EVANS' MADE ANOTHER MOVE.

HE CAUSED THE ARREST OF HIS ALLEGED ASSAULTERS

On a Warrant Last Week Issued by an Ecorse Justice.

The scare lynching given Tom Evans by some of his Meads Mills neighbors on May 18 last and subsequent events has been almost one continuous round of tragedy and comedy. After his scare beneath the now historic town line elm tree during the noon hour of the eventful May day Tom hastened Detroitward and through the aid of his former lawyer, Attorney Weddes, soon after came back at his alleged lynchers with a damage suit for $25,000.

The next we hear of Evans is when he was enticed over the state line from Toledo and brought here on the charge of threatening to burn barns and do bodily harm to G. P. Benton. For this he was found guilty and sentenced to 90 days in the house of correction in lieu of $500 bonds.

The next move in the game was when a warrant for assault to do great bodily harm was issued by Justice Somers of Ecorse at the investigation of Evans' attorney last week. Officers from there came here with papers that took all of his alleged assaulters to that banqueting Friday morning for trial. The comedy part this time was in that the warrant called for two additional "desperadoes," George Stark and Patrick Conley, who were not within miles of the "lynchers," that eventful day, but that made no difference. There was no way of evading the demands of an Ecorse Justice, and those two gentlemen, like sheep for the slaughter, wended their way thitherward with the others. Justice Somers evidently thought the ten or dozen Northville farmers were a bad looking lot of men for he held them and set the examination two weeks later, but he released them all on their own recognizance. Messrs. Conley and Stark will take along with them to the examination several alibis to show that Evans was just a trifle rattled that day as to who participated in the neck-tie social.

The move now is up to the Meads Mills-Northvillites, and it is said to be one which will land Evans in another part of the state.

NORTHVILLE LOSES PROFESSOR GILBERT.

RESIGNS TO ACCEPT SUPERINTENDENCY OF ST. JOHNS SCHOOLS.

The Board Here Releases Him With Regret.

The resignation of Prof. Gilbert last week to accept the superintendency of the St. Johns schools came to Northville people like a bolt from a clear sky. Mr. Gilbert had been re-engaged here for another year at an increase of salary but the school board, while regretting the change, are not inclined to hold him to his contract when he is able to do so much better. Northville people in general will not only be sorry to lose Prof. Gilbert as superintendent of the school here but with his accomplished wife he will be greatly missed in social circles.

The board has several applications already in to fill the vacancy but no definite action has yet been taken.

SEVEN OF MICHIGAN'S WELL KNOWN PIONEERS.

All but One of the Yerkes Brothers Are Still Alive.

Few men came to Michigan previous to 1826 who have left their imprint both in character and descendants upon the commonwealth as has Joseph Yerkes, grandfather of the subjects of our sketch.

Harmon Yerkes the founder of the name in this country came to America from Germany early in the sixteenth century and settled in what is now eastern Pennsylvania. One son emigrated south and was never afterward heard of; the other remained and reared eight sons, one of whom was Stephen the father of Joseph. Joseph came from New York state to Michigan with the family of his son William in May 1826 and settled on section two of this township. William Yerkes, Sr., father of Joseph, Robert, Purdy, Silas, Harrison, George and Charles, was a member of the last territorial legislature, and also of the first state legislature of which body he was a member again in 1836-37. This brings us down to seven brothers whose pictures are presented herewith:

The eldest of the seven Joseph, D. died May 23rd last at the age of 89 years and was without doubt the oldest pioneer of Oakland county.

Robert who lives just in the north border of the village comes next in age, and was county treasurer of Oakland for two years.

Wm. Purdy is still a resident of our village, though in somewhat feeble health. He was judge of probate of Wayne county from 1860 to 1864.

Harrison is also a resident of the village and he too is not enjoying the best of health though able to be about the village.

Charles, like Robert, lives just on the north edge of the village and may be called one of its residents. Silas, father of Mrs. T. J. Perkins of this place, is a resident of Bennington, Shiawassee county, and is a prosperous farmer.

George is a resident of Novi. He was supervisor of that town for seven years and served one term in the house of representatives.

Another brother, Stephen, died in 1881. Of the eight boys, all were over six feet in height. The grandfather was over six feet tall, and from his eight grandsons have sprung every Yerkes in the United States, and down to the present generation the average height of the male descendants has been six feet. The various families are well-to-do, owning very fine farms and having interests in business enterprises that have been successfully managed by them.

GERTRUDE YERKES-FITZGERALD

Former Northville Girl who Died in St. Johns Last Week.

The following from the St. Johns News of June 29 refers to the illness and death of a former well-known Northville girl, Mrs. Gertrude Yerkes-Fitzgerald, daughter of Mrs. J. D. Yerkes and sister of Attorney C. C. Yerkes of this place:

"Mrs. J. W. Fitzgerald passed away at her home in St. Johns, yesterday morning.

"There are times when the pen utterly fails to respond to the usual touch, and when the mind falters in its attempt to frame sentences and thoughts for the reader's perusal.

"The words which are to record the final earthly separation of the writer's own mother, call to mind such a flood of thought, such a world of happy memories and pleasant recollections of the past, in which she whose voice is forever stilled, was the central figure, that the task seems well nigh impossible.

"With the passing of this gentle spirit, came the end of a life so noble, so self-sacrificing and so intent on the welfare and happiness of her family and those about her, that the loss falls with awful significance on the members of that circle who have been suddenly deprived of this wife and mother.

"She had been able to be out, up to a week ago Monday, when she was obliged to take to her bed, and steadily failed each day to the time of her dissolution. The nervous system seemed completely shattered and paralysis made its appearance almost at the outset of the sickness.

"Gertrude Yerkes was born at Northville, Michigan, April 17, 1846, having just passed her fifty-third birthday. She received her education in the Northville public schools and afterward at the state normal at Ypsilanti. In 1868 she was united in marriage at her parent's home to J. W. Fitzgerald. They soon afterwards moved to Clinton county and with the exception of a few years in Jackson, have been residents here since that date.

"Mrs. Fitzgerald cared but little for society and her home was always the one place around which centered her greatest interest, her greatest anxiety and her greatest love. Her life was a most perfect example of the wife and mother to whom the welfare of those near and dear to her was paramount to all else on earth. Never did she bestow a thought upon herself in connection with anything which was to affect the family collectively. It was always the effect on others which would occur to her first and last, and about which she would always carefully inquire and her sweet womanly way and strong, earnest, cheerful response to all the duties of maternity will be forever held in sacred memory by those who called her wife and mother.

"Although she never formally united with any church, the whole intent of her life was so much in harmony with the spirit of Him to whom she taught each child at her knee to nightly petition, that a purer christian life could not be sought.

"The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Herbener of Northville and an old friend of the family, and the remains laid to rest in the St. Johns cemetery.

"Mrs. Fitzgerald leaves her mother, a brother, C. C. Yerkes of Northville, and a sister, Mrs. L. C. Mead, besides her husband and four children, Mrs. C. P. Baker and Howard, Harry and Roy Fitzgerald all of St. Johns.

"We folded tenderly those quiet hands. When mother died. And softly smoothed the silken, wavy bands. On either side. And as, so often she her vigils kept. We now sat watching while our mother slept. At eventide.

"We gained carresses on that placid brow. When mother died. And kissed the lips that never until now. Our own denied. That face and tenderness had been to us. A holy gift, compared to which, the earth shrunk down beside.

Suburban News.

Pontiac and Eli are both anxious to secure an axle factory that is looking for a location and a bonus of $3,000. The factory is to employ from 50 to 100 men.

The Plymouth Mail is looking very fine under its new proprietorship. Suburban correspondence from various points is a prominent feature and the local columns are extremely well filled.

"Wisdom's Oracles" is the way one of the Record's exchanges heads an article appertaining to educational matters. Even oracles have an occasional bad "spell" it seems, though side by side with wisdom.

Grasshoppers are too numerous hopping around in the grass in some parts of Oakland county again this year. They have already caused a good deal of damage, and incidentally, without the age.

"Haying has begun."—Deerfield Journal. Begun, what?—Adrian Press.

Oh go to grass with such jokes. What kind of a syath are you trying to cut anyway?—Begun to hay, of course!

An effort is to be made, to make the highway of uniform width—four rods—between Northville and Plymouth. We understand at some points it is only forty feet between fences.—Plymouth Mail.

Pontiac Presbyterians are engaged in a lively scrap over the retention or non-retention of their present pastor, Rev. S. H. Thompson. Probably under the circumstances that gentleman will decide the matter for himself.

The latest bug to appear on the scene of the trials of the agricultural community is the "beet bug," which preys on the incipient sugar in an exasperating manner. It is unnecessary to remark that it beats everything in the pest line yet invented.

John Howden of White Lake, Oakland county, is $175 short as the result of hiring a stranger to work for him. The fellow plead illness and poverty, was taken in out of pity, and at the first opportunity stole the money and decamped.

Milford Presbyterians have commenced preparations for the building of their new house of worship and the Times suggests that somebody kindly present a town clock to finish off the church tower. That strikes one as being a very timely suggestion.

Some Farmington folks had a big banquet a short time ago, and after accepting without a protest a lot of free advertising by the local paper, they forgot to invite the editor to the spread. The editor was wrathful and gave the banquet people a red-hot roast.

Miss Walker, a young lady of Plymouth township had a very peculiar as well as dangerous accident last week. She dropped a hot curling iron which she was using and it struck her across the eyes, burning them so that for a time loss of sight was feared.

Quite a number of the tax-payers of Plymouth expressed themselves at a recent meeting as being in favor of bonding the village for $25,000 or so

The oil tank which was said to have been struck by lightning on the F&M railway causing an expensive wreck a few weeks ago near Rose Center, has just been fished out of the water, and it is stated that not the least mark can be found on it. Ninety of the road scrapers which were a part of the freight on the wrecked train have also been recovered. The cause of the wreck remains a mystery.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., JULY 7, 1899.

The Barbers' Law.

The barbers' license law passed by the last legislature turns out to be a rich thing for the secretary. Under the provisions of the act every barber now doing business in the state is required to pay the secretary the sum of $1 and receive a license to continue in the business. As there is no provision in the law requiring the secretary to turn over any money coming into his hands, and as there are about 45,000 barbers in the state who must come down with their eight shillings apiece for the first year and 50c per annum thereafter it will be seen that the secretary has an opportunity to do a good stroke of business.

Another injustice in the law is the provision that every barber doing business at the time the law went into effect shall be permitted to continue in business. No provision is made for good barbers who are temporarily out of business, but who may desire to reengage in it. Under the law they will be required to pay the $1 fee and undergo an examination before engaging in business.

We will take off our hat to any barber in the state who will ever show up a financial benefit received under this law, to say nothing of his worthy contribution in hard earned cash. And yet they all were dead anxious to have it passed.

Nine Lives Lost in Lake Erie.

In a heavy northeast gale of the night of the 25th the Steamer Margaret O'Neil, laden with stone from Kelly's Island to Cleveland, foundered in Lake Erie off Lorain and nine persons were drowned. Four members of the crew have been picked up by passing steamers and taken into port. The cargo of stone shifted while the vessel was in the trough of the sea and she sank instantly.

The Fourth was observed in a patriotic manner at Manila.

Sturgis, St. Joseph county, was founded in 1818, by Judge J. Sturgis, who located near the present city site, on a claim, and he was the first white settler there. Davis Sturgis, born 1830, was the first white child born on the prairie.

A terrific storm visited Morgantown, W. Va., on the night of the 29th and dozens of houses were unroofed. The wind blew like a hurricane. A rainfall of several inches accompanied the storm and tremendous damage was done to crops of every description. Bridges were washed away and roads were made impassable.

NEWSY GENERALITIES

ITEMS GATHERED FROM ALL DIRECTIONS.

Great Britain, Germany and Russia Have Agreed Upon a Plan to Divide China.

Agreed Upon a Plan to Divide China. And Will Doubtless Carry it Into Effect—Nine Lives Lost in Lake Erie.

Powers Agree to Divide China.

There is little doubt that a secret treaty has been made by Great Britain, Germany and Russia concerning their several "spheres of influence" in China, and that the partition of the crumbling old empire among the European nations will now go on without friction. It is suspected that France is also a party to the convention, although it is not positively known. At any rate, the Frenchmen are to take their share of the spoils, and Italy and Belgium are to come in for smaller slices. Russia has already occupied the province of Manchuria, and has 7,000 soldiers there. Germany has 3,000 soldiers in the province of Shantung, and has recently demanded the appointment of a German as adviser to the native governor general of that province. That is a long step in the direction of permanent occupation, and means that Emperor William intends to take to assume executive control over that portion of China without further ceremony.

Italian Deputies Fought a Fight.

In the Italian chamber of deputies on June 30th the socialists and extreme leftists recommenced their obstructive tactics and created an immense uproar. The president of the house combated the efforts of the obstructionists and finally the deputies left their seats, crowded on the floor and there was such an uproar that the sitting was suspended. When it was resumed similar tactics were carried on by extreme leftists, who crowded the floor. The tumult was deafening and eventually a free fight ensued and the sitting was again suspended. At a later session of the chamber, despite the efforts of the president, who begged the deputies to be calm and proceed to a vote the uproar was redoubled, members flocking to the floor in front of the president's chair and finally upsetting the ballot boxes.

Two Killed in a Street Car Collision.

As a result of a street car collision on the road of the Monongahela Traction Co., at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 2d, two people are dead, six seriously injured and 10 others more or less hurt. The accident happened on a steep grade near Highbridge. The two cars in collision were heavily loaded with passengers returning home from Kenwood park. Motorman Griffith stopped his car near the bottom of the hill to get a drink of water at a spring nearby. He had hardly left his car when the electric current, for some reason as yet unexplained, was shut off, leaving the car in darkness. The car following soon overtook the car that was standing still, and owing to the first car being in darkness, the rear car crashed into it with terrific force, almost telescoping it.

That Alaska Boundary Trouble.

The negotiations in London looking to the arrangement of a modus vivendi fixing the Alaskan boundary have again nearly reached a crisis. The several conferences that have taken place recently between Lord Salisbury and Ambassador Choate have been significantly disappointing in results. At moments it appeared that a basis of understanding had been found, but when reached, the details could not be easily arranged, but it now turns out that these very details cannot be agreed upon without the sacrifice of the interests of many American miners, mainly those who were driven out of the Atlin district by the severe and discriminating laws enacted by the legislature of British Columbia, and this the state department is determined not to sanction.

Hail Storm in Nebraska.

A furious hail and wind storm passed over Ainsworth, Neb., on the 4th. Hailstones measuring 10 inches around fell, breaking every window glass and sash on the north and east sides of the buildings. Limbs two inches thick were stripped from the trees. Hogs, cattle and horses were killed and many of those not killed had their eyes knocked out. All kinds of crops were the hail fell are completely destroyed. Many people celebrating the Fourth were out in different parts of the country, and it is feared some lives were lost.

$100,000 Fire at Chicago.

One hundred frenzied women and 20 men rushed panic stricken from the three story factory of the Western Paper Stock Co., at Chicago, to escape being burned to death on the 2d. Eight women were injured by leaping from the windows and many more jumped in safety. It is possible some may have been killed, and in the excitement it was impossible to keep track of the occupants after they left the blazing structure. The building was damaged $100,000.

Spanish Prisoners to Receive Pay.

Gen. Jaramillos, who is settling Spain's military affairs in Havana, received a message from the minister of war at Madrid, announcing that the pay of all soldiers who are in the hands of the insurgents will be continued during their captivity. The families of many of these officers and soldiers are in Manila without means of support and this will alleviate their sufferings somewhat.

Word received from Andree, the arctic explorer, on June 24th, has led his friends to believe he is dead.

Rioting in Spain.

Very serious disturbances were in progress at Valencia, Spain, on the 2d. Under the orders of Gen. Molto the troops occupied the streets on that date and now hold all the strategic points. At the beginning of the riots the mob placed obstacles on the street railway tracks and stopped the cars, stoning the gendarmes when they tried to remove the barriers. Finally the troops charged and the first shots were fired. Several persons were wounded. In one case a bullet passed through a shop door and killed a shop assistant within. As the day advanced the disorders increased. Troops were stationed at many points, and the artillery was held in readiness. The rioters thereupon erected barricades, which the cavalry captured only after fierce fighting, in which many were wounded. About 8 o'clock in the evening the mob attacked a monastery and the brother who was acting as gate porter was obliged to defend himself with a revolver. The mob then moved upon a Jesuit house, which had a narrow escape from being burned to the ground, the troops arriving just in the nick of time to prevent the mob from setting it on fire.

Do Not Wish to be Disturbed.

Prof. J. G. Schurman of the United States advisory commission for the Philippines, returned to Manila on the 2d from a three weeks tour of the southern islands. He takes an entirely hopeful view of the general conditions there. The intelligent and substantial citizens desire an American protectorate. The masses are awaiting the settlement of the war in the island of Luzon before declaring themselves. They are chiefly anxious to be undisturbed. The president of the town, of Santo Nicolas, in the island of Cebu, said to Mr. Schurman: "We want peace, food and prosperity. We do not wish to fight. We would be neutral."

Automobiles for Collecting Mails.

The first attempt ever made in the United States to collect mail with an automobile was made in Buffalo on July 2d and was a great success. Mail from 40 boxes in a territory six miles in length was collected in less than one-half the time that it takes to cover the same route with a horse and wagon. The experiment will be continued and if it proves as great a success as anticipated a number of automobiles will be placed in regular commission in connection with the postal service in that and other cities.

Two Bodies From Japanese Ship Found.

The bodies of two Japanese sailors of the plague ship Nippon Maru were found in the bay near San Francisco and towed to a point off shore by fishermen, who were afraid to touch the bodies more than was necessary to attach a rope to them for towing purposes. The coroner was notified and the bodies taken to the morgue, where every precaution is being taken to prevent any spread of the disease, should the men have carried any germs with them into the bay.

Lavigne Lost the Featherweight Honor.

Frank Erne, of Buffalo, defeated "Kid" Lavigne, of Saginaw, in a fight to the limit, 20 rounds, at the Hawthorne Athletic club, situated in the outskirts of Buffalo, on the evening of July 3d. The event was as clean and fairly fought battle as was ever seen in the history of modern glovedom.

After an unsuccessful strike for 17 days' duration, the freight handlers of Buffalo returned to work on the 28th. About 2,400 men were involved in the strike and their loss of wages amounts to fully $50,000.

WAR NOTES.

Believing that the Kansas soldiers in the Philippines have done their full duty, Brig. Gen. Funston has written to the governor and other state officers and friends in Topeka, suggesting that interest with the President to have the Kansas regiment sent home at once will be appreciated. Gen. Funston is very careful in his communication to convey the idea that the Kansas are not making themselves liable to the charge of insubordination in this matter by making this request, yet he says: "They have stuck to their posts, every man of them, and are entitled to relief. Now that so many regular troops are here, I believe the Kansas boys would like to get home. Not a man of them has asked me to take this liberty. I simply do it because I am sure the men would appreciate it." They have been at the front constantly and bear the marks of the rough campaign.

Filipe-Buenavista, one of the priests who recently escaped from the insurgent camps, in an interview, said: "Aguinaldo is remorseful. His influence is gone and he often sits all alone and cries over the miserable condition into which he has plunged his people. There is dissent in his army and the bands out for plunder are willing to murder. They are as dangerous to the leader as to the Americans. Aguinaldo cannot trust his own men, and as a result of this, when his headquarters were removed from San Isidro to Cabanaran, his baggage was robbed of a lot of valuable jewelry and clothing. The bandits are the men with whom the Americans will have to deal, and in order to down them it will be necessary to keep a large army in the field until the thieves are captured or killed."

Secretary Alger, Adjutant General Corbin and Col. Bird, assistant quartermaster in charge of transportation, had a consultation with the President on the 28th, relative to the question of reinforcements for Gen. Otis. A definite decision was reached to continue recruiting men at each of the 70 recruiting stations in the U. S. The enlistments are to be for the regular army, and recruits are to be organized into regiments or assigned to regiments already formed after enlistment. The term of enlistment is for three years, and present indication are that 10,000 men will be wanted.

For the first time since the Philippines has been found so hard to crack, this government's program has been announced under something like official authority. The plan is to have 35,000 men in Manila by the middle of August, and from that date onward to send 1,000 soldiers a week until the Philippines are pacified. This will give upwards of 40,000 men by Oct. 1, and leaves the total to be sent entirely in the hands of circumstances. That is, every week the Philippines hold out will see another 1,000 American soldiers in line against them.

Reports have been received of an outbreak in the island of Negros incident upon the departure of the California regiment for home. Some hostile natives, seeing a company of soldiers at one of the small posts, preparing to depart, thought the Americans were evacuating the island, and a party of 250 rebels, mostly bolomen, attacked the troops and killed one man and wounded another belonging to E company. The Filipinos were easily driven off.

Gen. Otis has ordered the opening of trade of many important ports that have been closed since the outbreak. These include San Fernando, coast of Luzon, Apari, Carimao and all ports in the islands of Samar and Leyte. Gunboats will protect the shipping in some ports, but elsewhere shippers must risk confiscation by the insurgents, who exact heavy tribute of all ships they permit to sail.

Fourteen new cases of yellow fever were officially reported at Santiago on the 28th. This raises the total number of cases to 50, of which 12 have proven fatal. Maj. Carr, the surgeon in charge, reports that there are no further cases under suspicion and that the general health of the troops is good.

Peace Reigns in the Samoan Islands.

Peace and quiet now reign in Samoa, in marked contrast to the warlike scenes of two months ago. The arrival of the auxiliary cruiser Badger on May 13, with the international commission on board, caused a distinct change in affairs. The office of president of Apia, which cost $5,000 a year to maintain and has caused much friction, is to be done away with, and the municipality governed by a council and mayor. Other changes in the government of the islands has been made.

THE HAPPENINGS IN MICHIGAN BRIEFLY RELATED.

An Innocent Man is Serving Time at the Ionia Prison by Assuming the Name of a Rogue - A Brighton Farmer Destroyed His Barns While Insane.

Assumed Name of a Rogue to His Sorrow.

If the story of Anson Castor, of Flint, is true, his son, Fred Castor, an innocent man, is serving a sentence of four years in Ionia prison, and the guilty party is free. Frank Logan was sent from Kalamazoo last November to Ionia prison on a sentence of four years for burglary. A few days ago Anson Castor was told by a man who had just completed a sentence at Ionia that his son Fred was serving time at that prison. The son told his broken-hearted father his story as follows: He had been tramping it some and had assumed the name of Frank Logan to hide his identity. While at Kalamazoo he was arrested and charged with burglary. It seems that some time ago there was a fellow about Kalamazoo by the name assumed by this young man who bore a very bad record, and this fellow being about the same age and build was mistaken for the other party. He was convicted on the evidence of one Wm. Cavanaugh, who was a partner in the crime, and who said that Frank Logan was the other party.

Robbed and Murdered.

A brutal murder took place at Flint shortly before midnight on July 1st. John Casler, a well-known and respected resident of the city, was assaulted and robbed while returning to his home. He lived until about 6 o'clock the following morning, but did not recover consciousness. Casler was down in the city during the evening. He was alone when last seen. People heard shots but paid no attention to them thinking the reports were made by firecrackers. Shortly after a passerby found Casler lying on his face near the walk breathing heavily. An alarm was at once given. Casler had a bullet hole in the top and back of his head, the ball having passed in and downward toward the nose. Nearby was Casler's revolver, with one of the cartridges exploded. There were evidences of rough usage on the murdered man, one being a jagged wound on the scalp. Evidences of a struggle were plain. Casler's hat, crushed in, was lying some distance away, and in a yard was his coat. His pockets had been rifled and considerable money taken.

Break of an Insane Man.

Martin Schultz, a farmer living about four miles northwest of Brighton, became violently insane recently and set fire to his large hay and grain barns which together with his horse barn and a shed, were burned to the ground. Mr. Schultz has had spells during which his mind seemed to be deranged, but had never displayed any violence. He made two attempts to burn his house before he set fire to the barns. After the barns had been destroyed he went and laid on the railroad tracks. An officer and a large number of citizens from Brighton had a desperate struggle with Schultz. He was armed with a knife and declared he would take his own life before he would surrender. He was finally overpowered and taken to the county jail.

Rounded Up After Six Years.

Nearly six years ago N. E. Sordam, an aged man, and his son, about 60 years of age, residing alone on their farm about four miles from Paw Paw were robbed of about $300 in money that they, being suspicious of banks, had deposited for safekeeping in an old trunk kept in their residence. Suspicion was directed to one Mary Neal, a domestic in their employ, but sufficient evidence to warrant her arrest was not found until recently, when the crime was almost barred by the statute of limitation. It was learned that she was living at Kalamazoo. Officers at once arrested her, and one Daniel Cobblestick as an accomplice. At their trial, realizing that both would be convicted, each plead guilty.

All Because a Daughter Swore Falsely.

Gov. Pingree has pardoned John Kaspar, sent from Newaygo, Mar. 18, 1888, to Jackson for 20 years, for criminal assault. Kaspar's alleged victim was his daughter, whose testimony was corroborated by a neighbor, with whom Kaspar had trouble about a line fence. Subsequently the daughter admitted that she swore falsely, and that the neighbor threatened to harm her if she did not do so. Kaspar is now an invalid, having been attacked by locomotor ataxia and has but a short time to live.

Cheaper Lights for Cadillac.

The Pine River Light and Power Co., with a capital of $60,000, owned partially in Reed City and Cadillac, but principally in Philadelphia, was recently organized and will erect a plant on the Pine river, five miles southwest of Tustin, for the purpose of transmitting cheap electricity to Cadillac, about 16 miles away, for light, heat, power or other purposes.

Married Because She Loved Him.

John W. Jones, aged 76, and Miss Jessie Cressor, aged 18, both of Kalamazoo, were quietly married at Constantine on the 26th. The groom is well-to-do and the bride is pretty and piquant. While the groom's estate is estimated to be worth fully $500,000 and was willed to the young bride before marriage, she asserts that it was not her lover's money that induced her to marry him, but simply because she loved him. The young lady was never known to tell a falsehood.

Lansing Masons will build a new temple to cost $20,000.

An Odd Suicide in Huron County.

An odd suicide occurred in Grant township, Huron county, recently. Mrs. David Quant, because of ill health, took a dose of laudanum, but the timely arrival of a physician saved her life. She told her husband it was of no use, she would repeat the operation until she had shaken off this mortal coil. He begged her to postpone the operation until he got through with his corn planting, but she insisted that she could not put the event off later than the following Friday, then the funeral could be held Sunday, thus saving one day. Quant agreed to this, but for some reason the poison did not work rapidly, so the funeral had to be held Monday.

Were Diamonds Around His Ankles.

Special Treasury Agent Charles E. Lewis, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., made a rich haul in Detroit on the 28th, when he landed Louis Busch, who is charged with being a past master in the art of diamond smuggling. When arrested by Lewis at the Brush street depot, Busch had on his person, wrapped around his ankles, diamonds amounting in value to over $20,000. The capture of Busch is the culmination of years of work on the part of the special treasury agents of the Niagara Falls district, who have been trying to stop the diamond smuggling business between Canada and the United States.

600 Men Walked Out.

Pingree & Smith's big shoe factory on Jefferson avenue, Detroit, was shut down on the 26th and 600 persons were thrown out of employment. The firm, which is composed of Gov. Hazen S. Pingree, Frank C. Pingree and J. B. Howarth, has terminated its agreement made with the Boot and Shoe Makers' union, June 12, 1896, and has decided that hereafter the factory will not be union in so far that union men only be employed. The firm will hereafter conduct its business in a business way and will not be dictated to by any man or set of men. Those are the words used by Frank Pingree to express the firm's position in the matter.

Murder and Suicide at Muskegon.

Mayor James Balbirnie, of Muskegon, was shot to death by a disappointed officeholder named J. W. Taylor at noon on the 29th. Immediately after firing the fatal shot the assassin turned his revolver upon himself, and also took a dose of carbolic acid, dying in about an hour. Taylor had held the position of city director of the poor for a number of years, and displayed a great deal of bitterness when Mayor Balbirnie refused to appoint him last spring. He had evidently brooded over the matter, and had determined to kill the mayor and then commit suicide.

STATE GOSSIP.

Helding's streets are now lighted by electricity.

A new gristmill is being erected at Edenville, Gladwin county.

Grant Rapids, M. C. A. has succeeded in raising its debt of $52,000.

The 16th annual Spiritualist camp meeting will occur at Vicksburg August 5-28.

The St. Clair County Pioneer Society lost 350 members by death during the past year.

A large hay crop has been harvested in Van Huren county. Cuts and corn need rain.

Saginaw county's hay crop will not average more than two-thirds of last year's crop.

Bay, Saginaw and Midland county threshing machine owners have formed a combine.

Houghton will spend $60,000 this summer in improving her streets and water system.

A rural free mail delivery will be started for the territory about Ypsilanti shortly.

During a charivari at Oak Hill recently a small cannon burst, injuring three bystanders.

Athens people expect the streets of their village will be lighted by electricity in a short time.

The hay crop in Arenac county is a large one this year. It has been secured in good condition.

The big furniture factory to locate at Standish September 1 will employ 125 to 150 men and boys.

Within a radius of six miles from Vicksburg there are 14 fine lakes and all are good fishing grounds.

Montmorency county's poor farm will be in operation by August 1. It is located three miles west of Atlanta.

Gladstone is to have banking facilities soon, as arrangements have been made to establish a bank there about the middle of this month.

At the special election in Ann Arbor recently it was decided by a vote of 650 to 16 to appropriate $17,000 for a homeopathic hospital site.

All of the masson tenders at Bay City are on strike for an increase of wages to $1.75 per day. Work on all the new factories is at a standstill.

Albion's new bicycle ordinance has gone into effect. It compels bicyclists to equip their wheels with lamps and bells. It is unpopular.

Bears are so numerous in the immediate vicinity of Marquette that women and children are afraid to go into the outskirts of the city alone.

George Campbell, proprietor of a sawmill at Rose City, Ogemaw county, shipped and fell on a circular saw. His body was cut completely in two.

Geo. Cooper, an old resident of White Pigeon, committed suicide on the 27th by taking a dose of poison. Domestic troubles are said to have caused him to end his life. This was his third attempt at self-destruction within the past 12 years, and it proved a winner.

James Meyers, a Thetford township brute, Genesee county, pleaded guilty in the circuit court to debauching his 12-year-old daughter. He broke down in court.

At the close of the fiscal year, June 30th, there was a balance of $1,402,055.88 in the state treasury. This is $185,542.27 more than the balance one year ago.

Haying is over in the vicinity of Brighton, and the crop is a small one. Wheat harvest has begun, and the prospects for that are even poorer than the hay crop.

Despite the reports last winter that the extreme cold was killing off all the quail, there are more of those birds in Berrien county this season than for 20 years past.

Diphtheria has become epidemic at Cassidy's Corners, a little hamlet near Niles. A half dozen cases now exist and one death from the disease has thus far been reported.

Saline people think that all that is necessary now for their happiness and the prosperity of the village is a local band, and accordingly such an organization will be formed.

The survivors of the 10th Mich. infantry will hold their annual reunion at Vicksburg in September, and it is expected that their old colonel, Gen. W. R. Shafter, will be present.

The receipts of the state land office for the fiscal year just closed were $226,565.84, an increase of $85,440.26 over 1898. Much of the increase was due to the craze for copper lands.

The nation's birthday was appropriately observed throughout the state, and at some places the celebration surpassed any previous attempt. A great many casualties are reported.

Bay City wheelmen have been given the right to ride on the sidewalks of every street in the city that is not paved or plankled. The mayor and nearly every alderman rides wheels.

A biograph machine, owned by the New York Biograph Co., will be used in taking moving pictures of the Christian Endeavor parade and other events in Detroit for the next week or two.

John R. Ellefvein, residing near Three Oaks, was thrown from his reaper by his team running away on the 1st. The sharp knives of the reaper literally cut his body to pieces.

The wheat crop of Newaygo county this year is almost a total failure. Hundreds of acres were plowed under last spring, and what was left to grow will not yield one-quarter of an average crop.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Grosvenor is collecting statistics concerning the cheese and butter factories of Michigan, in order that he may be able to respond to the frequent requests for this information.

A great deal of complaint is heard among the farmers of Clinton county because of the poor wheat crop, yet the cereal is said to be in better condition there than in almost any other county in the state.

The building of the new power house at New Baltimore for the electric railroad which is to run through from Detroit to Port Huron has been begun. The plant will be one of the finest of the kind in the country.

Fourteen couples from Chicago were married in St. Joseph on July 2d. Fully 5,000 excursionists arrived in that city on that day to remain until after the Fourth, when it is expected that another large party will be invited for life.

Doanville is experiencing a hot time over Sunday closing. The clerks' union want stores kept closed and the church people insist that ball games be prohibited. A large number of stores were open on the 2d and arrests will follow.

Senator Burrows is negotiating for the purchase of a residence in the swellest part of Washington in which to live and entertain while congress is in session during the next six years. It is said he has offered $20,000 for a house which suits him.

On one acre of ground Frank Clark, a well-known farmer of Verona, raised this season four tons of good timothy hay, and is willing to make an affidavit to that effect, and on one of his five-acre lots cut on an average of three tons of good hay to the acre.

A horse attached to a buggy containing a lady and driver jumped from the highway bridge at Benton Harbor. The motorman of a street car jumped into the river and saved the woman's life. The driver jumped and saved his own life and the horse was rescued.

Fruit growers at Lawton who have been swindled year after year out of the profits of their shipments to Chicago commission men have turned, like the worm in the adage, and will attend to the sale of their fruit themselves. They have formed an association, with $10,000 capital, for the purpose, and will give commission men the go-by hereafter.

The official returns from the counties shows that there were 1,503 divorces granted in Michigan in 1898, the wife being complainant in 1,336 cases and the husband in 472. Four hundred and ninety-eight couples had been married less than five years, 533 from five to ten years; 313 from 10 to 15 years; 195 from 15 to 20 years and one upwards of 45 years.

Rockland is experiencing a genuine "boom." The houses are full and many people are living and doing business in tents. There are three times as many professional people and tradesmen there as the place can support. The mines are rich, but the town itself is being overdone, and a reaction is sure to follow.

Fire, caused by a spark from a locomotive, totally destroyed machinery hall on the Industrial exhibition grounds at Toronto, Ont., and damaged the agricultural implement hall. Loss, $25,000.

THE LAMP THAT LASTS.

The New Rochester.

Fifteen years ago we began the manufacture of centre draft lamps. A dealer bought one of the first and placed it in his show window. Each day it is filled and lighted; occasionally it is cleaned and rewicked. That lamp is good today.

Soon as The Rochester was demonstrated a success, a host of imitations sprang up. A few of the better ones still survive; the rest are gone. Why? "You can't fool all the people some of the time," but not all the time.

One New Rochester Lamp in a household is but a beginning. Soon there will be others. Do you want to know why? Write for printed matter if interested.

Change Your Diet.

At Fry Brothers' store the season's round, fresh vegetables are always found; it is their pleasure and delight to cater to your appetite.

They've radishes and lettuce too, And pieplant tender thro' and thro'; They've beets and cabbage, turnips, peas, And all the fads in groceries.

The clerks polite, with book in hand As meek as Moses, patient stand, And quote you prices in a tone 'Twould move to tears a heart of stone.

Then when the berry season comes, And autumn with its pears and plums; Fry Brothers will, as heretofore, Supply you from their grocery store.

Give Fry Brothers a Trial, They'll save you money.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address, P. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists. 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

The reason a blow on the ear may do irreparable injury is that the air being driven suddenly and violently against the drum of the ear, might rupture the membrane and cause incurable deafness. The ears should never be pulled nor meddled with in any way except to wash them in the gentlest manner, the orifice being cleansed with a fold of the washcloth rolled into a little cone.

The original thirteen states contained 225,785 square miles, or 208,502,400 acres. In 1893 the United States contained 2,730,760 square miles, or 1,638,373,360 acres, in organized states. It also contained 836,270 square miles, or 577,212,800 acres, of territory not organized as states.

The German emperor, when receiving foreign representatives or military attaches of foreign powers, always wears the uniform of the army of the country the visitor represents, and sometimes during a levee he will change his uniform five or six times.

An ostrich cannot kick backward. When the time has come for the bird to be despoiled of its feathers, its head is inserted in a bag and the plucker stands behind his victim. A blow from its foot has vigor enough to kill a man.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

is a food medicine for the baby that is thin and not well nourished and for the mother whose milk does not nourish the baby.

It is equally good for the boy or girl who is thin and pale and not well nourished by their food; also for the anemic or consumptive adult that is losing weight and strength.

In fact, for all conditions of wasting, it is the medicine that will nourish and build up the body, give new life and energy when all other means fail.

Should be taken in summer as well as winter.

Northville's Carnival.

Everybody seems to be having a grand jubilee;
As they hurry to and fro
Where the street cars soon will go.
Load will sound the warning bells,
As through Main street the grip-man swells.
Hurriedly on every side
You will see the wagons glide.
Busy farmers on their route
Lash their horses and wildly shout;
While their faces angry grow
As they dodge and holler whoa.
Cars (they pause between each cry)
The brakes are turned—then away they fly;
Some can dodge, then cheer
Rends the dusty atmosphere.
Who would seek a festive time
For a gay and festive time?
When at home we all may go
To a carnival of whoa.

August Flower.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof.
Houghton, "that in my travel in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's Flower than any other remedy, for dyspepsia, deranged liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and salesmen, or for persons filling office positions, where headaches and general bad feeling from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at

"As Clean as a Whistle."

The origin of saying "as clean as a whistle" is ascribed to the "whistle tankard" of olden times, in which the whistle came into play when the tankard was emptied or "cleared out" to announce to the waiter that more liquor was required.

An Inherited Secret.

In Nagasaki, Japan, there is a fireworks maker who manufactures pro-technic birds of great size that, when exploded, sail in a titillating manner movements exactly like those of living birds. The secret of making these wonderful things has been in the possession of the eldest child of the family of each generation for more than four hundred years.

The floor of the rotunda in the Lon-chants gather, is very unique. It is composed of inlaid woods, arranged in the form of a mariner's compass, with an alidade of Greek letters. Upwards of 100,000 pieces of wood are employed. Almost every British merchant is included in the scheme of decoration.

When one receives an invitation to a wedding in Cairo, Egypt, it is an important event, because, instead of be-invitation reads: "Three days. There is feasting during all this time, and the house and street are liberally decorated with flags and illuminations."

Brooks & Starkweather have so far this year purchased 155,000 lbs of wool, probably the largest amount secured by a Michigan buyer this year. Mr. Brooks states that in his opinion there isn't another clip now remaining unbought in this part of the state.

Instead of going into the car service
Mr. Manchie will be detailed for work at the U. S. fish station here.
Extra work devolving upon this station in the care of the Alpena, and the state hatchery in Detroit, has necessitated the employment of an extra man.

The F. & P. M. has begun a chancery suit against the Detroit, Plymouth & Northvillierailway, alleging in the bill that the defendant is about to build its track across complainant's at their depot here and asking that it be restrained from doing so.
A temporary injunction was granted

A FAMOUS POISON CASE.

Anna Maria Zwanziger is a Name of Unpleasant Prominence in Crime.

SHE LIVED IN GERMANY.

Had a Reputation for Honesty and Probity Which Enabled Her to Secure Victims Very Easily.

Mental Constitution Peculiar—Had Passion for Poisoning—Her Crimes Only "Slight Errors"—Never Expressed Remorse or Repentance—Fortunate She Was Discovered as She Could Not Control Passion.

In the so-called renaissance period of European civilization, poison served many a purpose of political intrigue and personal vengeance. The demise of a victim was rarely followed by a judicial investigation save in instances where the ecclesiastical authorities found an opportunity to interfere.

In the early part of the nineteenth century there was a series of murders committed in Germany which have given to the name of Anna Maria Zwanziger an unpleasant prominence in the annals of crime. Anna Maria Zwanziger, or Anna Schöcklein, as she called herself, was living in 1807 in Baireuth supporting herself by knitting. Her reputation for probity and her exemplary mode of life induced Justice Glaser, who was at that time separated from his wife, to take her as his housekeeper in 1808. In July of that year Glaser was reconciled to his wife, through the efforts, it seems, of Anna Schöcklein, but within a month after the wife's return she was suddenly taken sick through a strong and healthy woman, and died in a few days. Anna now left Glaser's service and went to live as housekeeper with Justice Grohmann. He was a sufferer from gout and was confined to his bed. In May, 1809, after an illness of eleven days, accompanied by strange symptoms, he died, and his housekeeper appeared inconsolable. Her good name and her skill as a nurse soon procured her another place, this time at Magistrate Gebhardt's house, as nurse for his wife. Some weeks later Justice Grohmann was seized with a violent illness and died in great agony. At different times within the next few months curious and suspicious symptoms—vomiting, spasms, etc.—visited several persons in the house, guests as well as members of the household.

Then a superstitious fear of the woman's unhappy presence, gradually deepening into distrust and suspicion, spread in the neighborhood, and Gebhardt was obliged to dismiss Anna from his service. He gave her, however, a written character for honesty and fidelity. But it was at her departure the strangest occurrences were noticed. On the morning of that day, it was afterward remembered, she had exceeded the usual limits of her duties, she had filled the kitchen sink with water from the barrel and had taken pains to make for the two male sons a beer which they drank. Leaving the house with every sign of cheerfulness and affection, she took Gebhardt's son for arms as she carried the barrel. A biscuit soaked in beer, which she had taken from the barrel and had taken pains to make for the two male sons, was found in her pocket. Leaving the house with every sign of cheerfulness and affection, she took Gebhardt's son for arms as she carried the barrel. A biscuit soaked in beer, which she had taken from the barrel and had taken pains to make for the two male sons, was found in her pocket.

The circumstantial evidence of murder against her was in reality not strong. Now, the favorite German mode of obtaining results in criminal cases is by some means or other to extract a confession, and here evidently, such a confession could furnish the necessary evidence. According to the approved methods, therefore, she was subjected to a long series of rigid examinations alone in the presence of a judge and a notary. All the cunning and adroitness of the judge were brought to bear in order to entrap her into a confession, but for nearly six months, from October 19, 1809, until April 16, 1810, she absolutely denied every form of the charge against her. The fact that poison had been found in the two corpses was not announced to Anna Zwanziger until April 16. This fact had the desired effect, for after two hours of stubborn combat she broke down, went wringing her hands, and at length confessed to all the charges against her, and to several other murders that had passed for natural deaths. On September 11, 1811, she suffered death at the block, and her name is celebrated throughout Germany as the most infamous poisoner ever known.

There can be no doubt that her mental constitution was peculiar. She had a passion for poisoning and spoke of her deeds as only "slight errors" and "slight offenses," never expressing remorse or repentance. It was indeed fortunate for mankind, as she said that she was to die, for she never could have ceased to poison.

ODD NAMES IN MECHANICS.

Foreigners Have Hard Work Translating Some English Words.

The English language has been enriched by many words drawn from other tongues to facilitate direct and comprehensive expression on all subjects.

Within the language itself a similar principle has prevailed, and old words of well-established meaning have been adopted in the sciences and arts to designate certain things or operations that seemed to resemble those from which the names were taken. In their new relations these words have strictly technical meanings.

Their suitability is often obvious enough in English, but they can rarely be rendered in their exact technical sense into their actual equivalents in foreign tongues.

A number of words drawn from the animal kingdom for use in the mechanical arts are enumerated by a writer in Saturday Review. The machinist employs a dog on his lathe; he takes a hog out if the tool will stand it; the castings are made from pigs of iron, which in turn were fed from a sow.

Work is set upon a horse of buck, and punched or bent by a convenient bear. Hoisting is done by a crab, and a convenient cat is a part of the outfit of a ship, crane, and a kit of tools is ever on hand.

A crow helps to straighten work, a jack to lift it, a mule-puller aids in driving machinery, that a donkey engine turns. A fish connects parts end to end, or strengthens a broken beam; shells are used all over; a worm does powerful but quiet work.

A cock shuts off the water, one kind of a ram raises it and another does heavy work. A printing press has a fly; the first locomotives had a grass-hopper valve motion and drive, and butterfly valves are common.

Herring-bone gears are used by the best builders; turtles at printing press cylinders, and fly wheels are running all over the world. In drilling, even an old man is called into service and doctors prevent faulty lathe work.

Selling Newspapers in Paris.
Here is an idea for some smart newsboy to improve upon. The Comptant, Generale des Omnia issued an order forbidding newsboys from entering its vehicles. How would it be possible to reach would-be customers perched on the roofs of the cars provided on the roofs of the cars.

SELLING NEWSPAPERS IN PARIS.

Le street cars and omnibuses? The problem was soon solved for one fine day a man selling papers appeared near the Madeleine with a peculiar apparatus. He had a stick seven or eight feet long, with wire clamps fastened to its sides and papers stuck in them. On the top there was a small metal cup with a hole in the bottom. The hole was a very important part of the apparatus, for it reached all the way down through the stick, and through it came the copper coins of one or two sou, according to the price of the paper selected by the patron.

Curious Test for a Husband.

Both in the northern and western islands of Scotland the natives have some peculiar customs unfamiliar to the dwellers of the mainland. One of these, known as the "marriage test," is practiced in the island of St. Kilda, where the population barely exceeds a hundred. The desire among the islanders to increase this number does not seem to be exceptionally strong, and every man, before he is deemed suitable for a husband, has to perform an evolution with no little bodily risk. The St. Kildians are, of course, adept rock-climbers, and the aspirant for matrimony is therefore subjected to a test of balancing himself on one leg on a narrow ledge overhanging a precipice, bending his body at the same time in order to hold the foot of his other leg in his hands. If found lacking in courage the maiden withdraws her betrothal, and should the man fall over the ledge it is presumed that, in his case, he will be disqualified.

Modern Coats of Arms.

Many people associate chain armor shirts and mail with medieval times, and do not suppose for a minute that any such suits are made to-day, but such is the case. This mail armor is manufactured by a firm in Walsall, England, who supply the English Government with mail chain jackets for use in India, Central and South America, etc. These mail jackets, which weigh from fifteen to eighteen pounds, are worn by army officers, and are made of steel rings, three-eighths of an inch in diameter. It takes about 3,000 rings to make a square foot of armor.

Many Big Cities in Japan.

Japan, with a population of 45,000,000, has 226 towns that have more than 100,000 inhabitants. In 1886 the number of such towns was 117. Osaka has increased from 80,000 to 510,000 inhabitants, in ten years. Yokohama from 80,000 to 180,000. Kobe from 80,000 to 185,000. Tokyo has now a population of 1,300,000.

BUSHY-TAILED ANIMALS.

Manner in Which They Make Use of Their Tails When Asleep.

"Some of our wild animals," said a naturalist, "carry about with them all summer that which nature has evidently intended as a substitute for their winter flannels. I mean their tails of course. So far as I have been able to judge the bushy-tailed animals know no other use for their tails than as protection against the cold. Did you ever see a fox sleeping? That is one sight of which the most patient student of wild life cannot always boast, because a fox is always wide awake and has a general antipathy to being looked at. My own observations with sleeping ones have been confined to two that I raised from pups. When it was cold they would shrink up and seem fairly to wrap their tails about them. When the air grew warmer they would uncoil a little and sometimes discard the tail entirely, just about as impatiently as a sleeping child will kick off the covers when he gets too warm in the night. I do not think that this attitude is habitual with sleeping foxes. When the weather was warm they did not curl up at all, but lay sprawling with their tails on the ground behind them.

The raccoon makes the same use of his tail. Did you ever see one preparing for a nap? Like the fox, he goes to sleep on his side, but he makes more fuss about it than a lazy cat getting up in the morning. First he hitches up his shoulders and arches his back, and in the cavity thus formed he carefully tucks away his knees and elbows and head. Then he brings his tail up close to the end of his body, and the end of it curls over his head. He unwinds himself half a dozen times before he gets curled up to his satisfaction, and when finally arranged he resembles nothing quite so much as a muff without the customary openings. The squirrel also covers himself with his tail, sleeping upright and propped against something.

In fact," concluded the naturalist, "this is true of every bushy-tailed animal I have been on terms of sufficient intimacy to see asleep. It is a very kindly arrangement nature has made for their comfort, and they do not seem to mind very much carrying around the winter flannels in the summer. If they did not carry them with them wherever they went they would probably lose them, as the red man proves in his tale of the bear and the rabbit."—New York Sun.

Public Eating Houses.

Public eating houses are established in a number of German cities to provide meals for workmen at cheap prices so as to do away with the evil effects of the dinner pail. Those in Chemnitz during 1892 sold 435,000 dinners; receipts were $17,500, and expenditures, $15,500. The City of Grenoble, France, also maintains a municipal restaurant at which about 1,200 meals a day are served. At the outset, the enterprise needed municipal aid, but it is now self-supporting. The municipality owns a property used, for which it receives a nominal rent, and the accounts are carried in the books of the municipality. Any surplus is deposited in the city treasury, as a reserve to draw upon when prices of provisions are high. There are also other instances throughout France of similar institutions without municipal aid, several establishments being in operation at Paris, Lyons, and Bordeaux.

Somewhat akin to such institutions are municipal bakeries, which are to be found at home and abroad, in Russia, and at home and abroad, in Russia, and at home and abroad, in Russia.

Bringing the Time of Day.

In Ulster, Eng., you can find the "bull" flourishing; here is a pretty example of the art of "bull." A certain quire had just set up with great pains and elaborate mathematical calculations, a sun-dial in his garden, and was naturally a little proud of it. One day, as it happened, being close to the garden, he was in doubt as to the right time, and told a boy who was with him to run down and get him the time from the dial. After a few minutes the boy appeared dragging with him something heavy. "Here she is, your honor," an hand set Ah was to get her. "He had torn up the dial from its setting and dragged it up the hill.

Arab music has been described as the singing of a prima donna who has ruptured her voice in trying to sing a duet with herself. Each note starts from somewhere between a sharp and a flat, but does not stop even there, and splits up into four or more portions, of which no person can be expected to catch more than one at a time.

The drink bill of Great Britain just published shows that the Englishman drinks 2.41 gallons of alcohol a year. Next to him comes the Scotchman, with an appetite slaked with 1.66 gallons. The Irishman contents himself with 1.54 gallons. The first spends $20.50 a year for his drinks, the second $15.25 and the third $13.25.

In Paris and other large towns in France female bootblacks are increasing in number. They wear a peculiar garb, not unlike that of Sisters of Mercy, which renders their appearance rather odd and attractive. Not a few among them attend to their work with gloved hands.

Canada needs only 237,000 square miles to be as large as the whole continent of Europe; it is nearly 30 times as large as Great Britain and Ireland, and is 5000 square miles larger than the United States, excluding Alaska.

The Chinese detective force is a secret body, and the best organized in the world. They have an eye upon every man, woman or child; foreign or native, in China, and in addition, watch over each other.

There is a belief among the South Sea Islanders that no man can enter Paradise who has lost a limb, and for this reason a man will often die rather than submit to amputation.

It is calculated that 10,000,000 photographs of the Queen and the Prince and Princess of Wales are produced annually, and find a ready sale all over the world.

CHAPTER I.

"Wanted—A young woman to perform the customary duties of companion to an elderly lady. To a person of the requisite qualifications, willing to live in strict retirement, a liberal salary and comfortable home are offered. References required. Apply to—M. H. E., The Ivies, Eldon."

I read the above advertisement aloud to my mother in a voice that trembled somewhat, notwithstanding all my efforts to render it calm and even.

"Here it is, mother dear," I said, with a foolish little laugh that meant nothing, and yet conveyed much. "I have searched long enough for it in all conscience."

"For what, my dear?" my mother asked, with innocent surprise in her pretty, faded blue eyes.

"For a response to the various appeals I have made to the future," I replied. She looked bewildered at itself.

"You mean—?" she began, and paused in helpless perplexity.

"I mean that those few lines that I have just read to you represent the only attention that Fate has ever vouchsafed to accord in my incessant applications for assistance in unravelling the tangled thread of my destiny."

I answered in a tone of solemn significance.

"But I don't see, Dorothy—"

"No, of course you don't; you, superstitious little soul!" I cried, with a laugh that was really now the proper thing, the precious little woman's utter lack of comprehension was so genuine and amusing.

"You were born a generation too early for endowment with all the marvelous physical gifts which are the birthright of my era. We of this age can look into the future as well as divine the thoughts of our fellow-men. In this bit of typographical matter, I can see what life holds in store for me as if I were at the end instead of the beginning of existence. I see a lifetime written all over this advertisement, where you see but the expressed needs of a fellow mortal."

She still looked dubious and uncertain.

"What is it you mean?" she asked, a little impatiently for her.

Her want of sympathy with my mood somewhat sobered and steadied it. Mother and daughter as we were, loving each other fondly, though we did, we were of such absolutely contrasting natures, and temperaments that we rarely understood each other by intuition; we never fully entered into each other's joys and sorrows. I went over to the low chair where she sat with her sewing lying idle in her lap, and knelt down beside her. I took her small hands, worn with much labor and ceaseless industry, into mine and raised an earnest and serious face to hers.

"Dearest," I said, "you are going to be annoyed by me again; you are going to feel again that you have just cause to consider me foolish and inconsequent. Forgive me first, and then I will explain what cause there is for your pardon."

She smiled indulgently at me, for, indeed, she was never very fierce even in her most intolerant moods, and leaning forward she kissed me lightly on the brow.

The touch of her lips almost undid me, there seemed such a sort of finality in the caress. It was as if she were giving sanction to my own thought, that I was about to pass for ever from close and intimate contact with herself, the familiar, if uncomprehending, companion of this first chapter of my life, which I felt was swiftly nearing its conclusion. I drew in my breath sharply to restrain threatening emotion, and obeyed her injunction to proceed with my explanation.

"Mother," I began, "you will say that it is only one of my ridiculous fancies when I tell you that I have an impression which amounts to conviction that some strange tie is already forming itself between me and this lady of the initials who needs a companion. It is no chance that has brought her necessity to my knowledge; it is the natural drift of that subtle agency which governs our lives. I can almost hear this woman calling me to her side; I feel that she has long been waiting for me; I long to share her strict retirement; I feel the mysterious bond that exists between us tightening itself and abridging the distance that parts us. I shall resist at once to her cry for companionship, which I know to be a summons directed at me alone of all the world, and when the doors of The Ivies open to me, as open they surely will, they will receive within them not a temporary guest, but a lifelong inmate, who shall finally leave them only to enter upon a new sphere of existence which baffles even the most advanced psychics."

I tried to round out my period with another laugh, but the attempt was a wretched failure. My voice broke, I slid quite down upon the floor at my mother's side, and burst into a really hysterical fit of weeping, which, better than any verbal appeal, deprecated the material resentment, for the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, I put my hands to my face, and wept as if I were a child. I was so overcome that I could not see my mother's face, but I felt her arms about me, and her lips on my forehead. I was so overcome that I could not see my mother's face, but I felt her arms about me, and her lips on my forehead. I was so overcome that I could not see my mother's face, but I felt her arms about me, and her lips on my forehead.

a brief assumption of it to withdraw from it, for, even then, scarcely five minutes since I had learnt of the existence of such a person as this lady of The Ivies. I felt myself rather of her world than of my accustomed one, and was conscious of a dawning but fearful aloofness from an environment to which I had become habituated by necessity rather than through accord of sympathy.

There would be little use in my making comment upon or attempting explanation of the singular and, to my mother and master of fact, married sister Marion, provoking vein of subtle influence which ran through my nature, frequently and irresistibly determining me in a choice of ways incompatible with what they considered the dictates of good judgment and sober common sense. It is an element of character or temperament too metaphysical in its nature for my analysis, but it has done my mental balance much injury in the estimation of those who are nearest me in blood, and has placed me without the bar in the matter of family councils. That my intuitions have generally proved correct weighs little against the fact that they are wholly spontaneous and formed without logical sequence, for my kindred are as rational in drawing their conclusions as I am intransigent. As I sprang to my feet, determined to regain my self-possession, my mother sank back upon her seat with a little sigh, which I knew indicated a silent protest against this weakness that threatened my mentality.

"Have you already seen this lady, Dorothy?" she asked, hoping, perhaps, to find me not so much at fault as she anticipated.

"Never," I replied uncompromisingly. "She is personally as unknown to me as you, and yet," I concluded dreamily, "I fancy she is no stranger to me."

"You have heard of her by report, then?"

"Not even in the vaguest fashion," "Dorothy," Dorothy, shaking her head in exasperation and foreboding, "you will end in a madhouse if you encourage yourself in your dangerous broodings."

I laughed.

"Not I," I returned, with provoking serenity. "I have just told you that I am to end my days at The Ivies."

"Do you really mean to apply for the position?"

"I really mean to assume the position."

"Dorothy, do stop jesting, child, and explain to me what your intentions regarding this advertisement actually are."

"MOTHER," I SAID, STANDING STRAIGHT BEFORE HER.

I saw that she was becoming annoyed by the tone of flippancy beneath which I was trying to shield a cowardly purpose, that did not quite dare declare itself, and so came boldly forth from behind my cover.

"Mother," I said, standing straight before her, with resolution which she must have seen it would be useless to seek to quash written all over my face. "I have not been talking so lightly and wildly as you imagine. You know, although you wholly disapprove of the habit, that I am apt to form my determinations while you and Marion are listening to the exposition of a subject. You know, also, though you will not admit it, that my instincts are rarely at fault. Now, here is a matter which will allow me to prove beyond peradventure the validity of my intuitions. I have never heard of this lady whose advertisement I have just read in my life; I do not know whether she is old or young, rich or poor, amiable or the reverse; I do not know anything about Eldon or where it may be situated; but, so sure am I that from the beginning of my life it was ordained that I was to spend the major part of my existence within its boundaries, introduced to its neighborhood by the requirements of this mysterious M. H. E., that to-morrow morning I shall pack up all your wealth of worldly possessions and settle them and you at Marion's, as we have arranged to do in event of my obtaining a position, and in the afternoon I shall gather, together, my own goods and chattels and depart for Eldon, wherever it may be, intending to be settled before nightfall as companion for life to the lady who has expressed her need of me."

My poor mother regarded me in helpless amazement. Once she opened her lips as if to speak, doubtless in remonstrance, but thinking better of it, she closed them again, contenting herself with a silent shake of the head, which suggested all sorts of dire consequences to the course of action I was bent on pursuing. This tacit admission on her part of the futility of argument or expostulation struck me so irresistibly that I could not but laugh as I stooped over her, and sought to win her compliance by caresses.

"Don't think so badly of me, dear," I said. "It will all come out right."

never fear. I will prove my right to be governed by impulse." My mother was of a yielding nature, accustomed to submit to the stronger forces to which she had given birth. She shunned responsibility of every sort, and it was characteristic of her to act in matters of moment as she did now; that is, to avoid committing herself to any direct line of action by allowing others to decide for her, contenting herself with the assertion that she washed her hands of the whole business, and that whatever befell she could not be held accountable for bringing it about.

Twenty-four hours later I had accomplished my resolve, and had written, with trembling but determined fingers, "Elms" to the prologist of my life's drama. Urged by that potent but inexplicable influence which was so wont to direct me, I had, resolutely snatched the ink that bound me to my dependent girlhood by establishing my mother in her married daughter's comfortable home, and having thus turned my steps behind me, I found myself confronted with the prospect of a journey into a strange land of promise, with no compass to direct my future steps, save the few printed characters on the bit of paper slipped under the palm of my glove for ready reference; with no guidebook to inform me of what nature and habits were the people with whom I purposed dwelling; with no surety of attaining the goal for which I was striving except a moral certainty bred within my own breast, at whose authenticity I was aware all save myself would scoff and sneer.

My efforts in my mother's behalf occupied the greater part of the next day, and I found that the first train to Eldon that I should be free to take was one that left New York at 4.15 in the afternoon. It may show my faith in what my family were wont to call my superstitions to say that, so sure was I that I should not require one, I did not even concern myself to look up a railway train.

But as I was being whirled through a barren and desolate landscape in the chill dreariness of a February twilight, my inner ally, that purgatorial "encourager of hesitancy," somewhat deserted me, and left me a prey to a sudden despondency, and to miserable doubts and reflections as to whether I had indeed done altogether wisely to permit myself to be so uncompromisingly directed by mere impulse. For a brief while I abandoned myself to actual self-torture, inflicting upon my quaking heart all manner of wretched forebodings and baleful predictions, and reproaching myself bitterly for the precipitancy of my conduct. Then, recognizing the danger of losing hope and courage when self-control and assistance were my chief stock-in-trade, I drew forth the tiny advertisement and fortified my sinking soul with its perusal. Truly there was some witchery about the crumpled thing; for no sooner had my eyes fallen upon it than the subtle essence of hope and cheer again crept through my veins, bringing renewed boldness and conviction to my spirit.

I was still under the sway of this brighter mood when there came a perceptible slackening in the speed of the train, the brakeman's voice rang out in accents which only an expectant ear could have discovered to conceal the announcement of "Eldon, Eldon!" and almost before I was conscious of movement I found myself standing on the station platform, accompanied by but one other passenger, a tall man wrapped in a heavy ulster, which gave a bulky outline to his figure, watching with longing eyes the swift retreat of what I felt to be my last friend, the onward-speeding train, that seemed abandoning me in noisy defection to a lonely and unknown fate.

I think I might have been standing there now, wrapped in the homesick misery that seemed to envelop me, had it not been for the consideration of my fellow-passenger. Later I learnt why he had been induced to cast aside conventional restraint and address me. It was because I appeared to stand so alone and unprotected in that dismal wintry dusk, beside a man with any spark of chivalry in him would have risked long odds in the way of resentment of his conduct rather than miss an opportunity of being of service to a damsel so obviously "all forlorn." I laughed, with a warm reserve of appreciation deep down in my heart, nevertheless, when, some months after, David Spencer told me this; but at the moment mirth had no place in my emotions.

"CAN I BE OF SERVICE, MADAM?"

"Can I be of service, madam?" That was the welcome question that formed my greeting to Eldon, and so gravely and solicitously was it uttered that no thought of impertinence could possibly be associated with it.

I turned gratefully.

"You are very kind," I said. "If I could find a carriage of any sort—" and I looked about the deserted place with doubtful glance.

"Of course," he assented. "There is one here; it stands behind the station. May I secure it for you?"

"Thank you, but I will not trouble you. If it is here I can doubtless find it, and— with a smile at the emptiness of the place—"I should not think there was danger of its being engaged."

At that moment the station-master made his appearance, and as I gave him the check for my trunk—for I had even gone the length of bringing it with me—he touched his hat to my companion with a "Good evening," "actor," while the latter, with a courteous salutation, moved away and disappeared round the corner of the station. "I wish to go to The Ivies; is there a conveyance here that can also carry my trunk?" I asked.

My companion looked at me with visible interest, not to say curiosity.

"The Ivies," he exclaimed. "Is Madam expecting you?"

I was annoyed at what I considered unwarrantable curiosity.

"That is neither here nor there," I replied haughtily. "What I wish to know is whether or no the carriage in waiting here can also accommodate my trunk."

"The fellow had decent manners. He again raised his hat, and remarked with an apologetic air."

"I only asked, miss, because I thought Madam would be sending for you if she knew you was coming."

"She does not know," I answered, mollified by his excuse.

"Then I don't know just what you'll do," he said. "It's a long pull to walk, and there ain't no other ways of getting there as I knows of."

"What do you mean?" I asked. In some dismay for my new friend might after all have been mistaken as to the carriage behind the station. "That gentleman whom you called doctor assured me that there was a conveyance here."

The man nodded.

"So there was," he assented; "but it was one he had ordered for himself."

"Are you sure?" I asked.

"Certain," he replied. "He lives five miles or so from here, does Dr. Spencer, and he always has a carriage from the banks' house to meet him when he comes back from a trip to New York."

"Nevertheless," I said, with faith in the chivalry of the man who had offered to assist a friendless stranger. "I think I shall find that carriage still waiting. I will look—" And I suited the action to the word.

As I turned the corner of the building I confess my heart beat rather quickly, for it would mean much to me if my hopes were disappointed. Besides, I felt I had a girl's natural curiosity as to the extent of the impression I had made upon this casual acquaintance. My vanity was in arms to discover whether it had been of sufficient degree to prevail over that regard for his own creature comforts which weighs heavily against the inherent instincts of courtesy in man. It was with a sigh of relief and a thrill of gratified self-consciousness that I perceived the vehicle still standing at its post.

Still, its rightful claimant might have encroached himself within it, thinking that we could both share its spacious bosom, for it was a veritable ark, cumbersome and antiquated, but a welcome place of refuge all the same. Of course, if such should prove the fact, I should be in as bad case as ever, for it was not likely that I would consent to make a journey in the dark, shut up in a carriage with an unknown, however chivalrous man.

The driver was standing patiently, or rather doggedly, by his horse, and him I accosted.

"Are you waiting for anyone in particular?" I asked.

He moved forward and regarded me inquiringly.

"Doctor said there was a lady," he began.

"Yes; I am she. But the doctor had already engaged you, had he not?"

"Yes. But doctor said that wasn't no matter; he'd walk."

"I am sorry to have inconvenienced him," I said meekly, for I should have felt far more regret to have been obliged to accommodate him. "Can you take me to The Ivies?"

An expression of surprise, similar to that I had seen upon the station-master's face, enlivened the driver's stolid countenance.

"The Ivies," he ejaculated. "Is Madam expecting you?"

This repetition of the other's question was so significant of the fact that visitors were rarely entertained in the house—which I had already come to look upon as my future home—that I began to feel that I purposed invading a place of isolation and exile. I took refuge from a cold reaction that was beginning to settle about the region of my heart in sharp rebuke.

"That is not what I asked you," I said. "nor can I see that in any way concerns you. All I require of you is to take me, and my trunk thither. Can you do so?"

The man nodded, a trifle surlily.

"Guess I can," he answered. "Where's the trunk? I'll fetch it if you'll get in."

A few moments later he returned, bearing the trunk upon his shoulder, and accompanied by the station-master. While the trunk was being strapped upon the rack behind me, I could hear the two men conversing in low tones. I could catch occasional words which they uttered, but the full dialogue was indistinguishable. I glanced enough, however, to satisfy me that my appearance and destination formed the topic under discussion, and the tone of both voices was one of wonder and surprise.

Before we started the station-master presented himself at the door, peering with unmistakable curiosity into the carriage.

"Hope you won't think I meant any offence, miss, just now," he said. "I have too high a respect for Madam to be disrespectful to any of her friends."

I felt that the apology was largely tentative, and declined rising to the lure couched in the word "friends." Not by disclosing the fact that I had no personal acquaintance with this "Madam," or by asserting in what capacity I hoped to become an inmate of The Ivies, would I lay the spirit of inquisitiveness that I had inadvertently aroused in the man.

"Very well," I returned, and drew to the door. A minute later we had started on our way.
