppose every movement that does not originate with themselves. Seventh, those who oppose every movement that does not appear to benefit them. Eighth, those who seek to injure the credit or reputation of individuals. Ninth, those who can't and won't subscribe to their own weekly paper.—E.C.

To this we would add Tenth, those who make no effort to help their local paper and find fault with every phase of its management yet expect it to compare favorably with the city dailies; and eleventh, those who do not advertise anything in the home paper when they have anything to sell, but stand by when they want to see what time the trains leave. None of the above classes are prominent in Northville, we are happy to say.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., JAN. 13, '99

The Electric Car Route.

The electric car route having at last been practically decided as coming up Main street from the depot, a much smaller amount of objections will be raised than would have been prophesied as forth-coming twenty or even sixty days ago. The matter has really been allowed to settle itself. When the route was first talked some months ago, a street car line and street cars in general were looked upon as some great octopus, with huge long arms and extraordinary sharp teeth that would as it came up a street, devour horses and school children and nearly everything else in sight.

Since that time our people have taken a calmer view of the matter and the sentiment in a great measure changed from day to day until now it appears that a large majority are in favor of the Main street route. We apprehend that after all the line up that street will not be such a disadvantage as was at first supposed. To be sure a few horses may object to being hitched in close proximity to the cars but there are plenty of side streets to meet the demand as fast as the occasion warrants. As for the street itself, it will if the ordinance is complied with, be made better by the paving inside and outside thereof. To wagon traffic that point alone will be no small item. Cars will not run faster than every half hour, therefore even to fractious horses they will not prove a continual annoyance, and we dare say that most animals will be reconciled to them in a very short space of time. As far as danger to life is concerned it would be nearly as great upon one street as another, but with the safety-brakes now in use upon the cars and the slow speed of them through the village that would be reduced to a minimum. To be sure Main street is a little narrow in places or at least more narrow than it really ought to be for street cars but that can't be helped now. These were laid out before street cars were thought of and the people will have to get along in some way. But as we said at the beginning, it won't be near so bad as people at first thought, and in the end Main street will be made more valuable and attractive because of the car line upon its drive way.

Poverty Not a Misfortune to a Young Man.

Young man, do you think it a great misfortune that you were not born with a silver spoon in your mouth, but have to work for every cent you have? Don't you lose a moment's rest on that account. The best men this country ever saw were launched out on the sea of life in the flat boat of "poverty." The lamented Garfield was one of them, and after he had gone all through the voyage, and had earned a berth in a palace steamer he said to a friend

"I am convinced that the best thing that can happen to a boy is to be thrown overboard, where he will be obliged to sink or swim."

Opportunity is the poor boy's capital stock, and nobody can take it from him. Whether there be friends, they may die or forsake him. Whether there be riches, they may take unto themselves wings and fly away. But no boy was ever so friendless and so poor that this priceless bag of opportunity did not still contain sufficient capital with which to make a start in life. No need that a young man may select, however high and exalted, can be considered presumptuous in this wonderful age of limitless opportunity, and he has but to decide upon his destination, and he will find some road leading to it.—Darius Breeze

Suburban News.

Royal Oak folks are kicking vigorously about the establishment by Detroit sports of a pool room in their village. They are going to make things lively for the promoters of the scheme.

Diederich Johnson, Sr. for thirty years a resident of Plymouth, and a well known and highly respected farmer, died suddenly at 3 o'clock Sunday morning of heart disease. He enjoyed good health up to the time of his death.

A Carleton barber urges as an inducement to people to patronize him that he can "obliterate the difficulty" of a fellow's best girl not appreciating the good night ceremony "when your chin is stubby." So can she. Don't kiss him on the chin.

Last week, in continuation of Villard's electric road agitation, a meeting of the farmers of the township was held, at which the majority present rather favored the Main Street route for the road. The council will now have to decide the matter.

Fifteen leading Pontiac grocers have signed a contract to close their stores at 7 o'clock. With a few exceptions the dry goods, clothing, hardware and shoe stores are also in the movement, but one or two large firms refuse to close until they get ready.

Pontiac society folks had a Delta Sigma Nu party last week, but old people were allowed to participate as well as Nu. The managers Delta winning hand when they got up the affair as they well Nu would be the case. It was a very enjoyable occasion according to the Post.

A Holly doctor has been appointed deputy sheriff. Probably he desires the office to facilitate his work of collecting bills. There it will be handy when there is a fight. The Dr. can arrest the parties and patch up their broken heads and get his pay for both jobs without troubling the authorities to look after them separately.

James Camp of Birmingham, the motorman who lost half a leg in an accident on the Detroit and Pontiac electric road in June '97, and who immediately sued the company for $20,000 has just been awarded $7,000 damages against the Citizens' Railway Co. The accident was caused by carelessness on the part of the crew of a construction car belonging to the latter company which was running on the other track at a switch.

As an instance of the possibilities involved in writing it "98" from force of habit, the Holly Independent tells of a man who gave his note at the beginning of a new year and inadvertently dated it with the figures of the year just gone. When time for payment arrived he was only saved from being obliged to pay a year's extra interest by the fact that reliable witnesses were present who could testify positively as to the time the note was given.

In these hurrying nineteenth century days when everything is abbreviated to keep up with the rush we have become accustomed to writing and saying only the last two figures of the year. A year or two ago people began to wonder what we were going to do with the year of our Lord 1900, as its designation did not lend itself readily to being clipped in two. However the schools and colleges have determinedly tackled the situation and speak of the class of '00 in the most matter of fact way. It is easy enough to write it, but how are you going to say it?

THEY ROPED HIM IN.

And Thereby the Business Man Was Taught a Lesson.

The business man who owns two dogs made a sad mistake a few days ago. Every Sunday he takes the dogs for a walk, and for fear that they may go astray he fastens them together with a stout rope. The little dog, he feels assured, will not lose the big dog, and he is quite positive that the big dog will not lose the little one. Of course if the big dog takes it into his massive head that he wants to go in a certain direction he is pretty apt to have his way. Luckily he is an easily persuaded animal, and the little dog, by the exercise of some diplomacy, gets fully as much fun out of these promenade as the big fellow.

Well, all three of his friends were out walking Sunday, the two dogs and the master, and the dogs were some distance ahead. The man was drifting deep in places and the master determined to turn and go back. He whistled for the dogs.

The big dog whirled around. He saw his master and stopped and instantly came full tilt toward him. The small dog was taken by surprise and for a few moments could not regain his footing. When he did, he put his some tail running. They came down on the master at a stiff gallop.

As they approached their speed increased, the little dog at the end of the rope running for dear life. Just as they reached the master they separated, the little dog going around him to the right and the big dog to the left, the six feet of stout rope held taut between them.

When the master gathered himself out of the snowdrift, and blew the flakes from his mouth, and dug them from his ears, and rescued his hat, and brushed off a little of the more sticky mass, he started for home with one shivering hand grasping the rope, the dogs demurely trotting along on either side.

Hereafter he will either shorten the rope or else get behind a convenient tree the next time he whistles.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DISLOYALTY IS CHARGED.

Pingree and Pack Adherents Are Laying Blame for Defeat on Each Other.

SENATORIAL CONTEST LEAVES SORENESS

Anti-Pingreeites Will Try to Make Governor's Defeat More Complete in the Coming Fight for Justice of Supreme Court—Political Goss from the Capital.

(Special Correspondence)

Lansing, Jan. 9.—The senatorial contest and its results are said to have left some sores which it will require much time and tact to heal. It goes without saying that the adherents of Gov. Pingree and Albert Pack, who withdrew from the contest at the eleven-hour, leaving the field to Senator Burrows, are loud in their accusations of each other, the one charging that Pack sold out, and the other that the part played by Pingree and his followers was of such a character as to make certain Pack's defeat, and left him no other course to pursue than withdrawal. Each wing shows an evident desire to carve the other.

The Burrows campaign was in the hands of the oldest and most experienced political workers in the state and not only were they thoroughly organized, but had all sorts of money behind them. The opposition was loosely joined without a head and with scarcely a purpose. With organization, system and method, Burrows could easily have been beaten, but the democratic aggregation went to pieces before the test of strength came. The contest for the speakership of the house went against Pingree, and then Pack threw up the sponge. By returning from the field before it came to a vote, he did not save Pack's prestige, but he saved his money, for legislative votes in affairs of this kind are not paid for until delivered.

The opposition is rejoicing at the trimming Pingree received, and sees in it the beginning of his political downfall. But if they have their ear to the ground their rejoicing will not long continue. Pingree's message to the legislature, crude and demagogic as it may be in many respects, is one that is being received among the people as no gubernatorial message ever has been received before, and the old machine will have to labor long and assiduously to counteract its effects. His defeat may mean the beginning of Pingree's decline as a republican but it does not by any means destroy him as a factor in Michigan politics.

The state judicial convention will be held next month. Pingree is opposed to the reappointment of Justice Grant, and the results of the nomination convention and of the election in April will show to what extent he has lost his grip.

Since Burrows won his victory over the governor's candidate, Mr. Pack, the forces of the latter have been carefully and continually joined by the former's friends, presumably to strengthen the latter for the coming nomination of a candidate for justice of the supreme court. In truth, it appears as though there might be an unending clash between the two sides throughout the session. The Pingree men have a plan to change the rule of the house so as to allow them to change a rule by a majority vote, instead of a two-thirds vote as heretofore the object being to allow them more easily to draw bills out of committee, in case Adams' committee try to choke Pingree's legislation.

It is the prevailing opinion here that Mr. Pack will be in the race two years hence when Senator McMillan's successor is elected. Mr. Pack will carry with him, while he remains in private life, just as much respect and honor as though he had been the successful candidate, and that he will be heard from later there is not a shadow of a doubt.

Gov. Pingree denies that he will be a candidate for the United States senate in 1901 to succeed Senator James McMillan. "What could I do?" he said, "as the representative of millions?" In the minority among so many I would practically be a nonentity outing my head against a stone wall. There is already much speculation among politicians throughout the state as to whether Senator McMillan desires to succeed himself. The general opinion expressed is that he can have a third term if he so desires. Close personal friends of the senator state, however, that he will not enter the senate again.

The governor says if the legislature fails to pass the Atkinson railroad taxation bill this session he will never give the legislators another chance, and will take up some other reform. According to the view of Lansing Commissioner French the friendship between Gov. Pingree and Albert Pack remains as firm as ever, but it says there is also no bad feeling between the Pack and Burrows men. "There is no doubt that Gov. Pingree's heart was with us," said French. "Some of the governor's workers fell down, it is true, but Pingree can't be blamed. You know he can't get down and do political hustling. He isn't supposed to."

the only name mentioned for the honor is that of Representative Scully, of Iowa.

Until the committees are announced speculation as to the form railroad legislation will take is unprofitable and the anti-Pingree plan is said to be to prepare a bill which will increase railroad taxes to some extent, but which will depart from a vital principle of the Atkinson bill by retaining the present system of taxation according to earnings, instead of on assessed valuation. Michigan is to have a little war investigation of her own. There are all sorts of rumors flying about as to extravagance and mismanagement in the matter of fitting out the troops. It is probable that the governor's followers in the house will make the move for the examination, seeing that it must come, and thus seek to weaken the effect of the charges. One representative who is very close to the governor on all else is a demander of the investigation. He says it is bad enough for Michigan to have to pay C. O. D. but her credit must be low if she has to pay in advance of the manufacture of goods.

JASON

SANDERSON CASE.

Physicians Testify in Trial Where Wife Is Accused of Feeding Her Husband Ground Glass.

Battle Creek Jan. 10.—An unusually long adjournment of six weeks was broken in the Sanderson case hearing Monday, in which Mrs. Mary Sanderson, the young wife, is accused of feeding ground glass to her aged husband. The newly elected prosecutor Jesse M. Hatch, placed Dr. J. H. Wattles on the stand, but he testified, much to the pleasure of the defense, that Mr. Sanderson was kind and attentive to his wife, that he had conditions about his head, which, however, were not as serious as they were represented to be. Dr. Wattles refused to give expert testimony, as did Dr. F. F. Piche, formerly of Chicago, who superintended the secret exhuming and dissection of Mr. Sanderson's body. Dr. Wattles was the family physician of the Sandersons. The defense has received scores of letters from professional glass eaters who agree to eat any kind of the substance before a jury. Mr. Sanderson keeps her health and is gaining flesh, although an accused murderer.

FOR A BIG BRIDGE.

Railroads Unite for the Erection of a $3,000,000 Structure Across the River at Detroit.

Detroit Jan. 10.—Henry Russell, counsel for the Michigan Central railroad, stated Monday that an agreement had been reached between the railroads concerned in the erection of a bridge across the Detroit river. Said Mr. Russell: "The interests involved have incorporated for the building of a bridge to cost $3,000,000. No location has been decided upon, and there is none upon which railroads have set their hearts." The railroads interested are the Michigan Central, Wabash, Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific.

Plucky Girls.

Ionia Jan. 7.—Misses Etta and Myrtle Minor, daughters of Blake Minor of Berlin, aided in the capture of three men who escaped from the state house of correction and will get two-fifths of the $75 reward. The convicts, John Thrue, John Hubbard and Charles Tracy, took refuge in Minor's barn. The girls drove them out and informed Farmer John Smith, Harvey Lowery and Osborn Degraw, who overtook the fugitives and brought them to town.

Irish Like the Flour.

Charlottesville Jan. 7.—Orrin E. Parkard, the largest grain dealer in the county, has signed a contract to furnish eastern parties 5,000 bushels of wheat, which after being ground into flour will be shipped to Ireland. This is the second contract Mr. Parkard has accepted and it is evident that Irish country boys are popular among the Irish here.

Explosion of Oil Is Fatal.

Detroit Mich. Jan. 9.—Through careless handling of a gasoline stove Mrs. Charles Lucius was perhaps fatally burned and her two-year-old son was so badly suffocated by smoke that he died while being rescued from the burning house by a fireman. Mrs. Lucius' husband was also burned while rescuing his wife.

Tax Sales Reduced.

Lansing, Jan. 10.—Auditor-General Dix is authority for the statement that the tax sales now being published will be smaller by nearly one-third than previous sales, on account of decisions of the courts and the fact that people are generally paying their taxes more than they did a few years ago.

Text-Book Commission.

Lansing, Jan. 9.—Superintendent Hammond announces that the state text book commission created by the Graham-Forsyth uniform text book law will meet in this city next Friday. The commission can do very little, however, as the law is generally pronounced a failure.

Death of Hon. Reuben Goodrich.

Irausville Mich. Jan. 9.—Hon. Reuben Goodrich died here Sunday, aged 79. In addition to having been prominent in state politics he was appointed by Lincoln receiver of the United States land office.

Ordered to Cuba.

Washington, D. C. Jan. 7.—Orders have been issued by the war department for the thirty-first Michigan volunteer infantry, now at Knoxville, Tenn., to proceed to Santa Clara, Cuba, for garrison duty.

To Meet January 1.

Lansing Jan. 8.—Chairman Marsh, of the republican state central committee, says that the committee will meet in Detroit January 18 to fix the date of the state judicial convention.

FULL OF INTEREST.

Such a Newsworthy Nature Will Be Found by a Perusal of These Paragraphs.

Clifford Ellis was killed at Walker while decking logs. Mount Pleasant is agitating the question of a beet sugar factory. A swine plague is prevailing among the herds in Moore township near Arlette.

Frumman Newberry, of Detroit, has been appointed an aide on Gov. Pingree's staff.

Levi Grandy, for many years a prominent Detroit real estate man, died at Denver, Col.

Mrs. William Campbell was buried to death at Grand Rapids by the explosion of a gasoline stove.

John Richmond, aged 21, of Fairfield township, Shiawassee county, was killed by a falling tree in the woods.

The total bonded indebtedness of Port Huron January 1, 1898, was $516,303.51, an increase of $4,673 during the year just closed.

John M. Foote of Edgewood, has been appointed industrial teacher at the Fort Totten (N. D.) Indian school, at $600 a year.

The latest railway project discussed in Ionia is an electric line from there to Crystal Lake via Palo, Hubbardston and Calson City.

Grand Haven citizens would like to see free mail delivery established. The postal business is $1,500 below the required amount.

The total bonded indebtedness of Port Huron January 1, 1898, was $516,303.51, an increase of $4,673 during the year just closed.

The Byron Herald says the remains of Mrs. May Towel, the nurse who died in Porto Rico, will be brought to Michigan February 1.

The state gauger has completed plans for a state lecture bureau, the newly elected lecturer Mrs. F. D. Saunders, of Kalamazoo, to manage it.

John Meyer, of Drenthe, Ottawa county, makes annually 2,000 pairs of wooden shoes and ships them to all parts of the country.

Ludwig, city council, has shut off all street lights for two months for the sake of economy. There is loud complaint from citizens.

The Belgium Chicago company will move its plant from New York to Bay City—the sixth new industry locating there within a month.

Mill Creek, four miles north of Grand Rapids, wants to improve its cemetery and it will give a series of dances to raise the necessary funds.

Fairchild Post, O. A. R. of Glass Lake, has voted to surrender its charter and disband January 20. The Woman's Relief corps will continue.

The business men of Niles will organize a chamber of commerce with a view of promoting the welfare of the city and securing new factories.

The rye farmers about Grand Haven are making that city one of the greatest rye markets in Michigan. More rye is shipped from Grand Haven than from any other point in the state.

Wildcats are being killed in great numbers all through Michigan. In Gladwin county one man recently killed 13 in one day, making $45.00 bounty on wild cats being three dollars each.

There were 12 fires in Cheboygan in the past year. In 11 of these the total loss was less than $2,000, but in the twelfth it was $200,000 when Thompson Smith's Sons' mill burned on September 26.

There will be a number of new features at the Y. M. C. A. state convention, to be held in Saginaw, West side January 23 to 25, inclusive. More time will be given to the discussion of topics brought before the convention and special attention will be directed toward social and entertainment.

Barges Hauled in Tripco.

Grand Rapids, Jan. 10.—Word has been received in this city of suicide by hanging in San Francisco of Mrs. Charles McQueen, of this city. Mr. McQueen left for the west Tuesday night. Mr. McQueen was married in Salt Lake City six years ago to Miss Minor daughter of Judge Minor of the Utah supreme court. Upon the way from Salt Lake City to this city the young bride showed symptoms of a mental malady and she was taken to a private sanitarium for treatment. Mrs. McQueen returned to the home of her parents. She went to San Francisco last week.

Busy Days in Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids Jan. 11.—The furniture season is now in full swing and all records are being beaten in the matter of arrivals. Over 100 buyers came in Monday, as many more landed Tuesday and others will come during the week. Those who came last week are early birds, have completed their inspections and are now placing orders; they are buying freely. It is expected the number of visitors will reach 700 for the season, and the indications point to the largest volume of business the market has ever had.

Horsewhipped by Women.

Flint Jan. 7.—John Heale, accused of peeing in at windows and circulating slanderous stories about prominent persons, has met with punishment. Thursday night a number of women armed with horsewhips called Heale to his door. Upon his appearance they threw a rope about his neck and took turns in giving him a thorough thrashing until he pleaded for mercy.

Fire at Benton Harbor.

Benton Harbor, Jan. 5.—The lumber office and yards of W. P. Robbins were destroyed by fire here. The loss is estimated at from $5,000 to $12,000, partially covered by insurance. Mr. Robbins has been in the lumber business in Benton Harbor for nearly 25 years. The O'Connor boat dock building was also destroyed.

MME. ADELINA PATTI.

Another Chapter About to Be Added to the Love Story of the Famous Opera Singer.

The frequently circulated rumor to the effect that Mme. Adelina Patti is to become a bride has been confirmed, and the wedding is scheduled to take place in Europe early in February.

The man upon whom her favor has fallen is Baron Cedersjorm, a stalwart and youthful nobleman of Swedish birth, who has been until recently earning a rather precarious living as a teacher of gymnastics in London. But water never runs higher than its source, nor is art ever greater than the artist's capacity for feeling.

Mme. Patti, who thrills every heart with her love songs, has herself a ultra-romantic heart and her life has been ideally romantic. Though of Italian parentage, she was born in Madrid, and spent a great deal of her early life in the picturesque old city.

She is said to have experienced her first love affair when she met the brother of her brother-in-law, a handsome lad of good but poor family, to whom she became engaged. The couple did not, however, marry, and soon Patti's affections turned toward another, the Marquis de Caix, a Frenchman of wealth and social standing; he became her husband. They lived happily together for a time—or so gossips say until the fair singer met Signor Ernesto Nicolini; then there was an airing of family troubles in the divorce courts of Europe, resulting in Patti's freedom. Shortly after obtaining her divorce she wedded Nicolini, with whom she lived until his death, a little over a year ago.

Now she is to marry again, and there is to be another chapter in the story of "The Loves of Mme. Patti." Mme. Patti is a warm personal friend of Queen Victoria, and many letters of condolence are said to have been sent from Windsor castle during the singer's troubles. She first appeared on the billboards of this country in 1859 and has made several tours of the states.

J. ELFRETH WATKINS.

Building of the Pyramids Explained by the Curator of Technology of the National Museum.

J. Elfreth Watkins, curator of technology of the National museum is receiving constant congratulations on his paper, published in Cosmopolitan Magazine, on a probable method for the transportation and lifting of heavy bodies by the Ancients, which has been extensively commented upon, and has inspired other people to modify his idea and exploit it as their own. His explanation of the possible manner in which the great Pyramids could have been built is surely very original, but he explains the plan so clearly that it makes his supposed method seem the simplest and most probable one. Mr. Watkins shows how, by inclined planes of earth, stone, blocks or slabs of enormous weight could be put in place, levers and pry bars being employed in raising them and that the Pyramids could have been easily constructed by this simple means, the earth which had been used for the inclined planes having been filled into the pits from which it was taken, leaving the ground as level as before. Mr. Watkins' paper was read as long ago as February, 1898, and was widely copied and discussed in both domestic and foreign scientific journals. His colleagues at the museum regard it as most scholarly and able, and are extremely gratified at the complimentary way in which it has been received.

J. ELFRETH WATKINS.

(Curator of Technology, United States National Museum)

They Prefer Convict Life.

There are at present several old convicts in Fremantle (Western Australia) jail, who, though their time has long expired, live on there. They give as their reason that all the people they knew in the old country must be long since dead; so they prefer to remain where so much of their life has been spent. The old fellows are allowed to go into town, but must be back in time for lockup.

"Grandpa" Jno Daniels will give an address at the YMCA next Sunday afternoon. Mr. Daniels is one of the most charming speakers that the association has ever had. Many have heard him and will desire to hear him again. Call early.

Scenic Artist Pew finished the new drop curtain for the opera house last week and it will be on exhibit for the first time next week Thursday. The centerpiece is a faithful production of "Lovers' Lane" and is surrounded by business cards of a number of Northville's well known business men.

This Friday evening the YMCA will hold a book-reception at their rooms. Its purpose is to secure a supply of suitable books, magazines and papers of recent date with which to start the reading room. Every one interested is invited to be present and, if they can do so, to bring a book or books to contribute to this work.

At a regular meeting of the Daughters of Rebekah the following officers were elected: Noble Grand-Carrie Leavenworth; Vice Grand-Mrs. M. F. Stanley, Rec. Sec'-Grace Bateman, Fin. Sec'-Jay Leavenworth. Treas.-Mrs. Amelia Ford. The lodge is in a prosperous condition and has a number of candidates for initiation.

The Detroit Journal is nothing if not progressive. It's Tuesday's Semi-Weekly arrives here now on Monday, one day before it is published, and then the next day's news has to happen whether it wants to or not in case of any dire calamity however, advanced news will prove of special value to those people who want to get out of the road when Calam goes by.

Claude Shaffer's recent experience is a little ahead of anything thus far discovered by scientists. Some one shot his bird dog and after getting a damage suit ready, Claude sent a man out in the country to skin the animal, but he had been forestalled and another man had the scalp. Claude was mad in the first place, but when he found the hide gone the air became superlucially blue. Wednesday the dog came trotting into the hotel as lively as ever, being apparently none the worse for being killed and skinned.

The Ladies Aid society of the Methodist church held its annual meeting Tuesday afternoon and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Chas. Filkins, Vice-Pres Mrs. W. M. Ward; Secretary, Mrs. Paulger, Treasurer, Mrs. Jno. Gardner. The retiring president, Mrs. C. J. Ball, who has held the office for the past five years and who declined a re-election again because of ill health, was given a vote of thanks by the society and yesterday was given a banquet in the church parlors. The secretary's report showed that during the last three years the society had earned the remarkable sum of $887.00. During a lull in the feasting, Mrs. Ball was presented by the society with a beautiful International bible, and the retiring treasurer, Mrs. W. H. Hut-ton, was the recipient of a very pretty purse. The occasion was a decidedly pleasant one.

The society has expended $112.46 for the needy, besides distributing a large amount of clothing and provisions which had been donated to them.

An observing man well along in years made the following statement to the editor: "I've never seen a girl unfaithful to her mother that ever came to be worth a one-eyed button to her husband. I'm talking for the boys this time. If one of you boys ever comes across a girl with a face full of roses who says as you come to the door, 'I can't go for thirty minutes for the dishes are not washed,' you wait for that girl. You sit right down on the door step and wait for her. 'Cause some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right here you have lost an angel. Wait for that girl and stick to her like a burr in a mule's tail."

Thus far this season, C. C. Chadwick has sold 25 McCormick binders. Chad gets so earnestly engaged in talking machines sometimes that even the family driving horse can't keep track of him. The story goes that after selling a binder to a farmer four miles east of town this week, he let his horse standing in front of the granger's house and walked into the village. The horse waited a little while and then followed "Chad" into town arriving just a few minutes later, stopping at a familiar hitching post with a snarl and look that seemed to say "Well, by gosh."

Rightly made shoes and of good quality, or the "cheap" kind? Now which do you want, anyway?

Some people continually complain about how poor shoes are now-a-days, compared to a few years ago. The fact is, they're as good today as they ever were, if you get the right kind. If you don't get the right kind, that's another matter. We know the ladies' shoes we are selling at $2.00 and $2.50 a pair are the right kind--They're big bargains--We know it--There's no guess work about it--Maybe you're needing a pair.

For the Farmer's Benefit!

We write this for the benefit of the farmer who wants the best work done in the line of feed grinding. We have put in a new crusher and the work we are now doing is not surpassed in this part of the country. In fact it is better than any other mill can do and we are perfectly willing to leave the verdict to the farmer himself. If you want to see some of our work call at Carpenter, Yerkes & Harmon's store and you will find a sample of our corn and cob grinding. This is not a small lot ground for the occasion but a fair specimen of our average work.

Speaking of Flour

We are making the best article in that line that there is in these parts and it is only natural that we should as we have the only up-to-date mill in this section of the country and with skilled workmen to operate it we can get the best possible results. A fair trial is what we are entitled to and all we ask.

MADDENED BY GRIEF.

Chicago Policeman Ends His Life
on His Wife's Grave.

After Five Months' Mourning He Gives Up the Struggle—Great Attention for His Companion Officer
Remarkable by Friends.

Dressed in the uniform of a Chicago police department, Officer Axel I. Mikkelsen, of the West North avenue station, took his own life over his wife's grave in Mount Olive cemetery. His body, with the long blue coat neatly buttoned and on the breast the metal star of his office, was found in the evening. A bullet wound was in the right temple and a revolver was clasped in the cold fingers.

In the five months that Officer Mikkelsen had been a widower his grief for his lost wife never ceased to be exceptionally acute. He was a daily visitor to her grave, and frequently took flowers to strew on the mound. For hours he would often be on the grave, and that is why, when he was dead, the cemetery officials did not at first suspect the truth.

The officer's companions at the station were aware that he suffered intense anguish because of the bereavement but they did not think he was mentally unbalanced or dream that he contemplated suicide. He was always courteous to the other policemen and was never ill-natured. He endured in silence.

Mikkelsen was 37 years old and had been connected with the police department for nine years. During that time he had traveled out of the West North avenue station and was always considered an efficient officer. He lived at 139 Fowler street. His attachment for his wife before her death was often talked of by the neighbors. The pair were married 16 years ago and had five children, the eldest of whom is 15 years.

Officer Mikkelsen was detailed at a dance at Scandia hall, Milwaukee avenue and Huron street, Saturday night. Sunday he did not report for duty, and Monday he was again absent. When he was not present at roll call in the evening Lieut. Jurs, who is in command of the station, sent an officer to the missing policeman's home to learn the cause of his absence. There it was said he had left home early Monday morning and had not returned.

Lieut. Jurs knew of the officer's frequent visits to the grave of his wife, and he sent word to Lieut. Collins, of the Irving Park station, to detail two men to search for him. Policemen LeMayne and Weineke went to the saloon of Charles Hill, a brother-in-law of Mikkelsen, at Milwaukee avenue and Irving Park boulevard. He said Mikkelsen had been in the saloon during the afternoon and said he was going to the cemetery.

The officers went to the cemetery and after a short search found the body of Mikkelsen. The officer had evidently been dead for several hours. He was lying face downward. No one about the cemetery had heard the shot fired. The remains were taken to the Irving Park police station and from there to an undertaking establishment.

Lieut. Jurs, in speaking of the suicide, declared the officer must have become demented from brooding over his wife's death. He said the couple were greatly attached to each other and that Mikkelsen was heartbroken when his wife died.

"Since I have been in charge of the station," said the lieutenant, "Mikkelsen was one of my most faithful officers. He was never absent from duty without leave, and when he did not appear Sunday I feared he was ill. When he was again absent Monday evening I became worried and sent to his house. While I never knew of his making threats to kill himself, I was not surprised when I heard of his death, as I knew he was despondent."

When Mikkelsen left home in the morning he bade all his children goodbye and said he would return some time during the day. He told his housekeeper he was not going to work until evening, but he did not know when he would return home. He left no note explaining the cause of his act and nothing of value was found in his clothing.

Smallest French Soldier.

The smallest soldier in France is Louis Bernadot, of Laret, who is only two feet four inches in height. He is a dwarf, with a slight moustache. When he presented himself to draw his number out of the conscription urn it was discovered that his head did not reach the top of the table on which the urn was placed so a gendarme held him up by the collar to enable him to put his hand in the urn.

WOMEN'S REALM

PROMENADE TOILETTE

Quite Smart is the Appearance Made in This Simple Winter Costume.

Smart indeed are the promenade coiffures of winter. The waist of one recently seen was executed in heavy tan broadcloth. It completely covered the hips and rounded off at the front precisely after the style of a man's cutaway. The sleeves were tight-fitting, finished around the wrists with bands of black velvet. The belt and collar were also of velvet. Broad lapels of broadcloth embroidered in black silk bordered the front.

The skirt of this costume was of dark green and cardinal plaid with a box-like figure of light brown between each square. It fitted closely over the hips and was made without trimming of any kind.

A fan of white with black crown and white pique was also worn.

OLD FASHIONED

Recalls the life of the homestead. There is a good and grand old-fashioned perfume.

Lavender Rediviva

Old-fashioned lavender perfume has come back to favor among the many other revivals of nearly a century ago. It appears in the list of French extracts and scents and its delicate fragrance emanates from the petals of choice Parisian-made artificial flowers. The color of the lavender is agreeable to many people who do not like other perfumes. Its fragrance is always associated with freshness, sweetness and household cleanliness. Poets have sung the praise of lavender and in general are not on the odoriferous grey-blue-tinted spike ranks next only to the regal rose and the modest violet.

To Mend Waterproof Cloth

Macintoshes which are autumn favorites become necessities may be mended in a very simple manner. Dissolve some pieces of pure India rubber in kerosene to create a stiff paste, choose a lot of stuff as much like the waterproof material as possible, and apply some of the cement to it and to the edges of the macintosh. Then bring the two pieces over the new material to form a patch and place a weight over the part until the cement is quite set and firm.

Throat Culture.

The throat should be rubbed full and pulled like, and nothing will give those quacks so quickly as the daily exercise of pulling the head completely forward, several times in one direction and an equal number in the opposite way. This exercise fills out the hollows like magic and strengthens the muscles as well.

PRETTY SCREENS.

HOW TO BUILD A USEFUL BIT OF FURNITURE WITH LITTLE OUTLAY.

Japanese and Chinese Screens Can Be Purchased at Very Reasonable Prices, But They Can Be Made Home at Much Less Expense.

The screens that come from Japan and China are best for the moderate purse. They can be purchased at reasonable prices in almost every town and city in the country. Or screens at still less expense may be made at home.

First determine upon the size of the screen, the height of the panels, their width, and whether two, three or four shall be used. A screen of good proportion is one formed of three panels, five and one-half feet high by two feet in width.

Have a frame made by the carpenter, or, better still, make it yourself if you are clever at such work. It is a simple matter to form the skeleton of strips of light pine from an inch to an inch and a half in thickness. Only the outside pieces and two cross pieces are required to brace the frame and make it taut and firm. Once the frame is completed the rest is easy.

Now stretch over the frame some figured burlap, that can be secured at the low cost of 12½ cents a yard. Choose this for the face of the screen. Place the frame upon the floor. Tack the edge of the burlap to the top piece of the frame and stretch tightly and tack to the lower pieces and sides. In doing this the edge of the burlap should be drawn over the corner of the wood so that when the back is covered in the same way all the surface is smooth except the rim of the screen. This rim is then treated by a covering of gimp or braid, or a narrow piece of burlap, hemmed and bound. Fasten it on with brass-headed tacks, and the panel is completed. Light brass hinges join the panels, and the screen is ready for use.

Many other cheap fabrics may be used to cover these screens. Figured burlaps, blue denim creton or inexpensive tapestries all make admirable surfaces. They can sometimes be combined with good results. Thus a screen may be faced with denim and the reverse covered with creton or the panels may be divided, the upper half covered with tapestry and the lower half with some good tone of burlap, or the three panels may be covered with different fabrics. Should the screen be intended for use in a bedroom it can be made to serve a double purpose by covering but one side with burlap or denim. The cross pieces should be three or four in number and the frame generally strengthened a little when

SCREEN FOR A FIREPLACE

Also, the reverse side of the screen becomes a wardrobe and towel rack. By fastening hooks in the top strip of the screen dresses can be hung upon it and towels, stockings etc. can be placed on the cross pieces. There is really no end to the uses to which screens may be put and their manufacture is so simple and so inexpensive that every ingenious woman may possess one.

American Women.

Women are keenly competing with men in art and professional life in America, as is shown by recent statistics. In the United States there are 4,000 actresses and 35,000 women vocalists and instrumentalists, 11,000 are professional artists, 890 journalists and 2,800 who are engaged in literary work of one kind or another. The number of women who are dramatic authors or theatrical managers is 600.

THE WOMAN OF TACT.

The Numerous Ways in Which She Makes Herself Loved.

She had been talking pleasantly to two or three women. She had made her good-byes all cheerful and bright, and, after she had disappeared, one woman turned to another and said in a tone that was scoffing: "She is a thorough woman of tact." Now, in this case, the woman who had said none but pleasant words, who, by a bright story, had prevented the discussion of a petty scandal, was a woman who was as brave-hearted as any that ever lived, and who bore, not only her own, but the burdens of a good many other people, yet she saw no reason why she should inflict her troubles on her friends, or why she should not be in its best sense a woman of tact.

A woman of tact is one who feels that the story told to hurt your feelings is essentially bad taste, and inconsiderate of the feelings of others.

A woman of tact is the one who is courteous to old people who laugh with the young and who makes herself agreeable to all women in all conditions of life.

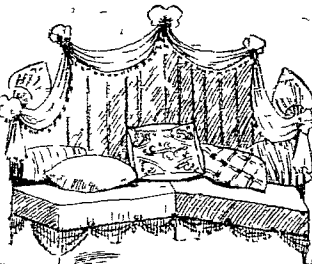

A woman of tact is one who makes her good-morning a pleasant greeting, her visit a bright spot in the day, and her good-bye a hope that she may come again.

A woman of tact is one who does not grieve people by their clothes or their riches, but who condemns bad manners.

A woman of tact is one who is courteous under all circumstances and in every condition in which she may be placed. She is the woman who can receive the unwelcome guest with a smile so bright and a handshake so cordial, that in trying to make the welcome seem real it becomes so. A woman of tact is one whose love for humanity is second only in her life's devotion and whose watchword is unselfishness in thought and action. By making self fast it finally becomes natural to have it so.

Making a Corner Sofa

With little expense a pretty corner sofa may be made for a sitting or drawing-room. The platform one foot in height may be made by any amateur carpenter. Upon this is fitted a mattress or cushion which may then be covered as elaborately or as simply as desired, the same scheme being carried out in the curtain at the back which should be lined with a plain color. The looping is done by drawing the fullness through brass curtain rings, the last on either side being finished with an ornament such as a Japanese fan, or any other effective bit of color. Piled up with cushions, this makes a charming piece of furniture.

Tea by Courtesy.

Every one is aware that much of the tea we drink is tea in name only, so much so it is adulterated. But there are many beverages called teas which are not fraudulent manufactures though they are called by the name of the delicious Chinese leaves. In Malaya, for example, they make tea of the leaves of an orchid.

In Peru they drink mate a tea made from a native species of holly.

The Abyssinians make tea from the leaves of the tatra edulis which has a stimulating qualities that to chew a single leaf will produce all the effects of a strong cup of coffee. It is most valuable to travelers.

The Tasmanians are said to be the lucky owners of no fewer than 100 kinds of leaves from which tea can be made while the Tonkinese have tea from berries, leaves woods and barks of trees.

In Sumatra coffee leaves are put in the teapot and the result is said to be excellent.

The Siamese Bridegroom.

Every Siamese girl who reaches a certain age without marrying is ticketed and labeled and placed in a privileged class, under the special care of the king, who binds himself to find a husband for them all. His method is delightfully simple. A prisoner in any of the Siamese jails may gain his pardon and release by marrying one of the ineligible class. Whether he is already married or not is not of great consequence, for in Siem it is not necessary to draw the line at one wife.

Might Be Adopted Here.

There are curious customs in some parts of the Middle Empire, as China is called. Young girls who are married wear their hair in a long plait down their back, while in this a red ribbon is interwoven. This can only be worn by one who is unmarried and is not bound by marriage engagements.

His Unfortunate Argument.

She—After all, you must admit that women are better than men.

He—Oh I don't know. The Bible doesn't say anything about seven evils being cast out of a man.

She—No, of course not; he has every one of them yet.

WASHING THE HAIR.

A GREAT MISTAKE TO WASH IT TOO FREQUENTLY.

Never Wash the Hair When Suffering From a Cold in the Head—Plain Advice That Should Be Strictly Followed in Order to Avoid Trouble.

It is as great a mistake to wash the hair too frequently as it is to wash it too seldom. In the former case the constant use of water is apt to wash away the natural oil of the skin, without which the hair not only loses its glossy look of health, but is apt to turn prematurely gray and grow thin and scanty. In the latter case the mouths of the oil vessels at the root of the hair become clogged, dandruff forms and the growth of the hair is impeded, and the hairs themselves become matted and dusty looking and utterly impossible to be endured.

To keep the hair in perfect health it should be washed at regular stated intervals. If you are strong and well and free from a cold of any kind, once in every three weeks or a month is the proper limit of time to allow between the washings. If you are in delicate health, it should be washed every six weeks.

On no account should the hair be washed if you are suffering from a cold in the head or from influenza, as serious trouble may be the result. And in winter time it is best to have the hair shampooed at home instead of going to the hairdresser's, and it should always be done in a room with a fire. It is a bad plan to wash the hair just before going to bed as the hair has no time to dry properly, and is apt to remain damp until morning which is very injurious to its growth. The best times to wash the hair are the morning the afternoon, or between 6 and 7 at night.

In the latter case the hair will have plenty of time to dry before you have to go to bed. In the former case if you have it washed in the day time be careful not to go out of doors till it is quite dry, or you will run a very great risk of taking cold.

It is well to give the final drying with a palm leaf fan. Hold the long hair at arm's length and fan the air through it vigorously. This is the Norwegian method and is a very successful one, and is not at all likely to give cold, as it would seem liable to do at first sight. In winter time, you should sit near the fire with the hair down for half an hour or an hour before putting it up again. If in summer time, sit by a sunny window, or in the open air for the same length of time, provided, of course that your hair washing has taken place in the daytime and not after sunset.

You must be sure that you have an abundant supply of fresh, warm towels, and that your hair is quite dry before it is brushed and combed. Your brushes must be perfectly clean as well. It is better to brush and comb a small portion at a time to avoid tangles. Never have the hair put up till it is as dry as before you began to wash it.

If you prefer to have your hair shampooed by a hairdresser, be sure to only go to a first-class man who is very particular in his methods. I have too often known terrible skin troubles, eczema, parasitism and other horrors caught by people who were not particularly over these points, going to any and every hairdresser that they happened to be near. I much prefer to have the hair properly done at home by a skilled maid to running any of these risks. In one instance that came under my notice, a terrible skin eruption of this kind was caught at a hairdresser's abroad, and though that is over seven years ago, medical skill has not yet been able to effect a cure, though the disease is beginning slowly to yield to treatment.

About Auction Bills...

A Good Auctioneer likes to see his name on a neat, attractive auction bill. "Any old thing" won't do. A neat, attractive bill with new type and cuts brings a crowd, and a good auctioneer can do the rest. Poor and unattractive bills bring a poor, no-money crowd and the auctioneer is blamed when in reality it is the printer's fault. We're up-to-date. We put up the attractive kind of bills and they cost no more than the other kind. We also give the auction and the auctioneer a good "send off" in The Record—that's free.

THE LAMP THAT LASTS. The New Rochester.

Fifteen years ago we began the manufacture of centre draft lamps. A dealer bought one of the first and placed it in his show window. Each day it is filled and lighted; occasionally it is cleaned and rewicked. That lamp is good to-day.

Soon as The Rochester was demonstrated a success, a host of imitations sprang up. A few of the latter ones still survive, the rest are gone. What? You can find all the people some of the time, but not all the time.

One New Rochester Lamp in a household is but a beginning. Soon there will be others. Do you want to know why? Write for printed matter if interested.

Calling Cards.

"As well be out of the world, as out of style," you know. That's an old "saw," but in these days it's ever true.

There is as much style and taste in Calling Cards as in a New Bonnet, pair of Shoes or Dress or Wrap. When people set out to make calls, they usually put on their "best bib and tucker." And just here comes in the Calling Cards.

It isn't the proper thing to make calls without leaving Calling Cards.

Calling Cards that are the real stylish thing are the engraved kind. Printed ones will do if Engraved ones can't be afforded, but we make a plate and engrave 50 cards for only 90 cents so that almost anyone who makes calls can afford the engraved ones. If you have a plate of your own it only costs 60 cents. Still, those we print—25 for 25 cents—are almost as nice. Can't hardly tell the difference unless you rub your finger over the name. But what ever you do, don't write your name on unless it's a case of dire necessity.

A STORY OF RUSSIAN
W. L. G. EVX.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Elia's cold, formal adieu stunned me. I stood open-mouthed, petrified. We had parted on the best of terms, she kissing me affectionately, and with wifely solicitude bidding me hasten back, yet in my absence she had departed, evidently carrying out some prearranged plan. Her maid, Roberts, had noticed her packing her trunk three days before, therefore it was certain that she meant to desert me as soon as opportunity offered.

Unaccountable, and astounding as was her sudden flight, the discovery I had made among the papers in her suitcase was even more amazing. It held me step-father and abashed.

The paper I held in my hand was the original of the secret convention between England and Germany, the document that had been stolen from me, transmitted by telegraph to the Russian Foreign Office and had nearly caused a terrible and disastrous European war.

"When did my wife pack those two trunks she took with her this evening?" I asked Roberts, her maid.

"Last Monday, sir," the girl answered, slowly twisting her befrilled apron in her hands. "She received a note by boy messenger and immediately set about packing the boxes. Once I glanced at a note lying on madam's dressing table, it merely announced the writer's intention to attend Lady Pearson's at home, and was signed 'X'."

"Has my wife taken her jewels?" I inquired.

"No. She has left her jewel case unlocked, but everything is there. She has even left behind her wedding ring."

"Her wedding ring?" I echoed, astounded and dismayed. "Then she has discarded me completely."

"Unfortunately, it appears so, sir," the girl observed, gravely.

"Very well, Roberts. I said in a broken voice. "Thank you. You may go."

After a time I roused myself, and, talking from the broken escriptio the other letters it contained five in number, examined them eagerly beneath the light.

All were in the same hand, a heavy masculine one, written evidently with a quill. One by one I read them, finding that they contained appointments which fully bore out her maid's suspicions.

"My dear Ella," one ran. "To-morrow I shall be on the departure platform at King's Cross station at 11-30. I have good news for you. Come.—X."

"I framed on my hat and hastily drove to Pont street."

The house was in darkness, save for a light in the basement, and in answer to my summons, after a lapse of some minutes, a tall, gaunt woman in rusty black appeared in the area below.

I was surprised at being thus met by a stranger, but inquired for Mrs. Laing.

"Mrs. Laing ain't at 'ome, sir," answered the woman, looking up and speaking with a strong Cockney twang.

"Not at home?" I exclaimed, surprised. "Where is she?"

"She's gone abroad somewheres, but I don't know where," the woman answered. "She's sold all her valuables, discharged the servants, and left me 'ere as 'ousekeeper'."

CHAPTER XXV.

STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL.

The early morning was dry, frosty, but starless. The clock of that fashionable temple of Hymen, St. George's, Hanover Square, was slowly chiming 3 as I alighted from a cab at the corner of Mount street, and, walking along Berkeley Square, ascended the steps of the Earl of Warnham's great mansion. Walking across the great square hall warmed by a huge roaring fire, I passed down the passage to the Earl's study and rapped at the door, receiving an impatient permission to enter.

"I should not have ventured to come at this hour, I said, 'were it not that the news I bring is of extreme importance.'"

"What is it's nature?" he asked coldly, leaning back in his chair.

"I have recovered the original of the secret convention with Germany," I answered, in as quiet a tone as I could assume.

"You have?" he cried excitedly, starting up. "You are quite right to seek me at once—quite right."

A few seconds sufficed to reassure him that the document was the genuine one.

"It is fortunate that this has returned into our possession," he observed, his thin blue lips quivering slightly. "I feared that it had already passed beyond our reach, and that one day or other in the near future our policy must be narrowed by the knowledge that it was preserved in the archives of the Foreign Office at Petersburg, and could be used as a pretence for a declaration of war by Russia and France. Now however, that the original is again in our possession we can disclaim all copies, and give assurance that no secret understanding exists between us and Berlin."

"I found it in my own house," I answered.

"Then you mean to tell me that it has been in your possession the whole time. The thing is impossible," he cried, angrily. "Remember the dummy palmed off upon me, and the fact that an exact copy was transmitted to Petersburg."

"No. It has not been in my possession," I answered, leaning against my writing chair for support. "I found it among my wife's possessions."

"Your wife?" he gasped, agitated. He had turned ghastly pale at the mention of her name, and trembling with agitation swayed forward.

A moment later, however, he recovered his self-possession, clutched at the corner of his table, and regarding me sharply, asked: "What do you suspect?"

"I scarce know what to suspect," I answered gravely, striving to remain calm, but remembering at that instant the curious effect produced upon the Foreign Minister when he had first seen Ella dancing at the Embassy Ball.

My declaration that I had found this official bond of nations in her possession had produced a similar disquieting result which puzzled me.

"But surely she can have had no hand in the affair," he cried. "She certainly did not strike me as an adventuress or an agent of the Czar's secret service."

"It is a problem that I cannot solve," I exclaimed, slowly watching the strange regard look upon his usually impetuous features. "After tearing your rags evening I went home only to find a letter of farewell from her, and—"

"She has fled, then," he exclaimed with quick suspicion.

"Yes. Her flight was evidently prearranged, and curiously enough her mother, who lives in Pont street has discharged her servants, disposed of a good deal of her property, and also departed."

"Gone together, no doubt," the Earl observed, frowning reflectively.

"But is it not very strange that she should have left the stolen convention behind? Surely if my wife were actually a Russian agent she would have been guilty of such indiscretion," I said.

"The mystery is inexplicable," Deedes, he declared, with a heavy look, half of pain, half of bewilderment. "Absolutely inexplicable."

"You have, I believe, after all, been cruelly wronged, Deedes," he added in a low, harsh tone. "I sympathize with you because I myself once felt the loss of a wife deeply, and I know what feelings must be yours now that you suspect the woman you have trusted and loved to have been guilty of base treachery and espionage. She, or some one in association with her, has besmirched England's honor, and brought us to the very verge of a terrible national disaster. Providentially, this was averted, by what means we have not yet ascertained, although our diplomatic agents at the Court of the Czar are striving day and night to ascertain, yet the fact remains that we were victimized by some daring secret agent, who sacrificed everything in order to accomplish the master stroke of espionage. I can but re-echo the thanks to Heaven uttered by my gracious sovereign when she received news that war had been averted, nevertheless it is my duty—may it be yours, Deedes, to strive on without resting, in order that this mystery may be satisfactorily unravelled."

For a moment we were silent. Then in a voice that I felt painfully conscious was broken by grief and emotion, I related to him the whole of the wretched story of my marriage, my suspicions, the discovery of Ella in Kensington Gardens, how I had taxed her with flirtation and frivolity, our parting, and her sudden and unexpected flight.

He heard me through to the end with bent head, sighing now and then sympathetically. Then he slowly asked:

"Did you ever refer to those earlier incidents, such as the death of that young man Ogle? Remember, whatever you tell me I shall regard as strictly confidential."

"I seldom mentioned it, as she desired me not to do so."

"When you referred to it, what was her attitude?" he inquired, in a pained tone, the furrows on his high white brow deep and clearly defined.

"She declared always that he had been murdered, and vowed to detect the author of the crime."

"Are you, in your own mind, convinced that there was anything really mysterious regarding her actions, or were they only every-day facts distorted by jealousy?" he asked gravely.

"There is, I believe, some deep mystery regarding her past," I answered. He knit his gray shaggy brows, and started perceptibly.

"Her past?" he echoed. "Were you aware of any—er—unpleasant fact prior to marriage?" he inquired, quickly.

"Yes. She promised to explain everything ere long, therefore, loving her devotedly as I did, I resolved to make her my wife and await in patience her explanation."

"Love!" he cried, cynically. "She did not love you. She only married you, it seems, to accomplish her own base and mysterious ends." Then, pacing the room from end to end, he added: "The more I reflect, the more apparent does it become that Ella Laing, by becoming your wife, to accomplish some great coup, but, prevented by some unforeseen circumstances, she has been compelled to fly, and in her haste overlooked this incriminating paper."

CHAPTER XXV.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR

"This, too, was my own opinion, and taking from my pocket the whole of the letters that were in the escriptio, I placed them before him.

"They are from your wife's mysterious lover," he observed, when a few moments later he had digested them. "Who he is there is no evidence to show. You suspect him of course, to be the man she met in Kensington Gardens?"

I nodded. A sigh escaped me. "Well," he went on, "leave them with me. A calligraphic expert may possibly find some clue to the identity of the writer."

"Well," he said, reflectively, at last. "There is but one person from whom we may ascertain the truth."

"Who?"

"Your wife."

"But she has disappeared."

"We must trace her. She must not escape us," he cried fiercely, with set teeth. "She has wronged you and acted in collusion with a man who has betrayed his country and met with a tragic end even if she herself did not actually sell the copy of the secret convention to our enemies—such appeals to me more than I can."

Quickly I took his key, and, unlocking the tiny drawer, opened it.

"What causes you to believe this?" I inquired, surprised at his sudden assertion.

"I have a reason," he answered quickly, with an air of mystery. The cold manner of the expert diplomatist had again settled upon him. "If it is, as I expect, I will show her no mercy, for it is upon me, as Foreign Minister of Her Majesty, that opium has fallen."

"But she is still my wife," I observed, for even at that moment, when I had discovered her false and base, I had not ceased to regard her with a passionate affection.

"Wife!" he snarled angrily. "You would have been a thousand times better dead than married to such a scoundrel. Then he added, 'Remain here. I am going to the telephone to apprise Scotland Yard of her flight. She only left to-night after the mails were gone, therefore if we have the ports watched we may yet find her.'"

And he left me, his quick footsteps echoing down the long corridor.

The moment he had gone I went to his table. Some sudden curiosity prompted me to endeavor to ascertain what he had been gazing upon so intently while my back had been turned in penning the instructions to Sir Philip Emden.

Quickly I took his keys and unlocking the tiny drawer, opened it.

Inside there reposed a highly finished cabinet portrait of my wife.

Amazed to find this picture in the possession of my chief, I took it in my hands and stood agape. Its pose was unfamiliar, but the reason I had never before seen a copy of it was instantly made plain. It bore the name of a well known St. Petersburg photographer.

Ella had lied to me when she had denied ever having been in Russia.

Months of anxiety went wearily by, but no tidings of her could I glean. Time could never efface the bitter memories of the past. The police had, at Lord Warnham's instigation, exerted every effort to trace her, but without avail. She had disappeared with a rapidity that was astounding, for, apparently expecting that some attempt might be made to follow her, she had ingeniously taken every precaution to baffle her pursuers in the same manner as her mother had done. The cause of her sudden flight was an enigma only equalled by my discovery of her portrait in the Earl's possession.

On the day after Ella had fled I called at Andrew Beck's office, at Winchester House, Old Broad street, but found he had sailed a few days before by the Union liner Scot, for Cape Town. The movements of the popular member for West Rutlandshire were cabled and chronicled in the newspapers as diligently as if he were a Prince of a reigning house, and it was with extreme satisfaction that one morning in June I saw it announced that the mail had arrived at Southampton from the Cape bearing him on board. I returned to London, and that same night sought Beck at the House of Commons.

"How is Ella?" he said after a while. "I quite forgot to ask after your wife."

"I don't know," I replied, after a brief pause.

"Don't know?" he echoed, looking at me, puzzled. "Why, what's the matter?"

"She has left me," I answered gravely.

"Let you?" he cried removing his cigar and staring at me. "Have you quarrelled?"

THE IMPURE METAL.

SOME VERY CURIOUS SUPERSTITIONS ABOUT IRON.

They Were Prevalent in Ancient Times, and to This Day Have Local Existence.—Iron Tools Forbidden in the Construction of the Temple at Jerusalem.

In Egypt iron was usually accursed even when people used it all day long and every day. It was the impure metal—the bones of Typhon.

No man could touch it without sin; he must do penance and make a monument. It was the theory as long as the Egyptian race endured; in practice iron had been banished from the several thousand years.

The piece of metal found in the great pyramid was an iron nail. The same number of ancient faith with growing consciousness was urged everywhere no doubt but the record does not exist. It was lost before the Christian time, and so Greek and Roman size puzzled of old little stones found down from a divot of soil.

A Clever Trick

It certainly looks like it but there is really no trick about it. Anybody can try it who has 1 Lane Bink and Wink Kidneys, Malaria or nervous troubles. We mean he can cure himself right away by taking Electric Bitters. This medicine tones up the whole system, acts as a stimulant to the Liver and Kidneys, is a blood purifier and nerve tonic. It cures Constipation, Headache, Fainting Spells, Sleeplessness and Melancholy. It is purely vegetable, a mild laxative, and restores the system to its natural vigor. Try Electric Bitters and be convinced that they are a miracle worker. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50c a bottle at G. C. Hueston's Drug Store.

The Greatest Discovery Yet.

W. A. Koppe, editor Teskila, Ill., "Chief," says: "We won't keep house without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Experienced with many others, but never got the true remedy until we used Dr. King's New Discovery. No other remedy can take its place in our home, as in it we have a certain and sure cure for Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc." It is idle to experiment with other remedies, even if they are urged on you as just as good as Dr. King's New Discovery. They are not as good, because this remedy has a record of cures and besides is guaranteed. It never fails to satisfy. Trial bottles free at Geo. C. Hueston's Drug Store.

BRAVE ARIZONA GIRL.

She Nailed a Ferocious Mountain Lion with Her Eye and Stared Him Out of Countenance.

If you should happen to meet a mountain lion during the course of an afternoon walk—don't scream or run, or attempt to "shoo" him away with your parasol. But nail him with your eye and he will become hypnotized—at least that was the experience of Miss Freda Schmidt, of Tempe.

NAILED THE LION WITH HER EYE

At Tempe, one day last week, she was camping with a party of friends in the Bellamy range of mountains. They had gone to a cave for the midday meal, and when it was about finished they were terrified to see a formidable specimen of puma make its way into the cave.

The girls started up and fled—all with the exception of Miss Schmidt, who was too frightened to move. In the whirl of recourses that spring to the brain in desperate situations she remembered having heard that animal tappers and trappers control their subjects through the eyes. Steadfastly fixing her eyes upon the approaching lion, the girl never moved her gaze. The beast hesitated, shambled, slowly turned and walked out of the cave.

Of course, nine-tenths of Tempe declare that Miss Schmidt hypnotized the lion and is accordingly proud of her.

Some of the young men, however, are mean enough to say that the lion walked into the cave, and after sizing up the lean appearance of the picnicers walked away from sheer disappointment.
