ELECTRIC CARS

HERE AT LAST!

TRAFFIC ON THE NEW D. P. & N. COMMENCED SATURDAY.

Transferring Passengers at Phoenix for the Present.

After months and months of weary waiting and watching Northville at last has an electric railway. The first car for passenger traffic ran up into town Friday night and gave a complimentary ride to a score or more people down as far as the Phoenix crossing and back. Regular traffic was inaugurated Saturday morning and from then until Sunday night every car was crowded both in and out. Sunday the cars were crowded beyond even the "standing room" capacity with Northville, Plymouth and Wayne people. It seemed that all of Plymouth was over here, and all of Northville was certainly over at Plymouth. Up till Sunday night more than 1,000 passengers had been carried.

The fare to Plymouth is 5 cents. Newburg 10; Wayne 15; Detroit and Ypsilanti 25. Ann Arbor 45. At present a transfer is necessary at Phoenix but as soon as the tunneling is completed under the F. & P. M. track at that point, possibly by December 1, that little inconvenience will be done away with. The eight-for-a-quarter village tickets and eight-for-a-quarter township school children tickets have not yet been placed on sale but probably will be soon as through cars are running. The late theatre car will also be put on soon as the tunnel is finished. The new time card is published elsewhere in this issue.

Auction Sales.

F. S. Power will sell at auction on Tuesday Nov. 21 at his home north-west of the village a lot of cows, heifers and sheep. See bills for full list.

Mrs. George Green, 4 miles west of Plymouth will sell at public auction next week Wednesday a lot of live stock, household goods, farm implements, etc. Brooks and Rattenbury, auctioneers.

A. L. Blanchard, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Leeland Green, will sell at public auction on the premises adjoining the Morley toll gate on the Grand River road west of Farmington, a lot of household goods, wood, green fowls and 2 cows, on Saturday Nov. 18. L. L. Brooks, auctioneer.

Pillars of Sand.

The deserts of Arabia are specially remarkable for their pillars of sand, which are raised by the whirlwinds and have a very close resemblance in their appearance to waterspouts.

THE BOSTON STARS.

At the Opera House Thursday Evening, November 23.

Being unable to secure patronage sufficient to insure success for the entire Lecture course and preferring not to put on a cheaper one, the management has decided to cancel all the numbers except the first, the Boston Star Concert company. This number will be given on Thursday evening, Nov. 23, in the Opera House. This is the best number of the entire course and at the low admission of 25 cents will give the public a lot of entertainment for their money. Reserved seats at Murdock's for 10c extra.

BELL FOUNDRY CO. IS ORGANIZED.

THE $15,000 CAPITAL STOCK ALL SUBSCRIBED.

New Officers and Directors Elected Monday Night.

The first new stock company organized since the fire, and to take advantage of the subsequent bonus offering made by the Improvement Association, was that of the American Bell Foundry Co. organized Monday night, with the following board of directors: F. S. Harmon, Chas. Filkins, Wm. Phillips, L. A. Beal, E. H. Lapham, R. C. Yerkes, and Jas. Shaw. The new company is to manufacture bells and do a general foundry and machine business. The company has purchased the foundry buildings recently built by the Globe company together with the old bell patterns, good will, etc., and starts out under exceedingly auspicious circumstances. The capital stock of the company is $16,000 and is offered as follows: F. S. Harmon president; Chas. Filkins vice-president; L. A. Beal, secretary; E. H. Lapham, treasurer. The new company commences business soon as the inventory which is now being taken is completed.

The organization of this company means the building at once of the new curtain shade and linoleum factory and possibly the organization of still another company for the manufacture of sanitary wood work, bank and court house furniture, and possibly church and school furniture as well. Certainly Northville's future begins to look brighter.

Europe's Armies.

France in war has 1,000 soldiers to 15,407 inhabitants, Germany in war has 1,000 soldiers to 17,427 inhabitants, Great Britain in war has 1,000 soldiers to 72,412 inhabitants, while under the house bill during the late war the United States provided for only 1,000 soldiers to about 791,000 inhabitants.

SANDUSKY KELLOGG INSTANTLY KILLED.

SLIPPED INTO A BEAN CHUTE IN THE NOVI ELEVATOR.

His Head Struck on Edge Floor With Fatal Results.

Sandusky Kellogg, who lived north-west of town, one of the best known and prosperous farmers of this section, stepped into a little bean chute in the Novi elevator about 5 o'clock Wednesday and in his short fall slipped and struck his head on the floor in such a manner as to cause instant death. The depth of the pit is only 3 feet and it is surprising how any one could get hurt by tumbling into it.

The accident happened while Mr. Kellogg was at the elevator with a load of beans which he was waiting to have cleaned. He had previously stepped over the hole several times while walking about the building and Mr. VanVleet had warned him to be careful lest he fall. "Never fear," replied Mr. Kellogg, "I went get into it for I think it would be harder to get out than to get in." No blame can be attached to anyone—it was one of those peculiar fatalities for which no one can account or prevent. Deceased leaves a widow and several grown children. He was a member of the Baptist church here and was held in high esteem by the entire community.

Two "Old Boys" Saw Wood.

Two citizens of this community did a little wood sawing one day last week, and while this is not an unusual occurrence, the feat in this case is worthy of notice. Robert Smalley, who is 86 years of age, was desirous of getting up his winter's supply of wood and came up town to hunt up a good man to help him. He finally hit on Nelson Beemer, aged 83 years. The next morning Mr. Beemer walked down to the Smalley farm, two and one-half miles out, and the two took a cross cut saw, split on their hands and went at it, and by four o'clock in the afternoon they had cut up six cords of wood, after which Mr. Beemer walked back to the village. Mrs. Smalley, who is 89, contributed to the performance by getting dinner for the men.—Orion Review.

Those people will probably wish when they get old that they hadn't worked quite so hard in these their younger days.

Publisher's Notice.

Friends and readers of the Record will confer a favor on the paper, and themselves as well, by asking Judge of Probate Durfee to publish all notices of estates in which they may be interested, in the Record. The judge is perfectly willing and a request is all that is necessary.

FISHED WITH DANIEL WEBSTER

How Capt. Pratt Scraped Acquaintance with the Great Statesman.

Every visitor to Scituate or the neighboring villages along the shore and farther inland knows Capt. Pratt, says the Boston Transcript. He is among the oldest of the town's inhabitants, and from an inexhaustible fund of entertaining stories he relates with inimitable drollery many amusing happenings of a time before the south shore became a famous resort. It is counted an important part of the summer's programme nowadays to call on this old man and hear him narrate some of the varied experiences of his ninety years' life. He dearly loves company, and when the wind is in the right direction he can be very entertaining. For more than forty years he was master of ships that visited all the ports along the Atlantic coast. After that he retired to a somewhat quieter life fishing round the zigzag shores of his native Massachusetts. He believes himself to be the only survivor of the company that built the first Minot's Ledge lighthouse, and, although his memory lapses when recent events are under discussion, he is undisputed authority on matters relating to that wonderful undertaking as well as the disastrous storm that swept it and its occupants from the earth, when he was also one of the workmen. Sitting beneath the apple trees that shelter his home, with his little granddaughters at his feet, Capt. Pratt looks up at the sound of every passing vehicle and nods and smiles at the never-failing greeting of "the summer folk." All of his reminiscences are worth hearing, but there is one which he tells with special glee. It relates to a certain day, long ago, when he was fishing in his boat just off the shore with several companions. They anchored at noon and prepared to feast upon a fish chowder the cook had made. Just then a rowboat appeared, carrying two men in rough attire. They asked for bait, which was promptly handed over the side, and as they started away the hospitable captain mentioned the chowder, and invited the strangers to come aboard and join the hungry company. They accepted readily and ate with a keen appreciation of the savory dish. "They do say," remarked one of the fishermen, "that Dan'l Webster brags about the chowder he makes over to Ma'shfield. I don't believe he could hold a candle to this one. Why, it's the best chowder I ever eat!" "Daniel Webster thinks so, too!" came in thundering tones from the man who had borrowed the bait. "Sure enough," says Capt. Pratt, after a series of chuckles, "it was the great statesman sitting on a pile of rope and holding an empty tin plate in his hands. We were all stirred up, you better believe, but he enjoyed the joke. He and I were great friends after that, and many's the fine luck at mackerel fishing we've had together."

One of Lady Aberdeen's Reforms.

The Countess of Aberdeen, who is well remembered by Chicago people for her connection with the world's fair, is a woman of many advanced opinions and original ideas. One of her latest innovations, in which she hopes to be imitated by other people of prominence, is dining with her servants at least once each week. Her object is to bring about a better understanding with the domestics and to teach them that their interests and her own are identical.

NORTHVILLE, MICH., NOV. 17, 1899.

The Census of 1900.

During the month of June, 1900, the field work is to be done for the twelfth National census, and it is desired that this shall be the most complete, the most correct and the most intelligent inventory of the American people and their interests ever yet compiled. That the work of enumeration may be carefully and expeditiously performed and the published statement of it may be satisfactory and reliable, the people are urged and expected to take more than their usual interest in the great enterprise.

It is now none too soon for families to begin their preparations for the roll call next June. Each household will be required to report the names and ages of its living members and of any who have died during the year preceding June 1. Every proprietor of a manufacturing establishment will be asked for a statement of his year's business—output, cost, capital invested, number of persons employed. Inasmuch as every farm is a manufacturing plant this story of products and their cost will have to be told by a vast number of persons, many of whom are not in the habit of keeping accounts. In the case of other manufacturing the time to be covered by the inquiries of the census enumerators is the year ending with next May, but for the agricultural statistics the year ending with the coming December is the basis for reporting. The reasons for this difference of periods are obvious, and it is equally apparent that the report in order to be anywhere nearly accurate must be made up very largely before the year expires. It will be comparatively easy now to estimate, for example, the amount of butter or eggs sold last spring, but if the matter is left until the enumerator comes around in June, another spring season will have intervened, and there will inevitably result confusion and error.

We quite generally underestimate the total of our agricultural products when they are matured and disposed of a little at a time through many months; and hence if we leave the matter to be guessed at next June, while the enumerator is waiting, pencil in hand, nearly every such estimate will be below the truth, and in the aggregate the splendid story of America's agricultural glory will suffer in consequence of our neglect.

A few will shrink from telling the whole truth as to their year's achievements, lest the statement be used for the purpose of increasing the proportion of their taxation, yet the number of such persons will not be as great as some have estimated. But no one need fear the enumerator for any such reason for the district will not be the same as an assessor's rict and he cannot possibly hold office of assessor and do the rating.

ew man-stopping bullet" is a invention. A bullet stopping never is no novelty.

The President and the Governor have both issued their Thanksgiving Proclamations. November 30 is the day appointed. In both proclamations there are mentioned numerous reasons why this year should be one of special gratitude. To the industrious and thrifty the year has been one in which it has been good to live, but to the shiftless and thoughtless it has been like all other years—productive of empty store-houses and disappointment.

It is said that a new issue of stamps is to bear Dewey's portrait, and an exchange remarks that it would not do to use Hobson's face like this, as one-half the women would be licking the wrong side of the stamp.

There are three times in a man's life when he is considered all right. When he is born his pa and ma think he is; when he is married he and his wife both think so, and when he is dead the minister says so.

After an preaching is a good deal like publishing a newspaper. Some people pay cash in advance, some pay during the year, some after the year has passed while others never pay at all.

ONE CASE IN A THOUSAND.

How He Got His First Start in the World.

There is a gentleman in this city who is fond of telling the story of how he got his first start in the world; says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. "Before I was married," he said, "I received a pretty fair salary, spending every cent of it as I went along. Then I fell in love, but, try as I would, I could not see how two could manage on what had scarcely been enough for me. We talked it over, she and I, and considered the question of ways and means. She thought we could manage with my salary, and we were both so desperately in love with one another that we were brave to the point of rashness, and were married. I did not care to assume the responsibility of making that salary go around, and so questions of finance were left to my wife. We lived modestly, but very comfortably, and gradually added pretty things to the little stock of furniture we had begun with, until at the end of five years we had all we had space for. Of course my salary had increased in that time, but so had the family, and there were hundreds of demands for which we had made no allowance when we discussed the subject before marriage. One day, in the course of the day's work, I made the discovery that, if I had $1,000 to use immediately I could make several thousands before the week was out. That night I went home dispirited and discouraged. I began to think of the dog's life I was leading, living from day to day with no prospect of anything better as far as I could see, and by the time I had reached home, I was cross and taciturn, but a good dinner put me in a better humor, and as we sat together in the dining room after the children had gone to bed I told the dear woman about the fortune that we had missed because I did not have a paltry $1,000. "How soon will you need it?" she asked, when I had finished the story. I told her that the money would have to be forthcoming within the next three days, and asked her if she did not wish she had a fairy god-mother to supply the want. "I will have it in three days," she replied, confidently, and I took the answer as a joke and thought little more about it, but imagine my surprise on the third day when she handed me a check for the amount. There had not been a year since we were married that she did not save at least a couple of hundred dollars, and she had kept her own counsel about it, too, lending it to small sums to the best advantage. A thousand dollars may not seem much to you, but it was a mighty large sum to me in those days. I made the investment and made several thousand, and the first thing I did was to pay her back what she had lent me. The little bit of capital I then had was all I needed to make a start with, and from it has come all the money I have since been able to make."

RAM'S HORNS.

Doing is a sure proof of believing. Every man has his price—Calvary. Christ is Jacob's ladder made real. There is no sin so subtle as spiritual sin.

The gospel for the eternities is the only gospel for the times.

Christ towers above all the great men of history like an Alpine peak.

Those who prefer the service of sin must be satisfied with the wages of sin.—Ram's Horn.

It is a grand, good medicine. For sale by Geo. C. Hueston, Druggist.

RECORDS OF CRIME.

THE DIFFERENT KINDS THAT FLOURISH IN SEVERAL STATES.

The Average of Some Sections Lowered by the Influx of Foreigners—According to the Records, Ohio Seems to be the Best Michigan and Florida the Worst.

Nine out of every ten men if asked in which part of the country was the most wickedness would answer the Atlantic seaboard. Their assumption would be based on the fact that the large cities and particularly New York are situated there and almost everybody thinks New York City is the wickedest place in the United States.

The records of crime do not bear out this assumption and a comparison of the police records of Eastern and Western cities is quite favorable to New York, Philadelphia, Boston or any of the Eastern cities.

The population must, of course, be taken into consideration when a comparison of States is made, just as it is when their relative literacy is made the subject of statisticians' reports. Thus considered, the Empire State compares most favorably with any other State in the Union. And thus judged, also, the two worst States are Michigan and Florida. Michigan's crime list is swelled, it is said, by the influx of lumbermen to the upper half of the State, while certain parts of Florida being almost in the primitive state may account for its condition.

The average of certain manufacturing States is lowered by the influx there of foreign workmen who bring their crimes with them. Massachusetts and Connecticut would have the reputation of having the best people in the country were it not for the Portuguese and other foreign laborers attracted to Fall River and similar places where there are big mills or manufacturing of various kinds. Some of the most dreadful crimes in the annals of the law have been perpetrated in those extremely law-abiding States. That is why they do not rank very high among the virtuous.

The same is true of New York City, or rather of New York State, because of the city. Its "crime" record is prodigiously swelled by the rapid influx of the Italian, and the imported citizens of other nationalities.

The records show that the very best people in the United States are the men and women of Ohio. Out of every hundred thousand inhabitants of Ohio, only 34 commit serious crimes during a year. And when the police report "best" they practically mean most honest. If you take any hundred crimes committed in this vast country, you will find that 90 of them are thefts, burglaries or robberies.

The second, third, fourth and fifth best States, that is, in most honest States, are those lying adjacent to Ohio, like Indiana, Pennsylvania, Mississippi and Kentucky. Those conspicuous in the other direction are some of the Western States, particularly California, and some of the Southern States, including two of the Gulf States.

Some people will tell you that drunkenness is the cause of all other crime. But the criminal annals show that there is no truth in this statement. In the Eastern States twice as many indictable serious offenses are committed as in the Western States. But the Western man becomes intoxicated three times to the Eastern man once. Assaults and other crimes of violence also seem to have small relation to drunkenness and very little connection with drink. The most violent of all are the people of Tennessee, but in point of honesty they are third best; and with regard to drink they occupy sixth place among the States.

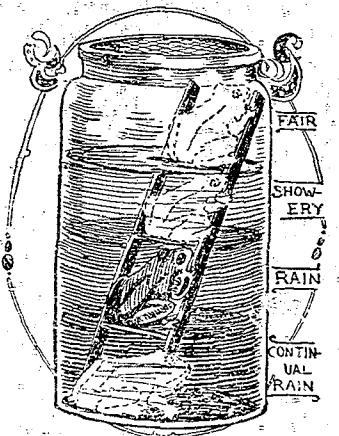

It is safe to say that almost every one has somehow formed the impression that the inhabitants of North Carolina are a shiftless as well as a wicked set of people. This, however, is one of those "general impressions" which will not stand investigation; it is a slur on the State which has furnished excellent citizens and supplies magnificent scenery. As a matter of fact North Carolina ranks better than fourth in the pyramid of virtue formed by the various States, and the cause of its crimes, if any, keeps them down to a somewhat innocuous or petty grade.

This Frog a Weather Prophet.

Here is a frog which is said to forecast changes in the weather more accurately than the Weather Bureau.

The little reptile is kept in a high jar filled with water and a ladder.

This little animal is a native of Germany.

THE BAROMETRIC FROG.

The barometric frog is able to prophesy because he is sensitive to barometric pressure. When the atmosphere is clear he climbs up above the water and suns himself on the opposite round of the ladder. He quickly notices any changes, and when the barometer changes slips back again to the lower rounds of the ladder.

A Great Waste.

A lecturer on the wastefulness of American housekeepers estimates that 100,000 families could be fed with the food daily thrown away by hotels, restaurants and large private establishments in New York alone. The cause is said to be the abundance of food and the bad cookery in America. If the figures be correct, New York is a big field for domestic science missionaries.

A LONG WAY AROUND.

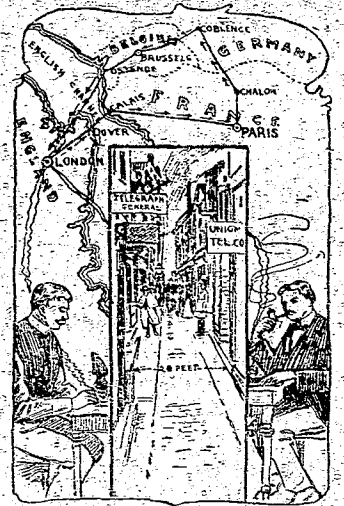

A Cable Message Over Five Lands to a Man Across the Street.

The telegraph offices of the London, Brussels and London-Paris cable companies are directly opposite to each other in one of those narrow streets of London where one hardly has room enough to change his mind.

The operators are good friends, and often when work is slow cross to each other to have a friendly chat.

It happened during the English Sudan war that the operators were kept constantly at their instruments, not having time for calls. The operator of the Paris cable discovered that he had left his pipe on the table of his colleague across the way the night previous.

To go over for it was an impossibility. The clicking of the instrument would not permit even rising from his ages, through which persons were led

THE COURSE OF THE DESPATCH. He could not catch the eye of his friend to communicate to him by signs.

He called the Dover office to connect him with Calais, across the Channel, the operator there put him on with Paris, thence with Chalon, Goblentz, Brussels, Ostend, and back to England with his comrade across the way.

Then he sent the following message: "If it is possible for you to return my pipe without it being compelled to follow the route of my despatch, please do so immediately." His friend happened to have an assistant, who took the pipe over at once. "This message traveled through England, France, Germany, Belgium and England."

New York's Little Shops.

New York, with all its greatness, is in some respects the most condensed place on earth. Down in Mulberry street there is a shop just wide enough for a cobbler's bench and hardly long enough to permit three customers to stand in line. Here, the industrious doctor of soles sits all day long and plies his trade, interrupted occasionally by a customer, who obscures his day-light.

There are cigar stores so diminutive that a man can scarcely turn around in them. In Broadway, not far from Herald Square, is a place for the sale of the fragrant weed in which a customer can hardly lift his arm without knocking down a box of cigarettes or a pile of stogies. It's the proper thing for the purchaser to back out of the place after cautiously applying the match to his recently acquired cigar.

Smallest of all is a restaurant near the South ferry, where there are a shelf and three chairs, and the pies are placed on edge. On busy days those who desire the particular brand of crullers, steaks and coffee offered there for sale are obliged to wait outside the door for a place at the shelf.

A Giant Moose Head.

The largest moose head on record is in the possession of Mr. W. F. Sheard of Tacoma, Wash. It is the head of an Alaskan moose and the antlers measure from tip to tip 6 feet 6 inches. The wildest moose antlers in England were in the possession of his royal highness the duke of Edinburgh. They measured 59½ inches across or 3½ inches under 5 feet. The Alaskan specimen, 6 inches higher, than a 6-foot man, is also immensely wide and massive in the "palm" of the horns.

An Old House.

The oldest house in America is in St. Augustine, Fla. In 1564, it was built by the monks of the Order of St. Francis and the whole of the solid structure is composed of coquina, a combination of sea shells and mortar, which is almost indestructible. When Francis Drake sacked and burned the town this was the only house left in the trail of destruction. It has been purchased by the well known antiquarian, J. W. Henderson, who will make it his winter residence.

A Wonderful Carpet.

The Queen of England is possessed of one of the most remarkable articles ever made in prison. The superintendent of Agra Jail two years ago received an order to weave a carpet of special design for her majesty. On it 23 of the dearest convicts of the establishment have been engaged. The carpet measures 77 feet by 40 feet, and is estimated to contain no fewer than 20,000,000 stitches.

A Black Record.

There is no part of the world which has such a black record for wrecks as the narrow Baltic sea. The number in some years has averaged more than one a day, the greatest number of wrecks recorded in one year being 154. About 50 per cent. of these vessels became total wrecks, all the crews being lost.

Matrimonial Lottery.

A matrimonial lottery takes place four times a year in Smolensk, Russia. A young maiden is raffled for, 5,000 tickets being issued at 1 rouble each. The money is given to the girl as her dowry, and the holder of the lucky ticket marries the girl.

Encouraging little rights is as helpful as criticizing great wrongs.

A singular story is told of a gallant rock whose moral influence at a critical moment during the battle of St. Vincent helped to save a British man-of-war from the hands of the enemy. The fowl in question formed part of the live stock of the Marlborough, a vessel which had suffered so severely that her captain was considering the advisability of striking his flag. The ship was entirely dismasted, while the chief officers had been carried below severely wounded and the crew, without anybody to cheer them up, were beginning to grow sullen under the heavy fire of the enemy, to which they were hardly able to respond. At this emergency a shot struck the coop in which the fowls were confined. The only surviving occupant, a cock, finding himself at liberty, fluttered up and perched himself on the stump of the mainmast and surveyed the scene of carnage around him. Then, flapping his wings in defiance, he began to crow vociferously. He was answered by career hearty and exhilarating cheers from the crew, who all had a good laugh, and with spirits thus renewed continued the action with a vigor that lasted until a turn in the battle rescued them from their tight position.—London Mail.

As fat and plump as they can be;
They're good to fry, and good to stew—
And good to stuff a turkey too.

Have pearls in every other shell.
They're shipped to Fry Bros. every day—
Night from the bed in Chesapeake bay.

We've celery in bunches tied,
That's good to serve with oysters fried.
The kind of celery Fry Bros. keep
Will bring to the nervous, peaceful sleep.

And now fresh nieces by 't, on 'b;
And fancy groceries by the score;
Will grace Fry Bros. grocery store.

It is very small consolation for a man who is suffering from Rheumatism, to be told that it is only an "acute" attack and soon will be over. Whether an attack of Rheumatism lasts one day or eight weeks or one moment, it is extremely interesting and keeps you busy while it is present. The proprietors of Lyceum—Detroit.

The creator of "Oh, By Gosh!" Geo. W. Monroe, is presenting his new play, "Mrs. B. O. Shaugnessy," at the Lyceum this week and there is fun for everybody.

Another D'Artagnan in the field!
Harry Glazier, a young romantic actor who has won his spurs in the ranks under the command of Lawrence Barrett, Thomas W. Keene and Katherine Kidder, will begin an engagement at the Lyceum next Sunday night hero of Dumas' famous story, "The Three Musketeers." Mr.
Glazier is under the management of E. D. Stair, and production is claimed to equal those of Sothern and O'Neil in the magnificence and completeness of its scenic investiture, and the correctness of its costuming. The supporting company includes Harry Glazier as D'Artagnan; Warren F.
Hill as Louis XIII; J. P. Barrett, Richelleu; Matthew McGinnies, Duke of Buckingham; etc.

Whitney's—Detroit.

"On the Suwanee River," the beautiful southern heart story, is playing a most successful engagement at the Whitney Opera House this week. Stella Maykew repeats her former triumph as "Aunt Lindy"
and the entire cast is a capable one.

Next week, "At Piney Ridge."
This play is more than its title signifies; it is a pastoral picture of the real south. A south not all "sunny," but depicted with its dark shadows as well as its brightness. The characters are as lifelike as though it were a tale of the real that we look at and not a mere stage portrait filled with claptrap nonsense, such as disgraces so many a so-called southern drama. David Higgins will present his play aided by a fine company of which Miss Georgia Waldron is still a member. Matinees daily except Wednesday.

A LITERARY LOVER.

The maid I love is like a book.
To outward seeming fair,
And as through every page I look
I find much treasure there.

There's much in it that's rather light
And much that's beautiful,
Yet never once a thought that's trite
Or commonplace or dull.

And though from heaviness exempt
And mediocrity,
And though there's much in it to tempt,
'Tis far too deep for me.

No critic of this book am I—
Love has no critic's power—
And yet one change I can't deny;
I'd make this very hour.

The covers bright I would let be,
The text remain the same;
This book is good enough for me—
I'd only change the name.

COLD BLUFF.

And the Way It Worked Upon a Gang of Toughs.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: "A bluff is a valuable weapon sometimes," said a business man of this city who used to reside in California. "I had that fact firmly impressed on my mind
one night while I was living in Frisco.
I had gone down to the water front on some business, was detained until late and came back through a notoriously tough section known as the "Barbary coast," given over to dives, dance halls and the worst type of sailors' boarding houses. Very foolishly,
I stepped into a particularly sinister-looking corner groggery to light my cigar, and the minute I got inside I recognized that I was going to have trouble. Half a dozen hoodlums were loitering in front of the bar, and before I knew it a couple of them were between me and the door. When a stranger happens into such a den alone the usual program is to hold him up and beat him to a jelly, and if he appears afterward to the police there are pleas of witnesses to swear he was drunk and started the fight. I saw that was likely to be my fate, and resolved on a big bluff. Without paying any attention to the gang I pulled out my watch as if to see the time. It was a handsome watch, with a large diamond in the case. "Say, what's that stone in de lid?" asked one of the toughs, coming up close. "Can't you see," I replied, "it's a diamond. Here, take a look at it." With that I unhooked the timepiece from the chain and put it in his hands. Words cannot describe the astonishment of the crowd. The ruffians looked at each other and then looked at me, evidently nonplused. I was quaking inwardly, but I managed to return their stares unmoved, and finally the bartender beckoned to a fellow who seemed to be the leader, and the two had a whispered conference. "Give de man his watch," said the tough when he returned, and I was promptly handed back. As I was putting it on my chain he asked me to have a drink, but I declined and walked out, expecting every minute to get a sandbag on the back of my head. Without a doubt the gang thought I was a detective, and that I probably had a posse on the outside.
They couldn't understand my promptitude in handing over the watch, and it certainly saved me from a slugging and may be saved my life."

Winter in The South.

The season approaches when one's thoughts turn toward a place where the inconvenience of a Northern winter may be escaped. No section of this country offers such ideal spots as the Gulf Coast on the line of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad between Mobile and New Orleans.
It possesses a mild climate, pure air, even temperature and facilities for hunting and fishing enjoyed by no other section. Accommodations for visitors are first-class, and can be secured at moderate prices. The L.
& N. R. R. is the only line by which it can be reached in through cars from Northern cities. Through car schedules to all points in Florida by this line are also perfect. Write for folders, etc., to JACKSON SMITH, D. P.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers and grandmothers never thought of using any thing else for Indigestion or Bileousness.
Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organism action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you.

A Wyandotte M. D. claims tha prosperous times are bad times for doctors. Some of the reasons given in support of the assertion are that when men have plenty of work they can't stop to notice all their slight ailments, and if they do they keep on working and use home remedies;
also that the cheerfulness engendered by prosperity keeps people from getting sick. Looks reasonable, too

The City in Brief.

Regular meeting of the O. E. S. tonight, at 7:30.

Vern Calkins has been on the sick list for a week or so.

Don't miss the Concert, Co. next week Thursday night.

Born to Prof. and Mrs. I. B. Gilbert at St. Johns, Oct. 31, a son.

J. A. Lundy is in Plymouth finishing a fine residence for H. H. Roe.

A time table of the D. P. & N. electric railway appears in this issue.

Come to The King's Daughters' Fair and Apron Sale Dec. 7 and 8 at the rink.

In Northville at least it was too foggy for people to get any view of the meteoric display Tuesday night.

Lost—October 23, Saturday night, gray overcoat, black velvet collar and lugs to pockets. Return to Byron Thompson and get reward.

Beautiful women everywhere owe their matchless loveliness to the use of Rocky Mountain Tea. Plain women made attractive. Ask your druggist.

Buy your supper of The King's Daughters Thursday evening, Dec. 7, at the rink.

Will Lockwood and Milt Burrows have leased the Shafer livery barn on Center street for a feed and sale stable.

The party who picked up the gold chain in the rink last Saturday night, will confer a favor by returning same to Record office.

The Wayne High-school boys come up this afternoon to play the Northville High-school team a foot ball game. It promises to be a right smart contest.

Christian Science service Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Subject: "Ancient and Modern Necromancy or Mesmerism and Hypnotism," and Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the WCTU hall.

Geo. Thompson who was taken to the Wayne retreat some time ago for treatment was transferred to the Pontiac asylum last week. The doctors do not give out any hopes for his recovery.

WANTED—Work of any kind and as I am very needy will work for 75c per day. Have no fuel and no money to buy any.

Mrs. V. SICKLE, Northville.

Of course you saw the meteor display Tuesday night.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Van Valkenburg Nov. 9, a son.

There will be services in the Baptist church as usual Sunday.

Don't forget the entertainment given by The King's Daughters Dec. 8 in the rink.

The Boston Stars will surely be seen at the Opera House next Thursday night. Admission 25c.

Of the public school money Northville township will get $637 this year; Plymouth $543; Livonia $423.

This year Rev. J. H. Herbener will deliver the annual Thanksgiving sermon, presumably in the Baptist church.

The King's Daughters' Fair and Apron Sale Thursday and Friday afternoons and evenings at the rink, Dec. 7 and 8.

The Northville U. S. fish station now has in ten million lake trout eggs, all received within a week or so. This is the largest number yet received at this station so early in the season. A number more million are yet to arrive.

Geo. Ryder is the motorman on the Northville division of the D. P. & N. and Ernest Miller is Conductor. Louie Roof is on the Plymouth end but the cars run so that he is able to get home every day which is very convenient.

The foot-ball team has at last returned to the daily routine of practice, and Capt. McCarty hopes to have a team soon that will make both Northville and Plymouth open their eyes.—Wayne Review.

They have "opened their eyes" already—but it has been with surprise because the Wayne team failed to keep its first engagement.

Last Sunday the Presbyterian people showed they could do business when they felt like it. They felt like it Sunday morning, apparently, for in less than five minutes the $260-back salary due Pastor Herbener was raised. The pastor felt better at the outcome and so did the congregation.

B. G. Filkins of the U. S. fish commission returned this week from Beaver Island, where he has been gathering trout fish eggs for the Northville station. He left Wednesday to resume his work at the Detroit station where the procuring and care of white fish eggs will be the chief occupation until spring.

One would hardly suppose that bean pods possess any considerable nutriment or have a market value, but we read of one New York farmer who sold the pods from his 700-bushel crop for $4.50 per ton. They are said to be quite as good as clover hay for sheep. This may be a valuable pointer for Michigan tillers of the soil.

It is suggested—mildly, mind you—that the common council build or procure a building and properly house the crushed stone roller for the winter. If there are no more horses to be exercised with it, it might better even be sold for old iron than to be allowed to rust away down on the Dubuare factory grounds.

The Northville Telephone company has placed new phones in the stores of Merritt & Co. (502) and E. J. Cox & Co. (22) and in the residences of Mrs. G. Lapham (483), Orange Butler (172) and L. B. Ball (283). The Club room number is now (562). M. F. Stanley's (173). There is no phone now in the residence of Mrs. Harrison Yerkes or W. A. Carruthers. Subscribers will please correct their cards accordingly.

Notice—Life insurance companies will reduce the rate 33 per cent. to all who agree to use Rocky Mountain Tea. A wise measure. 35 cents. Ask your druggist.

J. S. Lapham & Co.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Charter, Sunday, Nov. 12, a 12 pound boy.

Concert at the opera house next week Thursday night. It is the first number of the lecture course.

Flaney's orchestra will furnish the music for the Eastern Star's fifth annual ball on Thanksgiving eve.

A break in the trolley between Plymouth and Wayne delayed the Detroit traffic for several hours Sunday.

Tinham's Orchestra of this place furnishes the music for Thursday Bros. opening party at the Nichols house, Walled Lake, Thanksgiving eve.

The F. & P. M. will soon place on sale here ten round trip Detroit ride tickets books for $7. That will make the same rate as via street cars.

On account of the O. E. S. hop on Thanksgiving eve the D. P. & N. will run a special car back to Plymouth and Wayne at 2:00 o'clock a. m. to carry the guests from those towns home.

John Tinham has sent home for the winter his four year old trotter Fred Arlington, by Arlington, 2143. This horse learned to step very fast and will easily drop into the select list another season.

The fully Queen Harold sold by Landlord Shafer last February to W. Yetter of Riverhead, N. Y., took a mark of 2.29. A letter from Mr. Yetter states that she could easily have clipped off twenty seconds from this record.

It seems that the Record erred last week in stating that M. S. Ambler had the contract for furnishing the lumber for the new electric light power house. Mr. Ambler furnishes half and C. L. Dubuare Lumber Co. half. The Record was misinformed.

The WRC ladies invited their friends to a tea at the G. A. R. hall Wednesday afternoon and incidentally a nice lot of sewing was done for several needy people whom the women of this organization have been helping for a long time. As usual an extremely pleasant time was enjoyed.

The L. O. T. M. will give a social entertainment, Nov. 23, in Richardson's society hall. Some of the features of the evening will be the giving away of two beautiful quilts, one made of silk and one made of worsted. Five cents admits to the hall and you may get a quilt, free. Come and see.

Next Sunday will be a big day for the local Y. M. C. A. C. M. Copeland, state secretary, unexpectedly announced that he would spend the day in Northville and help the local work. The committee has arranged for a union meeting in the Presbyterian church at 7:00 o'clock Sunday evening to be addressed by Mr. Copeland. At 8:00 o'clock he will speak to men only. The admission to the men's meeting will be by ticket and only those who secure their ticket in advance will be admitted. Any male citizen fourteen years old can have a ticket. The work of the Y. M. C. A. is worthy of hearty support from every quarter.

Used by British Soldiers in Africa.

Capt. C. G. Dennison is well known all over Africa as commander of the forces that captured the famous rebel Gallische. Under date of Nov. 4, 1897, from Vryburg, Bechuanaland, he writes: "Before starting on the last campaign I bought a quantity of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I used myself when troubled with bowel complaint, and had given to my men, and in every case it proved most beneficial." For sale by Geo. C. Haeston, Druggist.

One more of Northville's noted speed horses is sold. M. E. Sloan has just disposed of to M. J. Helmer of Coldwater for $500 his trotting horse Royal Auctioneer 20701, sired by Auctioneer 5889, Dam Golden Dawn by Golden Bow. This horse is not only a fine individual but has unlimited speed, having shown a 2:24 gait with but little work. Undoubtedly in the future he will be heard of as ranking among the fast ones in the grand circuit.

It is surprising how much mail matter is handled by Uncle Sam's employees in a short space of time. Postmaster Hutton has finished a 30 days' weighing of mails originating in the Northville post-office and while it is exceedingly dull here now, and October is a light month any way yet for the past 30 days there has been sent out 3,354 pounds, or a ton and a half. The weighing was ordered for 35 days but as there are no Sunday mails here there was but 30 of it. The mail received here would reach a very much higher figure than the mail forwarded.

When that distressing pain seems to grab you by the back of the head and neck and your eyes seem fixed on a given point straight ahead, do not make yourself sick by taking drastic cathartics, but take a small dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The non-appearance of one of the correspondents items, last week caused quite a commotion at the WND club as many in that locality depend upon the Record to remind them of club duties. However we judge it must have been some unaccountable delay. Was it? [Items not received until after going to press. Ed.]

The following item clipped from the Saginaw News will be of interest to the many friends of the groom here.

A very quiet wedding took place at 4:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Nov. 2 at the rectory of St. Paul's Episcopal church, 420 North Washington Ave., when Miss E. Putnam, youngest daughter of Mrs. E. J. Putnam, and Stephen C. Gage were united in marriage by Rev. W. H. Gallagher. Both are popular and well known young people of the city. Mr. Gage is operator of The Courier Herald's Associated Press leased wire service, and their many friends will wish himself and Mrs. Gage a long and happy married life. They will be at home to their friends at 1617 Tuscola street after Nov. 20.

Last Saturday night, at the WND club the "Trust" question was debated by N. A. Clapp, D. Gage, Perry Lamb and B. Nicholson with such enthusiasm that each reluctantly left the floor for his opponent who defended the trust company or proved that it was a menace to the country, in such an able manner that the house found it difficult to decide which side had won. The society appreciated the assistance rendered by Mr. Nicholson whom it is hoped will often be present. The society submits the following program for tomorrow night:

CHAPTER I.

"Hello, old chap! Who would ever have thought of seeing you here to-night? What's brought you back to civilization again?"

It was the night of Christmas Eve, and I was just entering the lobby of St. James's Theatre.

For the fraction of a moment I could not remember where I had known the man who addressed me so jocularly. He was a rich mining king from Colorado, named Harvey Farnham, whom I had met in Denver when I had been dawdling through America three or four years ago.

"How is it?" I said, rather curiously. "That you remembered me, honoring my draft on sight, so to speak? It must be four years since that very jolly supper you gave me in Denver one night, and I fancy I have changed considerably since then."

Farnham smiled in his comical American way, which was a humorous mixture of irony.

"Well, I guess it's not so easy to forget a face like yours. You are a little browner, your eyes rather keener perhaps, your head held a bit higher, your shoulders broader and drawn back more like a soldier's than ever; but so far as I can see, those are the only changes."

"I've always eagerly followed your doings, so far as one could follow them in the newspapers, and I read your African book with the greatest interest; but somehow I never got to see much personal gossip about you. I've set down in the third or fourth row of the stalls, and as the orchestra had not yet come in, began to talk."

Farnham explained to me that he had "run over" to England on business, intending to sell a certain mine of his, which, though vastly profitable, was the one thing in which he had lost interest. The other mines in which he was part owner were situated in his own State, Colorado, while this particular one, the "Miss Cunningham," was in California, and he was tired of journeying to and fro.

"I've had a good offer," he said, "indeed, I'm visiting the house of the man who has made it—a wonderful fellow, only one degree less interesting, perhaps, than you. His name is Carson Wildred. Did you ever hear of him?"

"No," I answered, though possibly not to know Mr. Carson Wildred was to argue myself unknown.

"He seems to have plenty of money," explained Farnham, "and though he's a newcomer in London, has got in with a number of good people. He has two houses, one in Sloan street and one on the Thames—a queer, lonely old place near Purley Lock. If you know where that is, say it to me."

face. Where had I seen it before? Or did it bear but a haunting resemblance to some other, painted on my memory's retina in lurid, yet partially obliterated colors?

I had no doubt which of the two was Carson Wildred, Farnham's friend and host. What he had said of the man's personality assured me of his identity.

"Who is the girl?" I asked.

"A Miss Karine Cunningham. Same name as the mine that Wildred is going to take off my hands. Merely a coincidence, but I fancy it influenced him in his wish to buy the property."

He is very much in love with the girl, and rich as he apparently is, she can more than match him, I should say. She's an orphan. Sir Walter Tressidy, who is in the box with his wife, was her guardian until she came of age, about a year ago. She still lives with them, and Lady Tressidy takes her about. The girl has thirty thousand pounds a year if she has a penny. Whew! Only think what that means in American money. She could buy and sell me.

I might have truthfully replied that the young lady could have had me without either buying or selling, since for the first time in my rambles—these few moments had taught me—that I was to experience a wild quickening of the pulses under the casual glance of a woman's eyes.

At the end of the act we went out for a smoke and a breath of fresh air, and as we were returning we met Wildred near the staircase, which at the St. James's leads to the boxes on one side of the house.

"I was looking for you," he said, to Farnham, and the tones of his voice roused the same vague unpleasant memories that the eyes had stirred.

"And we were just talking of you," Farnham answered me by retorting, "I should like to be the means of making you two known to each other. Of course, Wildred you have heard all about Noel Stanton. This is actually he in the flesh, and he has been telling me that he believes he must have seen you somewhere before."

Mr. Wildred tossed away a cigarette and followed me with his brilliant eyes. He was smiling, but his lips were

I MEET KARINE CUNNINGHAM tense, as his gaze came back to me. It is his misfortune to be obliged to assure you that Mr. Stanton is mistaken. I know him as well as one can do without having met him, through his book, and a world-wide reputation, but beyond that I have not, till now, had the pleasure."

We looked into each other's eyes and I knew the man lied, and that he hated me.

But the mystery of his personality and my share in his past was as profound a secret as ever before.

Lady Tressidy sent me out particularly. She said, "in quest of you both, having recognized Mr. Stanton in his numerous presentations, and she hopes that you will come and be introduced to her and to Miss Cunningham in her box."

Farnham looked at me doubtfully, evidently fearing that I would refuse. But, grudgingly as the message was evidently delivered by Wildred, I grasped at the opportunity it gave.

I should speak to Miss Cunningham. I should know her. I might dare to look at her, and I might touch her hand.

I have gone through some queer experiences in a rather fit of my life, and have generally managed to keep a cool head in emergencies. But my head was not cool to-night. Everything was dark to me, except the one lovely face raised smilingly toward mine, as some murmured words of introduction were spoken in the box a little later, giving me the right henceforth to claim Miss Cunningham as an acquaintance.

I suppose I answered coherently when Lady Tressidy addressed me, and talked without openly making an idiot of myself to Sir Walter. But I remember nothing of the conversation between the second and third acts, save the few words spoken by Miss Cunningham, and an invitation from Lady Tressidy to call on one of her "At Home" days.

After I had gratefully accepted, I turned to the girl.

"Lady Tressidy has said I may come and see her," I ventured. "Will you say I hope to find you with her?"

She looked up with a sudden, illumined smile that answered me. "Come soon," she returned. They were her last words for me that night, and they rang in my head as I left her, dizzy with the memory of her loveliness.

CHAPTER III.

I had taken rooms temporarily at the Savoy. There was a fire burning in my room, and I drew up a chair before it to smoke an unlimited number of cigarettes and to think of Karine Cunningham.

I felt no inclination for bed, nor was I in the least sleepy, and yet, before an hour had passed, I must have fallen into a doze. Suddenly I was awakened by the impression of having heard a sound. I looked round me half-dazed still from my dreams. The fire had died down, and I had left myself with no other light. Only a ruddy glow lingered on the hearth, and a small clock on the mantelpiece just above lightly chimed out the hour of two.

I must have dreamt the sound, I told myself, for all was silent in the sleeping hotel, and even the rattle of cabs outside was hushed. Still the impression lingered, and I could hardly persuade myself that I had not heard Harvey Farnham's voice calling my name and whispering, with a gurgle, despairing cry for help, the horror of which had chilled the blood in my veins, even in my sleep.

I fell at last from waking dreams to sleeping ones, but, dimly, as I slipped under the edge of realities, that they might be of Karine Cunningham. But they were not of her. Hardly had I slumbered got its hold upon me when I saw myself by the river, looking down into a swiftly rushing tide. It seemed to be somewhere in the country, though I had little thought for my surroundings, and I was conscious that I was watching anxiously for the appearance of some object, whose nature I did not accurately know. It had been daylight in my vision at first—a cold, gray, wintry daylight—but suddenly night fell with the rapidity that all changes come and go in dreamland, and the only light was a spot of phosphorescent radiance that lay just under the surface of the water, floating gradually down toward me. I knew in my sleep that my eyes were destined to behold some sight of horror, yet I was bound in a species of frozen fascination to the spot where I stood, forced to wait for the oncoming of the light and its revelation of mystery.

Slowly it was borne along with the tide, until, having reached a bend in the river, opposite the spot where I was standing, it came to a halt, and I stooped down and saw that the pale light shone forth from a great white diamond on the finger of a dead man's hand. The body was faintly and darkly outlined; even the floating arm might also have been a floating mass of blackened river weed; but the hand was white as alabaster, and as I bent over it, staring down, one of the fingers moved and beckoned.

"Then I woke with a loud cry—'Harvey Farnham!'"

CHAPTER IV.

I arose on Christmas morning with absolutely nothing for me to do that day, as I had informed me one I knew of my presence in London, meaning to be for the present somewhat of a free lance.

Now, however, I felt a curious inclination to call at the house by the lock, as it was called. I would not dare there I told myself, but there most be an fun in the neighborhood where I could obtain some slight Christmas cheer. If I chose to embark upon the rather mild adventure of going up the river on this wintry holiday.

Once the idea had taken root in my mind, I was impatient to carry it out. I would go, I decided, almost immediately, but, as I had no coat, I would have to turn to Purley Lock, and turning up at Wildred's house at 4 or 5 in the afternoon, I would spend an hour there perhaps, and return to town in time for dinner.

There was a long streak of gold along the horizon of the otherwise dull grey sky, and a rising wind moaned drearily along the lower branches of the trees.

The scene looked indescribably desolate, and yet there was a certain beauty in it, too. I had been told exactly how to reach the house by the lock, and, when, after passing the somewhat weedy-looking lock, I began skirting along a species of back-water, and came in sight of a long, low, browned house close to the river, I knew that I had reached my journey's end.

The place had the appearance of being only a restored remnant of an ancient abbey fallen into decay.

Indeed, at one end of the house a ruined wall jutted out, with a row of stone window-frames, half filled in with sombre trails of ivy; even in the middle came the habitation part of the old house, with an imposing front door, which might have belonged to some Gothic church; magnificent windows, which reminded me of a certain dear old college at Oxford, well known in younger days; and beyond, to the left, was the wing evidently added by Wildred. It was in wretched taste, I thought, with its pretentiousness and its huge round tower at the end, utterly out of keeping with the rest. Then, as I decided, my eye was

There was no knob or ring by way of handle, but close to the edge, and about half way between top and bottom, I distinguished a diminutive key hole, outlined with shining metal. I let the curtain drop again, though lingeringly. It could be only a cupboard, or a particularly secure wine cellar, perhaps, behind this dwarfish door, but had I discovered it in a house not English, but of a country less conventionally civilized than our own, I should have told myself that I had chanced upon the door to a secret.

There was still a fourth curtained space (the remaining half of the curtains being of sandalwood), and this, as it happened, was directly behind the draped easel.

I moved toward it not intending to pry into Mr. Wildred's domestic economies, but still bent on unearthing an electric bell if I could do so, when my eyes fell upon the partially covered picture.

It was but a pinky-white, gipsy-covered shadow that I could see, with a glimpse of red-gold hair at such a distance above as to suggest a massive knot at the back of a woman's head, as seen in profile. There was a fraction of an inch more above as well, revealing the outline of a rounded, shaven crown, and though the face was hidden by the drapery, I was sure as I drew aside the curtain my eyes would fall upon the counterfeited presentment of Karine Cunningham.

With half-extended hand I paused. The painting was so far covered, and it was in another man's house. Had I a right to assure myself whether my suppositions were correct? As I hesitated my ears were startled by a scolding shriek.

Carson Wildred entered the room almost immediately, and in answer to my interrogation concerning the cause of the frightful and agonizing scream explained that the cook had spilled some hot grease on her foot; that while it was very painful it was not necessarily serious. He said plainly that I had doubted his explanation and I was at no pains to conceal the doubt. I demanded to know the whereabouts of my friend Farnham who had promised to dine with him. He without displaying any emotion stated that Farnham had gone unexpectedly to London. So there was nothing for me to do but return to town.

The project for improving Farmington's park started a few weeks ago by the Enterprise seems to be meeting with success. Monday the Editor had a meeting with Messrs. Randall and Caulfield of the D. & N. W. Ry., and the result of the interview was the promise of sufficient filling for the grading of the park and what is probably the most historic band stand in the state, now in the possession of Mr. Randall, but formerly on the site of the present city hall in Detroit. From this stand Sewall, Douglas and all the prominent men of 30 years ago addressed Michigan audiences, and from the same site every soldier was reviewed on the way to the front in '61. Its addition to Farmington's park will be awaited with considerable pleasure.

A jury in the Probate court has decided that the proposed Minnow pond drain in Farmington township is a necessity and must be built. This drain was proposed last April and was surveyed upon the petition of a number of freeholders of that township. Five petitioners signed a protest and the case was tried at considerable length before Judge Patterson. Minnow pond is located in the northern part of Farmington. Minnow creek runs from the pond to the River Rouge. In spring the road which passes Minnow pond is submerged to a depth of a foot and accidents there are of frequent occurrence. The drain proposed will widen and deepen the channel of the creek for a distance of over two miles, and the cost estimated is $1,500. When completed the pond will be lowered two feet, leaving the road high and dry. The jury awarded damages to several persons through whose property the drain will pass.

WALLED LAKE NEWS.

The Men's Social was a Great Success.

The social, which was to have been given by the men of the M. E. church last Friday night, was postponed until Tuesday night on account of the bad weather. That evening found them ready to make the occasion one to be remembered and they did. The program was novel, as it was given entirely by the men, with only a little help in the way of accompaniments at the organ by Mrs. Church and Mrs. Erwin. It was opened by a chorus of male voices, consisting of Parmenter Bros., Prond, Erwin, Estes, Carnes and Rose, with Donaldson at the organ. Some very fine vocal solos were given by Warren Estes, John Erwin and C. E. Rose. Two cornet solos were played by Roy Donaldson, and Klumph & Son gave some music on the flute and dulcimer. The trio of soldiers sang some old war songs, which brought forth rounds of applause, and the male quartette sang some jolly selections, which brought the house down and called for lively encores. Other features of the program were recitations, select readings and instrumental duets. The address by the pastor, who was chairman, was filled in by some of his usual anecdotes, which were right to the point. After the program came the supper, and the waiters in their white caps and aprons tied with each other in serving a bounteous repast to the expectant crowd, whose nostrils had been assailed by the odor of the fragrant coffee made by Chas. Merithew. The chicken pies and other good things were hungrily devoured and the committee of cooks learned how the ladies have to subsist on what is left when they are serving and we hope they will profit by the lesson. Whether it was the stimulating influence of the coffee or the braying of the four donkeys or the persuasive eloquence of Mr. Erwin that opened purse strings of the audience we know not, but whatever it was they opened wide and $45 were left in the hands of the treasurer.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm Cures Others, Why Not You?

My wife has been using Chamberlain's Pain Balm, with good results, for a lame shoulder that has pained her continually for nine years. We have tried all kinds of medicines and doctors without receiving any benefit from any of them. One day we saw an advertisement of this medicine and thought of trying it, which we did with the best of satisfaction. She has used only one bottle and her shoulder is almost well. ADOLPH L. Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians gave me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50c, guaranteed, at Geo. C. Hueston's Drug Store.
