WHEELMAN SHOULD ORGANIZE

NORTHVILLE CONTAINS ENOUGH BICYCLISTS TO SUPPORT A LOCAL ORGANIZATION.

Much Good Could Be Accomplished And Much Pleasure Be Derived.

The wheelmen of Northville are numerous enough to support a local organization such as are being formed all over the country to work for cycle paths, good roads and the preservation and maintenance of their rights. These local cycling clubs are being formed under the auspices of the L. A. W., and bear the same relation to this grand national body as a subordinate lodge of masons does to the supreme lodge. The league is national in its scope and now numbers nearly 100,000 wheelmen on its rolls. Several of Northville bicyclists are among the number including G. A. Power, G. C. Yerkes, W. H. Yerkes and Jasper Elliott. It was organized at New York, N. Y., twenty years ago and it is due entirely to its efforts that wheeling is the pleasurable pastime that it is today, as at that time all manner of restrictions hedged in the bicyclist and he was generally regarded as a harmless sort of lunatic and treated as such. The L. A. W. has done away with that sort of thing however but only after many hard fought and costly legal battles. Leaving out its achievements of the dead and musty past we have only to come down to no later than the last session of the legislature in Michigan to see what it has done for the wheelmen of this state. Two years ago the L. A. W. had drafted and presented to the state legislature what is now known as the Anderson Bicycle Baggage bill which compels the railroads of this state to carry bicycles as personal baggage free of charge to any part of Michigan. Where it formerly cost a Northville wheelman 25 cents to carry his wheel over to Plymouth, now he has it carried free owing to the good work of the L. A. W. Another notable victory at that session of the state legislature was the defeat of a tax measure by which every Northville wheelman and wheelwoman would have been compelled to pay a tax of $1.00 a year for the privilege of owning a bicycle. The L. A. W. also took issue with the toll road corporations of the state who attempted to charge wheelmen 5 cent a mile for riding over the toll road of the state. The L. A. W. has caused the reckless and careless driver to respect the rights of wheelmen. It has been instrumental in building many miles of cycle paths. It has carried on an agitation for good roads since the day of its inception. It conducts a department for touring wheelmen, furnishing them with routes, distances, conditions of roads, hotels, points of interest, etc., in all parts of the country. It has caused the revision of local ordinances in all parts of the state where the laws have been oppressive or oppressive and in fact to repeat all the good work it has accomplished for wheelmen would require all the space in this paper. Most wheelmen take these things for granted but without the L. A. W. it is safe to say that many of these reforms could not have been brought about. These are matters in which all wheelmen participate but the L. A. W. does more than this for its membership. It furnishes them with a road book of the state free of charge, covering over 10,000 miles of road, together with select long distance tours in Ohio, Ind., Ill., Wis., Penn., New York and Canada. Members also receive a spicy weekly bicycle paper free of charge. Their wheels are protected from theft and their persons and wheels from injury by reckless drivers. Last year 23 cases of this sort were contested in Michigan and the L. A. W. won every case. Discounts are to be had on repairs and at L. A. W. hotels. The society also secures reduced rates on over 500 standard magazines and periodicals for its members. Its membership card will secure the free admission of a member's bicycle into Canada or any European country and this without any hindrance or annoyance from the custom's authorities whatsoever. Other than L. A. W. members are compelled to deposit 5% the value of their bicycle. The membership card is also a letter of introduction which will secure fraternal privileges wherever presented and in fact from a dollar and cents point of view no wheelman can afford not to belong to the L. A. W. Local consulates look after local interests, and if Northville had 40 or 50 members a cycle path could be constructed to Novy or Plymouth, guide boards could be erected and many other things accomplished for wheelmen's benefit which can only be secured by organization.

NORTHVILLE TO LOSE ONE

One of Its Cigar Factories to Go to Carleton.

The following is from last week's Carleton Times: "When in conversation with Harry German of the Bank of Carleton he informed The Times that he and his partner, negotiating towards having a Northville cigar manufactory move his plant here. We are not at liberty to give the name of the Northville gentleman at present, but the banker says that as soon as all arrangements are perfected the announcement will be made in The Times. There being no cigar factory here we see no reason why this lively village should not have a manufacturing establishment located here, and the sooner the Northville gentleman comes the better."

The Record is unable to learn which of its three cigar factories is to go to Carleton, and the business men's association may get enough hustle on to make sufficient inducements for it to remain in Northville. All three of the factories are doing a nice steady business and are well managed.

Laid to Rest.

The funeral of Mrs. L. E. Hartwick, whose death was announced last week occurred from the home Sunday afternoon Rev. W. M. Ward officiating. The casket was covered with beautiful cut flowers and floral designs sent in by neighbors and Mr. Hartwick's fellow workmen at the Globe factory. The interment was in Rural Hill.

Mrs. Hartwick's maiden name was Mattie L. Freeman. She was born at Denton in August 1857. In December 1881 she was united in marriage with Mr. Hartwick. He with her mother survive her. For eleven years the family have been worthy residents of Northville. Mrs. Hartwick was an earnest Christian woman, and loved by all who knew her.

Appreciations from our friends and neighbors were in the home which never can be filled. God in His wisdom has recalled her from his love and given and though her body slumbers here the soul is at rest in heaven.

ELECTRIC CARS WILL BE PLENTIFUL.

BOTH ROADS TO BE HERE BEFORE SUMMER IS OVER.

D. P. & N.'s Survey Made—Grand River People Here Monday.

Instead of one Northville is quite likely to have two electric roads before the summer is over. The D. P. & N. engineers were here Monday and finished their survey through the village and claim they will be here with their cars by June 1st. That date at this stage of the game however looks rather early and if the trolley gets to buzzing over our heads by the 4th of July it will do well.

Representatives of the Grand River road were also here Monday and looked over various routes for bringing their road into and through Northville. The route now looked upon with the most favor seems to be from Farmington two miles west on the Grand River road, thence south one mile to Rogers' corner, then west to the Novy road and on into Northville by the Center street. This route insures the company few or no hills to climb, a matter that is of decided importance to the company inasmuch as they anticipate making a specialty of hauling freight. The promoters of this line say they will go on through to Lansing from here via Whitmore Lake where they will connect with the T. & A. A. railroad giving Northville increased freight facilities to and from northern Michigan. This will be particularly valuable to business here in the hauling of lumber etc. giving both factories and flouring mills additional shipping facilities. Mr. Randall states that their new electric engines will be able to haul 20 carloads of freight for passengers then time between Northville and Detroit will be one hour. As soon as a route is definitely decided upon the council will be asked for the franchise.

The Office Towel.

When I think of the towel, the old-fashioned towel, that used to hang up by the printing-house door, I think that nobody in these days of shoddy can hammer non to wear as it wore. The tramp who abused it, the devil who used it, the make-up and foreman, the editor (poor man) each rubbed some grim off while they put a heap on. In, over and under, 'twas blacker than thunder, 'twas harder than poverty, tougher than sin, from the roller suspended it was never beated and it flapped down the wall like a banner of tin. It grew thicker and tougher and harder and tougher, and daily put on an inkier hue, until one windy morning without any warning it fell to the floor and was broken in two—Burdette.

She Wanted Her Husband.

Lansing Mich. April 15 — Mrs. Alice Hannev created a sensation at North Lansing, today by rushing down the street crying "I want my husband." She had just received a note from her better half saying that he didn't want any more to do with her. She tried to get out a warrant for his arrest, but he could not be found. The parties came here from Northville a few days ago.—Free Press.

Arche Collins and Myrtle Miller of Plymouth were married last week. Plymouth folks are still arguing as to the route of the D. P. & N. through their village.

It is said that the two sons of C. B. Turner lately of the Pontiac Gazette are about to commence the publication of a third paper in that city, to be called the Oakland Journal.

A five dollar "wildcat bill" issued in 1841 was lately presented for redemption at the Oakland county bank at Pontiac from which it emanated 56 years ago. It came from Montana and was in a good state of preservation.

Oakland county has, according to the Pontiac papers, the most antiquated and antediluvian court house in Michigan. The question of a new building to take its place is being agitated but the matter has not yet taken definite shape.

The 22nd W. C. T. U. convention of the sixth district of Michigan was held at Milford from Wednesday morning till Friday noon of this week. There was a large attendance and an interesting and instructive program for each session.

At the University Homeopathic hospital the classification shows that 67 per cent of the patients are from the Lansing class, 27 per cent being farmers' wives, 14 per cent farmers, and 22 per cent farmers' children, 6 per cent are mechanics and 10 per cent students.

Wyandotte, it is said, is soon to have another newspaper to all one of those "long felt wants." Parties from Marine City will start "The Independent" there in about two weeks. There's money in the newspaper business anywhere—the only trouble is how to get it out.

Wyandotte recently organized a stock company called the Wyandotte Loan and Investment Co. with a capital of $200,000. It gives investors in home a chance to pay for them in small monthly payments which include both principal and interest, and which are in many cases not much larger than rent is paying.

The 1-year-old child of Arthur Wells and wife, died at Milford last week under peculiar circumstances from lung trouble brought on by a severe cold. It is alleged that those interested resorted to a physician, but resorted to Christian Science to effect a cure. After death it is said the mother for many hours tried to bring the child back to life but in vain.—Pontiac Gazette.

It would be better off to let it live and depend on the chance of growing whiskers.

A woman near Ann Arbor had $150 worth of her silver at some kind of an entertainment in town and the whole community was excited at learning that it was missing from her baggy where she had placed it when the affair was over. Alleghort failed to discover the thieves. Several days later a farmer in another town who had been in the city on the eventful evening, on getting out his buggy found it was loaded with the lady's lost valuables which she had stowed away in the wrong vehicle.

The Local Paper.

It is surprising how few people comparatively—in a community give the earnest and loyal support that they should to their local paper.

But while all are prone to errors of judgment all people are not compelled to air their opinions in plain black and white, and not being on record, can ignore their own conclusions if later events fail to justify them.

GLOVES IN HISTORY

THEIR ANTIQUITY AND THE VARIOUS USES THEY WERE PUT TO.

They Preceded Shoes and Other Articles of Dress—All Christians Preached Against Their Use—Monks as Glove Makers—Tokers of Love, Honor and Battle.

As an article of costume gloves preceded shoes with primitive man, and other parts of his artificial covering as well.

Prof. Dowkins in his work, "Early Man in Britain," says that the cave men and women wore gloves, reaching even to the elbows, thus anticipating the twenty-buttoned kids that adorn the modern dame and demoiselle.

In coronation ceremonies the glove always bore a conspicuous part, the champion knight, throwing down a glove as a challenge to any one who would question the right of the new sovereign to the throne.

One of the amusing scenes in "Henry V." turn upon the exchange of gloves between Williams and the king. The latter subsequently gives the glove to Fluellen the Welshman.

In the earliest times the glove was a piece of animal skin, and a piece of the old knights threw down the gauntlet of the glove in token of defiance and as a challenge to combat.

The use of the glove is a mode of defiance probably originated in the necessity for removing the glove from the good fight in order to obtain a better grip upon a weapon.

Calling Cards.

"As well be out of the world, as out of style," you know. That's an old "saw," but in these days it's ever true. There is as much style and taste in Calling Cards as in a New Bonnet, pair of Shoes or Dress or Wrap. When people set out to make calls, they usually put on their "best bib and tucker." And just here comes in the Calling Cards. It isn't the proper thing to make calls without leaving calling cards. Calling Cards that are the real stylish thing are the Engraved kind. Printed ones will do if Engraved ones can't be afforded, but we make a plate and engrave 50 cards for only 50 cents, so that almost anyone who makes calls can afford the engraved ones. If you have a plate of your own it only costs 66 cents. Still those we print—25 for 25 cents—are almost as nice. Can't hardly tell the difference unless you rub your finger over the name.

INTOXICATED BABOON.

He Smashes Furniture in an Omaha Theater and in an Adjoining Saloon.

People in the Creighton theater at Omaha, Neb., were treated to the spectacle of a big baboon in a drunken frenzy the other morning.

The animal was at liberty for 20 minutes and during that time caused more damage about the arcade of the building and on the stage of the theater than three men could do in that time.

Three long pier-mirrors in as many dressing rooms were broken by the best. These mirrors were the objects of his special fury.

It saw its own reflection in them and thought it another of its kind.

The baboon is usually chained in a dressing-room by himself. That morning when the stage hands entered they were confronted by the animal, who sprang at them. Not being able to bite, having a heavy muzzle on him, the beast twined his arms about Manager Stewart's legs and threw him down and then jumped for the next man, Stage Carpenter Landon, but he fled through to the door with the baboon in pursuit.

Landon dodged and the baboon entered the Lewis saloon through the arcade door. As he jumped on the bar the bartender fled. A bottle of whisky and two bottles of beer on the bar the baboon grasped and fled into his dressing-room.

On the way he met Manager Rosenthal, who had come out of his office to see what the trouble was. A bottle of beer smudged at Rosenthal's head caused him to run for safety.

Instead of getting into his own room, the baboon got in on Mrs. Maud Bael Price's room where he drank a portion of the whisky and threw the bottle through the mirror.

The room of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Milton Royles and that of La Belle Wol may were visited and both the mirrors were broken and general havoc wrought with clothing and greasy paints. The baboon had its own way until Prof. Macart who owns it arrived.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Dangerous.

Some people have a idea that Rheumatism is not serious. Inflammatory Rheumatism is a very dangerous disease, and we advise every patient who suffers from it to immediately use Athlo-dinor, and be on the safe side. Disease is not something to be laughed at, it is something to be got rid of. Here is the case of a gentleman who was given up to die by his family physician. It shows the seriousness of this affliction better than any words of ours.

MERNA Neb., Feb. 16, 1898

In the spring of 1896, I was taken with Inflammatory Rheumatism and was down for six weeks, and the doctor came every day to see me. He said that I would never get over it, and that he would not give a snap of his finger for my life. I used of Athlo-dinor and soon got a bottle and before I had taken the fourth dose I could sit up, and after taking about a bottle I was able to get up and walk around, and after taking the third bottle was entirely cured. I am now your great friend, FRANK B. ELLISON

DISSIPATED HORSE.

Parisian Habits are a Wine Merchant's Staid Family Animal to a Sad Downfall.

The grave and serious tempe of Paris records the lamentable case of a horse in that city which has become a confirmed drunkard.

This horse is the property of a wine merchant in Vallette. His good win has been much annoyed by the effects of wine, his cellar accompanied by senseless destruction. He has also noticed that the horse was afflicted with a queer kind of blind staggers but had not thought of connecting the two phenomena.

One night the merchant heard a noise in his cellar, which was under the stable, and went to investigate, armed with a lantern and a revolver.

There lay the horse on its side, kicking away in sheer good nature. At every kick a barrel head went in or a few bottles of choice stuff were sent skittering away in a shower of broken glass and a spray of wine. The bottom of the cellar was covered with wine.

The horse was unable to get up. He was hoisted out of the cellar by the nearest fire company and a veterinary surgeon called, who pronounced the cause of his affliction to be a too sedulous devotion to the wine that is red.

Then the groom, confessed having given the horse wine to drink when it was overworked. Having acquired the taste, the depraved creature wandered downstairs when thirsty and came up again as successfully until it too ambitiously increased the load beyond its power to carry.

The old folks concert under the auspices of the Ladies Aid society of the Presbyterian church is to be given in the opera house on Friday evening May 7. This concert is to include the best musical talent of Northville and has been in preparation several weeks under the direction of Prof J Henry Smith whose rare ability as a musical director is an acknowledged fact. The old songs are being sung by "Ye olde folks" in all the large cities, and the program to be given here will be a great musical feast.

The Frank Tucker company played here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights of this week to well filled houses, and gave the usual good satisfaction. Since appearing here four years ago Frank had the misfortune to lose his right foot which is a source of much trouble in his old time work. The Opera House orchestra, six pieces, which furnished the music, proved a drawing card. Everybody was loud in praise and it was pronounced, for the number of pieces, equal to anything heard in Detroit. The musicians were Mrs. Long and Messrs. Tatham, L. Elliott, W. Elliott, Crocker and Jones.

For the first time since the breaking out of the war with Spain, Northville was favored with a band concert Saturday night. It sounded like old times again, except that it was noticeable that the music dished up appeared to have a softer and sweeter tone. The boys have now under contemplation the weekly Saturday night concerts providing the business men and citizens will respond with sufficient financial aid. The concerts are of much benefit to the town at any time but when the street cars get to running they will be doubly so. The response for band concerts should be prompt and liberal.

Albert Stevens called on his brother Cal last Sunday. Luther Greene is visiting his aunt in west Plymouth. Lena Green visited at Joe Soles' a couple of days last week. Mrs. Countess of Northville visited her son, H. S. Burdick, one day last week. Mrs. Lillie Benton entertained her brothers, Ike and Seth Crocker, of Northville Sunday. Mrs. H. Our new supervisor, Cass Benton was in Detroit on business of interest to our burg last week and succeeded in getting three electric lights when the street cars come. One at Johnson's corner, one at McKelbert's and one on Plymouth road.

There are some corrections we might make in the history of Waterford which was printed in the Record of last week. The four Ramsdell boys mentioned were sons of Gannet instead of Dyer. Ashley died and was buried in Florida. Dyer Ramsdell had one child now Mrs. George Bryant. The first school house stood up near Ham Bonfours and was torn down. The second one, W. McRobert uses as a barn, and the Phoenix mill that was built by Mathews was burned and Samuel Haiden built the present one. The history was exceedingly interesting however.

Mr. and Mrs. James Clapp of near Brighton were in town last Saturday.

Mrs. Pitwell was quite ill last week but is much better at this writing. Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Pansold have moved into one of Mr. Wixom's tenant houses. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Skiper and Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Birch of Milford were at the Wixom Farmers club.

Our enterprising young merchant, R. B. Cummings has just got in a fine line of spring hats and caps for men and children. Charley Johnson has commenced work at the Mutual depot. He will help with the freight and dispatching telegraph. Mrs. Hodge and daughter of Ontario (Canada) is keeping house for her niece Mrs. George Spencer who is at her parental home caring for her mother who is very low. The Farmers club held last week Wednesday at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Price was quite largely attended and a good time reported. They adjourned to meet May 10 at George Dickerson's.

Mr. Hutchings who was lately married in Saginaw was in town the first of the week. He and his wife will commence house-keeping in Milford this week. We wish them a happy and prosperous journey through life.

As Rob and Wil Chamberlin were driving to Pontiac Monday the horse became frightened and ran about a mile before he could be brought under control. Wil's hand was quite badly cut necessitating three stitches. The horse received several bruises but no further damage was done.

Art School at Macatawa. An art school is to be established at Macatawa Park in July which is successful, will probably be made a permanent fixture and will be conducted on a scale similar to the college work of the northern resorts. Frank Forest Frederick, professor of art and design in the University of Illinois, will be in charge of the classes which will be held in a studio in the Macatawa Park auditorium. Work will begin Monday July 3 and continue during the summer months. There will be three classes: the elementary class for the study of sketching and perspective, the intermediate class for the study of composition and methods of sketching, and the advanced class for the study of landscape painting. A Narrow Escape. Thankful notes written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart of Gorton S. D. Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four Doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my sorrow, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman. I had bottles free at Geo. C. Kingston's Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00 guaranteed or price refunded.

MEXICO'S MONEY.

What It Has Been and Manner in Which It Is Manufactured. Before Mexico was invaded by the Spaniards, coins were unknown in the country, the natives using in the place of money the smallest cacao beans, reserving those of larger size and better quality for the manufacture of liquor, to which they were much addicted. About fourteen years after the conquest—that is to say, about the year 1535, Castilian coin commenced to make its appearance in Mexico. As it arrived, however, only in very small quantities, it proved itself insufficient for the needs of trade, even though the latter was still of very insignificant proportions. It was then that the ruling viceroy, under authority of a royal decree, ordered the manufacture in the City of Mexico of small pieces of silver of a certain weight. These pieces were not stamped with any comage whatsoever, and their value was determined entirely by their weight and size. From this was derived the name "peso," which has survived the first attempt at making money in Mexico up to the present. These pieces of silver remained in circulation a number of years and pieces of gold and of copper were also added in time. Soon, however, it was found that this sort of circulating medium made fraud and abuse extremely easy and the Spanish government, taking cognizance of the fact (established by royal decree) granted them a perpetual concession for America. These mints were located in San Luis de la Vera Cruz and the City of Mexico. The same decree also provided that in San Domingo, on the Spanish island known today as Puerto Rico, only copper money should be made according to the regulations governing the mint of Seville in the year 1493. The coinage of Mexico was actually begun during the reign of Viceroy Antonio de Mendoza, who established a mint in buildings belonging to the Marquis del Valle. Here were obtained only a short time being transferred into the central buildings, and later to the viceregal palace. During all this time the comage was of considerable amount, and the facilities of the establishment were not sufficient to meet the demands made upon it for coins for which reason frequent demands for minting apparatus were found in the viceregal records. In the year 1778 the mint was established in the Apaxtla building and has continued since then at the street of that name. From the Declaration of Independence until the year 1847 the mint was rented out to private parties who supplied with coin all the needs of the republic that had no mint of their own.

A Missing Nation. In no other part of the world is passing so much in vogue as in this city from time immemorial it has been the national salute indeed it is more of a greeting than a caress. In public affairs in private the kiss is an established custom. Fathers and sons, old generals, with trusty mustaches kiss, whole regiments kiss. The emperor kisses his officers. On a receiving day there are almost as many kisses as shots exchanged in a military corps of cadets in the case of the imperial approval, the imperial salute is bestowed upon the head boy, who passes it on with a hearty pat to his neighbor in his train to the next and so on through the whole juvenile body. On a holiday or fête day the young and delicate mistresses of a house will not only kiss all her maid servants, but all her maid servants too and if the gentlemen does not venture above her hand she will stoop and kiss his cheek. To judge also from the number of kisses, the matrimonial bond in these high circles must be one of unnumbered felicity. A gentleman scarcely enters or leaves the room without kissing his wife either on her forehead, back or hand.

How Whalebone Is Secured. A curious industry at least to the uninitiated is that pertaining to whalebone from its original or crude form to that of its many applications useful and artistic. Most of this article is landed in San Francisco and shipped Eastward to be distributed at the various centers. Before leaving the Pacific coast the bone is split sort ed according to color and tied up in bundles, after splitting the pieces are trimmed, stalks or stubs are from three to twelve feet in length when ready for shipment and weigh from five to twenty five pounds each. When received by the manufacturer each slab is trimmed with strong glassy black bit this has a separate value of its own and is used for certain furniture manufactures and is also mixed with horse hair in brushes. On the bar being removed the slabs are scrubbed vigorously and then put to soak in water for about a week when sufficiently softened they are subjected to the action of steam in strong receptacles of special design being thus ready to be split into "shell or gram" bone and finally cut into slabs, whips, stocks, etc.

Imitation Ivory. Imitation ivory is now being extensively manufactured from the turn of a phosphoric acid phosphate which is about the size of an apple and possesses a hard brittle texture. So close is the resemblance that it is sold for ivory and can be colored and turned in a similar manner. A phosphoric acid consists in applying sulphuric acid which does not affect it with the genuine substance. It is used for many purposes, especially in the manufacture of imitation ivory.

Counties of Lakes. If lakes have no overflow to the sea, the water always becomes soft particularly if there is small rainfall and much evaporation. The Great Lakes is properly a salt lake. So is the Dead Sea. There are several lakes of considerable size in Canada which have no visible outlets, being fed entirely from subterranean sources.

A JEAN ROMAN EPISODE

IN THE LIFE OF AMELIA BUTTERWORTH

BY ANNA KATHARINE GREEN

AUTHOR OF "THE LEVERDOWNTH CASE"
"CLOSELY FOLLOWED" "THE APPARITION NEXT DOOR"

—COPYRIGHT, 1897, BY ANNA K. GREEN—

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters in "The Lost Man"

CHAPTER I.—Amelia Butterworth, who had done clever detective work, is called upon by Mr. Gryce, a professional detective, to take up an interesting case. He tells her that in a certain village several persons have suddenly disappeared. In this place lives a family of the name of Knollys, the children of a former friend of Mr. Gryce's. Amelia Butterworth enters this family for detective work. She visits the Knollys home, finding there Miss Lucetta and Loren Knollys and their brother William. She remains there for some days, and hears strange noises, goes into the hall, and the Lucetta, who gives unsatisfactory reasons for the disturbance.

CHAPTER II.—Mr. Gryce, a neighbor, visits the Knollys. Lucetta is terrified at seeing him and faints. Amelia Butterworth receives a letter from Mr. Gryce telling her that if she is in danger to blow upon a whistle he sends her an old crooked woman called Mother Jane appears. Mrs. Butterworth gives her a quarter, whereupon Mother Jane repeats a curious combination of numbers. Amelia leaves the house and hears of a young girl formerly leaving the Knollys house in a carriage and being married before her mother could overtake her.

CHAPTER III.—Amelia Butterworth returns to the house she witnesses a parting between Lucetta and a lover, whose request for an answer to his suit, Lucetta is endeavoring to put off. He leaves without getting a favorable reply. Amelia Butlerworth gets from Loren the key to a chamber which she has heard is haunted.

CHAPTER XVI

LOREN

In a week, Lucetta had said she might have been able, had he been willing or in a position to wait to give him a more satisfactory answer. Why, in a week? That she shrunk from leaving her sister so suddenly or that she had sacrificed her life's happiness to any childish idea of decorum I did not think probable even. The spirit she had shown, her unmovable attitude under a temptation which had not only romanced her to give up her position, but everything else which could affect a young and sensitive woman argued in my mind the existence of some uncompleted duty of so exacting and imperative a nature that she could not even consider the greater interests of her own life until the one thing was out of her way. William's rude question of the morning, "What shall we do with the old girl till it is all over?" recurred to me in support of his theory, making me feel that I needed no more confirmation to be quite certain that a crisis was approaching in this house which would tax my powers to the utmost and call perhaps for the use of the whistle which I had received from Mr. Gryce, and which, following his instructions, I had read carefully about my neck. Yet how could I associate Lucetta with crime or dream of the police in connection with the serene Loren, whose every look was a rebuke to all that was evil, vile or even common? Easily, my readers, easily, with that great, harking William in my remembrance. To smile him, to hide perhaps his deformity of soul from the world, even such gentle and gracious women as these have been known to enter into acts which to any unprejudiced eye and an unbiased conscience would seem little short of fiendish. Love for an unworthy relative or rather the sense of duty toward one's own has driven many a clear minded woman to her ruin, as the police annals, embodied as they are for me in Mr. Gryce, would show.

That I have not as yet put into definite words the suspicion upon which I was now prepared to work is quite apparent to me. Up to this time it had been too vague, or rather so monstrous a character, that I had felt ready to consider other possibilities, as, for instance, the possible connection of old Mother Jane with the unaccountable disappearances which had taken place in this lane. But now the very definite assurances I had been constantly receiving from the moment I had set foot in this house that something extraordinary and out of keeping with the ordinary appearances of the household was going on in secret in some one of the imnumerable chambers of that long corridor corresponding to my own, and which for very obvious reasons I had as yet failed to find any excuse for penetrating, was taking shape in my mind, and I no longer affected to deny to myself that everything I had thus far seen and heard went toward establishing the fact that these young women held in charge a prisoner of some kind of whose presence there and personality they dreaded the discovery. Now, who could this prisoner be? Common sense supplied me with but one answer—Silly Rufus, the boy who within a few days had vanished from among the good people of this seemingly guiltless community. Once settled in this idea, I applied myself to a consideration of the means at my disposal for determining its truth.

able conclusion on mine. But it was Loren who next forgot himself, and I had to content myself with the persuasion that his voice was just a what less clear than usual and her serenity enough impaired for her to look out of my one high arched window instead of into my eyes. "My dear—I do not called her this before, though the term had frequently risen to my lips in answer to Lucetta—'you should have gone with me into the village today. Then you would not need to ask if I had heard of the apparition carriage.'"

The probe had reached her at last. She looked quite startled. "You mustn't quit me," she said. "What do you mean, Miss Butterworth? Why should I not have needed to ask? Because you would have heard it whispered about in every room and on every street in town today. I don't know why, Miss Knollys."

"You are looking out of the window," she murmured. "I do not know at all. Nothing could be more incomprehensible to me. Explain yourself, I entreat you. The phantom carriage is but a myth to me, interesting only as involving certain long vanished ancestors of mine." "Of course," I assented. "No one of real sense could regard it in any other light. But the villagers, they talk, and in short—you will soon know, if I do not tell you myself—more than one of their declare it passed through the lane on Tuesday night."

Tuesday night! Her composure had been regained, but not so entirely, but that her voice slightly trembled. "That was before you came. I hope it was not an omen." "I was in no mood for pleasant." "They say it denotes misfortune to those who see it. I am therefore obnoxious exempt. But you—did you see it? I am just curious to know if it is visible to those who live in the lane. It ought to have turned in here. Were you fortunate enough to have been awake at that moment and to have seen this spectral appearance?"

"She shuddered. I was not mistaken in believing I saw this sign of emotion, for I was looking at her very closely, and the movement was unmistakable. 'I have never seen anything ghostly in my life,' said she. 'I am not at all superstitious.' 'If I had been ill natured or if I had thought it wise to press her too closely, I might have said: 'Then why do you look so pale? Why tremble so visibly, you whom I have never before seen disturbed?' But my natural kindness, together with an instinct of caution, restrained me, and I only remark: 'There you are sensible, Miss Knollys—doubly so as a denizen of this house, which Mrs. Carter was obliging enough to suggest to me was considered by many as haunted.'"

The straightening of Miss Knollys lips argued no good to Mrs. Carter. "You only wish it was," I laughed dryly. "I should really like to meet a ghost, in your great drawing room, when I am forbidden to enter." "You are not forbidden," she uttered hastily. "You may explore it now if you will excuse me from accompanying you, but you will meet no ghost. The hour is not propitious." Taken aback by her sudden amenity, I hesitated for a moment. Would it be worth while for me to search a room she was willing to have me enter? No, and yet my knowledge which could be obtained in regard to this house might be of use to me or to Mr. Gryce. I decided to embrace the offer, but first I went to her with one other question. "Would you prefer," said I, "that I should seal down these corridors at night and dare my dusky recesses at a time when specters are supposed to walk the halls, they once flitted through in happy consciousness?"

"Thank you," I retorted dryly. "I will remember that. To one of my tastes an ancient room in a time honored mansion like this affords a delight not to be understood by one who knows less of a century ago's life. The legends only connected with your great drawing room below (we were sitting in my room, I having refused to be cooped up in their dreary side parlor and she not having offered me any other spot more cheerful) are attractions sufficient to hold me entranced for an hour. I heard one of them today." "Which?" "She spoke more quickly than usual and for her quite sharply. 'Mrs. Carter' I went on, 'endeavored to amuse me by relating the story of Lucetta's marisage—she who rode through the night after a daughter who had won her lover's heart away from her.' 'Ah it is a well known tale, but I think Mrs. Carter might have let us to tell it to you. Did she relate anything else?' 'No other tradition of this place,' said I. 'I am glad she was so considerate. But why—if you will pardon me—did she happen to light upon that? We have not heard those incidents spoken of for years.' 'Not since the phantom carriage flew through this road the last time, I ventured, with a smile that should have alarmed her from suspecting any ulterior motive on my part in thus introducing a subject which could not be altogether grateful to her. 'The phantom carriage! Have you heard of that?' 'I wish it had been Lucetta who had said this and to whom my reply was due. The opportunities would have been so much greater for a judicious display of feeling on her part and of a suit-

"Hardly." She made the greatest effort to sustain the jest, but her countenance and dread were manifest. "I think I prefer you to the keys now than subject you to the drafts and chilling efforts of this old place at night." "I rose with a semblance of ease and said: 'I will take you at your word,' and I went to the door of the first drawing room. 'I do not think it is so late as you would imagine.' I took out of my pocket a key marked 'A' and with it unlocked the door. 'Excuse me, Miss Knollys, I will be in your room on the first floor, and you will meet with me at Lucetta's absence, spiders, for these I shall make no apologies—spiders who cannot provide comforts for the few rooms they utilize cannot be expected to keep in order the large and deserted apartments of a former generation.' 'I hate lit and despicable spiders, but I am willing to brave both,' I assured her, 'for the pleasure of satisfying my love for the antique.' At which she handed me the keys with a calm smile which was not without its element of sadness. 'I will be here on your return,' she murmured, leaning over the banisters to speak to me as I took my first steps down. 'I shall want to hear whether you are repaid for your trouble.' I thanked her and proceeded on my way, somewhat doubtful whether by so doing I was making or not the best use possible of my opportunities.

warning given me by the condition of the hinges—that the foot of man had not lately invaded these precincts, I would have had it in the moldy atmosphere and smell of dust that greeted me on the threshold. Neither human breath nor a ray of outdoor sunshine seemed to have disturbed its gloomy quiet for years, and when I moved, as I presently did, to open one of the windows I could just dimly see in the distance, I felt such a movement of something foul and noise over the decaying rags of the carpet, through which I was stumbling that I had to call into use the stronger elements of my character not to back out of a place so given over to rot and the creatures that infest it.

"What a spot," thought I, "for Amelia Butterworth to find herself in, and wondered if I could ever wear again the $3 a yard silk dress in which I was then enveloped. Of my shoes I took no account. They were ruined, of course. I reached the window in safety, but could not open it; neither could I move the next. There was a pane of glass or so I afterward found, and not till I reached the last (you see, I am very persistent) did I succeed in loosening the bar that held its inner shutter in place. This done, I was able to lift the window, and for the first time in years perhaps let in a ray of light into this desolated apartment.

The result was disappointing. Moldy walls, worn eaten hangings, two very ancient and quaint fireplaces, met my eyes, and nothing more. The room was absolutely empty. For a few minutes I allowed my eyes to roam over the great rectangular space in which so much that was curious and interesting had once taken place, and then, with a vague sense of defeat, I turned my eye outward, anxious to see what view could be obtained from the window I had opened. To my astonishment, I saw before me a high wall with here and there a window in it, tightly barred and closed, tall by a careful look about me I realized that I was looking upon the other wing of the building and that between these wings extended a court so narrow and long that it gave to the building the shape, as I have before said, of the letter U. A dreary prospect, re-

CHAPTER XVII THE LOWER HALL
The lower hall of the house, as I had expected, was a very different scene from that of the upper part. It was a long, narrow passage, with a high ceiling and a floor of dark wood. The walls were covered with tapestries, and the air was thick with dust. I went down the stairs, and found a large door at the end of the passage. It was open, and I entered. The room was dark, and I had to feel my way about. I found a table with a lamp on it, and I lit the lamp. The light showed me a large room, with a high ceiling and a floor of dark wood. "I WILL BE HERE ON YOUR RETURN," SAID MR. BUREAU

"I will be here on your return," she murmured, leaning over the banisters to speak to me as I took my first steps down. "I shall want to hear whether you are repaid for your trouble." I thanked her and proceeded on my way, somewhat doubtful whether by so doing I was making or not the best use possible of my opportunities.

The door to the closet was, as I had expected, slightly ajar, a fact for which I was profoundly grateful, for set it down to bleeding on a partial recognition of other rights. I would have found it most difficult to turn the knob of a closet door, inspection of which had not been offered me.

away the time—any better I chose out another key and began to search for the flower parlor. I found it beyond the dining room in the same hall as the dark parlor.

It was, as I might have expected from the name, the brightest and most cheerful spot I had yet found in the whole house. The air in it was even good, as if sunshine and breeze had not been entirely denied it, yet I had no sooner taken one look at its flower painted walls and pretty furniture than I felt an oppression I could not account for. Something was wrong about this room. I am not superstitious and I do not believe one particle in premonitions, but once seized by a conviction I have never known myself to be mistaken as to its import. Something was wrong about this room—what it was my business to find out.

Letting in more light, I took a closer survey of the objects I had but dimly seen at first. They were many and somewhat contradictory in their character. The floor was bare—the first bare floor I had come upon—but the shades in the windows, the chintz covered lounges drawn up beside tables strewn with books and other objects of comfort if not luxury bespoke a place in common if not everyday use.

A faint smell of tobacco told whose use, and from the minute I recognized that this was William's sanctum my curiosity grew unbounded and I neglected nothing which would be likely to attract the keenest eyed detective in Mr. Gryce's force. And there were several things there to be noted: First, that this lumbering boat of a man read, but only on one topic—vivisection; secondly, that he was not a reader merely, for there were instruments in the cases, heaped up on the tables about me, and in one corner—I felt a little sick, but I persevered in searching out the corners—a glass case with certain horrors in it which I took care to note, but which it is not necessary for me to describe. Another corner was blocked up by a closet which stood out in the room in a way to convince me it had been built in after the room was otherwise finished. As I crossed over to examine the door, which did not appear to me to be quite closed, I noticed on the floor at my feet a huge discoloration. This was the worst thing I had seen yet, and while I did not feel quite justified in giving it a name I could not but feel some regret for the worm eaten rags of the drawing room, which, after all, are more comfortable things to have underfoot than bare boards with such suggestive marks upon them as these.

This door to the closet was, as I had expected, slightly ajar, a fact for which I was profoundly grateful, for set it down to bleeding on a partial recognition of other rights. I would have found it most difficult to turn the knob of a closet door, inspection of which had not been offered me.

ASK YOUR DOCTOR!

Ask your physician this question, "What is the one great remedy for consumption?" He will answer, "Cod-liver oil." Nine out of ten will answer the same way. Yet when persons have consumption they loathe all fatty foods, yet fat is necessary for their recovery and they cannot take plain cod-liver oil. The plain oil disturbs the stomach and takes away the appetite. The disagreeable fishy odor and taste make it almost unendurable. What is to be done? This question is answered when we first made of Cod-Liver Oil with Hypophosphites. Although that was nearly twenty-five years ago, yet it stands alone today the one great remedy for all affections of the throat and lungs. The bad taste and odor have been taken away, the oil itself has been partly digested, and the most sensitive stomach objects to it rarely. Not one in ten can take and digest the plain oil. Nine out of ten can take SCOTT'S EMULSION and digest it. That's why it cures so many cases of early consumption. Even in advanced cases it brings comfort and greatly prolongs life.
