MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCES.

PATRIOTISM TAUGHT AND THE SOLDIER DEAD HONORED.

Judge Donovan's Stirring Address Tuesday Afternoon.

The nation's annual Memorial day has again come and gone and lessons of patriotism have been taught to the young; deeds of daring recited by the older ones and the graves of our heroic dead have again been strewn with fragrant flowers.

The annual Memorial address was delivered by Rev J H Herbener in the Presbyterian church Sunday evening before a large gathering of people. The local G. A. R. post attended in a body and the edifice was filled far beyond its seating capacity for comfort. Mr Herbener's address was a stirring one, full of interest and new thoughts touching upon the glorious deed of the boys of '61 and '68.

School Memorial exercises were held in the Methodist church Monday afternoon as planned. The program was selected and arranged with admirable judgment and could scarcely fail to teach the lessons of patriotism intended. The pupils and teachers of the school with a detachment from the G. A. R. post marched to the church with the stars and stripes waving above them and their steps keeping time to the sound of a drum in the hands of the school janitor, a veteran of the '60's. The program consisted of songs under the direction of Miss Dubuay with Mrs Long as organist, recitations by some of the pupils and interesting talks by veterans Rev J J Phelps and B G Webster of the local post. Professor Gilbert as chairman also made brief but appropriate remarks.

The time honored saying that "it always rains on Decoration day" was again shown to be a fallacy, as Tuesday brought the perfection of weather. Detachments from the G. A. R. and S. of V. went to the usual places in the surrounding towns in the forenoon and held the services of the order. At North and Salem exercises had been arranged by the citizens which were very pretty and appropriate.

At 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon the G. A. R. and sons of veterans and a large audience of Northville residents and many from other places assembled in the rink to listen to the orator of the day, Judge Donovan of Detroit. He gave a stirring, patriotic address which was frequently interrupted by vigorous applause paying a glowing tribute to the great Americans of the civil war and to the soldiers who bore its hardships and won its final victories. He was unmistakably enthused by his subject and consequently was able to thoroughly interest his hearers. A rather unusual comment was heard on all sides at the close of the meeting—that he did not talk half long enough. The music was furnished by the local band and by Miss Norrie Clarkson assisted by Mrs Gilbert.

After the close of the meeting at the rink the line of march was formed and headed by the band the procession went to the cemeteries where the resting places of the soldier dead were decorated with the blossoms which the Relief Corps had furnished and arranged for the purpose and the impressive Memorial services of the Grand Army were fittingly performed.

DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE, ATTENTION THIS WAY, PLEASE!

THE DETROIT AND MICHIGAN SITUATION UP TO THE HOUR OF GOING TO PRESS

—From Detroit Evening News.

"Our Boys."

Next Friday evening, under the auspices of the Junior Class of the High-school, will be given the play "Our Boys." It is perhaps one of the brightest and cleverest plays now on the stage. The scene opens in the home of Middlewick, a retired butlerman, where he finds Poddles, the butler, and Sir Geoffrey Champneys servant, awaiting the return from abroad of the two young men. Middlewick, Sir Geoffrey, a fine old gentleman, with no money and an undue sense of his own importance, enters the room, closely followed by his maiden sister, Clarissa, who is a trifle sentimental and hopes that Sir Geoffrey has not noticed the evident attentions of Middlewick to her. Sir Geoffrey is, of course, extremely impatient over the long delayed return of his son and consequently finds fault with everyone, including Middlewick whose "mother english" grates on the refined ear of the noble Sir Geoffrey. Their systems in regard to his sons, too, are entirely different, for Sir Geoffrey believes in implicit obedience, while Middlewick, rich and tho. with a heart true as steel, gives his "dear boy" everything he desires. In one particular, however, they are agreed, Talbot must marry the young heiress, Violet Melrose, while Charles will of course follow the wish of his father and choose Mary, the poor cousin. Unfortunately, the boys and the girls look at things in a different light and after the usual number of lovers' tussles and tribulations, Charles and Violet who have met in the past are again reconciled, and Mary and Talbot agree that love in a cottage where a fellow can smoke if he likes means happiness for both. The fathers, however wild with grief and rage at the failure of their plans, disown their sons, and the boys immediately leave home to seek their fortunes in London.

In the third and last act we find them on the third floor of a cheap boarding house, waited upon by a loyal slave Belinda trying in vain to earn a living. Sir Geoffrey and Middlewick, meanwhile, having repented of their severity, determine to visit the home of their sons. Here they are surprised by Clarissa who is followed by the two girls. A happy reconciliation takes place. Sir Geoffrey in his joy even forgives Clarissa her monstrosity of a bonnet and the curtain falls on a scene of peace and content.

McCormick Day.

Saturday was "McCormick Day" with a big "M" and the usual rain. It rained just as easy and just as hard as it did a year ago but the wetness did not delay the farmers from coming into town after their harvesters and mowers and when the three big freight cars were unloaded there was a string of wagons reaching from the depot well up Main street.

The three car loads represented about 63 machines as the result of Mr. Chadwick's labor for the season and it was the largest sale made by any agent in this district.

The parade in a measure was lost sight of in the dampness but the farmers had a jolly good time just the same and were treated to a royal banquet at the Park hotel from 12:00 to 1:00 o'clock, at the McCormick company's expense.

ADDITIONAL TEACHER FOR HIGH SCHOOL.

MISS BELLE LEMMON Ph. B. OF BAY CITY ENGAGED.

Miss Thompson Succeeds Miss Blair in 2d Primary.

To meet the Normal and University requirements and better facilitate the work of instruction throughout the school a third teacher has been engaged for the Northville High-school to commence with the fall term. Miss Belle Lemmon, Ph. B. of Bay City, a U of M '99 lit. is the lady who will come to Northville with both experience and education. Miss Lemmon is a sister of the present superintendent of the Blue Island schools of Illinois and in addition to her other qualifications is also an experienced teacher of music.

The only other change in the corps of teachers is Miss Margaret Thompson who succeeds Miss Blair in the 2d primary. Miss Thompson is a Normal graduate and will make a valuable addition to the force.

The corps of instructors for the ensuing year will be as follows:

I. B. Gilbert, Superintendent	$870
Hattie Daniels, J. C. Cress	400
Belle Lemmon, High School	400
P. H. Corbett, High School	250
Mrs. Wilson, 7th Grade	350
Mrs. Nichols, 6th and 7th Grades	400
M. H. Clark, 4th grade	250
Giles, 1st and 2nd	250
Violet Thompson, 2d grade	200
Mrs. Woods, 1st grade	300

The additional high school teacher while making an added expense of $200 over last year, only brings the total amount to where it was two years ago. The benefits to be derived from the employment of the additional high-school teacher cannot be over estimated. It will not only give the superintendent an opportunity to better supervise the work of every teacher in the building and enable him to keep in touch with each department, but it will also place the school on the Normal and U of M list, thus opening additional attractions to foreign pupils.

LITELY AT PLYMOUTH TUESDAY.

Northville Won the Ball Game—Nearly a Free-for-all Scrap.

The Northville and Plymouth ball clubs had one of their "old time" games in that village Tuesday afternoon. Coupled with the usual kicks and threats upon the life and happiness of Umpire Dr. Henry of this place the Northville boys finally won by a score of 11 to 10. As a side issue to the game young Ira Thomas of Meads Mills got tossed up in a blanket in mud turtle style to a ten foot height by the soldier boys for his cuteness in yelling "in soldier" every little while. After the toss-up Charley Hub of this place got into a hot argument with Corporal Hood of Plymouth over the matter and during the encounter both were knocked about in a way that indicated there would be more grave for decoration next year. Things got so hot that it looked like a circus riot and there was a general scramble for weapons in the shape of ball clubs and fence boards by the two factions but cooler heads argued away any further spilling of gore though the Northville crowd kept a weather eye on the war clouds till the time for returning home arrived.

KILLED BY ELECTRIC CAR.

FRANK ANDREWS WAS LAST NIGHT IN DETROIT.

Struck on Grand River Ave.—Only Lived 30 Minutes.

While returning to his boarding house from his work in Detroit at 6:00 o'clock last night, Frank Andrews, the well known deaf mute cabinet maker of this place, was struck by a Grand River electric car near 7th street and fatally injured. He was in company with George & Son, builders by whom he was employed, at the time of the accident, and only lived 30 minutes thereafter. He leaves a widow and several children. The remains were brought home this morning.

Suburban News.

Oxford is going to have a street fair.

Rev. Frank Arnold has been engaged as pastor of the Plymouth Baptist church.

Rev. J. W. Oliver of Plymouth will have to "move on" this year in accordance with the rules of the Methodist denomination and Plymouth people very much regret the necessity.

Plymouth's council has voted to have the Detroit Safe Co. build and set up for use in the village a caboose, two cells at an expense of $115. Those are the biggest cells the village has ever had worked on upon it. A regular steel too—Adrian Press.

The patrons of "Simple Simon's fishpond" at a recent "Mother Goose" market, given by the Congregational people at Wayne, thought they had run up against a regular Dean investment scheme, and after hauling out a cents worth of nonsense they left much more simple than Simon himself.

A week ago Sunday night a Milford young man returning home at 1:00 a. m. found the Yerkes mill pond overflowing and investigation revealed the fact that some miscreant had closed the waste gates. The situation was so serious that the fire whistle was blown for help, and after considerable work and anxiety the water was reduced to its normal depth. Much damage was done, a part of the warehouse being undermined and a large quantity of flour precipitated to a lower floor, some of the barrel bursting. The railroad track was also undermined.

Memorial Day.

The day set aside by the government of the United States for the commemoration of the heroic deeds of the soldiers of '61-5 has once more been fittingly observed by the people of this nation. Regardless of race, color or previous condition or service, we have gathered about the sacred graves of those whose lives were given in exchange for freedom and a stable government and have strewn the choicest flowers, and the mingled tears have uttered the silent declaration of love and esteem for the fathers, husbands and sons who shouldered the musket and went to the call of the Great Lincoln to carry out the demands of the emancipation, preservation and establishment of a nation that should be uniform through out the national domain.

The day is a sacred day. It is a duty to abstain from any decoration or its functions. The day should be spent in patriotic devotion to our dead heroes. And now that the present generation has responded to another call of arms to right and defend a simpler cause and while not so many noble lives have been sacrificed, the 30th day of each succeeding May should more than ever be given the patriotic distinction it justly merits. We live and respect the soldiers of the United States for the service they rendered in 1861-5 and 1899 for a common cause in which every man, woman and child has an interest.

Adrian Reformatory Investigation.

The investigation of the manner of conducting the Adrian Reformatory School for girls which has been in the legislative hands for some weeks past is causing no little excitement. Charges of cruelty and mismanagement are heard upon the one hand while the other side argues that discipline and order in certain cases is only maintained by harsh punishment though it is never cruel as was in some cases testified. When it is taken into consideration that the Adrian Reformatory is neither a female seminary nor a Sunday school but instead a place where some of the most incorrigible cases imaginable are sent as a punishment for one crime or another, it is scarcely to be wondered at that at times some means of punishment is found necessary that might in ordinary cases be considered harsh or even cruel.

We noticed that before the water board bill was passed the McMillanites appeared to favor the Colby bill and the Pingree people were "again" it, but after the water board bill went through it was exactly opposite—the Pingree people favored it and the McMillanites killed it.

Plank Walks Not Economy.

The Council may think it has performed a piece of economy by laying a plank instead of a stone walk in front of the Methodist church property on Center street, but so far as we are able to learn, and we have made careful enquiry, there is not a tax-payer in the village who agrees with them. A plank walk for the village or a plank cross walk is not a matter of economy. To be sure its immediate cost is much less but this is more than offset by the permanency and safety. If the council has struck such an economical streak all of a sudden there is plenty of opportunity as there has been for some years past, to practice it on the streets where hundreds of dollars are expended each year without an adequate benefit in return. The council did an unwise and uncalled for act in setting a plank-walk example, and especially when the stone walks were becoming so popular all over the village.

The Colby Bill.

The Colby reform caucus bill met its fate in the senate last week and was put to sleep in a manner that will know no awakening, at least by the present legislature. While there is apparently need of reform at least in the manner of selecting some officers the Colby bill, while along the right line, was not a measure that would ever have accomplished any great good. With the board of public works and the water board of Detroit under the control of one head under the Colby bill every nomination on both tickets could be dictated, making a worse state of affairs than ever under the present system and in addition in the shuffle the country would be to a slight of.

Suburban News.

That Rock is a regular museum last week's News of that bug tells of a maple leaf 15 inches across and an egg with smaller ones attached. Charles Howard who was the first male child born in the town of Northville, died last week in a carriage while riding with a friend. He was 70 years old.

Wayne's Coming Night Along. The Review says: A week ago last Saturday a party of motorists came out from Detroit to Wayne and a cock fight was pulled off in the back yard of one of our prominent citizens at 11 o'clock at night.

Pontiac ladies appealed to Andrew Carnegie for assistance in the matter of their library fund, but that gentleman refused on the ground that such a city ought to be capable of supporting a library after being presented with a building. The Post deplores—and with reason—that the library association has less than 200 members. Looks as if Pontiac was not a very lit town.

According to an interesting table in last week's Ann Arbor Courier, among the teachers engaged for the city schools for 1899-1900, one has taught there 31 years, one 29, one 26, one 23, three 20 and others 18, 17, 15, 13, 11 and so on down to 6 months. The highest salary listed is $2200 and the lowest $140. The yearly pay of seven of them is expressed in four figures. There are nearly seventy on the list.

A woman living near Ypsilanti has sued the D. Y. & A. A. for damages resultant from the cutting down of eleven maple trees. Her claim is for $1,000. Another suit has just been decided against the afore-said company in favor of an Ypsilantiian who could not get a ticket at Wayne and so had to pay extra fare. Verily the way of the electric road is hard. However the damages given the complainant in the last mentioned case was only six cents.

Their flavor is a little like opium, and their taste is sweet; the odor from them produces a sickening sensation and is slightly offensive. The seeds, when pulverized and taken in small quantities, have a peculiar effect upon man. He begins to laugh loudly, boisterously, then he sings, dances and cuts all manner of fantastic capers. CHI THE BEAUTIFUL WRETCH.
He had been going there for a month now, and had not progressed any further in his race for the girl than when he first began. True, she was cold and haughty, true, too, was it that she treated him with disdain, but what mattered that to him. Was she not worth millions, and were he not almost penniless. He was working, but at what?—a six-dollar a week clerk in a drygoods store—and he could not hope to marry on that. As a matter of fact she was one port in a storm and possibly a haven. At length, the determined to find out how much she cared for him and with that object in view put on his best suit, placed a four-inch collar around his neck, doffed a new hat, patent-leather shoes—for which his last week's earnings had been expended—and with a new pair of gloves, borrowed from the store for the occasion, went to visit her at the magnificent home of her parents on Girard avenue. The evening was spent pleasantly enough until 10 o'clock, when a remark that she dropped brought to his mind what he intended to do. He began timidly at first, and after some he-having managed to ask her may I—er—press my suit? Of course, came her answer instantly as she reached for and pressed the button "James show this gentleman to the kitchen and give him a flatiron."

Pointed Paragraphs.
The man who invests in green goods must want money bad.

The lass whose lover goes to sea sheds many a private tear.

What men call firmness in themselves they call contrariness in others.

The man who is employed by his wife's father don't worry about losing his job.

It's a curious anomaly of war that both contending parties are always in the right.

Men and clotheslines become unsteady when they have too many sheets in the wind.

A man's success often depends on his ability to prevent others from preventing it.

When the average young man graduates from college he knows more than he ever will in the future.

Men convinced against their will are of the same opinion still, but no woman is ever convinced that way.

There's a screw loose somewhere when a minister gets the princely salary of $400 per year, and a baseball player only gets $4,000.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Wayne.
As a session of the Probate Court for said County of Wayne, held at the Probate office in the City of Detroit on the twenty-third day of May in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-nine, Present Edgar G. Dunfee, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of J. A. BAILEY deceased, on reading and filing the petition duly verified of Hannah J. Rogers, praying that Jacob Rogers, administrator of the Estate of said deceased, may be licensed to sell the real estate of said deceased for the purpose of distribution, it is ordered that the twentieth day of June next at ten o'clock in the forenoon at said probate office be appointed for hearing said petition and that all persons interested in said estate appear before said court at said time and place to show cause why a license should not be granted to said administrator to sell real estate as prayed for in said petition, and as further ordered that a copy of this order be published three successive weeks previous to said time of hearing in the Northville Record a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Wayne.

EDGAR G. DUNFEE
Judge of Probate.

C. C. Yerkes Attorney, Northville, Mich.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Default having been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Henry Puckle and his wife Elizabeth Puckle to Marvin Boree dated January, 28, 1897, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Wayne county, Michigan on the 34th day of January A. D. 1897 in Liber 424 of Mortgages, on page 94 and on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the sum of seven hundred and six dollars and twenty cents ($754.20), and no part of principal and interest having been paid to recover the money secured by said mortgage or any part thereof now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage the same being made operative according to the statutes in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that on Tuesday the 27th day of June A. D. 1899 at twelve o'clock noon (city time) I will sell at public auction to the highest bidder at said western post door to the City Hall in the City of Detroit in said county (that being the building in which the Circuit Court for the County of Wayne is held) the premises described in said mortgage to pay the amount due thereon including interest and costs of this notice, including all interest due on said mortgage, and allow of a law, to wit living and home in the Village of Northville Wayne county Michigan as described as follows: to wit (12) rods north-westly from the south-west corner of a piece of land do and M. The wife of Postmaster Hutton of Northville presented her husband with a fine boy last week, and the postmaster declares it to be male matter of the first-class, unstamped, hence he must detain it.—Adrian Press

The junior class of the High school will give the play "Our Boys" in the opera house Friday evening June 3. Admission 10 cents in the gallery, 15 cents down stairs. Reserved seats 5 cents extra. Tickets on sale at Murdock's on and after Monday June 5.

The farm houses and sheds of A. J. Welch north-west of town were destroyed by fire Monday night. The loss including contents will probably reach $1,000. There was an insurance in the Monitor company of about $100. It is thought to have been the work of incendiaryism.

Richmond Simmons, who lives north-west of the village has sold his farm to his son Fred and will have a big auction sale on the premises next week. Thursday commencing at 1 o'clock. The sale includes a lot of stock, and farm implements, etc. Ratterbury & Brooks are auctioneers.

Photographer Brown has kept a book since 1871, and an effort made to have the book transferred from the first day of the year to the 10th day of May. This is a rare record breaker.

Almanac. The almanac for the year 1899, which is the only one of the kind in the country, is now being prepared by F. J. Cheney & Co. of Toledo, Ohio. It is the only one of the kind in the country, and is the only one of the kind in the country.

Assessment roll of the township of Plymouth for the present year is $1,132,250, which is $3,000 more than last year. A few pieces of property have been raised from last year's valuation which, however, is offset by a shrinkage in value of other property. The increase over last year's assessment is due mainly to permanent additions to and improvements of the property of the township.—Plymouth Mail

Postmaster Hutton was a little surprised this week to receive a notice from postmaster general to raise the rate of call boxes from 7 to 10 cents a quarter. It will be remembered that about a year ago the rates were raised from 7 to 20 cents and Mr. Hutton thinking the rate to be excessive, through the aid of Congressman Spalding had it reduced again to the old rate. Had the department made the change at that time as they now have there would have been no complaint, for we still have as low rate here as any office in the state and much below the average. The small raise of only 3 cents will hardly be felt by anyone. These rates are always fixed by the department and is entirely beyond the postmaster's control. The order takes effect July 1st but does not affect lock boxes or draws.

Publisher's Notice.

Friends and readers of the Record will confer a favor on the paper, and themselves as well, by asking Judge of Probate Durfee to publish all notices or estates in which they may be interested, in the Record. The judge is perfectly willing and a request is all that is necessary.

A letter received this week from State Tiespass Agent King of Indian River enquiring after Tom Evans states that he is considered one of a desperate family. His brother Lafayette Evans, he says is now serving a seven year sentence for attempted murder and that this brother's wife who now lives in Alpena states that Tom attempted to assault her little eight year old girl. King says this is not his first crime and that the community hereabouts is fortunate in getting rid of him.

It appears after all that a few weeks ago when the fire alarm was sent in from the institute there was quite a fire in Mr. Carruthers' house and but for the timely arrival of some of the patients from the gold cure just opposite, a serious conflagration might have resulted.—Northville Record. How those patients must be benefited by the gold cure treatment to be able to use water so effectively.—Delray and Springwells Times.

'Course that's what they come for to be benefited. Water you driving at?

Wayne council has passed a cast iron ordinance relating to the dog population of the village. To take effect July 1st. After that date war is declared on all canines whose owners have failed to comply with the proper requirements. One clause of the new law will undoubtedly open up a field for unlimited dogs, as it could be made very comprehensive by people who had personal spite to satisfy. It forbids the keeping of any dog that makes a noise that causes serious annoyance to neighbors or passers by. We predict that the ordinance will cause a lot of growling.

There will be a total eclipse of the sun on the 28th of this month. This eclipse of 1899 will be the most accessible and important ever known to science for it will occur in May, a season favorable for observation. It will last from sunrise to sunset and will be observable throughout its entire course.—Oakland County Advertiser, Ponton Independent, Holly Independent and fifty other papers.

Did anybody see that eclipse? It isn't mentioned in the almanac so our "brother and sister" must have got the greatest scoop ever known. The almanac folks only knew of three, and whoever wanted to see those would have to be in the northern corner of Alaska or some where on the north Pacific Jan 5, in Europe or the Polar regions June, and in New Zealand, S. A. Australia the S. Pacific or the Indian Ocean Dec 7.

There is more to this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven contrary to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case that fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. CHENEY & CO. Toledo, O. Druggists 75c. Hall's Catarrh Pills are the best.

Walled Lake News.

Mrs. F. R. Riley is spending the week in Detroit.

Cora Bently visited her sister in South Ly on a part of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Julian Devereaux spent Sunday with friends in Milford.

Jennie Gilchrist went to Detroit Wednesday for a few weeks' stay.

The Walled Lake band played at Milford Tuesday. Quite a number of the citizens were in attendance there also.

S. M. Gage expects to move into his new store next Tuesday and will give all his old friends a right hearty welcome as of old.

The Farmers' club will meet at the home of E. A. Green Friday, June 9 instead of the usual Wednesday. Remember the change of date.

Rev. Lockport of Commerce preached in the Baptist church Sunday morning and in the evening a very interesting talk on missions was given by Miss Gage of Detroit in the same church.

Married Wednesday afternoon in Pontiac, Miss Amelia Ryd of this place to Mr. Jay Bently of Novi. The young couple will go on a trip up to Ann Arbor and other points which they will be at home in Novi. We extend congratulations.

As Mrs. Thos. Moore was driving down the hill by Peck's Austin's on Tuesday, some part of the harness gave way and the horse became unmanageable and ran into the bank at the bottom of the hill throwing Mrs. Moore out but she clung to the horse until assistance came. She was badly lamed and was delirious until the next day.

Dr. Walker's Success in the Treatment of Chronic Diseases.

It is well known to the people of Northville and vicinity that Dr. W. C. Walker of Detroit has visited here for some time and has had marked success. Many of our oldest and most respected citizens, whose cases had been abandoned as hopeless by other physicians, consulted the doctor and much to the surprise of all, many of them have been restored to perfect health and now are living monuments of Dr. Walker's skill. They are unable to thank him enough for what he has done for them. This is shown by his large and increasing practice. A number have been heard to remark that they had changed climates, taken oceans of patent medicines and sure cures, visited watering places and grew worse, were finally cured by Dr. W. C. Walker. His next visit to Northville at the Park House is Tuesday, June 6. If you have not found help elsewhere see him.

The Gold That Glitters.

DO RICHES MAKE HAPPINESS, OR DOES HEALTH MAKE WEALTH?

The richest man cannot always be said to be the most successful, for true success is not possible without happiness. Many a wealthy man would give all he now possesses to have the health and happiness of a young athlete. Health is not hard to get and keep if good judgment is used in caring for and supplying the needs of the system. Nature often needs assistance; you sometimes abuse nature by overtaxing your nerves, your brain, or your body, and you haven't time to relax, and take the rest that you need. You must have outside help. Pabst Malt Extract, The "Best" Tonic, will supply the extra fuel, food, and strength; it is absolutely pure—an unequalled assistant to nature in giving health, vitality and strength. It will make you eat and sleep well, and cause you to feel like yourself again, or perhaps, better than you ever felt in your life. The "Best" Tonic was awarded the 100 points of perfection at the World's Fair, and was the only Malt Extract which received that honor. Your nearest druggist carries Pabst Malt Extract, The "Best" Tonic in stock.

A PARTING.

"Good-by, then"—and he turned away, No other word between them spoken; You hardly would have guessed that day

How close a bond was broken

The quick short tremor of the hand That clasped her own in that brief parting.

Only her heart could understand— Who saw the tear-drop starting

Who felt a sudden surge of doubt Come rushing back unbidden o'er her.

As, at life words, her life without His presence loomed before her

The others saw, the others heard— A calm cool man, a gracious woman,

A quiet brief farewell murmured By aught at all uncommon.

She knew a fatal die was cast.

She knew that two paths hence must sever

That one familiar step had passed— Out of her life forever

To all the rest it merely meant A trivial parting, lightly spoken;

She read the bitter, mute intent, She knew a heart was broken.

A MIDNIGHT TRYST.

"The age of miracles is past," remarked Charles Ingram, giving a meditative glance to his long legs, as if they were somehow responsible for the present dearth of miraculous occurrences, and thus kindly, if unintentionally, affording me an opportunity to admire his resolute profile, the boyish freshness of his complexion, and other details that went to make a picture of earnest young manhood.

The age of miracles is past. Ravens or other thoughtful birds no longer sit about desirous of feeding the despairing poor. I must go to work.

In other words, he must tear himself from my enthralling presence and betake himself to a distant state, there to embark in a minor venture—a plan of ancient date in his life, and upon which we built our Utopia of future bliss.

"I am going, Rose soon."

I suppose I looked like Grief on a monument turning up her nose at Patience for his sake.

On, you'll get along all right. The dust of my footsteps won't have been blown by the wind before Tom, Dick and Harry will be spooning here."

I left his side and walked to the tall glass suspended between the end windows of the old parlor that had witnessed so much of our love-making. It seemed worth while to take a fresh inventory of my charms, in view of the imminence of my conquests.

"Was it mad?" he mocked, coming to stand by me and trying to meet my eyes in the mirror. "You see I envy thee—confound em! See here, suppose you go into a nunnery till I come back."

"Thanks! not even to oblige your Sultanic Majesty I'll compromise, though, I will go into a nunnery, if you don't come back."

Will you encourage me? I will give you five years of graceless freedom and if I don't come back in that time make your vows (in an austere, sepulchral tone) and coiled and cloistered pray for the repose of my restless soul, for if I don't come back it will be a very restless soul.

He brushed my cheek with his soft moustache which despite his assured carriage and his fierce self-assertion, gave him such a naïf, adolescent air.

Then slipping his arm around me and surveying our prepossessing figures.

"What a strikingly handsome couple we are! You have a way of drawing me to this mirror to harrow my soul with that picture."

"If you could only conjure this old mirror—fix that image there visible to me only—I could steal in here, and, looking at it persuade myself that maybe you had not laid your gold mine at the feet of—"

I paused from deficiency of information not knowing whether senioritas or gentle savages predominated in the gold mine region.

What! lots of men we had at this mirror Halloween, a year ago—don't you remember? See here—with a sudden change of manner—"are you in earnest about my showing up there some time in the future?"

All right, I will make an engagement with you. Let's see—this is January—say next Halloween the night of nights. If you want, to see me, and you have not forgotten me look in this glass next Halloween, and my face will appear there as sure as fate."

"Nonsense!" You don't know anything about it. Well, I had a grandmother who could do the queerest things you ever heard of. You just come in here on the night of the 31st of next October. Come alone, at midnight, come in the dark! remember; stand here, strike a match, light the candle you will have with you, raise it above your head, look right in there, and—can you do an, thing as heroic as that?"

"Oh, yes, if that's all," I said, flippantly.

"All right, dance, flirt, break as many hearts as you please; but if in the meantime you do not join the great majority—I mean that big majority of your sex who are inconsistent—come in here on the 31st, at midnight, and if there is a bathtub in Boonville, a Chinese laundry, a barber and a haberdasher, you'll see me right there (pointing), fresh as a daisy, and wearing the handsomest four-in-hand in Boonville. You promise?"

"I promise out—opposing you have not inherited your grandmother's skill in necromancy?"

"But I have; I know it; I am certain of it. You must think about me of course, have faith, above all; obey directions implicitly, and—you'll see what you'll see!"

"I generally do," I said, sapiently. A few days after our memorable conversation Charles bade me good-by, and full of courage and hope, and with many promises and assurances for the future set out on the long journey to his distant field of labor and enterprise.

Silence fell between us, for my parents objected to any correspondence between us. I danced and flirted; the mise en scene of my life-called for such diversion, in fact, but on the 31st of the following October I declined the most seductive Halloween parties, in order that alone, at midnight, in front of the old mirror, I might keep my tryst.

Had he forgotten me, amid strangers and in the ardor of money-getting? Had some other woman already lured astray the heart too young to have anchored all its hopes upon one woman, albeit myself?

What did I expect? It was a piece of folly; and yet, on the night of the 31st of October, the mystic night when strange things used to be thought possible and weird influences were supposed to rise in their might to weave their puzzling manifestations about wondering, flesh-mattered mortals—on that night I slipped from my bedroom a few minutes before 12 o'clock, and with a fast-beating heart I felt my way down the stairs, through the hall to the long parlor which opened upon it.

I reached the door, felt for the knob, gently turned it, and opened the door—unsuccessfully. As I did so I could have sworn that someone elided behind it.

I was in darkness, but involuntarily I turned my head toward the door. Had not someone closed it? I could have sworn with terror. Nonsense! At all events, it was as bad to retreat as to go forward now.

Again I turned my head to listen. My knees quaked at last the marble shelf which held the mirror, I stooped, and struck a match upon its under surface, lit the candle with which I was provided, raised it well above my head, and looked into the mirror's depths.

No sound of jalous was escaped from my lips—nearly while the look of fascinated horror filled my eyes. My knees gave way like props suddenly withdrawn. I should have fallen, but that a strong man's arms were about me, my head fell, perforce, upon his breast, being unable to sustain itself.

"In heaven's name control your self," he whispered, and neither face nor voice was Charles's.

This adventure ought to have cured me of all desire to keep unhallowed Halloween trysts, but on three successive anniversaries I looked in the old mirror at midnight. I might ask, as I did on the first occasion, what did I expect? and repeat what I said then, that it was a piece of childishness. But to renounce it seemed like renouncing Charles—I did it half playfully, half loyally, wistfully too, as a sort of memorial service to his image, which still lived in my dreams and threw its radiance over my reveries. As the years went by the sentiment assumed a tinge of superstition and the little midnight service became obligatory.

What had become of him? I knew not; darkness and silence had swallowed him, but the sea sometimes yields up its dead, and was it not just possible that beside the antique mirror, where he had promised to meet me, laughingly swearing that he never broke his word—was not it just possible some message, some revelation might come to me?

October had come—again, the fifth since Charles had left me. He had had almost five years to cultivate an aura and collect his auriferous deposits.

"See here, Charles," I said, as the last night of the year's sweetest month was waning, "I am going to give up mysticism for matrimony. I'll have to marry to get rid of this awful habit of expecting the 31st of October. I'll have to accept Tom Allyn in self-defense. There's insanity in this madness."

I got up from the lounge on which I had thrown myself face downward, and despite my bravado there were tears of desperate longing in my eyes.

The clock was striking the last quarter before twelve. I looked disheveled, and I felt forlorn, and yet, contradictorily, there swept over me something like an emotion of hatred for him when I thought that in all likelihood he was gay and happy and heart-whole, while I was on the eve of my yearly devotional ceremony—my dark and trembling pilgrimage downstairs. The futility, the imbecility of it made me heart sick.

I pressed my fingers to my eyes fiercely as if to wipe his features from my retina. In vain, I shuddered with delight, for he seemed to be right there beside me, and every trait and charm that had won my soul appealed to it resistlessly again. Indeed it was as if the eloquent page one has learned to love had revealed fresh features, subtler meanings, in type and text.

I glanced at the clock; five minutes gone. I threw off my wrapper, assumed a Louis Quinze gown and stuck a bunch of roses (an offering from my sis aller, Tom) in my corsage.

One minute of 12!

Heavens! Suppose I should be too late; suppose he had come and gone—looked in the mirror, and not seeing me, vanished! And yet, if I fell downstairs and broke my neck, Charles would be my murderer. To save him from this ghastly responsibility I moderated my speed. If I had been in bloomers I would have slid down the banisters.

I was in front of the mirror now, and a town clock boomed 12. I was so excited that its reverberations shook me like a rough hand. I could scarcely hold the candle (it was blessed, by the way), but up above my head I carried it at ease, while my eyes searched the mirror; and, believe it or not, from their clear depths, as it from the water of the past, looked Charles. "Rose!" and the voice was Charles's. "Oh, Charles!" and the arms that enfolded me were Charles's.

A brief interval, all that life ever yields us, was given to rapture, and then realism ramped upon the scene. Remembering my first trying vigil, I murmured with awe

"How did you get in?"

"Just as I did four years ago."

"Four years ago?"

"Fact! I never break an engagement with a lady, even my sweetheart; but I am as polite as punctual (at times), and as another gentleman had you in his embrace on that occasion I very considerably (as I thought) retired. I took the 4 o'clock train last morning and went back to—well, Dante's inferno," he said, joyously. "But, strange to say, that man is the cause of my being here."

"Oh, Charles!" with a shudder at that frightful episode, I don't understand—explain." What did make you come at last?"

"Well, it seemed worth while to make a little journey of two or three thousand miles for the sake of a few explanations. Best reason of all, I wanted to see you, to hold you in my arms. Saddest reason of all, I wanted to get on my knees and beg your pardon. I felt like skimming myself when I knew it was temperamental, and I couldn't stop myself."

"But tell me, how did he—who is he—what was he to do with it?"

"To-morrow, sweet."

"No, to-night."

"Well, about two months ago a man calling himself Horace Armistead came to Boonville. He was a tall, handsome, meandering individual, very reckless, very wild—fascinating, though, a sort of careless style about him, a certain nonchalant frankness that would make you share your last crust with him and give him your last red copper. What are you blushing about?"

And honestly I am glad that urgent private business compelled him to pass, on a flying trip, inco, but I am anticipating.

Mr. Armistead very promptly got into a difficulty in Boonville, when it fell in my way to render him a slight service. Six weeks ago or thereabouts he dropped in on me one evening, bag in hand, to bid me good-by and to thank me for what he was pleased to call my kindness to him.

"He was going—by the way, he didn't say what was his destination—no matter! Your picture was hanging over the shelf that served as a mantel in my room quarters (you see, I had left it there—hoping it would make a good woman-hater of me), and as soon as he saw that picture he made a sudden movement toward it—almost a jump it was. He controlled himself and sat down again, but he could look at nothing else."

"That is a striking likeness," he said at last, "it might have been taken for her—of the most beautiful woman I ever saw. I spent but one hour in her society, but I will never forget her."

"Interesting, romantic," I murmured. "It strikes me I would not have been satisfied with one hour; I would have continued the acquaintance."

"There must have been something compelling in my desire to hear that story, for he added—"

"It happened this way. I was a fugitive. Why? No matter—and he looked dreamily at the curling smoke of his cigar, as if it might be the wreath of that past to which he referred. 'I was passing in disguise through a strange city. To elude those who were spying upon me, I entered at night a certain house in a quiet quarter of the town. I did it in the most natural way in the world, I simply raised the latch of a door which, through some oversight, perhaps, had been left unlocked. It was a roomy old place, and there didn't seem to be many people about; in fact, it was occupied by an elderly couple and their daughter. Toward midnight I left my hiding place and entered the parlor.'

"I had been there a short time when, provisionally, as it turned out, a lady stole in. She had some difficulty in getting about in the dark, but she finally struck a match, lit a candle, and looked into a big mirror that was hanging at one end of the room. What in the mischief she did for I can't conceive—can you? I have wondered a hundred times what brought her there! It was my good angel, I suppose."

"I shall never forget her look of terror when, as she held the candle above her head, she saw me behind her. I didn't want any outcry, and I did not want to terrorize her, I put my arms about her, for she could hardly stand, and grasping the candle, I begged her to be calm. When she became so, I threw myself upon her mercy. I begged her to look upon me as a fellow-creature in misfortune, not to judge, but to help me. She answered my prayer in letter and spirit. I left the house, walked out of the city, and attained a place of safety."

"I don't think I gave a sign of life during that narration, I was a statue, but a statue that would wake to life, rest assured of that."

"When he was gone—and I wished him Godspeed with all my heart—I thought I would jump on the first train and come right back here; but a better plan suggested itself, and I decided to defer my return a few weeks."

"I remembered your promise to look in the old mirror on the 31st of October; and just suppose, I said to myself, just suppose I should surprise her, improbable as it seems, before that old mirror on next Halloween! She'll be obliged to forgive me in self-defense."

THE LAMP THAT LASTS. The New Rochester.

Fifteen years ago we began the manufacture of centre light lamps. A dealer bought one of the first and placed it in his show window. Each day it is filled and lighted; occasionally it is cleaned and re-wicked. That lamp is good to-day.

Soon as The Rochester was demonstrated a success, a host of imitations sprang up. A few of the better ones still survive, the rest are gone. Why? "You can fool all the people some of the time," but not all the time.

One New Rochester lamp in a household is a blessing. Soon there will be others. Do you want to know why? Write for printed matter if interested.

A Narrow Escape.

Thankful words written by Mrs. Ada E. Hart, of Gorton, S. D. "I was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles. It has cured me, and thank God, I am saved and now a well and healthy woman." Trial bottles free at Geo. C. Hueston Drug Store. Regular size 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed or price refunded.
